From theſe circumſtances, which alone I conceive to be of ſufficient weight, but which derive greater force from the obligations your Highneſs is under to the Company, for the benefit of their protection and aſſiſtance upon repeated occaſions, I cannot but entertain hopes that your Highneſs will readily and cheerfully cooperate with us in any plan which may be propoſed for the common advantage, and for the more ſucceſsfully defeating the ambitious deſigns of Hyder Ally Cawn; eſpecially when you reflect how much has been already done by this Government, and in how ſhort a ſpace of time, from the firſt intelligence of the late heavy diſaſter which has befallen our arms on the Coaſt, to redeem, as far as it is in our power, the national credit, and with it to retrieve the particular loſs which your Highneſs has ſuffered; and the great ſacrifice we have made in relinquiſhing the proſecution of the Maratta war, almoſt in the moment when we had reaſon to expect, from the ſucceſſes which have attended it, that it would have ſpeedily terminated in an honourable and advantageous peace. Relying therefore upon the effect which I doubt not theſe conſiderations will produce on the mind of your Highneſs, I proceed to acquaint you, that in conſequence of the information which has long ſince been received, of the hoſtilities and depredations committed by Hyder Ally Cawn, on the territories belonging to the Dutch, at or adjacent to Cochin; and his late invaſion of the Carnatic, by which the ſafety of your poſſeſſions is endangered, equally with thoſe of the Company; we have prepared the draft of a treaty of alliance between the Engliſh and Dutch Eaſt India Companies and yourſelf; and having firſt tendered it for approval to Mr. Roſs, Director and Governor of the Dutch Eaſt India Company in Bengal, and obtained his concurrence, we have affixed our ſeals and ſignatures to it, declaring it to be binding on us, and have requeſted the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, to preſent it to your Highneſs for your aſſent and ratification, with an apology for having introduced your name into the treaty, without the previous ſanction of your authority; but as the ſtep would have required too tedious a proceſs, and would have opened a channel of negotiation and correſpondence, by which the ends propoſed by the treaty, which are immediate aſſiſtance, would have been defeated; your Highneſs will perceive the impoſſibility of an application of this ſort, which otherwiſe that proper reſpect and attention which is due to your Highneſs would moſt certainly have ſuggeſted. When the treaty has been approved of and ſigned by your Highneſs, it will be tranſmitted to the Governments of Columbo and Cochin, for their final ratification. Depending that your Highneſs, from your firm alliance with, and friendſhip for, the Eaſt India Company, and from the confidence which you repoſe in them, them, will contribute cheerfully your aſſiſtance, in the manner and on the terms which have been ſtated in the treaty, I will conclude with wiſhing an increaſe of health and proſperity to your Highneſs.

Agreed to the draft of the Letter propoſed by the Governor General, and ordered that it be tranſlated.

Agreed, that the following Letters be written to the Governors of Columbo and Cochin, and to the Superior Government of Batavia.

To the Governor of Columbo:

Honourable Sir,

Having long ſince received information of the hoſtilities and depredations committed by Hyder Ally Cawn, on the Dutch territories at or adjacent to Cochin; and taking into our conſideration, the circumſtance of his being at preſent in open war againſt them, together with the neceſſity of repelling his ambitious deſigns upon the Carnatic, which involve your ſtate equally with thoſe of the Nabob Wallajah, and the Engliſh Company; we have prepared the draft of a treaty of alliance between the Engliſh and Dutch Eaſt India Companies, and the Nabob Wallajah Bahâder, upon ſuch terms as we truſt will be accepted by you and the Governor of Cochin; having firſt tendered it to the peruſal of Mr. Roſs, Director and Governor of the Dutch Eaſt India Company in Bengal, and obtained his approval of it; and as the evident advantage to be derived to the Dutch Company, from the ratification of the treaty on your parts, muſt free you from every apprehenſion of reſponſibility to the Superior Government at Batavia, for having acceded to it without the previous ſanction of their authority, the obſtacle which might otherwiſe have been allowed weight, will by this means be removed.

The ſame reaſon which prevented us from making an application direct to Batavia, will be ſufficient to evince the impoſſibility of its entering into a correſpondence with your Government and that of Cochin, on the ſubject, ſince in both caſes the time which would be required for receiving an anſwer reſpecting the ratification of the treaty, would have defeated the ends of it, which are, immediate aſſiſtance.

We have therefore, for the greater diſpatch, affixed our ſeals and ſignatures to the treaty, declaring it to be binding on us, and all the dependencies of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, and have tranſmitted it to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, requeſting them to tender it to the Nabob for his aſſent; and as ſoon as the Nabob ſhall have made himſelf a ſubſcribing party to it, that it may be forwarded with all poſſible expedition to you; depending, that when the true intereſt of your nation is provided for ſo materially, you will not be the cauſe of a moment's delay in the execution of it.

We have the honour to be, &c.

The ſame to the Governor of Cochin.

To Batavia.

To the Superior Government at Batavia.

Honourable Sirs,

In conſequence of the information which we have long ſince received of the hoſtilities and depredations committed by Hyder Ally Cawn on the Dutch territories, at or adjacent to Cochin, and his late invaſion of the Carnatic, by which the ſafety of your poſſeſſions in that part of the world is endangered equally with our own; and in conſideration of the neceſſity of a mutual co operation to repel the deſigns of ſo ambitious an enemy, we have prepared the draft of a treaty of alliance between the Engliſh and Dutch Eaſt India Companies; and the Nabob Wallajah Bahâder, having firſt tendered it for approval to Mr. Roſs, Director and Governor of the Dutch Eaſt India Company in Bengal, and obtained his concurrence in conſideration of the terms of it being ſo favourable to your Company; and we have now, to prevent delay, diſpatched it to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, with our ſeals and ſignatures affixed, together with a declaration, that it ſhall be binding on our parts; and we have further requeſted, as ſoon as the conſent of the Nabob Wallajah ſhall have been obtained to the treaty, that it may be forwarded with all poſſible expedition to the Governments of Columbo and Cochin, for their final ratification and concurrence. As the time which would be required for receiving an anſwer from you reſpecting the ratification of the treaty would have defeated the ends of it, which are immediate aſſiſtance, the impoſſibility of a previous application for this purpoſe will, we truſt, be ſufficiently evident, and apologize for our having recourſe to the only method which could be effectual in ſo critical a conjuncture, that of forwarding it to the Governments of Columbo and Cochin, who, we doubt not, will obtain your approbation for having ſubſcribed to a treaty in which the manifeſt advantages to your State will free them from every ſhare of reſponſibility.

We have the honour to be,

Fort William, the 4th January 1781. &c. &c. &c.

Ordered, That copies of the above Letters of the propoſed Treaty, and of the Letter from the Governor General to the Nabob, be prepared for the peruſal of the Gentlemen at Fort Saint George, and that a Letter be written to them as follows:

To the Honourable Charles Smith, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Select Committee, Fort Saint George.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Having long ſince received information of the hoſtilities and depredations committed by Hyder Ally Cawn on the territories belonging to the Dutch, at or adjacent to Cochin; and taking into conſideration the circumſtance of his being at preſent engaged in open war againſt them, together with the neceſſity of defeating his ambitious deſigns upon the Carnatic, and preſerving, as far as in us lies, the poſſeſſions of the Company and the Nabob; we have, with the advice and ſuggeſtion of Mr. Roſs, Director and Governor of the Dutch Eaſt India Company in Bengal, prepared the draft of a treaty of alliance between the Engliſh and Dutch Eaſt India Companies, and the Nabob Wallajah Bahader, upon ſuch terms as we have every reaſon to hope will be accepted. But as the time which would be required for receiving an anſwer from the Superior Government of Batavia, reſpecting its ratification of, and final aſſent to the treaty, would entirely fruſtrate the ends of it, which are immediate aſſiſtance, we have reſolved to make our application direct to the Governments of Columbo and Cochin; for which purpoſe we have affixed our ſeals and ſignatures to the treaty, declaring it to be binding on our parts; and we requeſt, that on the receipt of it, you will uſe all poſſible expedition in diſpatching it to thoſe Governments, having firſt tendered it to the Nabob, and obtained his aſſent to it. You will be pleaſed to accompany this tender with an apology for the Nabob, from us, for having introduced his name into the treaty without the ſanction of his approbation; but as this ſtep would have been attended with too tedious a proceſs, and would have opened a channel for negotiation and correſpondence, which would have impeded the inſtant execution of the meaſure propoſed, upon which, in this critical moment, ſo much depends, we truſt he will perceive the impoſſibility of our previous application to him, which otherwiſe a proper attention and reſpect to him would not have ſuffered us to omit.

In the event of a refuſal on the part of the Nabob, we deſire you will repreſent, in the ſtrongeſt terms to him, the nature of his ſituation, and the indiſpenſable obligation he is under of making common cauſe with the Company, leſs to ſecure their poſſeſſions than his own, from the encroachments of the enemy; that his very exiſtence is now at ſtake; that he is more a principal in the war than ourſelves; that it is not by any means which can be furniſhed by him, or by any reſources or treaſure of his, that the Carnatic is to be ſaved and defended, but by the wealth of Bengal, and the blood of Britiſh ſubjects ſacrificed in his ſervice; that therefore we expect his aſſent to the treaty, and urge it as a juſt claim, which we have upon him, in return for the protection which he has experienced at our hands.

We ſhall wait to hear the reſult of your application; not doubting that, from motives of policy and neceſſity, as well as juſtice, he will accede to the terms which we have offered in his name.

We have appointed Mr. James Dighton to be the bearer of our diſpatches, and have entruſted to his care a copy of the Letter addreſſed by the Governor General to the Nabob ſeparately; together with copies of the Letters to the Governors of Columbo and Cochin, for your inſpection; and we requeſt that he may be employed to proceed with the Treaty and Letters, together with ſuch other diſpatches as you may have occaſion to add, to the Governments of Columbo and Cochin.

We rely upon your zeal and activity in this buſineſs, and depend on receiving every neceſſary information as early as it is in your power.

We have the honour to be,

Extract of Poſtſcript of Letter from the Select Committee at Fort Saint George, to the Court of Directors; dated the 12th January 1781.

WE have particularly attended to His Majeſty's order in council, dated the 17th of laſt April, relative to the line he has been graciouſly pleaſed to take with the United Provinces; and ſhall be cautious to avoid becoming aggreſſors in any act againſt the ſubjects of the Republic in India: at the ſame time that we ſhall vigilantly guard againſt any conſequences which may eventually ariſe from the meaſures which His Majeſty has been under the neceſſity of adopting.

Extract of Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, to the Court of Directors; dated 17th February 1781.

Par. 15. Alarmed at the ſituation to which it was reported in Bengal we were reduced, and deſirous, in every event, that our whole influence ſhould not be loſt in the Carnatic, the Governor General and Council conceive it of importance, that a treaty ſhould be concluded with the Dutch Government of Ceylon and that of Cochin; whereby 1,000 European military, 200 artillery, and 1,000 Malays, to be paid by us, were to be brought to our aſſiſtance by the Dutch, for the entire and perpetual ceſſion of the Tinnevelly Countries, and the excluſive right to the Pearl Fiſhery; both of them eſtimated at about 35 lacks of rupees per annum; and, that no time ſhould be loſt by negotiation, they furniſhed us with a treaty, ratified on their part, and deſired that we would prevail upon the Nabob to conclude it finally, by giving it the ſanction of his ſignature and ſeal.

16. A ſcheme of aſſiſtance from the Dutch, on certain conditions, was ſome months ago indirectly intimated to us; but although we did not totally lay aſide the conſideration of it, we were well aware of ſome weighty objections to which it appeared liable. The great additional expence that ſuch a number of troops would amount to, ſeemed alone ſufficient to deter us from liſtening to the propoſal; and, even were that impediment obviated, the ſum which would be required might, we were of opinion, be employed to much more advantage, by entertaining a body of cavalry; the want of which had already been ſeverely felt. But this was not the only difficulty which occurred; the diſgrace that would probably attend ſuch a meaſure, in the opinion of the Country Powers, as well as the danger to which our affairs might in the courſe of the war be expoſed, through the intrigues of ſo extraordinary and enterprizing a character as Hyder Ally. There were ſuch powerful arguments againſt the meaſure, that even had ſuch a body of troops been ready to join our army at a ſhort notice, and a junction with them rendered certain, it was by no means clear that our ſituation, diſtreſſing as it then was, would have warranted an acquieſcence on our part.

17. Theſe having been our ſentiments when the poſture of affairs wore ſo very unfavourable an aſpect, we ſhould have held ourſelves highly reprehenſible, were we in any manner to have promoted the ratification of the treaty, at a time when, from the ſpirited and prudent conduct of General Sir Eyre Coote, your affairs on this Coaſt were experiencing the moſt happy and favourable turn; and, not to mention the good effects to be expected from the operations of General Goddard on the Malabar Coaſt, when the approach of the reſpectable body that is coming from Bengal, would probably work ſo material a change in our affairs, as to put it in our power to act, and we doubt not with effect upon the offenſive.

18. The revenues of the Southern Provinces likewiſe, being almoſt the only reſources left to the Nabob, and his Highneſs having aſſigned them over to your uſe, reſerving only to himſelf ſuch part as ſhould be neceſſary for his houſhold expences; and as theſe form the moſt conſiderable part of what we are to receive for carrying on the war, the making them over in perpetuity to the Dutch, would be to deprive ourſelves of the only probable means we had left in the Carnatic, independent of which His Majeſty's declaration in council, of the 17th April 1780, relative to the ſubjects of the States General, rendered the giving them the opportunity of acquiring an undue influence in this country, a meaſure both highly impolitic, and detrimental to your affairs.

Supplemental Appendix to the Second Report.

No. 1.

Mr. Sadlier's Letter to Sir Thomas Rumbold, from Maſulipatam, explaining the probable conſequences of ſummoning the Zemindars to the Preſidency; dated 5th May 1778.

To the honourable Thomas Rumbold, eſquire, Governor of Fort Saint George.

Dear Sir,

BY my long ſilence, I fear you may conclude I have been ſlack in my promiſe, of giving you regularly the information you might have expected. However much appearances are againſt me, I truſt the preſent Letter will remove ſuch impreſſions. I have always had in mind how much at heart you ſeemed to have the coming of the Zemindars; and my utmoſt endeavours have been uſed to facilitate your wiſh, but leſs ſanguine than you appear, of the eligibility of undertaking ſuddenly great reformation of ſyſtem, and aware of the difficulties in which you may be involved. As I could not, conſiſtently with the warm ſupport, gratitude and inclination prompt me, flatter you of the immediate ſucceſs of your meaſures, ſures, I thought beſt to be ſilent, and not awake diſtruſt in you, till a full and complete ſtate of the Settlement and our ſituation were ſent you: ſuch is now completed, and goes this night from the Council.

If it had pleaſed you to have repoſed confidence in me, and appriſed me of the ſtate of this Settlement previous to my departure from Madras, and intruſted to me after I could have communicated to you my opinion on your plan, and the time fitteſt for its being undertaken, poſſibly our treaſury might have been repleniſhed, and the ſcheme forwarded. But having, previous to my knowledge of your intention, written to the Zemindars, I found my influence and the influence of the Board here, annulled, and nothing to be done till you have the Zemindars with you, or till this Government are inveſted with their uſual authority.

The Zemindars having now conſented to proceed to Madras, in conſequence of the order ſent them, enforced by us, with every mark of ſubmiſſion and obedience becoming our ſtation. After giving the ſubject referred to you its due conſideration, and ſatisfying yourſelf how the calls on us for money here are to be ſupplied, I humbly think no time ſhould be loſt, in compelling the Zemindars attendance at the Preſidency, that you ſhould even fix a day for their departure, and empower us here to enforce it with Sepoys. The apparent violence in ſuch meaſure ought not to deter you, as it commonly requires ſuch an exertion to get them from their reſpective countries here, and when here frequently in uſe to attain the end of Government in fulfilling their engagements.

I have now the pleaſure to encloſe you the neceſſary ſtatements requiſite for a complete knowledge of our finances; viz.

No. 1. Complete view of the annual zemabundy, and amount of kiſts to be accounted for at this period.

2. Nett balances now owing and unaccounted for of the preſent year's zemabundy, including balances of the laſt kiſts of the laſt year.

3. An account kiſts due 31ſt Auguſt next, in full of zemabundy, to 25th September.

4. Balances owing by Renters, in which is ſpecified the parts received ſince the 13th April laſt.

5. Particulars of the Soucars bills now in hand.

6. Account money ſaid by the Soucars to be owing them by the Zemindars.

Which accounts will inform you of the money owing and to be received to the 25th September next, or expiration of the year Phazula 1187, amounting to ſix lack and near eighty thouſand pagodas. The payment of which money will fall chiefly on Tripety Rauze of Muglatore, Juggapetty Rauze of Pedapore, Row Vencato Row of Pettapore, Opparow, and Ramchundra Rauze. It is therefore proper to ſay ſomething of theſe men's circumſtances reſpectively.

Tripety Rauze, to the preſent time, is a man who has always punctually fulfilled his engagements to the Company, is ſaid to be a good and able manager of his country, well verſed in buſineſs, and at little expence for Sibbendy. Has been extremely uſeful to the Company's Revenue, in aiding different Chiefs to ſettle the zemabundy, by ſubſtituting himſelf ſecurity for Zemindars, who otherwiſe could not have found it; and has hitherto preſerved great influence among the Zemindars, in concluding the Company's buſineſs. He is ſaid to have loſt conſiderably by the countries under his management, for which he became ſecurity; and has paid on this account what money he may have ſaved by his former good management. At preſent he is much in arrears to his Soucars and others; and the failure of payment of Narſanah Naik is imputed to this cauſe. Tripety Rauze's intention was, I believe, to have changed his Soucar; to have let the balance owing him remain till his circumſtances bore a better aſpect; and by this manœuvre might have ſettled his affairs for the preſent with the Company. Thus embarraſſed as he now is, I know not how he can conclude his affairs to your ſatisfaction at Madras.

Supplemental Appendix to the Second Report. No 1.

Opparow's country has long been in the management of other hands; three Purgunnahs of it under Tripety Rauze, and the remainder under Meſſrs. Hodges and Pringle. It is ſaid to be a fine country, capable of diſcharging its tribute, when properly managed; but Opparow not thought equal to the undertaking, being given up to indolence, and pleaſed with the name of a large Sibbendy: his affairs were neglected, and unneceſſary expences incurred. No hope of this man if left to himſelf, ſettling by Soucars; nor do I ſee a proſpect of proſperity to his country, or ſecurity to the Company, but by ſequeſtration, under the management of proper perſons: and from his conduct laſt year, there is reaſon to believe he will continue ſatisfied with the produce of his land cuſtoms, for his maintenance and expences, until his country has paid off the heavy debts it is now liable to, and he can be eſtabliſhed on the footing he before enjoyed.

Juggapety Rauze has the name of being able to ſettle his affairs with the Company, according to the uſual mode, either here or at Madras; but ſeems to aſſume much, from the name his family have had of firſt Zemindar, and the deference others ſhew him on that account. Knowing the preſſing occaſions of the Company, he wiſhes to take advantage of it; and before he will conſent to give bills, intends, as a preliminary, to have ſettled diſputes, which have long ſubſiſted between his family and that of Row Vencata Row. It is ſaid a cloſe connection has taken place between him and Sitteram Rauze; that Vackeels and correſpondence are in uſe between them; and from this man's influence, I muſt remark here, that I have cauſe to imagine an intrigue on foot between the Zemindars of the Chicacole diſtrict, Juggernaut Rauze, Sitteram Rauze, &c. and thoſe of theſe countries. This ſhould be diſcouraged, and may cauſe a combination of the whole of the Zemindars to diſtreſs and embarraſs your plan. To overcome ſuch confederacy, you might ſettle the affairs of the different diſtricts ſeparately and at different times, and not hazard the effects of intrigue, by bringing the whole of them together.

Row Vencata Row, by grants obtained of Mr. Whitehill, has his country in proſpect of proſperous cultivation, by the preſent allotment of water; which allotment Juggaputty Rauze loudly complains of, and wants reverſed. This man's Soucar has paid up all his kiſts; and I fancy his credit ſuch, that a renewal of agreement in the uſual mode may be effected.

Ramchundra Rauze has claim to the Cotah country; and has repreſented to us his pretenſions of right. At preſent, the Cotah country is in charge of a Tonadar for the Company. He wiſhes, before he gives bills for his kiſts, to have this matter decided; after which he may be able to ſettle his buſineſs in the uſual way.

Codant Ram and Vaſſereddy Ramanah have always been punctual in the performance of their engagements to the Company, and may be expected to continue ſo.

To ſuch Letters as were written the Zemindars, the anſwers leave me entirely ignorant of the mode by which they expect to manage their affairs at Madras; nor am I able to give you other account than conjecture, of the proſpect of their doing it to your ſatisfaction. What I have ſaid is my opinion of their circumſtances; and the concluſion to be drawn from it muſt now be ſubmitted to yourſelf. When they are at Madras, I am humbly of opinion you ſhould firſt inſiſt on their finding ſecurity for the money now owing, before you think of interfering in the differences and diſſentions exiſting among them. It will be their endeavour, and you will find them obſtinately bent on it, to have theſe matters ſettled previouſly.

In order to ſhew how anxious I have been to accompliſh your wiſh, and aſſiſt in its ſucceſs, I ſend you copy of a Minute I read to the Council, and intended recording; but reflecting that any apparent violence, in the execution of orders of ſo delicate a nature, might be liable to miſrepreſentation, and the intention miſconſtrued, I withdrew it. The Council nevertheleſs would have concurred with me; and here I beg leave to inform you, that all of them have afforded me publicly ſuch ſupport as was proper and becoming their ſituation.

By the eſtimate of probable receipts and monthly diſburſements, ſent the Board, you will find we have hope of receiving very little; and our diſburſements, no-leſs than 33,000 pagodas monthly; beſides which, we owe the 31ſt March laſt, to the Soubah, pagodas 77,922, on account of his tribute; which ſum is increaſing monthly, at the rate of pagodas 10,822½. The payment of the laſt money was completed by the Soucars only a few days ſince; a delay which occaſioned the Soubah, by one of his people, to write Vencata Royloo, as you will perceive by tranſlate of the Letter now ſent.

It becomes an object of your moſt ſerious attention, in caſe the Zemindars proceed as at preſent is intended, to find means by which our treaſury may be ſupplied; the moſt valuable part of the Company's inveſtment depends on it; and the Zemindars withholding as they do aſſiſtance of any kind, leaves little hopes of reſources in ourſelves; for whatever may appear due, ſuch is the ſtate of credit, and ſuch the uncertainty of payment, I do not at this hour know where I can apply with certainty for the ſmalleſt ſums; and all I expect to be able to do, will barely furniſh the demands of the preſent month, independent of our ſilver, which may amount to about a lack of rupees, to be ſold to great loſs, the exchange being now near 400 P. pagodas. Miſcarriage in any of the affairs dependent on this Settlement, may therefore be imputed to the change of ſyſtem, and what diſappointments enſue, juſtified by the Council here on this plea, and all misfortunes incident to it imputed to your Board.

If too, by improper management heretofore, deficiency in payment of the kiſts now due, and the revenue of this country, according to its preſent ſettlement, ſhould happen, may not the cauſe, by its effect of giving the firſt ſhock, too common and long practiſed credit in the mode of ſecurity in theſe countries, be alſo abſcribed to the preſent plan? In ſhort, if it happens that the Settlement, by bad ſeaſons and cauſes alledged by the Zemindars, is on the decline, would it not be prudent to leave the Government charged hitherto with full reſponſibility, to juſtify its meaſures, to work out its own misfortunes, and bear the cenſure it deſerves? are queſtions with deference I ſubmit to your better judgment.

The period of ſettlement by Mr. Floyer, expires the 25th September next; a new zemabundy muſt then be agreed on; that time or October may be better ſuited, and the people better prepared to viſit the Preſidency. In caſe then no change is intended in the preſent Settlement, ſuch ſeaſon may be equally convenient for the Company for a future plan; and the Board here, by being left to accompliſh preſent payments, may poſſibly at that time have its treaſury in a ſtate to anſwer its exigencies, and the plan proceed without inconvenience. I am led to theſe obſervations, from a ſincere wiſh to promote the ſucceſs of your meaſures; and ſtimulated by ſuch motives, led to a freedom of remark I would not have uſed, but to the perſon whoſe honour and ſucceſs highly intereſts me; I truſt therefore I ſhall not have given offence: you have now (if you think the ſubject deſerves it) but to afford it due conſideration, and ſignify your further wiſhes to enſure in me an arduous deſire to ſecond them, by the moſt implicit obedience to your further commands.

The preſent Letter is meant a private one, but whatever obſervations concern the Public, may be uſed as you have occaſion.

I have the honour to remain moſt reſpectfully,
My dear Sir,
Your faithful and moſt
obliged humble Servant,
Anth. Sadlier.

Captain Johnſton, of the Granby, examined.

I SAILED from Britain 7th March 1779—went to Madras—arrived there the 18th of January 1780—Sir Thomas Rumbold was Governor—I remained there five months, and ſailed about the 18th of June, and went to China—touched at Malacca in my way—arrived in China about 29th Auguſt 1780.

Did you carry any treaſure from Madras to China?—Yes, I did.

Was it belonging to the Company or individuals?—To individuals—Sir Thomas Rumbold ſome of it—I had 8,000 pagodas for him—I delivered them to Mr. Bradſhaw—there were no other ſpecie or effects belonging to Sir Thomas Rumbold—his attornies, Meſſrs. Oakley and Proctor, applied to me to take it on board—Sir Thomas had quitted Madras—the application was made to me about fourteen days before I ſailed—the treaſure was not regularly entered in the books where other effects were entered—a bill of lading was given for it.—I had beſides this, about thirty thouſand pagodas belonging to other individuals—ſome to Mr. Cuthbert—I don't recollect the other—none belonged to either the Governor or Council, except the above of Sir Thomas Rumbold's; nor any goods upon freight.—I had ſome cotton and pepper belonging to others—no jewels nor pearls—the Seahorſe man of war ſailed in company, and was convoy to the ſhips, and had money and jewels on board to a large amount, as I underſtood from Captain Panton—the treaſure did not belong to the Company, but to individuals.

Do you know to whom?—I heard from Captain Panton, that 16,000 pagodas belonged to Sir Thomas Rumbold—in converſation with Captain Panton on board my ſhip, he aſked me what quantity of pagodas I had of Sir Thomas Rumbold's? I told him 8,000; and his reply was, that he had double the number belonging to Sir Thomas Rumbold—five of the Company's ſhips and the Seahorſe ſailed together—Captain Panton did not mention who the other property in his ſhip belonged to.

There were fifteen or ſixteen country ſhips at China the year I was there—I don't know they carried any treaſure, as they generally carry cargoes belonging to different perſons, the produce whereof they generally pay into the different treaſuries in China.

Withdrew.

Captain Parker, of the Bridgewater, examined.

I left Britain the 12th of February 1780—went to Madras—arrived there the 23d of July—remained there twenty-three days—went from thence to China—arrived at Macao the 2d of Auguſt—ſailed from China the 2d of February 1781, and arrived at Spithead, the 12th of October.

Did you carry any treaſure from Madras to China?—I did.

Was it public, or belonging to individuals?—It belonged to myſelf and Richard Lewin, who was a ſecond mate in the Company's ſervice—a little for an Armenian—Mr. Lewin's was about 8 or 9,000 pagodas—I had none other—I delivered Mr. Lewin's property into the Company's caſh at China—Mr. Bradſhaw did it for me—I had nothing belonging to the Governor, Council, or any of the Civil Servants of the Company.

Withdrew.

Captain Montgomery, of the Beſsborough, examined.

I ſailed from Britain, July 15th 1777—went to Madras—carried out Sir Thomas Rumbold—arrived at Madras, 8th February 1778—ſtaid there about 14 days—went from thence to Bombay—arrived there April 30th, and left it 12th July—Went back to Madras—arrived there there the 29th July—ſailed Auguſt 6th to join Sir Edward Vernon at Pondicherry—arrived there 11th—quitted him the 21ſt of October, and went to Madras again, and arrived there the 4th of November 1778—proceeded from thence the 19th to Bengal—arrived there the 31ſt December—ſailed from thence the 24th of February 1779, and arrived at Madras the fourth time, the 16th of March 1779—from Madras I went the 23d of March to Bombay, and touched at ſeveral places on the Coaſt, and arrived on June 17th—I ſailed from thence 23d September, and returned to Bengal again; arrived there the 1ſt of November—left Bengal the 9th of January 1780, and arrived at Madras the fifth time, the 21ſt of the ſame month.—I went from thence the 10th of February—went to Pondicherry, where I arrived the 11th, to take in Sepoys for Surat—I arrived at Surat with 400 Sepoys the 19th of April—remained there three days—went to Bombay, and arrived there the 23d of April 1780—ſailed from thence the 2d of July for Madras—arrived there the ſixth time, the 15th of the ſame month—ſtaid there till the 1ſt of Auguſt, when I ſailed for China—arrived there the 16th of September—ſtaid there till the 2d February 1781, and arrived in the Downs the 20th of October.

Had you any treaſure or jewels on board, to carry to Bengal, Bombay, or any other parts of India, during the coaſting voyages, mentioned in the firſt part of your evidence?—I had ſome treaſure; it was public treaſure; I had ſome private, but can't remember for whom, it was a little.

When you laſt ſailed from Madras to China had you any treaſure on board?—I had ſome private treaſure on freight, viz. Mr. Taſwell 7,551 pagodas, Mr. Cuthbert 5,000, and Mr. Brodie 2,000 pagodas, in all, 14,551 pagodas—there was none belonging to the Governor or Council. Withdrew.

Captain Blanſhard, of the York, examined.

I left Britain the 12th of February 1780—went to Madras—arrived there the 23d of July—ſtaid there 22 or 23 days—ſailed for China the 14th of Auguſt—arrived there the 9th of October, and ſailed from thence the 2d of February.

Had you any treaſure on board when you went from Madras to China?—Yes, about 6 or 7,000 pagodas, part belonging to De Caſtro, a jew, on freight for China—it was delivered to Silveſter Roſe—1,500 of the pagodas belonged to Mr. Young, and the remainder to a perſon, who I believe was an Armenian—I had none belonging to the Governor, Council, or Servants of the Company—the whole belonged to free merchants.—I brought home no treaſure from China to England—the London and Bridgewater ſailed for England with me—I carried no cargo from Madras to China for any one but myſelf—ſome red wood. Withdrew.

Captain Wakefield, of the Laſcelles, examined.

I left Britain the 13th of February 1780—went to Madras—arrived there the 29th of June—ſailed from thence the 1ſt of Auguſt for China—arrived there the 11th of September—ſailed from thence the 2d of February 1781, and arrived in the Downs the 12th of October.

Had you any treaſure or jewels on board, when you went from Madras to China?—Yes, treaſure belonging to private perſons—about 16,000 pagodas belonging to different people—9,000 for Meſſrs. De Caſtro—5,000 Mr. Jones—Daniſh Company 1,850—a black merchant 985 ditto; in all, 16,835 pagodas—I had none on account of any of the Gentlemen of the Council at Madras. Withdrew.

Thomas Bevan, eſquire, attending according to order, was called in, and examined.

I was ſecond in the Select Committee appointed at the end of 1778, for China.—I ſailed the 6th or 7th of March 1779—I arrived there the 3d or 4th of October in the ſame year, on board the Company's ſhip the Worceſter.—We have money tendered to us private, as well as ſervants of the Company, from all parts of India, which is admitted into the Company's caſh—I came home in the laſt ſhips—I left Canton the laſt day of January 1781.

Had you opportunity to know of any conſiderable remittances of individuals from Madras to China?—Yes; there were ſeveral remittances from individuals—we never aſk whoſe property it is, only the name of the perſon to whom they wiſh to have it remitted—the caſh paid in, is not always belonging to the perſon who pays it in.

Have you any knowledge of money being ſent by country ſhips?—I have heard ſo, but we don't take any account of country ſhips—we have no concern with them—they ſometimes pay into the Company's caſh, and ſometimes to foreigners.

Have you any knowledge of large ſums being paid by Britiſh ſubjects into foreign treaſuries?—It is frequently done, and ſhould be put a ſtop to if poſſible—that is a difficult matter, it muſt be done from hence, and would be a benefit to the Company.

Can you give any account of the ſtate of the demand of private perſons on the Chineſe merchants?—Refers to the book of private debts, with particular account of all private debts due to Britiſh ſubjects by the merchants, ſubjects of China; and alſo, the application made by Captain Panton, of the Seahorſe—and the tranſactions between the Committee and Chineſe Government.

We never made application for the names of the principals—the Agents gave an account of the amount of the debts, but not the names of the principals.—I diſcovered the names of ſome of thoſe from the Chineſe; but by their mode of expreſſing themſelves could not make out all, and that is the meaning of the blanks in the diary—they are not many.

Do you know of any ſpecific ſum remitted by or on account of any individuals, from Madras or Bengal?—I do not, of my own knowledge.

The Committee were forbid at my laſt going out, from receiving any private commiſſions of any ſort—all private commiſſions were permitted to be received by the Gentlemen under the Select Committee jointly, not ſeparately; but I never from my firſt employment, near thirty years ago, received any private commercial commiſſion, from which I derived any emolument.

The Court of Directors permitted, before I came to England in 1773, the receiving private commiſſions by their ſervants—they afterwards revoked it—I underſtand every Gentleman under them in China, is permitted to receive private conſignments. Withdrew.

Mr. John Farrington Butterfield, Purſer of the Earl of Sandwich, a Company's ſhip, examined.

We ſailed from England 17th June 1779, for Madras—arrived there 18th January 1780—many men from thence for China 18th June 1780—the Seahorſe man of war, and four other Indiamen, went in company with us—we arrived in China the 1ſt of September.

Did you carry any treaſure from Madras to China?—Yes.

To what amount?—We had leſs than any ſhip; what we had, moſtly belonged to paſſengers—ſome ſmall matter from Armenians, and ſome from a Jew houſe—the Seahorſe carried a great deal of money—we had under 80,000 pagodas on board our ſhip—can't ſay the particulars—the man of war had 3 per cent. and we had but 1 per cent. freight. Withdrew.

Mr. George Blachford called in, and examined.

I was chief Officer on board the Sandwich—we ſailed from England in June 1779—went to Madras—arrived there in January 1780—ſailed from Madras about July 1780, for China, where we arrived the middle of September tember—the Seahorſe man of war and four Indiamen ſailed with us.

Do you know of any treaſure carried on board your ſhip from Madras to China?—A little—can't tell exactly—don't know of my own knowledge what treaſure there was on board—I don't know of any money being on board the other ſhips. Withdrew.

Matthew Raper, eſquire, was called in, and examined.

I was ſupercargo—went out in 1767, the firſt time—returned, and went out in 1768, and remained in China till the return of the laſt fleet—I was of the Select Committee—before the appointment of that Committee, the Company's Servants had liberty of taking commercial conſignments—the firſt I had was in 1777 or 1778.

The only tranſaction for Sir Thomas Rumbold was relating to 25,000 pagodas, the produce of which I remitted myſelf—it was ordered to be paid to me and Mr. Cromline, by Bradſhaw and Pigou, on Sir Thomas's account—this was the latter end of 1778—Mr. Cromline being abſent at the time the money was remitted, I ſent it in my own name, by a bill on the Company, in January 1779, payable to Robert Mackreth, John Stables, and Thomas Raikes, eſquires, amounting to £. 10,769. 12*s.* 11*d.*

I had a conſignment from Madras to China, belonging to Sir Hector Munro, of dollars amounting to £. 466. 10*s.* 3*d.*

The Seahorſe imported money into China—it was ſent up to the Factory, and I did not know what it was, it not being all public money.

Do you know the reaſon of the high price of gold in China?—Becauſe it makes an agreeable preſent to the Emperor, and becauſe it is eaſier hid from the Mandarines—that Government is more oppreſſive now than it uſed to be—the Mandarines, on calling merchants before them, if they do not comply with the demands readily, chains are produced, and the merchants informed they will be put round their necks, and they will be led to priſon, to remain there till they comply—Gold varies in its price in China very much; ſometimes fifty per cent. in the ſame year—The difference between gold and ſilver is as 15 ounces of ſilver to one of gold; but it has been up to 22 of ſilver. Withdrew.

Mr. Bevan attends again, and informs the Committee, that he recollects a circumſtance in his own knowledge, of a ſmall ſum of money being remitted by Sir Eyre Coote to Mr. Pigou and himſelf—he does not recollect the amount, nor what ſhip it was ſent in; it was the laſt year—it came from Bengal—Sir Eyre Coote was there.

Before he arrived in China, there was a box of gold belonging to Sir Thomas Rumbold and Sir Hector Munro—it was ſtolen out of Captain Foxall's ſhip—the Committee was deſired to apply to the Country Government, to endeavour to recover it. He ſpoke to the magiſtrate; who told him, endeavours would be uſed to recover it; but it was not recovered when he came away. He thinks it came by the Morſe or Seahorſe; but is not certain. Withdrew.

Dear Sir,

The encloſed paper will let you into the arcana of the ſweets of this Chiefſhip; it is communicated to you, in proof of the confidence I repoſe in you, and in teſtimony that I mean not to keep ſecret any action which you may ſuppoſe can influence my conduct. Your honourable ſupport of me againſt volumes of the baſeſt defamation, claims, and it ſhall have it, this honourable and candid conduct from me.—The rapacity and peculation of men has nearly ruined this country; the misfortune it is now involved in, originates from ſuch principles, and its effects may have brought in diſtreſſes poſſibly not to be reformed.

The paper, if you pleaſe, may be deſtroyed, it is intended but to ſhew the unſound ground you tread in.

Intereſt with me towards you bears no ſway.—I conſider my ſituation but temporary—I hope ere long to afford you a better teſtimony of the hearty good diſpoſition which actuates me for promoting the honour of your Government; you have therefore but to ſignify to me, without reſerve, what you wiſh, and depend on its becoming my guide.

To the honourable Thomas Rumbold, eſquire.

Anthony Sadlier, of Fort Saint George, eſquire, and heretofore Chief of Maſulipatam, maketh oath and ſaith, That ſoon after his arrival at Maſulipatam, in the month of April 1778, to take upon him the charge of that Chiefſhip, this deponent applied to Vencataroyaloo, then and now the Honourable Company's Dubaſh and Chief Interpreter for the ſaid Chiefſhip, to give unto this deponent an account of the cuſtoms heretofore appertaining to the ſaid office; and that the ſaid Vencataroyaloo thereupon delivered into the hands of this deponent, two ſeveral paper writings, whereof the above are true copies. And this deponent further ſaith, that he addreſſed a Letter unto the honourable Thomas Rumbold, eſquire (now Sir Thomas Rumbold, bart.) then Governor of Fort Saint George; a true copy of part whereof is alſo above written; and that he encloſed true copies of the ſaid two papers ſo received, and the ſaid original Letter, whereof the above part is a true copy, under the ſame cover and ſeal, with another Letter from this deponent, dated the 5th day of May 1778, to the ſaid Thomas Rumbold. And this deponent ſaith, that the ſaid Thomas Rumbold hath ſince acknowledged the receipt of the ſaid Letter of the 5th day of May 1778, but did not make any mention of the receipt of the ſaid two copies of papers, or of this deponent's ſaid Letter which accompanied them, although this deponent is ſatisfied that the ſaid Thomas Rumbold did receive them encloſed under the ſaid cover, which contained this deponent's ſaid Letter of the 5th day of May 1778, and at the ſame time that he received the ſaid Letter of the 5th day of May 1778. This deponent further ſaith, that he is well acquainted with the hand-writing of the ſaid Vencataroyaloo, and that the original two papers, whereof the above are true copies, are of the proper hand writing of the ſaid Vencataroyaloo; and that the ſaid Vencataroyaloo hath acknowledged unto this deponent, that they were of his hand-writing. And this deponent further ſaith, that he is now in poſſeſſion of the ſaid two original papers. And this deponent further ſaith, that from what he has underſtood to have been the cuſtom of the ſervice, he verily believes that the ſaid two paper writings, ſo delivered unto this deponent by the ſaid Vencataroyaloo, contain a true account of the emoluments ſo received, and of the manner in which they were received by the ſeveral perſons therein mentioned, while they were reſpectively Chiefs of Maſulipatam aforeſaid.

Letter from Sir Thomas Rumbold to Mr. Sadlier, acknowledging the receipt of his Letter of 5th May 1778; dated 20th May 1778.

My dear Sir,

I SHOULD have replied to your Letter of the 5th inſtant ſooner, had I not obſerved that there was no probability of our orders to the Zemindars not having the effect we expected, and that ultimately they muſt be convinced of the propriety of an implicit obedience to the orders of this Government; and I have no doubt will experience the advantages of the new meaſure. I am much obliged by your account of the Zemindars, the ſtate of their countries, finance, &c. Your information has thrown much light upon this ſubject; and though I cannot ſee the bad conſequences that are to follow from the Zemindars being ordered here to ſettle their jummabundy, inſtead of fixing it at the different Chiefſhips, yet I beg you will be aſſured, I am no leſs ſenſible of the good intention with which you have freely given me your opinion.—If any failure happens in the payment of their kiſts, the exigencies of your Government muſt be ſupplied from hence; but I am willing to believe you will not require our aſſiſtance.

As to the money due to the Soubah, you will receive our inſtructions on this head before you diſcharge the balance,

Dear Sir,

Dear Sir,

I AM favoured with the duplicate of the Letter you ſent by Vencataroyaloo; he is not yet arrived. I am obliged to you for your conduct, in preſſing the Zemindars to repair to the Preſidency as ſoon as poſſible, agreeably to the orders they received. I never expected otherwiſe from you, being convinced your own honour and zeal for the ſervice would ſuperſede every private conſideration. You muſt be convinced my regard for you has been ſteady; and that it will be my wiſh, on all occaſions, to ſhew you my attachment and deſire of promoting your intereſt; being,

To the Honourable Charles Smith, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Council of Fort Saint George.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I HAVE long been a concerned and anxious ſpectator of the ruin into which the Company's affairs were falling, from the miſmanagement of their Servants; the conſequences are now ſeverely felt by us all; we are threatened with danger, which almoſt appears inſurmountable, and therefore every exertion tending to public good, muſt be laudable, in proportion to the difficulties which render it uſeful to ſociety.

From clear and evident cauſes, the moſt common obſerver might have foreſeen ſome ſuch diſaſter as that which we now ſuffer—a degeneracy of character, and over-love of riches, a want of public ſpirit, and even of the common feelings of humanity towards the people who lived under our Government, joined to a diſſipated revenue, and a want of inclination to employ the few reſources which remained, muſt have rendered, and did render, us dangerous to our friends, and contemptible in the eyes of our enemies.

To ſtop the torrent of corruption, by an exemplary puniſhment or detection of thoſe who were moſt guilty, was a chief and favourite wiſh which I brought with me, when I became a Member of Government; and it is to this diſpoſition alone, and the fear which it occaſioned in the minds of men conſcious of guilt, that I impute my ſuſpenſion from the Service, and other things ſubſequent to that want.

I hope I ſhall prove, in the courſe of this Letter, that my conduct in the Chiefſhip of *Maſulipatam was conſiſtent with that which I have ſince purſued, and that my foreſight of conſequences have been fully juſtified by the event. In that ſtation I complained, as I do now, that rapacity and peculation had nearly ruined the country. And after I was admitted a Member of the Council at Madras, I can appeal to the ſecond Minute, delivered in by me at the Board, in proof that it was my idea that a retroſpect of paſt evil was the only foundation of future good.—My words then were as follows:—"It is true "that we are ſurrounded with difficulties on all ſides, "as the Governor is pleaſed to obſerve;—large arrears "of revenue are due to the Company from countries "which have ſuffered no public calamity; — the "Company have incurred a heavy debt, to anſwer the "immediate demands of Government; while theſe arrears remain due to them, their Treaſury is empty, "and without the hope of a ſupply, at a time when it "is uncertain how great their occaſion may be for "money.—Government has difficulty in paying its moſt "ordinary expences; trade is loſt to individuals; "the Company have had little or no inveſtments, and "yet, great as theſe evils are, they are likely every day "to increaſe.

"This deſperate ſituation of our affairs has not been "occaſioned by public misfortune, and muſt therefore "be imputed to private miſmanagement. We are no "longer in a ſituation where we can hold up the veil of "deceit to our Employers, or adopt the meaſures of our "predeceſſors, without weighing their conſequences. "It is our duty to know the evil, that we may be able "to apply relief; and, inſtead of patching up a broken "ſyſtem, to make it anſwer a purpoſe or a day, to form "ſome laſting and regular plan of conduct adequate to "the dangers which ſurround us, and capable of extri-"cating the Company's affairs from the difficulties in "which they are involved."—Why no enquiry was ſet on foot when the Governor acknowledged that we were ſurrounded with difficulties? why the revenue was allowed to fall in arrear, without an exertion to recover it? why no attempt was made, excepting by myſelf, for the re-eſtabliſhment of ſyſtem; and why the other Members of Council ſtood ſilent ſpectators of approaching ruin? are queſtions which their own conſcience muſt ſolve, but of which the ſubject of this Letter may convey ſome demonſtration.

I have traced my own conduct, to ſhew that my opinions have been invariable, and that I have preſerved a degree of uniformity, ungoverned by ſubſequent events, or by perſonal animoſity, further than that honeſt indignation, which cannot but ariſe in my mind, on ſeeing the intereſt of the community, and the honour of the nation, ſacrificed to the unworthy motives of men, who, being placed our Guardians, were largely paid for doing juſtice.

The criſis of the times do ſtill more preſſingly call for enquiry; at a time when we are ſurrounded with public enemies; when our reſources upon the Coaſt ſeem in a manner annihilated, and an army, on which our ſafety depends, ſubject to every difficulty which the want of money can occaſion. If it can be proved, that thoſe who were intruſted with power, employed it only to increaſe their private fortune, without any regard to principle or to the good of their Employers, they ſhould be made to refund the ſpoil they have acquired, both as an example to others, and that it may be applied to relieve the exigencies of Government.

In bringing ſuch men to light, I deſpiſe the odium which the intereſted may annex to the character of an informer; the act is only diſhonourable when the motive is not good: but as I have in view the intereſt of the Company and of the Nation, the preſervation of the Community, and the happineſs of Thouſands, who look up to us for protection—as I am not influenced by private advantage, and, in oppoſition to theſe great concerns, have no motive to ſway me but the eaſe of a few individuals, who, inſtead of indulgence, deſerve both ſhame and puniſhment, the act of informing is honourable; and he who has the courage to ſurmount prejudice, in ſupport of principle, cannot, in my opinion, but deſerve praiſe,—I court this honeſt praiſe in reward for my conduct, and I ſhall now proceed to ſtate the circumſtances which have occaſioned the above reflections.

Supplemental Appendix to the Second Report. No 6.

Supplemental Appendix to the 5e and Report. No. 7.

I left the Presidency to take charge of the Chiefship of Masulipatam, with the fullest confidence that it was Sir Thomas Rumbold's intention to correct the abuses in the Company's system upon this Coast.—I thought myself in a great measure indebted to him, for the honourable station I was about to hold; and gratitude concurred with principle, in making me desirous to fulfil what I thought to be his inclination.—Upon taking charge of the Chiefship, I found it much impoverished; I determined therefore to trace causes back to their source, with a view to the establishment of future order; and though before my enquiry was finished, I had reason to think that I was imposed upon, under the cloak of friendship, I communicated the result of it with that unreserved openess and candour which I thought the public service required.

I hope the accompanying Papers will be no bad proof of the uniform consistency and disinterestedness of my conduct.

The first contains accounts which were delivered to me in the hand-writing of Vencatarayaloo, the Company's Dubash at Masulipatam, of the emoluments received by three of my predecessors in the Chiefship of that place, amounting to Madras pagodas - - 3,17,154 —

And a balance remaining due, amounting to the additional sum of - - - 94,479 18

In all, Madras pagodas - - 4,11,633 18

The second Paper is an extract of a Letter which accompanied these Accounts to Sir Thomas Rumbold, then Governor of Madras; and the third is an Affidavit made by me to authenticate these Papers, and the manner in which they were received.

In addition to these Papers, I now transmit to the Board, the copy of a Letter which went under the same seal with the above Letter to Sir Thomas Rumbold, giving him an account of the circumstances and situation of the different Zemindars, together with my opinion of the measure adopted by Government, in summoning the Zemindars to the Presidency: as also the copies of two Letters from Sir Thomas Rumbold to me, in one of which he acknowledges the receipt of my packet, of the 5th of May 1778, containing the above information.

The alarming situation to which the Company's affairs are reduced upon this Coast, is enough of itself to occasion suspicion in the mind of a man unacquainted with causes; and when the safety of a country is at stake, suspicion is just ground of enquiry—but when information is so duly authenticated, and partly against a character, which by subsequent conduct has contributed so greatly to our present distress; it cannot be imagined that Government here will be so treacherous to their Employers, as to neglect instituting such prosecution as the law directs, and the nature of the case may require.

It is unnecessary to urge to the Honourable Board, as they must be sufficiently aware, that inferences will be drawn to their own prejudice as individuals, if they neglect to execute public justice, if pointed out to them, when the mode is so apparent, and the means so much in their power. Mr. Whitehill is now at Madras, and is upon the point of departure for Europe; and if the Government allow him to depart with such information against him, before he is acquitted by the forms of law, I submit it to the opinion of the Board, how far their Employers may think them responsible for the consequences?

If the Company's Servants have been guilty of peculation in office; if they have abused the trust reposed in them; if by these abuses they have brought dishonour upon their country; let it be imagined, how much the opinion of their treachery may have laid the foundation of our present reverse of fortune, and what influence it may have in future, not only to check the Company's credit, but from a want of dependance upon our Government to prevent those alliances with the Country Powers, which at present seem so essential to our affairs.

I have already urged, that the best foundation for public spirit is public justice. Mr. Whitehill held the first station in the Company's service upon this Coast, at the time when their affairs suffered the greatest reverse; and if it is proved that he is one cause from which our evil has originated, I submit it to the Board, whether he should not receive punishment according to law, both as an example to those who hold trust, and that we may give our friends and our enemies an opinion of our justice.

I have already declared, that I consider myself a Member of the Board, and that the act of violence by which I was driven from it, in no respect deprives me of the right inherent in the station. I now repeat the same sentiments; and as the information I have laid before the Board, lays the foundation of an enquiry most material to the interest of my honourable Masters, I hereby formally demand my seat at the Board, that I may be able to prosecute that enquiry in the manner most proper to produce the desired effect.

I have the honour to be,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Your most obedient
humble servant,
Anthony Sadlier.

Fort Saint George,
8th January 1781.

No. 7.

Extract of a Letter from the President and Council at Fort Saint George, in their Civil Department, to the Court of Directors of the East India Company; dated 9th January 1781.

Par. 7. THE disappointments we experienced from the inconsiderable collections made for some time past of your territorial revenues under Masulipatam, and the heavy charges incurred of late by the war with Hyder Ally, laying us under the necessity of appropriating all our resources to the defraying military expences, have been the means of impeding your investment, and have even obliged us to put a stop to the provision of it for the present; indeed, the troubles now subsisting in the Carnatic, render it impossible for the Weavers about Madras and Cudulore to work. We have, however, been able to give almost a full lading to the Duke of Kingston, and hope to send your Honours 12 or 1,300 bales more, in the course of next month, or in the month of March, should the Governor General and Council be able to supply us with tonnage for that purpose, agreeably to a request we made to them in our Letter of the 8th ultimo. Cons. 14th Nov.

8. The hostile situation of public affairs all around us in July last, on the incursion of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic, pointed out to us the evident propriety of exerting ourselves immediately to collect a competent garrison store. And to endeavour all in our power to prevent the distressful consequences to the inhabitants, of the country being laid waste by the enemy, we wrote to the Governor General and Council for supplies of grain, and of salt provisions; and had soon the pleasure to learn from them, that they had entered into contracts for a considerable supply of salt provisions, and for a most ample quantity of rice for our relief, amounting to upwards of 80,000 bags, near 50,000 of which are already arrived here. Cons. 8th Aug. 12th Aug. 8th Sept. Cons. 30th Sept.

9. In order to encourage the importation of all such articles as the Natives use for food, we resolved to remit the duty usually levied on them, until the 1st May next; we have written to the Subordinacies, to send hither every species of provisions they can collect; and in fine, we hope we have, by our timely precautions, averted the dreadful effects of famine, which appeared to threaten this Settlement. Cons. 5th Dec.

10. We have acquainted your Honours with the particulars

Conſ. 29th July, 1st Aug. 7th Nov. 8th Nov. 14th Nov. ticulars of the ſuſpenſion of Meſſrs. Whitehill and Sadlier from the ſervice, in our Letters of the 15th October, and 29th November; we therefore think it unneceſſary to ſay any thing more on this ſubject, than to refer you to our Proceedings, ſorted in the margin, which will fully explain the reſpective conduct of each Member of Government, when thoſe Reſolutions took place.

Conſ. 14th Nov. 11. We likewiſe in our Letter of the 29th November, explained to you our reaſons for having called Meſſrs. Morgan Williams and William Cuming to the Board, as acting Members of Council, in the place of Meſſrs. Whitehill and Sadlier.

Conſ. 9th June. 10th June. 23d June. 30th June. 13. We mentioned to you in our Letter of the 15th October, the ſteps we had taken in conſequence of your orders, for the detection of the perſons under this Government, ſaid to have been concerned in the French ſhip, called the Elizabeth. The Proceedings noted in the margin, contain a full diſcuſſion on this ſubject.

14. On the 3d inſtant, Mr. Cotsford addreſſed us a Letter, intimating his intention of returning to Europe on a Daniſh ſhip then in the Road, as his ſtate of health did not permit him to apply ſo cloſely to buſineſs as he could wiſh. We are much concerned to obſerve, that Mr. Cotsford ſhould judge this a ſufficient reaſon, at the preſent moſt critical and alarming criſis of the Company's affairs, for relinquiſhing the honourable and conſpicuous ſtation to which you had been pleaſed to appoint him.

We have no doubt but Mr. Cotsford's repreſentation of the fort of Maſulipatam, being put into as good a ſtate of defence as circumſtances permitted, is juſt; but when the enormous outſtanding balances of the Zemindars and Renters, inſtead of being greatly decreaſed, as we had flattered ourſelves would have been effected, have on the contrary been ſuffered to augment conſiderably, and at this time actually amount, including the teeps due, to Madras pagodas 1,528,597. 17; we cannot agree with him, that nothing has been left undone, which the Chief and Council had the power of doing; and we ſubmit to your Honours, whether this ſubject could any where be diſcuſſed with more propriety than at the Preſidency?

The other parts of his Letter are too futile for us to treſpaſs on your time, by remarking upon them; but cannot help obſerving, that his application to us for our permiſſion, after he had on every occaſion avowed his determination to return to Europe on the Daniſh ſhip, which was on the point of ſailing, and his embarking without waiting for our anſwer, carry the appearance of great diſreſpect to that ſuperior authority veſted in us by your Honours as your repreſentatives.

Conſ. 8th Sept. 15. In the month of September your Standing Counſel at this Preſidency, Mr. Benjamin Sulivan, applied to us for an increaſe of ſalary; ſetting forth his being precluded by his preſent ſtation from every exerciſe of his profeſſion, but what is devoted to the information of Government, and that his allowance annexed to his employ was not adequate to the unavoidable expences of a perſon, in a reſpectable ſituation in this country. After much conſideration, on a compariſon of Mr. Sulivan's advantages with thoſe of your Advocate General in Bengal, and on the evident neceſſity there is for our having an able aſſiſtant, to adviſe with in all matters of law; we came to the reſolution of doubling his ſalary, as a ſuitable encouragement to Mr. Sulivan, whoſe abilities and judgments we have every reaſon to be ſatisfied with.

19. A ſhort time ſince we received a Letter from Mr. Sadlier, ſetting forth the hardſhips he had ſuffered, and ſubmitting to us, what compenſation was deemed adequate to his ſervices. As we did not think ourſelves authorized to grant him any other conſideration for his loſſes, ariſing from ſuperceſſion or ſuſpenſion, than what had hitherto been allowed to covenanted Servants in the ſame predicament, we could only agree to pay him the ſalary and allowances he omitted to draw for, as ſet forth by him, until the time of his late ſuſpenſion.

Conſ. 30th Dec.

21. Sir Eyre Coote having recommended to our conſideration, a Letter addreſſed to him from the Commander of the Duke of Kingston, repreſenting the loſs he had ſuſtained, by being ordered to tranſport the troops and ſtores to this Preſidency; we thought it but equitable to allow him the ſame compenſation, for his great attention in forwarding the public ſervice, and for the detriment it had been of to his private intereſt, that had been formerly granted by the Governor General and Council to each of the Commanders of the Company's ſhips employed againſt Pondicherry; but as we could not advance him caſh, we have given him a Company's intereſt bond for the amount.

Conſ. 5th Dec.

22. Mr. John Douglas made a purchaſe from the Company, in September 1779, of a piece of ground, ſituated on the Eſplanade, forming part of the ſea beach; as we had ſince been convinced, by the repeated repreſentations of the Merchants belonging to this Settlement, of the great inconvenience and detriment it would be of to trade, ſhould we allow the ground to fall into the hands of any individual, we agreed to give Mr. Douglas the ſum of eight thouſand pagodas, on condition that he relinquiſhed all claim to the purchaſe; which he accepted.

Conſ. 5th May.

24. We lately received an account from the Chief and Council at Vizagapatam, of the loſs to the Company, occaſioned by the mutiny of the Sepoys in October laſt; and I have ordered the amount, which exceeds the ſum of fifteen thouſand pagodas, to be written off to the head of profit and loſs.

Conſ. 5th Dec.

28. The books of the ſeveral Subordinacies not having been forwarded to us, on account of the preſent difficulty of conveying large packages from one part of this Coaſt to the other, the general books, ending April laſt, could not be cloſed; and their ſtatements of revenues and expences ſince that time, not having been yet received, has likewiſe prevented us from forwarding to your Honours any other than our annual ſtatements.

29. The number of Arcot rupees in the treaſury, and the expected ſupplies from Vizagapatam and Ganjam being always received in that ſpecie, induced us, in Conſultation the 30th ultimo, to eſtabliſh the currency of Arcot rupees throughout this Settlement, in all payments not exceeding three hundred pagodas; and we truſt we have fixed their exchange at ſo juſt a medium, that the Public will not be aggrieved, nor the Company ſuffer any loſs by this regulation.

30. The amount of the invoice by this ſhip, is one hundred and ſixty-four thouſand nine hundred and thirty-ſix pagodas, thirty-one fanams, and fifty-five caſh (164,936. 31. 55.)

32. Your honours have this day in your treaſury as follows; viz.

Current pagodas	299	35	27
Madras pagodas	584	—	—
Arcot rupees	98,455	11	4
German crowns	1,281	—	—
Muſters of gold
Current pagodas	158	—	—
Madras pagodas	194	—	—

And you have in your caſh cheſt, twenty-ſix thouſand three hundred and forty-four pagodas, twenty-eight fanams, and one caſh, (26,344. 28. 1.)

Letter from the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, in their Revenue Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 9th January 1781.

To the honourable the Court of Directors for the Affairs of the Honourable he United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

Par. 1. AS our proceedings in this Department will be be forwarded to your Honours, by your ſhip Duke of Kingston, now under diſpatch for Europe, we take the ſame opportunity of explaining fully to you, ſuch particulars reſpecting your revenues, as have occurred ſince our addreſs under date the 4th April.

2. The Zemindars of the four Northern Circars under Maſulipatam, being aſſembled there in June laſt, to ſettle the payments due from them reſpectively; your Chief and Council informed us, they had been ſo long amuſed by the repeated promiſes of the Zemindars to deliver in their teeps, and had ſo conſtantly found thoſe promiſes broken, that they had at length thought it neceſſary to try what effect a ſhew of coercive meaſures towards the Zemindars would have, and in conſequence, Sepoy guards were actually placed over their perſons, after the Chief and Council had explained to them, that their late unpardonably evaſive conduct could alone have brought upon them ſo conſpicuous a mark of diſgrace. Conſ. 7 July.

3. It was hoped this appearance of ſeverity would induce the Zemindars to exert themſelves in the diſcharge of their balances; but leſt it ſhould not, we authorized your Chief and Council, in the laſt extremity, to adopt a plan that they themſelves had ſuggeſted; which was, either to take poſſeſſion in the name of the Company, of the ſeveral countries belonging to the Zemindars, until they procured bills for their ſeveral payments, in order to force them to employ every reſource they poſſeſſed, to ſatisfy the juſt demands of the Company; or to impreſs them with an idea, that if they did not provide their teeps at a certain period ſhortly after the gathering in the harveſt the beginning of the enſuing year, we had given an authority to the Chief and Council, to ſeize on the crops, and to keep poſſeſſion of them until their teeps were produced. Conſ. 12 Aug.

4. Having thus furniſhed your Chief and Council with ſuch ample powers, to put in force their own propoſal, which we were the more readily led to give our ſanction to, from the opinion repeatedly advanced by them, that the principal Zemindars had larger ſunds at command than they choſe to bring forth on this occaſion; we truſted we ſhould experience the deſired effect from the activity of the Board at Maſulipatam. About two months afterwards, we received a Letter from them, recapitulating to us the diſputes that had ariſen between the Zemindars and the Soucars, with their meaſures in conſequence (for a full account of which, as repreſented to us, we beg leave to refer your Honours to their Letters of the 31ſt July and of the 25th September) and informing us, that they had at length obtained teeps from the Zemindar of Bidapore for P. 128,000: from the Zemindar of Munglatore for P. 185,000: from the Zemindar of Ramchunderaporam for P. 11,641. 34. 15: from the Zemindar of Corcondah for P. 6,853. 6. 30: and from the Manager at Pittapore for P. 57,494. 31. 10. Conſ. 3 Nov.

5. There appeared ſuch a want of propriety and vigour in the conduct of the Chief and Council, in the courſe of their negotiations with the above-mentioned Zemindars, that we could not avoid expreſſing to them our diſſatisfaction at their meaſures; and, in order the more ſtrongly to evince the neceſſity of their uſing every poſſible means to recover the heavy balances ſtill outſtanding from the Zemindars, we ſent them copy of the 18th, 19th, and 20th paragraphs of your orders of the 16th June 1779; which, we flatter ourſelves, will have every good effect we could wiſh. Conſ. 5th Dec.

6. In the beginning of laſt year, the minor Zemindar of Pittapore, named Comara Vincata Row, fled from his uncle Maheputty Row, who was in the temporary management of his country, and took refuge with his adherents; in particular, Byrava Puntaloo, the late Dewan of Pittapore, in the fort of Piddapore; alledging, that his uncle meant to make away with him, and to eſtabliſh himſelf in the Zemindary. Your Chief and Council being adviſed of this, ordered all the parties to Maſulipatam, in order to enquire into the cauſes of ſo extraordinary an event; but finding, on a full inveſtigation of the ſubject, that there were no juſt grounds of complaint againſt Maheputty Row, and that this diſturbance had ariſen from the intrigues of Byrava Puntaloo, and of Jaggaputterauze, Rajah of Peddapore, your Chief and Council directed the child to be returned to his uncle, and exhorted Byrava Puntaloo to be reconciled to Maheputty Row; pledging themſelves to ſecure the rights of the young Zemindar from any intended incroachments of his uncle. Conſ. 23d Feb.

7. This determination was accordingly ſignified to both parties by the Chief, at an interview he had with them at the Company's Garden Houſe. Byrava Puntaloo and his followers ſhewed ſome appearances of diſſatisfaction at the deciſion; and on their taking leave of the Chief, the young Zemindar expreſſed great unwillingneſs to go with his uncle; which the Chief perceiving, thought fit to inſiſt on his compliance with the orders of the Council. A ſcuffle between the two factions enſued, and Comara Vencata Row was finally carried off to the pettah of Maſulipatam, by the adherents of Byrava Puntaloo.

8. When theſe circumſtances came to our knowledge, we judged it proper to direct your Chief and Council to confine the rioters, and to eſtabliſh Maheputty Row and Byrava Puntaloo in the joint management of the Pittapore Country, until Comara Vencata Row, to whom we gave permiſſion to remain under our protection at Maſulipatam, ſhould come of age; and if either party made any objections, to acquaint them, the Zemindary muſt then be converted into Havelly Lands during the minority of Comara Vencata Row. The Chief and Council, in anſwer, pointed out to us the impoſſibility of reconciling Maheputty Row and Byrava Puntaloo, to accede to the terms of this deciſion. Conſ. 25 Mar.

9. To avert the ill conſequences that muſt neceſſarily enſue, from the country being any longer in a ſtate of confuſion, after different plans had been ſuggeſted by the ſeveral Members of Council at our meetings, held as noted in the margin, we at length reſolved, as Maheputty Row appeared clearly, from his near relationſhip to Comara Vencata Row, to have a prior claim to the management of the Zemindary, and as we never had reaſon to be diſpleaſed with his conduct, that he ſhould have a Cowle granted him, eſtabliſhing his former authority in the Zemindary, until Comara Vencata Row ſhould arrive at the age of eighteen years; when, if the different branches of the family ſhould agree to manage the Pettapore Country in harmony together, they ſhould be permitted to do ſo; otherwiſe, that their ſeveral claims ſhould hereafter be referred to the deciſion of the Preſident and Council at that time. When theſe reſolutions were made known to Maheputty Row, he expreſſed much diſſatisfaction at them; and ſtated to the Chief and Council his claim, agreeably to the cuſtom of the country, to an equal ſhare in the Zemindary with his nephew. Conſ. 23 June, 30 June, 19 July. Conſ. 8th Aug.

10. Maheputty Row's repreſentation of his ſituation appearing ſo well founded; and his aſſertion of his rights ſo juſt, that ſeeing no proſpect of ſecuring payment of the Company's kiſts from that country, which was our principal object, but by means of Maheputty Row, we were induced to reverſe our former judgment, and to confirm the firſt Cowle granted to him; which ſtill remains in his poſſeſſion, in its full force. We have every expectation from this meaſure of a punctual diſcharge of the arrears due from the Pettapore Zemindary; at the ſame time your Honours may depend upon our carefully protecting the perſon of the young Comara Vencata Row, who is now at Maſulipatam, from any machinations of either party, until he ſhall be of a proper age to take upon himſelf the charge of public buſineſs. Conſ. 12 Aug.

11. We are concerned to acquaint your Honours of a ſlight diſturbance that happened ſome time ſince in the Cotapillee Diſtrict, from the refractory conduct of the manager, Conaty Narſinvalloo; who, upon being repeatedly ſent for by your Chief and Council, to repair to Maſulipatam, to ſettle the payment of his tribute, actually took up arms againſt the Company. We have, however, Conſ. 8th Aug.

the pleaſure of informing you, that the peace of that country is reſtored, and that we have placed Trimubrow, a man of large property, Dewan to the Rajah of Mugletore, in the management of Cotapillee Havelly, on terms very advantageous to the Company.

12. The Cowle for the Chaharmall Country, which was under the management of the Zemindar of Mugletore, expiring the 31ſt May laſt, we placed that diſtrict under the charge of Vencata Royaloo, the Company's Interpreter at Maſulipatam; who has agreed to pay to us the ſame jemabundy or tribute as was ſettled for this Zemindary in 1778, to make an annual aliowance of 2,000 Madras pagodas to the young Zemindar; and to deliver the ſum of 8,000 Madras pagodas per annum, to the creditors of Opparow; who has conſiderable claims on the Chaharmall Country, but whom we could not truſt with the care thereof, in his preſent embarraſſed circumſtances.

Conſ. 7th July. 8th Aug. 30th Dec.

13. Sitteram Rauze delivered in a petition to us ſome months ſince, whilſt he was at the Preſidency; ſetting forth, that Atſhowteram Rauze, Zemindar of Cotah, had made over to the ſon of Sitteram Rauze, four villages of that diſtrict, as a compenſation for a debt due to him from Atchooteram Rauze. Though the demand might be juſt, yet we could not, upon any account, ſuffer an alienation of Zemindary lands, not conſidering the Zemindars to have a right, under any circumſtances, thus to diſmember the countries committed to their charge, without our ſanction being firſt obtained; and as we underſtood from the Chief and Council at Maſulipatam, that the interference of Sitteram Rauze was the only obſtacle to the payment of the tribute of the Cotah Country, we releaſed the four villages from the obligation they were under to him; but we directed the Chief and Council to be careful when the Company's balance was diſcharged, that Sitteram Rauze had ſatisfaction for his demand. We have ſince had reaſon to think, from the evaſive conduct of Atchooteram Rauze, that we ſhall be at laſt under the neceſſity of ſending collectors, on account of the Company, into his country, as the only means of ſecuring the heavy arrears due from him.

Conſ. 12 Aug. Conſ. 12 Aug.

14. We are happy to acquaint your Honours, that we have the moſt ſanguine hopes of recovering, in the courſe of a ſhort time, a great part of the large balances outſtanding in the Chicacole Circar. In effecting this deſirable object, we cannot ſufficiently commend the activity and vigour ſhewn by Mr. James Henry Caſamajor, the preſent Chief of Vizagapatam, and his Council, ever ſince the return of Sitteram Rauze to the northward. Their arrangements have been judicious, they have already actually realized a conſiderable ſum of money on account of the Company, and their conduct on the whole has anſwered our warmeſt expectations.

15. In conſequence of a petition received in July laſt from Sitteram Rauze, we were induced to remit payment to the Vizinagrum family, of one quarter year's tribute of Ankapillee diſtrict, amounting to rupees 25,000, in conſideration of the loſſes ſuſtained by the fort of Sattieveram being withheld from their managers by the family of Pyakerow in 1778, which much impeded the cultivation of the country. We likewiſe at the ſame time allowed a deduction of R$ 60,881, from the rent of the Chicacole Havelly, as that ſum appeared to us to have been received from the country by Jaggernaut Rauze, the late Renter, before Sitteram Rauze took charge of thoſe diſtricts.

Conſ. 18 June. 7th July.

16. You will have been informed from the Select Committee, of a mutiny that happened at Vizigapatam among your Sepoys, on their being ordered to embark on board ſhip for the Preſidency. During the many exceſſes committed by the mutineers, Guzza Putty Narrain Deo, who was depoſed from the Zemindary of Kimedy for miſbehaviour in the year 1774, and who has ſince reſided at Vizapatam, on the ſtated allowance, was of ſuch uſe, and ſhewed ſo much attachment to your Servants there, whilſt they were abſolutely in imminent danger of ſuffering every barbarity which unreſtrained violence might dictate, that it induced them to recommend his being reinſtated in his Zemindary. The conduct of his brother Jagganaut Deo, who was then in charge of the Kimmedy Country, had been by no means ſatisfactory. His incapacity had been before repreſented to us, and the continual diſputes between him and his Dewan had been the means of impeding the collections of tribute for ſuch a length of time, that the arrears due to the Company amounted to ſo large a ſum as R$ 2,04,658, though the annual jemabundy is only R$ 86,000: urged by theſe motives, added to the conſideration of the youth of Guzzyputty Narrain Deo, at the time he committed the offence which brought him under the Company's diſpleaſure, we yielded to the ſolicitations of the Chief and Council, and reſtored him to the Zemindary Kimedy, making a ſuitable proviſion for Jaggernaut Deo. Your Chief and Council have ſince agreed with Guzzyputty Narrain Deo, that he is to pay the Company the ſame jemabundy as heretofore, being R$ 86,000, and the ſum of R$ 30,000 annually, towards the diſcharge of the debt from his country. He himſelf is well ſatisfied to live on an allowance of 1,200 rupees per month, the reſidue of the collections from his Zemindary to be appropriated to the further liquidation of the arrears due to the Company. In diſcuſſing the ſubjects of this and the foregoing paragraphs of the preſent addreſs, ſome difference of opinion occurred among the Members of Council; for the particulars of which, we beg leave to refer you to that part of our Proceedings noted in the margin.

17. We acquainted your Honours in our Letter of the 15th October, that we had come to the reſolution of taking away the Cowles for the Farms of Nagore Cuddalore, and thoſe under this Preſidency, from the renters who then held them; and that we had publiſhed advertiſements for reletting: as we have not yet finally ſettled this buſineſs, we ſhall defer ſaying more on the ſubject until another occaſion offers of addreſſing your Honours, when we hope to give you the fulleſt ſatisfaction, from our attention to your intereſts in this inſtance.

Minute of Sir Eyre Coote, 12th January 1781.

AT the ſame time I put my ſignature to the General Letter of the 9th of January 1781, I muſt, in candour and in conformity to thoſe opinions which I have both held and expreſſed, except againſt one part of it, and which aſcribes all our preſent misfortunes to the Maratta war.

That that meaſure may firſt have given birth to the idea of a general combination of the Powers of Hindoſtan againſt us, I will not endeavour to diſprove; but that to it alone we owe the formidable incurſion of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic, I cannot admit: firſt, becauſe long after we had commenced hoſtilities againſt the Marattas Hyder himſelf continued to make conqueſts upon them and which our operations no doubt facilitated. It was his favourite object, and which I am confident he would never have quitted, or ſought for a union with the Marattas againſt us, had not our negotiations with Bazalet Jung, about the Guntoor Circar (on which he had alſo views) and the mode in which they were carried on awakened his jealouſy, and very naturally made him apprehend, that our ultimate intentions were to poſſeſs ourſelves of ſome part of his country. Whilſt it anſwered his his purpoſe to make peace with the Marattas, in order that his attention or ſtrength might in no ſhape be diverted from providing effectually for the ſecurity of his own territories, it was entirely ſuitable to the Marattas in their then ſituation, as it enabled them to direct their whole force againſt the operations of our army under Brigadier General Goddard. We alarmed his fears for the ſafety of his own country; croſſed his views upon the Guntoor Circar, which he was deſirous of obtaining in form from Bazalet Jung. That an able agent might not be wanting to foment theſe offences, we deliberately gave umbrage to the Nabob Nizam; firſt, by ſeeking and actually ſubſcribing to a treaty of friendſhip with his brother and ſubject Bazalet Jung, without aſking his conſent or approbation; and next, by demanding of him a remiſſion of the peſcuſh, or tribute, which for theſe eleven years and upwards we have paid him, as in treaty bound, on account of the Northern Circars. To prevent any bad conſequences ariſing from the delay in the payment of the peſcuſh, which was owing in the firſt place to a temporary inability, created by the heavy current expences, which were unavoidably incurred by the ſiege of Pondicherry; and in the next place perhaps by miſmanagement; I was induced, when I ſtopped here in my way to Bengal, to recommend the miſſion of Mr. Hollond, as Ambaſſador to the Nizam's Court, to aſſure him, that the peſcuſh ſhould be paid, and to explain to him the cauſe of its detention.

The Nizam has in his Letters to this Government, and in his converſations with Mr. Hollond, who communicated them to the Governor General and Council, avowed his diſpleaſure, on account of our behaviour with regard to the peſcuſh and the Guntoor treaty; and has, without ſcruple, acknowledged his having for theſe reaſons encouraged and connived at a combination of the Powers againſt us.

With all theſe circumſtances before me, and which the Records both here and in Bengal bear teſtimony; and further, knowing it as a thing certain, that at the very time the treaty was carrying on with Bazalet Jung, Hyder would have entered into an offenſive and defenſive alliance with us; I would do an injury to myſelf, and a ſtill greater one to our Superiors, who are to paſs their judgment on men and meaſures by the documents handed them from their reſpective Governments in India, did I tacitly ſubſcribe to that part of the General Letter to the Court of Directors, which I have hereby excepted againſt; and not alſo elucidate the other cauſes, beſides the Maratta war, which have aſſiſted to haſten our preſent diſtreſſes.

I requeſt that this may go a number in the packet now under diſpatch.

No. 10.

Letter from the Governor General and Council in Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 29th November 1780.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

(Secret Department.)

Honourable Sirs,

Par. 1ſt. THE diſpatch of the ſhips now under ſailing orders, affording us an opportunity of addreſſing you from this Department, and of tranſmitting to you a connected narrative of our proceedings in it ſince the date of our advices by the Swallow, we avail ourſelves of it for this purpoſe; and at the ſame time ſend you a complete copy of our Conſultations ſince the 24th February laſt, together with a duplicate tranſcript of the broken ſet of them, which was forwarded by that packet. We have alſo the honour to tranſmit to you, triplicate of our Letter by the ſame veſſel, and of thoſe ſince addreſſed to you by the Trial ſchooner, under date the 15th and 17th of laſt month. We take the ſame opportunity of acknowledging the receipt of your advices of the 24th February and 24th of March.

2. You were duly informed, in our addreſs by the Swallow, of the recall of Mr. Hollond from the Court of his Highneſs the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, by the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George; of the reaſons which induced us to wiſh for his continuance there; and of the application which we made to the Preſident and Select Committee, for their permiſſion to him to remain at Hydrabad, as the public Miniſter of this Government. This application was refuſed, and Mr. Hollond was directed, in peremptory terms, to obey the orders of recall before ſent him. Theſe orders were as unreaſonable as they appeared to us ill grounded. They proclaimed to all India a diſunion and ſeparation of intereſts between the two Preſidencies; and, in particular, affected the aſſurances which we had given to the Nabob Nizam Ally. We were, however, obliged, though very reluctantly, to acquieſce; and Mr. Hollond was left at liberty to conform to them. He was directly ſubject to the authority of your Servants at Fort Saint George, and it was not in our power to indemnify him from the probable conſequences of diſobedience to it. But the reſtraint upon our wiſhes to be availed of the ſervices of Mr. Hollond at Hydrabad, did not continue long; for the ſame temper with which he had for ſome time before been treated by his immediate Superiors, inducing them to ſuſpend him from your ſervice, we were enabled to confirm our appointment of him; and did accordingly appoint him to be Reſident, on the part of this Government only, at the Nizam's Court. The high opinion which we entertain of Mr. Hollond's merits, our ſenſe of his ſervices, believing him, as we do, to have been the means of preventing a breach of the alliance ſubſiſting between the Company and the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, at a moment when the Company's affairs were very critically ſituated, and it became of the utmoſt importance to ſecure even the neutrality of the Nizam; the obligations, moreover, under which we deem ourſelves to indemnify Mr. Hollond, by every means in our power, from the effects which he has unjuſtly ſuſtained of the reſentment of his Superiors at Madras, for his obedience to inſtructions tranſmitted to him by us, in conſequence of thoſe which he had received from them, and which were notified to us by them, call upon us to recommend him ſtrongly to you; and in doing ſo, we make it our requeſt that you reſtore him to the ſervice, and to his ſtanding on the Madras Eſtabliſhment, or that he be transferred, with his rank, to this. Conſ. 15 May.

3. Mr. Hollond being placed under our immediate authority at Hydrabad, our endeavours have been ſtrenuouſly exerted to ſecure the friendſhip of the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, or to prevent him at leaſt from taking part againſt us; but it has not been without great difficulty, that theſe endeavours have hitherto been exerted with a good effect. That power in the Engliſh Governments which was ſettled in his neighbourhood, and with whom of courſe his correſpondence had always been principally held, had made demands on him, which in his conception of them were derogatory from the faith of the treaty ſubſiſting with him; and had committed one act, which was a direct and undoubted violation of it; and the general tenor of their conduct had made him diſtruſtful of their intentions to preſerve the peace with him. Such indeed was his conviction of their unfriendly diſpoſition towards him, that he found it neceſſary to be prepared for hoſtilities; or ſuch was his reſentment of their conduct, that he was determined to uſe the moſt likely means within his compaſs, of cruſhing their ability to do him further miſchief; and under the ſtrong influence of thoſe impreſſions, it is a well-known and undenied fact, that he had not only combined with the principal Powers of Hindoſtan againſt the Company, but was the chief promoter of the alliance. For the particulars of this hiſtory, we beg leave to refer you to a Minute, which has been delivered by the Governor General, and is entered in the Conſultations noted in the margin, as well as to a Letter from Mr. Hollond to the Governor General, forwarded by the Trial packet; in which the Nabob's avowal is declared, of his being the author of the confederacy againſt us, and his juſtification of it, on the plea of ſelf-defence, againſt the ſuppoſed intention of the Preſidency of Fort Saint George to break with him.

Conſ. 4th Sept.

4. To obviate a prejudice ſo rooted, and the effect of an engagement ſo promiſing of ſucceſs as that in which the Nizam is combined, would of itſelf have been no eaſy taſk; but the difficulty has been ſo much augmented, as to have been nearly invincible, from the unwillingneſs of the Preſidency of Madras to uſe the only means of reconciling him to us, and their inattention to the advice and orders which we ſent them for this purpoſe. It was the belief of the Nabob Nizam Ally, that we were actually veſted with the controul, which we declared ourſelves to poſſeſs; but he diſtruſted the effect of that controul, ſince the orders which we had repeatedly given and declared to him, for the reſtitution of the Circar of Guntoor, had not only been diſregarded, but Mr. Hollond, who had been the inſtrument of the negotiation, had been puniſhed by them for the part which he had taken in it.

5. We refer you to our Letter to Fort Saint George, of the 12th June, for the arrangement on which we had reſolved to give the Soubah ſatisfaction, and of which he was immediately informed. The Preſident and Select Committee, inſtead of withdrawing their forces, Collectors and Agents, from the Circar of Guntoor, agreeable to our requiſition, reſtoring it to the poſſeſſion of Bazalet Jung, and replacing every thing in the ſtate in which it ſtood before they entered into any negotiation with him, did in no one inſtance comply with our orders, nor appear to have taken the leaſt notice of them till the 2d of September; when they informed us, that they were willing to comply with our requiſition of them, to deliver back to Bazalet Jung the Guntoor Circar; but that the Circar having been farmed to the Nabob of the Carnatic, his claim on it, as Renter, muſt be firſt relinquiſhed; and that they had written to him, expreſſing their hope that he would give it up, and that they would inform us of his anſwer as ſoon as they receive it.

6. We have recited the great difficulties which oppoſed our accommodation with the Nizam, of which we had much reaſon to complain, ſo much, that it became an object of neceſſity to remove them. The controlling power, with which we are veſted by an act of the Britiſh Legiſlature, had been, in repeated inſtances, treated by the Gentlemen at Fort Saint George with ſlight and diſreſpect; but in the preſent inſtance, they thought proper to take more upon them: they defeated our acts by their refuſal to conform to them, and comply with our orders, where we had eſpecial right to them. The faith of this Government had been pledged to the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, for the reſtoration of the Guntoor Circar to Bazalet Jung; they were ſo informed, and required to reſtore it. They did not reſtore it.—We had no alternative but by a tame acquieſcence to ſacrifice the truſt repoſed in us, and ſuffer your intereſts to be involved in a war by a breach of public faith, or to maintain both by an application of the powers which had been given us for ſuch a purpoſe. Upon theſe grounds we reſolved, on the 10th ultimo, to give effect to our commands, and determined to exert the authority with which we were veſted, in ſuſpending Mr. Whitehill, the Preſident of Fort Saint George, from the Company's ſervice. Our reaſons for this meaſure are particularly ſtated in our Letter to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, of the 10th ultimo, which goes a number in the packet, and to which we beg leave to refer you for them: and at the ſame time that we are led to hope that the beſt effects may be derived from it, in eſtabliſhing for the Company the neutrality or friendſhip of the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, during the preſent troubles, and in ſaving our authority in his eſtimation, and that of the other Country Powers, we are under no fear that the Councils of your Preſidency of Fort Saint George will be leſs ably or ſucceſsfully conducted hereafter, than they have been during the period in which Mr. Whitehill directed them.

7. You will obſerve, by our Conſultations of the 13th ultimo, that we were then informed, by a Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Fort Saint George, dated the 23d September, of the meaſures which they had at length been pleaſed to adopt, for giving effect to our requiſitions of the 12th of June, by immediate orders to their officer commanding in the Guntoor Circar, to deliver over that country to Bazalet Jung's Agent; and by procuring an order alſo from the Nabob to his Aumildar, to relinquiſh all concern in the management of the revenues.

8. Our Letter by the Trial packet, will have acquainted you with the calamity which had befallen a large detachment of your troops, commanded by Lieutenant Colonels Baillie and Fletcher, in the Carnatic, and of the conſequent retreat of Major General Munro, with the main army, to Chingleput. The ſame Letters will inform you of the exertions we have made for the relief of your affairs on the Coaſt, in diſpenſing with the ſervices of Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote at this Settlement, where they were very neceſſary, for the ſake of affording the aid of them to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George; in detaching to it a conſiderable force of European infantry and artillery; in remitting for its uſe, a large ſupply of treaſure, amounting to the ſum of fifteen lacks of rupees; and in providing it with a great ſtore of grain. We have not been thus liberal in our ſervices to the Preſidency of Madras, without ſome inconveniences to our Government; but our efforts being made under the conviction of their being neceſſary to the preſervation of the Company's affairs under that Preſidency, and to the retrieval of them from the ſad effect of the misfortune which they had ſuſtained, they have been exerted with the firſt degree of chearfulneſs, and will be continued with the ſame, while our aſſiſtance can be given without certain danger to your ſuperior intereſt in Bengal.

9. It has been ſtrongly recommended by us to Rear Admiral Sir Edward Hughes, to aſſiſt in diſtreſſing Hyder Ally, by the deſtruction of his ſhips and ports on the Coaſt of Malabar, during the Admiral's voyage to Bombay; and we doubt not but the uſe of this meaſure will appear to him in the ſame light as it appears to us.

10. We have the pleaſure to inform you, that we have received advice from Sir Eyre Coote, under date the 6th inſtant, of his arrival at Fort Saint George, on the preceding day, which is exactly one month and thirteen days, from the receipt of the advices which firſt informed us of the diſtreſſes of that Preſidency, that all the veſſels, with the troops and ſtores were alſo ſafely arrived, and the troops and treaſure ſafely landed. A copy of his Letter to us, goes a number in the packet.—We much fear that the account which it contains, of the loſs of Arcot, though not deemed certain, is too true; but we truſt, that the preſence and good conduct of Sir Eyre Coote, will ſoon change the face of your affairs in that country.

11. In further aid of the operations of the Company's troops on the Coaſt, and on the advice and recommendation of the Commander in Chief, before his departure from Bengal, we reſolved, on the 26th ultimo, to detach over-land towards Madras, a company of European artillery, and a body of ſix battalions of Sepoys, with their guns, chiefly intended for the defence of the Circars; but generally for ſuch other ſervices as may be required of them. The Commander of this detachment is veſted in Lieutenant Colonel Pearſe; Major Edmundſon is appointed ſecond in command, and we have allowed for it the eſtabliſhment noted in the margin. We have it in contemplation, to ſupply the loſs of this force to the defence of our own provinces, by new levies, but our reſolution has not yet been taken on the beſt and leaſt expenſive mode of carrying our intentions in this reſpect into execution. The orders of march for the troops going towards Madras, being to depend on the hopes given us, that the Maratta army now lying at Cuttack, will either join us, or return to Berar; we are anxiouſly waiting before we paſs the order, for advices from the Government of Berar; in anſwer to the Letters which were written to them by the Governor General, in conſequence of our reſolutions of the 26th September, reſpecting a propoſed treaty with the Maratta ſtate. Theſe reſolutions ſhall be more fully noticed hereafter; but we here think it neceſſary to obſerve, upon the general conduct of the Rajah of Berar towards this Government, upon the ſtrong profeſſions of friendſhip which he has made to it, and upon the declarations of his Vakeel, that even though his troops ſhould not have quitted Cuttack when our forces reached it on their way to the Circars, our opinion is, that they will offer them no hindrance or moleſtation.

11. You will obſerve by our Proceedings of the 20th July, that we reſolved to detach a battalion of Sepoys to the banks of the Sōubenreka, for the purpoſe of ſecuring the boats on that river, ſhould the troops of the Rajah of Berar attempt to croſs it; and to watch their motions. This was a meaſure of precaution, not of neceſſity.

12. Our knowledge of this country has informed us too well of the arts and policy uſually obſerved in the Indian Courts, to permit us to place an implicit faith or reliance on the mere profeſſions and oſtentatious diſplay of friendſhip which we may receive from any of them; and we muſt confeſs, that, if our belief of the friendly intentions of the Rajah of Berar towards the intereſt of the Company, had no other grounds than his profeſſions of them, ſtrong as theſe have been (and they are the ſtrongeſt that were ever penned by an Indian Power) it would be but weakly founded. Our impreſſion of the truth of them, is received from a knowledge of his real intereſts; and the proofs that he has hitherto afforded us, that we have not been miſtaken in our opinion of his ſincerity.—From the firſt intimation that he received of our intentions to detach a body of troops, under the command of Colonel Leſlie, to the Weſt of India, to the preſent time, he has given us the moſt powerful reaſons to ſuppoſe him a friend of the Company; and though, by his alliance, in which he is engaged with the Maratta State againſt us, he might be deemed an enemy, we are not perſuaded that this is a clear proof of his being ſo; for we believe, that the part which he has been ſaid to take in union with that State, was a part taken by neceſſity, not by choice; that he was forced into it, on conſideration of the ſafety of his own Government; and that, if a favourable opportunity ſhould preſent itſelf, whereat he could ſhew himſelf the friend of the Company with ſecurity to his own country, he would abandon an alliance into which he entered againſt his will, and act as his true intereſt led him.

13. We wiſh to draw your attention to the following facts, as the grounds of the opinion which we have formed, that the declared friendſhip of the Maha Rajah Moodagee Booſla for the Company, is not inſincere.

14. On the firſt formation of the detachment of your troops, placed under the command of Colonel Leſlie, an application was made to the Rajah of Berar, to permit it to paſs through a part of his dominions; he chearfully complied, and not only wrote to Colonel Leſlie, offering him a free paſſage through his country, and the means of ſubſiſtence, but cauſed a large ſtore of grain to be provided on his borders, where it lay ſome months waiting for his arrival; and during the continuance of Colonel Goddard, who then commanded the detachment of Hoſhingabad, he was received and treated with the greateſt hoſpitality.—Upon a viſit paid by the Rajah's Dewan, Dewagur Pundit, to Poonah, a confederacy was formed by the Maratta Miniſter, Nana Furnuſe, Madajee Scindia, and Hyder Ally, againſt the Company; and in this confederacy the Berar Government was required to take a part, and to furniſh their quota of troops for the common cauſe; the requiſition was accompanied with threats of invaſion of their country in the event of refuſal; and the Rajah having at that time diſbanded his army, and being therefore unprepared to aſſert his own rights and independency, was obliged to enter into the general confederacy, claiming, at the ſame time, the privilege of mediation. We are informed by the Governor General, that the firſt intelligence which he received of the confederacy, was from the Miniſter Dewargur Pundit himſelf; and believing the fact to be ſo, we cannot ſuppoſe that ſuch important communications would have been ſo readily imparted to us by Dewargur Pundit, if the Berar Government had been as hoſtile to us in reality, as motives of ſecurity to themſelves compelled them to appear. The part aſſigned in the confederacy to the Berar Rajah, was to ſend an army, during the courſe of the laſt ſeaſon, to lay waſte the provinces of Bengal. With this requiſition he certainly complied; but, at the ſame time, he informed us, that he ſhould uſe ſuch means of delay as ſhould prevent the army from approaching our borders, until the cloſe of the fair ſeaſon, when it could not enter upon immediate action; that in the interim, he ſhould be able by the next ſeaſon, to raiſe ſuch an army as would effectually eſtabliſh his own independence, and qualify him to act according to the dictates of his own judgment. Theſe declarations have hitherto been literally verified; for we have ſeen a large body of his troops, which he had detached in compliance to the requiſition made of him at Poonah, ſpin out a march to ſeven months, which might with eaſe have been accompliſhed in two, and arrive at the place of their deſtination at the commencement of the rains. We have alſo ſeen, that, ſince their arrival at Cuttack, inſtead of committing hoſtility and diſturbance, they have continued as quiet as if cantoned at their own capital. Conſ. 4th Sept.

15. Theſe circumſtances, added to the ſtrong profeſſions made to us, which we have not found falſified in any inſtance, and to the conſideration of his real intereſt, which in our judgment of it, attaches him to the Company, rather than to any of the Powers with whom he is obliged to wear the maſk of amity and confederacy againſt them, unleſs we ſhould in general admit, what we are very unwilling to admit, that the power which the Company poſſeſs in Hindoſtan is ſo extenſive and obnoxious to the whole empire, as to make it the intereſt of all its provinces, to unite with one another in overthrowing it. Theſe reaſons, we repeat, induce us to believe that the Rajah of Berar is well diſpoſed towards the Company; and that if the war with the Marattas ſhould continue, he will remain neutral; or that, ſhould he be compelled to take an active part in it, it will not be againſt us.—The belief of his attachment to your intereſt, and the confidence which we placed in it, have induced us to attend to the requeſt made to us for ſupplying his army with ſuch proviſions as they wanted at Cuttack, where it might have been greatly diſtreſſed without ſuch aſſiſtance.

16. We have been particular in acquainting you with our ſentiments regarding the Rajah of Berar, becauſe, from ſuſpicions of his intentions, grounded on the ſituation of his troops, ſo near our borders, you might be inclined to apprehend that theſe provinces were in danger of an invaſion from them; and becauſe we deſire to be juſtified on a late occaſion, which we have taken to ſhew our confidence in the Berar Government, and to add to its importance in the opinion of the other Country Powers, by the choice which we have made of it to be the guarantee for the faithful obſervance of a propoſed treaty with the Maratta State. Of this treaty you have already been informed by our advices of the 10th ultimo, and it appears on the Proceedings noted in the margin. We truſt, that you will approve the terms of it:—they were the beſt that we could offer in the ſituation of affairs at that time; and if accepted, we ſhall hope to ſee a peace firmly eſtabliſhed throughout India, or a war ſo vigorouſly ſupported Conſ. 26th and 27th Sept.

ſupported by the alliance which they propoſe, as to give an early and very proſperous turn to the preſent troubles, and ſuch an iſſue to them as we think fit to command.

17. We have hitherto been ſucceſsful in our endeavours to preſerve the neutrality of the Nabob Nizam Ally Cawn, notwithſtanding his engagement with the confederate Powers. The Rajah of Berar has not taken, and, as has been before obſerved, we believe will not, take any part againſt us; and if the Marattas could be perſuaded to abandon the temporary alliance which they have formed with their natural, and, till lately, inveterate enemy, Hyder Ally, whoſe ſucceſſes cannot be conſidered by them without ſome degree of jealouſy, we ſhould hope to be ſoon able effectually to cruſh the alarming efforts of this extraordinary uſurper, to add to the number of his conqueſts, and in the event of his oppreſſions, without reaſon or pretext.

18. You were informed in our General Letter of the 3d of March, of the operations of the army ſerving under General Goddard at the lateſt period from which we had received authenticated accounts of them. Continuing the narrative, we have now to inform you, that agreeable to the plan concerted with him by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and notwithſtanding the dubious conduct of Futty Sing Row Guicawar, when offers were firſt made to him by Brigadier General Goddard, a treaty of alliance was concluded with him on the 29th January laſt, generally correſponding with the objects that appear in Mr. Hornby's plan, dated 30th March 1779.

Deeming this alliance an event of conſiderable importance to the intereſt of the Company, and as having tended to facilitate, in a great degree, the ſucceſsful operations of our troops in the province of Guzerat, we beſtow only a juſt praiſe on the Officer who negotiated, when we declare our opinion, that he has rendered an eſſential ſervice to the Company, in concluding it. Some correſpondence having paſſed between Brigadier General Goddard and the Select Committee of Bombay, and between us and them, reſpecting the partition of territory ſtipulated in the treaty, we refer you for a full account of it to the Proceedings on which it is recorded, and to our Conſultations of the 15th May and the 2d October, for the orders which were ſent to General Goddard, on the ſubject of his replies to them. The treaty with Futty Sing, amended and ratified by us, will be found on our Proceedings of the 5th June. Two copies have been tranſmitted to Brigadier General Goddard, ſo far different from each other, that in the one the Articles which form the ſixth and tenth numbers of the treaty are omitted, and in the other, concluded with certain corrections, which we found it neceſſary to make in them; and we have left it to his diſcretion, to obtain the ſignature of the Preſident and Council of Bombay, and of Futty Sing, to either of them; adding his own to that which may receive their concurrence, and returning the other cancelled to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, to be ſent back to us.

19. We beg leave to refer you to the Conſultation noted in the margin, for the further obſervations which we made on the proviſions of the treaty concluded with Futty Sing, for our orders reſpecting them, and the replies made to thoſe orders by the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, and Brigadier General Goddard.

20. The treaty with Futty Sing had not long been concluded, before the General marched his forces to the city of Ahmedabad, the capital of Guzerat. His ſucceſs at this place, which he took by ſtorm on the 15th of February, after a ſiege of three days, completed the reduction of the rich province of Guzerat, for the advantage of the Company, and their Ally Futty Sing, and to the entire loſs of it to the Maratta State. On the army's quitting Ahmedabad, a detachment of our forces was left there in garriſon; and we have directed that Futty Sing ſhould be required to fix a ſubſidy for the expence of theſe troops during their continuance there, to make full payment of it from the time when they were left at Ahmedabad, and to diſcharge any extra expence incurred by the Company in the capture of the place. The detachment under the command of General Goddard having croſſed the river Mybe, on their return to the ſouthward from Ahmedabad, was joined by the forces of the Madras Eſtabliſhment, conſiſting of 500 Europeans, commanded by Colonel Brown.

Supplemental Appendix to the 2nd Report. No. 10.

21. On their arrival on the ſouth ſide of Mahie, it was found that Madajee Scindia and Tuckojee Holcar, with their forces, conſiſting of about 40,000 horſe, after entering Chandith, had proceeded towards Surat; within 30 miles of this place, they had advanced, when receiving intelligence of the ſiege of Ahmedabad, they bent their courſe to the northward, in hopes of arriving in ſufficient time to ſuccour the beſieged; but finding their expectations diſappointed, by the early capture of the place, and that the General with his army was marching quickly towards them, they had moved off with their whole force towards Pawenghur, a ſtrong, and by them deemed an impregnable fortreſs, ſituated on a high and ſteep hill. Here they continued for ſome time; and during their ſtay, there was ſome negotiation ſet on foot between the two Chiefs and Brigadier General Goddard. The intercourſe commenced by their releaſe of Meſſrs. Farmer and Stewart from the confinement which they had long ſuffered, as hoſtages for the performance of the engagements made at Worgaum, and the miſſion of a confidential perſon, named Abajee Shabajee, charged with Letters to the General, and accompany theſe Gentlemen to the Engliſh camp. A particular account of the correſpondence between the General and the Maratta Chiefs, appears in his Letters to the Preſident and Select Committee, of the 10th, 13th, and 17th March: it commenced, on the part of Scindia, with general expreſſions of his friendſhip for the Engliſh, on account of the proofs which he had given of it, in the regard ſhewn them at Worgaum; his perſeverance in the ſame ſentiments towards them to the preſent period, manifeſted by his treatment of Meſſrs. Farmer and Stewart, during their reſidence in his camp, and the liberty which he had granted them to return; and a deſire to be informed if our intentions were of a hoſtile or friendly nature towards the Peſhwa and himſelf. The replies made by General Goddard were as general as the profeſſions to which they were anſwers; reſted the cauſe of quarrel with the Miniſter, to whoſe pernicious Councils he aſcribed it, and its conſequences. It is neceſſary to obſerve, that at this period there was a ſuppoſed enmity between Nana the Miniſter, and Mhadajee Scindia, and that the ſame was avowed by Abajee Shabajee, the confidential perſon before named as charged with Letters to the Engliſh camp; though it is ſaid by General Goddard, that there is reaſon to believe that no ſuch enmity actually exiſted, and that it was declared merely to anſwer purpoſes expected from it. The propoſals at laſt made by Scindia, through his confidential Agent, were to this effect: that the agreement ſaid to have been made between Ragoba and Scindia, at Tilliagong, after the return of the Engliſh army to Bombay, ſhould be revived.—In this agreement the former is ſaid to have conſented to relinquiſh all claims to any ſhare in the adminiſtration of Poonah, and to retire towards Jancy, where he would receive an allowance from the Peſhwa's revenue of twelve lacks of rupees per annum; that the Sicca ſhould be ſtruck in the name of the young Peſhwa Madadow Narain; and that Badjarow, the ſon of Ragoba, ſhould be appointed his Dewan; but being only four years of age, and therefore too young to tranſact the buſineſs of the office himſelf, the care and management of it ſhould be left entirely to Scindia. This agreement, it was propoſed, ſhould now be put in force, that Ragoba ſhould immediately go to Jancy, and young Badjarow accompany Scindia to Poonah, in order to fix the adminiſtration in the manner above-mentioned. The anſwer made by General Goddard to theſe propoſals, was to the following effect: "that the Engliſh could "not, conſiſtently with their honour, nor ever could, "agree to put any reſtraint on Ragoba, or compel him "to leave their dominions againſt his own conſent: "that

Supplemental Appendix to the Second Report. No. 10.

" that however much they might be induced to unite in " the propoſed Settlement, they muſt be perfectly ſatis- " fied reſpecting the ſafety of young Badjarow; that " every thing muſt be quietly ſettled at Poonah, before " his preſence would be expedient, or even neceſſary " there; and that, admitting even the Engliſh did agree " to aſſiſt in putting the power of the State into the " hand of Scindia, it was neceſſary that he alſo ſhould, " on his part, and in the name of the Peſhwa, conſent " to the performance of certain conditions favourable " to their intereſts, as well in conſideration of the im- " portant advantages he was to receive through their " means, as to compenſate for the heavy expence of the " wars, which formerly, and in particular at this time, " they had been involuntarily compelled to wage with " the Maratta State." With this anſwer, and general aſſurances of a ſincere diſpoſition towards an accommoda- tion, on terms of an honourable nature, the Maratta Agent was diſmiſſed to his Maſter; it does not appear that any farther correſpondence paſſed between the two camps.

22. In a Letter written by us to General Goddard, on receipt of the advices which have been above quoted, we explained to him the principles which we required him to follow, with reſpect to Ragoba; deeming our obligations to this Chief little more than negative, en- tirely confined to the preſent protection of his perſon, and a future proviſion for his ſubſiſtence. Theſe points having been ſecured, we poſitively directed, that no conſideration of the ſuppoſed rights or intereſts of Ragoba ſhould ever be a bar or obſtacle to a peaceable accom- modation with the Maratta State. The proviſion ſtipu- lated for him in the treaty of Poorunder, being in our opinion adequate to his rank and wants, and placing him in a ſtate of ſafety and independence, we ſhould have approved of the offers made to General Goddard by Mhadajee Scindia, for the reſidence of Ragoba at Jancy, with ſuch a proviſion for his ſubſiſtence, if that fortreſs and its dependency, or ſuch a portion of it, was equal to the clear revenue intended to be appropriated to his uſe, were aſſigned to him abſolutely and independently of any other controul.

23. Theſe are the principles which we laid down with reſpect to Ragoba; and we have confirmed them in late Letters to Brigadier General Goddard, deſiring him to aſſure Ragoba that he may depend upon our protection during the war in which we are involved with the Peſhwa, and on our regard to his perſonal ſafety and intereſt, as far as it may be in our power to provide for him after it.

Conf. 9th Oct.

24. You will obſerve in the peruſal of the General's correſpondence, the reaſons which he aſſigns for the large allowance which he had allotted to Ragonaut Row; and as theſe are ſtated by him in his juſtification upon an im- portant point, we do him merely juſtice in deſiring your attention to them. Our orders had been poſitive and re- peated for the diſcontinuance of the ſtipend allotted to Ra- goba; but the neceſſity of affording him ſome allowance ap- pearing to the General in a ſtrong point of view, and to the Preſident and Select Committee of Bombay, whoſe advice and opinion he received on this occaſion, we have conſented, for the reaſons ſtated to us, to the reduced allowance granted by the General to Ragoba of 10,000 rupees a month.

Conf. 20th Apr. Conf. 29th Nov. 1779. 24. Jan. 1780.

25. With reſpect to the operations of your troops under the command of General Goddard, ſince the cap- ture of Ahmedabad, we ſhall be as brief as poſſible in our account of them, referring you for a fuller detail to his own accounts.

26. In the morning of the 23d April, Brigadier Gen- eral Goddard, taking with him a part of his army, conſiſting of 200 Europeans, 10 companies of Grena- dier Sepoys, 3 battalions of Sepoys, and the Mogul and Candahar cavalry, ſurprized and ſtormed the Maratta camp, obliging the enemy to make a quick flight.—On the 23d May, Major Forbes, with two battalions of Sepoys, ſurprized a body of the enemy, conſiſting of 6,000 horſe, commanded by two principal officers, named Baghſetty Scindia and Parajee Punt, whoſe deſign was to watch the motions of our army, and to lay waſte the country, and he diſperſed the whole.

27. About the ſame time Lieutenant Welch having been detached with the regiment of cavalry, the Candahar horſe, and the 7th battalion of Sepoys, againſt Gunneſe Punt, a Maratta officer, who with a body of 4,000 horſe, 3,000 foot, and 3 field pieces, had been ravaging and greatly infeſting the environs of Surat, performed this ſervice with complete ſucceſs; and what redounds to the credit of his gallantry and conduct, with the aſſiſtance only of the cavalry, for the infantry were left purpoſely at a diſtance, his intention being to puſh forward with all poſſible expedition, and to reach the camp of the enemy before day-break: he put them all to a precipi- tate flight, and poſſeſſed himſelf of their whole camp, their guns, their tents, and their bazar. Lieutenant Welch has ſince diſtinguiſhed his conduct in the capture of Parnegre, and on other ſervices, and ſhewn himſelf an active and good officer.

28. We have only generally to obſerve, in addition to this recital, that the unprofitable taſk of purſuing a Maratta force, without the poſſibility of bringing them to an engagement, has induced Brigadier General Goddard, ſince his ſucceſſes, which have made the Company and their Ally complete maſters of Guzerat, to employ his arms chiefly for the defence of the acquired countries, and in ſecuring the collections of revenue from it; and we have the happineſs to know, at the ſame time that we lament the heavy expence which has been neceſſarily incurred in the proſecution of the war, that the opera- tions of your forces in the courſe of it, have retrieved the character which they loſt by the melancholy diſaſter which befel them in January 1779, and placed them in the firſt decree of credit and eſtimation.

29. The neceſſity of maintaining ſo large a force at the expence of the Bengal treaſury, has occaſioned ſo quick a drain of it as to make the further ſupport of the charge almoſt impoſſible; and it ſeeming to us only reaſonable, that every acceſſion of revenue which might immediately ariſe to the Company, from the operations and ſucceſſes of the army, ſhould be appropriated excluſively to the payment of its expences, we informed the Gentlemen of Bombay of our expectations in this particular; and have the pleaſure to know from their late Letters, that they have aſſigned the firſt collections from the Pergunnahs, under the management of the Chief and Council at Surat, ſolely to that purpoſe.

30. The neceſſity of a reduction of expence, no leſs than a belief that the Gentlemen at Fort Saint George would require the ſervices of the troops under Colonel Brown, detached from that Preſidency, to make a part of General Goddard's army, induced us on the 20th April, to direct that they ſhould be ſent back, as ſoon as he could diſpenſe with their ſervices. They conſiſt of one company of European artillery, ſeven of infantry, and one battalion of Sepoys. The ſame conſideration of leſſening expence, induced us to order the reduction of the 1ſt regiment of cavalry with General Goddard's army. They had not been at that time even noticed to us as a uſeful corps to the operations of the detachment, and the expence attending it was very conſiderable; but the ſtrong recommendation which we have ſince received of their merits, from General Goddard, grounded on their late activity and ſervices, and the deſire which he has expreſſed for their continuance in his army, have pre- vailed on us to revoke our orders to him of the 20th April to diſband them.

31. We have not yet ſufficiently conſidered the laſt advices from General Goddard, or thoſe from Bombay, reſpecting the future operations of their troops, and the other ſubjects to which they relate, to reply to them; but they appear on the Proceedings noted in the margin. The whole army under the command of Brigadier Gene- ral Goddard, was probably embarked from Surat the beginning of October; we entertain a hope that they are now in poſſeſſion of Baſſein, and by the aſſiſtance of the Bombay troops of the country around it. At this diſtance from the ſcene of action, it has not been poſſible for us to preſcribe a fixed plan of operations for General Goddard's forces after the capture of Baſſein. Well acquainted as he is with our general ſentiments, we have thought it beſt to leave him generally to his own diſcretion in this reſpect, excepting where he ſhall receive orders from the Commander in Chief, which we have directed him to obey; and in the event of the arrival of a French armament on the Coaſt of Malabar, when he is poſitively ordered to employ his force for the aſſiſtance of the Preſidency of Bombay.

32. We thought it neceſſary on the 16th ultimo, to impower Lieutenant General Sir Eyre Coote, and did accordingly impower him, to iſſue ſuch orders as he ſhould judge expedient, to every detachment that has or may be made from the military eſtabliſhment of this Preſidency, for the general ſervice of the war in which the Company's forces are engaged.

33. We are happy to inform you, that our ſucceſſes againſt the Marattas have not been limited to the operations in Guzerat. The ſame ſpirit which has animated your forces in that country, and the ſame gallantry and good conduct which has diſtinguiſhed their Commanders, has ſhewn itſelf in the detachment of your troops employed in the ſervice of our Ally, the Rana of Ghode.—The capture of Lahaar fort, the 28th April, and the ſubſequent and very important capture of the fortreſs of Gualior, of which you were adviſed in a ſeparate Letter, written to you under date the 24th Auguſt, by a neutral ſhip, reflect the higheſt honour on the officer in command of your troops, as well as thoſe ſubordinate to him. We have thought it neceſſary to reward the ſervice of Captain Popham, by promoting him to the rank of Major; and we have granted a commiſſion accordingly, ſpecifying particularly in the body of it, for what ſervices it was given him, his title to the rank which he held by it, not being in the regular courſe of ſucceſſion. His conduct during the whole courſe of this ſervice, has been ſo meritorious, that we think it a duty incumbent upon us, to recommend him particularly to your favour. We have directed that the fort of Gualior ſhould continue in poſſeſſion of your troops, during the continuance of the war.

34. Long before the capture of Gualior, we had reſolved on the relief of the battalion of drafts, acting under the command of Captain Popham, by four regular battalions detached from the brigades; and the command of the troops ſo detached, was given to Major Carnac. Some difference of opinion having ariſen, on a propoſition made by the Governor General, for an increaſe of this force, and on the powers and inſtructions to be granted to Major Carnac, we beg leave to refer you for an explanation, to the ſeveral Minutes which are entered in the Conſultation, noted in the margin; content now to inform you generally, that the inſtructions given to Major Carnac, were as propoſed on the 12th of June; that the battalion of drafts, formerly ſerving under Captain Popham, are appointed to the eſtabliſhment; and that the whole force, conſiſting of ſeven battalions of Sepoys, is now under the command of Major Carnac, as well as the corps of foreign rangers, formerly on duty as a guard to the Commander in Chief.

35. Our endeavours have been exerted to obtain for the Nabob Vizier, complete payment of the Company's whole demand upon him for the laſt year; but without effect. The diſtreſs of his ſituation, and his inability to attend to the requiſitions made of him now deſcribed in ſo ſtrong colours, that we have been obliged to relax in ſome degree from our demand upon him for the preſent, though not without an expectation that the claims of the enſuing year will have been entirely provided for, together with the debt of the foregoing, at the late ſettlement. Having ſtrongly recommended to Mr. Purling, to urge his Excellency to the diminution of ſome large and unneceſſary expences, which we obſerved in a ſtate of his finances tranſmitted to us, we truſt that the advice given him will have a good effect, and that better œconomy for the future will enable him to diſcharge his entire debt to the Company, without diſtreſs to himſelf. Mr. Purling has lately remitted to us the ſum of five lacks of Fyzabad rupees, which is ſafely arrived here, and placed in our treaſury.

Conſ. 3d and 30th April.

36. We have thought it neceſſary to require from the Rajah of Benares, the ſame ſubſidy for the enſuing year that he paid in the laſt, as his proportion in the expence of the war. He for ſome time heſitated to comply with the demand, and we were obliged to reſolve on meaſures of compulſion; but he has ſince paid the account, and we have ſtopped the execution of thoſe meaſures. The ſupport which he receives from this Government, to whom he owes all that he poſſeſſes; the known affluence of his circumſtances, notwithſtanding his pretexts to the contrary; and the intereſt which he poſſeſſes in chief over all other perſons ſubject to us in the Company's proſperity and ſucceſs, have induced us to require of him the aſſiſtance of ſuch a body of cavalry as he can ſpare for the Company's employ; under a promiſe made to him, that their ſervices will not be required beyond the continuance of the war. We have alſo ſtrongly recommended to the Nabob Vizier to require from Fyzoola Cawn, the quota of troops, conſiſting of 5,000 horſe, ſtipulated by treaty to be furniſhed by the latter; and we do not doubt of his ready obedience to the requiſition.

In our next diſpatches, we ſhall hope to be able to inform you of the event of the offers made by us to the Maratta State, and to ſend you a proſperous account of the ſtate of your affairs on the Coaſt of Coromandel.

FOURTH

COMMITTEE OF SECRECY,

APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO

THE CAUSES OF THE WAR IN THE

CARNATIC,

AND OF

THE CONDITION OF THE BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN THOSE PARTS.

Reported by the LORD ADVOCATE of SCOTLAND (HENRY DUNDAS, Esq.)
6th February 1782.

VOL. VII.

FOURTH REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE OF SECRECY, &c.

The 6th February 1782.

The COMMITTEE of SECRECY, appointed to enquire into the Cauſes of the War that now ſubſiſts in the Carnatic, and of the preſent Condition of the Britiſh Poſſeſſions in thoſe Parts; and to report the ſame, with their Obſervations thereupon, to the Houſe; and who were inſtructed to inquire into the Riſe, Progreſs, Conduct, and preſent State of the Maratta War, and all other Hoſtilities in which the Preſidency of Bengal now are, or have been, engaged, in the Support of that War, and of the Effects which the ſaid War and Hoſtilities may have produced in Bengal, and the other Settlements and Poſſeſſions of the Eaſt-India Company;—

IN the original Plan of their Report, propoſed, after giving an account of the irruption of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic, with the military tranſactions that happened in conſequence thereof, and the intelligence which the Company's Servants had received of the hoſtile intentions of that Prince; to ſtate the conduct of the Company's Servants, as far as it appears to have had any influence on theſe tranſactions, under three heads; Military, Political, and Revenue.

Of theſe three general heads, the firſt makes the ſubject of a former Report; the ſecond will be ſeparately conſidered. In the preſent Report, your Committee propoſe, as far as the materials they have had acceſs to enable them, to mention ſuch particulars reſpecting the Revenue of the Company, under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, as may be of importance for the information of the Houſe.

Your Committee, however, beg leave to obſerve, that this part of their buſineſs has been much abridged, in conſequence of the variation which they thought it neceſſary to make upon their original plan. In the introduction to their Second Report, they informed the Houſe, that having found ſeveral ſpecial matters relating to the conduct of the two laſt Governors of Fort Saint George, and of their reſpective Councils, which appeared proper to be communicated to the Houſe; they thought it their duty to make a Report of theſe ſpecial matters as early as poſſible, and without waiting to complete their General Report. Of thoſe ſpecial matters, which make the ſubject of the Second Report, a very conſiderable part relates to the conduct of the Company's Servants, in the management of the Revenues; and in that view, was originally intended to be introduced under this general head. To introduce the ſame matters here again, would occaſion an unneceſſary repetition. To that part of the Second Report, therefore, your Committee beg leave to refer for information in theſe particulars; propoſing here, after mentioning what appears to have been the ſtate of the treaſury at the time of the irruption of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic, to give only a general view of the nature, amount, and expenditure, of the Revenues; with ſuch obſervations reſpecting them, as did not fall within the plan of that ſpecial Report.

Your Committee find, that at the time of Hyder Ally's irruption into the Carnatic, the ſtate of the treaſury of Fort Saint George, and of the money at their command, was by no means ſuch as could enable the Preſidency, from its own reſources, to reſiſt ſo formidable an attack. Mr. Sadlier, in his Minute of July 29th, 1780, charges the Preſident and Council with having taken "no pains "to repleniſh an empty treaſury; that the Nabob had "declared he had no money; that the Rajah of Tanjore "had made the ſame declaration; that the Maſulipatam "diſtricts of the Northern Circars were ſo far from "being

Fort Saint George Minutes of Conf. 29th July 1780.

" being able to furniſh the ſupplies, that arrears of tribute " then amounted to ſeventeen lacks of pagodas; that " Sitteram Rauze, the moſt wealthy Zemindar under " the Company, had not paid his kiſts, and inſtead of " his being preſſed to pay them, a remiſſion of tribute " was voted to him; that Ball Kiſtna was in arrears, " nor was it believed that he would be ever induced to " make good his engagements." — Mr. Sadlier adds, " that notwithſtanding that bad ſtate of the revenue, " money might be raiſed, and enough of it too, had " Government acted with ſpirit and reſolution; but that " both were wanting when both were moſt required— " that the Nabob's territories had remained in peace " ever ſince the year 1769; that conſiderable additions " had been made to them ſince that time; that his ex- " pences were by no means adequate to his revenue— " he aſks, what then is become of the overplus?—that " his revenues had been diminiſhing annually; that " the revenues of the other Countries, ſubject to " Madras, had been diminiſhing in the ſame pro- " portion; that their ſpecie had been tranſported to " China and to Europe, at the rate of ten and fifteen " lacks of pagodas annually; but that though much " had been carried away, enough ſtill remained, and " that the means were ſtill within their reach, if they " would but exert themſelves with activity and ſpirit."

This melancholy picture of the finances, drawn by Mr. Sadlier, remains uncontradicted; nor, though an anſwer is made to his Minute by the Governor and Commander in Chief, is any reply made to this part of the charge contained in it.

Appendix, No. 1.

Your Committee find, that in a Letter dated 26th July, the Governor had applied to the Nabob, to know what aſſiſtance might be depended upon from him, to reſiſt the attack of Hyder Ally, and particularly to know what ſupplies of money might be depended upon from him, and at what period; adding, that however deſirous he might be to defend the Company's and his Highneſs's forts and poſſeſſions, it would in a great meaſure depend upon the ample ſupplies of money his Highneſs could furniſh him with at that critical juncture.

See Appendix to 1ſt Report No. 8.

To this demand the Nabob returns a very long anſwer, ſtating his utter inability to advance any money; imputing his diſtreſs to his being deprived of the Tanjore country, to the anticipations he had been under the neceſſity of making on his revenues, and the depredations of the enemy's cavalry; and concludes with intreating the Governor to uſe every exertion in his power to procure what might be immediately wanted, which he would diſcharge in time of peace, conſidering himſelf, in every reſpect, as principal in the war then waged againſt the Carnatic.

Letter from Sir Eyre Coote to the Committee of Correſpondence, Nov. 30th, 1780.

This account of the Nabob's diſtreſs, is confirmed by Sir Eyre Coote; who, in his Letter to the Committee of Correſpondence at the India Houſe, dated 30th November 1780, after deſcribing the bad ſtate in which he found the affairs under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, upon his arrival there, and the total want of all neceſſary ſupplies, adds, " I naturally turned my eyes " towards the Nabob Mahomed Ali; but figure my diſ- " appointment, when, inſtead of finding him in a ſituation " to aſſiſt our exigencies, I learnt from his own mouth, " that he had neither men, money, nor influence, and " that he looked to the Company for the ſupport of both " his intereſt and credit."

Appendix, No. 2. Aug. 7th, 1780.

A ſimilar application was made to the Rajah of Tanjore, but with as little ſucceſs. He excuſed himſelf on the ground of want of money, and the oppreſſion his country had ſuffered under the Nabob, which had left him ſo little in condition to aſſiſt the Company with money, that it was with difficulty he had paid his ſubſidy of four lacks.

Your Committee find, that in this exigency, application was made to the Supreme Governor and Council for aſſiſtance, and particularly for a ſupply of money, which was urged in the moſt preſſing terms. The Select Committee of Fort Saint George, informs the Governor General and Council, in their Letter of the 26th of July 1780, that it would be impoſſible for them to draw reſources from the country, ſo as to be able to act with vigour and effect: and in that of the 14th of September, that they had no means whatever to anſwer the extraordinary expences of the war; and that it would be totally impoſſible for them to carry it on, unleſs they could be ſure of ſupplies of money from Bengal.—They add, " that it would be a great relief, if a ſum of money " could be ſent immediately after the receipt of theſe " diſpatches." And Sir Edward Hughes, in his Letter of the ſame date, to the Governor General and Council, after mentioning the neceſſity of ſending a ſupply of troops from Bengal, adds, " nor will troops alone ſave " this ſinking Settlement; for I am aſſured by the Go- " vernor, that they have no money in the treaſury, nor " any evident means of raiſing it, in any proportion " adequate to their preſent exigencies."

Appendix, No. 3.

Secret Proceedings of the Governor General and Council, 22d Sept. 1780.

And your Committee find, that the Preſident and Council expreſs themſelves in the ſame manner with reſpect to their finances, in their diſpatches to the Court of Directors. In the Letter from the Select Committee of Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors, dated October 15th, 1780, they write that, " they had been " put to the greateſt diſtreſs for the want of money to " carry on the war." And in their General Letter of the ſame date, they inform the Directors of the means they had taken to ſupply that want—that they had iſſued advertiſements for receiving loans from the inhabitants, on certain terms which they mention: but that the ſupply, by that means obtained, proving inadequate, and having no hope of any immediate relief that could be deemed effectual, they had been under the unavoidable neceſſity, as the laſt reſource, to draw bills on the Directors to the amount of £. 200,000.

Appendix, No. 4.

Your Committee find, that the conſequence of the application to Bengal, was a ſupply of fifteen lacks of rupees, which the Governor General and Council ſent by Sir Eyre Coote. But they find that this ſum, being intended wholly to anſwer military expences, was entruſted not to the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, but to Sir Eyre Coote, Commander in Chief; and that a Paymaſter was appointed by the Governor General and Council, to whom the immediate charge of it was committed: but the Governor General and Council authorized Sir Eyre Coote to make uſe of this money, in ſupplying the requiſitions of the Preſident and Select Committee of Fort Saint George, if he ſhould be ſatisfied of the expediency of doing ſo.

Appendix, No. 5.

And your Committee find, that theſe ſupplies appear ſtill to have been inſufficient: for in a Letter of the 29th of November, to the Court of Directors, the Select Committee writes, " that they can place but little de- " pendence on any reſource, but that of Bengal, for " carrying on the war; and that as to the expences of the " Civil Department, they have very ſlender hope of pro- " curing ſufficient to anſwer them from any quarter."

Appendix, No. 5.

Letter from Sir Eyre Coote to the Governor General and Council, 10th Nov. 1780.

And Sir Eyre Coote, in a Letter dated 10th of November 1780, to the Governor General and Council, informs them, that " by the neareſt computation he could make, " the future diſburſements at Fort Saint George would " rather exceed ſeven lacks of rupees per month, every " cowrie of which muſt come from Bengal, as he found " there were no reſources there, from which a ſingle " pagoda could be expected."

Your Committee, obſerving this diſtreſs for money at Fort Saint George at this particular period, ordered the Servants of the Eaſt India Company to lay before them, a ſtate of the treaſuries at the different Preſidencies for the laſt four years.

In obedience to this order, there was laid before your Committee, a ſtate of the ſeveral treaſuries, for four years preceding the laſt period to which they could be made up. That of Madras is made up to the 25th of March 1780, and is as follows:

30th June 1777	Pag' 4,29,552 at 8*s.*		£.171,820.
31ſt January 1778	3,57,794		143,117.
28th February 1779	2,36,916		94,766.
25th March 1780	2,88,238		115,295.

Your Committee are aware, that as this Account is made up only to the 25th of March, which your Committee was informed was the loweſt period to which the materials at the India Houſe admitted of its being brought, it cannot be conſidered as giving any ſatisfactory information with reſpect to the ſtate of the treaſury, at the time of the irruption of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic; and as there is a difference in the periods to which the ſtate is made up each year, no very exact compariſon can be made of the ſtate of the treaſury in theſe reſpective years. But ſo far your Committee think themſelves warranted to obſerve from this Account, that on the 25th of March 1780, the ſtate of the treaſury was not ſuch, as upon a compariſon with its ſituation at other periods, implied any particular attention to that object.

It is proper that your Committee ſhould obſerve, that on various occaſions preceding the period of Hyder Ally's irruption, the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George appear to have repreſented their difficulties with reſpect to money. The revenues under that Preſidency are ſtated as barely ſufficient for their peace eſtabliſhment; and even thoſe revenues as not to be depended upon in caſe of an emergency, owing to the irregularity of the payments, particularly from the Nabob and the Rajah of Tanjore. On the 31ſt of December 1778, they inform the Governor General and Council, by Letter, that they had written particularly to the Court of Directors, on the ſubject of their engagements with the Nabob and the Rajah of Tanjore; and requeſted that they would fall on ſome means of relieving them from the embarraſſments they were expoſed to, in defending ſuch extenſive territories, without having the leaſt command over one reſource belonging to them—that, in the meantime, they flattered themſelves that the Governor General and Council would yield them every aid in their power, and particularly at a period when they were obliged to make exertions much beyond their natural ſtrength; and when they had nothing to truſt to for ſupporting them, but engagements to be performed, and revenues to be collected.

At a Conſultation on the 14th January 1779, at which Sir Eyre Coote then at Madras on his way to Bengal, was preſent, the Preſident — after mentioning Sir Eyre Coote's preſence as a fortunate circumſtance, becauſe, having an opportunity, from his own obſervation, to form a judgment of their reſources, and of the difficulties they had, and ſtill have, to ſtruggle with, he might, from his own knowledge, be able to enforce their repreſentations to the Supreme Council—refers to former Minutes, in evidence of their difficulties; apologizes for the neceſſity they had been under of drawing bills upon the Company, from the impoſſibility of raiſing money in any other manner, for paying the arrears due to the troops: and adds, that notwithſtanding the money borrowed, they had then an empty treaſury—that if the Nabob ſhould fail in his engagements, the moſt ſerious conſequences were to be apprehended—that they had repreſented their ſituation to the Governor General and Council; and that, if they did not receive a ſupply, they would be under the neceſſity of drawing on Europe—that it was abſolutely neceſſary to act with vigour, in order to obtain money from thoſe channels from whence it ought to flow; and by a determined plan of œconomy, and a reduction of all expence, to endeavour to ſupply the treaſury—that though it would be improper and dangerous to reduce their military force at the commencement of a war, yet, that he had no heſitation to give it as his opinion, that their eſtabliſhment was too great for their reſources.

Appendix, No. 6.

In a ſubſequent Minute, of date the 4th of February 1779, at which Sir Eyre Coote was alſo preſent, the Preſident lays before the Board, the intelligence he had received of the bad ſucceſs of the Bombay army againſt the Marattas, and the neceſſity thence ariſing, of taking into conſideration their own ſtate and reſources, as well for the defence of the Carnatic as for affording aſſiſtance to any other parts of the Company's poſſeſſions, or of thoſe of their Allies;—mentions his frequent repreſentations of the difficulties they had to ſtruggle with; and that the utmoſt they could expect, was to ſupply their exigencies on a peace eſtabliſhment, and to provide their inveſtments. That their ſituation had been repreſented to the Governor General and Council; but that they ſhould ſtill addreſs them in a more particular manner on the ſubject, and requeſt that they would not only afford them aſſiſtance from the Bengal treaſury, in order to enable their army to take the field (ſhould circumſtances make it neceſſary) but that they would give them their opinion on ſuch points as they had ſubmitted to their conſideration; and in particular, the mode of ſecuring the regular payment of the ſubſidies from the Nabob and the Rajah of Tanjore.

Appendix, No. 7.

In a Minute of the ſame date, Sir Eyre Coote expreſſes his concurrence with the Preſident, in the neceſſity there was of making this repreſentation to the Government of Bengal.

Appendix, No. 7.

And your Committee find, that, upon other occaſions, the revenues under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, have been ſtated in the ſame manner, as barely equal to their eſtabliſhment in time of peace, and providing the inveſtment, but not to the contingent expences of war; and accordingly it appears, that to enable that Government to carry on the expedition againſt Pondicherry and that to Mahé, they received a ſupply of twenty lacks of rupees from Bengal.

Appendix, No. 8.

Letter from the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors, April 3d 1780.

Your Committee next proceeded to inquire more particularly into the nature of the revenues under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, and the different ſources from which theſe revenues ariſe: and your Committee find, that the revenues under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, properly ſo called, conſiſt of three general heads:

Firſt, Revenues iſſuing out of lands.
Secondly, Duties and cuſtoms.
Thirdly, Farms of excluſive privileges.

And your Committee find, that the lands ſubject to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, are,

Firſt, The lands immediately contiguous to the Preſidency, conſiſting of the diſtrict round Fort Saint George, of which the Company had been long in poſſeſſion; and the jaghire lands, which were acquired from Mahomed Ali Cawn, Nabob of the Carnatic, by grant, dated October 29th 1763, and confirmed to the Company by the Mogul's Firmaun, dated the 12th of Auguſt 1765.

Appendix, No 9.

Appendix, No. 9.

Secondly, The territory of Cuddalore, or Fort Saint David's.

Thirdly, The diſtricts of Maſulipatam and Nizampatam, with the five Circars of Elur, Rajahmundry, Muſtaphanagur, Chicacole, and Mortezanagur Condavir or Guntoor, commonly called the five Northern Circars.

And your Committee find, that the diſtricts of Maſulipatam and Nizampatam were acquired from the Soubah of the Decan by a grant, dated May 14th, 1759; and that the five Circars were granted to the Company by the Mogul's Firmaun, dated the 12th of Auguſt 1765, and afterwards confirmed to them by treaty with the Nizam or Subah of the Decan, to whoſe Government they had been ſubject. By this treaty, dated 12th November 1766, the Circar of Montezanagur or Guntoor, which had been, previous to the treaty, granted in jaghire by the Nizam to his brother Bazalet Jung, is reſerved to that Prince during his life; and the Company engages to pay to the Nizam for the three Circars of Elur, Rajahmundry, and Maſtaphanagur, five lacks of rupees yearly, and two lacks for each of thoſe of Mortezanagur and Chicacole; the firſt of which was in the poſſeſſion of Bazalet Jung, and and the other, not then reduced to obedience, as ſoon as the Company ſhould be put into poſſeſſion of them; making in all nine lacks yearly.

Appendix, No. 10. And your Committee find, that, by a ſubſequent treaty, dated the 23d day of February 1768, between the Company, the Nizam, and the Nabob of the Carnatic, in which the Northern Circars are confirmed to the Company, the annual payment to the Nizam for the four Circars of which the Company was then in poſſeſſion, is reduced to two lacks of rupees for ſix years, and one lack more, if during that time they ſhould obtain poſſeſſion of the Circar of Guntoor; and after the ſix years, five lacks for the four Circars, with two more when Guntoor ſhould come into their poſſeſſion; making in all ſeven lacks.

Select Letter from Fort St. George, 17th Oct. 1778. Fourthly, The Company did, in the year 1778, acquire from the Rajah of Tanjore the territory of Nagore.

Your Committee find, that this diſtrict, which lies upon the ſea coaſt in the kingdom of Tanjore, and is valued at 2½ lacks of rupees yearly, was obtained from the Rajah, in lieu of a grant of lands round Devicottah, which the Rajah had voluntarily offered to the Company, in gratitude for being reſtored to his dominions, under the government of Lord Pigot.

Laſtly, The Company has, ſince the commencement of the preſent war, acquired from the French, Pondicherry and Karrical, with their territories.

And your Committee having made inquiry into the nature of the territorial poſſeſſions of the Company, find, that theſe poſſeſſions are diſtinguiſhed chiefly into two kinds, known by the names of the Havilly or Government lands, and the Zemindary lands. That the Havilly or Government lands, are lands which belong in full property to the Government (in this caſe the Company) and to which no Rajah or Zemindar has any right; and theſe lands are either poſſeſſed by the Government itſelf, or let out to Renters for a certain annual rent.

That the Zemindary lands are the poſſeſſions of certain Rajahs or Chiefs, who pay an annual tribute, as ſettled by a rent roll, or jummabundy, to the Government, according to the value of their poſſeſſions.

And your Committee find, that though the amount of the tribute in the Zemindary lands is variable, and ſettled only by temporary agreements between the Government and the Zemindars, either for one or more years; yet that theſe laſt are underſtood to have a permanent claim to the poſſeſſion of their lands, and a right of tranſmitting them to their heirs.

Appendix, No. 11. In a Letter from the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors, dated 8th March 1769, in which they ſtate the diſtinction between Zemindary and Havilly lands: it is ſaid, that the tribute paid by the Zemindars, ought to be certain and invariable, though that has not always been ſtrictly obſerved; and changes of Government have always introduced changes in the tribute—they add, that this is of no great conſequence, for beſides theſe firſt tributes (ſuppoſing they were ſo) the Supreme Government has always demanded, and cuſtom has given ſanction and title to, a further ſum, as a nazâr or free gift; and that theſe two ſums, the tribute and nazâr, are what they mean when they ſpeak of ſettling the jummabundy with the Zemindars.

Your Committee do not find in the Records of the Company which they have peruſed, any other mention of this nazâr or free gift, as paid to the Government, diſtinct from the tribute; nor do either the agreements made with the Zemindars, or the accounts of the revenues tranſmitted home, make any mention of it.

Your Committee find a paſſage in the Revenue Conſultations of Fort Saint George, of date 31ſt Auguſt 1774, which, as it tends to explain the nature and origin of the rights of the Rajahs or Zemindars to the poſſeſſion of their lands in the Northern Circars, where alone there are any Zemindaries under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, and to illuſtrate the ſtate of the Company's poſſeſſions in that quarter, they will here inſert: "the "Zemindars in general are hereditary landholders, who, "on certain conditions, have held the lands they now "poſſeſs in their families for a conſiderable number of "years; ſome however cannot claim ſuch long right, "but have been created Zemindars by the Subahs, who "have governed at Hyderabad, ſince the death of Nizam ul Mulk.

"During the rigour of the Mooriſh Government, "they were obliged, by the condition of their tenure, "to aſſiſt the Subahs with a certain number of troops "for military ſervices, and to pay a tribute beſides, in "proportion to the value of their countries; but as the "Government became weakened, they often refuſed "obedience, until compelled by force, and their refuſal "often ended in their expulſion from their Zemindaries; "but even in ſuch caſes, the Government found the "attachment of the people to the Zemindars ſo ſtrong, "that they could ſeldom collect any part of the reve- "nues; and in general, they rather choſe to give the "lands again to one of the family, than to annex them "to the crown.

"This weakneſs of the Mooriſh Government, gave "frequent opportunities to the principal Zemindars to "increaſe their power—they ſeized upon the lands of "thoſe who were unable to reſiſt them, and ſo far, as to "wreſt the Havilly or Government lands from the Go- "vernment itſelf—by theſe means many of them became "poſſeſſed of large tracts of country, and maintained a "conſiderable number of troops, particularly the Ze- "mindar of Vizianagrum, in the Chicacole Circar.

"In this ſituation we found the Zemindars when we "obtained the Mogul's Phirmaunds. Unaccuſtomed "to ready compliance with any requiſitions of Govern- "ment, and apprehenſive of ſuffering by a change of "maſters, it is eaſy to conceive how little they were "diſpoſed to obey the new orders of the Mogul. The "Board conſidering theſe difficulties, and the inconve- "niences which might ariſe to the Company, were they "forcibly to poſſeſs themſelves of the country, in oppo- "ſition to the will of the Zemindars, thought it moſt "prudent and adviſable upon every account to make "ſuch agreements with them as might ſecure a reaſon- "able tribute, and yet leave them in an honourable "ſituation, by confirming them in the rights and privi- "leges they had enjoyed, and yielding to them a com- "petent maintenance out of the produce of their coun- "tries. This was explained at a meeting with ſome of "them; and the Zemindars of the Elur and Muſtapha- "nagur Circars, in conſequence ſubmitted, and entered "into an agreement, which may be ſeen on reference "to the Circar Conſultations for 1766. The Zemin- "dars of Rajahmundry and Chicacole held out ſome time "longer, and troops were ſent againſt them; but at "length they ſubmitted, and the ſame mode of ſettlement "took place with them, as with the Zemindars above- "mentioned."

Your Committee find, in the Conſultations of the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, in their Revenue Department, of date January 11th, 1777, certain queſtions ſent to the Chief and Council of Maſulipatam, to be by them put to ſome of the principal Zemindars dependant on that Settlement, with reſpect to the rules of ſucceſſion in Zemindaries. They find, in a ſubſequent Conſultation, of date the 23d of May 1777, the anſwers returned to theſe queſtions by four of the principal Zemindars; which, as they tend to illuſtrate the ideas entertained of the rights of theſe hereditary landholders, with the rules of ſucceſſion eſtabliſhed among them, your Committee judged proper to inſert in the Appendix. Appendix No. 12.

Your Committee find, that the right of theſe hereditary landholders to the poſſeſſion of their lands, has been recognized by the Court of Directors; who, in their orders for eſtabliſhing the Committee of Circuit, 12th April 1775, ſay, "that it was by no means their wiſh "to deprive the hereditary Rajahs or Zemindars of their "annual

" annual income; on the contrary, that they meant to " ſecure it to them." They add, " that if any of the " Zemindars ſhould prefer receiving their income from " the Company, and relinquiſh their hereditary claims, " they had no objection to allowing them ſuch ſtipends, " as ſhould be found reaſonable, in lieu of the benefits " ariſing from their Zemindaries."

Beſides the Havilly and Zemindary lands, from which the Company draw a revenue, your Committee find, that there are various parcels of land in the Circars which are held by the poſſeſſors under the name of Inaums, or Charity Lands, whether granted originally for charitable purpoſes, on account of ſervices performed, or in free gift. The Committee of Circuit (the inſtitution and object of which has been explained in a former Report) in their Letter to the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, of date the 10th of September 1777, ſtate the amount of theſe charity lands in the Chicacole Circar, at 40,000 rupees a year; and give it as their opinion, that the titles to many of theſe charity lands being founded on ſuppoſed grants in the time of the Mooriſh Government, had either flowed from the Governors of the province, who had no right to make ſuch grants, or from colluſion with the Renters; the holders of the grants, from a conviction that their claims could not ſtand the teſt of examination, being contented, for a ſmall gratification, to lend their names for the purpoſe of carrying on this impoſition on Government.

Your Committee next proceeded to enquire into the nature of the ſecond branch of the revenue, viz. the Cuſtoms and Duties.—Theſe your Committee find to conſiſt chiefly of a duty of 5 or 2½ per cent. according to the quality of the goods, imported by ſea or brought in by land; in reſpect of which diſtinction, theſe goods either fall under the ſea or land cuſtoms.

Your Committee find, that theſe cuſtoms or duties have been uſually received by Collectors appointed by the Company—they find, however, that in February 1779, advertiſements have been publiſhed for letting them at rent for five years; and a variety of propoſals appear to have been given in, in conſequence of theſe advertiſements—this plan, for which a decay or falling off in the receipt, was given as the chief motive, appears to have been much objected to by the merchants and traders of Madras, as hurtful to trade, and unuſual in a free Government. The conſideration of it was therefore remitted to the Directors at home; who do not appear hitherto to have made any alteration in the mode of collection.

And your Committee find, that the Farms of excluſive privileges, which make the third branch of the revenue, are, excluſive rights of trade in certain articles, ſuch as beetle nut, tobacco, arrack, &c. and for which an annual payment is made to the Company.

Beſides the three great branches of the revenue abovementioned, there falls to be reckoned, as part of the reſources of the Company under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, ſuch proportion of the military expences as is defrayed by the Nabob of Arcot and the Rajah of Tanjore. And your Committee find, that by agreement between the Company and the Nabob, that Prince is engaged to defray the expence of ten battalions of Sepoys in the Carnatic, beſides that of all his garriſons:—And that the Rajah of Tanjore pays annually, by agreement, four lacks of pagodas, for the expence of the Company's troops in his country.

Mill from George, 29th Oct. 1773. Letter from the Rajah of Tanjore in Conſ. 24th April 1776.

And your Committee find that theſe revenues are either accounted for immediately at the Preſidency, or at one or other of the ſubordinate ſtations, at which a Chief and Council reſide—that of theſe ſubordinate ſtations, there are four under the Preſidency of Madras; viz. one at Cuddalore; one at Maſulipatam, for the Circars of Elur, Rajahmundry, and Muſtaphanagur; and the Chicacole Circar is divided into two diſtricts, that to the South being under the management of a Chief and Council reſiding at Vizagapatam, and that to the North, commonly called the Itchapore diſtrict, under a Chief and Council reſiding at Ganjam.

Your Committee having aſcertained the nature of the revenues under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, with the ſources from which they flow, proceeded next to enquire into the produce of theſe revenues; and with that view they gave directions that there ſhould be laid before them, an Account of the territorial and other revenues received by the Preſidency of Madras, from 1ſt May 1763 to the laſt Accounts received, diſtinguiſhing each year, and diſtinguiſhing the heads under which theſe revenues are received, and the balances under each head at the end of each year. This Account they think it proper to lay before the Houſe.

Eaſt India Houſe, 31ſt December 1781.

John Annis, Auditor of Indian Accounts.

The Charges of Collection annexed to the above Account, make the difference between the groſs and the nett receipts. In theſe charges your Committee find, that, beſides ſurveying charges, repairs, preſents to the renters, and allowances to them on account of loſſes, are comprehended the payments made on account of the peſcuſh, or annual tribute due to the Nizam for the Northern Circars; with certain penſions payable out of the revenues.

The Commiſſion, which appears by the above Account to be deducted from the nett receipts, is a commiſſion upon the revenues allowed to the Company's Servants.

Your Committee find, in the General Letter to Fort Saint George of the 25th of March 1768, the commiſſion regulated in the following manner: Appendix, No. 13.

The ſum of 60,000 pagodas yearly, out of the revenues, was to be divided into one hundred ſhares, proportioned among the Company's Civil and Military Servants, as follows:

For the Governor, twenty-one ſhares.

For the ſecond in Council, five ſhares and an half.

For the reſt of the Council, not having Chiefſhips, two ſhares and an half each.

The Commander in Chief, eleven ſhares.

The Colonels each, four ſhares.

The Lieutenant Colonels each, two ſhares and an half.

The Majors each, one ſhare and a quarter.

Out of what remained of the above fund unappropriated, there was appointed to be paid a gratuity of three ſhillings a day to each Captain, two ſhillings to each Lieutenant, and to Enſigns and Lieutenants Fire-workers one ſhilling a day each.

The deficiency of the fund to make good the above payments, was directed to be ſupplied out of the Company's caſh; and the ſurplus, if any, ſhould remain to be carried to the credit of the Company till further orders.

And

Appendix, No. 14.

And your Committee find, that, by the General Letter of 23d March 1770, a variation was made, both upon the amount and the diſtribution of the commiſſion. Inſtead of the ſpecific ſum of 60,000 pagodas, 5 per cent. was ordered to be taken from the nett territorial revenues, to be divided among the Civil and Military Servants, as follows:

One twenty-fourth part to be firſt drawn, and paid as a ſeparate ſhare to Major General Coote, Commander in Chief in India.

The remainder to be divided into one hundred ſhares, proportioned as follows:

To the Governor, twenty-one ſhares.

To the ſecond in Council, five ſhares and an half.

To the reſt of the Council, not having Chiefſhips, as far as the Eſtabliſhment of 12 Members of Council, each two ſhares and an half.

To Brigadier General Joſeph Smith, as the firſt Colonel, eleven ſhares.

To the other Colonels, equally among them, eight ſhares.

To the Lieutenant Colonels, twelve ſhares and an half, to be equally divided.

To the Majors, to be equally divided, ſix ſhares and a quarter.

The unappropriated ſhares, and ſuch as might fall by the death or reſignation of Major General Coote or Brigadier General Smith, being to be carried to the credit of the Company.

The commiſſion allowed to the Company's Servants appears to have remained upon this footing till the year 1777; in which year your Committee find, that a new regulation was made with reſpect to the payment of the Company's Servants. The General Letter to Fort Saint George, of the 11th of June in that year, after narrating, that much of the preſent confuſion had ariſen from the private engagements of the Company's Servants, and their concerns, dealings, and tranſactions, on their own ſeparate account, with the Princes and Natives of the country; and ſtrictly forbidding the Governor, or any of the Council, to carry on or to be concerned, either by themſelves or others, in any dealings or tranſactions, by way of traffic or commerce, for his or their uſe, benefit, or advantage, or for the uſe or benefit of any other perſon, the trade and commerce of the Company only excepted; or to lend money upon mortgage to any of the Country Powers, or to any perſon employed or entruſted by them; proceeds to direct, that, in conſideration of the above-mentioned reſtrictions, every future Governor ſhould be allowed a ſalary of 40,000 pagodas, and each of the Council 16,000 pagodas, and that in full of all fees of office, perquiſites, emoluments, and advantages whatſoever; except ſuch field allowances as the Directors ſhould think fit to make to any perſon who ſhould have a military command, and likewiſe except that the Governor ſhould have the advantage of continuing to reſide in the Fort Houſe, together with the uſe of the Company's plate and furniture, and the commiſſion on coral, in uſe to be taken by former Governors.

Appendix, No. 15.

This regulation, which ſeems not to have extended to the Military Department, continued in force till the 11th of January 1781; during which period, no commiſſion appears to have been payable to the Company's Civil Servants. But your Committee find, from the General Letter of that date, that the former ſyſtem was again reverted to, with reſpect to all the Company's Servants, except the Governor. The ſalary of 40,000 pagodas by the year is continued to Lord Mac Cartny, then appointed Governor, in conſideration of his being totally reſtricted from every kind of dealing, tranſaction, or commerce, in money or goods, the trade and commerce of the Company excepted. But with regard to the other Members of Council, the orders given in the General Letter of the 11th of June 1777, reſpecting the ſalary of 16,000 pagodas yearly, is revoked; and the ſame ſalaries and allowances ordained to be paid to them, as were in uſe to be paid to the Members of Council prior to that period; and all the Members of Council, below the Preſident, are allowed to trade, in the ſame manner as they might have done before the reſtrictions in the ſaid Letter of the 11th of June 1777.

Appendix, No. 16.

John Annis,
Auditor of Indian Accounts.

Your Committee, in the courſe of their enquiries into the receipt of the Revenues under the Preſidency of Madras, could not but obſerve the very large arrears due by the Renters and other poſſeſſors of lands, and which appear to have rapidly increaſed of late, particularly in the Northern Circars. And your Committee, being deſirous to aſcertain the progreſs of theſe balances, called for a particular ſtate of them, as they ſtood at the reſpective terminations of the Governments of Lord Pigot, Mr. Stratton, Mr. Whitehill, and Sir Thomas Rumbold, and at the date of the laſt advices; in obedience to which, the following Account was produced:

A State of the balances of the Northern Circars, as they ſtood at the end of Lord Pigot's Government, of Mr. Stratton's, of Mr. Whitehill's, of Sir Thomas Rumbold's, and as they ſtood according to the laſt advices.

Eaſt-India Houſe,

John Annis,
Auditor of Indian Accounts.

From the above Accompt it appears to your Committee, that the balances due from the Circars have not only been conſtantly increaſing during the period to which the Accompt relates, but that during each ſucceeding Government they have advanced more rapidly than under the preceding; the average increaſe under the Government of Mr. Stratton being exceeded by that under Mr. Whitehill's Government, in the proportion of three to two, and by that under Sir Thomas Rumbold by nearly two to one, in the ſame period of time.

No exact account of the balances to a later period appears hitherto to have been received at the India Houſe; but in a Letter from the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, in their Civil Department, to the Court of Directors of the 9th of January 1781, the balances due by the Zemindars and Renters under Maſulipatam alone, are ſaid to amount, including the keeps due, to no leſs than Madras P^{a}. 15,28,597. 17. 0

General Letter from Fort St. George, 9th Jan. 1781, Par^{a} 14, 28.

To what cauſes this growing deficiency in the Revenues of the Northern Circars ought chiefly to be imputed, your Committee cannot take upon them to ſay. They obſerve, in the Letters to the Preſidency from the ſubordinate Councils, much ſaid of the poverty and large debts of many of the Zemindars; the refractory diſpoſition of others, particularly in the Chicacole Circar, are alſo repreſented, as contributing to ſwell the arrears. Your Committee beg leave to refer to what is ſaid in the Second Report, with reſpect to the poverty of many of the Zemindars. The Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, in their Letter to the Court of Directors of the 17th of October 1778, write, that few of the Zemindars, except thoſe whoſe paternal inheritance was too conſiderable to be waſted, were in circumſtances of reſponſibility to anſwer their engagements to the Company. They ſay that various cauſes had contributed to produce that effect; but that one alone was ſufficient to account for it; the practice of exacting in advance from the Zemindars two-thirds of their annual jemmabundy (rent) and the neceſſity by that means laid upon them of taking up from the Soucars (bankers) or any other who would lend them, conſiderable ſums of money at an exorbitant intereſt of two or three per cent. per month, giving aſſignments on the harveſt, by way of ſecurity for repayment.

Appendix, No. 17.

Another cauſe is in the ſame Letter mentioned, as having contributed to the diſtreſs of the Zemindars, and that is, the ſhort term of the ſettlements made with them for their lands, which had led them to attend only to their own immediate intereſt, without regarding the conſequences to the revenue in future.

The great exportation of ſpecie from the country, which is ſtated by Mr. Sadlier at 10 or 15 lacks of pagodas per annum, and which does certainly take place to a great amount, muſt tend to render payments more difficult.

Under this head of the arrears, your Committee muſt refer to what has been ſaid in the Second Report, with reſpect to the meaſure of calling down the Zemindars to Madras, leaving it to the Houſe to judge upon what is there ſaid, how far that meaſure may have contributed to ſwell their amount. Other facts ſtated in that Report, and in its Supplement, ſeem to imply that private exactions have alſo contributed to the ſame evil. That ſuch exactions have actually been made by the Servants of the Company, the facts here alluded to ſeem to leave no doubt. To what amount they may have gone, it is impoſſible for your Committee to ſay. To inveſtigate that matter to its full extent, would require other kind of evidence than the records at the India Houſe, or the witneſſes they have had it in their power to examine, could be expected to afford.

Since this Report was drawn up and ready to be preſented to the Houſe, your Committee have had an opportunity of examining Edward Cotsford, eſquire, who is recently returned from India, where he had reſided from the month of Auguſt 1778 to the latter end of the year 1780, as Chief of Maſulipatam. The whole of his evidence, and the anſwers given by him to the queſtions put to him by the Committee, reſpecting the preſent ſtate of the Company's poſſeſſions on the Coaſt of Coromandel, are inſerted in the Appendix. Some part of thoſe anſwers tends to throw no ſmall light upon the preſent ſubject.

Appendix, No. 23.

Mr. Cotsford being aſked, if, under the Mahomedan Government, the Zemindars and Renters were ſubject to any payments beſides the rents of the diſtricts which they held? anſwered, that he believed the deputies of the Government did receive, over and above the tribute payable to the Government, a further ſum, under the name of nazar, or preſent, which they pretended was for the payment of their troops; but that their ability to procure this nazar, was in proportion to the ſtrength of their army—that theſe preſents were arbitrary, and bore no certain proportion to the tribute payable to the Government.

Being aſked, if, after the Circars came under the Government of Europeans, any remains of the nazar, or preſents, exiſted? he ſaid, he believed it did exiſt; and that he thinks he had ſeen a paper of Mr. De Buſſy's, in which a part of the tribute was brought to account under the head of Preſent.

Being aſked, if after that country came to be under the Britiſh Government, the ſame practice had continued? he ſaid, he believed it had exiſted in a greater or leſs degree ever ſince.

Being aſked, under what head thoſe preſents were entered in the Company's Accounts? he ſaid, there was no ſuch head of Account, nor did he underſtand that any ſuch articles were ever brought to the credit of the Company; that thoſe preſents are conſidered as a perquiſite of the ſtation, and not in any reſpect as a part of the tribute.

Being aſked, whether, upon the ſuppoſition of the Zemindars not having been called down to ſettle their tribute at Madras, he would have thought himſelf at liberty, in conſiſtence with his duty, to accept ſuch gratuities from the Zemindars? his anſwer was, that he ſhould have thought it his firſt duty to inforce the payment of the Company's tribute, without ſuffering his own intereſt to interfere with it; but that he did not mean to ſay, he ſhould have declined the cuſtomary advantages of his ſituation.

Your Committee will make no commentary upon this evidence; but leave it to the Houſe to conſider, how far, when combined with the facts ſtated in the Supplement to the Second Report, it tends to explain the diſtreſs of the Zemindars.

To whatever cauſes the general diſtreſs of the Zemindars, and the increaſing difficulty of obtaining payment from them, is owing, the fact ſeems to your Committee to be certain.

The negotiations of the Chief and Council of Masulipatam with the Zemindars and Renters of that diſtrict, and the means uſed by them to enforce payment of their balances, as contained in their Revenue Conſultations, from June to December 1780, brought home by the laſt diſpatches, are exceedingly voluminous. It appears in theſe Conſultations, that after various fruitleſs endeavours to obtain payment from ſundry of the principal Zemindars, the Chief and Council had found it neceſſary to proceed to meaſures of compulſion, by confining their perſons under guards of Sepoys, and threatening to ſequeſtrate their eſtates. By theſe meaſures they ſeem to have got the ſecurity of Soucars for part of the arrears; but they at the ſame time inform the Preſident and Council, that moſt of thoſe whoſe tributes had been lately raiſed, had intimated an intention of applying for a reduction of them to the rate at which they had formerly ſtood; and at the ſame time expreſs their apprehenſions that, unleſs ſome meaſure of that kind were adopted, they would not in future be able to procure payment without a renewal of the ſame ſort of violence they had lately been compelled to employ; a meaſure which, however effectual it might be to bring money into the treaſury, they conſider as productive of ruinous conſequences, by alienating the minds of the people, and filling the country with ſecret enemies.

Letter from Maſulipatam, 25th Sept. 1775, in Fort Saint George Conſultations, 3d October 1780.

From the Account above inſerted, reſpecting the perſons to whom the territorial Revenues have been let on leaſe, it appears, that the Jaghier Lands, with the diſtrict of Poonamallee, being by far the greateſt part of the territory immediately under the Preſidency, has been almoſt uniformly let to the Nabob: for Guntoor, Vincatachillum, to whom theſe lands appear to have been let for ſeven years in the year 1764, ſeems to have been merely an interpoſed name for the Nabob, who gave his own ſecurity for the rent. Your Committee find in the records of the Company, frequent repreſentations made by the Governor and Council to the Directors, of the diſadvantages ariſing from theſe lands being poſſeſſed by the Nabob. Even before the expiry of the leaſe to Vincatachillum, theſe diſadvantages had been inſiſted upon; and upon the expiration of that leaſe in 1771, the Governor and Council write, that, "It is beyond a doubt, "that the advantages that might be reaped from ſuch "territorial poſſeſſions, will never be obtained ſo long as "the Nabob has any thing to do with them." They repreſent the inhabitants as undergoing continual oppreſſions; that the lands, though capable of great improvements, experienced none; that the great reſervoirs, by which the lands are ſupplied with water, were going to decay; that almoſt all the weavers who manufactured the Madras inveſtment, reſided within the Jaghire; and that more might be induced to come, had they proper encouragement, which it was not in their power to give them; that they had as little influence in theſe lands, as in thoſe of the immediate property of the Nabob; and that, except the mere rent, no one benefit was derived from them; and that in caſe they ſhould have occaſion for their produce, they had no more reaſon to expect it, than from the Nabob's country.

General Letter from Fort St. George, 16th Jan. 1765, Par. 17. Do, 22d Jan. 1767.

In the Letter from Fort St. George, to the Directors, dated the 14th of October, 1775, theſe Lands are repreſented as in a moſt wretched ſtate, and the inhabitants as much oppreſſed. And,

Appendix, No. 18.

Appendix No. 18.

Sir Eyre Coote, in his Letter to the Committee of Correſpondence at the India Houſe, of the 30th of November 1780, lamenting the neceſſity there was of both the army and inhabitants being, in the ſtate in which the country then was, maintained chiefly by ſupplies from Bengal, ſtates that neceſſity, as a convincing proof of the bad policy of renting theſe Lands to the Nabob, and thereby rendering themſelves entirely dependant upon him for every kind of ſupply.

Appendix, No. 19.

For farther particulars reſpecting theſe Lands, and the conduct of the late Government of Madras, in letting them anew to the Nabob for three years, your Committee beg leave to refer to the Second Report, page 293.

In the ſame Report (page 286) it has been ſeen, that when the Government of Madras had obtained poſſeſſion of the Guntoor Circar from Bazalet Jung, that country too was agreed to be let to the Nabob.

Your Committee having ſtated the nature and amount of the Revenues, under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, proceeded next to inquire into their expenditure. And your Committee having found, in the Third Report of the Committee of Secrecy appointed in the year 1773, to inquire into the ſtate of the Eaſt India Company, a General State of the Receipts and Diſburſements at each of the Chief Settlements of the Company in India, for ten years preceding the month of April 1771, thought, that the moſt diſtinct method for them to follow, would be to lay before the Houſe; a ſimilar State of Receipts and Diſburſements for the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, commencing at the period at which that in the Report of the former Committee ended. Such a State therefore commencing in May 1771, and ending in April 1778, which your Committee was informed was as low as it could be brought, having been produced in compliance with the orders of your Committee, by Mr. John Annis, Auditor of Indian Accounts, the ſame is here laid before the Houſe.

John Annis,
Auditor of Indian Accoun[illegible]

The ſums in the foregoing Account being expreſt in Britiſh money, in conformity to the ſimilar Accounts in the Third Report of the former Committee of Secrecy, of which this is a continuation, your Committee think it proper to mention, with a view to a compariſon between this Account and the former, relative to the receipts of the Company, that two pagodas and a half are equal to one pound ſterling.

By the foregoing State, it appears how much of the Revenue has been annually expended upon the Civil and Military Charges and Fortifications; and conſequently how much has remained to be applied to the purchaſe of the inveſtment for Europe, and to the other purpoſes of the Company.

In order to ſhew ſtill more diſtinctly the application of the Company's Revenues, unmixed with their Commercial Receipts, your Committee will here ſubjoin an Account, in which are entered, firſt, the Nett Revenues, as in the preceding General State, and then the Civil and Military Charges, with the Expence of Buildings and Fortifications; diſtinguiſhing ſuch part of the Military Charges as is put to the Account of the Nabob, from thoſe that are defrayed out of the Company's proper Revenues.

The ſame Account ſhews the difference between the Nett Revenues and the Charges borne by the Company for each year to which it relates.

John Annis,
Auditor of Indian Accounts.

It is proper to obſerve, for the better underſtanding this Account, and the general State of Receipts and Diſburſements, that your Committee was informed, that in the Account laſt inſerted, the ſums ſtated as defrayed by the Nabob in part of the Military Charges, are the ſums with which he is debited on that head; whereas the ſums entered in the third column of Receipts, in the General State of Receipts and Diſburſements, are the payments actually made by the Nabob.

From a compariſon between the free Revenue, which by the Account laſt inſerted, appears to have remained to the Company, after defraying the Civil and Military Charges, and expence of Buildings and Fortifications, with the expence of the Inveſtment for Europe, as entered in the the laſt column but one of the General State of Receipts and Diſburſements, it is manifeſt that, except in one year (viz. the year 1772-3) during the whole period to which the Account relates, the Surplus Nett Revenues, above the Charges, have never been equal to the purchaſe of the Inveſtment for Europe. It further appears, that in the two firſt and two laſt years of the Account, within the former of which the firſt war with Hyder Ally happened, and within the latter the expeditions to Pondicherry and Mahé, thoſe charges and expences exceed the Nett Revenues in no leſs than £. 941,781. It appears upon calculation, that the Average Surplus Revenue for each of the eight years from 1769 to 1777, during which the Company was at peace, is £. 112,205; whereas the average of the Inveſtment, calculated upon the whole period of the General State of Receipts and Diſburſements, is £. 249,554. yearly, or more than double the former ſum; and taking in the four years of war abovementioned, the Revenues under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George; excluſive of their Commercial Receipts, have been ſo far from ſufficient to furniſh an Inveſtment, that in the whole period ſince 1767, they have fallen ſhort of the charges by £. 44,139.

Your Committee obſerving no notice taken in the Account laſt inſerted, of that part of the Military Charges which is defrayed by the Rajah of Tanjore, were informed by Mr. Annis, the Auditor of Indian Accounts, that the ſaid Account of charges is excluſive of thoſe incurred in Tanjore, with the exception of £. 96,100, or pagodas 2,40,250, in the year 1776-7—that this exception was occaſioned by an error in the Accounts ſent home from Madras, which ſtated that no expences on account of Tanjore were included therein; but that by ſubſequent Accounts received, it was found that the above ſum of £. 96,100 had been included in the Military Charges of that year, which conſequently ought to have been ſtated at £. 424,905, inſtead of £. 521,005, as in the Account.

With the exception of this error, the omiſſion of the Tanjore charges makes no material difference in the reſult, with reſpect to the Company. The addition of thoſe charges would have had the effect of making the total amount of charges appear ſo much higher; but the Company's ſhare of thoſe charges, and the difference between that ſhare and the nett Revenues, would have remained the ſame; with the exception only of the ſum, in which the ſubſidy from the Rajah of Tanjore may be ſuppoſed to have exceeded what was actually laid out by the Company, for the Military Eſtabliſhment in his country from the period ſince 1776, when the agreement with him took place.

The error juſt mentioned in the Madras Accounts for the year 1776-7, ſo far makes a difference on the ſtate of the Account, that the Revenue for that year, inſtead of exceeding the charges by £. 30,167, as in the Account, did really exceed the charges by £. 126,267; and the Revenues, inſtead of falling ſhort of the charges by £. 44,139 upon the whole period of the Account, have in fact exceeded them by £. 51,961; a ſum, however, little more than equal to one-fifth of the Inveſtment for one year.

And Your Committee, being deſirous to know in what the Civil and Military Charges conſiſt, ordered the Particulars of theſe Charges to be laid before them: an Account of which, as produced by Mr. Annis, they now lay before the Houſe.

21ſt January 1782.

Your Committee might here conclude what they have to ſay reſpecting the Revenues of the Company under the Preſidency of Madras; but, conſidering how large a part of the reſources of the Company under this Preſidency depends upon the payments from the Nabob of Arcot and the Rajah of Tanjore, they think it not foreign to the object of this Report, to lay before the Houſe ſuch information as they have been able to obtain, reſpecting the Revenues of theſe two Princes.

In a Letter from the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George to the Governor General and Council of Bengal, dated the 7th of December 1774, the territories of the Nabob, including Tanjore, then in his poſſeſſion, are eſtimated at upwards of two crores of rupees. Fort Saint George Mil. Cons. 8th Dec. 1774, Fol. 8305.

Mr. William Petrie, who has reſided for above fifteen years in India, and was for ſome time Secretary to the Political Department of the Government of Madras, having been deſired to give ſuch information as he could, reſpecting the Revenues of the Nabob of Arcot, informed your Committee, that while he was in the ſtation abovementioned, the amount of the Nabob's collections was a ſubject which came frequently under the conſideration of the Board—that an exact Account was often wiſhed for, but, he believed, never obtained—that he had ſeen various eſtimates, ſome at 36 lacks of pagodas annual Revenue, others at 32, and ſome lower—that he underſtood, as he thought from good authority, that, under proper management, the country would produce conſiderably above 30 lacks; but that he had it from good information, that, for ſome time paſt, not 20 lacks a year had been carried to the credit of the Nabob's Exchequer.

And your Committee find, in the Select Conſultations of Fort Saint George, of the 30th of November 1778, a Minute of Sir Thomas Rumbold's, then Governor; in which, after mentioning that the Governor General and Council of Bengal had written very preſſingly for an Account of the Revenues of the Carnatic, he proceeds to lay before the Board, the beſt Account of theſe Revenues, which, he ſays, he had been able to obtain. He adds, that the Governor General and Council did not ſeem to be aware, that an exact Account of the Revenues of the Carnatic was not very eaſily obtained; for that the Nabob was very jealous of their interference, and would not furniſh them with a rent-roll of his Receipts; but that, however, he believed the Account he then delivered in, might be depended on. The Account then delivered in by Sir Thomas Rumbold is as follows: Fort Saint George Select Conſ. 30th Nov. 1778, Fol. 6751.

Of the eſtabliſhment and expences of the Nabob, your Committee has not been able to obtain any accurate information. They obſerve that Mr. Sadlier, in his Minute of the 29th of July 1780, quoted above, ſays, that the Nabob's expences are by no means adequate to his Revenues—that his country had remained in peace ever ſince the year 1769, and yet that his Revenues had been daily diminiſhing.

It is certain that the Nabob is very much in debt to individuals, independent of the demands of the Company. The amount of his debts to individuals cannot he exactly aſcertained; beſides that, from the nature of the thing, they muſt be variable. The Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, in their Letter upon this ſubject to the Governor General and Council of Bengal, of date February 25th, 1779, ſay, "It is conjectured "that the Nabob's whole debt, which has been accu- "mulating ever ſince his firſt connection with the Company, amounts at this time to fifty lacks of pagodas." They add, "He has indeed acquired in his hands, by "degrees, a very conſiderable ſhare of the property "belonging to individuals in the Settlement, Europeans "and Natives; and from the plan he has invariably "purſued, of borrowing as much, and paying as little as "he can, his debt continues to ſwell daily, and threatens, "by its enormity, to become a perpetual incumbrance "on the Carnatic."

Letter from the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George to the Governor General and Council, 25th Feb. 1779.

Your Committee find, in the Records of the Company, much correſpondence between the Preſidency of Madras and the Nabob, upon the ſubject of his debts and arrangements with his creditors; which ſhews, in a very ſtrong light, to how great a degree he is diſtreſſed. This ſituation of the Nabob's finances is repreſented by the Preſident and Council to the Directors, as very alarming. In their Letter of the 19th of September 1777, they ſay, "The Nabob's affairs at preſent appear "much embarraſſed by the debts he has contracted, and "the large aſſignments granted upon the Carnatic, as a "ſecurity for thoſe debts. Whatever cauſes may have "produced this embarraſſment, it can admit of no "doubt, that whilſt the Revenues of his Country, upon "which we principally rely for ſupport, are abſorbed by "private creditors, the Company's affairs muſt be en- "dangered, even in time of peace; but in caſe of a war, "we need not ſay what muſt be the conſequence of the "Nabob's inability to apply any part of his Revenues to "the ſupport of the heavy charges that would thereby "be incurred."

Letter from the Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, in their Military Department, to the Court of Directors, dated 19th Sept. 1777, Par. 16th.

The growing amount of the debts contracted by the Nabob, great part of which was due to Servants of the Company, together with the danger to be apprehended with reſpect to the payments to the Company, from aſſignments of lands to private creditors, appear to have been the motives for the ſtrict orders given by the Directors, "That no Company's Servant, nor any perſon "under the Company's protection, ſhould be permitted "to lend money to any of the Country Powers in India, "nor to any perſon holding commiſſion under, or em- "ployed by them, directly or indirectly, to be repaid "at a future time, on mortgages, or ſecurities in the "nature of mortgages, upon lands, or from the produce, "or any growing Revenue of the Country. And for "more effectually preventing ſuch loans, they direct "that all the Country Powers, with whom ſuch tran- "ſactions were likely to take place, ſhould be informed "of this regulation, and requeſted not to permit any "dealings of the nature above-mentioned, with the "Company's Servants, or with perſons under the Com- "pany's protection."

Letter from the Court of Directors, dated 11th June 1777, Par. 18.

The large arrears frequently due to the Nabob's troops, have been taken notice of in a former Report.

See 1ſt Report, page 37, 38.

Your Committee find, that the irregular payment of the troops, and their conſequent mutinous diſpoſition, joined to the very diſordered ſtate of the Nabob's finances, induced the Preſidency frequently to urge the Nabob to a reduction of his expences, and particularly to the meaſure of diſbanding part of his troops. To this meaſure the Nabob had been generally very averſe. It does however appear, that in the year 1777, under Mr. Stratton's Government, the Nabob agreed to diſband nine thouſand of his Sepoys, and to reduce his cavalry from four thouſand to two thouſand one hundred, provided the Company would aſſiſt him with a loan of four lacks of pagodas, to enable him to pay their arrears. The Government of Madras informed the Nabob, that they could not comply with his propoſal for a loan of the ſum wanted; but being ſenſible of the advantages that would ariſe to his affairs from ſuch a reduction of his expence, they recommended to him to borrow the money from individuals; promiſing, on the part of the Company, to become ſureties to the lenders for its repayment.

Fort Saint George Military Conſ. 17th and 18th April 1777.

Accordingly, it does appear, that the four lacks of pagodas were advanced to the Nabob by Meſſrs. Call, Majendie, and Taylor, three of the Company's Servants; and the Preſident and Council gave the Company's ſecurity for the debt.

This tranſaction your Committee find to have been very much diſapproved of by Sir Thomas Rumbold, when he came to take poſſeſſion of the Government. In his Minute upon that ſubject, of date the 23d of February 1778, he ſays, "He could not help expreſſing his "aſtoniſhment at the late Adminiſtration venturing to "lend the Company's ſecurity to Meſſrs. Call, Majendie, "and Taylor, three of the Company's Servants, for ſo "conſiderable a ſum as four lacks of pagodas; at a time "too, when the Gentlemen then in Government obſerve, "that they are apprehenſive they ſhall be diſtreſſed even "for ſufficient to defray their own current charges, and "ſupply the ſums abſolutely wanting for the inveſtment." He adds, "When they had gone ſuch a length, as they "ſay, to accompliſh ſo deſirable an end as the reduction "of his Highneſs's forces, unneceſſarily kept up, would "it not have been proper they ſhould have ſeen the "money wholly applied to that purpoſe? but, on the "contrary, we find nothing on the Records, but vague, "uncertain declarations, that his Highneſs has made a "conſiderable progreſs in the reduction of his troops; "and this large ſum becomes a further burthen upon the "Revenues and Reſources of the Carnatic." Upon the Preſident's Motion, therefore, it was reſolved, "That "the ſecurity given by the late Adminiſtration to Meſſrs. "Call, Majendie, and Taylor, for the ſum of four lacks "of pagodas, do not receive the ſanction of the Govern- "ment, but wait to be determined by the Company's "own authority."

Fort Saint George Mil. Conſ. 4th Mar. 1778.

And your Committee find, that the Court of Directors, in their Letter to Fort Saint George, of the 17th of April 1778, expreſsly diſavow the tranſaction, as being a direct breach of their orders, and entered into without any authority from them.

Letter from the Court of Directors, 17th April 1778, Par. 7th.

The irregularity in the payment of the Nabob's troops gave riſe to a tranſaction ſomewhat ſimilar, and about the ſame period, which alſo affords an example of the diſtreſſed ſtate of the Nabob's finances. The Nabob's ſecond regiment of cavalry, quartered at Mellore, exaſperated at their pay being eighteen months in arrear, had, in the month of November 1776, gone off in a body, with their arms and accoutrements. Lieutenant-Colonel James, then commanding at Trichinopoly, alarmed at this event, and with a report that two other regiments were ready to purſue the ſame meaſures, did, by the advice of the Nabob's Manager, immediately ſend after them, inviting them to return; and promiſing, upon their ſo doing, to pay them inſtantly five thouſand pagodas, and to be anſwerable for one thouſand every month, until their affairs ſhould be ſettled by the Nabob. He ſent, at the ſame time, to each of the other two regiments,

ments, 1,500 pagodas, in order to pacify them; promiſing to do all he could to aſſiſt them in their diſtreſs. The attempt of Lieutenant-Colonel James, to bring back the regiment of cavalry, failed; but, upon the matter being reported to the Preſident and Council, they "ordered their Secretary to acquaint him, that his conduct in ſending and promiſing money to the mutinous cavalry of the Nabob, merited their entire approbation."

Fort Saint George Mil. Department, 25th Nov. 1776.

The means uſed to keep the other two regiments quiet, appear to have been effectual for a very ſhort time; for in the month of April 1777, your Committee find that a general mutiny broke out in one of them, commanded by Captain Dugald Campbell, in which Captain Campbell himſelf and ſeveral of the Officers were wounded, and all of them put into cloſe confinement; and their lives threatened, in caſe of any attempt being made to relieve them. In this extremity, it appears that Lieutenant-Colonel James did, upon his own credit, advance them ten thouſand pagodas, which had the effect to pacify them for the time; in which his conduct was approved of by Colonel Stuart, then Acting Commander at Tanjore; and, upon his report, by the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George.

Fort Saint George Mil. Conſ. 7th April 1777.

Beſides theſe ſums, it appears that money had been advanced at other times by Lieutenant-Colonel James; for the pay of the Nabob's troops; which advances, he ſets forth, in a repreſentation to the Preſident and Council, on the 11th of April 1778, to have been made in dependance upon the promiſes of Ameer Ul Omrah, the Nabob's ſon, for his repayment.

It appears, however, that during the courſe of three years and an half, Colonel James had applied in vain to the Nabob, for payment of this debt, then amounting, as by an Account given in by him to the Preſident and Council, to upwards of forty thouſand pagodas. He frequently repreſented, during the ſame time, the hardſhip of his caſe to the Preſident and Council; the Preſident and Council as often urged the Nabob to diſcharge the debt, who excuſed himſelf on account of the difficulties and diſtreſſes in which he was involved.

Fort Saint George Mil. Conſ. 20th April 1778.

But your Committee find, that in the month of November 1780, upon the Nabob's refuſing to repay the money in a ſhort time, the Company's bond was given by the Preſident and Council to Colonel James, for pagodas 40,742. 25 f. 60 c. the ſums to which the debt then amounted.

Fort Saint George Sel. Conſ. 20th Nov. 1780.

In the above caſes, in which the ſecurity of the Company was interpoſed for the Nabob, the reaſons given by the Preſident and Council appear upon the face of the tranſactions themſelves. But your Committee find another and a more recent inſtance, ſo late as the 26th of June 1780, in which the Preſident and Council appear to have paid a debt of the Nabob's, amounting to pagodas 25,880½, for no other reaſon that appears upon the face of the tranſaction, than that the creditor was deſirous to have his money, and the Nabob wiſhed the Company to advance it. The debt here alluded to was due to Colonel James Capper, and conſiſted, as the Nabob himſelf explained it, principally of diſburſements which Colonel Capper had made in England, upon his Highneſs's account, when he laſt went home with diſpatches from the Preſidency. The Nabob adds, that the Colonel ſoon after his return to India had ſettled accounts with him, taking his bond as an acquittance of his demand. That the bond would not fall due till the month of December following, but that the Colonel had preſent occaſion for the money, to enable him to make good a ſum he owed to Sir Robert Barker in England, and which Sir Robert had ordered his Attornies in India to depoſit in the Company's treaſury, until good opportunities of remitting could be procured; and that the Nabob had promiſed to Colonel Capper to requeſt of the Government to paſs the Company's receipt to him for the amount of his Highneſs's bond, meaning that the ſame ſhould be included in the kiſts which were then ſettling to be paid by his Highneſs to the Company in the courſe of the year ending the 30th of April 1781.

This propoſition being ſtated by the Preſident, appears to have been immediately agreed to by the Council. —A bond for the money was ordered to be granted to Colonel Capper, with a recommendation to the Preſident, to make ſuch a ſettlement with the Nabob, as that the Company ſhould ſuſtain no loſs or riſk by the tranſaction.

It is remarkable that this tranſaction, by which the Company was ſubjected to an advance for the Nabob, was upon the 26th day of June 1780, juſt twenty-ſeven days before Hyder Ally's irruption into the Carnatic.

When the Country was actually invaded, your Committee find the Nabob was even then unable to bring his troops into the field for want of money to pay their arrears. On the 2d of Auguſt 1780, he writes to the Preſident, repreſenting his inability to diſcharge the pay due to his cavalry; that the collections of the Revenues ſet apart for their pay were at a ſtand from the depredations of the enemy; that he had been endeavouring to treat with individuals for a loan, but could not procure the money unleſs the Company would give their ſecurity to the lenders.—Upon this application, the Council was of opinion, that it was better to ſupply the Nabob with what he wanted, than to give ſecurity to individuals for what they might chuſe to advance; and accordingly at a ſubſequent Conſultation, the Nabob having agreed to aſſign certain diſtricts of country for repayment of the money, it was reſolved that the arrears of pay due to the reſpective regiments of cavalry ſhould be diſcharged in the manner propoſed by the Nabob, viz. two-thirds, amounting to pagodas 91,750, in notes or bonds payable in a limited time, and the remainder, amounting to pagodas 45,875, in ready money.

Your Committee find repeated complaints of the Nabob's irregularity in fulfilling his engagements to the Company. A very ſtrong picture of that irregularity, and of the inconvenience as well as the danger thence ariſing to the Company's poſſeſſions, is drawn in the Governor's Minute of the 20th July 1778, inſerted in the Appendix to the Second Report.

Appendix to 2d Report, No. 143.

Similar complaints occur in many other paſſages of the Proceedings of the Preſidency.

In their Letter to the Governor General and Council, of the 25th of February 1779, in reply to what the Governor General and Council had ſaid, that it depended upon their own firmneſs to obtain from the Nabob the regular diſcharge of his debts to the Company, they write, that they are not conſcious of wanting firmneſs in their tranſactions with the Nabob; but as their firmneſs could only conſiſt in words, and words were too weak a weapon to force money from him, they aſk, how they were to act in caſe he ſhould deceive them? They then ſtate a recent failure in the Nabob's engagement to reduce his debt by certain inſtalments, and conclude in this manner, "the difficulties we experience in reſpect to "the Nabob, may be comprized in a few words. We "ſuſtain a conſiderable monthly expence on his account. "We have nothing to truſt to for reimburſement but "monthly promiſes, which may or may not be performed. If they be performed, we are able to make the "neceſſary advances for the enſuing month. If they "be not performed, we inſtantly find ourſelves involved "in the greateſt diſtreſs. In ſuch alarming ſituations, "what courſe can we take to procure relief?"

Your Committee will here inſert a State of the Nabob's debt to the Company, for his Military Charges at various periods, excluſive of the arrears of rent due for the lands he poſſeſſes.

John Annis,
Auditor of Indian Accounts.

East India House,
9th Jan. 1782.

With respect to Tanjore, your Committee find, in the Select Consultations of Fort Saint George, of the 21st of November 1778, a particular Account of the Revenues of that Country for a series of years, delivered in to the Board by Mr. William Petrie, who resided in Tanjore for a considerable time, first, as Resident at the Rajah's Court, and afterwards as Chief of Nagore and Karical. This Account, Mr. Petrie informs the Board, he had received from an old man, who had been a writer under the Dobeer and Manager in the time of Pretap Sing, father to the present Rajah of Tanjore.

Mr. Petrie at the same time delivered in to the Board, an Account of the Tanjore Revenues, extracted from the Circar books.

Appendix, No. 21. The extract of the Consultation upon this subject, with the two Accounts themselves, are inserted in the Appendix.

Supposing the first of these Accounts to be accurate, it affords a striking proof of the decline of the Revenues of Tanjore, which are stated as having amounted from the year 1675, during the 36 years of the reign of one of the Princes of that Country, to no less than 32,050,000 collums of paddy (a mode of computation which will be explained in the Appendix) and to have fallen in the reigns of the succeeding Princes to twenty-four, to twenty, to fifteen, and during the two years immediately preceding 1778, so low as thirteen millions of the same measure of grain.

Mr. Petrie having lately returned to Great Britain, was examined by your Committee respecting the present state of the country of Tanjore. Such part of his evidence as relates to the Revenues of that Country, is inserted in the Appendix.—He represents Tanjore as having been not many years ago one of the most flourishing, best cultivated, and most populous countries in Hindostan; that in 1768, when he first saw it, it exhibited a very different picture from what it does at present. After giving a general account of its trade, and description of its fertility, he adds, "Such was Tanjore, not many years ago; "but its decline has been so rapid, that in many districts, "it would now be difficult to trace the remains of its "former opulence."

Appendix, No. 22.

For this rapid decline, Mr. Petrie assigns various causes;—the Revenues having fallen short of the former collections even before the capture of Tanjore, he imputes to the rapacity of the ministers who governed the Country, and plundered their master while they oppressed the inhabitants, mortgaging districts for present supplies, and settling jaghires upon themselves, many of which have not yet reverted to the Circar. But that as those evils were not of long duration, their effects were only partially felt; and that even at that period, as he was informed, manufactures flourished, the Country was populous, and well cultivated, the inhabitants were wealthy and industrious. That from the year 1771, the æra of the first siege, till the restoration of the Rajah, the Country having been the seat of war, and having undergone two revolutions of Government, trade, manufactures, and agriculture, were neglected; and many thousands of inhabitants went in quest of a more secure abode. He mentions at the same time, as a remarkable circumstance, that during the year 1774, while Tanjore was governed by the Nabob, all the Accounts which he had seen make the Revenue to amount to one-third more than the year preceding the conquest, and to more than double the sum which appeared in the Circar books for the year he resided at Tanjore;—he accounts for a circumstance so extraordinary at first sight, by the high price of grain in the year 1774, when the scarcity was so great as almost to amount to a famine; by the Tuncan duties being raised; and by many of the old jaghires, or grants from the Circar, being resumed by the Nabob.

That since the restoration of the Rajah in 1776, many causes had contributed to lessen the Revenues, and to impoverish the Country—first, the ignorance and rapacity of his principal managers;—secondly, the failure of many of the principal farmers, and the unusual cheapness of grain;—and thirdly, the general opinion which had prevailed, that the Rajah's Government would not be of long duration; and that another revolution was approaching.—"Hence every species of embezzlement "and peculation; his ministers extorting money from "the Zemindars; they oppressing the people, who were "often obliged to dispose of their cattle, and the very "implements of husbandry, to satisfy the calls of their "unrelenting landlords."

Mr. Petrie mentions the great scarcity of specie in Tanjore as an evil which had been long felt, and which, when he left India, had got to an alarming height.—That ever since the Rajah's restoration, he had been oppressed with a heavy load of debt—his expenditure had been enormous—that many of the farmers who owed him large balances had absconded—that he had no money but what was levied from his people, or raised by destructive loans, at an exorbitant and ruinous interest.

With regard to the payments due by the Rajah to the Company, complaints of his irregularity in making those payments have been above inserted—at the same time, your Committee has not found evidence in any of the Accounts hitherto transmitted home, or produced to them, of his having been actually much in arrear during the short time for which his agreement with the Company, for his subsidy of four lacks, has subsisted—they find that Governor Rumbold, in a Letter to the Rajah, dated August the 6th 1779, charges him with being very backward in his payments; and writes, that one lack was due for the June preceding—the Rajah in his answer, dated the 3d of September 1779, vindicates himself from the charge; and by a Statement of Accounts, shews that he had paid in full for the three years for which his agreement with the Company had subsisted, and that he was even 56,000 pagodas in advance.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX, No. 1.

Copy of a Letter from the Governor to the Nabob; dated 26th July 1780.

I HAVE the honour to receive your Highneſs's ſeveral Letters on the ſubject of Hyder Ally; whoſe motions within theſe few days, have unveiled the deſign he ſeems to have entertained for ſome time paſt againſt the Carnatic.

Whilſt there was any poſſibility of his intentions being fruſtrated, or directed to another object, I choſe not to put the Company or your Highneſs to the expence of great military preparations, becauſe I am very ſenſible, after the exertion we have lately made againſt the French, that ſuch expence could not be provided for without much difficulty, and without neglecting other objects of great importance; but now, when hoſtilities are actually commenced on the part of Hyder, it becomes expedient, at all events, to attend to the ſafety of the country; and I truſt your Highneſs will exert yourſelf to the utmoſt on this occaſion, to promote the ſucceſs of our operations.

As I have given orders for aſſembling troops in the field, I earneſtly entreat your Highneſs to inform me what ſupplies of money you can depend upon furniſhing, and at what period, that I may take the neceſſary ſteps accordingly. I beg your Highneſs will alſo take the moſt effectual meaſures for collecting bullocks and proviſions for the uſe of the army. Give me leave to add, that however deſirous I may be to defend the Company's and your Highneſs's forts and poſſeſſions in the Carnatic, it will in a great meaſure depend upon the ample ſupplies of money your Highneſs can furniſh me with at this critical juncture: it will likewiſe determine me in what manner I ſhall write to the Supreme Council of Bengal; and how far I ſhall feel myſelf authorized, with conſiſtency, to engage them in the preſent expected troubles, ſo as not only to co-operate with this Government in what may tend to the intereſt of the Company, but alſo anſwer your Highneſs's purpoſes fully, with reſpect to chaſtiſing Hyder Ally, and the protection of the ſubject, and the future ſafety of the Carnatic.

Copy of a Letter from the Governor to the Rajah of Tanjore; dated 29th July 1780.

YOU have doubtleſs been already informed by report, of the ſudden march of Hyder Ally's troops into the Carnatic. We cannot account for this invaſion otherwiſe than by ſuppoſing that Hyder has entered into ſome engagements with the French, to diſturb the peace of the country. However this may be, the Company and their Allies are called upon to act with the utmoſt vigour in repelling this attack. I truſt you will ſhew yourſelf particularly zealous in a cauſe, in which the welfare of your Government, as well as that of the Company and the Nabob, are ſo much intereſted. A large ſupply of money is abſolutely neceſſary to carry on the military operations; and to this object I ſhall be thankful if you will contribute amply, and ſoon. The Nabob's country has always ſuffered conſiderably by the incurſions of Hyder's horſe: your's being as yet uninvaded, I flatter myſelf you will find leſs difficulty in furniſhing money to the Company. I requeſt alſo that you will encourage, as much as poſſible, the exportation of grain to Madras. The duties in that article are taken off at this port, a circumſtance which will, no doubt, when known to the people of your country, induce them to ſend large ſupplies. May your happineſs daily increaſe. What can I ſay more?

APPENDIX Nos. 1. 2. 3. 4.

APPENDIX, No. 3.

Extract of a Letter from Fort Saint George to the Governor General and Council of Fort William; dated the 26th July 1780.

OUR laſt Letter (of which we encloſe a duplicate) gave you information of the approach of Hyder Ally, with a large army, towards our frontiers. We now tranſmit two papers of intelligence juſt received from the Nabob, by which you will learn that he has actually detached part of his cavalry into the Carnatic, and is preparing to follow with his whole army. Extract Fort Saint George Select Conſ. 26 July 1780.

We are taking meaſures for aſſembling our troops in a proper ſituation to oppoſe this attack, and defend the country in the beſt manner we are able; but the alarm already occaſioned by the report of an invaſion, and the ravages which have been actually committed by Hyder's horſe, have driven the people from their habitations, and put an entire ſtop to the tillage of the ground.

Under theſe circumſtances it will be impoſſible for us to draw reſources from the country, in any degree equal to the expences which this war muſt inevitably produce; and if we do not obtain a ſpeedy ſupply of money from you, we ſee no probability of our being able to act with vigour and effect proportionate to the exigency of our ſituation.

Extract of Letter from Fort Saint George to the Governor General and Council of Fort William; dated 14th September 1780.

But beſides troops, our occaſions for money are very preſſing. We have no means whatever to anſwer the extraordinary expences of this war; and it will be totally impoſſible for us to carry it on, unleſs we can be ſure of receiving ſupplies of money from you. We earneſtly requeſt your immediate attention to this object; and that you will do us the favour to inform us to what extent we can be aſſiſted. It would be a great relief to us if a ſum of money could be ſent immediately after the receipt of theſe diſpatches. Extract Fort Saint George Select Conſ. 14 Sept. 1780.

APPENDIX, No. 4.

Extract of Letter from the Select Committee at Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors; dated 15th October 1780.

WE have been put to the greateſt diſtreſs for the want of money to carry on the war, owing to a total failure in our uſual reſources. The Carnatic waſte, by the incurſions of the enemy. The Nabob pleads this in excuſe for not diſcharging any of his engagements.

The Rajah of Tanjore, whoſe country hath not been diſturbed in any ſhape, has yet given us no aſſiſtance; nor nor have we yet obtained any ſupply of money from Bengal, though the Governor General and Council have expreſſed an intention to aſſiſt us.

Under theſe circumſtances we had no alternative for ſupplying the various exigencies of the ſervice, but that of borrowing from individuals, and taking up money for drafts upon England. The reſolutions we came to on this ſubject, will be communicated to you from the Civil Department.

Extract of the General Letter from Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors; dated the 15th of October 1780.

On a review of the ſtate of your treaſury, when Hyder Ally invaded the Carnatic in July laſt, we judged it abſolutely neceſſary to iſſue advertiſements for receiving loans from the inhabitants of this Settlement, for which Company's bonds were to be granted, payable in eight months after date, bearing an intereſt of eight per cent. per annum.

But the ſupply raiſed by this means proving very inadequate to the heavy expences of Government, and having no hope of any immediate relief that could be deemed effectual, either from the Northern Subordinacies, from the Nabob, or from Bengal; in this exigency, after much deliberation, however averſe we are in any inſtance to act contrary to your orders, we found ourſelves under the unavoidable neceſſity, as the laſt reſource, to draw bills on your Honours to an amount not exceeding £. 200,000.

APPENDIX, No. 5.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council, at Fort William in Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors; dated the 13th of October 1780.

WITH reſpect to the treaſure which we have ſent to them, as it is a handſome, ſo we truſt it will be a ſeaſonable ſupply. We have not ſpared the ſum of fifteen lacks of rupees, the amount of the ſupply, without great inconvenience to ourſelves. The demands on us at home are large and preſſing; but on a general conſideration of the Company's intereſts, we have not heſitated, and ſhall not heſitate, to uſe every exertion within our power and ability, both in this and every other inſtance, to contribute our utmoſt to ſupport them. The treaſure which has been diſpatched we have conſigned to the Commander in Chief; and we have nominated a Paymaſter for the immediate charge of it. It is intended for the payment of the troops under Sir Eyre Coote's command, and is wholly to anſwer military expences: but we have impowered him alſo to make uſe of it in ſupplying the requiſitions of the Preſident and Select Committee, if he ſhall agree in the expediency of doing ſo.

Extract of a Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, to the Court of Directors; dated 25th November 1780.

We cannot obtain any money from the Nabob, or the Rajah of Tanjore. The Nabob is indeed, we believe, very much diſtreſſed, by a total failure in the Revenues of that part of the Carnatic which has been ſubject to the incurſions of Hyder's horſe; but the Rajah of Tanjore has not yet had a grain of his country touched. Thus, from our paſt diſappointments and preſent proſpects, we can place but little dependance on any other reſource than that of Bengal, for carrying on the war; and as to the expences of the Civil Department, we have very ſlender hope of procuring ſufficient to anſwer them from any quarter.

APPENDIX, No. 6.

Extract of Fort Saint George Select Conſultations; dated the 14th January 1779.

Par. 105. THE arrival of Sir Eyre Coote at this Preſidency, on his way to Bengal, at ſo critical a juncture, I eſteem on many accounts a fortunate circumſtance. He will be able to form a judgment from his own obſervation of your real ſituation, with reſpect to reſources, and the conduct both of the Nabob and the Rajah of Tanjore; and I moſt earneſtly recommend to him, to take a view of our proceedings both before and ſince the capture of Pondicherry, that he may be fully acquainted with the difficulties we have had, and ſtill have, to ſtruggle with; that when he takes his ſeat at the Council General at Bengal, he may, from his own knowledge, inforce the repreſentation we have found it neceſſary to make, that we may be ſupported and aſſiſted in the advice and opinion of that Board, in any means we may be obliged to adopt for the public good, and the preſervation of the Carnatic. I have been ſo full in the ſeveral Minutes I have given in to the Committee, that I have only to refer Sir Eyre Coote to them, for a true repreſentation of our difficulties. The meaſures we have been obliged to adopt, of drawing bills on the Company, though not to a great amount, was unavoidable. It was againſt my wiſh and inclination, truly ſenſible that the Company are very deſirous we ſhould avoid giving any drafts on them; and indeed they have a right to expect that their reſources here ſhould more than anſwer the expences of the eſtabliſhment; but every trial was made in vain to procure money from the Nabob, from the Rajah of Tanjore, and even from individuals, on granting them intereſt notes payable to a certain time. The diſtreſs for ſpecie was ſo great, that we had no alternative; we were obliged, by the proſpect of an advantageous remittance, to induce thoſe who had caſh by them to ſupply our immediate wants, as the Account delivered in to the Committee will ſhew. There was an abſolute neceſſity that the troops ſhould not be kept in arrears; and notwithſtanding the money borrowed, we have now an empty treaſury. It is true, the Nabob has promiſed us a conſiderable ſum this month, and to be more regular in his payments in future; but we have no other ſecurity than his word. Should he fail us, as he has ſeldom been very punctual in engagements, I apprehend the moſt ſerious conſequences. We have repreſented to Bengal our ſituation. We have acquainted them in a former Letter, that if we did not receive a ſupply, we ſhould be under the neceſſity of drawing upon Europe. The Council General, however, were unable to ſupply us, I will not ſay unwillingly, being convinced the co-operation with the different Preſidencies, for the mutual ſupport of the Company's poſſeſſion, is the firſt and moſt material object of their political conduct. Under all theſe circumſtances, I have no doubt but we ſhall ſtand juſtified to the Company for our conduct; but at the ſame time it is abſolutely neceſſary to act with ſpirit and vigour, to obtain money from thoſe channels from whence it ought to flow; and, by a determined plan of œconomy, and reduction of all expences, to endeavour to ſupply our treaſury, that we may never again be under the neceſſity of giving drafts on the Company. To accompliſh this point, I have no doubt of meeting with the concurrence and ſteady ſupport of the Committee: and I propoſe, that an Auditor of Accounts may be immediately appointed; that he proceed to examine the Accounts, both Civil and Military, for the laſt ſix months; or, if it ſhould be thought too great a taſk for one perſon, that two perſons be appointed, the one to audit the Civil, the other the Military Accounts; and that all unneceſſary charges may be ſtruck off; and that they make a Report to the Committee or Council, every fortnight, of the progreſs they have made; and that their allowance and emolument depend in a great meaſure on the reduction made by them in the monthly expences.

It would appear extraordinary, at the commencement of a war, to propoſe a reduction of our military force; it would at this juncture undoubtedly be highly improper and dangerous. But I do not heſitate to give it as my opinion, that our eſtabliſhment is too great for our reſources; and either a fixed or certain Revenue from the Carnatic, or Tanjore country, muſt be allotted for the payment of our troops, or a conſiderable reduction muſt take place at a more favourable period. The Nabob ſhould be in advance, not in arrear, for the payment of what depends on him; but on the contrary, the debt is accumulating; and the Company ſtrongly recommended to us, in their Letter of the laſt ſeaſon, to call upon him for payment, and not to ſuffer the payment of individuals to interfere with their demands. We know not what ſtep our enemies are taking, what force they have at the Mauritius; but we have every reaſon to believe that they are not inactive, and that they will attempt ſome ſtroke to recover the ground they have loſt. We have no immediate proſpect of ſupport, and therefore muſt find reſources amongſt ourſelves, and muſt purſue ſuch a conduct as to provide againſt all difficulties and contingencies.

APPENDIX, No. 7.

Extract of Fort Saint George Select Conſultations; dated the 4th February 1779.

THE Preſident lays before the Committee the following Minute, with intelligence juſt received from the Nabob.

I am concerned to lay before the Committee, a Letter from the Nabob, containing advices from his Vackeel at Poonah, of a very ſerious nature; and though we may ſuppoſe the account of the unfortunate ſituation of the Bombay army is greatly exaggerated, and that when we hear from Bombay, we ſhall be informed of ſome favourable circumſtance with which we are not yet acquainted; ſtill, from the circumſtantial Account received, we have no reaſon to doubt but the event of the expedition for conducting Ragonaut Row to Poonah, has been unfortunate and diſgraceful, both to our Arms and Councils; and our preſent ſituation, with reſpect to the different powers of Hindoſtan, renders it abſolutely neceſſary that we ſhould immediately take into conſideration our own ſtate and reſources, as well for the defence of the Carnatic, as to afford aſſiſtance to any other parts where the Company have poſſeſſions or alliances, that may ſtand in need of our ſupport.

The firſt conſideration is, the ſtate of our treaſury. I have already, on many occaſions, repreſented to the Committee, the difficulties we have to ſtruggle with, and that the utmoſt we can expect, is to ſupply our exigencies on a peace eſtabliſhment, and provide our inveſtments; which being an object of conſequence to the Company, ought not to be neglected. Our ſituation has been repreſented to the Governor General and Council; but I am of opinion, we may ſtill, in a more particular manner, addreſs them again on the ſubject, and requeſt, that they will not only afford us aſſiſtance from the Bengal treaſury, that we may be ſupplied with a fund to enable our army to take the field, ſhould circumſtances make it neceſſary; but that they will give us their opinion on thoſe points we have already ſubmitted to their conſiderations, and upon ſuch others as we may now propoſe to them. Firſt, I would recommend, that we fully ſtate to them the ſituation of the Tanjore country, and the meaſures we have taken in conſequence, in order to ſecure the regular payment of the Rajah's ſubſidy, and the Nabob's peſcuſh; which, if punctually remitted to our treaſury, will not only greatly aſſiſt in keeping up our preſent eſtabliſhment, but will contribute, with other means, to ſecure in time ſuch a ſupply, as will enable us to act with vigour as occaſion may require. The Tanjore Revenues ought to be taken care of. Neceſſity obliges us to watch over them with attention; and ſhould the preſent negotiation entruſted to General Munro fail of producing the deſired effect, I am perſuaded it is our duty to take ſuch meaſures that no miſmanagement, or any cauſe whatever, may deprive us of that ſupport which is abſolutely neceſſary to contribute to the protection of the Carnatic, Tanjore, and our Northern Settlements: for, where is the force for the defence of thoſe ſeveral countries, but what is kept up, diſciplined, and paid by the Company?

Secondly: It will be neceſſary that we take the opinion of the Governor General and Council, how we are to act in caſe of failure in the Nabob's engagements. I hope we ſhall never be drove to take any meaſures inconſiſtent with his rights, or diſagreeable to his feelings; but without we ſtate with preciſion our difficulties, we may find ourſelves embarraſſed, and at a loſs to act in particular points when our diſtreſſes preſs with force upon us. It is true, we have lately received a very conſiderable ſum from the Nabob; but the Account delivered in by me to the Committee, dated the 30th of November laſt, will ſhew, that he was, at the end of January, greatly in arrears of the amount which, by his own voluntary agreement, he engaged to pay to that period; and the debt is monthly increaſing. Our expences are certain, and muſt be provided for: our burthens at preſent are great; for, excluſive of our ſtanding army, upwards of twenty ſeven thouſand men, we have the heavy expence of completing our fortifications, which muſt not, on any account be neglected; and we have the maintenance of the French priſoners, military and civil, with the number of articles to be provided for, which the capitulation of Pondicherry obliges us to fulfil. All attention and ſupport is certainly due to the Nabob, as our old and faithful Ally, connected with us by every tie, and demanding from us every indulgence: for, if we take a view from the Southern boundary of Hindoſtan to the Northern extremity, where the Engliſh forces have proved victorious, where ſhall we find one native Prince who has not ſeverely felt the effects of our power, and that is not now lamenting the rapid ſucceſs of our arms, and the credulity that ever induced him to truſt to our engagements? Mahomed Ally can alone boaſt, that we have not entirely violated every principle on which he has depended, and who, with his family, it is to be wiſhed, may long remain inſtances of our national faith; but at the ſame time I expreſs theſe ſentiments towards the Nabob, it is neceſſary that we inſiſt on a punctuality in fulfilling his engagements, or that the Committee are furniſhed with ſome line to guide their conduct, when they find him fail in his engagements. To various cauſes may be imputed his reluctance to part with money, and ſeveral circumſtances may have contributed to give him diſguſt. We have no right or grounds to ſuppoſe his reluctance proceeds from diſaffection. We are to conſider his load of debt, the increaſed expences of the eſtabliſhment; the decreaſe, from various cauſes, and perhaps from ſome miſmanagement of his Revenue; the diſappointments he has been ſubject to in this matter, where he conceived himſelf to be juſtly entitled to deciſions in his favour; and, laſtly, to the impoſitions of individuals, and the attendant paſſion ſo common to men of advanced ſtages in life, of hoarding up for future unforeſeen contingencies; all theſe may have operated to increaſe the difficulties of obtaining from him the neceſſary ſupplies of caſh: that ſuch difficulties have frequently exiſted, no one acquainted with this Government can doubt: but the reflection alone, of our depending on precarious circumſtances for certain and unavoidable expences, on which our very ſafety depends, render it abſolutely neceſſary to have the advice of the Governor General to aſſiſt our reſolutions, if ever we ſhould be obliged to go beyond the line that we wiſh to be preſerved.

Extract of Sir Eyre Coote's Minute.

I agree entirely with the Governor's firſt propoſition, in regard to the neceſſity there is for repreſenting to the Supreme Council the ſtate of our treaſury, and the ſituation of the Tanjore country, as well as to require their ſentiments upon the meaſures which the Board here ought to adopt, in caſe the Nabob's engagements ſhould not be ſo punctually fulfilled as the neceſſity of our affairs may demand. And I imagine thoſe repreſentations cannot fail to have the deſired effect, in inducing them to give ſuch ſpeedy and proper aſſiſtance as may enable the Governor and Council here, to purſue the diſintereſted and ſpirited plan which they have hitherto ſupported alone, ſo much to the national benefit, and to their own honour.

APPENDIX, No. 8.

Extract of Letter from the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, to the Governor General and Council of Bengal; dated 7th December 1774.

1774. Fort Saint George Mil. Cons. 8 Dec. fol. 833.

OUR expences on the Coaſt, in time of peace, are generally about 14 lacks of pagodas; and the inveſtment for Europe requires 6 lacks, which makes the diſburſements on the Coaſt amount to 20 lacks of pagodas. The annual amount of the Revenues, upon a mean calculation, may be eſtimated at upwards of 16 lacks; and the ſums paid by the Nabob, in certain kiſts, in the courſe of the year, for the pay of the troops kept by the Company on his account, and the expences of the garriſons defrayed by them, at about 4 lacks; making in all 20 lacks of pagodas: but of theſe receipts, near 8 lacks are to be paid by the Nabob; for, excluſive of the money advanced on his account, eſtimated as above at 4 lacks, he has, by the Company's orders, the Inaum Lands at rent for pagodas 3,68,350 per annum; which is likewiſe received in certain kiſts, payable in the courſe of the year. But even this reſource, from the Nabob's own declarations, muſt become precarious in time of war.

To which the Nabob is ſaid to anſwer, in his own hand-writing: "In conſideration of the true friendſhip of the Engliſh "Eaſt India Company, and their remaining always in "alliance with me, let a Sunnud for the whole jaghire, "without any exception, be made out."

Firmaun from the Mogul, being a confirmation of the Nabob's Grants to the Company in the Carnatic.

In theſe happy times, our Firmaun, full of ſplendor, and worthy of obedience in all, is deſcended, purporting, that whatever formerly has been given by preceding Moguls, or lately by Serajah Dowlah Mahomed Ally Khan, from the Circar of the Carnatic, in the parts above Madras, &c. to the high, mighty, &c. &c. Engliſh Company: we, in conſideration of their great pains and ſervices, have, from our throne, the baſis of the world, conferred upon, or confirmed to them, by way of Inaum or free gift, without allowing any perſon whatever any part or ſhare therein. You, therefore, our Sons, Omrahs, Vizirs, Governors, Muttaſſeddees, for the affairs of the Dewanſhip; Mootecophils for thoſe of our kingdom, Jaghiredars and Karorees, both now and hereafter, for ever and ever, exert yourſelves in the ſtrengthening and carrying into execution this our moſt high command, and cede and give up to the abovementioned Engliſh Company, their heirs and deſcendants, for ever and ever, the aforeſaid Circar; and eſteeming them likewiſe as entirely exempt, free, and ſafe from all diſplacing or removal, by no means whatever moleſt or trouble them, either on account of the demands of the Dewan's office, or thoſe of our Imperial Court.

Looking upon this high Firmaun as an abſolute and poſitive order, obey it implicitly.

A Copy of Requeſts made by Colonel Forde to Nabob Salabut Jung, and his compliance thereto, in his own hand.

THE whole of the Circar of Maſulipatam, with eight diſtricts, as well as the Circar of Nizampatam, and the diſtricts of Condavir and Wacalmanner, ſhall be given to the Engliſh Company as an Inaum or free gift, and the Sunnuds granted to them in the ſame manner as was done to the French.

The Nabob Sabalat Jung will oblige the French troops which are in his Country, to paſs the river Ganges within fifteen days, or ſend them to Pondicherry, or to any other place out of the Decan Country, on the other ſide of the river Kiſtna; in future he will not ſuffer them to have a ſettlement in this Country, on any account whatſoever, nor keep them in his ſervice, nor aſſiſt them, nor call them to his aſſiſtance.

The Nabob will not demand or call Gauzeputty Rauze to an account for what he has collected out of the Circars belonging to the French, nor for the computation of his Revenues of his own Country in the preſent year, but let him remain peaceable in it in future, and according to the computation of the Revenues of his Country, before the time of the French, agreeable to the cuſtom of his grandfather and father; and as was then paid to the Circar, ſo he will now act and pay accordingly to the Circar; and if he, the Rajah, does not agree to it, then the Nabob may do what he pleaſes. In all caſes the Nabob will not aſſiſt the enemies of the Engliſh, nor give them protection.

The Engliſh Company, on their part, will not aſſiſt the Nabob's enemies, nor give them protection.

Firmaun from the Mogul for the Northern Circars.

In theſe happy times, our Firmaun, full of ſplendor, and worthy of obedience, is deſcended, purporting, that whereas Salabat Jung Behauder, Subahdar of the Decan, conferred the Circar of Siccacole, &c. on the French Company; and that, in conſequence of its not being confirmed by us, either by Firmaun or otherwiſe, the high, mighty, glorious Chiefs of the Khans, choſen of the Omrahs Sepoy Sardars, truly faithful, worthy of receiving favours and obligations, our invariable and never-failing friends and well-wiſhers, the Engliſh Company (having ſent a large force for that purpoſe) did expel the French therefrom; we therefore, in conſideration of the fidelity and good wiſhes of the above high, mighty, &c. &c. Engliſh Company, have, from our throne, the baſis of the world, given them the aforementioned Circars, by way of Inaum or free gift, without the leaſt participation of any perſon whatever in the ſame, from the beginning of the Fuſſul of Tuccaucooul, in the year of Phaſely 1172, equal to the month of April 1762: it is incumbent therefore on you our ſons, Omrahs, Vizirs, Governors, Muttaſſeddees for the affairs of our Dewanſhip, Mootecophils for thoſe of our Kingdom, Jaghiredars and Karorees, both now and hereafter, for ever and ever, to uſe your endeavours in the ſtrengthening and carrying into execution this our moſt high command, and to cede and give up to the abovementioned Engliſh Company, their heirs and deſcendants, for ever and ever, the aforeſaid Circars; and eſteeming them likewiſe free, exempt, and ſafe from all diſplacing or removal, by no means whatever either moleſt or trouble them, on account of the demands of the Dewan's office, or thoſe of our Imperial Court.

Looking upon this high Firmaun as an abſolute and poſitive order, obey it implicitly.

Forms made uſe of on the back of the Firmaun.

From the Secretary, ſetting forth, that his Majeſty had been pleaſed to ſign a petition (ſuppoſed to be from the Company) of the ſame date as the Firmaun, directing, that whereas Salabut Jung Behauder, Subahder of the Decan, conferred the Circar of Siccacole, &c. on the French Company; and that in conſequence of its not being confirmed by his Majeſty, either by Firmaun or otherwiſe, the high, mighty, &c. &c. Engliſh Company, (having ſent a large force for that purpoſe) did expel the ſaid French therefrom; his Majeſty therefore, in conſideration of the fidelity of the aforeſaid Engliſh Company, has given them (without the participation of any perſon whatever in the ſame) the abovementioned Circars, by way of Inaum or free gift.

A TREATY of perpetual Honour, Favour, Alliance, and Attachment,

Signed, ſealed, and ratified, on the one part, by his Highneſs the ſaid Nabob, and on the other, by John Caillaud, eſquire, Brigadier General, inveſted with full powers on behalf of the ſaid Company.

Done at Hydrabad, the ninth of the Moon Gemace-duſſuny, in the year of Hegyra 1180, equal to the 12th of November 1766.

Article 1.—The two contracting parties do, by virtue of this Treaty of honour, favour, alliance, and friendſhip, ſolemnly engage a mutual aſſiſtance, to eſteem the enemies of one the enemies of both, and contrarywiſe, the friends of one the friends of the other.

Article 2.—The honourable Engliſh Eaſt India Company, in return for the gracious favours received from his Highneſs, conſiſting of Saneds for the five Circars of Ellour, Siccacole, Rajahmundry, Muſtephanagur, and Murtezanagur, expreſſing the free gift thereof, on them and their heirs for ever and ever, do promiſe and engage to have a body of troops ready to ſettle the affairs of his Highneſs's Government, in every thing that is right and proper, whenever required, provided that they be at liberty to withdraw the whole, or ſuch part thereof as they ſhall judge proper, whenever either the ſafety of their own Settlements and Poſſeſſions, or the peace and tranquillity of the Carnatic, be the leaſt endangered. In caſe of the falling out of which circumſtances (which God forbid) they do promiſe and engage to give the moſt timely notice thereof to his Highneſs, in their power.

Article 3.—The honourable Engliſh Eaſt India Company do further engage and promiſe, that in whatever year the aſſiſtance of their troops ſhall not be required, they will pay to his Highneſs, as a conſideration for the free gift of the abovementioned five Circars, for ever and ever, the following ſums, by kiſts, as ſpecified in the eighth article of this Treaty; viz. for the three Circars of Rajahmundry, Ellour, and Muſtephanagur, five lacks of rupees; and for thoſe of Siccacole and Murtezanagur, as ſoon as they are in their hands, and the ſettling the ſame is well effected, two lacks each, in all nine lacks of rupees per annum.

Article 4.—The reduction of the Siccacole Circar, by the bleſſing of God, the Company will effect as ſoon as poſſible; but that of Murtezanagur, in conſideration of his Highneſs having, by former agreements, given it to his brother Bazalet Jung, as a jaghire, the honourable Engliſh Eaſt India Company do promiſe and engage not to take poſſeſſion of, until it be his Highneſs's pleaſure, or until the demiſe of his ſaid brother: but to prevent all future diſputes and difficulties that may hereafter ariſe concerning the ſame, the aforeſaid Company do further explain their intentions in the following Article:

Article 5.—As the Circar of Murtezanagur borders on that of Nizampatam and the Country of the Carnatic, which, by virtue of the former and preſent Treaties and alliances, the aforeſaid Company are bound to maintain and protect in all its extent; therefore, in caſe the ſaid Bazalet Jung, his agents or dependants, ſhould cauſe any diſturbances to the prejudice thereof, it is hereby agreed on by both parties, that the aforeſaid Company ſhall then have it in their power to take immediate poſſeſſion of that Circar.

Article 6.—As by the tenor of the ſecond Article of this Treaty, the aforeſaid Company have engaged to furniſh a body of troops, to be ready to march to the aſſiſtance of his Highneſs, it is agreed on by both parties, that the expences thereof ſhall be paid in the following manner; to wit, if the expence of the number of troops his Highneſs may require, ſhould fall ſhort of the ſum of five lacks of rupees, mentioned to be paid for the three Circars of Rajahmundry, Ellour, and Muſtephanagur, the Company will account to his Highneſs for what balance may remain due; and in caſe of its exceeding the abovementioned ſum, the aforeſaid Company do hereby engage themſelves to be anſwerable for the payment of the remainder. The ſame agreement in like manner to hold good for the ſums ſtipulated to be paid for the two Circars of Siccacole and Murtezanagur when ſettled.

Article 7.—In conſideration of the fidelity, attachment, and ſervices of the aforeſaid Company, and the dependance his Highneſs has upon them, his ſaid Highneſs, out of his great favour, does hereby entirely acquit the abovementioned Circars of all arrears and demands, down to the preſent date of theſe writings.

Article 8.—In caſe the aſſiſtance of the honourable Company's troops is not required, the annual ſtipulated ſum expreſſed in the third Article of this Treaty, the aforeſaid Company do engage to pay in three kiſts, after the following manner, and to give Soucar ſecurity for the ſame; viz. the firſt payment, the thirty-firſt of March; the ſecond, the thirtieth of June; and the third, the thirty-firſt of October.

Article 9.—Whenever his Highneſs goes into winter quarters, and the troops of the other Sardars have leave for that purpoſe, thoſe of the aforeſaid Company ſhall have leave alſo to depart to their own Country.

Article 10.—His Highneſs engages to give as early notice as poſſible, (not leſs than three months) of the ſervice in which he will require the aſſiſtance of the troops of the aforeſaid Company, that they may have timely notice to make the neceſſary preparations; and that the number of troops ſent may be ſufficient for the ſervice required of them, of which the aforeſaid Company are to be left the entire and ſole judges; and as the ſucceſs of all expeditions depends much upon ſecrecy in council, both parties do hereby engage themſelves not to reveal any ſuch deſigns as they may communicate to each other, until every thing on both ſides is ready for execution.

Article 11.—The honourable Engliſh Eaſt India Company, in conſideration of the Diamond Mines, with the Villages appertaining thereto, having been always dependant upon his Highneſs's Government, do hereby agree that the ſame ſhall remain in his poſſeſſion now alſo.

Article 12.—His Highneſs, in order to convince the whole world of the great confidence and truſt he repoſes in the Engliſh nation, agrees and conſents, that the fort of Codapillee ſhall be entirely garriſoned by the troops of the aforeſaid Company; in conſideration of which, the aforeſaid Company do hereby agree and conſent likewiſe, that there be a Killedar therein on the part of his Highneſs, and that the uſual jaghire annexed to the Killedary ſhall be ceded to him.

Article 13.—In virtue of this treaty of mutual favour, alliance and friendſhip, between the two contracting parties, his Highneſs promiſes and engages to aſſiſt the aforeſaid Company with his troops, when required, reſerving to himſelf the ſame liberty of withdrawing the whole, or any part thereof, in the ſame manner as is expreſſed for the aforeſaid Company in the ſecond Article of this Treaty, whenever the ſame ſhall become neceſſary.

Article 14.—In virtue of the above Treaty of favour, alliance, and friendſhip, both parties do mutually and ſolemnly engage to the punctual and ſtrict obſervance of all and every one of the abovementioned Articles; that from this time all doubts and ſuſpicions ſhall ceaſe between them, and in their room a perpetual, juſt, and ſincere confidence be eſtabliſhed, ſo that the great affairs of the Decan Government, and the buſineſs of the Company, may increaſe every day in honour, riches, and happineſs, from generation to generation.

In confirmation of which his Highneſs on the one part, and John Caillaud, eſquire, Brigadier General, inveſted with full powers from the Engliſh Company, on the other, have hereunto affixed their hands and ſeals.

A TREATY of perpetual Friendſhip and Alliance, made and concluded at Fort Saint George, Done on the 23d day of February, in the year 1768 of the Chriſtian Æra, and on the 4th of the moon Shevaul, in the year of the Hegyra 1181.

The Treaty.

WHEREAS on the 12th of November, in the year of the Chriſtian Æra 1766, or on the 9th of the moon Gemace-duſſuny, in the year of the Hegyra 1180, a Treaty was concluded at Hydrabad, by and between General John Caillaud, inveſted with full powers on behalf of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, and the Nabob Auſuph Jau, Nizam-ul-Mulck, &c. on behalf of himſelf, as Soubah of the Decan, with a deſign to eſtabliſh an honourable and laſting friendſhip and alliance between the two contracting powers; and whereas ſome miſunderſtandings have ſince ariſen, which have perverted the intent of the ſaid Treaty, and kindled up the flames of war: Now, be it known to the whole world, that the beforementioned Nabob Auſuph Jau, and the Engliſh Company, with the Nabob Wolau Jau, have entered into another Treaty, of the ſtricteſt friendſhip and alliance, on the following conditions:

Article 1.—The exalted and illuſtrious Emperor of Hindoſtan, Shaw Allum Padtcha having, out of his gracious favour, and in conſideration of the attachment and ſervices of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, given and granted to them for ever, by way of Inaum or free gift, the five Circars of Muſtephanagur, Rajahmundry, Siccacole, and Murtezanagur, or Condavir, by his royal Firmaund, dated the 12th of Auguſt 1765, or on the 24th of the Moon Suphier, in the 6th year of his reign, and the Nabob Auſuph Jau, Nizam-ul-Mulck, as Soubah of the Decan, having, by the ſecond and third articles of the aforementioned Treaty, ceded and ſurrendered by Sanads, under his hand and ſeal, to the Engliſh Eaſt India Company for ever, the aforementioned five Circars; it is now further acknowledged and agreed by the ſaid Auſuph Jau, Nizam-ul-Mulck, Soubah of the Decan, that the ſaid Company ſhall enjoy and hold for ever, as their right and property, the ſaid five Circars, on the terms hereafter mentioned.

Article 2.—By the aforementioned Treaty of Hydrabad, it was ſtipulated, that the Nabob Auſuph Jau, having given the Circar of Murtezanagur as a jaghire to his brother the Nabob Ummeer ul-Omrah, Seujah-ul-Mulck Behauder, Bazalet Jung, the Company ſhould not take poſſeſſion of the ſaid Circar, till after the death of Bazalet Jung, or till he broke the friendſhip with the ſaid Company, by raiſing diſturbances in the country of Nizampatam, or the Carnatic; and though the Company might juſtly claim a right to take poſſeſſion of the ſaid Circar,

APPENDIX, No. 10.

Circar, from the late conduct of Bazalet Jung, yet, in consideration of their friendſhip for Auſuph Jau and his family, and that they may not diſtreſs his affairs, by obliging him to provide his brother Bazalet Jung with another jaghire, the Company do agree and conſent, that Bazalet Jung ſtill hold the Circar of Murtezanagur on the aforeſaid conditions, or till it be the pleaſure of Auſuph Jau, that the Company ſhould take poſſeſſion thereof; provided that the ſaid Bazalet Jung returns immediately to his own country of Adony, and neither keeps with nor receives from Hyder Naigue, any Vackeel or correſpondence, but lives in peace and harmony with the Engliſh Company and the Nabob Wolau Jau, and gives no protection or aſſiſtance whatever to the ſaid Naigue, or any of his people, nor any other enemies of the Company or the Nabob Wolau Jau: but if this article ſhall at any time be infringed, the Company ſhall be at liberty, by virtue of this Treaty, to take poſſeſſion of, and keep the Circar of Murtezanagur, in the ſame manner as the other four; and the Nabob Auſuph Jau engages to aſſiſt them therein with his troops, if neceſſary.

Article 3.—The fort of Condapillee, with its jaghire, ſhall for ever hereafter remain in poſſeſſion of the Engliſh Company, and be garriſoned with their troops, under their own officers only; notwithſtanding any thing to the contrary ſtipulated in the 12th article of the Treaty of Hydrabad.

Article 4.—Narraindoo, one of the Zemindars of the Circar of Siccacole, having lately raiſed diſturbances in the Itchapore Country, and refuſed (as he alledges, in conformity to the Nabob Auſuph Jau's orders) to pay his rents, or obedience to the Company, the Nabob Auſuph Jau agrees, on the ſigning and exchange of the preſent Treaty, to write Letters not only to Narraindoo, but to all the Zemindars in the Circars of Ellour, Muſtephanagur, Rajahmundry, and Siccacole, acquainting them, that they are in future to regard the Engliſh Company as their ſovereign, and to pay their rents and obedience to the ſaid Company, or their deputies, without raiſing any troubles or diſturbances: the Nabob Auſuph Jau further agrees, that he will not in future encourage or protect in raiſing troubles or diſobedience, any Zemindars, Renter, or Servants of the Engliſh Company, or the Nabob Wolau Jau; who on their parts engage the ſame to his Highneſs Auſuph Jau.

Article 5.—It has been the conſtant deſire and endeavour of the Engliſh Company, and the Nabob Wolau Jau, to preſerve their poſſeſſions in peace; and to live on terms of friendſhip with the Soubah of the Decan: they ſtill deſire to do the ſame; and though the operations of war have lately obliged the Company to ſend their troops towards Hydrabad, and to take poſſeſſion of the Circars of Commamet and Worangole; yet, as a proof of their friendſhip for the Nabob Auſuph Jau, &c. Soubah of the Decan, on the ſigning and exchange of this Treaty, the Company's troops ſhall be recalled to the fort of Commamet, from whence they ſhall alſo retire into their own Circars, ſo ſoon as the Soubah, with his army, has croſſed the Kiſtnah, leaving the fort of Commamet to the Soubah's deputy. And as a farther proof of the Company's ſincere deſire to preſerve a friendſhip with the Soubah of the Decan, they agree to bury in oblivion what is paſt, and to pay him annually, for the ſpace of ſix years, to be computed from the 1ſt of January 1768, or the 10th of the Moon Shibaun, in the year of the Hegyra 1181, the ſum of two lacks of Arcot rupees, at Madras or Maſulipatam; that is to ſay, one lack on the 31ſt of March, and alſo one lack on the 31ſt of October, or two lacks every year, and one lack more at each of theſe periods, whenever the Circar of Condavir is put into the Company's poſſeſſion. The Company moreover promiſe, that if they peaceably poſſeſs the Circars during the aforeſaid term of ſix years, and the Soubah gives them no trouble, they will pay annually, from the 1ſt of January 1774, the ſum of five lacks, in two equal payments, as before expreſſed; or of ſeven lacks, if Condavir be then in their poſſeſſion; but in caſe the Soubah, or the Marattas, by his inſtigation, ſhould invade the Circars or Carnatic, or they, or any other Power ſhould conquer the Circars from the Engliſh Company, the payment of the ſaid ſums ſhall be ſuſpended till peace, and the Circars are reſtored to the Company.

Article 6.—It was ſtipulated, in the former Treaty made at Hydrabad, that the Company and the Soubah ſhould mutually aſſiſt each other with their troops, when required, and their own affairs would permit; but it being apprehended at preſent that ſuch an agreement may ſubject both parties to difficulties, and that miſunderſtandings may ariſe on that account, it is now agreed only, that a mutual peace, confidence, and friendſhip, ſhall ſubſiſt for ever between the Engliſh Company, his Highneſs Auſuph Jau, and the Nabob Wolau Jau; the enemies of either ſhall be regarded as the enemies of the other two Powers, and the friends of either be treated as the friends of all: and in caſe any troubles ſhould ariſe, or any enemies invade the Countries under the Government of either of the contracting parties, the other two ſhall give no countenance or aſſiſtance to ſuch enemies or invaders; the Company, and the Nabob Wolau Jau, willing however to ſhew their voluntary attachment to the Soubah, will always be ready to ſend two battalions of Sepoys, and ſix pieces of artillery, manned by Europeans, whenever the Soubah ſhall require them, and the ſituation of their affairs will allow of ſuch a body of troops to march into the Decan; provided the Soubah pays the expence during the time that the ſaid troops are employed in his ſervice.

Article 7.—The exalted and illuſtrious Emperor Shaw Allum having been pleaſed, out of his great favour and high eſteem for the Nabob Wolau Jau, to give and grant to him and his eldeſt ſon, Meyen-ul-Mulck Omdetul Omrah, and their heirs for ever, the Government of the Carnatic Payen Gaut, and the Countries dependant thereon, by his royal Firmaund, bearing date the 26th of Auguſt 1765, or the 27th of the Moon Zuphur, in the 6th year of the ſaid Emperor's reign; and the Nabob Auſuph Jau Nizam-ul-Mulck, &c. having alſo, out of his affection and regard for the ſaid Nabob Wolau Jau, releaſed him, his ſon Meyen-ul-Mulck, &c. and their heirs in ſucceſſion for ever, from all dependance on the Decan, and given him a full diſcharge of all demands, paſt, preſent, and to come, on the ſaid Carnatic Payen Gaut, by a Saned under his hand and ſeal, dated the 12th of November 1766, in conſideration of the ſaid Nabob Wolau Jau having paid the Soubah five lacks of rupees; it is now agreed and acknowledged by the ſaid Auſuph Jau Nizam-ul-Mulck, that the ſaid Nabob Wolau Jau, and after him his ſon Meyen-ul-Mulck, and their heirs in ſucceſſion, ſhall enjoy for ever, as an Ultumgau, or free gift, the Government of the Carnatic Payen Gaut, in the fulleſt and ampleſt manner; the ſaid Nabob Auſuph Jau promiſing and engaging not to hold or keep up any kind of correſpondence with any perſon or perſons in the ſaid Carnatic Payen Gaut, or in the Circars before and now ceded to the Engliſh Company, except the ſaid Nabob Wolau Jau, or the ſaid Engliſh Company, by the means of their Preſident and Council of Madras; who on their part, in conjunction with the ſaid Nabob Wolau Jau, engage likewiſe not to hold or maintain any correſpondence with any perſon or perſons in the Decan, except the Nabob Auſuph Jau, his Dewan, and the Securities whoſe names are hereunto ſubſcribed.

Article 8.—The Nabob Auſuph Jau, out of his great regard and affection, and from other conſiderations, having been pleaſed to grant and confer on the Nabob Wolau Jau, and his eldeſt ſon, Meyen-ul-Mulck Omdetul Omrah, ſeveral Saneds, viz.

An Ultumgau Saned for the whole of the Carnatic.

An Ultumgau Saned for the whole of the Pergunnah of Imungundela, with the Gudda of Ghunpoora.

An Ultumgau Saned for the whole of the villages of Cathaſera, &c.

An Ultumgau Saned for the Killedary of the fort of Colaur.

An Ultumgau Saned for the whole of the diſtrict of Senedaupe; and,

A full and ample Saned, containing a diſcharge for all demands paſt, preſent, and future, on account of the Carnatic, &c.

It is hereby agreed, that all and every one of theſe Saneds ſhall be regarded equally binding with any other article of the Treaty, and be as duly obſerved by the Nabob Auſuph Jau, as if entered here at full length.

Article 9.—Hyder Naigue having for ſome years paſt uſurped the Government of the Myſore country, and given great diſturbances to his neighbours, by attacking and taking from many of them their poſſeſſions; and having alſo lately invaded, and laid waſte with fire and ſword, the poſſeſſions of the Engliſh Company, and the Nabob Wolau Jau, in the Carnatic, it is certainly neceſſary, for the peace and for the general benefit of all the neighbouring Powers, that the ſaid Naigue ſhould be puniſhed, and reduced ſo that he may not hereafter have the power to give any perſon farther trouble; to this end, the Nabob Auſuph Jau hereby declares and makes known to all the world, that he regards the ſaid Naigue as a rebel and uſurper and as ſuch diveſts him of, and revokes from him, all Saneds, honours, and diſtinctions, conferred by himſelf, or any other Soubah of the Decan, becauſe the ſaid Naigue has deceived the Nabob Auſuph Jau, broken his agreement, and rendered himſelf unworthy of all further countenance and favours.

Article 10.—That the Engliſh Company may hereafter carry on their trade peaceably on this Coaſt of Coromandel, and alſo on the Coaſt of Malabar; and that they, with the Nabob Wolau Jau, may hold the Carnatic and their other poſſeſſions in peace, it appears neceſſary that the countries of Carnatic Balagaute, belonging to the Soubahdarry of Viziapour, now or lately poſſeſſed by Hyder Naigue, ſhould be under the management and protection of thoſe who will do juſtice, and pay obedience to the high commands from Court; it is therefore agreed by the Nabob Auſuph Jau, that he ſhall relinquiſh to the Engliſh Company, all his right to the Dewannee of the ſaid Carnatic Balagaute, belonging to the Soubahdarry of Viziapour, and that the Company ſhall preſent an arzee or petition, to the royal preſence, to obtain from the Emperor Shaw Allum, a firmaund, confirming and approving their right thereto; but that the Nabob Auſuph Jau, as Soubah of the Decan, may not loſe his dignity, or the Revenue ariſing from the ſaid countries, the Engliſh Company agree to pay him annually, out of the Dewannee collection, from the time they are in poſſeſſion thereof, the ſum of ſeven lacks of Arcot rupees, including Durbar charges, being the ſum annually paid heretofore, in two equal payments, at the ſpace of ſix months from each other; provided the ſaid Auſuph Jau, Soubah of the Decan, aſſiſts the ſaid Company, and the Nabob Wolau Jau, in puniſhing Hyder Naigue, and neither receives from or ſends either Vackeels or Letters to him.

Article 11.—As the Engliſh Company do not intend to deprive the Marattas of their chowte, any more than the Soubah of his peſcuſh, which uſed to be paid from the Carnatic Balagaute, belonging to the Soubahdarry of Viziapour, now or lately poſſeſſed by Hyder Naigue, it is hereby agreed, and the Company willingly promiſe, to pay the Marattas, regularly and annually, without trouble, for the whole choute, as ſettled in former times, from the time the ſaid countries ſhall be under the Company's protection as Dewan; provided however that the Marattas guarantee to the Company the peaceable poſſeſſion of the ſaid Dewannee: to this end, the Nabob Auſuph Jau promiſes to uſe his beſt endeavours, jointly with the Engliſh and the Nabob Wolau Jau, to ſettle with the Marattas concerning the choute of the ſaid countries, how and where it is to be paid, ſo that there may be no diſturbances hereafter on that account, between any of the contracting parties or the Marattas.

Article 12.—All the foregoing Articles are ſincerely agreed to by the ſubſcribing parties, who reſolve faithfully to execute and abide by the ſame, ſo that a firm and laſting friendſhip may mutually ſubſiſt between them; and while ſuch an alliance ſubſiſts, what power will dare to diſturb the poſſeſſions of either party. The Engliſh Company, and the Nabob Wolau Jau, will endeavour, on all occaſions, to ſhew their friendſhip and attachment to the Nabob Auſuph Jau Nizam-ul-Mulck, as Soubah of the Decan, and look on the ſupport of that Government as the ſupport of their own; in ſhort, there will be no manner of difference in intereſt between them.

In witneſs and confirmation of all the above Articles, and every part of the aforegoing Treaty, we whoſe names are underwritten, have interchangeably ſubſcribed to and ſealed three inſtruments of the tenor and date, viz. The Preſident and Council of Fort Saint George, on the behalf of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company at that place, this 26th day of February, in the year of the Chriſtian Æra 1768; the Nabob Auſuph Jau, Soubah of the Decan, at his camp near Pillere, on the 22d day of the moon Shevaul, in the year of Hegyra 1181; and the Nabob Wolau Jau, for himſelf, at Fort Saint George, the 7th day of the moon Shevaul, in the 1181ſt year of the Hegyra.

APPENDIX, No. 11.

Extract of the General Letter from Fort Saint George; dated the 8th of March 1769.

Par. 50. LEST your Honours ſhould not clearly underſtand the diſtinction between Zemindaries and Government Lands, we beg leave to inform you, that the Zemindaries are lands held by certain Rajahs or Chiefs, as their hereditary eſtates, paying a certain tribute to the Government, and being ſubject to ſuit and ſervice, in manner very ſimilar to the ancient feudal tenures. The tributes ought to be certain and invariable, though that has not always been ſtrictly obſerved; and changes in Government have alſo introduced changes in the tributes, which indeed is of no great conſequence; for, beſides theſe fixed tributes (ſuppoſing they were ſo) the Supreme Government has always demanded (and cuſtom has given ſanction and title to) a further ſum, as a nazar or free gift; and theſe two ſums, the tribute and nazar, are what we mean when we ſpeak of ſettling the jumabundy with the Zemindars. Beſides theſe Zemindaries or hereditary eſtates, there are certain lands (more in Chicacole than any other of the Circars) which are called Havelly or Government Lands, and are the property of the State or Lord Paramount; ſuch are your Jaqueer, &c. lands in the Carnatic; and theſe are the lands which we purpoſe to let out, even ſhould we by way of trial endeavour to ſettle ourſelves the jumabundy with the Zemindars for their lands.

Extract of Letter from the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, to the Chief and Council of Maſulipatam; dated 11th January 1777.

WE deſire you will ſtate the following queſtions to ſome of the principal Zemindars dependant on your Settlement, and obtain their anſwers in writing for our information.

1ſt.—In what manner ought Zemindaries to deſcend by the laws and cuſtoms of the country?

2d.—If a Zemindar dies, leaving no children, but male couſins of different degrees, and alſo ſiſters, in what manner ought the Zemindary to be diſpoſed of?

3d.—Suppoſing there to be children of daughters of ſiſters, or of aunts, as well as male couſins, how ought the eſtate to be diſpoſed of?

Extract of the Proceedings of the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, in their Revenue Department, the 23d May 1777.

Read the following Letter from Maſulipatam, with the ſeveral Papers encloſed.

To the honourable George Stratton, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Council of Fort Saint George.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Conformable to your commands, we have the honour to tranſmit to you, tranſlates of the opinions of four of the principal Zemindars in theſe Circars, on the queſtions you directed us to put to them, reſpecting the rights of ſucceſſion in Zemindary lands.

As we conceived it would be acceptable to your Honour, &c. to receive, at one point of view, the fulleſt information we could obtain on the ſubject, we have neceſſarily deferred the ſending you any, until all their reſpective opinions could be collected.

We are, with great reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Your moſt obedient humble Servants,

Charles Floyer,
Charles Deſvoeux,
James Hodges,
Alex^r. Pringle.

Maſulipatam,
9th May 1777.

The Replies of Row Vencaterow, Sirdar of Rajamundry Circar, to the queries referred to him, concerning the laws and cuſtoms, in matters of ſucceſſion, of his caſt and country.

1ſt. That a Zemindar who has ſeveral ſons may, during his life-time, name one of them to ſucceed him in the management of his country; which ſon ſhall, at his father's death, ſucceed accordingly to the management; but then his brother ſhall have a right to ſhare in the profit ariſing from the country.—Should the father, during his life-time, not have appointed any one of his ſons to ſucceed him, or ſhould the ſon ſo appointed die, the mother ſhall have a right to give the power to whichever ſon ſhe ſhall pleaſe; but the other brothers have a right to ſhare in the profits.

2d. If a Zemindar dies without ſons, or brother's ſons, or uncle's ſons, then, after the death of the wife, the Zemindary is to go to the diſtant male couſins, and not to the ſiſters.

3d. If a Zemindar dies without ſons, and he has couſins of the male line, and alſo aunts, and ſiſters, and daughters ſons, then his wife has a right to appoint whichever of the male couſins ſhe chooſes to ſucceed; but he muſt take care of, and ſupport the relations of the female line.

The Replies of Rajah Culdindy Tripettirauze, Zemindar of Mogultore, to the queries referred to him concerning the laws and cuſtoms, in matters of ſucceſſion, of his caſt and country.

After the death of a Zemindar, his ſon is to inherit his country. If he has no ſons, and his brothers have divided into ſhares, he may adopt any one of his nephews or couſins; which nephew or couſin ſo adopted, ſhall have have a right to ſucceed to the Zemindary. If he has not adopted any ſon, and has either brother or brother's ſon, they are to ſucceed. If he has neither brothers nor nephews, then his father's brothers, or their ſons, are to ſucceed. If a Zemindar dies without having any of the abovementioned relations, or any couſins of the male line, and if he has a daughter, and at her wedding he publicly declares, that on her having a ſon he will adopt him, and fix him in the right of his Muras, then, according to the Gentoo laws, ſuch daughter's ſon being adopted, ſhall ſucceed to the Zemindary; but in caſe there ſhould be no daughter's ſons ſo adopted, then any diſtant relation of the male line may ſucceed; but even if there are no ſuch relations, neither his daughter's huſband's family, his ſiſter's ſon, his father's ſiſter's ſon, nor any of the female line, cannot inherit the Zemindary. This is what I think.

The Replies of Rajah Opparow, Zemindar of Noozeed, to the three queries referred to him, concerning the laws and cuſtoms, in matters of ſucceſſion, of his caſt and country.

1ſt. If a Zemindar leaves ſeveral ſons, the eldeſt is to have a large ſhare, ſeparately for himſelf, the reſt is to remain equally with the other ſons.

2d. If a Zemindar dies without ſons, and has male couſins and ſiſters, then, I think, that if the wife of the Zemindar be alſo dead without ſons, that the male couſins ſhould ſucceed.

3d. If a Zemindar dies without ſons, then his wife may chooſe any of his male line couſins, and appoint him to the Zemindary; but if the Zemindar, in his life-time, appointed any allowance for the maintenance of his daughters, or ſiſters, or aunts, then the perſon who ſucceeds, is to take care and give them ſuch allowance.

The Replies of Rajah Vochovoy Jaggapetyrauze, Zemindar of Peddapore, to the queries referred to him, concerning the laws and cuſtoms, in matters of ſucceſſion, of his caſt and country.

1ſt. If a Zemindar has a ſon, then the ſon is to be the heir of the father.

2d. If his Zemindar has no ſons, or has brother's ſons, or uncle's ſons, whichever of them he, or (after his deceaſe) his wife, ſhall impower, that perſon ſhall ſucceed to the Zemindary.

3d. If a Zemindar dies without appointing any body to ſucceed him, then the neareſt male couſin ſhall ſucceed; but not the generation of his father's ſiſter, his own ſiſter, or his daughter.

APPENDIX, No. 13.

Extract of General Letter from the Court of Directors to the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George; dated 25th March 1768.

Par. 109. HAVING taken under our conſideration, the ſtate of the Company's Servants upon the Fort Saint George Eſtabliſhment, and being ſenſible that they will be conſiderably affected in point of trade, by the great and neceſſary demands for extending the Company's inveſtments; conſidering alſo the great increaſe of buſineſs in which our principal Servants are engaged, and which requires their utmoſt care and attention, we are come to a reſolution to allow them a reaſonable encouragement, to exert themſelves with zeal and alacrity in their ſeveral departments; but which, however, they are to look upon as a free gift from the hand of their Employers, offered to them annually, ſo long as their behaviour ſhall continue to merit the ſame, and the Revenues of the country ſhall admit of ſuch a gratification; we therefore hereby order and direct, that in order to conſtitute a fund for the ſaid purpoſe, you do ſet apart a ſum not exceeding 60,000 current pagodas yearly, out of the produce of the Company's territorial Revenues, to be diſtributed among the Company's Civil and Military Servants; which ſaid ſum is to be divided into 100 parts or ſhares, and proportioned out in the following manner, viz.

APPENDIX, No. 13.

For the Governor, 21 ſhares.

For the ſecond in Council, five ſhares and an half.

For the reſt of the Council, not having Chiefſhips, two ſhares and an half each.

For it is our meaning and directions, that the Chiefs of Mazulipatam, Vizagapatam, and Ingeram, are not to have any proportion of the ſaid ſhares.

110. You are to obſerve, that the ſhares allotted to the Governor, as abovementioned, are in addition to his preſent ſalary of three thouſand pounds a year, and his perquiſites ariſing from coinage, and conſulage on coral and diamonds. The ſhares for the other civil Servants are to be in addition to their preſent appointments of ſalary, diet money, and the poſts they may reſpectively hold, excepting the Chiefſhips as before excepted.

111. Having likewiſe taken into conſideration the preſent ſtated allowance to the Company's junior Servants, and finding them to be inadequate to their ſupport and maintenance, we do hereby order and direct that the following additions be made thereto, by way of gratuity, to all ſuch of them who do not enjoy any poſts of profit, viz.

To a Factor, five pounds a year.
To a Writer, ten pounds a year.

Theſe laſt gratuities are to be paid out of the Company's caſh, and not out of the ſaid fund of 60,000 current pagodas a year.

112. We further direct, that all the beforementioned allowances, as well out of the fund, as of the Company's caſh, do commence upon your receipt of theſe advices.

Extract of ſeparate General Letter from the Court of Directors to the Preſident and Council, at Fort Saint George; dated 25th March 1768.

Par. 80. Being ſatisfied how much our trade and poſſeſſions may be affected by the good ſervices of the Company's Military Officers, the better therefore to encourage them to exert their endeavours in the preſervation of theſe great objects, we have thought proper to allow them alſo to partake of the fund mentioned in our General Letter of this date, of 60,000 pagodas a year, by way of gratuity, over and above their eſtabliſhed pay and allowances, and on the ſame conditions as our Civil Servants; in the following proportions, that is to ſay,

The Commander in Chief is to have, as ſuch only, he not being to have any proportion as a Counſellor, if he ſhould at any time hereafter be admitted of Council, eleven ſhares.

The Colonels, each, four ſhares.

The Lieutenant Colonels, each, two ſhares and an half.

The Majors, each, one ſhare and a quarter.

81. The ample proviſion here aſſigned to the Commander in Chief, aſſures him of an honourable competency; and we expect Colonel Joſeph Smith, and his ſucceſſors in the command, will have a conſtant and zealous attention to their duty, by keeping up a regular diſcipline among the troops, and in preventing, by good œconomy, all frauds and abuſes in the expences of the army.

82. The appointments to the reſt of the field officers are ſuch as put our Servants on a more advantageous footing than in any other military ſervice whatſoever, and gives them a proſpect of improving their fortunes by a gradual, but certain progreſſion.

83. After the diſtribution to our Civil, as directed in our ſaid General Letter, and the above to our Military Servants, there will remain a conſiderable ſum of the ſaid fund unappropriated; in order, therefore to encourage the reſt of the Company's Military Officers, we direct, that they alſo be granted, by way of donation or gratuity, over and above their uſual pay and allowances, viz.

A Captain, three ſhillings a day.
A Lieutenant, two ſhillings a day.
Enſigns and Lieutenants, Fireworkers, one ſhilling a day each.

84. In caſe it ſhall happen, that the amount of the unappropriated ſhares ſhould not be ſufficient to anſwer the ſaid laſt mentioned gratuities, we direct, that the deficiency be made good out of the Company's caſh; on the contrary, if there ſhall happen to be a ſurplus, the ſame is to be carried to the Company's credit, under the head of Unappropriated Fund, until you ſhall receive further orders from us concerning the diſpoſition of it. But we muſt here obſerve to you, and accordingly direct, that neither a Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel, or Major, is to be allowed the three ſhillings a day as Captain of a company.

85. We further direct, that all the beforementioned allowances, as well out of the fund as the Company's caſh, do commence upon your receipt of theſe advices, in like manner as ordered with reſpect to our Civil Servants.

APPENDIX, No. 14.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Fort Saint George; dated 23d March 1770.

47. FROM the variation to which the ſtate of your Revenues is at all times ſubject, and the more to animate your care, and excite your attention to the ſecurity and improvement of them; we have thought fit to regulate our bounty to the principal of our Civil and Military Servants on your eſtabliſhment, in proportion to the advantages the Company ſhall receive from the Revenues of your Preſidency. And we accordingly do hereby order and direct, that from the receipt of theſe diſpatches, a commiſſion of five-per-cent. be drawn by you, on the amount of the nett territorial Revenues of Fort Saint George and its ſubordinates, as a fund to be appropriated for the benefit of our Civil and Military Servants, inſtead of the ſpecific ſum Pag' 60,000, directed in our General and Separate Letters of the 25th March 1768.

48. And as we have thought it neceſſary, for the greater ſecurity of the Company's poſſeſſions, and the better diſcipline of their forces, to augment the number of field officers on your eſtabliſhment; it is become expedient for us to make a new and certain diſpoſition of the ſhares to be divided amongſt our principal Civil and Military Servants; we therefore hereby direct, that from the amount of a commiſſion of five-per-cent. on your nett territorial Revenues, as beforementioned, one twenty-fourth part be firſt drawn, and paid as a ſeparate ſhare to Major General Coote, Commander in Chief of all the Company's forces in India; and that after ſuch deduction, the reſidue of the ſaid commiſſion be divided into 100 parts or ſhares; which parts or ſhares are to be appropriated in the following manner, viz.

To the Governor 21 ſhares.
Second of Council 5½.
Reſt of the Council (not having a Chiefſhip) as far as the eſtabliſhment of 12 Members of Council, each 2½.
Firſt Colonel, Brig' General Joſeph Smith, as 1ſt Colonel, 11.
The other Colonels 8 ſhares, to be divided in equal proportions amongſt them.
The Lieut. Colonels 12½ ſhares, to be divided in equal proportions.
The Majors 6¼ ſhares, to be equally divided amongſt them.

49. By the reſt of the Council abovementioned, beſides the Governor and Second, we mean only the Members of the Council next in rotation to them, and who are not Chiefs of Maſulipatam, Vizagapatam, or Ingeram; for it is our poſitive orders, that neither of thoſe Chiefs, nor any of the junior Members of the Council, exceeding the eſtabliſhment of twelve, do receive any advantage from the ſaid ſhares; nor muſt thoſe proportions of this fund, which we have allowed to Major General Coote or Brigadier General Smith, be continued to any perſons who may be appointed to ſucceed them, without our expreſs leave.

50. And you are to take notice, that the whole of the unappropriated ſhares, together with what may be added thereto, by the deceaſe or reſignation of Major General Coote, or Brigadier General Smith, be applied as directed in 84th paragraph of our Separate Letter of 25th March 1768.

APPENDIX, No. 15.

Extract of General Letter to Fort Saint George, of 11th June 1777.

Par. 16. AS it appears by the advices already received, that much of the preſent confuſion has ariſen from the private engagements of our Servants, and their concerns, dealings, and tranſactions, on their own ſeparate account, with the Princes and Natives of the country; we hereby order, that no Governor and Preſident of our Council at Fort Saint George, at Madras, after our preſent Governor and Preſident George Lord Pigot, nor any of the Council of our ſaid Preſidency, except as hereafter is mentioned, ſhall, directly or indirectly, by themſelves, or by any other perſon or perſons for his or their uſe, or on his or their behalf, carry on or be concerned in, or have any dealings or tranſactions by way of traffick or commerce, in money or in goods of any kind whatſoever, for his or their uſe, benefit, profit, or advantage, or for the benefit or advantage of any other perſon or perſons whomſoever, the trade and commerce of the Company only excepted.

Par. 17. And it is our further order, that in caſe any perſon or perſons who ſhall have carried on any trade, or have been concerned in the buying or ſelling any goods, wares, or merchandize, or other commodities whatſoever, by way of traffic or trade, or ſhall have been anyway concerned in money tranſactions as aforeſaid, ſhall be appointed to be Governor and Preſident, or to be of the Council of the ſaid Settlement, or ſhall hereafter ſucceed to any of the ſaid Offices reſpectively, every ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall be permitted to collect in his or their outſtanding debts, and to ſell and diſpoſe of the goods, wares, merchandize, effects, and ſtock in trade, of which ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall ſeverally be poſſeſſed at the time when ſuch prohibition ſhall, with reſpect to him or them, take place; ſo as each ſuch perſon or perſons who is, are, or ſhall be ſo reſtrained, ſhall, and each and every of them reſpectively do, deliver to the Preſident and Council at Fort Saint George, at Madras, for the time being, within thirty days from the time when ſuch reſtrictions and prohibition ſhall take place as aforeſaid, a full and juſt ſpecification, upon oath, of the debts due to ſuch perſon or perſons, and ſo to be collected, and of the goods, wares, merchandize, effects, and ſtock in trade of which he or they ſhall be at that time ſo reſpectively poſſeſſed; and ſo as ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall and do ſell and diſpoſe of ſuch goods, wares, merchandizes, effects, and ſtock in trade, within the ſpace of nine months after ſuch reſtriction and prohibition as aforeſaid, ſhall commence and take place; and ſo as no new trade, or concerns in commerce or merchandize, or in money tranſactions, be entered into, contracted for, or carried on by ſuch perſon or perſons.

Par. 18. It is our further order, that no Company's Servant, or any perſon under the Company's protection, be permitted to lend money to any of the country powers in India, nor to any perſon or perſons holding commiſſions miſſions under, or employed by them, directly or indirectly, to be repaid at a future time, on mortgages, or ſecurities in the nature of mortgages, upon lands, or from the produce or any growing Revenue of the country; and in caſe any of the Company's Servants are now concerned in any ſuch loans as aforeſaid, ſuch Servant or Servants ſhall draw up a ſpecific and particular Account current of the whole tranſaction from the beginning, ſetting forth how ſuch loan or loans is or are ſecured, to be delivered to our Preſident and Council within thirty days after the regulation ſhall be made known, and before ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall proceed to recover ſuch money; and afterwards they ſhall and may proceed to recover the ſame as they ſhall think fit.

19. And, for more effectually preventing ſuch loans, we hereby direct, that you inform all the country powers with whom ſuch tranſactions may be likely to take place, of this regulation, and requeſt them not to have or permit any dealings of the nature abovementioned, with any of the Company's Servants, or with perſons under the Company's protection.

20. In conſideration of the expected ſervices of our Governor and Preſident, and of our Council of Fort Saint George, and of the reſtrictions and prohibitions to which they are ſubjected by the preceding regulations, we direct, that every Governor and Preſident of Fort Saint George aforeſaid, after Lord Pigot, be allowed and paid the certain and eſtabliſhed ſalary of 40,000 pagodas by the year, and each of the Council for the time being, as hereafter is mentioned, 16,000 pagodas by the year; ſuch ſalary to any perſon who ſhall have a military command, to be in full of all pay and allowances as a military commander except ſuch field allowances as the Court of Directors ſhall think fit to make to him, whilſt employed on ſervice in the field. And we direct, that the abovementioned ſalaries be paid to each perſon out of the Revenues ariſing and accruing from our territorial poſſeſſions within and under the management of the ſaid Preſidency; and that ſuch ſalaries ſhall commence and take place, in reſpect to the ſaid Thomas Rumbold, John Whitehill, and Hector Munro, and to all ſuch other perſons as ſhall be reſident in Great Britain at the time of their appointment, upon and from the day on which ſuch perſons ſhall embark for India; and in reſpect to all thoſe who are or ſhall be reſident in India at the time of their appointment, upon and from the day of their taking upon them the execution of their offices. And we direct that all ſuch ſalaries to ſuch Governor and Preſident and Council, ſhall be in lieu of all fees of office, perquiſites, emoluments, or advantages whatſoever; and that no fees of office, perquiſites, emoluments, or advantages whatſoever, ſhall be accepted, received, or taken, by ſuch Governor and Preſident, and Council, or any of them, in any manner, or on any account or pretence whatſoever, other than ſuch ſalaries and allowances as are hereinbefore directed to be paid to them reſpectively; except as beforementioned, reſpecting field allowances to a military commander, and likewiſe except that the Governor and Preſident ſhall continue to have the advantage of reſiding in the Fort Houſe, together with the uſe of the Company's plate and furniture, and ſhall likewiſe be allowed to take ſuch commiſſion on coral as hath uſually been allowed to be taken by the Governor of the ſaid Preſidency.

21. To prevent any miſunderſtanding of the foregoing regulation, for payment of certain ſalaries to our Governor and Council, in lieu of trade, or other advantages, we think it proper to ſay, that we do not mean the regulation ſhall take place in reſpect to Lord Pigot, but that his Lordſhip, during his continuance in the Government, ſhall enjoy the ſame ſalary, and other advantages, as he was entitled to under his former commiſſion; nor do we mean it to extend to the ſaid Alexander Davidſon, John Hollond, and James Daniel, but as they are only named as occaſional Members, as before is mentioned, and their continuance in their office as Members of Council will be very ſhort, they are to be allowed to trade in the ſame manner as perſons of the Council might have done before the ſaid reſtrictive regulation; and as they are to be allowed to trade, they are to be paid ſuch ſalary, and have ſuch allowance only, as were paid and given to Members of Council before the ſaid regulations took place.

APPENDIX, No. 16.

Extract of General Letter to Fort Saint George; dated the 11th of January 1781.

Par. 3. IN conſideration of the expected ſervices of Lord Macartney, our preſent Governor of Fort Saint George, and of his Lordſhip being totally reſtricted by his covenants, from being concerned, directly or indirectly, in any dealings, tranſactions, or commerce, in money, or in goods of any kind whatever, for his uſe, benefit, profit, or advantage, or for the benefit or advantage of any other perſon or perſons whatever, the trade and commerce of the Company excepted, we have agreed, and hereby direct, that Lord Macartney be allowed and paid the certain and eſtabliſhed ſalary of 40,000 pagodas by the year; to commence upon, and be computed from, the day of his Lordſhip's arrival at Fort Saint George.

4. We hereby revoke the orders given in the 20th paragraph of the Court's Letter of the 11th of June 1777, reſpecting the ſalary of 16,000 pagodas per annum to each of the Members of Council at Fort Saint George

5. It is our order, that the ſalary and allowances to be paid to all the Members of Council below the Governor, be the ſame as were paid and allowed to the Members of our Council at Fort Saint George, before the eſtabliſhment of the temporary Government of the 11th of June 1777; the preſent Commander in Chief of our forces excepted, in whoſe ſalary we for the preſent make no alteration.

6. It is our pleaſure, that Lord Macartney be allowed to take ſuch commiſſion on coral as has uſually been taken by the Governor of Fort Saint George.

7. It is our further pleaſure, that all the Members of Council, below the Preſident, be allowed to trade in the ſame manner as Members of Council might lawfully have done, before the reſtrictive regulation in the Court's before mentioned took place. They muſt alſo fill ſuch places of truſt and emolument as hath been uſual at the Preſidency, and likewiſe ſucceed or be appointed to Chiefſhips of ſubordinate factories, when ſuch Chiefſhips ſhall not be filled by ſpecial appointments made by the Court of Directors.

Par. 6. IT appears from the ſyſtem hitherto purſued in the management of the Circars, that the Zemindars have been unneceſſarily incumbered with heavy debts, accumulating and preſſing upon them with ſuch increaſing weight, from year to year, that they are at length become almoſt inſupportable; and few of the Zemindars, except thoſe whoſe paternal inheritance was too conſiderable to be waſted, are in circumſtances of reſponſibility to anſwer even their former engagements to the Company. Various cauſes may have contributed to produce that effect; but one alone, which we ſhall mention, is of itſelf ſufficient to account for it. The practice hitherto obſerved in ſettling with the Zemindars of the Maſulipatam diſtrict, to whom we principally allude, has been, to receive in advance from them, at the time of ſettling, two-thirds of the annual amount of their jemmabundy, and to follow the ſame rule in the beginning of every year. The Zemindars, unable to make ſuch advances from the produce of their Revenues, which could not be realized till ſome months after, having been obliged, at every time, to take up from the Soucars, or any other who would lend them, conſiderable ſums of money, at the exorbitant intereſt of two and three-per-cent. per month, giving aſſignments on the harveſt, by way of ſecurity for repayment. This mode, ſo deſtructive to their own fortunes, and ultimately to the intereſts of the Company, might have been eaſily avoided, only by fixing upon the periods for receiving the different kiſts of the year, ſo as to give time to the Zemindar to realize the produce of his grain, and relieve him thereby from the neceſſity of borrowing. However ſimple this remedy may appear, the evil has been ſuffered to continue ſo long, that it is become almoſt too late to apply it. The Zemindars, with countries for the moſt part ruined or impoveriſhed, have exhauſted all their credit with the Soucars, and are now fallen into arrears, which cannot, together with the growing jemmabundy, be diſcharged, but by a long courſe of prudent management, under every indulgent conſideration that can be ſhewn them by the Company.

Par. 7. Another cauſe, which has operated in no ſmall degree to the diſtreſs of the Zemindars, ariſes from the ſhort term of the ſettlements with them, which have been farmed for one, two, and never more than three years at a time. When the leaſes are ſo confined, it can never be expected that the Zemindar will attend to the improvement of his lands; on the contrary, extending his views no further than the term of his leaſe, all his endeavours will be employed to benefit himſelf to the utmoſt, without regarding the conſequences which may fall upon the Revenue at a future time. This conduct is natural enough, and we cannot blame it, if we conſider how unſettled the ideas of theſe people muſt be concerning the ſtate of their property, after it has paſſed through ſuch various changes, and the ſovereignty ſo often transferred from the Soubah of the Decan to the French, then back to the Soubah again, and laſtly to the Engliſh, all in the courſe of a few years.

APPENDIX, No. 18.

Extract of the General Letter from Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors; dated the 20th of July 1771.

Par. 41. THE cowles for the Enaum called Jaghire Lands, and for Poonamalee, expired at the ſame time: and we had great hopes, that in conſequence of our repeated repreſentations, we ſhould have been furniſhed with your clear directions for the future diſpoſal of thoſe lands; but, notwithſtanding our firſt application on this ſubject was ſo long ago as the 27th of June 1769, by the Thames, we have not, to this hour, the moſt diſtant hint of your ſentiments, and we did not dare to be guided by our own judgment, in a point ſo truly critical. The inconveniences of continuing them under the Nabob, the oppreſſions which have been exerciſed in them, have been clearly ſtated to you; and to us it is beyond a doubt, that the advantages that might be reaped from ſuch territorial poſſeſſions, will never be obtained, ſo long as the Nabob has any thing to do with them; but theſe reaſons were not ſufficient to deprive him of them, when through the whole of your orders laſt year, it is evident, that you inclined to favour him, and to diſcredit the repreſentations of your Servants. Theſe circumſtances conſidered, we would not venture on ſuch a ſtep, however neceſſary, without your orders; and not having them, the only method was to temporize. The Nabob applied to us to have the management of the Jaghire in future. We replied, through our Preſident, that we willingly acquieſced to their continuance under him for one year longer; by which time your further and full ſentiments relative to the Jaghire would certainly be known.

42. As this Letter will probably reach you in time for us to be furniſhed with your orders in conſequence, by the ſhips of next year, ſhould your Honours not have finally determined on this ſubject before the receipt of it, we beg you will be pleaſed to conſider all that we have repreſented on the ſubject. We believe it may be ſummed up in theſe few words: that the inhabitants undergo continual oppreſſions: that the lands, though capable of great improvement, experience none: that the great reſervoirs by which the lands are ſupplied with water, are yearly falling into decay: that almoſt all the weavers that manufacture the Madras Inveſtment, reſide within the bounds of the Jaghire, and more might be induced to come, had they proper encouragement, which it is not in our power to give: that we have as little influence in theſe lands as in thoſe the immediate property of the Nabob; and that, except the mere rent, no one benefit is derived from them: we know not what they are capable of producing; and in caſe we ſhould have occaſion for their produce, we have no more reaſon to expect it, than from the Nabob's country. Such are, in brief, the inconveniences; and it remains with you to determine, whether they ſhall be ſubmitted to, or whether an attempt ſhall be made to render theſe lands more beneficial.

Extract of General Letter from Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors; dated 14th October 1775.

Revenue Conſ.

Par. 41. It is not in our power at preſent to enter on the ſubject of the Inaum Lands, as the Survey and Accounts of the lands collected by Mr. Barnard are not all tranſlated and copied fair; but from the examinations which have been made, we cannot help forming an opinion, that they are in a moſt wretched ſtate; and we ſee the abſolute neceſſity of your adopting ſome other plan. That we might omit no opportunity of providing, as far as we are able, for their improvement, and for the relief of the people reſiding in them, we took occaſion to point out and recommend to the Nabob, ſuch meaſures as appeared to us neceſſary for theſe purpoſes; and though we can hardly flatter ourſelves, that what we have ſaid to him, will produce any favourable change in the management of the country, it is ſome ſatisfaction to us, when we reflect, that nothing has been wanting on our part to make it beneficial, and to free the people from thoſe oppreſſions to which they have been ſo long expoſed. We ſhall ſend copies of the Survey, and of all Mr. Barnard's Accounts, as ſoon as they can be fairly tranſcribed.

BOTH the army and inhabitants maintained chiefly by ſupplies from Bengal, and upon which, I am ſorry to obſerve, they muſt principally depend for their future ſupport. A circumſtance, than which we can have no more convincing proof of the bad policy, in renting the Company's lands under this Preſidency, to the Nabob, and of thereby rendering ourſelves ſo entirely dependant upon him for every kind of ſupplies; and which, by keeping them in our own hands, we might ourſelves command. It is a ſyſtem which, from the preſent experience of its bad effects, I am induced to recommend to your ſerious conſideration for remedy.

APPENDIX, No. 20.

Extract of the Proceedings of the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, the 19th June 1780.

READ Letter from the Nabob.

From the Nabob to the Governor; dated 15th June, received 17th ditto.

Colonel Capper has my bond for the ſum of twenty-five thouſand eight hundred and eighty ſtar pagodas and a half (25,880½); this is not due for ſix months to come; yet, as Colonel Capper has repreſented to me the difficulties he is put to, by the demand of his creditors, it is my deſire to pay the abovementioned ſum into the Company's treaſury (provided the country is in peace) along with the kiſts for current charges, ending the 30th June 1781. You will be kind enough to ſatisfy Colonel Capper regarding the diſcharge of this money.

What ſhall I ſay more?

The Preſident is requeſted to deſire the Nabob to explain the nature of his debt to Colonel Capper.

Extract of the Proceedings of the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George, the 26th June 1780.

The Preſident delivers in the following Minute.

The Preſident acquaints the Committee, that having, at their recommendation, applied to the Nabob for an explanation of the ground of his Letter, concerning an Account now ſubſiſting between his Highneſs and Colonel James Capper, he has, in conſequence, been requeſted by the Nabob to inform the Committee, that the balance due from him to Colonel Capper, amounting as per his bond, to pagodas 25,880½, excluſive of intereſt upon it, conſiſted principally of diſburſements which the Colonel had made in England, upon his Highneſs's account, when he laſt went home with diſpatches from this Preſidency: that the Colonel, ſoon after his return to this country, ſettled Accounts with the Nabob, taking the ſaid bond from him as an acquittance of his demand: that the bond will not become due till the month of December next, but that the Colonel having preſent occaſion for this money, to enable him to make good a ſum which he owes Sir Robert Barker in England, and which Sir Robert had ordered his attornies here to depoſit in the Company's treaſury, until good opportunities of remitting could be procured, had ſolicited the Nabob to aſſiſt him in this emergency, ſo that he might be authorized to tell Sir Robert's attornies, who were conſtantly importuning him for payment of his debt, that ſo much had, through his means, been ſafely lodged in the Company's funds, agreeably to Sir Robert's directions; and that the ſame would be forthcoming whenever they (his attornies) ſhould have occaſion to draw for it, in order to remit it by ſuch conveyances as Sir Robert had pointed out. APPENDIX, Nos. 20 & 21.

That the Nabob being inclined to do all in his power towards relieving Colonel Capper from his preſent embarraſſment, had promiſed the Colonel that he would requeſt of this Government, to paſs the Company's receipt to Colonel Capper, for the amount of his Highneſs's bond to him, as ſo much paid into the Company's caſh, on account of General Sir Robert Barker; he (the Nabob) meaning that the ſame ſhould be included in the kiſts which are now ſettling to be paid by his Highneſs, in the courſe of the year ending 30th April 1781.

That by this tranſaction the Nabob's benevolent intentions towards Colonel Capper would be fulfilled, the Company, in all probability, ſo far from becoming loſers by their interference, would enjoy the full uſe of the money in queſtion for a conſiderable ſpace of time without intereſt, by the Nabob's making good the payment of it, before Sir Robert's attornies could meet with ſuitable occaſions of remittance.

Upon a review of the above recited particulars, which the Preſident ſubmits to the conſideration of the Committee, the Preſident is of opinion, that the requeſt of the Nabob ſhould be complied with, as there does not appear in it any thing unreaſonable, or in any ſhape inconſiſtent with the intereſt of the Company; and as our duty enjoins us to treat, with the moſt favourable attention, every matter thus ſituated, in which his Highneſs's wiſhes are immediately concerned.

As the Nabob ſeems very anxious that the Committee ſhould ſatisfy Colonel Capper, in regard to the debt due to him; it is agreed, to oblige the Nabob in this inſtance, by granting Colonel Capper a bond for the money; but it is recommended to the Preſident to make ſuch a ſettlement with the Nabob, that the Company may ſuſtain no loſs or riſque by this tranſaction.

Extract of Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee of Fort Saint George to the Court of Directors; dated 9th January 1780.

Par. 97. Shortly upon the departure of Sir Thomas Rumbold, we were ſolicited by the Nabob to aſſiſt him with a ſmall loan he was in want of, for diſcharging a demand made upon him by Colonel James Capper. As the Nabob appeared very anxious that this debt ſhould be cleared off; and as he engaged that the Company ſhould neither ſuſtain loſs nor riſk by the tranſaction, we acquieſced in the propoſition made to us by his Highneſs, and accordingly granted Colonel Capper a bond for the amount, as is particularly ſet forth in our proceedings of the day referred to in the margin. Committee, 26th June 1780.

Extract of Governor Rumbold's Minute.

MR. Petrie, when he was called before the Board, before the ſiege of Pondicherry, promiſed to deliver in a ſtate of the Tanjore Revenues for ſome years paſt, which he had obtained from good authority. * 10 Fanams make One Chuckram.
2 Chuckrams and 3½ Fanams, or 23½ Tanjore Fanams make One Star Pagoda.

Extract of Mr. Petrie's evidence before the Committee, in explanation of the above Accounts.

The Committee will obſerve, that the Account of the Revenues of the Tanjore country is eſtimated in Collums of Paddy, or in Chuckrams. The Collum is a meaſure which varies in different parts of Hindoſtan. In Tanjore I believe it is between 70 and 80 Engliſh quarts, and the medium price of a Collum of Paddy (or rice before it is beat out) is 3½ Gold Fanams, or 7 Silver Fanams, or nearly one ſhilling and four pence ſterling; ſo that one lack, or 100,000 Collums of Paddy, at the aforementioned price, will produce Star Pagodas 15,555. 25 fs.

In the Tanjore country the Star Pagoda is valued at 45 Madras or Silver Fanams. The Porto Novo Pagoda is from 10 to 15 per cent. inferior to the Star.

A Chuckram is equal to 20 Madras or 10 Gold Fanams.

Two Chuckrams and one Fanam are equal to one Porto Novo Pagoda.

Forty two Madras or Silver Fanams are equal to one Porto Novo Pagoda, in the Tanjore Accounts; but in the Company's books the Porto Novo Pagoda is reckoned at 36 Fanams, and the Star Pagoda at 42, although in fact it varies from 41 to 47, and even more.

APPENDIX, No. 22.

Extract from Mr. Petrie's Evidence before the Committee.

BEFORE I ſpeak of the preſent ſtate of the Tanjore country, it will be neceſſary to inform the Committee, that not many years ago, that Province was conſidered as one of the moſt flouriſhing, beſt cultivated, populous diſtricts in Hindoſtan. I firſt ſaw this country in 1768, when it exhibited a very different picture from its preſent ſituation. Tanjore was formerly a place of great foreign and inland trade; it imported cotton from Bombay and Surat; raw and worked ſilks from Bengal; ſugar, ſpices, &c. from Sumatra, Malacca, and the Eaſtern Iſlands; gold, horſes, elephants, and timber, from Pegu, and various articles of trade from China. It was by means of Tanjore that a great part of Hyder Ally's dominions, and the North Weſtern parts of the Maratta empire, were ſupplied with many European commodities, and with a ſpecies of ſilk manufacture from Bengal, which is almoſt univerſally worn as a part of dreſs by the natives of Hindoſtan. The exports of Tanjore were, muſlins, chintz, handkerchiefs, ginghams, various ſorts of long cloths, and a coarſe painted cloth; which laſt conſtitutes a material article in the inveſtments of the Dutch and Danes, being in great demand for the African, Weſt Indian, and South American markets.—Few countries have more natural advantages than Tanjore; it poſſeſſes a rich and fertile ſoil, ſingularly well ſupplied with water from the two great rivers, Cavery and Coleroon, which, by means of reſervoirs, ſluices, and canals, are made to diſperſe their waters through almoſt every field in this country: to this latter cauſe we may chiefly attribute the uncommon fertility of Tanjore; the face of the country is beautifully diverſified, and in its appearance approaches nearer to England than any other part of India that I have ſeen. Such was Tanjore not many years ago; but its decline has been ſo rapid, that in many diſtricts it would now be difficult to trace the remains of its former opulence.

To account for this revolution, various cauſes muſt be aſſigned. That the Revenues fell ſhort of former collections ſome years preceding the capture of Tanjore for the Nabob, muſt be charged upon the rapacious miniſters who at that time ruled the country, and plundered their maſter while they oppreſſed the inhabitants: diſtricts were mortgaged for preſent ſupplies; and jaghires to a large amount ſettled upon themſelves, many of which have not yet reverted to the Circar. But as thoſe evils were not of long duration, their effects were only partially felt; for at this period, as I have been informed, the manufactures flouriſhed, the country was populous, and well cultivated, the inhabitants were wealthy and induſtrious. Since the year 1771, the æra of the firſt ſiege, until the reſtoration of the Rajah, the country having been during that period twice the ſeat of war, and having undergone two revolutions in the Government, trade, manufactures, and agriculture, were neglected, and many thouſands of inhabitants went in queſt of a more ſecure abode. It is, however, neceſſary in this place to obſerve, that during the year 1774, while Tanjore was governed by the Nabob, all the accounts which I have ſeen, make the Revenue to amount to one-third more than the year preceding the conqueſt, and to more than double the ſum which appeared in the Circar books for the year I reſided at Tanjore. Strange as this circumſtance may appear at firſt view, I think it may be explained by the unuſual high price of grain in the year 1774, when the ſcarcity was ſo great as almoſt to amount to a famine, by the Tuncan duties being raiſed, and by many of the old jaghires and grants from the Circars being reſumed by the Nabob.

Since the reſtoration of the Rajah in 1776, many cauſes have contributed to leſſen the Revenue, and impoveriſh the country. I will firſt mention the ignorance and rapacity of his principal Managers, as I look upon this as the great and primary evil from whence moſt of the other originate. Secondly, to the failure of many of the principal Farmers, and to the unuſual cheapneſs of grain. And, thirdly, to a general opinion, which for a long time ran through the country, that the Rajah's Government would not be of long duration, and that another revolution was approaching. Hence every ſpecies of embezzlement and peculation; his miniſters extorting money from the Zemindars; they oppreſſing the people, who are often obliged to diſpoſe of their cattle, and the very implements of huſbandry, to ſatisfy the calls of their unrelenting landlords. The thouſand evils reſulting from ſuch a regular ſyſtem of oppreſſion, are too obvious to render it neceſſary to enlarge upon the ſubject.

Ever ſince his reſtoration, the Rajah has been oppreſſed with a heavy load of debt. His expenditure has been enormous. Many of the Farmers who owed him large balances, have abſconded. He had no money but what was levied from his people, or raiſed by deſtructive loans at an exorbitant ruinous intereſt.

The great ſcarcity of ſpecie in the Tanjore country is an evil which has been long felt, and when I left India, it had got to an alarming height. Pagodas and fanams were formerly coined to a large amount at Tanjore. But a former Rajah having ſold the right of coinage to the Dutch at Negapatam, the country depends chiefly upon that ſource now for its ſupplies of ſpecie.

APPENDIX, No. 23.

2d February 1782.

EDWARD COTSFORD, eſquire, attending, was examined as followeth; viz.

1ſt.—Q. How long has he been in India, and in what ſtations?

2d.—Q. When did he go laſt there, and when return?

3d.—Q. In what ſtation was he?—A. I was appointed a writer on the Madras eſtabliſhment, in November 1757: I was firſt put under the Military Storekeeper, as his aſſiſtant; ſome months before the ſiege of Madras, I was appointed to act as Practitioner Engineer, with the rank of Enſign in that corps; I continued in it (but chiefly in the field) until the reduction of Madura, about the latter end of 1764: I then went to England, where I arrived about the end of March 1765: about a year after I returned again to India, and upon quitting my military employment, was appointed Chief or Reſident at Ganjam, in April 1768: I quitted Ganjam (as I think) the latter end of the year 1772; and upon my arrival at Madras, was ſworn in as a Member of the Council (my due by rotation) and ſoon after left India: in January 1778, I was appointed Chief at Mazulipatam, by the Court of Directors: the following Auguſt I arrived at Madras, and took charge of Mazulipatam in the December of the ſame year: I quitted that Chiefſhip at the end of 1780, and left Madras for England in January following, where I arrived the end of the year 1781.

4th.—Q. He will pleaſe to give the Committee ſuch information reſpecting the Company's poſſeſſions under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, as may enable them to judge of their preſent ſtate.—A. The ſtate of the affairs of the Company, under the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, is, I think, alarming.

All that part of the Carnatic contained between Nelloor to the northward, and Trichinopoly inland, and Cuddalore on the ſea coaſt to the ſouthward, is poſſeſſed by the enemy, and (as I believe) almoſt all the forts and ſtrong holds therein, except Trichinopoly, Vellore, and Wandewaſh, conſequently no immediate ſupplies of any kind can be drawn from thoſe countries.

APPENDIX. No. 23.

In the diſtricts under Nelloor to the northward, the authority of the Nabob's Government is much ſhaken; and the conduct of his Servants in the Revenue branch there, has been contradictory to his orders, therefore their fidelity to him may be ſuſpected. This information I received in private Letters from Captain Welsford of the Company's troops, who was in the command of Nelloor when I left Maſulipatam, but is (as I underſtand) ſince dead.

The Vencatyghery and Calaſtry Rajahs, whoſe Zemindaries are inland of Nelloor may, and probably will, be dilatory in paying any tribute; for which conduct, conſidering their near ſituation to Cuddapah, in Hyder's poſſeſſion, they may urge ſeveral oſtenſible reaſons.

The Ongole and Palnaud countries, ſituated ſtill to the northward of Nelloor, were, when I left India, unmoleſted, but the Revenue ariſing from them is inconſiderable. It is my opinion, the reſources to be drawn from all the countries abovementioned are uncertain, and, at all events, cannot be conſiderable.

From the four Circars at preſent in the poſſeſſion of the Company (if the inveſtment for England muſt for the preſent be diſcontinued to ſupply the exigencies of the Government abroad) after diſburſing the civil and military charges dependant upon them, the following ſupplies for the Carnatic might be drawn annually:

	Star Pagodas.
From Maſ[m] and its dependencies - -	3,00,000
Viz[m] and its dependencies - -	1,00,000
Ganjam, and its dependencies -	70,000
Total -	4,70,000

There is an annual payment of Peſcuſh to Nizam Ally, the Soubah of the Decan, for the Circars, which is not provided for in the above.

The countries dependant upon Trichinopoly, Madura, and Palamcotah, are liable to incurſions of the enemy's cavalry (which although ſuch a force may not attempt for the preſent a permanent poſſeſſion) may, and probably will, prevent any Revenue from being collected, particularly in the two latter of theſe countries, where the leading people, I underſtand, are not entirely attached to the Nabob's Government.

The preſent ſtate of Tanjore, and the degree of good will of the Rajah towards the India Company, I really do not know, therefore I cannot ſay what aſſiſtance he may be able or willing to give in the preſent conjuncture.

The diſtrict of Nagore (a part of the Tanjore country poſſeſſed by the Company) has been over-run and deſtroyed by a detachment of Hyder's troops, ſome time in February 1781.

The total inability (as it ſhould ſeem) of the Nabob Mahommed Ally Cawn, to bear any part of the great charges which the war in the Carnatic will inevitably incur, muſt be mentioned. Without powerful aſſiſtance from him in the article of money, the Governor and Council may be driven to great extremity, before Hyder (even if not aſſiſted by an ally) can be compelled to retire from the Carnatic.

5th.—Q. Whether does he, from his knowledge of the Circars at different periods, conſider them to be now in a ſtate of advancement or decline in wealth and population?—A. I conſider the Zemindaries to be at preſent in a ſtate of decline. I am led to this opinion from comparing the management of the buſineſs at Maſulipatam under former Chiefs, at the times I have paſſed through that place, as alſo from the records which I have read, together with my own, in the years 1779 and 1780. I do not find, that in times previous to my adminiſtration of affairs there, any difficulties of moment occurred; whereas, during my time, the impediments to the collection of the Revenue were great and continual, as will appear from a peruſal of the correſpondence between the Madras Preſidency and Maſulipatam, at the time.

I underſtand, from converſing with perſons long reſident there, that the vicinity of Maſulipatam is not ſo populous as it has been; but I ſee no cauſe to imagine, that the Circars in general are leſs ſo than they have been for ſome years paſt, particularly as the countries have ſeldom, even in a partial degree, experienced the rigours of war, ſince they have been in the poſſeſſion of the Company.

6th.—Q. What are the cauſes of that ſtate of the Zemindars?—A. From the beſt information I have received during my reſidence in the Circars (at Ganjam and Maſulipatam) the tribute received from the Zemindars, in the Government of the Mahomedans, ſince the time of Nadir Shaw's invaſion of the empire, was very uncertain and irregular; frequently large ſums were exacted, but rarely paid, owing to the very uncertain poſſeſſion which thoſe exerciſing the Government had in thoſe fluctuating times: pretenders alſo to authority have frequently entered the countries, and demanded money. In theſe times the Zemindars found it neceſſary to maintain troops, both for immediate protection, and to enable them to make uſe of ſuch advantages as the frequent changes of Government preſented to them; and, upon the whole, they generally evaded paying any thing conſiderable. When the French, under Monſ[r] Buſſy, took poſſeſſion of theſe Circars, the different Zemindars entertained large bodies of men. Things were in much the ſame ſtate when Colonel Forde took Maſulipatam. Since that period, the Company have had permanent poſſeſſion of the Circars, under the juriſdiction of Maſulipatam, and have enforced regular payment of their tribute: but the Zemindars took ſome years before they diſbanded their troops; and even now, in many of their Zemindaries, great portions of land are ſequeſtered, and held by the poſſeſſors as jaghires. Whether it proceeds from a principle of pride in the Zemindars, that theſe lands are not reſumed, or whether their principal ſervants prevent it from other motives, I cannot ſay. This drawback, however, without any advantage attending it to them, as formerly, is in my opinion one reaſon of their decline. The Zemindars pay very high intereſt to Soucars, or bankers, who advance them money to make good their tribute, before the collections in the country can be made: this is a heavy charge upon the Zemindars. European individuals have alſo been accuſtomed to lend money at high intereſt to the Zemindars, before the publication of the Regulating Act; but I know of no ſuch interference by Europeans ſince that time. This I conſider as another cauſe of their decline.

I do not recollect that the Company's tribute has ever been remitted in conſideration of unfavourable ſeaſons, though delays in payments in ſome inſtances have. As the tribute paid to the Company exceeds what had been generally paid to Nizam Ally, the Soubah of the Decan, this alſo may have had ſome influence to their detriment.

7th.—Q. In what circumſtances are the Zemindars in general? Are they in a proſpering or declining ſtate?—A. The principal Zemindars under Maſulipatam are much in debt to Soucars and other individuals: I believe, not leſs than ſix lacks of pagodas, over and above their arrears due to the Company.

In the Coſſimcotah and Chicacole provinces of the Chicacole Circar, which are under the juriſdiction of Vizagapatam, moſt of the Zemindaries are at preſent held by Vizeram Rauze. He cannot, I think, be much in arrear to the Company, or in any reſpect diſtreſſed, as the tribute he pays is comparatively very ſmall to the countries in his poſſeſſion. What his concerns with Soucars or other individuals are, I know not.

In the Itchapore diſtrict of the Chicacole Circar, under the juriſdiction of Ganjam, the Zemindars have ever, I believe, been poor and inconſiderable; but I know no immediate cauſe why that country ſhould not flouriſh, ſince the terms upon which the preſent renter holds it are reaſonable; the Maratta war may indeed have an influence to its detriment. The latter part of this query is already anſwered above in the 6th Article.

8th.—Q. What are the cauſes of their advance or decline?—A. This query is already anſwered in the 6th Article.

9th.—Q. Does he conſider the meaſure of calling down the Zemindars to Madras, as having contributed to the deficiency of the payment?—A. Certainly the calling down the Zemindars to Madras muſt have occaſioned them ſome additional expence, and ſome confuſion in the internal management of their countries muſt have ariſen from their long abſence; for theſe reaſons I think it has contributed to the deficiency of the payment in ſome degree; but whether in the degree equal to what the Zemindars themſelves alledge, I will not take upon me to ſay; but probably not. Conſidering the ſtate of the Zemindars in general, and the ſtate of India at the time, I think the inſiſting upon an increaſe of their tribute or jemmabundy was injudicious.

10th.—Q. To what is the neceſſity owing of the dependance of the Zemindars upon the Soucars?—A. It has been the conſtant uſage of the country, for the Zemindars to make their payments through the medium of the Soucars: ſometimes, and moſt frequently, they are conſtrained to borrow of them through neceſſity; ſometimes their interference is intended to conceal the real ſtate of the Zemindar's affairs, and excite an idea that he is poor. The tranſactions between them are conducted with the greateſt ſecrecy, the Soucar never diſcloſing the ſtate of the affairs of the Zemindars.

11th.—Q. Do the Soucars oppreſs the Zemindars?—A. Soucars are money-lenders: they do not, I believe, always take the ſame premiums for the ſums they advance, but proportion their demand to the exigency of the borrower; and this is the only way that I know of, in which they can be ſaid to oppreſs the Zemindars.

The Chief and Council at Maſulipatam, in a Letter to the Preſident and Council at Madras, under date the 13th of June 1780, have entered pretty largely on this matter.

12th.—Q. Would it be adviſable to render the tribute of the Zemindars fixed and certain?—A. That the annual tribute ſhould be fixed, is, I conceive, the mode beſt calculated for the welfare of the countries and the Zemindars, and in no ſhape detrimental to the Company. In ſaying it ſhould be fixed, I by no means mean that the Company ſhould be bound by any written engagement to the Zemindars to that effect. Indeed I have always underſtood, that the aſſembling the Zemindars was principally to receive from them ſufficient bills upon the Soucars, for their tribute due; at the ſame time the Zemindar received annually a Cowle, ſtating, with other matters, the particular periods of payment. Some years ago they aſſembled at Rajahmundry, where the Chief ſettled with them; and of later years at Maſulipatam, where their concerns came more immediately under the cognizance of the Chief and Council.

13th.—Q. Does he think the preſent mode of leaſing the lands a proper one; or does he conſider it as having a tendency to oppreſs the Zemindars and Renters?—A. I do not conceive that the mode of receiving the Revenues from the Zemindary lands is at all oppreſſive to the Zemindars. No agents of the Company have any interference with the internal management of their countries, unleſs in caſes where they forfeit their excluſive right, by non-payment of tribute, or ſome other great cauſe; and even in thoſe caſes the Zemindar himſelf gives a written order to his Servants in truſt in the country, to deliver up his principal fort, and the management of his country, to ſuch perſons as the Company may ſend to take charge of them.

In the 6th Article, I have obſerved, that Europeans have ſometimes lent money to the Zemindars. This, I think, might have been in ſome inſtances a ground for oppreſſion. It has been cuſtomary in theſe caſes, to make over the produce of certain villages or diſtricts, in which the creditor has his agent, to take care that the Revenue thereof is properly applied. When ſuch creditor is the Chief, or any other Member of the Council, the Servant employed under the ſtrength of his Maſter's influence, may be very faulty, almoſt with impunity. Indeed I believe it has been no very uncommon caſe, where the Servants of the Zemindar and his creditor have combined together to cheat their reſpective Maſters. Chiefs of ſubordinates may be in ſome degree oppreſſive, by granting duſtucks or orders for the paſſage of certain articles through the country, duty-free, by which the Zemindars are deprived of ſo much of their Revenue. The principal Servant of the Chief has it alſo much in his power to oppreſs individuals, and in many caſes with ſecurity. I do not mean here to apply the two laſt caſes to any individual. It is an evil ariſing from the principles of deſpotic Government, although that Government is adminiſtered by an authority not profeſſing thoſe principles.

Renters may be liable to oppreſſions from ſimilar caſes.

14th.—Q. Does he think the agreements for the poſſeſſion of the lands too ſhort?—A. What concerns the Zemindars in this Article, is already anſwered in the 12th.

With reſpect to the Havelly lands (which may be tranſlated Demeſne lands) given in farm to renters, I think ſhort leaſes are preferable, not exceeding three years. When I was reſident at Ganjam, I recommended the letting the Havelly lands for one year only. My reaſon for this opinion is, that there is a greater probability to a renter who has regularly fulfilled his engagements, that he may have a renewal of his leaſe, than there is to the Company, that they may not ſuffer conſiderable loſſes in a long leaſe, taking it for granted, that the Servants of the Company continually watch over the welfare of the countries committed to their charge.

15th.—Q. Does he think the ſums exacted from them above what the lands can bear?—A. I have already in part given an anſwer to this query, as far as the ſame concerns the Zemindars.

I believe it is no very uncommon caſe for renters to give in propoſals, by which, where they have been accepted, they have been conſiderable loſers. They have chiefly been urged to this from a principle of pride or competition. Where this happens, the countries ſo rented out, muſt ſuffer ſome devaſtation. I think many of the Farms are rented out too high.

I have been told, that in times before the Europeans had any interference in theſe matters, the tribute from the Zemindars, and the rents from the Havelly lands, were much lower than they have ever been ſince. Such a conduct certainly qualified the rigour of a deſpotic Government, and provided for the proſperity of the country.

Anwar a dien Cawn (father to Mahommed Ally, the preſent Nabob of the Carnatic) who was the Nizam's deputy in the Chicacole Circar, took a very low tribute from the Zemindars; the Havelly lands alſo were leaſed out upon eaſy terms. This I learned from the records of the country when I was at Ganjam.

16th.—Q. Does he think the renters really unable to pay, or is it only a pretence?—A. I believe in general, when the renters fail in their payments, it proceeds from inability; the cauſe of this inability is partly ſtated in the laſt Article; the natives in general do not pay attention enough to œconomy; and in ſome caſes they are very extravagant, particularly in celebrating the weddings which happen in their families, which may alſo promote this inability.

17th and 18th.—Q. Are the inferior poſſeſſors of the lands in a ſtate of eaſe or not?

Q. What are the cauſes?—A. When the lands are farmed out at a rent higher than they will bear (as ſtated before) the inferior poſſeſſors will be oppreſſed. I do not recollect any other cauſe, ſpeaking in general.

Appendix. No. 23.

19th.—Q. Are the lands better or worſe cultivated than formerly?—A. From the conſideration that a larger rent is now exacted from the lands, whereby the ryots or inhabitants have a ſmaller ſhare, the inference to be drawn muſt be, that they are worſe cultivated now than formerly: and I think I may venture to ſay they generally are ſo, from what has paſſed within my own obſervation during my reſidence in Lalore.

20th.—Q. Does he think the eſtabliſhment, and other expences, of the Zemindars and Renters, in any degree the cauſe of their diſtreſs?—A. I have taken notice, that many of the Zemindars have not put aſide entirely their eſtabliſhment of troops, under the name of Sibbendy. I know of no particular cauſe for their diſtreſs more than I have already mentioned.

I have already noted, that the renters are generally extravagant in the celebration of their weddings. As their manner of living is very ſimple, and always the ſame, I do not think it can conduce to their diſtreſs. If it does in any degree, it muſt ariſe from their hoſpitality; the natives hold this virtue in high reſpect, and are ſometimes almoſt unbounded in their acts of benevolence: all this may be equally applied to the Zemindars.

21ſt.—Q. Is the country more or leſs populous than it formerly was.—A. I have frequently heard it affirmed, that the Company's Jaguire lands in the Carnatic, are leſs populous than they were ſome years ago; but as I have never ſeen any proof that it is ſo, I cannot aſſent to that belief, particularly as it may reaſonably be ſuppoſed, that the Nabob's reſidence in the vicinity of Madras, muſt have drawn many people from the interior parts of the country. As I have not been much at Madras of late years, I am not ſufficiently informed of the ſtate of population in the Carnatic in general. What concerns the Northern Circars has been already anſwered in the 5th Article.

22d.—Q. What are the cauſes of the difference of population in the neighbourhood of Maſulipatam, as beforementioned.—A. As it was in times preceding the arrival of Europeans, in which Maſulipatam was more populous than it has been of late years, I cannot tell the cauſes of the decreaſe of population there; but moſt probably, it has been from the great decreaſe of trade, which I underſtand was formerly very conſiderable there.

23d.—Q. Have the Revenues under Maſulipatam been well paid? if not, what have been the cauſes?—A. I believe, when the Circars firſt came into the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, the countries dependent upon Maſulipatam were in a much more flouriſhing ſtate than they are at preſent, and the Revenue ariſing from them more punctually paid. In a former paragraph, I have noted the probable cauſes why the Zemindars have decreaſed in wealth; but until theſe few years back, this influence was not felt by the Company immediately, as the Revenue was ſtill regularly received: but the Zemindars began to contract debts, which have ſince become very conſiderable. Since the period of the unhappy diſputes in the Council in which Lord Pigot was deprived of his authority, the affairs of the Company every where on the Coromandel Coaſt have viſibly declined. Upon my arrival at Madras in 1778, I found the general ſtate of things entirely altered, and much for the worſe, ſince the time of my leaving India in 1773.

During the time that the concerns of Maſulipatam were under my charge as Chief, the Revenues have been ill paid, although no endeavours were wanting on my part to enforce order and obedience in the Zemindars; and I believe I may venture to affirm, that no former Chief had ſo many impediments to encounter as I had, over and above the general ill ſtate of the Company's affairs. The following I conſider as the immediate cauſes of the difficulties I experienced.

The calling down the Zemindars to the Preſidency, which I have already taken notice of in the 9th paragraph; the loſs of time alſo, from their ſtay at Madras after my arrival, was very conſiderable, and of detriment.

The increaſing the jemabundy or tribute of the principal Zemindars, occaſioned much diſcontent amongſt them.

The depriving the Company's Interpreter, or Dubaſh, named Vencety Royalon, of certain poſſeſſions held in the Circars, and the leſſening his authority in the opinion of the Zemindars, was the cauſe of giving me much additional trouble, and the meaſure itſelf was a great impediment to me.

The ſuffering the Zemindars to have vakeels, or agents, reſiding at the Preſidency, was alſo a very conſiderable bar in conducting the affairs at Maſulipatam.

To theſe cauſes may be added the eventual one which the war with Hyder Ally occaſioned, I mean his overrunning the Guntoor Circar with a conſiderable body of cavalry (from 3 to 5,000) by which the minds of the Soucars were much embarraſſed at a very critical time, as will more fully appear in the correſpondence with the Preſidency.

24th.—Q. Are manufactures in a ſtate of advance or decline?—A. I think upon the whole they may be ſaid to be upon the decline, as the cloths are in general higher priced, and not ſo well fabricated as they have been: I ſpeak chiefly of manufactures in the Circars; in what ſtate they are in the Carnatic, I am in a great degree ignorant.

25th.—Q. What are the cauſes?—A. In conſequence of our ſucceſſes laſt war, the manufactures have been in a great degree in the hands of the Company, which enabled their Servants at the different factories, to provide cloth upon their own account, after ſupplying the Company to the extent of their demands. The French during the peace have alſo had an agent or agents at Tanam, living there under our Government, who have provided cloth for private adventurers of their own nation chiefly. Of late years the Danes have fallen into this track of trade, and I believe have been ſupplied in a great degree by Britiſh agents. The demand for this trade being great, without any check, or that nice inſpection into the fabrick of the cloths, which is conſtantly obſerved in the inveſtment provided for the Company, may be, and I think is, the cauſe that the cloths in general are higher rated, and not ſo well fabricated.

The almoſt inſuperable difficulties which the Company have put in the way of remitting money to England by individuals, together with the great falling-off of their own inveſtments, have afforded ſtrangers both the opportunity and the means of carrying on a very advantageous trade, which in its conſequences muſt be detrimental to the Company. This matter, I think, deſerves the attention of the Committee.

26th.—Q. What is his opinion of the eſtabliſhment of the Committee of Circuit?

27th.—Q. Was it well calculated to anſwer the purpoſes of its inſtitution?—A. The Court of Directors, in their Letter to Madras under the date, April 12th 1775, certainly directed the attention of the Government of Madras to proper objects for the inquiry of a Committee of Circuit; but I think the mode ordered for that inquiry, which has been, and is ſtill ſo much wanted, is open to ſome objections.

The eſtabliſhment of ſuch a Committee as was ordered by the Directors, would be attended with more expence than the nature of the buſineſs to be done made neceſſary.

The buſineſs they were to be employed upon was not, as I conceive, of the deliberative kind, except in the ſingle caſe of letting out the lands at the expiration of the former leaſes; therefore, that the appointment of ſo many Gentlemen was unneceſſary.

The empowering them to re-let the lands independent of the Chief and Council, under whoſe juriſdiction the countries might be, would diminiſh too much the authority and reſponſibility of ſuch Chief and Council, and make it very difficult for them to act with vigour in caſes where a particular exertion might be neceſſary. I hold it as a maxim, that in the Government of deſpotic countries, the ſhort power cannot be divided without detriment; diſputes alſo would ariſe between the Committee and the Chief and Council, to the detriment of the Company: Upon the whole, I think it very poſſible, that the inconveniences of ſuch an eſtabliſhment might more than counterbalance any advantage that would ariſe from it.

Obſerving how great the hopes entertained by the Directors were, from the eſtabliſhment of the Committee of Circuit, by the great diſapprobation they have ſhewn, from their orders not having been executed, I give my opinion on theſe two queries with ſome diffidence. If I did not conceive there was another mode for gaining a very accurate knowledge of theſe countries, not attended with thoſe inconveniences, perhaps I ſhould not have hazarded this opinion.

28th.—Q. Was there a ſufficient number of the Servants of the Company capable of executing that commiſſion independent of the Members of Council employed in it when it was aboliſhed?—A. I have no doubt but there were many Servants of the Company equally capable with the Members of the Board when the Committee of Circuit was aboliſhed; unleſs indeed, from their ſtation, the latter could receive any additional weight.

29th.—Q. What is his opinion of the meaſure of aboliſhing it?—A. I think when it was aboliſhed ſome other mode ſhould have been ſubſtituted by the Governor and Council, that the ſpirit of the orders from home might have been followed; but it is poſſible that the general ſtate of the Company's affairs at the time might have obſtructed the proſecution of the orders received; and of this I am not maſter enough of the ſubject to judge. It certainly is an implication, that a country is in a ſtate of tranquillity, where inquiries of this nature can be made.

30th.—Q. Would not an accurate inveſtigation of the Circars, upon the plan of the Committee of Circuit, be ſtill of great advantage?—A. Admitting that the Committee of Circuit is a good mode, I fear the ſtate of affairs there is ſuch as to diſcourage the putting it in immediate execution.

31ſt.—Q. What is the ſtate of the Jaguire lands?—A. To this query I cannot anſwer from my own knowledge; but I have heard it frequently, and indeed always aſſerted, that the Jaguire lands are rather in a declining than a flouriſhing ſtate; and the reaſon given is, that the Nabob is ſo tenacious of holding theſe lands, that he gives for them more than they are worth, to exclude any other candidate; this probably obliges him to draw a greater Revenue from the countries, than is conſiſtent with ſound policy, or the dictates of ſimple juſtice.

32d.—Q. Is it of advantage that they ſhould be continued with the Nabob?—A. Conſidering the conduct of the Nabob of late years, and the power he has aſſumed, I think it highly improper that the Jaguire lands ſhould be under his management.

The principal motive of the Nabob in renting the Jaguire is, as I believe, that the ſole authority throughout the Carnatic ſhall be in him. I believe he would conſider the letting any other perſon have theſe lands as diſgraceful to him.

It is not conſiſtent with the Company's proſperity, that any perſon poſſeſſing ideas of independence, ſhould have unlimited power in the Jaguire lands; as in that caſe the benefits ariſing from a territory which is ſo well ſituated to afford reſources of all kinds to the Preſidency may be much leſſened, and abuſes committed in the country not be effectually inquired into. I believe there are inſtances mentioned in the records at Madras to this purpoſe, but I do not remember them ſufficiently to point them out particularly.

33d.—Q. Are his own lands in a better ſtate?—A. I have always underſtood that the Nabob's Government is very oppreſſive, and that the inhabitants are kept in great poverty, and conſequently that his countries have greatly declined. As it is now ſome years ſince I have been any where in the interior parts of the Carnatic, I can ſay nothing to this query from my own knowledge.

34th.—Q. What is the cauſe of his diſtreſs?—A. Upon public grounds this I think cannot be accounted for, as the Nabob has held the Carnatic in a ſtate of uninterrupted peace for many years.—That the Nabob ſhould be in actual diſtreſs under ſuch circumſtances, is a matter of great moment, and highly deſerving the attention of the Committee; becauſe, if it is a fact, it demonſtrates that the Company, ſo far from being gainers from their concerns in the Carnatic, muſt be loſers.—The expence of reducing Pondicherry and Mahé may have been conſiderable, but the amount of this expence is greatly over-balanced by the immenſe debts he has contracted with individuals.

35th.—Q. Is there not a great annual exportation of ſpecie from the country?—A. Independent of the ſpecie ſent to China on account of the Company (chiefly from Bengal) I believe within the laſt twelve years very conſiderable ſums have been exported by individuals from the Coromandel Coaſt, and ſome from Bengal alſo, but to what amount annually I cannot take upon me to ſay.

36th.—Q. To what is the exportation of ſpecie owing?—A. Some few individuals may have ſent ſpecie to China for the advantage of the high intereſt paid for money there; but it is owing, in a much greater degree, to the difficulties which individuals find in making remittances to England directly, by which (amongſt other expedients) they have fallen upon the mode of ſending it to China, from whence the amount is remitted to England, either by bills on the Company or others.

37th.—Q. What does he think will be the effect of that exportation of ſpecie?—A. I believe it is generally underſtood, that the exportation of the ſpecie is of detriment to a State; the exportation to China, therefore, muſt be in a more particular manner ſo, as it is believed that none is ever ſent out of that country.

Further queſtions put to Mr. Cotsford.

Were the Zemindars and Renters under the Mahomedan Government ſubject to any payments more than the rents agreed to be paid annually for the diſtricts which they held?—I believe the deputies of the Government did receive, over and above the tribute ſettled under the Government, a further ſum under the name of nazar or preſent, which they pretended was for payment of their troops; but their ability to procure this was in proportion to the ſtrength of their army.

Did the preſents bear any proportion to the tribute, or were they arbitrary?—I think they were arbitrary.

After the Zemindaries came under European Government, did any of the remains of the nazar or preſents exiſt?—I believe it has exiſted, and think I have ſeen a paper of Mr. Buſſy's, where a part of the tribute is brought to account under the head of Preſent.

When it came from the French, under our Government, did the ſame practice exiſt?—I think it has exiſted in a greater or leſs degree ever ſince.

Under what head is it entered in our Accounts?—There is no ſuch head. I never underſtood any ſuch articles were brought to account in the Company's Accounts.

What comes of the money ſo exacted?—I think whatever preſents were received were conſidered as a perquiſite of the ſtation, and not conſidered in any reſpect as a part of the tribute.

Are the preſents now given certain, and bearing a ſettled proportion to the fixed tribute paid by the Zemindar, or are they optional at the diſcretion of the giver?—They are entirely optional.

Suppoſe the Zemindars had not been called down to Madras, would not you have thought yourſelf at liberty, conſiſtent with your duty, to have accepted ſuch gratuities ties from the Zemindars?—I ſhould have thought it my firſt duty to enforce the payment of the Company's tribute, without ſuffering my own intereſt to interfere with it; but I don't mean to ſay I ſhould have declined the cuſtomary advantages of my ſituation.

Is any preſent of importance paid upon the collections?—I don't know that there is.

Had you occaſion to ſee any of the Zemindars after their return from Madras?—I ſaw almoſt all belonging to Maſulipatam at Maſulipatam.

Had you any converſation with them about the preſents made to Sir Thomas Rumbold, or any of the Council of the Madras Government?—I had no converſation with them concerning preſents to Sir Thomas Rumbold, or any of the Council of the Preſidency of Madras; but they complained of the expences to and from Madras, and while reſident there, as reaſons for not being ſo punctual as formerly in paying their tribute; and upon the ſame occaſion, and with the ſame view, they mentioned the diſorders created in the management of their affairs in their abſence, particularly alluding to the miſconduct of their ſervants, and in the courſe of buſineſs I found ſome of it verified.

Did it come to your knowledge by any other means, that preſents were given at Madras?—I have no authority to aſſert that preſents were given at Madras. I don't know any were given.

Did the Zemindars when at Madras pay any ſums for tribute, they would otherwiſe have paid at Maſulipatam?—I think they gave Soucar ſecurities for ſome, but I had much difficulty in recovering it; nor were the ſums promiſed to be paid, equal to what at the ſame time would have been received at Maſulipatam, had the Zemindars been there to look after their own buſineſs.

What other mode do you apprehend might have been taken inſtead of appointing the Committee of Circuit?—I recommend the ſame mode which was taken when Mr. Burnard ſurveyed the Jaghire in the Carnatic.

Could an individual execute the orders given by the Court of Directors in their Letter of 12th April 1775, relating to the inveſtigation of the Circars, with that authority as five perſons under the authority of the Government of the Preſidency of Fort Saint George?—I think the inquiries pointed out for the inſtruction of the Committee of Circuit by the Court of Directors, could be as well executed by one perſon of ability, it being merely the taking the records of the ſeveral villages as I underſtand; which records, by the cuſtoms of the country, are kept in every Pergunnah and village by black ſervants belonging to the Circar or Government.

FIFTH

FROM THE

COMMITTEE OF SECRECY,

APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO

THE CAUSES OF THE WAR IN THE

CARNATIC,

AND OF

THE CONDITION OF THE BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN THOSE PARTS.

Reported by the LORD ADVOCATE of SCOTLAND (HENRY DUNDAS, Esq.)
1st March 1782.

FIFTH REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE OF SECRECY, &c.

The First Maratta War.

The COMMITTEE of SECRECY, appointed to enquire into the Cauſes of the War that now ſubſiſts in the Carnatic, and of the preſent Condition of the Britiſh Poſſeſſions in thoſe Parts; and to report the ſame, to the Houſe, with their Obſervations thereupon; and who were inſtructed to enquire into the Riſe, Progreſs, Conduct, and preſent State of the Maratta War, and all other Hoſtilities in which the Preſidency of Bengal now are, or have been, engaged, in the Support of that War, and of the Effects which the ſaid War and Hoſtilities may have produced in Bengal, and the other Settlements and Poſſeſſions of the Eaſt-India Company;—

HAVE laid before the Houſe, in their Firſt Report, the beſt account which from various ſources of enquiry and information, they had been able then to procure, of the irruption of Hyder Ally into the Carnatic, and of the military tranſactions that happened, and of the other meaſures that were purſued, in conſequence thereof; and having thought it their further duty, in order more fully to inform the judgment of the Houſe, to carry forward their enquiry into an inveſtigation of the conduct of the Company's Servants, as far as it might appear to have had any influence on thoſe tranſactions, or to have been the cauſe of the misfortunes which had lately happened; they have ſubmitted to the Houſe the reſult of that part of their enquiries alſo (as far as they had proceeded therein) in the ſame Report.

But in tracing theſe ſuppoſed ſources of misfortune, your Committee were naturally induced to make it the object of their firſt attention, to examine the previous ſituation and proceedings of that Government, into whoſe immediate dependencies the invaſion of the enemy had been brought, with ſuch rapid and fatal ſucceſs. It has been already explained to the Houſe, what early and authentic intelligence of the hoſtile deſigns of Hyder Ally, appears to have been received by the Governor and Council of Fort Saint George, and what ſteps they had taken by negotiation to prevent the attack, or by defenſive preparation to repel it.

But in the courſe of this particular inveſtigation into the previous meaſures of the Madras Preſidency, there having been diſcovered among their Records ſeveral ſuggeſtions of other cauſes extrinſic to their own conduct, and which, though ariſing at a diſtance, might be ſuppoſed, by connection or control, to have had a material effect in weakening the powers of their Government, and giving advantage to the enemy; your Committee conſidered an examination of thoſe ſuggeſtions to be incumbent upon them; and thought that they ſhould not have completed, with the impartiality they are anxious to give proof of, the duty entruſted to them, if they did not purſue every probable cauſe, however diſtant, and involved in whatever difficulties, of events ſo intereſting to the honour and welfare of the Britiſh nation, and her dependencies.

And they have received, with great ſatisfaction, an encouragement and confirmation to their opinion and intentions, by the declared ſentiments of the Houſe, at the time when the Committee was revived, at the opening of this Seſſion of Parliament. Theſe conſiderations have naturally and neceſſarily directed the immediate proſecution of their renewed enquiries, to collect and lay before the Houſe an account of the conduct and circumſtances of the Maratta war. It has appeared to the Houſe from a former Report, that the Preſidency of Fort Saint George had openly attributed a part of their misfortunes, ariſing from the inſufficiency of their force and reſources, and the defenceleſs ſtate of the Carnatic at the time of the irruption of Hyder Ally, to the war in which the two other Preſidencies of Bengal and Bombay had impoliticly involved the Company's poſſeſſions with the Maratta nation, and in ſupport of which, at the requiſition of thoſe Preſidencies, a conſiderable body of troops on the Madras eſtabliſhment had been ſent to Bombay and Surat. Theſe circumſtances were ſaid to have much influenced the deſigns of Hyder Ally; becauſe he by this means found it eaſy to make his own peace with the Marattas, and received additional encouragement to carry into execution his intended invaſion upon the territories of the Company, and of their ally the Nabob Mahomed Ali, in the Carnatic, while they were thus deprived, not only of the aſſiſtance of the other Preſidencies, but alſo of a conſiderable part of their own forces. In order to make the Houſe more competent judges of the truth and extent of this charge, your Committee have thought it proper to carry back their inveſtigation to that period in the year 1774, when the Preſidency of Bombay ſeized upon Salſette and the adjacent iſlands, which appears to have been the firſt open act of hoſtility againſt the Marattas, and to have been followed by a Treaty with Raghonaut Row, for the purpoſe of aſſiſting him in conſideration of certain conceſſions to the Company, to recover poſſeſſion of the Peſhwaſhip, or chief rule of the Maratta ſtate, over which a great confederacy had in his ſtead placed an infant, the real or ſuppoſititious ſon of Narayan Row, the deceaſed Peſhwa.

For as the ſubject of this enquiry is new and extenſive, involving in it a neceſſity of frequent references, not only to the particular ſituation of the Company's Settlements, but alſo to the general ſtate of political connections and intereſts in India; and as the ſingular conſtitution, as well as the actual condition of the Maratta empire, will be found to have operated with eſſential influence at the beginning, and during the continuance of the war which your Committee are to treat of, they think it improper to break at once abruptly into a mere narrative of events, without laying a previous ground-work of local information, by which alone a fair and ready judgment can be formed, of the wiſdom or impolicy, of the equity or injuſtice, of the political and military proceedings in queſtion.

The conſtitution and eſtabliſhment of a new plan of adminiſtration in Bengal, by which that Preſidency became entruſted to many eſſential purpoſes, with a ſuperintending power over the reſt of the Britiſh Governments, and by which the general ſyſtem of Indian affairs was materially affected, appears to your Committee, to be the proper æra in which to take a view of the political perſpective, and to make a ſlight ſketch of its general outline.

Extract from the Act 13th Geo III. c. 63. Appendix, No. 1.

The Act, intituled, "An Act for eſtabliſhing certain "Regulations for the better Management of the Affairs "of the Eaſt India Company, as well in India as in "Europe," was paſſed in the 13th year of His preſent Majeſty. The general clauſes in it, which regarded only matters at home, were to take effect from and after the 1ſt October 1773; ſuch as extended in their operation to the Eaſt Indies, were not to be in force till the 1ſt Auguſt 1774. But your Committee find it provided, that for the Government of the Preſidency of Fort William in Bengal, there ſhould be appointed a Governor General and Four Counſellors, who ſhould have the ſame powers, as were then or at any time might have been exerciſed by the Preſident and Council, or Select Committee, in the kingdoms of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa. The opinion of the majority was in all caſes of difference to decide the queſtion; and where the numbers preſent ſhould by any accident be equally divided, the Governor General, or in his abſence the next Senior Member, were to have a caſting voice. Then follows a clauſe, by which a ſuperintending and controlling power was given to them in the following words:

"And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, that the ſaid Governor General and Council, or the major part of them, ſhall have, and they are hereby authorized to have power of ſuperintending and controlling the government and management of the Preſidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bencoolen reſpectively, ſo far, and in ſo much, as that it ſhall not be lawful for any Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, or Bencoolen, for the time being, to make any orders for commencing hoſtilities, or declaring or making war againſt any Indian Princes or Powers, or for negotiating or concluding any treaty of peace, or other treaty, with any ſuch Indian Princes or Powers, without the conſent and approbation of the ſaid Governor General and Council firſt had and obtained, except in ſuch caſes of imminent neceſſity as would render it dangerous to poſtpone ſuch hoſtilities or treaties until the orders from the Governor General and Council might arrive; and except in ſuch caſes where the ſaid Preſidents and Councils reſpectively ſhall have received ſpecial orders from the ſaid United Company: and any Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, or Bencoolen, who ſhall offend in any of the caſes aforeſaid, ſhall be liable to be ſuſpended from his or their office, by the order of the ſaid Governor General and Council; and every Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, and Bencoolen, for the time being, ſhall, and they are hereby reſpectively directed and required to pay due obedience to ſuch orders as they ſhall receive, touching the premiſes, from the ſaid Governor General and Council for the time being, and conſtantly and diligently to tranſmit to the ſaid Governor General and Council, advice and intelligence of all tranſactions and matters whatſoever, that ſhall come to their knowledge, relating to the Government, Revenues, or Intereſt of the ſaid United Company."

In the ſame clauſe the Governor General and Council were directed to obey the orders of the Court of Directors, and to tranſmit regular advices to them; which, within a limited time, they (the Directors) ſhould lay before one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of ſtate.

Mr. Haſtings was appointed the firſt Governor General; General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, Mr. Barwell, and Mr. Francis, the firſt Counſellors; and they were to hold their offices for five years, from the time of their arival in Bengal, and of their taking upon them the Government of that Preſidency, and not to be removable in the meantime, except by the King, upon repreſentation made by the Court of Directors. The next in rank was appointed to ſucceed in caſe of any avoidance of the office of Governor General, and the Court of Directors were impowered to ſupply the vacant place of any Counſellor, with the conſent of his Majeſty, under his ſign manual, during the firſt five years. The powers of Government, until ſuch appointment ſhould be made, were to continue in the meantime in the remaining body. After the firſt five years the nomination was to be in the Court of Directors.

The eſtabliſhment of a Board of Trade, and Regulations for the conduct of thoſe matters, which were made the particular objects of that juriſdiction, formed alſo a material part of this Act.

And your Committee alſo find herein a prohibitory clauſe againſt receiving, directly or indirectly, any preſent, gift, donation, gratuity, or reward, pecuniary or otherwiſe, or any promiſe or engagement for them, and againſt the carrying on, or being concerned in, any dealings or tranſactions, by way of traffic or commerce of any kind whatſoever, (the trade and commerce of the United Company only excepted); and the firſt of theſe prohibitions were extended not only to any Governor General or Members of the Supreme Council, and to any Chief Juſtice or Member of the Supreme Court of Judicature, but alſo againſt every perſon holding a civil or a military office under the Crown or the Company. The latter was directed only againſt any Governor General and Council, and any Chief Juſtice or Member of the Supreme Court of Judicature, and againſt all Collectors, Superviſors, and any of his Majeſty's ſubjects employed in the collection of the Revenues.

All the proviſions relative to the Governor General and Council were enacted by another clauſe, to commence from the time that public proclamation ſhould be made of their arrival, or of any three of them, at Fort William in Bengal, which proclamation they were required to make.

And your Committee find, that Mr. Haſtings and Mr. Barwell were at that time in India, Mr. Haſtings being Governor, and Mr. Barwell one of the Members of the exiſting Council of the Preſidency of Bengal; that the three other Gentlemen left England in the month of April 1774; and that, previous to their departure, the Court of Directors had agreed upon a body of inſtructions, which were approved by Counſel as legal and and conſiſtent with the proviſions of the Act—Theſe, dated 29th March, appear to be addreſſed to the Governor General and Council of Fort William in Bengal, and will be found in the Appendix, N°

N. B. They ſailed in the Anſon, April 11, 1774.

Appendix, No. 2.

Your Committee will only obſerve in this place, that they are introduced with an earneſt recommendation to the Board "of the moſt perfect harmony amongſt themſelves, as an object of the higheſt concern to the proſperity of the Company, and the due execution of the great truſt repoſed in them;" and with a direction, "that they ſhould fix their attention to the preſervation "of peace throughout India, and to the ſecurity of the "Poſſeſſions and Revenues of the Company." And in regard to the controlling power over the other Settlements, in matters of treaty, and on queſtions of making peace or war, your Committee find this general direction:

"That you attentively view the general poſture of "our affairs in India, reſpecting the country powers, "their intereſts, and probable connections with each "other, with us, and other European nations; and that "you take ſuch meaſures as ſhall, upon the whole, be "moſt conducive to our general intereſt; and in all "your deliberations and reſolutions, that you make the "ſafety and proſperity of Bengal your principal object."

28 Auguſt 1771. Par. 32. 18 December 1771. 7 April 1773, Par. 28.

But your Committee have obſerved, that previous to theſe regulations, thus ſanctified and enforced by parliamentary authority, the Court of Directors had inſtructed the exiſting Adminiſtration, and particularly Governor Haſtings, to be watchful of every opportunity to reduce and regulate the expences of their Government and its dependencies, and to be earneſtly attentive to an enquiry into the conduct of their Servants under that Preſidency.

Appendix, No. 4.

And in a Letter of the 16th April 1773 to the Governor, they expreſſed an high approbation of his ſervices, and encouraged him to proceed in the arrangements he had ſo happily begun, under aſſurance of their protection and ſupport, and with this expreſs direction: "We "deſire particularly, that you will diſtinguiſh and encourage merit, wherever you find it; ſo do we moſt "ſtrictly conjure you not to ſuffer rank, ſtation, or any "connection or conſideration whatever, to deter you "from bringing every oppreſſion to light, and every "offender, Native and European, to condign puniſhment."—And in their Letter of the ſame date to the Council, they deſired them to aſſiſt their Preſident with their unanimous efforts for the full accompliſhment of all regulations.

Letter from Governor Haſtings, 1 Septem.ber 1772.

Letter to Preſident and Council, 16 April 1773. Par. 1, 2, 3.

See alſo Letter from Governor and Council of Bengal, 1 September 1772, Par. 2 and 3. From Do. to Ditto, 19 November 1772, Par. 1 and 6.

And we perceive that the Governor, in the anſwer which he ſent to the Court in acknowledgment of the favour and kindneſs ſhewn to him, "found himſelf "under the neceſſity of avowing his inability to obey "their commands in regard to an effectual enquiry into "the conduct of their Servants;" and he at the ſame time declared, in excuſe of the behaviour not only of individuals, but of the collective Members of former Adminiſtrations, "that the blame was not ſo much im"putable to them, as to the want of a principle of Go"vernment adequate to its ſubſtance, and a coerſive "power to enforce it," and he remarked upon the incompetency of their conſtitution, "for the Government "of a great Kingdom, under ancient charters, which "were framed merely for the juriſdiction of trading "Settlements." He rejoiced therefore, in being appriſed of an intended change in the ſyſtem of law and polity, and after pointing out ſuch actual defects, as ſeemed to him to require correction, he ſuggeſted certain regulations for that purpoſe, with an excuſe, for the appearance of thereby ſeeking to gratify his own ambition; as he principally recommended the propriety of increaſing the power and duration of the office of Governor, by an expoſition of the miſchiefs which aroſe from its weakneſs and inſtability.

Letter from Governor Haſtings, 11 November 1773.

Appendix, No. 5.

But in order to proſecute the plan which we have announced, and to lay before the Houſe the fulleſt information of the ſtate of the Company's territorial and other poſſeſſions, and of the Revenues ariſing therefrom, under the Preſidencies of Bengal and Bombay, previous to the arrival of the Members of the new Adminiſtration, your Committee have arranged the ſeveral particulars in a methodical chart, by which they may be ſeen and examined at one comprehenſive view. And we have thought it proper to begin this repreſentation at that period, when the Report of your Secret Committee, appointed in the year 1772, cloſed the ſtate of Accounts, which had then been laſt tranſmitted from India.

In the ſame deſign your preſent Committee here further exhibit to the Houſe, a conciſe Abſtract of the annual deductions which thoſe Preſidencies were, by Treaty or otherwiſe, obliged to make out of their Revenues to the ſeveral country powers; and alſo a detail of the expences which were incurred in each year for the adminiſtration of the Civil Government.

The condition of the public treaſuries, and the amount of the bonded, and other debts, will be placed in the ſame order and method, and hereby every ſubject of Revenue will be at once within reach, for occaſional reference and inſpection.

After theſe, your Committee have, upon the ſame plan, and for the like purpoſes, put together the materials from which the ſtate and circumſtances of the Military Eſtabliſhment were drawn, and may be as readily ſurveyed. The number, quality, and diſtribution of the troops, both European and Natives, in the Company's Service under thoſe Governments, compoſe this head of information, and it is completed by an annexed Account of the Charges which attended them.

(Signed) Robert Kyd, Town Major.

IN carrying forward our inquiries into the ſtate of alliance or other connection between the Engliſh ſettlements in queſtion and the country powers, your Committee think it proper to introduce the relation, which we have to ſubmit to the Houſe upon that ſubject, with ſome remarks on the orders ſent by the Court of Directors to their principal Servants, who conducted the adminiſtration of their affairs in India. The plan preſcribed for their political tranſactions with the native powers ſeems uniformly, before the eſtabliſhment of the new adminiſtration, to have been formed with a view to the preſervation of peace, and a prohibition from all ſchemes of conqueſt. It does indeed appear, that the Court of Directors, upon information of the ravages committed by the Marattas on the territories of the King and Souja Dowla, and alſo on thoſe of the Rohillas and Jauts, all of whom had been thereupon apparently ſunk into deſpondence, manifeſted their indignation at the puſillanimity of the two greater potentates, while they expreſſed more concern than ſurprize at the conduct of the leſſer powers, becauſe the King and the Vizier might, by an united effort with thoſe people, have effectually repelled the common enemy. But in regard to carrying their arms beyond the bounds of their own dominions, they were not diſpoſed to authorize ſuch proceedings, till they ſhould receive more convincing accounts of their expediency; and in the meantime they truſted, that the ſole objects of their Servants would be the ſecurity of their poſſeſſions, and thoſe of the powers with whom they were connected both by treaty and intereſt. And when, in the beginning of the year 1773, they diſcovered a very anxious deſire to acquire the actual poſſeſſion of Chunar Gur, they alſo took care to explain the motives of it in the following terms: "The importance of this poſt "being the ground of our deſire to have it in our poſ- "ſeſſion, we cannot be ſuppoſed to aim hereby at "extending our acquiſitions, ſince this can only be con- "ſidered as giving ſecurity to what we already poſſeſs "in the kingdom of Bengal."

But your Committee find, that the Preſident and Select Committee of Fort William, in their Letter, dated September 20th 1772, had declared their previous reſolution to conduct themſelves by that rule, which they had of their own accord conceived to be moſt prudent, and moſt conducive to prevent the being drawn into any unneceſſary war. And in a ſubſequent Letter, dated 10th November 1772, they repeated the ſame determination, with an additional aſſurance of ſincerity and ſatisfaction in adopting the meaſures recommended by the Company; and they claimed ſome merit from their having acted in conformity to them before ſuch orders had reached them, promiſing not to ſuffer the ambitious temper of the Vizier to engage them further than in the paſſive defence of his dominions, and in affording him that that countenance and ſupport which, by the nature of their connections with him, they conceived themſelves bound to beſtow.

But in order to explain with more clearneſs and extent the ſituation and the diſpoſitions of the country powers, as far as they appear to have affected the policy of the Britiſh Governments, and to have had any influence on their conduct at that period, your Committee will take a ſhort and diſtinct view of each, as we find them repreſented in the ſeveral records of the Company, which we have conſulted for that purpoſe.

And your Committee find, that the ſmall remains of that puiſſance and ſplendour, which had dignified and decorated the throne of the Moguls, was now daily conſuming away under the feeble Government of their ſucceſſor Shaw Allum. The great Dependencies and Revenues of the empire had been ſquandered and torn from it, to become the prey of the ſervants and ſupporters of the crown. The independent greatneſs of its former vaſſals now hardly allowed the mere name of ſubordination; and the King was apparently ſuffered to retain poſſeſſion of the ſcanty relics of dominion, becauſe mutual jealouſy alone prevented the extinction or uſurpation of his titular ſovereignty; which, beſides, was made uſe of as a political pageant to attract ſome ſmall popularity to the party which carried it with them. Yet it appears to your Committee, that in this decline of his power, he was gone to Delhi, where the grandeur of his family had, for near 300 years, been uſed to ſhine with ſuperior brightneſs, to expoſe himſelf to contempt by the idle parade of a coronation, which he thought indiſpenſable for the exerciſe of his impotent ſovereignty; and, "in the more idle ſcheme of reſtoring the Mogul "empire to its ancient dignity and extent."

See Appendix, No. 6.

See Sir R. Barker's Minute, Appendix, No. 13.

It muſt be obſerved, that the provinces of Corah and Currah, which, by the treaty of Iliabad in 1765, had been allotted to him for his royal reſidence and demeſne, were, perhaps from neceſſity, previouſly abandoned by him; and ſo imprudent, or ſo unfortunate had he been in the choice and in the change of his friends and allies, that he, by theſe means, afforded a pretence or colour of juſtice to thoſe who were ſtripping him of almoſt the laſt reſervation for his bare ſubſiſtence. The Marattas, whom he had called to his aſſiſtance, compelled him to make a ſurrender to them of the very prize, for the preſervation of which their aid had been ſolicited by him; and the Government of Bengal deemed themſelves thereby juſtified in reſuming thoſe provinces into their own hands.—And your Committee find them to have reaſoned as follows upon this occaſion: "In no ſhape "can this compulſatory ceſſion by the King releaſe us "from the obligation we are under to defend theſe pro- "vinces which we have ſo particularly guaranteed to "him, and which his own Viceroy, Munnar ul Dowlah, "at this time puts under our protection. Independent "of our own conviction of the propriety of this plan, "your orders in the 5th paragraph of your Letter of "30th June 1769, on a caſe exactly parallel to that be- "fore us, left us without an option." And when they afterwards reſolved on making a ſecond diſpoſal of theſe provinces to their own better advantage, they adduced an argument of ſimilar juſtification, becauſe (to uſe their own expreſſion) "they ſhould not reſume them from "the King, whoſe property and right were annulled by "his own alienation of them, but from the Marattas, "the now proprietors."

It may further be deduced from other of their expreſſions, that it was to mark their reſentment of his diffidence in their ſupport, and of his proceeding to Delhi, in oppoſition to their ſtrenuous remonſtrances, that they had at the ſame time come to a reſolution of diſcontinuing the tribute, which they were engaged to pay him, for the grant of the Dewannees of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa. It muſt be obſerved, that another motive was aſſigned by them, in the lowneſs of their treaſury, and their inability to diſcharge the arrears; motives which might perhaps have with at leaſt equal juſtice, though not with the like avail, been urged by the King for a reſumption of the Dewannee: and indeed we ſhould not omit to remark, that an argument of this nature was uſed by the General, Sir Robert Barker, in his diſſent and proteſt againſt theſe meaſures.

Alſo Sec. Letter to Court of Directors, 10 Dec. 1772. Par. 4. Ibid. See alſo Letter to Col. Champion, 6th October 1774, in Appendix 28.

It appears, however, that a long time previous to theſe tranſactions, the Court of Directors had written to their adminiſtration at Bengal upon the ſubject of the King's deſire and deſign of going to Delhi, and forbad them to continue one of the Company's brigades at Allahabad, which he had earneſtly requeſted. And in regard to the probable conſequences of this refuſal they ſeemed little ſolicitous; but they obſerved upon the poſſibility of his throwing himſelf into the hands of the Marattas, that in ſuch caſe they ſhould be diſengaged from him, and that ſuch a ſtep might open a fair opportunity of withholding the 26 lacks, which they then paid as a tribute for the Dewannees.

Par. 32, 33, 34, 35. Sel. Letter to Bengal, 11 November 1768. Appendix, No. 14.

Upon this occaſion, however, your Committee find, that the Nabob Vizier, Souja ul Dowla, one of the great independent Servants of the empire, was the object whom the Bengal Preſidency choſe to favour with the ſpoils of the Emperor; but it is at the ſame time to be noticed, that they did not make a free gift of them, but ſtipulated for a conſideration of a large ſum in ready money, and the entire expence of the troops which ſhould be employed in caſe of requiſition for the defence of the Vizier's dominions. By the treaty of Illahabah in 1765, the guarantee of them was not engaged on ſuch advantageous terms to the Company; and it now appeared to the Calcutta Board, more deſirable to improve the conditions of it, and to procure a ſum of money for their treaſury (which, as we have remarked above, was in ſo impoveriſhed a ſtate) than to ſeize the opportunity of acquiring the provinces of Chunar and Gauzipore, in exchange for thoſe of Korah and Currah; it being thought at all events not adviſable themſelves to retain poſſeſſion of them, becauſe of the diſtance from Bengal, and the conſequent expence of their protection. Having therefore determined to diſpoſe of them on the beſt terms that could be had, and the King's helpleſs ſtate being held an inſuperable objection to their ſurrendering them to him, they conſidered that the pretenſions of the Vizier came next in preference on many accounts; but particularly as being conſonant to the Company's orders.

Inſtructions to Gov. Haſtings, No. 13.

Your Committee indeed have obſerved, that the Court of Directors had enjoined the Government of Bengal to uſe their endeavours to effect an exchange of the provinces abovementioned, while in poſſeſſion of the King, for thoſe of Chunar and Gauzipore, with a view to make his Majeſty's ſituation more neighbouring on their own poſſeſſions under that Preſidency; but by withholding the tribute due for the Dewannee, the adminiſtration thought, according to their conſtruction of the Company's motives, that they had ſuperſeded the expediency of the exchange for ſuch a purpoſe. And it appears to have been the declared opinion of the Governor, that they acted on true political grounds of advantage to the Company, in ſeeking to increaſe the power and influence of their ally, the Nabob Vizier; and indeed we find this principle to have been an avowed inducement, ſecond only to the conſideration of the pecuniary benefits ariſing therefrom, for conſenting alſo to the ſupport of the Vizier in an expedition againſt the Rohillas with the Company's brigade, and in that inſtance to tranſgreſs the extent of the defenſive line, which was preſcribed by the regulations of treaty, and the orders of the Company; we ſhould not omit to take notice, that there was a further motive declared, which pointed out this meaſure as the ſureſt means of acquiring another barrier to the Vizier's country againſt the incurſions of the Marattas, whom it was only wiſhed to keep at a diſtance, without the neceſſity of entering into a war with them.

Inſtructions to the Governor.

Your Committee do not mean in theſe introductory obſervations to enter into a very circumſtantial diſcuſſion of particular tranſactions, or of the arguments by which the Government explained the motives of their conduct on theſe occaſions. We ſhall confine ourſelves to material facts, and only invite the attention of the Houſe to a reference in the Appendixes for ſuch authorities and reaſonings, as we eſteem eſſential to their explanatory illuſtration.

Your Committee indeed find, that the conſtant profeſſion of the Bengal Government was the protection of their allies, without forming any deſigns againſt other people, and ſo ſtrict were they in exacting obedience to their orders againſt carrying the forces beyond the bounds of limitation, that they expreſſed ſome diſſatisfaction at the General for a very momentary deviation from them. Yet this ſhould ſeem to have ariſen more from a principle of diſcipline than policy, as in a Letter under an earlier date to the Court of Directors, they recommended the advantages of a greater latitude for action; and eſpecially in regard to the Marattas, they ſeemed to think, that (as they could never be abſolutely aſſured againſt the enterprizes of ſo capricious a nation) "if "they were to have a war with them, it would be better "to meet them beyond the line of their own frontiers; "ſupporting the Vizier their beſt barrier; their expences "paid; and in a manner defending themſelves rather "than to be confined to their own poſſeſſions, and their "own reſources."

And it appears (with a view to the ſame object) to have been the wiſh of the General at that time, that the Marattas might boldly advance to an attack upon the Korah province, by which means it would be within the reach of his inſtructions to come to ſome deciſive conflict with them, and an end might thereby be put to the ineffectual campaigns in that quarter. In this hope however he was diſappointed, as they ſtill avoided a general action; the Company's brigade therefore took poſſeſſion of the provinces, and a Member of the Bengal Board was ſent to receive charge of them from the General, becauſe they required the immediate ſuperintendance of a perſon well ſkilled in the buſineſs of the Revenues. In a ſhort time after this, the Governor, as will appear by the Papers ſubjoined in the Appendix, No, 18, proceeded to a conference with the Vizier at Benares, upon the deſign of ſurrendering them to him.

Letter from the Governor at Benares to Court of Directors, dated 20 September 1773. Appendix, No. 19.

Sec. Letter from Bengal, 22 October 1773. Bengal, Sec. Conſ. 4th October 1773; 7th and 12th Oct. D° in Appendix, Nos. 12, 13, and 33.

It appears to your Committee, that the Bengal Council wrote from their Secret Department to the Court of Directors, on the 12th October 1773, and informed them of the Governor's return, about a week before, from the interview with the Vizier; and that he had brought with him the original of a new Treaty concluded between them. And we perceive that the Board tranſmitted this Treaty to the Court with copies of the inſtructions which they had given to the Governor, and his report on his return, with all the Papers referred to in it, together with the Conſultations, Minutes, &c. at large, which had paſſed upon it. Theſe your Committee have placed in the Appendix, N° 19. and they contain very full information on the ſubject. The material points of agreement, which we find therein repreſented, were the ceſſion of the provinces of Korah and Illahabad to the Vizier, on condition of his paying fifty lacks of rupees to the Company, twenty of which in ready money, and the remainder in equal payments at the expiration of one or two years. And the equivalent which the Vizier was to pay for the charge of their troops, when ſent to his aſſiſtance at his requiſition, was ſtipulated at two lacks and ten thouſand rupees per month, inſtead of the payments of thirty thouſand, fixed by General Smith in the year 1767, and augmented in the two laſt campaigns to one lack fifteen thouſand.

See Appendix, No. 12.

In regard to the engagements entered into with the Vizier, for an attack on the Rohilla country, your Committee find, by the Governor's Minute of the 12th October, that he had aſſented to that propoſition for the general reaſons abovementioned. But by a Letter from the Select Committee to the Court of Directors, dated 11th October, we perceive, that in addition to the apparent expediency of preventing the Marattas from making an impreſſion on that quarter, to which they chiefly directed their operations, and of gaining thereby an inroad into the Vizier's country, there was another inducement which ſeems to have been the more immediate ground of Soujah Dowlah's application for the aſſiſtance of the Company's troops. One of the Rohilla Chiefs, by name Hafez Rhamet Cawn, whoſe territories lay contiguous to thoſe of the Vizier and to the province of Korah, had formerly entered into a treaty with him, in which he agreed to pay him forty lacks of rupees for his protection and aſſiſtance, the half of which ſum the Vizier promiſed to pay the Company in conſideration of the ſuperior part they took in theſe tranſactions. But it afterwards appearing that Hafez Rhamet was rather backward in fulfilling his engagements, and eſpecially after the retreat of the Marattas, when, being under no preſent apprehenſions from the enemy, he began to plead inability, and the neceſſity of conſulting the other Chiefs; the Vizier, exaſperated at this delay, reſolved to force a compliance, by invading his territories, and in caſe of further refuſal, to add them to his own dominions; for which purpoſe he ſolicited the aid and concurrence of the Bengal adminiſtration. This appears to have been a ſubject of conſideration in the Select Committee, before the time when the Governor went to meet the Vizier at Benares. And indeed, in a ſubſequent account of theſe affairs, the Governor himſelf ſtated that this enterprize, the deſign of which furniſhed the firſt occaſion of his meeting the Vizier, formed an Article in the original draft of that Treaty, but was afterwards omitted at the deſire of Soujah Dowlah; to whom he however promiſed, that it ſhould ſtill take place if it ſuited the affairs of the Company at any other time.

See Sir Robert Barker's Letters on this ſubject, and the Treaty with Hafez Rhamet, and other Papers of information on this ſubject. Appendix, No. 21.

See Governor General's Minute, 25th October 1774. Appendix, No. 45.

And it appears that two Letters from the Vizier to the Preſident were recorded on the Select Conſultations of the 19th November, in which he renewed his propoſitions, and reminding the Governor of what had paſſed between them at Benares, he deſired to procure the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh brigade on the terms then agreed to, for the puniſhment and extermination of the Rohillas.

Ben. Sel. Conſ. 19th November 1773. Appendix, No. 22.

The Select Committee immediately and unanimouſly reſolved to grant him the ſupport required, thinking the terms highly advantageous to the Company, not only on account of the ſum, which was ultimately ſtipulated as a conſideration for the ſervice, but by relieving them from the heavy expence of a large part of their army; provided they had full aſſurance and ſecurity of his intention and ability to make good the many payments which would from that event be due to them. By the terms indeed of the preſent propoſition, your Committee find that an attack was meditated not only againſt the Rohillas, but alſo on the Doaub, or the country lying between the Jumma and the Ganges, beyond the province of Korah. And in the anſwer which was drawn up and aſſented to in the Select Committee, to theſe Letters, they expreſſed ſome difficulties about the deſign againſt the Doaub, becauſe of the peremptory orders of the Company againſt diſtant expeditions; but they intimated to him, that if he ſhould engage in a war beyond their borders, and ſhould ſtand in need of aſſiſtance, they certainly could not ſit ſtill and ſee his danger without endeavouring to relieve him, and for that reaſon they hoped he would avoid an enterprize at that diſtance.

Sel. Conſ. 22d Nov. 1773. D°.

Concerning the country of the Rohillas, they were ready to agree to whatever was formerly propoſed at Benares, only repeating the terms very explicitly, and inſiſting on the neceſſity of perſeverance, if the enterprize was once undertaken, till it ſhould be accompliſhed; without which aſſurance, they recommended a ſuſpenſion of the project till a more favourable time, "as they "could not hazard or anſwer for the effects of the Com-"pany's diſpleaſure, if they ſhould find themſelves in-"volved in a fruitleſs war, or in an expence for the pro-"ſecution of it." If however he was ſatisfied of his abilities, and would aſſure them of his reſolution to perform form the conditions, they gave him authority to ſummon the brigade to Dinapore to his aſſiſtance, whenever he pleaſed.

But we perceive, that ſome doubts having ariſen concerning the regularity of the Committee's iſſuing the neceſſary orders of their ſole authority, it was agreed that the proceedings of the 19th, as well as the Letter to the Vizier recorded on the 22d, ſhould be ſubmitted to the Council at large.

And it appears that this reference was made to them in their Secret Department, on the 26th of the ſame month, when the Preſident introduced this propoſal and requiſition of the Vizier's, and the proceedings of the Committee, with an explanatory Minute in recommendation of an agreement with their reſolutions, ſtating the circumſtances of what had paſſed in the conference at Benares relative to this ſubject, though he at the ſame time ſtrongly pointed out his own difficulties in bringing himſelf to adopt ſuch a meaſure at that juncture, which difficulties he obſerved muſt alſo have conſiderable weight with them, as their reſponſibility would be great in an unuſual degree, becauſe the circumſtances of the Company were unfavourable at home, "expoſed to popular "clamour, all their meaſures liable to be canvaſſed in "Parliament, their charter drawing to a cloſe, and his "Majeſty's Miniſters unqueſtionably ready to take ad- "vantage of every unfavourable circumſtance in the "negotiations for its renewal."

Ben. Sel. Conſ. 26th Nov. 1773. Appendix, No. 23. See alſo General Barker's Minute of Diſſent under ſame date.

The Board were induced by theſe repreſentations of the Governor, to concur in the whole of the plan adopted by the Committee. In the account which they ſoon afterwards tranſmitted of theſe matters to the Court of Directors, they obſerved, that without heſitation they had diſapproved of the deſign againſt the Doaub; and in regard to that of the Rohilla expedition, they thought it expedient not immediately to diſmiſs it, though it appeared adviſable to avoid (as far as they could conſiſtently with their cloſe connection with the Vizier) engaging at that juncture in a plan of conqueſt over the Rohilla provinces: that it had therefore been reſolved to make the terms of their compliance ſuch as from their nature ſhould induce him to relinquiſh the project, out of regard to his own intereſt. It will appear, by referring to the Appendix, in which theſe Papers are placed at length, that the General, who was the only Member of the Board preſent who was not alſo a Member of the Committee, recorded his reaſons againſt the meaſures of attacking thoſe diſtricts.

Sec. Letter from Ben. 30 Dec. 1773. Appendix, No. 24.

In a former Appendix will be found an extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee to the Court of Directors, dated 31ſt December 1773, wherein they gave a ſhort account of the introductory ſteps to theſe proceedings, and of the motives of their conduct in the proſecution of them, declaring, "that from the "aſſurances given to the Vizier by the Preſident at Be- "nares, on the firſt projection of the enterprize, they "thought themſelves not at liberty to reject it."

See Appendix, No. 16.

But your Committee find, that the Vizier had taken advantage of the abſence of the Marattas, whom the diſſenſions in their own Government had called back into the Decan, to enter into the province of the Doaub, and to engage in the reduction of the forts which they yet held poſſeſſion of in it; and the Select Committee expreſſed ſome apprehenſions, that he might make uſe of the liberty they had found themſelves under the neceſſity of granting him, to call for the ſervice of the brigade, which had been removed for that purpoſe from Dinapore to Patna. It will alſo be obſerved, that they made profeſſions of their adopting with diffidence a meaſure of ſuch conſequence, without the orders and ſentiments of the Company, and they therefore earneſtly deſired to know, "if they ſhould implicitly adhere to the defenſive "line hitherto preſcribed to them, or extend their views "to bounds more remote;" giving at the ſame time an account of the ſtate of the neighbouring powers, and adding thereupon the following obſervation: "we ſhould "not regard the Marattas themſelves in a light of much "more importance, were the force and connections of "the three Preſidencies united under one active con- "troul, which we do not heſitate to foretel will, when- "ever ſuch a plan ſhall take place, render you the ſo- "vereign arbiters of Hindoſtan, while the preſent ſyſtem "continues."

Appendix, No. 24. Sel. Letter, 9th Nov. from Bengal. Do.

But your Committee find, that the Vizier, on the firſt receipt of the Preſident's Letter to him, declined the acceptance of the Company's aid on the terms propoſed, though he requeſted to have the brigade ſtationed within a convenient call to the defence of his own dominions, if they ſhould be attacked. And the Government of Bengal, who teſtified their ſatisfaction at having put the end they wiſhed to that affair, very readily acquieſced in this laſt deſire, conſidering the provinces of Corah and Illiabad to be included in the line of defence. The accounts indeed, which they continued to receive from Poonah, made it very improbable that the Marattas would be at liberty to appear with any offenſive force in Hindoſtan.

Letter from Gov. and Council in Sec. Depart. Jan. 17, 1774. The Vizier's Letter alſo. Appendix, No. 25.

The reſolution however of the Vizier ſeems to have ſoon undergone another change, and he demanded the aſſiſtance of the brigade on the terms required, his object being ſtill the reduction of the Rohilla country between the Ganges and the Mountains, to which the Preſidency limited the employment of their troops upon this occaſion, as appears by the inſtructions ſent to the Commander; and they expreſſed much pleaſure in this requiſition of Soujah Dowla, becauſe it would tend to preſerve the troops from inaction and relaxation of diſcipline; the conqueſt would probably be attended with no difficulty, and the reward of the ſervices was to be forty lacks of rupees, beſide the ſtipulated monthly ſubſidy for the payment of the army.

Appendix, No. 26. See Letter 15 March 1774. See Bengal Secret Conſult. 3 and 14 Feb. 1774.

And your Committee find, that the operations of the united forces were attended with very great ſucceſs; and the Governor and Council, on the 24th May, wrote a congratulatory Letter to the Court of Directors, on the happy accompliſhment of the undertaking, began and decided almoſt in the ſame inſtant of time, and on the right which they had unqueſtionably acquired to the ſum ſtipulated for the ſervice. It ſoon however afterwards appeared, that there ſtill remained ſome part of the country, and ſome relics of force aſſembled under Fizoola Cawn, which it was neceſſary to reduce, and Colonel Champion was prevailed upon to put his troops again in the field for that purpoſe, though the ſeaſon of the rains was already ſet in; but freſh advices from Poonah, of the ſettlement of the Marratta diviſions, and intimations of ſome hoſtile ſteps taken by the King (at which indeed the Bengal Government ſeem neither to have been ſurprized or alarmed) made it however be thought at all events adviſable to accelerate the completion of that buſineſs, before any material obſtacle ſhould intervene. And we perceive, that the Colonel advanced by eaſy marches to Patter Ghur, from whence the Rohillas retreated into the hills on his approach, and left him by that means in poſſeſſion of the whole country. He conſidered himſelf indeed as precluded from making any further movements to diſtreſs or attack the enemy, as he ſhould thereby tranſgreſs the limits preſcribed him; but it is to be obſerved, that the Governor and Council ſent inſtructions, giving him a latitude of action beyond the limits to which he thought himſelf reſtricted, and it was therefore expected that the war would be brought to a ſpeedy iſſue, either by accelerating an agreement, or attacking and diſperſing the enemy.

It appears, indeed, that they thought themſelves entitled, from what had already been accompliſhed by the co-operation of their forces, to demand the payment of the forty lacks from the Vizier; who however requeſted a further delay, till he had entirely ſubdued the Rohilla army; and in conſideration of his former punctuality, and of the riſk which their inſiſting on the performance of his engagement at that time might occaſion to the advantageous concluſion of hoſtilities, they agreed to wait for that event, which they were confident would be fortunate.

Letter from Governor and Council, Bengal, 19th Oct. Letter dated 22 Aug. alſo Letter from Gov. Haſtings to Colonel Champion, dated 16 Sept.—alſo from Sel. Committee to Do. 17 and 19 Sept. 1774.

They had little dread of any interruption from the Mahrattas, as all internal diſſenſions were far from being accommodated in that empire. But it ſhould ſeem that the enjoyment of this good fortune was however likely to be diſturbed before its entire accompliſhment, by a more ſerious competition with the King; in whoſe name, and in virtue of a pretended Treaty, Nudjif Cawn was ſaid to be on his march with a conſiderable army, to demand a moiety of the conqueſts made upon the Rohillas. This circumſtance had occaſioned ſome uncertainty to the Commanding Officer of the Company's brigade in what manner to act; but here again the Board removed the difficulty, by giving him immediate inſtructions to pay no regard to this claim, nor ſuppoſe the exiſtence of the Treaty, if the Vizier denied it, but to proceed in the conqueſt of that country againſt Nudjif Cawn, and all other opponents. This however was not found neceſſary, as the interference of Nudjiff Cawn did not extend to hoſtilities; and the ſubſequent correſpondence with the King, did not produce any change in the orders of the Board.

The Vizier, who ſeems to have been attentive by every means to ſecure the conqueſts he had made, wiſhed to have an interview with the King under that pretence. And your Committee obſerve, that the Governor and Council agreed to the attendance of their Commanding Officer on that occaſion, enjoining him at the ſame time very ſtrictly to avoid engaging the Company as guarantee to any agreement which might take place between them; but they were not altogether neglectful of the poſſible advantage which might ariſe to the Company, from the influence of their brigade extending itſelf to the ſecurity of any country that might be allotted to the King. And they accordingly informed the Court of Directors, of their having inſtructed Colonel Champion "to make a merit of their protection to his Majeſty, "and to demand as a return the renunciation of the "Bengal tribute, upon the footing of thereby removing "every cauſe of further diſcontent between his Majeſty "and them." It ſeems however to have been reſolved at all events to diſcontinue the payment of it; and in their reference made ſome time before to the Court of Directors, concerning that queſtion, they had urged every argument which could induce them to forbid it; and the Governor very expreſsly declared his wiſh, that their connection with Shaw Allum might never be renewed, as it had proved a fatal drain to the wealth of Bengal, without yielding one advantage or poſſible ſervice even of remote benefit in return.

See Governor General's Minute, 25th October 1774. Appendix, 45. See in Appendix, Letter to Col. Champion, dated 10 Aug. 1774.

Your Committee indeed find, that ſome ſucceſs had lately attended the operations of the King's forces in the field, under the conduct of Nudjif Cawn, who ſupported by his perſonal abilities the remains of the royal authority. After he had defeated the Jauts in a pitched battle, he beſieged and took Agra, their capital city, the Vizier having previouſly diſpatched a body of his troops to aſſiſt in the ſiege, out of jealouſy, as was partly ſuppoſed, "of the undivided reputation which his perſonal "rival was about to gain by the reduction of it." This event was likely to haſten the ruin of that people, who had been gradually ſtripped of their extenſive dominions, out of which Nudjif Cawn had formed for himſelf a princely eſtabliſhment.

Extract of a Letter from Governor and Sel. Committee, 17 March 1774. Appendix, No. 29. Appendix, 45. See in Appendix 164, Gen. Clavering's Minute.

It ſhould be remarked, that his allowance of two lacks per annum, which in conſideration of his ſervices had been granted to him in 1765, out of the Revenues allotted to the King from the territories of Bengal, was ſtopped by order of Council, 17th March 1772, upon a ſuppoſition that he had voluntarily accompanied Shaw Allum in his expedition to Delhi. And it appears, that he made application to the Governor when he was at Benares, for the continuance of this penſion; and that Mr. Haſtings referred it to the determination of the Board; who, upon receiving aſſurances that he had reluctantly attended the King, and that he bore a real attachment to the Company, thought it juſt as well as politic to continue it, in hopes alſo by ſuch proceeding "they might impreſs an idea in the minds of the people, "of the generoſity of the Company towards thoſe who "were faithful in their attachment to them." They however reſerved the payment of his arrears to the particular determination of the Court of Directors.

We perceive alſo, that on the ſame occaſion a renewal of the Sunnuds in favour of Cheitſing, the Rajah of Benares, and his poſterity, were obtained from the Vizier on the ſame footing as they had been granted to his father Bulwart Sing, excepting only the increaſe of two and a half lacks to his annual tribute, which he had agreed to at his acceſſion in 1770.

Par. 5. 12 October 1773. Appendix 19. See Art. 5. of Treaty Allahabad 1765, No. 21. Appendix, No. 31.

The great object of the conference at Benares being avowedly to augment the power and conſequence of the Vizier, and more intimately to connect the Company's political intereſts with his, the Governor, on his return to Calcutta, had propoſed to eſtabliſh a Reſident at his Durbar, for the readier communication with him on any buſineſs which might ariſe; and the Board having concurred with him in this opinion, Mr. N. Middleton was appointed; and, in conſideration of the great diſtance of his place of reſidence from Calcutta, whence he muſt draw the chief neceſſaries for his table, they allotted him 1,000 rupees per month for his extra expences.

Letter 17 Jan. 1774. Par. 5. See Appendix, No. 19 and 25.

In regard to the Soubahdar of Bengal, who now remained the only incumbrance on the Dewanſhip of thoſe provinces, your Committee find, that on the 21ſt March 1770, a treaty was concluded between the Britiſh Government and the Nabob Mobareek ul Dowla, which will be found in the Appendix, N° 32, and contains articles to the ſame effect as thoſe entered into with his father, Jaffier Ally Khan, upon his acceſſion to the Nizamut, and afterwards with his brothers, Nudjum ul Dowla and Sief ul Dowla. Theſe agreements gave the direction of the Soubah's military eſtabliſhment entirely to the Company. A certain annual ſtipend of 31,81,991,9. (excluſive of the King's tribute) was ſettled upon him, and a Naib appointed over the provinces, at the recommendation of the Preſident and Council. Having by theſe means ſecured to themſelves the complete guidance of the Government, they did not then ſeem to have extended their views beyond that virtual poſſeſſion of the real ſovereignty. It appears however, that in the year 1772, the Governor and Council, in obedience to the Company's orders, under date 10th April 1771, reduced the annual ſtipend during the non-age of the Nabob, to 16 lacks; and this was ſtated as requiſite, with a view to diſcharge the incumbrances on the Dewannee before the Company became poſſeſſed thereof, and in the hope, that out of the ſavings occaſioned by this reduction, there might be eſtabliſhed a fund for military exigencies, reſpecting ſolely the defence of the provinces. In the courſe of that year, the Governor put the domeſtic affairs of the Nabob under the controul and management of Munny Begum, who was the widow of Meer Jaffier, and mother-in-law to the Nabob, and repreſented to be a woman of great prudence and dignity; introductory to which regulation, the office of Naib Soubah was extinguiſhed, and by that means the Company became certainly yet more principals in the Government.

It has further appeared to your Committee, that Sir Robert Barker, in his Minute of complaint againſt the terms of agreement between Governor Haſtings and the Vizier, had ſuggeſted, among other preferable equivalents which might have been obtained of the King, for the reſtitution of Korah and Illiabad to him, the renunciation of the tribute and Sunnuds for the entire poſſeſſion of Bengal, leſt they ſhould fall into the hands of other nations. But the Governor, in his anſwer, treated both the renunciation and the Sunnuds as ſuperfluous and uſeleſs, becauſe they could not pay the one, and did not want the other. He then expreſſed alſo his doubt of any right by which the King could give, or the Company take from the Nabob, the little ſhare he by treaty poſſeſſed of the Soubarſhip; adding thereupon this obſervation, "It was not the want of the Sunnuds of Shaw Allum, "which defeated the long-concerted projects of the " Duc de Choiſeul, nor will the poſſeſſion of them quicken " the deſigns of the Marattas againſt us. The ſword " which gave us the dominion of Bengal, muſt be the " inſtrument of its preſervation; and if (which God " forbid) it ſhall ever ceaſe to be ours, the next pro- " prietor will derive his right from the ſame natural " charter."

Having thus taken a review of the Military and Political Tranſactions in the countries bordering on Bengal, before the arrival of the new adminiſtration, your Committee will now proceed to examine into ſo much of the Hiſtory of the Maratta State, as may tend to throw a light upon the proceedings and events which, in the proſecution of our taſk, we are to collect together, and ſubmit to the Houſe.

Upon this ſubject, indeed, your Committee have thought it proper to give a more circumſtantial account, not only becauſe the riſe and progreſs of the hoſtilities between that Nation and the Britiſh Settlements in India form the chief object of our preſent enquiry, but becauſe incidents, ariſing from the nature of its conſtitution, ſeem to have given a particular caſt to the ſtate of the quarrel at different periods, and to have alſo had a material influence on the negotiations ſeverally entered into with the oppoſite parties of the Government. We ſhall therefore lay before the Houſe a brief relation of ſuch material points as we have able to extract from the Records of the Company, which were ſubmitted to our inſpection for that purpoſe. It does not however appear neceſſary to go ſo far back into the hiſtory of this people, as to point out in detail the firſt coalition of their various tribes under one chief Rajah of the Raypout or Warrior Caſt, or to trace the increaſe of their numbers and ſtrength from the time of their ſucceſsful reſiſtance to the victorious arms of Auranzebe, till they became ſufficiently powerful to carry their offenſive incurſions into the heart of his empire, and to impoſe a tributary ſubjection upon the territories of his ſucceſſors. It is obſervable, that their chief force conſiſted in a very numerous cavalry, with which they committed dreadful devaſtations in the ſeveral countries they invaded. No ceſſation of them was to be purchaſed at a leſs price than the payment of a regular choute or tribute, being one-fourth of the nett Revenues, which they exacted in lieu of theſe more deſtructive levies. By theſe means they extended this impoſition over the provinces of Bengal, long before a grant was made of them to the Engliſh Company; nor did they afterwards indeed diſcontinue their claim, nor was it ever expreſsly denied. By the ſame right they collected or demanded the like contribution from the Ballagaut and Payengaut, or countries of Myſore and the Carnatic; and we perceive that theſe were acknowledged rights; and in the Treaty of 1768, between the Preſidency of Fort Saint George and the Nizam, an article was inſerted for the avowal and preſervation of that tribute to the Marattas. The territories under the immediate dominion of their Rajah, or of his feudatories, became very extenſive, and reached from the northern boundaries of the Guzerat to the coaſt of Oriſſa. But in the formation of this empire, the ſovereignty of which was held by a Chief of the Raypout race, the principal direction of civil affairs was entruſted to a Council conſiſting of eight Bramins, whoſe caſt was eſteemed ſuperior to that of the Rajah, and who, by their religious influence over the minds of the people, had it in their power to regulate, in what degree they pleaſed, the authority of the prince. Of this prevailing intereſt they did not fail to take advantage for their own aggrandizement; they were the chief officers of the State, and amongſt them the Peſhwa, which title in its literal conſtruction means him who precedes the reſt, was endued with the higheſt rank and power. In the reign of Saboo Rajah, the Bramin called Kiſhwanath Ballajee, who had been raiſed to the office of Peſhwa from an inferior ſtation, gained ſuch an entire aſcendancy over the temper of his maſter, as to perſuade him to make a total reſignation of the conduct of affairs into his hands. He accordingly took upon him, with the appellation of Row Pundit, Praden or Chief and Elect of the Pundits, the real power of the Rajahſhip, which was alſo confirmed by a formal inveſtiture with the Sirpaw, a ceremony that has ever ſince been held neceſſary, and was very ſoon made the only mark of any remaining ſovereignty in the prince, for the dereliction of the exerciſe of Government on the part of Saboo, or the aſſumption of it by Kiſhwanath Ballajee, were not merely perſonal agreements, but became an hereditary practice, with this additional confirmation, that Bajerow (the ſon of Ballajee) who ſucceeded to his authority, confined the Rajah in his reſidence at Sattarah, and eſtabliſhed himſelf in undiſputed ſupremacy in another capital called Poona. Chimnajee Oppa, the brother of Bajerow, led the troops of the empire to conqueſt over the ſettlements of the Portugueſe, and added Salſet and Baſſein, and their dependencies, to their other dominions; and it appears, that on account of this ſingular inſtance of ſucceſs againſt an European Power by one of the Peſhwa family, the ſucceſſors in that office have always conſidered thoſe acquiſitions as particularly their own property, and have conſtantly manifeſted a jealous attention to the preſervation of them. The poſſeſſion of theſe diſtricts, adjoining to the Britiſh ſettlements on the Malabar Coaſt, induced ſome ſort of explanatory connection between the two Governments, and eſpecially as the eſtabliſhment of a marine very ſoon appeared to be another object of ambition in the new adminiſtration. And your Committee obſerve, that the Preſidency of Bombay upon that occaſion thought it proper and prudent to addreſs themſelves only to the Peſhwa, as to the efficient ſovereign of the State, and that from that time, in all tranſactions with the Marattas, they have never regarded the Rajah of Sattarah as any thing but an empty pageant. The articles of agreement concluded at that time with the Marattas, regarded only queſtions of trade and navigation. In the time of Ballajee Bajerow, the third reigning Peſhwa, who was the grandſon of the firſt, another Treaty appears to have been concluded between the Preſidency of Bombay and the Maratta Government; by which alſo ſome particulars of commercial concern to the excluſion of the Dutch were regulated, and Sunnuds were given to the Company for the ſole poſſeſſion of Fort Victoria, or Bancote, and Hematgur, upon their ſurrender of the fort of Ghereah (which they had taken from Toolajee Angria) to the Poona dominion. In conſequence of conformity to the articles of this Treaty, all diſputes were to ſubſide, and no claims were to be made by the Maratta Governmen on the Company to that date; and all former Treaties were to be maintained inviolable by both parties. In 1761, Ballajee Bajerow died, by ſome accounts of grief for the death of his couſin Sudabah or the Bhow, who was killed in the battle of Paniput againſt the emperor Abdallah. Bajerow left a ſon, Madharrow Ballajee, then a minor, of 14 years of age. But the regular ſucceſſion to this high office was now ſo eſtabliſhed, that the minority of the heir ſeemed to ſuggeſt no cauſe of objection; and his authority was immediately recognized under the regency of his uncle Ragonaut Ballajee Row. This ready acquieſcence may however, in a great meaſure, be attributed to the management of the Bramin miniſtry, which had ſtill continued to poſſeſs the guidance of the civil adminiſtration, and had thereby found means to accumulate very conſiderable riches; the ſecurity of which, involving alſo their perſonal ſafety, became of courſe an eſſential object of their policy in a State, where both on that account were conſtantly in hazard. This attention naturally incited them to take advantage of a minority to diſſeminate jealouſies and diviſions in the reigning family, and to ſeek by their intrigues to perpetuate them. In this inſtance it appears, that they had a powerful coadjutrix in Gopicaboy, the mother of Madharrow, of whoſe influence over her ſon they did not neglect to avail themſelves for the purpoſe of fomenting a difference between the uncle and the nephew, which led to an open rupture between between them; and the consequence of it was, the confinement of Ragoba. It should however be observed, that the accounts of these transactions differ very materially; and that while the friends of the uncle charge them to the ambition and avarice of the ministers, and the reproved licentiousness of the mother's character, his enemies on the other hand ascribe them to the failure of his traiterous designs to usurp the office, which he was only to have held during the minority of his nephew, and from which having at his own desire retired upon a large pension to a residence on the banks of the Gungba, he had suddenly taken up arms, with unprovoked violence, against his prince. In the conduct of these intrigues, Siccaram Baboo was reported to have taken a great lead. He had been promoted by Ragoba from a menial service in his household to an eminent post in the administration of affairs under the Peshwa, with the avowed engagement of obedience to his patron's directions; and he was of course stigmatized with ingratitude for deserting and betraying him. The power of the ministers having thus for a time no controul, their wealth increased in proportion to an immense degree; but their ascendency nevertheless began to decline as the Peshwa advanced in years, and in the display of an enlarged and manly spirit. In the beginning of his reign, while Ragoba yet held the undisputed regency, a treaty was concluded between the Maratta Government and the Presidency of Bombay; the chief object of which was to establish a permanent plan for the mutual restitution of deserters from either country. In the latter end of the reign (for Madharrow died in 1772, at the age of 25 years) the Marattas appeared so very formidable enemies to Hyder Ally, as to threaten the destruction of his power, and to compel him to prefer very earnest entreaties to the President and Council of Fort Saint George, for the succours with which they were by Treaty engaged to furnish him in such an exigency. But the fears of the Nabob for his own possessions, the bias of the British minister plenipotentiary in those parts, to an alliance with Madharrow, and the instructions of the Court of Directors to preserve a strict neutrality, conspired to prevent a compliance with his demands. It will be remembered, that Hyder was not insensible of the disappointment; from the bad effects of which however he was relieved by the changes in the situation of his enemies when they lost their chief Governor. It appears, that a little time before his death, he recommended his brother and successor, Narrain Row, to the guardianship and direction of Ragonaut Row, whom he therefore released from confinement; and for a short period afterwards, affairs were conducted by his governance under the title of Naib, for which he received the Sirpaw from the Rajah at the same time that Narrain was invested with that of Peshwa. But the influence of Gopicaboy and of the ministers, particularly of Nanna Furnese, again prevailed, and he was once more deprived of power, and very soon of his liberty also, under pretence that he was concerting a plan with Hyder Ally for an usurpation of the Government, or at least for his escape from Poona, where he had been for some time before detained a prisoner at large. The enmity of his sister-in-law seemed to have been stimulated by his adoption of a youth named Amrut Row, a relation and favourite of Moodajee Boosla, the brother of the Rajah of Berar, left by this procedure, contrary to the custom of their cast, his riches and future possible title to the Peshwaship, might be transferred to a different race. According however to some accounts, he was not so entirely debarred from access or communication with his friends, or rather with the enemies of the young Peshwa, whose vicious giddiness estranged from him even the ministers of his own party, but that a plan was formed to bring about a revolution, which promised again to place him at the head of the Government. Your Committee think it proper here to observe, that various informations, which we have found of these occurrences, are so strongly tinctured with party prejudice and design, that we cannot venture to decide upon any one as wholly free from misrepresentation. We have therefore placed the several narrations in the Appendix, from which the House will be enabled to judge of the circumstances and intrigues which led to the assassination of Narrain Row, and shall only state in this place the apparent fact, that on the 30th August he was murdered in the apartment where Ragoba was confined, and to whom he had fled for refuge. It is certain, that the odium of this deed was very generally thrown upon Ragoba, though it was by himself and his friends asserted, that the necessity of self-defence compelled him to sacrifice the life of his nephew and sovereign. The Duan, Siccaram Baboo, was also charged with being the principal contriver of this bloody action, and he was said to have been instigated to it, upon hearing of the Peshwa's intentions to deprive him of his office, from which might result the loss of his riches, and perhaps of his life.

Your Commiitee find, that Ragoba was immediately acknowledged Peshwa, and soon after received from the Rajah the Sirpaw of office, when the usual compliments of the ministers were paid to him, and Mr. Mostyn, who was then at Poona, having been appointed by the Company to be their Resident there, waited upon him in form, repeating all the same ceremonies and assurances which it had ever been usual to make on the accession of a new Peshwa. Too distrustful however of the old ministers, to appoint any one of them his Dewan, Ragoba appears to have instantly conceived an earnest design of strengthening his power to a degree of independence on them, by the means of an army at his own devotion, and also of employing it to revenge the hostilities and usurpations committed by the Nizam during the confusions of the late Government. This attempt proved very unfortunate, for we perceive, that by the treachery of his own officers, he suffered a total defeat in an engagement with the Soubah; and though he afterwards recovered sufficiently from this blow to collect his scattered forces, and the Nizam made overtures of accommodation and concession, which led to a promise of assistance with a body of troops in case of an emergency, he was nevertheless obliged to remit those arrears which he chiefly wanted as a supply of money, and was in the end totally deceived in his expectations of military support. The need of pecuniary resources for the accomplishment of his domestic plan of independent Government, prompted him to direct his march towards the Carnatic, with a view of exacting a large arrear of choute from the Nabob Mahomed Ally, having previously compromised his demands on Hyder Naig for the immediate payment of the sum of 25 lacks of rupees, in consideration of which he made over to him the three provinces of Mudgewarry, Hauscootah, and Chunderdroorg.

Your Committee however find, that the prosecution of these offensive measures was interrupted by the necessity of returning to the defence of his own authority, against which, in his absence from Poona, a confederacy of five of the chief Bramin ministers had taken place, who set on foot a considerable army, which was strengthened by the junction of the Nizam's forces to oppose him. At first indeed Ragoba having escaped the effects of their machinations in his camp, was soon afterwards fortunate enough to give their army a signal overthrow, and take prisoner their Commander in Chief Trimbuck Row, who was also one of their most respectable partizans But it appears that this event, however successful, had not sufficient efficacy to raise him above the efforts of future opposition. Gungaboy, the widow of Narrain Row, had been for some time reported with child, and in the beginning of April 1774, was said to be delivered of a son, whom the ministers immediately recognized as the true heir to the Peshwaship. Your Committee have here again found various and discordant accounts of this event; from some of which it should seem, that there were reasons to suspect that this child, pretended to be born of Gungaboy, was in reality the offspring of another woman, several several of whom, in a ſtate of pregnancy, had been ſhut up with her in the fort of Poorunder. By others, the reality of this birth was ſtrongly affirmed; and it appears by Mr. Moſtyn's Letters from Poona, that the widow was apparently with child, and afterwards delivered of a ſon, which however lived but a ſhort time, and at his death, the introduction of a ſuppoſititious child immediately followed. The fortune of Ragoba in the meantime was marked with a variety of changes in the acquiſition and loſs of the powerful adherents with whom he occaſionally connected himſelf. Among theſe we perceive, that two great Maratta Chiefs, Toukajee Holkar, and Madajee Scindia; promiſed the moſt effectual ſupport and re-eſtabliſhment to his cauſe. The intrigues however of the Bramin miniſters were here again ſo ſucceſsful, as to break theſe connections by means of a real or pretended correſpondence with the two Jaghiredars; and Ragoba, who appears to have been ſuſceptible of fear, and actuated by ſudden impreſſions of alarm, ſeparated himſelf from his principal followers, and retreated into the Guzerat country where Govind Row Guicawar, who was then beſieging Brudra, agreed to aſſiſt him with all his forces. The conſequence of this ſtep was the immediate union of Scindia and Holcar, and five other Maratta Chiefs, with the Bramin confederacy, who, under the denomination of the Barrah Bhi, or Twelve Friends, agreed to acknowledge the title of the infant Peſhwa (for whom they obtained from the Rajah the Sirpaw of office) and to exclude Ragonaut Row from all ſhare in the Government of the empire.

In the courſe however of theſe tranſactions, Ragoba applied to the Preſident and Council of Bombay for their aſſiſtance, with the offer of acceding to conditions which ſhould be made advantageous to the Company; and in a ſubſequent account of his ſituation and motives of action at that time, he wrote as follows: "By the favour of the Almighty the firſt battle was well fought; "but as all the fortified places were in their poſſeſſion, I "thought proper to go to Guzerat, where I applied to "the General of Bombay, who was my old friend, and "well verſed in affairs, for his alliance." 'August 1774. Mr. Tayler's Letter, fol. 557. No. 34.

But it appears to be proper in the firſt place, to add to the account which your Committee have given of the Marattas, and of the ſovereign power of their empire, ſome few remarks in regard to the different branches of it; and upon this head we have found, that ſome of the principal Rapout officers, who conducted the various bands which iſſued forth after the invaſion of Nadir Shaw, to eſtabliſh themſelves by conqueſt on the ruins of the Mogul empire, were appointed Governors of the more diſtant provinces, which had during theſe conflicts been added to their dominions; and that they took early advantage of their ſituation, and by degrees uſurped an almoſt independant authority over the territories they had in charge. In the earlier periods of their hiſtory, theſe detached Governments were bound to furniſh a certain quota of cavalry completely equipped for ſervice, at the requiſition of the ſovereign; but the ſeverities which upon theſe occaſions they exerciſed over the inhabitants, ſoon occaſioned the depopulation of the countries, and it became neceſſary to eſtabliſh, upon a very different footing, the military force, with which in proceſs of time they went into the field, no longer as tributaries, but under the title of alliance, and on conditions of a ſtipulated ſubſidy. The pay of the troops was ſettled upon terms which were in lieu of all preparatory equipment, and every Cavalier brought with him, and was the owner of his own horſe and arms. Their mode of war, which was wholly directed to deveſtation and plunder, enticed into the ſervice, upon any ſudden or favourite expedition, every adventurer who could procure a horſe; and by theſe means very numerous armies would in a ſhort time be collected together. But as every common trooper was anxious for the preſervation of that horſe and of thoſe arms which were his own property, and the loſs of which he was obliged himſelf to make good, it cannot ſeem extraordinary that they avoided, as much as poſſible, all regular conflicts with diſciplined forces, before whom however their flight was not therefore an aſſurance of entire defeat or diſperſion. The rapidity of their movements from one country to another were truly ſurpriſing, as they took both their food and their ſleep upon horſeback. Yet the real ſtrength of the military force of the empire conſiſted in the private cavalry or houſhold troops commanded by the Paha Sirdars, and whoſe horſes were the property of the State. How troubleſome and deſtructive was their mode of warfare, and how difficult to be guarded againſt, is very ſtrikingly deſcribed in a Letter from the Select Committee of Bengal, upon whoſe frontiers they had made ſeveral very diſtreſſing attacks.—"We certainly labour under very "great diſadvantages with reſpect to the Marattas, ſince, "in every conteſt with them, they being neceſſarily the "aggreſſors, and we acting only on the defenſive, it can "never be in our power to hurt them effectually, nor "even to act againſt them longer than they chuſe to "ſtand in our way. But they, on the contrary, have it "continually in their option to affail us at home, and by "the immediate effect of their ravages, or by their "alarms, diſturb the peace of our country, and affect "our Revenues, although we are ſufficiently able to de-"feat the moſt ſtrenuous efforts which they may at any "time make againſt us."

Your Committee find, that among the great Chiefs of the Maratta nation, the Bouncello's held indiſputably the firſt rank, from the extent of dominion, and the independency of Government. They were allied in blood with the Rajah of Sittarah, and had pretenſions to the ſucceſſion of that ſovereign power. Ragojee, in the proſecution of that claim in favour of his ſon Moodajee, had marched with a conſiderable army to Poona, where he forced the Government to a compromiſe of great preſent advantage to him, without abandoning that contingent right upon the death of the Ram Rajah.—His eldeſt ſon Jannajee ſucceeded to his dominions of Berar, and having at his deceaſe, without children, left the inheritance to the ſon of his youngeſt brother Moodajee, he occaſioned thereby a great contention between the ſurviving brothers Shabajee and Moodajee. The former claimed the right of Government as the elder; and the latter as father and guardian of the adopted child. In the diſſenſions, of which your Committee have taken notice in the Poona Government, the two brothers took different parts; Shabajee had appeared in league with the Miniſters and the Nizam, and Moodajee had ſupported the cauſe and pretenſions of Ragoba. But from about the time of the ſuppoſed birth of the young Peſhwa, their own animoſities and quarrels roſe to ſuch a height, as to engage them wholly in the moſt implacable hoſtilities againſt each other, and to prevent their interference in the diſputes of their neighbours.

No. 42.

Your Committee find, that the Guzerat country, which lays to the northward of Bombay, and extends from Demaum up to the river Puddar, bounded by the ſea of Cambay on the ſouth-weſt, and by the territories of other Maratta Chiefs to the eaſt, was one of the lateſt conqueſts made from the Mogul empire. It appears to have been reduced by Pillagee Guicawar, a Maratta family, two brothers of which, Futty Sing and Govind Row, at the period in queſtion, were contending for the ſovereignty of it. It had been held for ſome time independent of the Poona Durbar; but in the reign of Nanna or Bajerow, they compelled Dummajee the ſon of Pillajee, or, according to other accounts, the principal Chief under Temeck Row (who had received the command of the country from the Sahoo Rajah, but was afterwards killed in an engagement with the Peſhwa, leaving a ſon who fled to the Mogul's) to yield them ſeveral places in it, a part of the Revenue, and to furniſh a certain quota of troops troops when called for; and in short, pretended to a supremacy over the Guicawar Government. The Revenues arising from the country, and the military force kept up in it, were considerable. But the dissensions in the reigning family ha! prevented them from taking an active part in the divisions at Poona; the protection however of the different interests having been given in opposition to each other to the two brothers, Futty Sing owed his title and the support of his pretensions to the favour of the Bramin ministers; and Ragoba on his accession to the Musnud, decreed the Government of that province to Govind Row, whom we have found in arms against his brother at the siege of Brodera, when Ragoba joined him.

No. 40. Mr. Tayler's Letter.

Morary Row Gosparáh, an old and experienced Maratta Chief, who possessed the Fort of Gatti, and a considerable district bordering on the Nizam's country, had at first appeared to be a partizan of the ministers; but Ragoba upon his return from the borders of the Carnatic, having thrown himself under his protection against the machinations of his enemies at Poona, he for a time declared himself in favour of that prince, and was principally instrumental in his preservation. Towards the end however of these transactions, he had been found more anxious to secure and enlarge his own situation, than to intermeddle as an adherent with the pretensions of either party.

Mr. Tayler.

No. 40. Mr. Tayler's Letter.

The two northern Jaghierdars, Holcar and Scindia, whom your Committee mentioned as having become parties with the Mutseddies and Maratta Chiefs after the retreat of Ragoba into the Guzerat, appear to have possessed extensive districts bordering upon the Vizier's countries to the east, and to the dominions of Berar on the south. They were looked up to as, in a military line, the great supporters of that cause, but were at the same time conceived to have no design of co-operating with the ministers to such an extent as entirely to crush the opposition of Ragoba; because a regard to their own interests, which was considered to have at least an equal influence on their political conduct, should naturally induce them to keep up the balance of dissension, that neither party might be encouraged, from a confidence in their unrivalled power, to demand of them the arrears of their tribute: your Committee have indeed observed, that some degree of personal disaffection might subsist between Ragoba and Madajee Scindia, because upon the death of Tookajee, the elder brother of Madajee, Ragoba, then Regent of the empire, had established his son Godarjie in the Government held by his father, and appointed Madajee his guardian: but when Ragoba had given up his trust into the hands of the Peshwa Madharow, Siccaram Baboo his minister, in consequence of a bribe, displaced the nephew, and gave the jaghires in absolute possession to the uncle; against which proceeding Ragoba made representations, which proved not only unsuccessful, but very unfortunate to him.

No. 35. Bengal Sec. Pers. Co. Corref. 1775, No. 399.

No. 40.

In regard to the Mutseddies or Bramin ministry, your Committee have found, that in the time of Narrain Row, Siccaram Baboo was supposed to have conceived great indignation at the superior ascendancy which Nanna Furnese, a much younger man than himself, had acquired over the mind of the Peshwa; and it appears, that upon the murder of that prince, and the proclamation made by Siccaram of Ragoba's accession to the Government, Nanna fled from the capital, and was hardly prevailed upon to return to it on the assurances of entire forgiveness and restoration to favour. Yet it is observable, that Mr. Mostyn reported it as a general opinion, that most of the ministers were instrumental in the perpetration of the murder; and it is certain that whatever jealousies had in reality subsisted between Siccaram and Ballajee the subsequent absence of Ragoba, in his expedition to the Carnatic, and the distrust and neglect which he betrayed of them all, together with a reflection on their mutual advantage, apparently reconciled them; and they will be found to act as joint conductors of the public affairs of the empire (though Siccaram was in effect the only nominal Duan) from the time that their conspiracy succeeded so far as to keep Ragoba out of possession of the Peshwaship. It is not therefore surprizing, that we should perceive in most of his Letters, strong expressions of a severe resentment against them, for the ingratitude and deceit they had, in his idea, practised against him. But it is proper to remark, that self interest was generally reported to be predominant in them over every other passion; and that increase of power, and accumulation of wealth, as the surest supporters of each other, were the undeviating principle and object of their administration: many therefore of those who had confirmed themselves in this opinion, used it as a strong argument against the legitimacy of the infant Peshwa, because the ministers were at all events so much interested to provide both a disputed succession and a long minority.

Mr. Mostyn, 2 July 1774.

Your Committee find, that the neighbouring powers, took the opportunity which these dissensions afforded them, of making encroachments on the Maratta territories. The Nizam, though the avowed partizan of the ministerial cause, was evidently attentive in a higher degree to his own interest than to the decision of the dispute in favour of his allies; and he found continual pretext for complaints, which were of course to be soothed by further cessions of country, and larger remittances of money.

Letter from Mr. Mostyn, 13 April 1774—28 April, 22 August and 9 November.

See Appendix, No. 37 and 38.

Hyder Ally, to whom Ragoba had granted some forts, with their appendant districts, found it however necessary to employ force in order to obtain possession of them; and he had good opportunity in this juncture to accomplish his views.

28 April, 9 November.

The Boosilas were still at enmity with each other, and upon the eve of coming to some decisive trial of force for the mastership. It appears indeed, that Shabajee had in view objects more grand and extensive than the mere dominion of Berar, and that he bore in mind his claim to the Government of the Maratta State, in the prosecution of which he hoped to be greatly assisted by the present dissensions among the ministers. His Vackeel had been attending on the Governor of Bengal for more than a twelvemonth, and frequently repeated the earnest wish of his master to enter into a defensive alliance with the Company; and the administration of that Presidency, thinking the overtures worthy of their attention, as of great probable advantage to their employers, at last sent back the Agent with Letters and presents to his master.

Par. 7. Letter from Bengal to Court of Directors, 19 Oct. 1774. Appendix, No. 27.

Your Committee find, that there had arisen some disputes with the French factories in the Bengal provinces, the Chief of which was Chandernagore, upon their pretension to the right of establishing subordinates wherever they thought fit; for which purpose also they produced Phirmaunds and Sunnuds, granted to their Company by the Mogul Government. These encroachments however did not appear of consequence enough to require an immediate and vigorous controul, in which there might be more danger than use; and the Calcutta Board therefore thought it proper to wave any discussion upon those subjects so near the close of their administration. Nor indeed was the force of the French influence in those parts apparently a just object of much jealousy to the English Government, except from the possibility of intrigues with the country powers, which in case of future differences between the two nations might tend to the more feasible introduction of their troops from the islands, or from Europe, and thereby enable them to create more consequential disturbances.

Letter 17 Oct. 1774

But for the representation of the state of political affairs under the Presidency at the expiration of the old Government, your Committee desire to refer the House to the extract of a Letter which we have placed in the Appendix, from the Governor and Council, dated 17th October 1774, In this will be found a recapitulation of the motives for their conduct in undertaking the Rohilla war, which, from the latest intelligence, they believed to be finally closed with that success which they had foreseen from from the beginning. Upon the ſuppoſition of that event, they concluded their Letter in the following words: "We ſhall then again return to the ſtate of peace from "which we emerged when we firſt engaged in the Ro-"hilla expedition, with the actual poſſeſſion or acknow-"ledged right (which the power of this Government "can amply and effectually aſſert) of near ſeventy lacks "of rupees, acquired by the monthly ſubſidy and the "ſtipulation; and it reſts with you to paſs the ultimate "judgment on our conduct."

The annexed chart will ſhew the general ſtate and diſtribution of the military force under the Preſidency at that period. By the agreement formed between Souja Dowla and Meſſrs. Cartier, Smith, and Ruſſell, on the part of the Bengal Government in 1768, which was expreſsly deſigned as an explanatory clauſe to be inſerted in the treaty of Iliabad, the number of forces under the Vizier's eſtabliſhment was not to exceed 35,000 men of all denominations whatever; and of them only 10,000 were to be trained in the diſcipline of the Engliſh troops. Your Committee have however obſerved, that the Vizier made application about this time to the Preſident, for the purpoſe of obtaining an Engliſh Officer to command a regular battalion in his ſervice, which he propoſed to raiſe, diſcipline, and pay, after the European manner, and to employ chiefly in the protection of his perſon, and to be a check upon the mutinous diſpoſition of his own troops, which he had often experienced ſince the recal of Captain Harper's battalion. The Board appear to have granted his requeſt.

And it appears to your Committee, that the Board, in their Letter of the ſame date, from the public department, gave an account of ſeveral advances which had been made in the plan recently formed for the reduction of the military expences under the management of the Commiſſary General (Colonel Maclean) whom the Court of Directors had ſent out to inveſtigate the Army Accounts of Bengal. Theſe expences were declared by the Court, in their inſtructions to the Governor General and Council, to have increaſed to a degree which was become inſupportable to them; and they, therefore, in an eſpecial manner enjoined the new Adminiſtration to make ſtrict enquiry into the cauſes of ſuch increaſe in every particular, and to retrench every ſuperfluous charge, and reduce every incidental expence to the loweſt ſum poſſible.

The repreſentation of the ſeveral particulars under the head of Revenue at that period, is exhibited in the following abſtracts upon the plan already explained. In addition to which your Committee will here take notice of ſome material remarks, that the expiring Adminiſtration made upon that ſubject, and on the proſpect of improvement in the eſſential circumſtances of it.

Appendix, No. 43.

In their Letter, under date 22d Auguſt 1774, to the Court of Directors, after obſerving on the ſteps they had taken for the reduction of their debts, and on the probable reſources by which they ſhould be enabled to diſcharge great part of them before the 1ſt of January ſucceeding, they ſtated the principal ſum of C^r. rupees 79,89,312 and 4 piſe, to be that which would then remain of the old debt, beſides the new loan of 5 per cent. "which they had no doubt of paying off in the "courſe of a few years, provided their expences were "confined within the bounds to which they had lately "reduced them; that a great part of their army con- "tinued employed and paid by the Vizier; and that he "ſhould be punctual in the other payments for which "he was engaged to the Company.—The courſe of "events" (they ſaid) "is not in our hands; but we "have ventured to pledge our endeavours for accom- "pliſhing this deſirable end."

On this known proſpect of the decreaſe of their incumbrances, their credit immediately aroſe ſo much as to allow the introduction of operations for reducing the current rate of intereſt; and on the 17th October following, they wrote their laſt Letter, (extract of which is placed in the Appendix) to the Court of Directors, in ſimilar terms of ſatisfaction on the proſperous ſtate of their finances and commerce, on a review of their ſeveral branches of reſource. The expected receipt of fifteen lacks of rupees, on account of the ceſſion of Corah, and twenty lacks out of forty engaged for the Rohilla expedition, added to fifteen for the bills the Court had authorized them to draw upon them, would be a further fund for the diſcharge of their bond debt, and reduce it to 35 lacks inſtead of 125, which was the amount in Auguſt preceding. The further ſum of 35 lacks, which would remain due from the Vizier, the payment of which they deemed perfectly ſecure, would therefore be ſufficient to cancel the whole of the bond debt in the courſe of the enſuing ſeaſon, excluſive of the ſavings ariſing both from the reduction of expences, and from one of the brigades being employed out of the provinces, and in conſequence paid by the Vizier.

Appendix, No. 44. Ben. Conſ. 20 October 1774.

Your Committee find, that the firſt exerciſe of Government under the new Adminiſtration in the Preſidency of Bengal, with the ſuperintending and controlling powers before mentioned, over the other Settlements, took place on the 20th October 1774. And it appears by their Letter of 21 November following, which will be found in the Appendix, N° 44, that their firſt Conſultations had not begun in that unanimity, or their reſolutions formed in that harmony, which were the objects of the Company's inſtructions. The neceſſity and propriety of the Rohilla war ſeems to have furniſhed a conſtant ſource of diſcordancy. It is foreign from the direct deſign of the enquiry on which your Committee are here engaged, to point out every particular of the diſagreements which divided the opinions of the Board. We ſhall only take notice of ſuch reſolutions as tend to complete the introductory ductory account we have given of the general ſtate of political affairs about that period.

Secret Letter from Governor General and Council, 21 November 1774. No. 44.

In order to elucidate the grounds and conduct of the war, it was thought neceſſary to ſee the whole of the original correſpondence between the Governor General, Mr. Middleton, and Colonel Champion; but we perceive, that the Governor General declined laying the whole of them before the Board, and only offered ſuch parts as related to the conduct of public affairs. This refuſal appears to have occaſioned a formal proteſt, and a reſolution of the majority to recal Mr. Middleton, and to appoint Colonel Champion to treat with the Vizier in his room. The inſtructions ſent to Colonel Champion were not agreed to without much diſcuſſion. He was therein directed to wait upon the Vizier, and to require payment of the forty lacks for the aid which the Company had furniſhed in the Rohilla war, and of ſuch other ſums as would be then due in virtue of his other engagements; there was indeed ſuperadded a diſcretionary power to relax in part of theſe demands, if apparently neceſſary, to accept twenty lacks in ready money, and to ſettle a kiſtbundie for payment by inſtalments of the remainder, at any term not exceeding twelve months for the laſt. Directions were alſo tranſmitted for his conduct, in regard to the movements of the troops dependent on the alternative of the Vizier's compliance or refuſal. Some alterations however took place in theſe inſtructions, on the receipt of advices from Colonel Champion, that an end was put to the war by a definitive treaty between the Vizier and Fizoola Cawn, who agreed to lay down his arms, and ſurrender to the former one half of the treaſure which he had with him in his camp; and on condition of the Vizier's putting him in poſſeſſion of a ſmall diſtrict, the capital of which was called Rampore, he conſented to hold it dependent on him, and to renounce all pretenſions to any other part of the country. On the concluſion of this engagement, and the transfer of the treaſure, in part diſcharge of his debt to the Company, Souja Dowla returned to Fizabad, at which place Colonel Champion was ordered to wait upon him for the purpoſes abovementioned, notwithſtanding the repreſentation made by the Governor General of his claim to ſome indulgence, as he had put himſelf in the way of diſcharging his engagements, and the army was removed ſo much nearer his frontiers.

Appendix, No. 45. Ben Sec. Conſ. 25 October 1774, &c.

Your Committee have placed in the Appendix N° 45, the Proceedings and Reſolutions, and ſeveral Minutes, of the Members of the Board upon this ſubject, which were then ſent numbers in the packet, particularly an addreſs from the Governor General to the Court of Directors, a joint addreſs from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, and a Minute of Mr. Barwell, all upon the ſame ſubject. As theſe contain the very different ideas which their ſeveral authors entertained of the political points in queſtion, we ſhall only deſire to refer the Houſe to them as documents of information, and think it proper to conclude theſe obſervations on this part of the ſubject, with ſome remarks on the ſentiments which the Court of Directors expreſſed upon the moſt material of theſe tranſactions, and on the orders which they tranſmitted to their Servants in India in conſequence thereof.

In regard to the tribute due to the King Shaw Allum, and which we have ſeen had been withheld by the Governor and Council of Bengal, the Court pronounced a confirmation of that meaſure in the following terms:

General Letter to Bengal, 3 March 1775. Par. 32. Appendix, No. 46.

" Having taken into our moſt ſerious conſideration
" the circumſtances which induced our Preſident and
" Council to ſuſpend payment of tribute to his Majeſty
" Shaw Allum, we muſt declare, that his own conduct
" has rendered that meaſure not only expedient, but
" abſolutely neceſſary."

And your Committee further remark, that after ſeveral other pointed obſervations of complaint againſt the conduct of the King, by which he had forfeited their favour and protection, they ſignified to the Government of Bengal a further approbation of thoſe Proceedings alſo, which led to the Conference at Benares, and of great part of the agreement concluded at that place by Governor Haſtings, in theſe words:

" Although the provinces of Corah and Allahabad
" were reſerved to the King by the Treaty of 1765,
" we can by no means allow, that his Majeſty acquired " by that Treaty a right to reſign them into the hands of " our enemies. As the Vizier of the empire is the firſt
" officer under his Majeſty, and as the territories in
" queſtion were formerly held by the Vizier, we cannot
" but be of opinion, that our Servants acted with great " propriety in committing them again to his manage" ment, when it became abſolutely impoſſible for his
" Majeſty to hold them in his own immediate poſſeſſion.
" And as the King had not only withdrawn himſelf from " our protection, and abandoned the countries aſſigned
" to him, but alſo continued by his preſence to coun" tenance the depredations of the Marattas, we fully " approve the Reſolution of our Preſident and Council,
" under thoſe circumſtances, to ſuſpend payment of tri" bute to his Majeſty, as we think the general principles
" of ſelf-preſervation warranted them to withhold re-
" ſources which, if ſent, they knew muſt fall into the " hands of the Marattas, and which they had every rea-
" ſon to believe would be appropriated to the uſe of " their army, and contribute towards enabling them to " commit hoſtilities in our own provinces, or in thoſe
" of our allies.

" For the above reaſons we, upon the matureſt deli" beration, confirm the Treaty of Benares; and we alſo
" hereby direct, that no further remittances be made to " the King without our expreſs permiſſion firſt obtained
" for that purpoſe."

It does not appear that any direction or permiſſion of that ſort have, ſince the date of this Letter, been ſent by the Court of Directors to their Government of Bengal; or that the Superior Council have in this inſtance ventured to tranſgreſs the orders of the Company.

The penſion, which had been again apparently reſtored to Nudjiff Cawn, was alſo at this time approved of by the Court of Directors; conditionally, however, " that it " might be in his power to render them future ſervices,
" and that therefore it would be prudent to pay it." By referring to the Accounts of the year 1776, the Houſe will perceive the accumulated balance due to Nudjiff Cawn, and will of courſe be ſatisfied, that the further payment of the ſtipend had been diſcontinued. Several Letters which are placed in the Appendix will further corroborate this obſervation, and point out the reaſons of it.

Par. 38.

Letters to and from Nudjiff Cawn, No. 45.

Concerning the engagement entered into with the Vizier, for the expedition againſt the Rohillas, your Committee obſerve, that the Court of Directors, in the ſame Letter, uſed the following expreſſions:

" Notwithſtanding the pecuniary advantages which the " Company have gained by the event, we are exceed" ingly concerned to find, that our arms have been em" ployed in the conqueſt of the Rohillas; though we
" muſt confeſs the conduct of their Chiefs, in refuſing
" to fulfil their ſolemn ſtipulations with the Vizier, ſeems
" to have drawn upon them the calamities they have
" ſuffered."

They added, however, aſſurances that had the object in view been extended no further than to compel payment of the 40 lacks of rupees due to the Vizier and to the Company for the protection afforded the Rohillas, they ſhould have had leſs objection to the meaſure. And while they acknowledged the force of the Treaty of Allahabad, they again declared their abſolute prohibition againſt warlike enterprizes beyond the Vizier's territories, on any pretence whatever.

In a ſubſequent Letter of the 7th of the ſame month, the Court appear to have repeated theſe reſtrictions with ſtill greater force; as by a Letter from the Select Committee, under date the 24th Auguſt preceding, they had been informed of the greater diſtance to which their arms had been carried acroſs the Ganges into the center of the Rohilla country, and more eſpecially as ſome ſteps taken by the King, and the probability of depredations by the Marattas, rendered the time and the circumſtances peculiarly unfavourable.

But it has appeared to your Committee, that after the receipt of all the documents relative to theſe tranſactions, which were tranſmitted by the new Adminiſtration, the opinion and reſolutions of the Court of Directors were pronounced with yet more ſerioufneſs, and were attended with that additional weight which the confirmation of the Court of Proprietors might be ſuppoſed to give them.

Appendix, No. 46. 5th December 1775.

The following extract of a Letter from the Court of Directors to the Governor General and Council, under date 5th December 1775, will fully explain the ſentence delivered by them both.

" As the ſeparate addreſſes of our Governor General, " and of the majority of Council to the Court of Direc- " tors, and of the latter to our late Chairman and Deputy " Chairman, are entered upon your Records, we ſhall " conſider them as Proceedings or Minutes of Council, " and as ſuch reply to thoſe particulars which require our " obſervation, direction, or determination; and herein " we ſhall be guided by that equal regard which we bear " towards every Member of our Board, expreſſing our " approbation of ſuch meaſures as are right, and repre- " hending thoſe which appear to us deſerving of cenſure; " but before we proceed to thoſe particulars, we think " it neceſſary to communicate to you the following Re- " ſolutions, agreed to by a General Court of Proprie- " tors, held on the 6th inſtant, relative to ſundry ob- " jects on which you have been divided."

" Reſolved unanimouſly, That notwithſtanding this " Court hath the higheſt opinion of the ſervices and " integrity of Warren Haſtings, eſquire, and cannot ad- " mit a ſuſpicion of corrupt motives operating on his " conduct, without proof; yet they are of opinion, with " their Court of Directors, that the agreement made " with Sujah Dowla for the hire of a part of the Com- " pany's troops for the reduction of the Rohilla coun- " try, and the ſubſequent ſteps taken for carrying on " that war, were founded on wrong policy, were con- " trary to the general orders of the Company, frequently " repeated, for keeping their troops within the bounds " of the provinces, and for not extending their territo- " ries; and were alſo contrary to thoſe general principles " which the Company wiſh ſhould be ſupported."

" Reſolved unanimouſly, That this Court do agree " with the opinion of the Court of Directors, that the " whole correſpondence between the Governor General " and Mr. Middleton, ſhould have been laid before the " Members of the Superior Council, who ought to have " received every information reſpecting the tranſactions " of the Company's Agent at Sujah Dowlah's Court, in " order to regulate their conduct on that critical period."

" Reſolved, that this Court do agree in opinion with " the Court of Directors, that it is neceſſary to wait the " arrival of the Anſon, or ſome further advices from " Bengal, before a preciſe judgment can be formed, re- " lative to the future reſources of that Preſidency."

" Reſolved, that this Court do agree in opinion with " the Court of Directors, that the meaſure of recalling " the troops from the Rohilla expedition, as ſoon as it " could be done with propriety, was agreeable to the " ſpirit of the Company's general orders; but conſider- " ing the ſituation of affairs at that time, between the " Company and Shujah Dowla, and other circumſtances, " the Court think the recalling them ſo haſtily might " have been attended with inconveniences."

" Having thus laid before you the ſenſe of the Pro- " prietors at large on the above ſubjects, taken after the " moſt candid examination of your Records, we proceed " to make ſuch further obſervations, and to give ſuch " orders and inſtructions, as from the nature of your " advices, and the ſituation of our affairs in Bengal, ap- " pear to us neceſſary.

" We diſapprove all ſuch diſtant expeditions as may " eventually carry our forces to any ſituation too remote " to admit of their ſafe and ſpeedy return to the protec- " tion of our own provinces in caſes of emergency.

" We alſo utterly diſapprove and condemn offenſive " wars; diſtinguiſhing however between offenſive mea- " ſures unneceſſarily undertaken with a view to pecuniary " advantages, and thoſe which the preſervation of our " honour, or the protection or ſafety of our poſſeſſions, " may render abſolutely neceſſary.

" The attention paid by the majority to the tenor " and ſpirit of our orders on this ſubject, is highly agree- " able to us; and it is our moſt poſitive direction, that no " deviation from thoſe orders be permitted, but upon " the moſt urgent and abſolute neceſſity (as that alone " can juſtify a departure from them) For the proſpect " of any advantages, however alluring, can in nowiſe be " adequate to the pernicious conſequences which muſt " reſult from examples of diſobedience to our orders.

" The ſentiments expreſſed by the majority in the " 36th paragraph of their addreſs, coincide exactly with " our own; their determination to endeavour to maintain " peace in India, and vigorouſly to defend our poſſeſſions " and allies, cannot be too much applauded: we there- " fore ſtrictly enjoin every Member of our Council, to " concur heartily in ſuch meaſures as may be neceſſary " for accompliſhing theſe deſirable purpoſes."

The ſame plan of repreſentation which has before been ſhewn in regard to the general ſtate of the Revenues, and of the condition and diſtribution of the Military Force, is here annexed, being taken at a period when the new Government had examined and arranged the ſeveral objects of them. And as the mode of collecting the Revenues is both a curious and intereſting ſubject of information, and as many new arrangements and alterations had taken place therein, ſince the Report made by your former Committee in 1773 upon that ſubject, we now deſire to refer the Houſe to the Appendix, wherein is inſerted the Account which the Governor General gave of it to the other Members of the new Government, who might be ſuppoſed as yet unacquainted with the regulations in practice.

Governor General's Minute, 25 October 1774. — Appendix, No. 45.

The further proſecution of this branch of enquiry, after the ſubject of it came under the regulation of a new Government in Bengal, may be hereafter advantageouſly attended to by your Committee, in a ſeparate Report. The object of the preſent Report, upon this head, is completed (according to our intimation ſtated above) at this period.

(Signed) J. Clavering,
Commander in Chief in India.

Your Committee find, that a few days after the assumption of their new Government, the Supreme Council acquainted the other Presidencies of that event, in the following General Letter: "We are to inform you of "our having taking possession of the Government of "this Presidency, in virtue of the late Act of Parliament; and as by that Act we are also charged with "the political concerns of the Company all over India, "we desire that as soon as possible you transmit to us "an accurate state of the posture of affairs in your Pre-"sidenc respecting the Country Powers, their interests "and probable connections with each other, with the "Company, and with other European nations; and in "fine, that you furnish us as soon as possible, and from "time to time, with the most complete lights possible "on these points, to enable us to form a judgment "upon them, and to direct their fututure conduct.

"We are,

"Fort William, "Your obedient
"24 Oct'. 1774. "humble Servants, &c."

Your Committee however observe, that previous to the arrival of this Letter at Bombay, the President and Council had resolved to engage in a scene of active operations in that quarter; the relation of which, with their long train of consequences, is to form the bulk of this Report, which we put together for the information of the House, on the history of the Maratta war.

Before however that we enter into this narrative, your Committee think it necessary to give some introductory

Account

Account of the ſtate of the Revenues, and of the poſture of political affairs under that Preſidency, for a few years previous to the commencement of theſe tranſactions, that a more certain judgment may be formed of the ſtrength and reſources on which alone they could aſſuredly depend for ſupport, when they ventured to begin an enterprize directly tending to a war with the Marattas.

Your Committee have already explained to the Houſe, the plan which we have adopted for a conciſe, and at the ſame time an accurate repreſentation of the ſources of Revenue, and the objects of diſburſement, under the two Preſidencies of Bengal and Bombay; and we have in the courſe of our obſervations on the ſtate of the former, ſubmitted the finiſhed ſpecimens of information on thoſe heads. Meaning to proceed in the ſame method with reſpect to Bombay, your Committee here preſent the view of the ſtate of that Government, in the years 1771, 1772, 1773, under the title of Revenue and Military Force, to which it has been neceſſary in this caſe to add an Account of the aids received from Bengal.

The orders of the Company before and during the period in queſtion, to their adminiſtration at Bombay, your Committee find to be drawn up in the ſame ſpirit, and directed to the ſame objects, as thoſe which they had addreſſed to their other Governments, viz. the preſervation of peace, and a ſyſtem of defence.

Yet it is to be obſerved, that they were not without wiſhes for ſome extenſion of territory in that quarter, and had early recommended, in very ſtrong terms, to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, an attentive endeavour upon every occaſion that might offer, to obtain a grant of Salſette and Baſſein from the Marattas. And it is further to be remarked, that their inſtructions in regard to the mode of making this acquiſition were at firſt rather indefinite: "We cannot directly point out the "mode of doing it, but rather wiſh they could be ob- "tained by purchaſe than war." In the following year, when the Court had been informed of ſome negotiations which the Bombay Government had attempted to enter into with the Marattas for theſe purpoſes, they thus expreſſed their approbation of thoſe proceedings:

Appendix. No. 47. Extract of General Letter to Bombay, 18 March 1768.

Extract of a General Letter to D°, 31 Mar. 1769.

"The opening a negotiation with the Marattas "was a very proper meaſure, and Mr. Moſtyn acquitted "himſelf highly to our ſatisfaction.

"The demands made on them in return for the ad- "vantages they were to expect from our ſucceſs againſt "Hyder Ally, were alſo very proper: Salſette and Baſſein, "with their dependencies, and the Marattas proportion "of the Surat provinces, were all that we ſeek for on "that ſide of India.

"Theſe are the objects you are to have in view, in all "your treaties, negotiations, and military operations, "and that you muſt be ever watchful to obtain; always "attentive to convince the Country Powers theſe are and "ever will be the utmoſt limits of our views on the "weſtern ſide of India."

Your Committee do not find that any ſucceſs attended theſe negotiations. In 1770, a treaty of peace took place between the Preſidency and Hyder Ally; and the Court of Directors, in the obſervations which they made upon it in their Letter to the Select Committee, ſignified their diſſatisfaction at any engagement to furniſh Hyder with warlike ſtores, and urged, as a powerful reaſon againſt it, that it might interrupt the good underſtanding they were very deſirous of cultivating with Madarow the Peſhwa; becauſe by a ſteady adherence to a neutral plan, and by keeping up a reſpectable force, ready to repel invaders, they could alone hope to enjoy peace at their Settlements.

Letter dated 18 April 1772 to Select Committee. No. 47.

But it appears that the Court wrote at the ſame time to the Council, and that Mr. Moſtyn, who had been in England, was the bearer of the Letter in which they ſignified their orders for the appointment of that Gentleman to be their Reſident at Poona, in the view of acquiring an advantageous agreement with the Durbar for the general welfare of their Settlements on the Malabar Coaſt, and in pointing out again, as the particular aim of this deputation, the deſire of obtaining Salſette and Baſſein; they however expreſsly declared their reſolution to maintain a ſteady harmony with Madarow, and to hold out to him certain objects as equivalents in exchange for thoſe places. And we perceive that the Government of Bombay accordingly diſpatched Mr. Moſtyn with inſtructions; which will be found in the Appendix.—Of the events ariſing from this meaſure, nothing more ſeems in this place neceſſary to be obſerved, than that the Reſident was ſoon made ſenſible, that the acquiſition of the diſtricts in queſtion, were not to be hoped for by the means of negotiation.

Appendix, No. 48. Letter to Preſident and Council, 1ſt April 1772.

Bombay Sel. Conſ. 26th September 1772. Letter to Court of Directors, 4 December 1772, Par. 10.

No. 48.

But though the views and expectations of the Company, and of their Servants, were in this inſtance diſappointed, another tranſaction was carried on by the Preſident and Select Committee with more ſucceſs. They appear to have made a demand upon the Nabob of Broach, in the month of April 1771, for a conſiderable ſum pretended to be due on account of the Phoorza, which had been withheld from the Government of Surat for 40 years, and the overcharge in the Cuſtoms, on the Merchants trading under the Company's protection for near ſix years. The Government ſoon after thought it neceſſary to ſend a body of troops towards Broach, in order to perſuade the Nabob to compliance: but this expedition was attended with no adequate effect; and indeed, the attempt made for the reduction of the place, was quickly abandoned with circumſtances of diſgrace. In conſequence however of theſe threatening deſigns, the Nabob came down to the Preſidency to ſettle terms of agreement; and the Preſident and Select Committee thereupon added a further charge for the expence which they had incurred, in being obliged to march the detachment on that ſervice. Your Committee have placed in the Appendix the moſt material Papers, which contain the beſt information of theſe proceedings, wherein it will be found, that the Nabob complained of his inability to pay the ſums required; that his hand had been held; he had been brought down to Bombay, and only depended on their moderation and favour for the eſtabliſhment of a friendſhip agreeable to his wiſhes. The ſtate of the demand which the Preſident, according to his own account, made upon the Nabob was as follows:

No. 49.

"The demands on account of the Phoorza of Broach "is eſtimated at 70,000 rupees a year; which having "been withheld for 40 years, amounts to 28 lacks; but "the Nabob ſays, it has not been paid theſe 50 or 60 "years, which increaſes the demand proportionably. "This was granted by Phirmaund, from the Mogul to "the Nabobſhip of Surat, about 150 years ſince.

President Hornby's Minute.

"The next is for what has been collected on account "of Cuſtoms, from the Merchants trading under the "Company's protection for about ſix years paſt, eſtimated "at 25,000 a year, amounts to R. 1,50,000; next the "charge of the expedition laſt May, amounting to be- "tween two and three lacks of rupees, which makes "the whole demand on him amount to about 33 lacks; "and that he ſettles a certain ſum to be paid in Surat "annually, in the month of July, on account of the "Phoorza, viz. 12, 15, or 20,000 R', with proper "ſecurity."

But your Committee obſerve, that it was not expected to gain the diſcharge of the whole demand: "If we "can get 5 or 6 lacks for our demands, it will be well, "or more if poſſible, when I think we may enter into "an alliance with him, and take into conſideration what "he has pointed out regarding Guzurat."

Of this latter circumſtance, your Committee have obſerved theſe particulars. The Nabob ſoon after his arrival at the Preſidency, endeavoured to conciliate the favour of the Government, and he ſeems to have conſidered the following repreſentation as the moſt efficacious argument he could uſe for that purpoſe.

"If you will think about having the country of the "Guzurat into your hands for the Company, I ſhall, "agreeable to your order, be ready with my forces, "being very well acquainted therewith. This affair "ſhall be ſettled ſo that you will be much pleaſed there- "by, and it will bring in a large income and property, "becauſe all the country is empty (meaning without "proper forces to guard it). The whole of this country "can be conquered within a year: the revenues are "more than one crore of rupees. When you will "ſettle about this affair, and reſolve to undertake this "enterprize, I ſhall give you all the particulars regard- "ing it, after your Honour's pleaſure."

It appears, however, that the terms of accommodation between the Nabob and the Bombay Government were not eaſily ſettled, and that after the offer and refuſal of ſeveral overtures, he was about to quit the Preſidency, when at laſt, on the 30th November 1771, he was induced to ſign the treaty of agreement, which will be ſeen in the Appendix, and by which all fees and exactions on trade at Broach were to be impoſed and levied only by the Company. They were to have a factory to the excluſion exclusion of all other Europeans except the Dutch, who had already eſtabliſhed one in it; ſtipulations of military engagements were arranged; and finally, the Nabob acknowledged himſelf indebted to the Governor and Council, the ſum of 4 lacks, which he promiſed to pay at ſtated periods.

1ſt April 1772. Par. 34, 35, 36, 37. Appendix, No. 50.

But your Committee find, that the Court of Directors ſignified their ſevere diſpleaſure at the conduct of their Servants at Bombay, both on account of undertaking this enterprize, which they deemed unwarrantable as well as expenſive, and of the failure of it, which reflected diſcredit on their arms, and was wholly to be attributed to their miſmanagement. They added a further mark of cenſure, becauſe of this attempt being wantonly ſet on foot at a time when the Committee had declared themſelves under the greateſt difficulties to raiſe ſupplies for the indiſpenſable occaſions of their Preſidency.

Ibid. Par. 32, 33, & Treaty with Nabob of Cambaye.

And it appears, that the Court expreſſed no leſs reſentment at another expedition (deſcribing it as the reſult of ſudden caprice and cruelty) which the Government of Bombay had undertaken againſt the Coolies, when the firſt object of their armament had been diverted, by the ſubmiſſion of the Nabob of Cambaye, to receive a Naib at their recommendation.

Do.

Letter to the Court of Directors, 20 November 1772, Par. 42 to 52 inclusive. Appendix, No. 51.

Previous to the arrival of this Letter to Bombay, ſome doubts had ariſen about the ſincere intention of the Nabob of Broach, to perform the articles of agreement, and a queſtion was thereupon agitated, but left undecided in the Committee, reſpecting the proper conduct they ſhould hold towards him. The ſame point, however, appears to have been thereupon referred to the Council Board, when the majority of the Members (the Letter from the Court being then before them) reſolved to fit out an armament to procure ſatisfaction for the baſe violation of the treaty, and to reſtore the credit of their arms, which had ſuffered by the failure of the firſt expedition.

See Letters of Governor Hornby, Gen. Wedderburne, &c. Letter from Bombay to Court of Directors, 4th Dec. 1772. Letter 12 Apr. 1775, Par. 43 to 52 inclusive. No. 51.

But although the event of this enterprize was entirely ſucceſsful, except in the loſs of a gallant and able Commander, Colonel Wedderburne, who was killed at the attack of the fort, and was very much regretted, your Committee obſerve, that it was not attended with ſuch advantages as to reconcile the Court of Directors to it; who indeed on this occaſion repeated their general diſapprobation of engaging, without abſolute neceſſity, in military expeditions, and teſtified their particular diſpleaſure at this conqueſt, the expences of which were not likely to be defrayed from its reſources in a reaſonable time, without oppreſſing the inhabitants.

The reduction of this place was followed by an agreement with Futty Sing, under date 12th January 1773, by which the ſeparate ſhares of the Revenues were regulated between him and the Bombay Government in the ſame proportions as before the conqueſt, both within the town and the territory annexed thereto.

Bom. Conſ. 24 January 1773, and 2 [illegible] 1773. Appendix, No. 52.

It may be proper here to remark, that no reference was made to the Poona Government for a confirmation of this agreement; and that no objection was ſtated by them at that time to Mr. Moſtyn, againſt the right of the Guicawars to form ſuch engagement without their interference. It ſhould however be at the ſame time obſerved, that the attention of the ruling powers of the Maratta State was then wholly occupied with the management of their own nearer concerns; and the Mudſuddies, after the death of Madhaiow, and the appointment of Ragoba to the Naibſhip, were directing their principal vigilance to ſupplant him in the adminiſtration of the Government.

Appendix, 53. Bom. Conſ. 17 September 1773; Preſident's Propoſals.

The opportunities which the enſuing diſtractions of the Durbar apparently offered to the neighbouring powers, of accompliſhing any object of negotiation with the Marattas, were not overlooked by the Select Committee of Bombay, wherein it was propoſed to make ſome advantage of the late events, for obtaining the ſeveral points propoſed by their honourable Maſters, when they fixed a Reſident at that Court. And your Committee find, that in the month of January following, the Select Board wrote to the Court of Directors, informing them of the new revolution at Poona, whereby Ragoba had acquired poſſeſſion of the ſupreme government, though his ſituation therein was deemed precarious; and they further obſerved, that as the meaſures they had uſed to obtain Salſette by treaty were not likely to prove ſucceſsful, they had determined, in caſe of his death, or that he ſhould be depoſed, to poſſeſs themſelves of it by a different method.

12 January 1774, Par. 2, 3, 4. No. 53.

But it appears that the Court of Directors, in their Diſpatch under date 12th April 1775, though they ſtill continued to avow their great deſire of gaining poſſeſſion of that Iſland and of Baſſein, ſtrictly prohibited their Servants at Bombay from attempting the acquiſition of them by any other means than by negotiation. Long however even before the writing of that Letter, Salſette and the ſmaller adjacent Iſlands were reduced under the dominion of the Company, by the other method, of which the Select Committee had intimated their probable intentions to make experiment on the failure of pacific overtures, Appendix, No. 54. General Letter from the Court of Directors, Par. 53, 12th April 1775.

The particular circumſtances which haſtened the execution of that plan, your Committee will proceed to relate, premiſing only a few obſervations on the ſtate of the Military force, and of the Revenues under that Preſidency at the period immediately preceding, and at the commencement of theſe tranſactions. Theſe indeed will be made apparent by the annexed Abſtracts.

(Signed) Robert Gordon,
Brig' General.

We ſhall add to them merely theſe remarks, that, in the year 1771, upon the alarm of a rupture with France and Spain, the Court of Directors, anxious to provide againſt any poſſible attempt on their Settlements on the Malabar Coaſt, inſtructed and exhorted their adminiſtration of Bombay to ſtrengthen their fortifications and other means of defence. Theſe articles indeed appear to have been before that time expenſive to the Company in a conſiderable degree, as may be ſeen by an account of them which we have placed in the Appendix, eſpecially in 1768, when Colonel Campbell was ſent to inſpect the ſtate of the fortifications, and poſitive orders were given to the Council implicitly to follow his plan. The military eſtabliſhment was at the ſame time much enlarged. In the courſe however of the year 1772, ſome ſteps were taken by the Preſident and Committee, towards a reduction of the military charges, becauſe they were aware of their inability to ſupport them, and a reform ſtill more effectual was only delayed by the repreſentation of the Commander in Chief, that it would be adviſable to wait for his return from the expedition then ſet on foot againſt the Nabob of Broach. On the Select Conſultations of the 3d of April 1773, your Committee find a diſcuſſion of the ſubject of a proper eſtabliſhment for the defence of Bombay in time of war, which very greatly exceeded the number of men that was thought to be neceſſary by the Court of Directors, who argued from analogy to the force which had protected Madras againſt the French when it was beſieged by them; and they reſted alſo much on the advantageous ſituation of Bombay for a leſſer garriſon than that propoſed, being able to prevent a ſiege, or to protract it, till ſuccours could be ſent from Bengal and Madras, which, as long as they maintained their ſuperiority in thoſe Provinces, and eſpecially their ſuperiority at ſea, might be provided on the ſhorteſt warning. And on the extent and expence of the fortifications, requiring ſo large a garriſon, they obſerved, that they had reaſon "to lament, that any new works had been undertaken, "being fully of opinion, that if the old walls had been left, "as they ſtood many years ago, the intereſt of the "money which had been ſunk in fortifications ſince that "time, would have maintained troops ſufficient to have "rendered the place impregnable to the combined forces "of Indoſtan, and to have ſecured it from any attack "which the French were capable of making in that "quarter."

In the orders which the Court tranſmitted at the ſame time, for fixing the future military eſtabliſhment of that Preſidency, they included every command and detachment for the ſubordinates; adding this particular direction in regard to Broach: "So long as Broach ſhall be in "our poſſeſſion, and yield us an adequate Revenue, we "permit you to keep a garriſon in that place, conſiſting "of 1,000 men, over and above the number ſpecified in "our ſaid eſtabliſhment."

From an account given of ſome of theſe circumſtances by a Member of the Bombay Council, your Committee have found, that as the ſituation of that place, the excellence of its port, and more eſpecially the advantages afforded by it to the marine in receiving large ſhips into dock for the purpoſe of repairs, were conſidered as objects of the firſt importance, and the preſervation of which would juſtify very extraordinary expences on the works and fortifications; ſo however from thence there aroſe a greater difficulty to ſupply the neceſſary reſources of treaſure. On this head he wrote as follows; "Previous "to this (1768) the expences of Bombay exceeded its "Revenues, but this great increaſe they (the Court of "Directors) were ſenſible muſt diſtreſs the Government "there for means to defray them, and furniſh their Inveſt-"ments for Europe and China. Knowing that a terri-"torial acquiſition could alone furniſh a Revenue equal "to the neceſſities of that Settlement, they laid down a "ſyſtem for the attainment of one; this was the acqui-"ſition of Salſette and Baſſein with the Maratta ſhare of "the Revenues of Surat, which they imagined would "about complete their views."

The convenient ſituation of Bombay for commerce, which alone for a long time ſeems to have engaged the attention of the Company in that Settlement, and the means of introducing into the Maratta Country a ſupply of Engliſh goods, are pointed out in the paper which we have put in the Appendix; and we have alſo found therein ſome obſervations on the benefits which aroſe to the Company in that light, from the influence they had in the Government of Surat, which not only enabled them in a great meaſure "to give a conſiderable "check to the commerce of the European Nations "already eſtabliſhed there, but if well exerted, to pre-"vent any others from interfering; a power more valu-"able, as Surat was next to Bombay, the chief mart "for the vend of ſtaples, the monopoly of which was "their great and leading commercial view in the Weſt of "India."

Concerning the ſtate of the finances, your Committee have only to obſerve, that the Preſidency of Bombay made frequent declarations of their diſtreſs for want of money; and in a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal to the Court of Directors, under date 22 Auguſt 1774, we find the following ſtriking account of it: "the Pre-"ſidency of Bombay have again applied to us for a large "ſupply of money, ſetting forth their diſtreſſes in the "ſtrongeſt terms, and requeſting immediate relief. We "have anſwered them, that the ſtate of our finances and "demands here did not enable us to furniſh them to the "extent they required, but that we would cheerfully lend "our aſſiſtance in the moſt ſpeedy manner, as far as 15 "lacks we had engaged to ſupply them within the courſe "of the year, could we find the means of remittance."— And it appears that ſome ſhips returning from the gulph with the produce of the trade for three years, furniſhed an opportunity of leaving ſpecie at Bombay to the amount for which the Preſident and Council were permitted to draw bills on Bengal, though not to the extent which they had repreſented the diſtreſſes of their ſituation to require.

Your Committee having thus finiſhed, as fully as the ſhorteſs of the time would allow for conſulting the very voluminous records from which we have extracted our materials, an introductory review of the general ſtate of Indian politics, and alſo of the territorial poſſeſſions, revenue and military eſtabliſhments, under the two Preſidencies of Bengal and Bombay, for a few years previous to the commencement of the new Adminiſtration, which took place at the cloſe of the year 1774; we ſhall only in concluſion expreſs a wiſh that this account, incomplete and incorrect as it certainly is, may tend to elucidate in ſome degree ſeveral incidents of the following narrative, which we now ſubmit to the Houſe, of the riſe and progreſs of the Maratta war.

Your Committee find, that in the month of November 1774, the Select Committee of Bombay, in conſequence of advices from their Reſident at Goa, that the Portugueſe deſigned to attempt the recovery of the dominions they formerly poſſeſſed to the Northward (eſpecially Salſette and Baſſein) and that there could be no doubt of their ſucceſs in the enterprize, came to a reſolution of preventing the execution of theſe plans, by ſeizing the Iſland of Salſette for the Company, "who had ſo frequently ex-"preſſed their ardent wiſhes to obtain it." They at the ſame time explained many reaſons in confirmation of this reſolution; ſome ariſing from the ill conſequences to their trade, if the Portugueſe ſhould take poſſeſſion of that Iſland, and thereby gain the command of the Paſſes inland; others from the favourable opportunity to make themſelves maſters of it, as the diviſions in the Maratta Government relieved them from the apprehenſion of any obſtruction to their proceedings. It appears alſo from the Preſident's Report, that there was reaſonable hope of effecting this acquiſition by the aſſiſtance of certain people, people, who had offered to deliver up the Iſland to the Company's forces; and the Committee accordingly reſolved to deſire and empower the Preſident to cloſe as expeditiouſly as poſſible with this offer, on the beſt terms that could be had: and, that no interruption might be given to the negotiation then depending with Ragoba, it was further determined to write a Letter to Mr. Gambier at Surat, containing inſtructions to him, by which he was directed to aſſure Ragoba, "that if he would not be "induced to cede the Iſland to the Company, they would "give it up to him, on his granting them what they "would deem an equivalent for it, and paying the charge "they ſhould incur, whenever he might be in full poſſeſ-"ſion of the Maratta Empire." It appeared alſo neceſſary to acquaint Mr. Moſtyn, who was then Reſident at Poonah, with theſe intentions; and (as they wiſhed not to make this ſtep a means of breaking the good underſtanding they had till now maintained with the Miniſters) they directed him to remain at Poonah as long as he could conſiſtently with a regard for his perſonal ſafety, and endeavour to reconcile the Miniſters to this meaſure, by giving them the like aſſurances of future ceſſion on the ſame terms, in caſe their party ſhould prevail in the conteſt, and ſhould not agree to leave it in the poſſeſſion of the Company. The Letter, however to Mr. Moſtyn, was not to be forwarded "till matters were ſo far advanced, as "to put it out of the power of the Miniſtry in any degree "to obſtruct their views."

And it appears, that a remark was then entered by the Select Committee in this Conſultation, that they did not think themſelves prohibited from undertaking this affair, as they had not heard of the arrival of all the Council at Bengal, who under the late Act of Parliament were to compoſe the new Government; and that indeed had they been apprized of their arrival, they ſhould ſtill think themſelves authorized to proceed without delay, agreeable to a Clauſe in the Act, "and to the repeated orders "of the Court of Directors."

And, in order to be provided with an additional force at Bombay for theſe purpoſes, they (the Select Board) "agreed to embrace that opportunity of reducing the "garriſons of Tellicherry and Anjengo."

Bombay Sel. Conſ. 1 December 1774. Appendix, No. 59.

And your Committee find, that the Select Board informed the Court of Directors of theſe affairs and deſigns by Letter, dated 1ſt December 1774; and it appears thereby, that a negotiation had been carrying on with Ragoba, for the grant of certain territories in return for the aid of a body of the Company's troops, which he ſolicited of the Preſidency, with the view of eſtabliſhing him in the Government of the Maratta Empire; that he was not however willing to cede the Iſlands of Salſette and Baſſein, which they had demanded; but as they expected to gain much more material advantages elſewhere, "they did not think it for the intereſt of their honourable "Employers to run the riſque of overſetting the whole "on that account." That they had therefore tendered the aſſiſtance of their troops on ſpecified terms, by which they were to acquire to the Company for ever, an increaſe of territory yielding an annual Revenue of above 18 lacks of Rupees; that they had empowered Mr. Gambier to enter into a Treaty with Ragoba on thoſe conditions; from which, even if they might recede in part, they ſhould hope for the approbation of the Company, as the benefit would be ſtill conſiderable and laſting, and there could be no doubt of ſucceſs to the attempt in favour of Ragoba, with the body of forces which they propoſed to ſend to him.

B. C. Gordon's Journal, December 18th, 1774. Appendix, No 60. N.B. Portuguese Proteſt, Do.

And your Committee find, that on the 12th December Brigadier General Gordon ſet out from Bombay with a conſiderable force for the reduction of Tanna, the principal fort in the Iſland of Salſette; and that on the 30th of the ſame month, the Preſident and Council wrote to the Court of Directors an account of the complete ſucceſs of the expedition, Tanna having been carried by aſſault on the 28th.

Bomb. Gen. Conſ. 20 December 1774.

But it appears, that on the 20th the Preſident and Council read in General Conſultation, a Letter from the Governor General and Council, which was received on the 7th, ſignifying their having taken upon them the Government of Bengal, and deſiring to be furniſhed with accounts of the Company's political concerns on that ſide of India.

Appendix, 61. Dated 24th October 1774.

The anſwer, dated 31ſt December, appears to contain information (particularly) of the motives which had induced that Preſidency to undertake the reduction of Salſette by force of arms; which attempt had been begun, and accounts of it ſent to Europe, previous to the receipt of the Letter dated 24th October from Bengal, by which they were firſt made acquainted with the actual commencement and exerciſe of the new Government.

Appendix, No 62. Ben. Sec. Conſ. 8 March 1775.

The acquiſition of this Iſland and Baſſein, and their dependencies, had been, they obſerve, recommended to them by the Court of Directors, to be made the conſtant object of their view in all their treaties, negotiations, and military operations. That Mr. Moſtyn, one of their Members, had by expreſs inſtructions from home been appointed to reſide at Poona, whether he went in 1772, before the troubles began in the Maratta State; and that although it appeared impoſſible to gain poſſeſſion of theſe places by grant from the Marattas, they had long abſtained from any violent meaſures, notwithſtanding the favourable conjuncture, and "the reaſons to conclude, that Salſette "and the ſmaller adjacent Iſlands were ceded to the "Crown by the marriage contract between King Charles "II. and the Princeſs of Portugal;" but that the deſigns of the Portugueſe had at laſt impelled them to proceed by force and without delay, which had been the occaſion of their not having waited to hear of the eſtabliſhment of the Supreme Council in Fort William, and to conſult them on ſo important a matter. That although they had thought it adviſable to recal Mr. Moſtyn from Poona on that occaſion, they ſhould nevertheleſs take every proper ſtep to reconcile the Miniſters to their proceeding, and to prevent a rupture with them; but as the Maratta fleet might probably make depredations on the Malabar Coaſt, which they had not a ſufficient marine to defend, they ſhould apply to Sir Edward Hughes, ſuppoſing him to be at Madras, for ſome of his ſquadron to protect their trade; and that as their military force was not ſufficient to garriſon their new conqueſts, they alſo intended to ſolicit a reinforcement from the Preſidency of Fort Saint George: that Ragoba had about twelve months before, made overtures for aſſiſtance of men and money, in return for which, he was ready to cede ſome territorial advantages to the Company: that a negotiation which enſued, was brought nearly to a concluſion, when the Agent employed for that purpoſe, being abſent in collecting Revenues for his maſter, was ſurprized and ſeized by a party of the miniſterial forces; and Ragoba, who had drawn near to Surat with a conſiderable army, ſuddenly ſeparated himſelf, on an apprehenſion of treachery from the greateſt part of them, and was then retreating with thoſe he could confide in towards Delhi, but had promiſed a ſpeedy return, and immediately thereupon to conclude the Treaty, which they on their part alſo meant to complete as ſoon as poſſible; and did not doubt of the approbation of the Court of Directors, and of the Supreme Council, when they reflected on the advantage ariſing from it to the Company; and particularly, that this Preſidency would thereby no longer continue an annual incumbrance on that of Fort William.

See Ben. Sec. Conſ. 9 Oct. 1775. Mr. Taylor's Examination. App. No. 83.

Your Committee find, however, that this Letter was not received by the Governor General and Council till March; and that ſome time before they had been made acquainted of theſe proceedings by intimations and reports from Mr. Moſtyn at Poona, and from the Chief of Tellicherry, tranſmitted by the Governor and Council of Madras; who had at the ſame time deſired advice by which to regulate their conduct, in caſe they ſhould receive a demand for aſſiſtance from Bombay, ſtating, at the ſame time, the inſufficiency of their force and reſources to engage in a war, as they ſo much depended for both both on the Nabob of the Carnatic. It appears, that in consequence of these accounts, Letters had been sent from Fort William on the 16th January and 3d February, to Bombay, in which the Governor General and Council express their surprize at not receiving more immediate information from them of their political situation: that they must expect the most particular accounts of all events that had happened, or might occur, as they must remain inactive till they heard from Bombay; and therefore held the President and Council responsible for the consequences of this suspence.

Appendix, No. 64. Your Committee also find, that the Governor General, on the 3d of February 1775, proposed the contents of a Letter to be written to Fort Saint George, in which, after thanking the President and Council for conveying the intelligence respecting the affairs of Bombay, they should declare, "that they could not apprehend any consequences "which were likely to affect the Company's interests in "the Carnatic, or require the interposition of that Pre-"sidency," or draw them from a cautionary attention to the defence of their own possessions to any more distant operations; and that they would therefore only "recom-"mend it to them to keep a watchful eye over the French "and Hyder Ally."

February 3d, 1775. Dr. The Governor General appears to have at the same time offered to the consideration of the Board, some observations upon the probable consequences of the step which the Presidency of Bombay had taken; and he seemed to think, that there should be no apprehension of any attempt at retaliation on the part of the Marattas, because of the prevailing distractions in their Government, and the exhausted state of their strength and resources; "where those who composed the actual Govern-"ment, had yet too formidable an opponent in Ragonaut "Row, the regular Chief, to engage in new contests," or even to act with vigour against the Presidency of Bombay: that of the other powers who might on this pretext seek to create trouble to the Company's affairs, Hyder Ally "understood his own interest too well to quarrel with the "English, from whom he could gain nothing, and with "whom he might hazard all he had:" that on these grounds, he "thought it unnecessary to take any imme-"diate measure for obviating the consequences of the "supposed injuries offered by the Presidency of Bombay "to the Maratta Government."

The draft of the Letter thus proposed by the Governor General, appears not to have been agreed to by the majority of the Council.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 8 March 1775. Appendix, No. 65. But your Committee find, that it was agreed by the Governor General and Council, on the 8th March 1775, to send a Letter over land to Bombay, in reply to the President and Council's Letter of 31st December; and in it to complain of their proceedings against Salsette and Bassein, as a step of too much importance to have been undertaken, without giving the most early intelligence of their design, even to the last Administration of Fort William, had they really not known of the new Government's having taken place. They observed, that they were informed of the assistance sent by Fort Saint George on their requisition (which appears to have been a battalion of Sepoys) and that they would themselves afford them such support as might be necessary to prevent injury to the Company's affairs, though they should suspend their opinion on the late measures.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 23 March 1775. Sup.

N.B. This received at Bombay 21 May 1775.

They declared their disapprobation of the intended junction with Ragoba, and pointed out its impolicy, and the ill consequences which might ensue from it; and "positively directed the President and Council to suspend "their negotiations with him, till they should receive "further instructions from Bengal."

Ben. Sec. Conf. 23 March 1775, Letter, dated 4 January. Sec. Conf. 11 May 1775. Dr. Letter from Tellicherry, dated 9 February 1775. Appendix, No 66. And your Committee find, that Sir Edward Hughes, in consequence of application from Bombay, resolved to assist them with two ships; but that in the meantime the Company's cruizers had an engagement with the Maratta fleet, and defeated it; destroying their largest ship, and thereby probably disconcerting their plans.

Sec. Conf. 25 May 1775. Appendix, No. 67. See also Appendix 83. And it appears to your Committee, that the next intelligence which was received from Bombay at Bengal, was laid before the Board on the 25th of May, by General Clavering, being copies of a correspondence between Brigadier General Gordon and the President and Council, occasioned by their refusing him, and appointing Lieutenant Colonel Keating to the command of a body of troops which were to be sent to the assistance of Ragoba. And it further appears, that the Board having received no authentic information from the Government of Bombay of these transactions, resolved to dispatch a Letter of complaint on account of this neglect, and of the measures which, according to the above and other private intelligence, had been pursued in regard to Ragoba, protesting against all offensive engagements without consent of the Supreme Council, "as contradictory to the provisions "of the Act of Parliament for uniting the several Pre-"sidencies under the political superintendance of Bengal."

Sel. Conf. 31st M. 1775. Appendix, No. 68. And your Committee find, that on 31st of May a Letter was received from the President and Council of Bombay, dated 31st March, by which it appears, that they had not before written to the Governor General and Council since the 31st December, and that in the interval they had concluded an offensive Treaty with Ragoba, to whom they engaged the support of 2,500 of the Company's troops, on certain stipulations for their pay while in service, and for the cession of a considerable territorial Revenue, including Salsette and Bassein: that however in the moments of happily completing the articles of this agreement, and when the Company's troops had actually proceeded to Surat in order to join his army, Ragoba was unfortunately defeated in a sudden attack by the Minister's, and obliged to fly with only about 1,000 horse to Cambay, where being refused admittance, he made the best of his way to Bownagar, and from thence came in a galliot to Surat: that notwithstanding this severe loss, the majority of them did not consider his situation as desperate, he having still many powerful adherents, and had therefore resolved "not to give up the great advan-"tages they were to reap by the Treaty, when so fair an "opportunity offered of retrieving his affairs, by sending "their forces to Cambay to join his army." And as two companies of Europeans had actually arrived to their assistance from Madras, and a battalion of Sepoys was shortly expected, they resolved to complete a detachment of 2,500 men; and they sent them accordingly to Cambay, under Lieutenant Colonel Keating. It is to be observed, that Ragoba while at Surat, on the 6th March ratified the treaty, which was also executed by the Chief of Surat; and afterwards by the President and Council of Bombay on the 16th March, and will be found in the Appendix.

No. 68.

It appears, that the Governor General recorded a Minute upon this occasion; in which he avowed himself to condemn the conduct of the President and Council of Bombay, in making this Treaty, as "unreasonable, impolitic, "unjust, and unauthorized," because it had been attended with no decisive effects, but was likely to create an indefinite scene of troubles throughout India. He expressed an equal disapprobation of the manner in which the prosecution of the measure had been commenced, and therefore would protest against the Treaty as invalid, and the war as impolitic, dangerous, and unauthorized; but at the same time he confessed his doubts about the most advisable method of correcting the mischief "amidst such "a variety of probable contingencies, and under a total "ignorance of their plan of operations;" on which account he would only venture to propose, that the President and Council should be peremptorily enjoined to cancel the Treaty, and withdraw the detachment immediately to their own possessions, unless any of the following cases shall have occurred, viz.

31 May 1775. No. 68.

1st. "That they shall have obtained any decisive ad-"vantages over the enemy.

2d. "That the detachment shall have proceeded to "such

" ſuch a diſtance, or be in ſuch a ſituation, as to make it " dangerous either to retreat, or not to go on.

3d. " That a negociation ſhall have taken place be- " tween Ragoba and his opponents, in conſequence of the " ſupport afforded by their alliance."

He confeſſed that he offered his opinions with theſe exceptions, becauſe in this unfortunate dilemma, he ſaw no option but that of the leaſt evil.

The majority of the Board appear to have agreed to withdraw the troops without any exception but the ſingle conſideration of their ſafety; and at the ſame time to have all reſolved, in conſequence of a motion made by General Clavering, to endeavour to open a negociation with the ruling Government at Poona, to inform the Preſidency of Bombay of this reſolution, to direct them to encourage and receive any pacific overtures which might be made to them; and to " hold as the firſt objects, " an immediate ceſſation of arms, and a confirmation " of the Iſlands of Salſette and Baſſein to the Company."

See Letter to Bombay of this date. Do.

And your Committee find, that the Governor General hereupon informed the Board, that the perſon whom the miniſterial party had conſtituted Peſhwa, was an infant; and that the conduct of the affairs of the ſtate being entruſted to Siccaram Baboo, it would be proper to communicate to him by Letter, the intentions of the Board previous to the entering upon a negociation. A Letter appears to have been agreed to and prepared accordingly.

Letter to Siccaram Baboo, 31 May 1775. Do.

Ben. Sec. Conſ. 21 June 1775. Appendix, No. 69.

And it appears, that on the 21ſt of June, in Conſultation on the appointment of a proper perſon for the deputation to Poona, the Governor General propoſed Colonel Dow; but the majority of the Board agreeing in high eſteem of the merits and abilities of Colonel Dow, were at the ſame time of opinion, that he was too uſefully employed in his office of Commiſſary General to be ſpared from that duty; and General Clavering having therefore named Lieutenant Colonel Upton for this charge of negociation, the Board unanimouſly agreed to depute him, immediately ſettled his allowance, and ordered that he ſhould be ſent for by the Secretary to receive his inſtructions; in which it was reſolved to direct him, that in any Treaty he might form with the Maratta miniſters, he would endeavour alſo to include Ragoba in ſuch Treaty, " and to obtain for him ſuch terms, as in his " actual ſituation it might appear reaſonable to expect, " and which might not fruſtrate the immediate objects of " the negociation:" that he ſhould try to make it on terms as advantageous to the Company as could be obtained; and particularly to be aware, that he muſt not relinquiſh the poſſeſſion of Salſette and Baſſein, but ſeek to convince the Miniſters that thoſe places would not be ſafe in their hands if they ſhould be given up to them, becauſe the Portugueſe would immediately ſeize them from the Marattas, which they would not attempt to do from the Engliſh.

Ben. Sec. Conſ. 26 June 1775. Appendix, No. 70.

And your Committee find, that on the 26th June, a Letter dated 30th April was received by the Governor General and Council from the Preſident and Council of Bombay, acquainting them of the junction of their forces with thoſe of Ragoba near Cambay, on the 19th April; that ſome of the Miniſters had deſerted the grand confederacy, and that his affairs were proſperous and promiſing, except in the want of money, which he had ſolicited of them, and they had refuſed; but that they muſt requeſt a large ſupply from Bengal, as the whole expence of the army would for the preſent fall on the Company.

See Conſ. July 5, 1775. Appendix, No. 71.

And it appears, that on the 5th July, further accounts of the ſituation of the Bombay affairs were received at Fort William, by Letters from Fort Saint George, dated 30th June 1775, incloſing a Letter from the Preſidency of Bombay to their Government, dated 1ſt June, and an Extract of a Letter from Colonel Keating; who informed them, that at the cloſe of a ſucceſsful engagement with the Marattas on the 18th May, a part of the Company's troops had by accident ſuſtained a conſiderable loſs.

Similar accounts arrived on the 10th of the ſame month, immediately from Bombay, in a Letter dated 1ſt of June from the Preſident and Council, who therein add, that the Company's troops, in conjunction with Ragoba's army, were on their march to Poona, and at that time probably arrived near Broach; they alſo acknowledged the receipt of the Letter from the Governor General and Council of the 8th March, which reached them on the 21ſt of May, and they promiſed to ſend their reply by the firſt direct conveyance, expreſſing only by this opportunity their thanks for aſſurance of aſſiſtance, and repeating their requeſt to be aided particularly by a ſum of money; they tranſmitted alſo a return of their forces, and of the ſtate of their revenues, and informed the Supreme Council, that they had appointed Mr. Moſtyn to reſide at Ragoba's Durbar, in order to relieve the Commander of the forces from all but military duties.

Sec. Conſ. 10 July 1775. Appendix, No. 72.

Your Committee obſerve, that the Board, after reading this Letter, reſolved to ſend an anſwer, expreſſive of their diſappointment and diſpleaſure at the unſatisfactory and imperfect accounts which they ſtill continued to receive from that Preſidency, particularly complaining of the unintelligible extract from Colonel Keating's Letter, and of the inattention and ſlight ſhewn to their enquiries and poſitive inſtructions of the 8th March; that a reply to them had been delayed for ten days, and then contained no information of the meaſures taken or meant to be purſued, except of one, of which they entirely diſapproved, namely, the deputation of Mr Moſtyn to Ragoba's Durbar, without acquainting them of the deſign of his miſſion. It appears that the copy of the inſtructions prepared for Mr. Moſtyn, were afterwards ſent to the Supreme Council on 14th October, but did not reach them till the 5th February following. They will be found in the Appendix.

No. 73.

Appendix, No. 97.

And your Committee find, that in the meantime Lieutenant Colonel Upton had arrived at the Preſidency, and had drawn up propoſals, which were laid before the Board by General Clavering, for his route to Poona, which he wiſhed to purſue by land through Allahabad to Calpee, from whence the high road uſually taken by the Marattas, leads to that capital. This plan appears to have been unanimouſly approved, and the Governor General being deſired to furniſh him with paſſes, and to write to the ſeveral powers through whoſe dominions he was to travel, for paſſports, guards, and other aſſiſtance to him on his journey, he received his letter of diſpatch on the ſame day; but we obſerve, that a few days afterwards he tranſmitted a paper of remarks on ſundry parts of his inſtructions which he thought required explanation; and it appears that the Board on the 17th ſent their anſwer to him, containing their explanatory orders and reſolutions on his queſtions and memorandums; and in them we remark, that they again poſitively enjoined him to hold a confirmation of the Iſlands of Salſette and Baſſein to be an indiſpenſable article in any Treaty he might enter into; and further apprized him, that Ragoba being the Peiſhwa or Ruler of the Maratta State, but driven out from Poona by the miniſterial party, who had proclaimed an infant in his ſtead, they could not in ſuch ſituation formally addreſs themſelves to either of the competitors, and had therefore referred him to Siccaram Baboo the ruling minister.

The Board appear alſo to have ſettled other leſs important matters relative to his pecuniary appointments, and to the number and quality of his attendants. They likewiſe, we find, then gave notice to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, that no Treaty negociated with them by the miniſterial party at Poona, would be eſteemed valid, unleſs ratified by Colonel Upton. And they alſo on the ſame day wrote a Letter of information to the Governor and Council of Fort St. George, of the appointment and objects of this deputation, and ordered a letter of credence to be delivered to Colonel Upton.

object of it; and therefore agreed to take that opportunity of surveying the peninsula of India, and of ascertaining the true distances of places through which Colonel Upton should pass, and appointed the Reverend Mr. Smith to attend him for that purpose.

Appendix, No. 75.

And the Governor General having received an account of the prosperous situation of Ragoba's affairs, in a paper of intelligence from the Decan, which he at this time laid before the Board, it was agreed on his proposition, to instruct Colonel Upton, that he should, in case of Ragoba's farther success, treat with that Prince, and that he should be provided accordingly with a letter of introduction to him, implying such powers of negociation.

See Letter to Ragoba, Co. Corr. July 31, 1775; and See also Letter to Saccaram Baboo, of the same date.

Your Committee find, that the promised answer from the Select Committee of Bombay to the Governor General and Council's Letter of 8th March, reached Fort William in the beginning of August; and we perceive thereby, that the Select Committee considered their Letter of 30th April, as containing satisfactory reasons for their former silence in regard to their designs and proceedings; and that, relying on the distractions in the Maratta State, for a security against the effects of any inimical disposition in the Ministers, they thought they might also depend upon the operation of the Treaty (in case of Ragoba's success) as a bond of restraint and gratitude upon him; that they never had any negociation with the Ministerialists, even before their agreement with Ragoba, but in what they had observed on that head to the Supreme Council, they meant only to intimate their intention of endeavouring, should that party become superior in the contest, to reconcile them to the attack on Salsette: that since the alliance formed with Ragoba, they had thought no more of the opposite party, and now were only bent on accomplishing their views in his favour, which, notwithstanding unpromising appearances, they should hope soon to effect; that they were herein actuated by the reflection of his being the rightful Supreme Governor of the Marattas, and of the advantages to be derived to the Company from the Treaty with him, particularly the right of possessing such places as Salsette and Bassein; that nothing was to be apprehended from the Bouncello's, as Mordajee Bouncello, who had now succeeded to the Berar Government by the death of his brother Shabajee, was a friend of Ragoba; that the opportunity of acquiring these advantages would have been lost if delayed till answers could have been returned from Bengal to their Letters, and that therefore they hoped for approbation, but at all events could point out a justification of their conduct in the clause of the Act before referred to; "that except "in such cases of necessity or expediency, they should "take no material step in political matters, without con- "currence of the Supreme Council."—They concluded with expressing more confident hopes from the reports of a successful engagement with the Marattas, and of dissensions in the ministerial confederacy.

Appendix, No 1.

And your Committee find, that a Letter from the Nabob of Arcot was now received by the Governor General; wherein the Nabob informed him, that the ministerial party at Poona having complained to him of the hostilities commenced against them by the Presidency of Bombay, and asked his mediation for peace, he was desirous, that the person deputed from Bengal should visit him in his route, and hear his sentiments upon the necessity of introducing some article or clause in the Treaty for the ease and security of the Carnatic, which might otherwise be in danger of attack from the resentment of the Marattas; and he hoped at all events, that, should the Deputy be already set out, he might be instructed by Letter to have regard to their mutual interests. And it appears that the Board having taken this Letter into consideration, did in consequence send directions to Colonel Upton, that he should pay attention to this request of the Nabob; and they at the same time added a command, that in any Treaty he might enter into with the Maratta State, he should require it, as an indispensable point, to be signed by all the Chiefs nominally and individually.

10 August 1775. Appendix, No. 77.

Ben. Sec. Cons. 16 August 1775. Letter to Col. Upton. 16 August, No. 77

On the same day the Board appear to have written to the Nabob, assuring him of their readiness to gratify his wishes; and repeating their disapprobation of the measures pursued by the Presidency of Bombay, they expressed their sincere resolution to restore tranquillity, by making peace with the ruling Government at Poona.

Letter to the Nabob 16 August. No. 77.

But your Committee find, that the receipt of two Letters from Bombay, dated 13th July and 6th August, occasioned much difference of opinion between the Members of the Supreme Council in their Secret Consultations of the 7th September following.

Ben. Sec. Cons. 7 September 1775. Appendix, No. 78.

The President and Council of Bombay in these Letters represented the important expediency of prosecuting the war in favour of Ragoba, at the same time declaring their disappointment from the ill behaviour of his troops, which had prevented the good consequence of constant advantages gained by the Company's troops, and made it necessary to ask for considerable reinforcements to them, as well as again to repeat their request for a liberal remittance of money "over and above the annual one of "15 lacks:" that they had written also on this subject to the Governor and Council of Fort St. George, and hoped, that from one or both of the Presidencies they should receive an adequate supply of troops in time to act with them on the opening of the campaign after the rains, which had now obliged their army to go into quarters at Dubboy near the Banks of the Nerbuddah, Ragoba having engaged to make further concessions of Territory for such additional aid. They however had some good accounts to communicate, as Futty Sing had made his peace with Ragoba, on terms very advantageous to that Prince and to the Company, especially by agreeing to pay Ragoba a contribution of 26 lacks of rupees within six weeks after the conclusion of the Treaty.

The Board, in consequence of these applications for assistance of men and money, appear to have then proposed the question, whether it should be granted? and we desire to refer the House to the Appendix, in which they will find the different opinions at large of the several Members; and we shall only observe in this place, that the Governor General and Mr. Barwell were disposed to agree to the proposition for granting assistance both of men and money; chiefly, because however improper and unjustifiable the conduct of the President and Council of Bombay might have been in the beginning of this contest, it was now become necessary, out of regard to the safety of all the Company's interests in India, to give them support, and endeavour by such means to extricate them from their difficulties; and that success to their future negociations could only be insured by a temporary, though vigorous exertion of the powers of their Government to maintain the ascendency they had acquired. General Clavering, Colonel Monson, and Mr. Francis, were against the question, on grounds principally of obedience to the orders of the Company, who had given it as a first and essential command to the new Administration, that they should be particularly attentive to the preservation of peace in India, which they had accordingly observed as an established principle and object of their own conduct; but the President of Bombay had in every respect unwarrantably and impolitically broken in upon that plan of the general tranquillity. They insisted, that it would indeed be impossible to spare a proper reinforcement from the Brigades in their Provinces; "and they supposed it "could not be thought advisable to divide and weaken "the Company's Forces upon the Coast, as the Carnatic "would be thereby left open to the invasions of the Ma- "rattas, and Madras itself exposed to insult from Hyder "Ally, or perhaps from an European enemy." They imputed at the same time to the Governor General a contradictory change of opinion, reminding him of his former sentiments expressed to the Board on the 31st May—The Governor General defended the consistency of his present arguments with those he formerly held, under the reservation of certain exceptions to the orders for recalling the troops, which he at that time advised.

Appendix, No. 78.

It

It appears that in the end the majority of the Board reſolved to ſend no reinforcement of troops, and to make an addition only of five lacks to the annual remittance of money, reckoning from the 1ſt May preceding. And we perceive, that a Letter was then written to the Preſident and Council, informing them of this reſolution, and directing them implicitly to obey the orders for withdrawing their troops, if they had not already executed them, and "to confine their views to the protection of the Com-"pany's poſſeſſions, including Salſette and the ceſſions "made by Futty Sing." The Board alſo acquainted them of their having poſitively enjoined the Governor and Council of Fort Saint George not to furniſh any ſupply of troops from their Preſidency.

Ben. Sec. Conſ. 11 September 1775. Appendix, No. 79.

A Letter indeed dated 26th Auguſt, was at this time received from Madras by the Governor General and Council; from which they learned that the requiſition of the Preſidency of Bombay had, in conſequence of the former orders from Bengal, been refuſed by the Governor and Council. And it appears, that the Preſident and Council of Bombay had the more earneſtly urged the Madras Board to compliance with their requeſt, from the reflection, that though the Governor General and Council had promiſed aſſiſtance from Bengal, the tranſporting of troops might be more eaſily made from Madras; and they expreſſed a further hope, that in conſideration of their great expences and the inſufficiency of their reſources, owing to the ſtop which the preſent ſituation of the Maratta Country had occaſioned to trade on their Coaſt, it might be convenient to them (the Madras Board) to furniſh the reinforcement they ſhould ſend with their own military cheſt.

The Governor and Council of Fort Saint George appear to have ſuggeſted an idea, that as the brother of Fezel Beg Cawn, Commander of the Souba's troops, was coming into their neighbourhood, they ſhould probably have an opportunity by his means of cementing a cloſer connection than already ſubſiſted between the Company and that Prince, which they thought might prove advantageous, not only in regard to the Northern Circars, but by forwarding the intention of this deputation to Poona. But it appears that the Governor General and Council in their anſwer thus expreſſed themſelves:—"We do not con-"ceive it neceſſary to employ the mediation of the Nizam "in effecting the propoſed Treaty with the Maratta Go-"vernment; and we think it is not likely that he would "willingly engage in it without ſome view to his own "advantage; and as it is not our intention to ſolicit a "reconciliation with the Maratta State, but to propoſe it "to them as an act of juſtice due from this Govern-"ment, and as being a duty enjoined us by the inſtructions "of the Court of Directors, for the preſervation of peace "throughout India, we judge it unneceſſary to enter into "any negociation for this end, either with the Nizam or "any other power, and mean to rely ſolely on our own "influence for effecting it."

Sec. Conſ. September 21, 1775. Appendix, No. 80.

And your Committee find enclоſed in the above-mentioned Letter from Madras, a correſpondence between the Poona Miniſters in the name of the infant Peſhwa, and the Nabob of Arcot, in which the former earneſtly requeſted the mediation of the Nabob, and the interference of the Supreme Council with the Preſidency of Bombay, to put an end to the preſent hoſtilities. And we obſerve, the Madras Board informed the Governor General and Council, that they had deſired the Nabob to aſſure the Peſhwa of their wiſh for peace, and of the ſteps which were taken to forward the accompliſhment of it, particularly by the deputation of Colonel Upton.

Sec. Conſ. September 28, 1775. Appendix, No. 81.

In a few days after theſe Reſolutions and Diſpatches, Letters appear to have been received by the Governor General and Council from the Maratta Miniſters, expreſſive of their ſatisfaction in the view of an early accommodation. And we find, that in the beginning of October following, a Letter from the Bombay Preſidency, dated 22d Auguſt, reached the Supreme Council, and appears to be in anſwer to theirs of 31 May, and to contain expreſſions of great concern at the meaſures preſcribed for bringing about a general pacification. The Preſident and Council declare their apprehenſions of much miſchief therefrom to the intereſts of the Company, and of irretrievable diſgrace to their Preſidency, which had not been guilty of any wilful diſreſpect to the Supreme Council, but for the reaſons before aſſigned had thought it neceſſary to act without delay; and after poſſeſſing themſelves of Salſette, and being conſequently obliged in good policy to ſide with one of the parties in the Maratta contentions, they could not heſitate about a preference in favour of Ragoba the Peſhwa, who beſides was diſpoſed to make a Treaty with them ſo beneficial to the Company, by giving them the right of acquiring a Revenue of nearly £. 250,000 per annum. "And "though they had not the plea of any injury ſuſtained "from the Poona Government, yet that it ſhould be "obſerved, that party was compoſed of the rebellious "ſubjects of Ragoba." They wiſhed at leaſt, that they had been made the inſtruments of the deſigns to reſtore peace, which they could have done with honour and credit, had not poſitive injunctions to recal the troops, and ſuch public condemnation of their conduct, been expreſsly tranſmitted even to the miniſterial faction, from whom they had heard of it; and in conſequence of which, an Agent, who had before been to ſolicit peace, would now make no overtures but on condition of their delivering up Ragoba and the iſland of Salſette, and relinquiſhing all claim to Baſſein. That orders however were ſent to the Commanding Officer of their forces, to ceaſe from hoſtilities (orders of a like purport, they underſtood, having alſo been diſpatched from Poona to the Miniſterial army) and to withdraw them, as ſoon as the ſeaſon would permit, into their own garriſons.

Sec. Conſ. October 5, 1775. Appendix, No. 82.

Letter from the Preſidency of Bombay to Madarow Narrow.

That they would nevertheleſs ſtill hope, that when the Supreme Council ſhould have heard the repreſentations of Mr. Tayler, a Member of their Board, and of the Select Committee, whom they had deputed for that purpoſe, a change in the plan of meaſures would enſue, their Treaty would be ratified, and permiſſion given them to carry Ragoba to Poona, which might yet, with proper ſupport, be ſucceſsfully attempted, and for which they would willingly be reſponſible. Mr. Tayler was alſo inſtructed to give exact information to the Governor General and Council, of all the places and benefits ceded to the Company by the Treaty with Ragoba.

It appears to your Committee, that the Governor General and Council, in conſequence of theſe accounts, ſent immediately a Letter of information to Colonel Upton, that he might proceed with the utmoſt diſpatch on his journey; and at the ſame time an early day was appointed to receive Mr Tayler at the Board; where he appeared on the 9th October, and delivered in a paper which he had drawn up in his paſſage from Bombay, of ſuch repreſentations as he thought neceſſary to make on the ſubjects which he had been deputed to treat upon.

Ben. Sec Conſ. 9 October 1775.

Your Committee have placed this, and the whole of the examination which followed, in the Appendix; and recommend them to the Houſe for their peruſal, as, in addition to the arguments in juſtification of the nature, motives, and object of the proceedings of the Bombay Preſidency, in their engagement with Rugonaut Row, and againſt the interruption given to them by the reſolutions and orders of the Supreme Council, they contain an introductory account of the Maratta State, the riſe and eſtabliſhment of the Peſhwa's power; of the contiguity and connection in policy and commerce with the Company's poſſeſſions in the Weſt of India; of the dominions or diſtricts held by the great chiefs of the nation, in what degree dependent on the Poona Government, particularly the Bouncelos, the Guicawars, and the Northern Jaghiedars (Holkar and Scindia); of thoſe events and intrigues of their Government, which gave occaſion to the diviſions in the Peſhwa's family, and thereby led to the interference of the Preſidency of Bombay in their quarrels; of the comparative ſituation and force of the contending parties in the war at the time of the ceſſation of hoſtilities, with ſome remarks on the probable diſpoſition or policy of the great country powers (particularly the Nizam and Hyder Ally) in regard to theſe contentions, and the competitors. They contain alſo an exact deſcription of the ſituation, revenues, and other productive advantages ariſing from the ſeveral ceſſions of territory made by Ragoba and Futty Sing: and therein alſo will be found, ſtated in very earneſt terms, the dangerous and diſgraceful conſequences of declaring the Treaty to be invalid and null, and eſpecially if Ragoba ſhould in ſuch caſe have recourſe to the aſſiſtance of other powers, and throw himſelf for example "on the protection of Hyder, thereby "creating the additional diſadvantage of increaſing the "power of a man, whoſe mortal and declared averſion "to the Company and their Ally, and his open partiality "and encouragement of their declared rivals, render "every acceſſion of country or connexion the juſt objects "of our jealouſy; his forces joined to the Allies of "Ragoba would be irreſiſtible by the Confederates, and "then in what ſafety would be the Company's poſſeſſions "in the Carnatic?"—We find, that above all, the opinion is here ſtrongly enforced, that whether it ſhould be reſolved to terminate theſe affairs by arms or negociation, it would be abſolutely expedient to revoke the orders for withdrawing the troops, which ought to be left with Ragoba, until a pacification ſhould be completed; but which would begin their retreat from his army on 15th November enſuing, unleſs ſuch counter orders were ſent to them.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 9th October 1775. No. 83.

The Board having then conſidered the queſtion, whether their former orders ſhould be enforced, or they ſhould for the preſent ſuſpend them? the ſeveral Members appear to have perſiſted in their firſt opinions; and the conſequent determination of the majority was a confirmation of their original Reſolutions, except that it was agreed to leave the option with the Preſident and Council of Bombay, to withdraw their troops into ſuch of their Garriſons as they might chuſe. And a Letter was thereupon written to Mr. Tayler, acquainting him of this their final deciſion upon the repreſentations he had ſubmitted to them. At the ſame time, the Board appear to have acknowledged the receipt of the Letter dated 23d Auguſt, from the Preſident and Council of Bombay, in a very ſhort reply, containing only an explanation of their meaning, into what garriſons the troops ſhould be immediately withdrawn.

No. 83.

No. 83.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 18 October 1775. Appendix, No. 97.

And your Committee find, that on the 18th of the ſame month, Mr. Tayler, after expreſſing his concern at the determination of the Board, deſired to add a further repreſentation of the great indignity it would be to the Preſidency of Bombay, if they entruſted the conduct of the negociation to an entire ſtranger; remarking, that one of the Members of their Board had been by the Company themſelves appointed to reſide at Poona, with particular inſtructions and powers for negociation with Mhadarow the then Peſhwa; and that they, from their knowledge of the views, connections, and intereſts of the different perſons in the Poona Durbar, muſt be beſt qualified to tranſact ſuch matters, and that they ſhould all be actuated by zeal for the honour and intereſts of their Employers, and would pay implicit obedience to whatever directions they might receive from the Supreme Council, in regard to the management of this meaſure.

Ibid. No. 84.

It appears that the Supreme Board, in anſwer to theſe repreſentations, informed Mr. Tayler, that they could not agree to repeal or change the appointment of Colonel Upton, conſiſtently with the reſolutions which they had publicly ſignified to the Miniſters at Poona; that they did not however intend to throw any ſlight on the Preſidency of Bombay, which they ſhould always endeavour to ſecure from any diſreſpect of their authority.

Ib. J. No. 84.

But we find that the Governor General and Council, by Letter of the ſame date, enclоſing copies of their inſtructions ſent to Colonel Upton, ſignified to the Preſident and Council of Bombay their deſire that they would communicate to that Gentleman, all the uſeful information in their power, whenever after his arrival at Poona he might conſult them; and that, not meaning entirely to deſert Ragoba, they alſo deſired them "to afford him a "ſanctuary for himſelf, his domeſtics, or attendants, in "caſe he ſhould ever be neceſſitated to apply for their "protection, in order to avoid any perſonal danger."

That they likewiſe directed them to retain poſſeſſion of the diſtricts made over to the Company by Futty Sing (who, they obſerved, appeared to be the perſon having authority to make theſe grants) until a definitive Treaty of peace ſhould be concluded. It appears that the Preſident and Council of Bombay had, by Letter of 11th September, already made an offer of furniſhing Colonel Upton with every neceſſary information, either by Letter or by deputing a gentleman to him at Poona.

Sec. Conf. 5 February 1776. No. 83.

And your Committee find, that the Nabob Mahomed Alli had, by Letter dated 14th October, deſired the aſſent of the Governor General and Council to his wiſh of deputing a gentleman (naming Mr. Chambers) on his part to Poona, who ſhould co-operate with Colonel Upton in the management of the Treaty, on ſuch points as might regard his or the Company's poſſeſſions in the Carnatic. And it appears that the Supreme Board, in their Conſultation of the 9th November following, agreed to the appointment of Mr. Chambers, if the Governor and Council of Fort Saint George, to whom they wrote on this occaſion, ſhould make no objections; and we obſerve, that they immediately ſent a Letter alſo to Colonel Upton, acquainting him of this matter, and of their having however reſtricted the Nabob's deputy to particular conditions, and from tranſacting any buſineſs except through him. And they further remarked, that they were informed of Lieutenant Colonel Keating's having retired to the South of Surat, where he would remain inactive, but that it would be neceſſary to aſſure the Miniſters at Poona of the ſincerity of his pacific deſigns, unleſs they, by putting their army in motion, made it neceſſary for him again to take the field.

See Perſ. Corr. 14 October 1775. Appendix, No. 85.

No. 85. Do.

And your Committee find that Colonel Upton, who appears to have been at Calpee on the 26th October, in his Letter from thence of that date, gave an unpleaſant account of the diſtreſs and confuſion of the country through which he was paſſing, and of the apprehenſions which might with too much reaſon be entertained, that a conſiderable Maratta army would ſoon enter the dominions of the Nabob Aſoph ul Dowla.

Appendix, No. 86.

From the Bengal Secret Conſultations of the 29th November 1775, we collect, that Ragonaut Row had addreſſed the Board upon the ſubject of the Treaty executed by him with the Preſidency of Bombay; and that Mr. Tayler in conſequence of it took occaſion to offer new repreſentations in a paper dated 18 November, and to propoſe a plan, by which, "ſhould the concerns of "Ragoba be made a more leading object in the intended "negociation at Poona, that point might be effected moſt "conſiſtently with the ſteps already taken, the good faith "of the Nation, and the intereſts of the Company, ſo as "to ſecure a permanent ſettlement." That the principal baſis of the accommodation ſhould for this purpoſe be an acknowledgment of the title of the infant Peſhwa, the regency of Ragonaut Row during his minority, and the ſucceſſion of Imrut Row Ragoba's adopted ſon, in caſe of their death, and a general guarantee of all parties for a ſecurity of perſons and poſſeſſions; he repeated his obſervation, that at all events the late threatening declaration of the miniſtry made it more than ever a neceſſary ſtep to delay the final recal of the troops till the concluſion of peace.

Appendix, No. 87. Ben. Country Corr. received 27 Oct. 1775. See alſo a Letter from Bombay, 14 October 1775, in Sec. Conf. 18 December.

And your Committee obſerve, that on the 29th November Mr. Tayler having received accounts from Colonel Keating, of great diviſions in the miniſterial confederacy (many principal perſons of which had engaged to join Ragoba) conveyed intelligence of this circumſtance to the the Supreme Board, and added his apprehenſion that Ragoba, when he ſhould receive their abſolute determination againſt contributing by their aſſiſtance to his reſtoration, would turn his reliance on the junto, and by their means might be put in poſſeſſion of the Government, and thus the Company would be deprived of the advantages ſtipulated in the Treaty with him; recommending it therefore again to them, to endeavour ſtill to become the inſtruments of his ſucceſs, and to alter their reſolutions to that effect. In the Appendix, will be found the Minutes of the ſeveral Members of the Board on this occaſion; in which we perceive an adherence to former opinions, and that the majority reſolved to acknowledge the Letters communicated by Mr. Tayler, and in anſwer to expreſs their determination to wait for advices from Colonel Upton of his firſt interview and negociations with the Miniſtry, before they would ſend him any new inſtructions for his conduct.

See the Minutes. No. 88.

And your Committee find, that Mr. Tayler tranſmitted accounts of all theſe tranſactions in Letters to the Court of Directors, in which he endeavoured to convince them of the propriety, expediency, and probable ſucceſs of thoſe meaſures which the Preſidency of Bombay had purſued, and of the precipitancy, injuſtice, and impolicy, of the contrary proceedings adopted by the Governor General and Council, and of the bad conſequence which he apprehended would ariſe therefrom to the Company's affairs.

See Mr. Tayler's Letters to the Court of Directors, 26 Nov. 29 Nov. 30 Nov. and 20 Jan. 1776. Appendix, No. 89. See alſo Bombay Letter to Court of Directors 17th Feb. 1776.

We find alſo, that the Supreme Council explained the motives of their conduct in their Secret Correſpondence with the Court of Directors, and likewiſe acquainted them of the diverſity of opinions in the Members of their own Board, which appear alſo to have been farther made known by the Conſultations tranſmitted at the ſame time, and the ſeveral Minutes contained therein.

Ben. Sec. Letters, 5 Auguſt, 11 September, and 20 November 1775. Appendix, No. 90. See alſo the Minutes of Meſſrs. Clavering, Monſon, and Francis, and the Gov. General's Reply, in Appx. No. 156 and 157.

In order to examine all the accounts and opinions which may throw light on this ſubject, and may lead the Houſe to an impartial judgment, your Committee have read a Letter from Captain Farmer, commanding one of his Majeſty's ſhips in thoſe ſeas, to Commodore Sir Edward Hughes, dated Bombay, 24th Auguſt; which, after an introductory account of the Maratta State, ſomewhat ſimilar in the manner, though not in the ſtatement of facts, to that drawn up by Mr. Tayler, concludes in theſe words: "However raſh and inconſiderate the commencement of this war may have been, they have evidently gone "too far to retreat, without the greateſt danger of loſing "not only Salſette, but Bombay itſelf; beſides, their arms "on this ſide India would ever after be held in contempt. "Only think of their expending ſo many men (for they "have loſt a number without coming to any deciſive "action) ſuch ſums of money, and vaſt quantities of "ammunition and ſtores, at the diſtance of 500 miles "from Bombay, whilſt the avowed object of the war is "to be in poſſeſſion of Poonah, and placing Ragoba on "the Peſhwa Muſnud. Would a ſtranger to the geo"graphy of the Country believe then, that Poonah is only "70 miles from Bombay, and only one Paſs of any diffi"culty between them, which is ill-fortified, and worſe "defended in point of troops? The real caſe is, by all "that I could anyway diſcover, that half of Colonel "Keating's army could march from Bombay to Poona in "four days, in ſpite of all that they have in that Country "to oppoſe him; ſo that nothing but the expectation of "a great body of horſe joining Ragoba at Cambay, could "induce them to take that roundabout way."

Appendix, No. 91. Captain Farmer's Letter enclosed in one from Sir Edward Hughes, Ben. Sec. Conſ. 12 December 1775.

While the Governor General and Council appear to have been thus waiting impatiently for news of Colonel Upton's arrival at Poonah, and the beginning of his negociations with the miniſterial Government, they received various accounts of the poſture of affairs, very different from each other; and from ſome of which, the ready diſpoſition of the Miniſters to accommodation might be ſuſpected to have ſuffered ſome diminution.

No. 92.

For your Committee find, that Letters in the name of Madarow Narrain, the infant Peſhwa, and from Siccaram Baloo, dated 22 November 1775, reached Calcutta the beginning of January 1776; and appear to be written in terms of diſcontent and complaint, betraying a backwardneſs to allow any preludes of pacification, and threatening, upon very ſlight grounds, a renewal of hoſtilities, unleſs the places taken from them were immediately reſtored. And although they contained aſſurances of orders having been given to facilitate the route of Colonel Upton, through the Maratta dominions, accounts received at this very time from him ſeemed to convey a doubt of that fact; for he appears to have only reached Bhowp l on 25th November, and aſcribed the delay of his journey to the inattention of the Miniſters, from whom he had received no advices, and who had not apprized the Sirdars of the different diſtricts of the buſineſs on which he was deputed, and of his travelling through their Country, which he found all in arms.

Appendix, No. 93. Sec. Conſ. 8 January 1776. Letter from Col. Upton, dated 25 November 1775.

It appears to your Committee, that the Supreme Council wrote an immediate account of theſe informations received from Poonah to Colonel Upton, and recommended the greateſt diſpatch in bringing the negociations to a concluſion; enclosing at the ſame time the Letters from the Peſhwa, and from Siccaram Baboo, with their anſwer to them, in which they expreſs their ſurprize at the unfriendly interruptions given to their trade; and declare, that they had on their part ſent ſtrict orders for a ceſſation of hoſtilities, and the withdrawing of their forces; and that they believed them to have been obeyed.

Ib'd. No 93.

Appendix, No. 94.

And it is indeed to be obſerved, that the Preſident and Council of Bombay, in a Letter dated 14th October, which reached Calcutta in the beginning of December, informed the Supreme Council, that Colonel Keating had been directed to retire with the troops into the diſtricts contiguous to Surat or Broach, as ſoon as the weather would permit.

Sec. Conſ 12 December 1775. Appendix, No. 95.

And we perceive, that in their Secret Letter of the 15th January 1776, the Governor General and Council acquainted the Court of Directors of theſe circumſtances, and obſerved, "that they could not reconcile the threat"ening declarations of the Miniſters to the reduced ſtate "in which, by the advices from Colonel Keating of the "29th of October, they appeared to be." That they hoped, however, a general equilibrium would be preſerved till Colonel Upton's arrival at Poonah, and that they had warned the Miniſters of the neceſſity they ſhould find themſelves under, to oppoſe any hoſtile proceedings which might originate from them. That Ragoba had indeed, in conſequence of the intended negociation, required the aſſignment of a certain ſupport for himſelf and adherents, till it ſhould be concluded; and entreated that his pretenſions to the Government ſhould be then examined, and that he might be declared either Peſhwa or Regent during the minority, at the end of which he ſhould reſt ſatisfied with a penſion.

Appendix, No. 96. Sec. Conſ. Court of Directors, 15 January 1776.

The correſpondence of Colonel Keating with the Preſidency of Bombay, from which moſt of theſe particulars had been collected, was forwarded to the Supreme Council on 14th October 1775, but appears not to have reached Calcutta till 5th February 1776; and with it were enclosed copies of the inſtructions given to Colonel Keating by the Bombay Preſidency, on his proceeding with the troops to join Ragoba, and of thoſe prepared for Mr. Moſtyn, upon his being deputed to reſide at his Durbar. They will be found in the Appendix.

No. 97. Sec. Conſ 12 February 1776. Appendix, No. 98.

And your Committee find, that the Governor General and Council, on the 12th February, received a Letter from Colonel Upton, dated 5th January; by which they were informed, that he was at laſt arrived at Poonah, on the 30th of December preceding, after a journey conſiderably longer than was imagined, it being 948 miles from Calpee, "and very little aſſiſtance to be procured "in any way, owing to the miſcarriage of orders from the "Miniſters, and the diſturbed ſtate of the country."

He gave an account of the manner of his reception and introduction, and of the debate which immediately aroſe in the Durbar, from the oppoſition given by the Miniſters to the ſignature of all the Chiefs individually; and he wiſhed to have inſtructions on that head, being himſelf of opinion that the requiſition might be ſafely diſpenſed with. He informed the Board of the apparent power of the miniſterial party, and of their deſire to haſten the concluſion of peace; of their doubts about the conduct and ſituation of the Bombay forces, and their aſſurances of the pacific behaviour of their own; and laſtly, of the diſappointment expreſſed by them, at his not having brought any preſent on the part of the Company, which had obliged him to ſend to Bombay for different articles, to the amount of fifteen thouſand rupees.

No. 98. In this Letter Colonel Upton enclоſed alſo the form of a Treaty, ſuch as he intended to make uſe of, if the Governor General and Council ſhould think no alterations neceſſary; and alſo the account related by the Miniſters, of the riſe and progreſs of the actual diſſentions and diſturbances in the Maratta Empire.

Beng. Sec. Conſ. 22 February 1776. Appendix, No. 99. In the anſwer which the Governor General and Council appear to have immediately agreed upon, they ſent a proper preamble for the intended Treaty; and obſerved, that though "they ſtill thought the concurrence of the "Maratta Chiefs, in the preſent undecided ſtate of the "Government equally deſirable, they would not let that "point be made any obſtruction to the concluſion of the "Treaty, but leave it to his diſcretion to recede from "the requiſition, in ſuch degree as he ſhould find it "unattainable."

And your Committee perceive, that General Clavering then propoſed to add another diſcretional order to Colonel Upton, not to inſiſt on "the iſland of Baſſein being "granted to the Company in the future Treaty of Peace, "unleſs the Miniſters had already conſented to acquieſce "in the demand he had made for it, or that he ſhould "perceive a diſpoſition in them to yield the poſſeſſion of "it to the Company."—That Mr. Francis thought the ceſſion of Salſette and Baſſein ſhould be inſiſted on, eſpecially as Colonel Upton had not ſuggeſted that he ſhould expect to meet with any difficulty on either of thoſe points—That Colonel Monſon was of opinion, that he ſhould have "inſtructions to obtain Baſſein and "its dependencies, if he could, from the miniſterial "party, but not to make it an article on which to break "off the Treaty he was now inſtructed to conclude"—That the Governor General and Mr. Barwell agreeing with Mr. Francis, it was of courſe reſolved, "that no "alteration ſhould be made in the inſtructions already "given to Lieutenant Colonel Upton, for requiring the "ceſſion of the iſlands of Salſette and Baſſein as a con-"dition of the Treaty."

Appendix, No. 100. It appears that General Clavering, in conſequence of this confirmed reſolution, entered an immediate proteſt againſt it, and the fatal conſequences likely to enſue from ſuch a double act of injuſtice; and we obſerve, that after conſulting the Letter from the Court of Directors to the Sec. Conſ. 14 February 1776. No. 100. Preſidency of Bombay, dated 12th April 1775, which arrived that day, he at the next meeting of the Board delivered in a continuation of his Minute of diſſent; becauſe that Letter from the Court of Directors contained their poſitive commands, "not to take poſſeſſion of Salſette, "without their permiſſion, but by negociation;" and though he ſhould be glad to obtain Baſſein by the ſame means, he would not, merely to acquire territory, riſk the continuance of a war, which muſt probably be the conſequence if the orders of Colonel Upton were not made diſcretional.

Sec. Conſ. 15 February 1776. The Minutes of the ſeveral Members of the Board on this re-conſideration of the queſtion, and in the adjourned debate on the next day, upon the motion of Mr. Francis, for inſtructing Colonel Upton to propoſe ultimately the exchange of Broach for Baſſein, will be found in the No. 109. Appendix, to which we deſire to refer the Houſe, and only here obſerve, that the reſult of the deliberations appears to have been a reſolution of the majority, that in caſe Colonel Upton "ſhould find unſurmountable difficulties in obtaining Baſſein without a compenſation, he "ſhould be authorized to propoſe certain conceſſions to "the Poona Government; and that in return for a compliance with his firſt demand, a ſurrender of our right "and intereſt in Broach be the condition of that compliance; but that he be particularly inſtructed to reſerve "this conceſſion, until he ſhall find it abſolutely impoſſible to ſucceed without it." And, upon an additional propoſal of Mr. Francis, it appears to have been unanimouſly agreed, "that, in caſe Colonel Upton ſhould "find the Maratta Government inflexibly determined "not to yield Baſſein at any rate, he ſhould ſuſpend his "negociations, and wait for further orders from the "Board."

Appendix, No. 101. By accounts from Bombay, in a Letter dated 29th December, which reached Calcutta 26th February following, your Committee obſerve, that the Preſident and Council had adviſed Ragoba to accompany the Britiſh troops with ſuch part of his army as he might be able to maintain, in order to avoid the ill conſequences of a ſeparation, both to him and to the ſucceſs of Colonel Upton's negociation; and that they had been further prevailed upon, by the earneſt intreaties of Ragoba, to agree that the two armies ſhould remain at Corrode, a place only 15 coſs from Surat, belonging to the Nabob, till preciſe orders ſhould arrive from Bengal, in anſwer to the repreſentations made by Mr. Taylor, as they foreſaw that Ragoba would probaby be forſaken by all adherents when deſerted by their army, or if he ſhould ſtill be able to keep up his force, the plan of pacification would be thereby defeated—That they had, however, refuſed to permit their troops to accompany his army in levying contributions, not thinking themſelves authorized to take ſuch a ſtep.

See Letter from Ragonaut Row to Governor Hornby, dated 28th November, and received 4 December 1775. No. 102.

We further perceive in theſe accounts the following obſervations: "The miniſterial party have made no "overtures for accommodation to us, ſince thoſe mentioned in our Letters of 23d Auguſt, and the ſeveral "acts of hoſtility committed by their troops, as mentioned in Colonel Keating's Letters, give us great reaſon to ſuſpect the ſincerity of their intentions;" while, on the other hand, "the many overtures and offers of "aſſiſtance made to Ragoba by Madajee Scindia, and "other moſt conſiderable men of the confederacy, and "the differences ſubſiſting between the Chiefs of that "party, have cauſed ſo great an alteration in the poſture "of affairs in favour of Ragoba, that we beg leave to "ſubmit it to you as our deliberate opinion, that a Treaty "with him would be more advantageous to the Company, promiſes more ſtability and permanency, and is "more likely to inſure the general peace of India, than "one with the Miniſters. The reaſons on which we "ground this opinion, are fully ſtated in a Letter we "have diſpatched to Colonel Upton, thinking it very "neceſſary he ſhould be apprized of the true ſituation "of Ragoba's affairs, before he commenced his negociations."

See this Letter in the Appendix, No. 101.

And on the ſubject of the ceſſions made by Ragoba, the Preſident and Council wrote thus:

"The ceſſions of territory made by Ragoba, appear "to us objects of ſuch importance to the Company, that "we are greatly alarmed at your intentions of relinquiſhing them. The Company's right to them is indiſputable, as being derived from valid grants made "by the lawful Sovereign of the ceded countries; and "we are convinced, that if Colonel Upton ſhews a determination not to part with them, it will be no obſtacle to the concluſion of a general peace, which ever "party he may treat with."

"We have been ſome time in peaceable poſſeſſion of "all the ceded territories, except Baſſein; the revenues "are collecting without any difficulty, and the Marattas "already conſider them as diſmembered from the empire."

The Governor General alſo, in his obſervations, which are placed in the Appendix, on the Minutes of Sec. Conſ. 29 February 1776. No. 157.

General

General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, of the 21ſt November 1775, before taken notice of, expreſſes himſelf nearly to the ſame effect:

" The Honourable Court of Directors will be the " beſt judges of the merits of the Gentlemen of the ma- " jority, in the ſteps they have taken to degrade the " Preſidency of Bombay in the eyes of the Marattas, and " to deprive the Company of the advantages which might " have been ſecured to them even with an honourable " peace; which there is every reaſon to believe might " have been much ſooner obtained by more vigorous " meaſures."

And your Committee find, That Colonel Upton, in a Letter dated 2d February, received 6th March, informed the Governor General and Council of what he conceived to be the diſpoſition of the people at Poona regarding the terms of accommodation. " The Letters (he obſerves) " they had received from Calcutta before my arrival, " had perſuaded them fully that I was deputed to treat " with them on equal terms, without making any de- " mands whatever; however, at a few meetings I made " them ſenſible, that they had underſtood theſe Letters " too literally." He found them nevertheleſs apparently decided againſt allowing the further poſſeſſion of Salſette, or agreeing to the ſurrender of Baſſein; and attributed this reſolution to their imagining " that he muſt treat " with them at any rate, and that he had exceeded his " inſtructions by aſking a ſurrender of thoſe Iſlands."

Ben. Sec. Conſ. 6th March 1776. Appendix, No. 102.

On this head he wrote as follows: " They aſk me a " thouſand times why we make ſuch profeſſions of ho- " nour, and diſapprove the war entered into by the " Bombay Government, when we are ſo deſirous of avail- " ing ourſelves of the advantages of it?

" They ſay, the Governor General and Council of " Calcutta have deputed me to negociate with them on " terms honourable to both nations, yet all advantage " and honour is confined to ourſelves."

He then informed the Board, that deſpairing of the acquiſition of Baſſein, he ſhould endeavour to prevail upon the Miniſters to allow a Britiſh Factory, with certain privileges of trade in it, to the excluſion of other Europeans; that he ſhould inſiſt upon keeping poſſeſſion of Salſette, though the breaking off the Treaty would conſequently follow the refuſal of their acquieſcence; that the Miniſters diſputed the right of the Guicawars to make any grants in the Guzurat, and it was therefore agreed to leave that queſtion in regard to them undetermined, till the pleaſure of the Board ſhould be known; that a certain ſtipend and number of attendants would be allowed to Ragoba; and as to the report of the weakneſs of the miniſterial party, he imagined them not to be in the deplorable ſituation they had been thought, for they had a numerous army, and no want of money, and lately engaged in alliance with the Nizam, who had ſent a large body of troops to join their forces.

See Colonel Keating's Letter. No. 102.

In concluſion, he notified his intentions of retiring to Bombay, in caſe terms of accommodation could not be agreed on. We find enclоſed an account of the eſtabliſhment of the Guicawars in the command of the Guzurat Country, which we have placed in the Appendix.

No. 102.

See this Letter, dated 9th March 1776.

Mr. Tayler appears to have at this time ſent in a Letter to the Board, in which he enforced ſtrongly the repreſentations made by the Government of Bombay, in regard to the favourable appearance of Ragoba's affairs, and ſupported their arguments for preferring, even on political motives, a treaty with him to any which might be ſettled with the miniſterial party. And in order to weaken the impreſſion which the Board might have taken from the informations and reaſonings contained in Colonel Upton's Letter, he deſired them to obſerve, " that Colonel Upton dated from the fort of Poorunder, " where he is ſurrounded by the Miniſters and their crea- " tures, whoſe intereſt is to miſinform him with reſpect " to their own ſtrength and importance, and to ſecrete " from him every circumſtance favourable to Ragoba " and his partizans. Their patience, ſkill, and diſſimu- " lation, in conducting political negociations, are very " well known in India. It is almoſt uſeleſs to inſiſt on " the different credibility that is due to informations col- " lected under thoſe diſadvantages, and thoſe communi- " cated by Gentlemen in whoſe honour you have a ſecu- " rity from intentional deceit, and whoſe caution is war- " ranted by the danger they incur, ſhould their ill- " grounded intelligence miſlead you into meaſures that " might not otherwiſe be deemed expedient."

Appendix, No. 103.

From the Conſultations of the Board in conſequence of theſe informations, your Committee have found that the Governor General ſuggeſted an advice, " That what- " ever orders were then ſent to Colonel Upton in reply to " his Letter, they ſhould be peremptory and concluſive; " that he ſhould be directed to bring the buſineſs of his " negociation to an iſſue, either by an immediate con- " cluſion of the Treaty, or by demanding his diſmiſſion, " and retiring to Bombay, where he might ſtill remain, " and wait the orders of the Board for his future pro- " ceedings."

Ben. Sec. Conſ. 6th March 1776. Appendix, No. 104.

That the conſequences of the latter ſtep muſt be conſidered and provided for, but that " in the mean time he " would recommend that Colonel Upton be referred to " the inſtructions which he had already received, and " directed to conform literally to them." In regard however to the exchange of Broach for Laſſein, he repeated one objection, which he had before intimated, from a doubt in which he was now confirmed by conſidering the clauſe of the Act, being of opinion, " that it clearly " limited the controlling powers of the Government of " Bengal over the other Preſidencies, to that of the com- " mencing of hoſtilities, the declaring of war, the nego- " ciating or concluding Treaties of Peace; but did not " authorize them to order the ſurrender or exchange of " any of the Company's poſſeſſions dependent on the " other Preſidencies, nor thoſe Preſidencies to obey ſuch " orders."

Some of the other Members of Council appear to have differed with the Governor General in the conſtruction of the clauſe, ſuppoſing, " that a power to make peace " muſt, in its nature, include a power to agree to the only " terms on which, in ſome caſes, peace could be ob- " tained." In regard to the buſineſs before them, it will be found from the Minutes which we have placed in the Appendix, that there was much difference of opinion, as well on the juſt principle and grounds of their demands and expectations from the Poona miniſtry, as on the probable diſpoſition of that Government to make the conceſſions required. And that the Board in the end came to the following agreement: " That in caſe Colonel " Upton ſhall not have already concluded a Treaty, he be " ordered to conform to his former inſtructions; and if " the miniſtry at Poona ſhould not accede to thoſe con- " ditions, that he require his diſmiſſion, and retire to " Bombay within ſix days from the receipt of thoſe orders; " but if a treaty ſhall have been concluded before the " arrival of the laſt inſtructions, without obtaining a " ceſſion of Baſſein to the Company, he be ordered to " offer them the terms of exchange therein mentioned."

No. 104.

We obſerve, however, that a Letter was received the next day by the Governor General and Council, from Colonel Upton; the contents of which informing them, that the Treaty was broken off, were held to ſuperſede the orders ſtated above; and the Board, though they thought there was a probability that the abrupt declaration of the Miniſters might have been a feint only for the purpoſe of trying what impreſſion it would make on the mind of Colonel Upton, reſolved, that it was become neceſſary to ſuppoſe the war renewed, and to provide the means of conducting it with the greateſt probability of ſucceſs: and by the return laid before the Board by General Clavering, it appeared that the whole military force at the Preſidency of Bombay, excluſive of the remote Factories, was as follows:

Letter, dated 9th Feb. 6 Sel Conſ 7th March 1776. Appendix, No 105

And we obſerve in Colonel Upton's Letter, referred to in the Appendix, the following paſſage on this ſubject: "I wrote the laſt week to the Governor and Council of "Bombay, to prepare them for this event; alſo to Colonel "Keating, that he might guard againſt any ſurpriſe. His "Majeſty's ſquadron being here at this time, is a for- "tunate event; and I think if the war is to be proſe- "cuted, if three or four companies of Europeans, a "ſmall detachment from the corps of Artillery, and two "or three battalions of Sepoys, were embarked from "Bengal to join the army from Bombay, we might ſoon "command peace on our own terms; for the Chiefs of "this country are quite at a loſs which ſide to take, and "are willing to ſee what the Engliſh do."

Appendix, No. 106. Bombay Letter, dated 1ſt February 1776.

And by a Letter, dated 1ſt February, from the Preſident and Council of Bombay to Colonel Upton, which he enclоſed in his of 7th to the Governor General and Council, we obſerve, that on the ſubject of the then ſituation of the Company's troops they wrote as follows: "We "are much pleaſed to find you are convinced of the pro- "priety of the Company's troops not being entirely "withdrawn from Ragonaut Row's before the concluſion "of the Treaty, and we are ſenſible you will experience "the good effects of this meaſure in your negociation."

See Colonel Keating's Letter to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, dated 24 Jan. 1776. Appendix, No. 107.

It appears alſo, that Ragoba had lately made freſh ſolicitations for aſſiſtance from the Preſidency of Bombay, and had offered on that condition to enlarge conſiderably the intereſts and advantages of the Britiſh Company, to whom he acknowledged himſelf to be much indebted.

Appendix, No. 108.

And your Committee find, that in conſequence of theſe informations, the Governor General and Council came to ſeveral reſolutions, and particularly, to apprize the different dependencies of the Company of the actual ſtate of affairs, and of their future intentions "(to which "they were compelled by the obſtinacy of the Mini- "ſters) to ſupport the cauſe of Ragoba with the utmoſt "vigour, and with a general exertion of the whole power "of the Engliſh arms in India. That the grand object "however ſtill was peace." And that they were deter- mined to act in all quarters at once; and by the deciſion and rapidity of their proceedings, to bring the war if poſſible to a ſpeedy concluſion.

That Letters would be written to Nizam Ally, Hyder Ally, Mrary Row, Moodajee Bouncello, Tookajee Holkar, and Madajee Scindia, with a view of engaging their aſſiſt- ance in favour of Ragoba, or at leaſt to ſecure their neutrality.

That the Reſident at Oude ſhould be directed to pre- vail upon the Nabob, to ſuffer the Company's brigade to be removed from Oude to the frontiers of Corah neareſt Calpee, in order to forward the ſucceſs of the correſpondence with Madajee Scindia and Tookajee Holkar.

That they ſhould recommend it to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, to ſuccour the united army with a reinforcement of two battalions of Sepoys, or more if they could ſpare them; adding this aſſurance "to alle- "viate any danger which you might apprehend from "being deprived of ſo large a body of your military "forces, you will, if you deem it adviſable, raiſe new "corps to ſupply the place of ſuch as you may ſend on "this ſervice during their abſence, and we are willing to "defray any extraordinary charge that you may incur "on this account."

That they deſired Sir Edward Hughes to continue with the ſquadron under his command on the Malabar Coaſt during the troubles, and to grant all the aſſiſtance in his power to the operations of the Preſident and Council of Bombay.

That they wrote a Letter to Ragoba, and forwarded it to Surat with the following directions to the Chief and Council: "If Colonel Upton ſhould have been obliged "to break off his negociations with the Miniſters at "Poonah, and a continuation of the war ſhould in con- "ſequence have been reſolved upon, we deſire you will "immediately forward the enclоſed Letter by a ſafe "conveyance to Ragonaut Row; but if on the contrary "a treaty of peace ſhould have been concluded, you "will deſtroy it."

They aſſured Ragoba in this Letter, that in the in- tended negociation at Poonah, Colonel Upton had expreſs directions "to ſtipulate ſuch conditions for him as he "ſhould approve, and might enſure his future ſafety "and welfare;" that now however, as the Miniſters had rejected the overtures of peace, they had great ſatisfac- tion in offering him "the aſſiſtance of their arms in all "parts of India, to replace him with full authority in "the ſeat of his Government at Poonah."

And in their Letter of this date to the Preſident and Council of Bombay (while they declare themſelves not reſponſible for the meaſures which had involved the Company in this quarrel) they releaſed that Government from the reſtrictions which they had laid upon the ope- rations of their army, and authorized them to give the moſt effectual ſupport to Ragoba; inſtructing them to aſſign the command of the troops to General Gordon, whom alone they deemed fit to be entruſted with a charge of ſuch conſequence, and to order him to march imme- diately to Poonah, making the acquiſition of Baſſein a preſent object of their attempt, by negociation only with the Killedar; and they required them to appropriate the ſupplies of money ſent from Bengal to the operations of the war alone.

Your Committee further obſerve, that they informed Colonel Upton of all theſe matters, and of their waiting in impatient expectation of freſh accounts from him; directing him if he ſhould be ſtill at Poonah to adhere to his former inſtructions.

From the Minutes of the Board on this occaſion, which, with the Letters ſtated briefly in the body of this Report, are placed at large in the Appendix, it will appear that the conviction of neceſſity was declared to have been the only ground on which the Members in general agreed to thoſe meaſures; and we obſerve, that General Clavering in particular expreſſed himſelf as fol- lows, "I think it neceſſary to enter this declaration, to "obviate any objection that may be made to my con- "ſenting to carry the Company's arms beyond the line "of defence preſcribed by them; nothing but the ne- "ceſſity of the caſe ſhould have obliged me to it; and "to prevent our being dazzled by the lures which "Ragoba has thrown out to the Government of Bombay, "of various ceſſions which he will make to the Company "as ſoon as he is in complete poſſeſſion of the Maratta "Government, I think the Government of Bombay "ſhould be inſtructed to make a renunciation of every "ceſſion he has made, except the iſlands of Salſette and "Baſſein, and their dependencies, together with ſo much "territory in the neighbourhood of Broach and Surat, "as will be juſt ſufficient to pay the expences of thoſe "two eſtabliſhments."

Appendix, No. 108.

And Mr. Francis having recommended the following propoſal to the Board, "that in authorizing the Pre- "ſidency of Bombay to treat again with Ragoba, they "may be confined to the agreeing on preliminary arti- "cles, but that the definitive treaty may be reſerved to "be ſettled and executed with him by this Government, "as it is poſſible that the views of this Council, parti- "cularly with regard to territorial acquiſitions, may not "be ſo extenſive as we have reaſon to think may be "propoſed by the Bombay Preſidency;" it appears to your Committee, that at the next meeting of the Council it was unanimouſly agreed to.

Sel. Conf. 12 March 1776.

Appendix, No. 109.

And your Committee find, that the Governor General and Council having taken into conſideration the articles propoſed by Ragoba (which are inſerted in the Appendix) agreed (with the ſingle exception of Mr. Barwell) not to accept all the ceſſions offered, "as it would extend the Company's poſſeſſions to a diſtance unwarranted by the general ſpirit of their orders, and diſproportional to the means of defence." That they declined their aſſent to his ſolicitation for a loan of 10 lacks of rupees, as they had reſolved to ſend a ſupply of 10 lacks (being all they had in their power to ſpare) to Bombay, and had appropriated it ſolely to the military operations of that Preſidency. But they at the ſame time engaged to aſſiſt him with their forces in all parts of Hindoſtan and the Decan; for the payment of which by him, a monthly ſubſidy of two lacks was to be fixed.

It was finally agreed to encloſe a copy of the articles, with the reſolutions of the Board upon them, in a Letter to the Bombay Government, inſtructing them to conclude a preliminary Treaty with Ragoba conformably thereto; and further informing them, that a ſmall detachment of infantry, with camp equipage and artillery, were ſent to their aſſiſtance on board the Indian Queen and other ſhips.

Appendix, No. 110.

In this Letter was afterwards inſerted an additional paragraph (containing a recommendation of Colonel Upton to be appointed ſecond in command to their army) which was propoſed by General Clavering, and agreed to by the majority of Council, though ſtrongly and repeatedly oppoſed by the Governor General and Mr. Barwell, as unauthorized and unjuſt. The Conſultations and Minutes of the Board relative to this ſubject will be found in the Appendix.

No. 110.

Sec. Conf. 21 March 1776.
Appendix, No. 111.

It appears that the Board at the ſame time rejected an application from Mr. Taylor, to be employed by them in any negociation which in conſequence of their late reſolutions they ſhould intend to enter into with Ragoba, referring him to the Preſidency of Bombay for ſuch an appointment if they might judge it proper, and leaving him at liberty to return thither at the time moſt agreeable to his own choice or convenience.

Appendix, No. 112. See alſo Appendixes, Nos. 117, 118, & 136.

And it further appears that General Clavering deſired to inſert in the General Letter, which was then about to be diſpatched by the Talbot, a paragraph of complaint againſt the Preſidency of Bombay, in regard to the Maratta diſputes, "whilſt they were under the injunctions "of orders to obſerve the ſuſpenſion of arms, and to "withdraw their army into their own garriſons, or at "leaſt into the Purgunnahs belonging to them." The obſervations of the Governor General in reply to the ſubject of this complaint, with ſeveral papers which your Committee have found to be explanatory of it, are put together in the Appendix.

But your Committee find, that all theſe preparatory reſolutions for a war in ſupport of Ragoba, were, by the receipt of a Letter from Colonel Upton, dated at Poonah Dhur, 24th February, converted into an immediate determination to revoke them; as he therein informed the Board that the Miniſters had at laſt agreed to the conditions mentioned in his Letter of the 2d of the ſame month, and that he hoped to have the articles ready in three or four days.

Theſe appear to have been ſettled upon the 1ſt March, and tranſmitted to Bengal on that day; and Colonel Upton, in a Letter dated 3d March (placed in the Appendix) acquainted the Board of ſeveral particulars in regard to the difficulties he had experienced in arranging the plan, the terms, and the language of the pacification, and of the further ſteps he ſhould take to accommodate all remaining points of doubt or difference, eſpecially the queſtion about the ceſſion made by Futty Sing in the Guzerat Country.

Appendix, No. 114. Sec. Conſ. 1 April 1776.

And your Committee diſcover by this Letter, that the Poonah Government declared a poſitive reſolution, that as the Company had not the ſmalleſt claim to the acquiſition of Baſſein it ſhould never be accompliſhed but by force; and that Colonel Upton further informed the Board, that the Miniſters would write to them to offer a Country of 3 lacks per annum in exchange for Salſette and the ſmall iſlands in the Bay; and that when he had objected to them "the impropriety of propoſing a Country of much leſs value," they declared in reply, "they truſted entirely to the honour of the Gentlemen "of Calcutta, who muſt be conſcious of their having no "right to theſe iſlands, and would therefore reſtore "them." He alſo ſtated the reaſons, why the articles propoſed in favour of the Nabob of Arcot could not be obtained, and why the Miniſters inſiſted on paying the houſehold troops ſtipulated for Ragoba.

See Letters upon the ſubject from Bombay Conſ. 1776. Appendix, No. 115.

Your Committee think it proper to obſerve, that the articles of the Treaty, as tranſmitted by Colonel Upton, are placed in the Appendix, and that immediately annexed to them will be found the obſervations made by the Bengal Council, when they took them into conſideration, and agreed upon the amended draft of a treaty, which they diſpatched to Colonel Upton, and inſtructed him to explain their reaſons for making a few alterations in the original articles of accommodation.

Appendix, No. 116.

The clauſe of reference to the Board, in regard to Salſette and the adjacent iſlands, appears to have been immediately ſettled by their determination not to ſurrender them in exchange for the proffered territory. The omiſſion of two articles and a part of another, ſeem to be the only alterations made by the Governor General and Council to the Treaty ſent by Colonel Upton. And your Committee deſire to refer the Houſe for the motives of theſe omiſſions, to the debate on that ſubject, ſubjoined in the Appendix.

No. 116.

Your Committee however think it proper here ſhortly to ſtate the advantageous acquiſitions which would be ſecured to the Company by the execution of this Treaty:

See Appendix 83

The ceſſions made in the Guzerat Country by Futty Sing, were indeed to be reſtored, in caſe it ſhould be made appear that he had no right to grant them.

It may not be improper here to obſerve, that by the accounts received from Bombay, dated 19th February, it appears that the Preſident and Council, apprehenſive of the ruin of Ragoba, previous to the concluſion of a Treaty with the Miniſters, and becauſe ſuch event muſt have had an unfortunate influence on thoſe negociations, had reſolved to ſend him a remittance of 80,000 rupees, to quiet the clamour of his army for a few days, and for which they avowed the following inducement: "this "ſum we advance upon the ſecurity of a ſupply of about "24,000 pagodas, furniſhed him by the Nabob Hyder "Ally, and which is ſince arrived upon one of the Com-"pany's cruizers." And your Committee would add this further remark, that it appears from the correſpondence between the Preſidency of Bombay and Colonel Upton, that the latter had deſired to be informed if the ceſſions made by Futty Sing were antecedent to the receipt of the Governor General and Council's Letter, ordering the troops to diſcontinue hoſtilities, becauſe the Miniſters aſſured him, that Futty Sing, who ſtill correſponded with them, had complained of having been compelled to grant them, after the ceſſation of arms had taken place.

Appendix, No. 118. Colonel Upton's Letter dated 24 January 1776.

To this the Bombay Council replied on the 1ſt February, and acquainted him, that the ſeveral ceſſions from Futty Sing (except batta) were made long before the receipt of the Governor General and Council's orders: the Treaty between him and Ragoba having been executed on the 18th July 1775, near Brodera, whereas the orders did not reach Bombay till the 12th Auguſt. And in another Letter to Colonel Upton, dated the 15th of February, the Preſident and Council further obſerve, that they were equally alarmed and ſurprized at the ſuppoſition, that the ceſſions in the Guzerat Country ſhould not be retained by the Company.

No. 118.

But your Committee further find, that the Preſident and Council of Bombay, when a copy of the articles at laſt agreed upon between Colonel Upton and the Miniſters reached them, made ſeveral remarks of diſapprobation on the different particulars in them, as will appear from a view of the whole, which is put in the Appendix. Thoſe Gentlemen therein endeavour to depreciate the conceſſions made by the Maratta Government, as in one inſtance nugatory (they having no right in the ſhare of the City and Purgunnah of Broach) and in another, difficult in execution, eſpecially as the country near Broach was not to be jaghire land, which was the tenure of all the beſt lands near that place, and moſtly belonging to Siccaram Baboo. And upon ſerious conſideration of all circumſtances, they pronounced an opinion, that the Treaty was inadequate and highly injurious to the reputation, honour, and intereſts of the Company.

Appendix, No. 119. Remarks of the Preſident and Council of Bombay, dated 15 March 1776.

Vide Colonel Upton's Letter. No. 121.

Your Committee indeed obſerve, that Brigadier General Gordon, whoſe obſervations are placed in the ſame Appendix, differed almoſt entirely with the other Members of the Board in his eſtimation of the advantages acquired to the Company by the Treaty, conſidering it in whatever related to the Company's intereſts, honourable, advantageous, and expedient, and only expreſſing a wiſh, that the article in regard to the eſtabliſhment propoſed for Ragonaut Row, ſhould be altered, as much danger might ariſe to him from the entire dependance on the miniſterial Government to which he would thereby be reduced. In forming his judgment of the terms of the Treaty, General Gordon appears to have conſidered what ought reaſonably to have been expected, when the unjuſtifiable circumſtances of the riſe and progreſs of the war, the ill management of it under the Commander of the troops employed, the want of reſources for carrying it on, the ſtate of the contending parties, Colonel Upton's inſtructions, and the ſentiments of the Company, were attended to.

His Letter, dated 15 March. No. 119.

And we perceive, that Colonel Upton himſelf reaſoned in like manner before the concluſion of the Treaty, when in anſwer to the complaint of the Government of Bombay, for his intention of not inſiſting on the ſurrender of Baſſein, he wrote as follows; "You will perceive by "my inſtructions, that I am directed to act as appears "to me beſt (particularly regarding this very iſland of "Baſſein) for the honour and benefit of the Company, "and this I am determined to do. We have little juſt "claim to any thing. If the peace ſhould take place, "it will be both honourable and beneficial. You know "as well as myſelf the ſenſe of the Governor General "and Council regarding this war, you will therefore "eaſily conclude what it muſt be, reſpecting the Treaty "they wiſh to have concluded with the Marattas."

Sec. Conſ. 6 March 1776. Extract of Letter, dated 20 February. Appendix, No. 120.

And your Committee find, that in another Letter to that Preſidency, dated 2d March, encloſing an extract of the Articles of Treaty, he again defended his conduct in regard to the terms of it; and added, "I am quite clear "alſo, that I have acted conſiſtently with the private "verbal inſtructions I received before I left Calcutta, "and I never had or ſeen cauſe to deviate from them."

Appendix, No. 121. N. B. See Letter from Col. Upton to Bengal, dated 10 April, in Conſ. 25 May 1776. See Appendix, 125.

In this Letter he alſo informed them, that as ſoon as advice ſhould arrive at Poona, of the Engliſh army having marched into their own garriſons, the Miniſters would order the communications to be opened.

Letter dated 15 Mar. 1776. Appendix, No. 122.

But your Committee obſerve, that the Preſident and Council ſoon after informed Colonel Upton, that Ragoba would not accept the terms ſtipulated for him, as he was of opinion his perſon would be endangered by putting himſelf ſo much in the power of his enemies, and, "that "they ſhould therefore offer him an aſylum in one of the "Company's ſettlements, agreeable to his requeſt, and "the latitude given them by the Governor General and "Council in their Letter, dated 20th October 1775."

It appears that Colonel Upton, in his anſwer dated the 19th and 21ſt of March, expreſſed his apprehenſion of ill conſequences from the reſolutions taken by them and by Ragoba, which he foreſaw would raiſe the diſpleaſure and reſentment of the Superior Council, and of the Poona Government. And he declared, that though he would ſtill exert his endeavours to procure terms more agreeable to Ragoba, he ſhould at the ſame time rely on their uſing the influence of their advice to perſuade him into an acquieſcence in thoſe already ſettled.

And your Committee find, that intelligence of theſe matters was conveyed to the Governor General and Council by Letters from Colonel Upton, and from the Preſident and Council of Bombay, both dated 30th March; in which the latter much inſiſted on Colonel Upton's having departed from his inſtructions, and remarked upon his pretence of obeying private verbal inſtructions. They obſerved, that Ragoba ſhould have had the option of reſiding at one of the Company's ſettlements; that the Miniſters would not have objected to it, had their intentions been good; and that he would have proved a moſt uſeful inſtrument for alarming their fears, and the beſt ſecurity for their obſerving the peace; that he had now determined to appeal to the juſtice of the Honourable Company, and await their determination at Bombay to which place he was about to proceed. That they lamented the dereliction of the many advantages ſecured by the Treaty of Surat, and foreſaw the loſs of the Guicawar diſtricts, as it would now be ſo much for the intereſt of that family to allow that they had no right to grant them. They complained of preſent inconveniency and loſs to the Company, by the delay ariſing from a reference in regard to Salſette and the leſſer iſlands; but in the end informed the Supreme Board, that their troops were to march into garriſon on the 26th of that month, though the communication with the Maratta countries ſtill remained ſhut.

Your Committee obſerve, that the Governor General on this occaſion propoſed, that a queſtion ſhould be put to Colonel Upton, relative to the private verbal inſtructions mentioned above; but as the majority of the Board thought it would anſwer no good purpoſe, he withdrew his motion.

Appendix, No. 124.

Whereupon General Clavering appears to have called the attention of the Board to a conſideration of the conduct of the Government of Bombay, in affording an aſylum to Ragoba and his attendants, under pretence of being authorized by the Governor General and Council's Letter of the 18th of October 1775. And we obſerve that a debate then aroſe on the following queſtions:

"Whether the Preſident and Council of Bombay were "authorized to grant the protection of their Govern- "ment to Ragoba, under the ſituation of affairs at the "time in which that application was made to them?

"Secondly, Whether the Board ſhould approve of "the protection granted to Ragoba, or ſhould direct the "Preſident and Council of Bombay to withdraw it?

"And laſtly, Should Ragoba be ſuffered to remain at "Bombay, whether the Council ſhould be authorized to "grant him a penſion for his maintenance at the Com- "pany's expence?"

The opinion of the different Members of the Board will be ſeen by their Minutes, which are put in the Appendix. And your Committee therefore think it proper only to obſerve in this place, that they diſcover in them great contrariety of argument and deciſion, but that the majority on a further conſideration of the queſtions, at the next Council held on the 9th of May, agreed to the draft of a Letter to the Preſident and and Council of Bombay, which was then laid before the Board by the Secretary, and ordered to be diſpatched. It contained aſſurances of their concern at Ragoba's intentions to ſeek an aſylum at Bombay, and of their diſpleaſure at the permiſſion given to him by that Preſidency; explaining the ſenſe of their Letter of the 20th October, to have allowed no ſuch authority beyond the period of the ceſſation of arms, whilſt the negociation was carrying on; and that a proviſion having been made for that Prince by the 11th Article of the Treaty, the pretended exigency did not exiſt; that they were very apprehenſive of danger from the uſe deſigned to be made of him, as an inſtrument of alarm to the Miniſters, and ſhould hold them to be anſwerable to the Court of Directors and to the Britiſh Nation, if the Government of Poonah ſhould in conſequence refuſe to ratify the Treaty, and ſhould renew the war.

Ben. Sec. Conf. May 15th 1776. Appendix, No. 125.

And your Committee find, that Colonel Upton increaſed theſe apprehenſions by accounts which he ſent from Poorunder on 10th April, of the manner in which the Peſhwa and his Miniſters received the news of Ragoba's being permitted to ſeek a reſidence in one of the Company's ſettlements, and wherein he added the following obſervation: "Your full directions to the Preſidency of Bombay are neceſſary; otherwiſe I fear the "articles of the peace will with great difficulty be carried into execution. The Miniſters ſay they cannot "withdraw their army, and that ſubſiſting this army "(including the Nizam's forces) amounts to thirty lacks "of rupees per month, and that we occaſion this heavy "expence to them by protecting, or rather taking part "in the diſputes between them and Ragonaut Row."

See the Letters from the Peſhwa to the Governor General and Council, and the reference to Articles of forfeiture Treaties. No. 125.

And it alſo appears to your Committee, that Colonel Upton ſuggeſted further grounds of uneaſineſs, from the ſtile which Colonel Keating had uſed in proclaiming the peace "between the Honourable Company and the "Poonah Miniſters, at the head of the forces under his "command," and alſo from the promiſe of protection given likewiſe by Colonel Keating to Ragoba, and the deſign of ſending his elephants, horſes, &c. into the neighbourhood of Broach, under eſcort of a detachment from that garriſon.

See Colonel Upton's Letter to Bombay, dated 8th of April 1776. Appendix, No. 126.

That he likewiſe expreſſed much alarm at the probable conſequences of ſuch proceedings, and gave the following reaſon in confirmation of his fears.

"I underſtand that the Miniſters have not ſent a "Vackeel to Bombay as they promiſed, to have explained any difficulties that might have ariſen, and "they now refuſe to ſend one."

Appendix, No. 127. Ben. Sec. Conf. 16 May 1776.

And your Committee find, that in conſequence of theſe ſuggeſtions, General Clavering deſired to warn the Board of the urgent neceſſity which now manifeſtly appeared, of ſending more poſitive orders to thoſe who had in ſo many inſtances ſhewn ſuch contempt of all authority; and therefore, to prohibit "expreſsly the "Preſidency of Bombay to receive Ragoba in any of the "Company's poſſeſſions; and in caſe he ſhould be there "before a Letter could reach it, that they ſhould be "commanded to ſend him away."

And further, "that it would be adviſable, in order to "obviate all doubts and uncertainties concerning the "authenticity of the Treaty, that the Preſidency of "Bombay ſhould be directed to proclaim it expreſsly in "the name of the Maratta State;" and that the Miniſters at Poonah ſhould be informed of the orders given to that purpoſe.

No. 127.

The Minutes delivered on this Conſultation will be found in the Appendix. And from them it will appear how far the Governor General and Mr. Barwell objected to the propoſition as contrary to good policy, and not required by the terms of the Treaty, though they diſclaimed all ideas of ſupporting or encouraging any hoſtile attempts in favour of Ragoba; the Governor General remarking at the ſame time, that from the extraordinary declaration made by Siccaram Baboo, in his Letter received the 1ſt April, he was led to doubt of the validity of the Treaty on the part of the Maratta State; "and that he ſhould never think it "binding on the Company, while a latitude was avowedly claimed by the oppoſite party, to declare it null, "whenever the caprice or intereſt of the parties ſhould "invite them to break it."

Sec. Pol. Cons. Nov. 1776. Sec. Appeals, No 115.

It appears, however, that the majority of the Board agreed nearly in ſentiments with the General, except that Mr. Francis did not approve of the removal of Ragoba by force from Bombay, ſhould he be there, adviſing rather, as in all probability an equally effectual means of getting rid of him, to withhold all ſupport and encouragement from him; and it was accordingly reſolved to ſend directions to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, and to Colonel Upton, agreeable to this opinion.

It has appeared to your Committee, that the event of a pacification with the Maratta Miniſters having been notified to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, the Governor and Council held it to be unneceſſary to ſend to Bombay the reinforcement they intended, in conſequence of the recommendation from the Calcutta Board, of two battalions of Sepoys, and therefore countermanded the orders for their march to Anjengo. And we have further ſeen, that the Bombay Council, by Letter dated 24th March, apprized the Government of Madras, that they ſhould, as opportunity might offer, ſend round the detachment of Europeans and Kelly's battalion of Sepoys, belonging to the latter Preſidency.

No. 128.

But this intention appears, by a ſubſequent Letter from the Preſidency of Bombay to that of Fort Saint George, dated 15th April 1776, to have been laid aſide; and the reaſon aſſigned for it was the expediency of being provided againſt all events in ſo uncertain a ſituation of affairs; as the Miniſters, not having ſhewn much inclination to perform their own part of the late Treaty, had pretended nevertheleſs to term the protection granted to Ragoba by the Preſidency of Bombay, an infringement of it on theirs.

No. 128.

And your Committee obſerve, that the Government of Bombay, in their Letters dated the 10th, 22d, and 24th of April, to the Supreme Council, expreſſed their ſentiments in ſimilar terms of diſguſt at the impolicy and defects of the Treaty, and of complaints againſt the Poonah Government for repeated breaches of it, particularly in attacks made by their ſhips upon thoſe of the Company; defending at the ſame time their own behaviour in the protection afforded to Ragoba, and hoping, that were the Miniſters to break with them on that account, they ſhould be fully juſtified in making reſiſtance.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 2 May 1776. Appendix, No. 129.

As a further proof of the defects of the Treaty, they acquainted the Board, that Futty Sing had demanded reſtitution of the ceſſions made to the Company by his Treaty with Ragoba, as the conditions of it were not fulfilled; and he poſitively denied all right of the Poonah Government to alienate the Guicawar territories.

Your Committee alſo obſerve, that the Bombay Preſidency having received the Letter beforementioned of the 7th March, from the Governor General and Council, took occaſion in acknowledging it to ſubmit to them, whether for many reaſons, and eſpecially on account of the probable conſequences of their own proceedings, in having made offers to Ragoba, and applied for the aſſiſtance or neutrality of the Country Powers, it might not yet be more eligible and conſiſtent with the honour and advantage of the Company, not to ratify the Treaty formed by Colonel Upton, but to permit them to enter into new engagements upon the plan laid down in that Letter (of 7th March) with Ragoba, who was then at Surat in great diſtreſs, and not able to diſband his army for want of money to pay their arrears.

But we perceive, that notwithſtanding this ſituation, they repreſented ſome favourable circumſtances which had happened, and by the interference of the Company, might be rendered of effectual advantage to him; that commotions were likely to arise in the Maratta State by the escape of Sudabah out of prison, where he had been long confined by the Poonah Government, and from his claiming the office of Regent, either for himself singly, or jointly with Ragoba, during the minority of the young Peshwa, in opposition to the Ministers; Sudabah being the son of Chimnajee Oppah, the brother of Badajee Row, who was Ragoba's father, was consequently next to Ragoba entitled to the Peshwaship or the Regency of the Maratta Empire.

See Letter from Ragoba, dated Surat, 7th April 1776. No. 129.

That Ragoba had likewise informed them of his having received promises of assistance from the Nizam, upon condition that the Company would not assist the ministerial party, and they desired instructions for their conduct in these particulars.

Appendix, No. 130.

And your Committee find, from the Consultations of the Supreme Board on this occasion, that a reply to these Letters from Bombay was agreed upon by the majority after much difference of opinion, which will appear to the House from the Minutes subjoined in the Appendix, No. 130. And it appears to contain express instructions to that Presidency, that they should conform strictly to the terms of the Treaty, and avoid any step whatsoever which might give occasion of distrust or jealousy to the Maratta Government; that it therefore became necessary for them peremptorily to require the immediate departure of Ragoba and his army out of the Company's possessions, and to decline giving the assurances of neutrality which Ragoba had demanded of them for the satisfaction of the Nizam.

With regard to the possessions claimed by Futty Sing, they gave the following directions: "As these possessions "are all stipulated, either to be restored to the Maratta "State, or ceded to the Company, we desire you will "reject the pretensions of Futty Sing to the restoration of "a moiety in the revenues of the town and Pergunnah "of Broach, and his demand for the Pergunnahs of "Chickley, Veriow, Batta, and the three villages of "Chureaey, as inadmissible."

See Message from the Nabob Fazel Beg Cawn, on the part of the Nizam, dated 29 April 1776; and see Letter from Col. Upton, dated 6 May, on Ben. Sec. Cons. 6 June 1776.

Appendix, No. 131.

And it appears to your Committee, that overtures were also made secretly to Colonel Upton from the Nizam through Fazel Beg Cawn, for a plan to restore Ragoba to the Maratta Government, by their joint assistance, upon terms of mutual advantage to them; among which we find the following specific engagement:

"After Ragoba is settled in Poonah, the Nabob Nizam "does promise to make him grant to the English Com- "pany, Sunnuds for the Cuttack Country, and relin- "quish all claims of the Chout." And Colonel Upton was requested to write to the Supreme Council, and get a Treaty under their signatures and seals for that purpose. It further appears, that Colonel Upton in his answer expressed some degree of resentment at such an application at so late a period, and considered the alliance proposed as, in the present circumstances, dishonourable to the English; and that although he would keep the secret, as he was desired, communicating it only to the Supreme Council, he would not have the Nabob flatter himself with their doing any thing to the prejudice of the Treaty lately entered into with the Ministers. This indeed appears to have been confirmed by the Governor General and Council, who in their Letter to Colonel Upton, dated 20th June following, declared their approbation of the answer which he had returned to Fazel Beg Cawn's message, adding however a wish that he had declined giving any countenance to it whatever, even in promising to transmit it to them, and directing him for the future to avoid all correspondence with any foreign Power, for fear of exciting the jealousy of the Maratta Government.

Nov 1771. Col. Upton's Letter, dated 6 May 1776.

Ben. Sec. Conf. June 20, 1776. Appendix, No. 132.

It would be tedious and useless to call the attention of the House to every minute circumstance of mutual complaint between the Ministers of Poonah and the Presidency of Bombay, in regard to pretended infringements of the Treaty; and your Committee will therefore only observe, that the language of the former seems to have in some instances approached to menace. "They were "afraid (they said) that they should be at last under the "necessity of following the example of Hyder Ally, who "secured his peace with the English in a manner very "honourable to himself; and that it was their resolu- "tion, if war again commenced, to carry fire and sword "through all the Company's possessions, be the con- "sequence ever so fatal to themselves;"—That they should allow only a fortnight for the disbanding of Ragoba's forces, and had directed their General Hurry Punt Furkia to attack and disperse them, in case they should still remain embodied at the end of that period.

See Letter from Col. Upton, to Bombay, dated 4th May 1776. No. 133.

But your Committee find, that the execution of these threatenings, if ever really intended, was prevented by the defection of the greatest part of Ragoba's troops, which joined the Maratta General; and Colonel Upton, in a Letter dated 27th May, informed the Governor General and Council, that the Ministers had consented to the omissions required by them in the Treaty, and had signed it, desiring only that a few alterations might be made, which however he had not agreed to, but had engaged to represent them to the Supreme Council, and at the same time to request, that a confidential Vackeel from Poonah might be permitted to go and reside at Fort William. It appears by the answer of the Governor General and Council, dated 3d July, that they were determined not to admit of any alterations in the Treaty, but gave a ready assent to the proposed residence of a Maratta Vackeel; and by their Letter of the same date to the President and Council of Bombay, they directed them to receive the stipulated payment of the twelve lacks of rupees, at the periods when it should become due from the Poonah Government, in whatever money it should be offered to them.

No. 134.

Your Committee observe, that the executed Treaty was transmitted by Colonel Upton to the Supreme Council, with a Letter dated 3d June, wherein he acquainted them, that the ministerial forces were put in possession of all the ceded Purgunnahs except Jambosier, which was to remain as a pledge until the Country of three lacks near Broach was given up to the Company's Agents.

Ben. Sec. Cons. 24 July 1776. Appendix, No. 135.

And it appears by Letters from Bombay, that Ragoba, after the disbanding of his army, had retired to Surat with only 200 of his attendants, and that the President and Council had desired Colonel Upton "to use his en- "deavours to induce the Ministers to assign him a "suitable establishment, to relieve the Company from "the heavy expences they would otherwise incur by his "maintenance." They further apprized the Supreme Board, that the communication between the Company's settlements and the Maratta dominions being now opened, they had returned the Bengal detachment, and should be obliged for want of money to send back the Madras battalion.

Dated 10th June, and 30th June 1776. Ben. Sec. Cons. 22d July, and 5th August 1776. Appendix, No. 136.

The Board appear to have ordered the Treaty to be placed among their Records, and directed Colonel Upton to return immediately to Bengal. Your Committee indeed observe, that they had already on 1st of July sent instructions to him to quit Poonah; that having then received a General Letter from the Court of Directors in their Secret Department, dated the 15th December 1775, and found it to contain a declaration of their intentions to keep all territories and possessions ceded to the Company by the Treaty concluded with Ragoba, they resolved, that as they had considered that Treaty to be invalid, and had since concluded another with the Ministers of the Maratta State, by which many of those possessions were given up, they could not carry into execution the orders of the Court; and that esteeming Colonel Upton's presence at Poonah to be no longer necessary, but that his services might be more effectually employed at Bombay, for the full accomplishment of what remained to be settled in the execution of the Treaty, they directed him to repair thither, and to exert his endeavours to effect the con-cluſion of the different articles required by it. And your Committee further obſerve, that they at the ſame time encloſed a copy of the Company's orders, and of their reſolutions upon them, to the Preſident and Council of Bombay, repeating their injunctions to them to execute on their part every article of the Treaty of Poorunder. It may be proper to remark, that Mr. Barwell on this occaſion declared, that "he did not mean, by ſubſcribing "to the reſolution of the Board, to allow that their "Government was not at liberty to adopt hoſtile reſo-"lutions, and to ſeize the firſt opportunity that offered "to execute the Company's intentions."

Ben. Sec. Conf. 8th July 1776, and 15th July 1776. Appendix, No. 138.

It will be proper further to obſerve, that Mr Tayler, a few days after the diſpatch of the Letters abovementioned, ſent in to the Board a paper, containing a complaint and proteſt againſt their deciſion upon this ſubject; in anſwer to which, they having deſired to be informed by what authority he thought himſelf juſtified to make a repreſentation in ſuch a ſtile, he appears to have replied in ſtrong terms of ſelf-juſtification under the powers deputed to him by the Preſidency of Bombay. Theſe papers, with the Minutes of the Board, containing their ſeveral opinions and reaſonings, are, for the fuller information of the Houſe, placed together in the Appendix.

No. 138.

But your Committee find, that the orders of the Company relative to the territories acquired under the Treaty with Ragoba, occaſioned reſolutions very different from thoſe of the Supreme Council, to be taken by the Government of Bombay; who ſignified by their Letters to Bengal and to Colonel Upton, their determination to retain ſuch of the poſſeſſions ceded by the treaty of Surat, as had not yet been yielded up in conſequence of that of Poorunder; and we perceive, that Colonel Upton having received this information at the ſame time that the directions of the Supreme Council for quitting Poonah and retiring to Bombay reached him, found himſelf under great perplexity, and repreſented the ill conſequences which would certainly enſue from his obeying ſuch directions in the actual circumſtance of affairs, eſpecially as Ragonaut Row had ſuddenly departed from Surat, and was ſaid to be on his march to join Sudabah, whoſe increaſing force and deſign of attacking Poonah had induced the Miniſters to augment the ſtrength of their army; and he ſuggeſted, that if Sudabah ſhould ſucceed, in the governing power of that country, his confirmation of the late Treaty would be neceſſary, as the Peſhwa was a minor. And the Governor General and Council appear to have immediately written to the Preſidency of Bombay in terms of great diſpleaſure at their intended proceedings, reminding them of their own repreſentations of the low ſtate of their treaſury, and the reduced eſtabliſhment of their army, which ought to make them cautious "of expoſing "the Company's poſſeſſions under their Government, "to the immediate hazard of a war, admitting that no "other motive oppoſed their engaging in it." And in a Letter of the ſame date to Colonel Upton, they directed him to act in regard to his ſtay at Poonah according to his own diſcretion, but declared their alarm at his idea, that it might be neceſſary for Sudabah to ſign the Treaty, "as they on their parts had always conſidered it, to be "formed with, and binding on the Maratta State, with-"out regarding in whoſe hands the actual power of the "Government might then or hereafter be lodged."

But your Committee obſerve, that the Select Committee of Bombay had altered their reſolutions before the receipt of the Letter from the Supreme Board, and that Colonel Upton nevertheleſs ſtill thought it imprudent for him to depart from Poonah till the Treaty ſhould be accompliſhed, or till a Reſident ſhould be ſent from Bombay. But it appears that the Governor General and Council hereupon repeated their opinion, that his longer continuance at the Maratta Court was unneceſſary, and required him immediately to demand his diſmiſſion in terms of the greateſt delicacy. And they at the ſame time expreſſed, in a Letter to Bombay, their ſatisfaction in the change which the Preſident and Council had made in their reſolutions, and recommended it to them to appoint an Agent to reſide at Poonah, and to adviſe them of the perſon whom they might nominate to that ſtation.

Appendix, No. 142.

And your Committee find, that Colonel Upton, in his Letter dated the 26th of October, informed the Governor General and Council of ſeveral circumſtances which had happened in advancing the Treaty to its entire accompliſhment, which he hoped was then nearly effected: that the Peſhwa had conſented to make over the Pergunnahs of Hanſood, Occlaſeer, and Delberah, for the Country of three lacks, and mortgaged the collections of Jamboſir till the ſtipulated ſum of twelve lacks ſhould be paid. But neither Vackeel or Letter had arrived from Futty Sing, and he imagined that he kept back until he ſaw which party would get the better. He (Colonel Upton) had however again aſſured the Miniſters, that the proofs reſpecting the Peſhwa's having the ſole right to the Guzerat Country muſt be found ſatisfactory before the ceſſions made by Futty Sing would be reſtored.

Ben. Sec. Conf. 9 December 1776. Appendix, No. 143.

See Letter from Bengal to Bombay, dated 9 December 1776. No. 143.

And it appears by another Letter from Colonel Upton, dated 13th November, that the Peſhwa intended in a few days to ſend a large army againſt Hyder Ally, as all the apprehenſions of the Poonah Government on account of the diſturbances raiſed by Sudabah were at an end, he having been entirely defeated and taken priſoner. That many complaints however were made againſt the Preſidency of Bombay, between whom and that State Colonel Upton obſerved, there was every appearance of a recommencement of hoſtilities, for the encouragement and protection they had openly given to Sudabah and to Ragonaut Row, who had been for ſome time paſt near the Portugueſe ſettlement of Damaun, endeavouring to procure for himſelf the aſſiſtance of that Nation, "but had lately "written to the Miniſters, and propoſed accepting a "Jaghire, which they being diſpoſed to grant, expected "ſoon to ſee him ſettled."

See Letter from the Peſhwa Madhoo Row to Colonel Upton, received 8 November; and alſo Mr. Hornby's Letters from Surat. No. 144.

But your Committee obſerve, that accounts were ſome days after received from Colonel Upton, dated 24 November, by which it appears that Ragonaut Row had been received at Bombay a ſhort time before, which had occaſioned very great ſurprize and concern to the Peſhwa and his Miniſters; and the Governor General and Council expreſſed the ſame ſentiments on their part alſo in Letters which they immediately diſpatched to that Preſidency, urging with the greateſt earneſtneſs a demand for an explanation of their proceedings, and repeating injunctions to them to inſiſt upon the inſtant departure of Ragoba from Bombay and all its dependencies. It is however to be remarked, that in a Letter which they wrote at the ſame time to Colonel Upton, they took notice of circumſtances which they thought betrayed too ready a diſpoſition to enmity in the Miniſters, and ſeemed to ſuſpect, that he was himſelf detained by compulſion at Poonah, for which reaſon they again enjoined him to take his leave immediately of the Maratta Court, acquainting him alſo that they had written to the Peſhwa on that ſubject. And it may be proper further to obſerve, that the Supreme Board having in their Letter to the Court of Directors mentioned their apprehenſions on this head, General Clavering deſired at the ſame time to tranſmit his Minute, in which he proteſts againſt ſuch concluſions as unwarrantable.

Ben Sec Conf. 13 January 1777.

And it indeed appears by other Letters afterwards received from Colonel Upton, that theſe ſuſpicions of the majority of the Supreme Council were not well founded, and that he had been only prevailed upon to continue at Poona till Mr. Moſtyn, who was at laſt appointed by the Preſidency of Bombay to go thither as their Reſident, ſhould arrive; which however did not happen, as Mr. Moſtyn, who was at his firſt nomination particularly objected to by the Miniſters, did not arrive at Poona before the beginning of April, and Colonel Upton left it on the 7th of March preceding, having before his departure communicated to the Governor General neral and Council several circumstances which had occasioned fresh disgust in the Poonah Government to that of Bombay, particularly by a Letter to the Peshwa from the President, and because that no satisfactory explanations of their conduct in regard to Sudabah and Ragonaut Row, had been sent to the Ministers. But your Committee have perceived that the President and Council of Bombay, in their Letter dated 1st February 1777, to the Supreme Council, thus expressed their future intentions: "We "shall likewise direct Mr. Mostyn to do all in his power "to promote the most friendly correspondence with the "Poonah Government, and we hope a suitable and per- "manent accommodation will be effected between that "State and Ragonaut Row, who still resides at Bombay, "whereby all future jealousies will be removed, and the "Honourable Company relieved from the expence "incurred by his residence."

Such is the most material information relative to the first quarrel with the Maratta State, which your Committee have been able to collect and lay before the House; and upon which they may regulate their judgment of the conduct and disposition of the Company's servants in some of their chief settlements in India. Such was the apparent state of composition to which those disputes between the Presidency of Bombay and the Poona Government were brought, at the time of Colonel Upton's departure from the Maratta Court, in the beginning of the year 1777.

It may not be improper to turn our attention for a moment to consider the political situation of affairs in other quarters at this period; so far as they appear to have had any connection with, or may be supposed to have been influenced by the transactions we have related.

The Presidency of Fort Saint George, to which of course we direct our first regard on this occasion, was then betraying apprehensions of hostile designs from Hyder Ally in conjunction with the French, which were only allayed by the report of his preparations being against the Marattas. But the following Extract of a Letter from that Presidency, dated the 4th of December 1776, to the Supreme Council, will best explain their circumstances and situation.

"We have the honour to enclose you intelligence "received in a Letter from the Nabob, which, after "giving an account of the situation of affairs at Poonah, "represents Hyder Ally Cawn to be raising troops and "preparing for war; and that the Polygars and Zemin- "dars were ordered to attend at the passes towards the "Payen Ghaut; this is in a great degree weakened by "advices we have received through another channel, "copy of which we enclose you, which represents Hyder's "preparations to be in consequence of the apprehensions "of the Marattas."

"We understand that the French have received at the "Islands troops and stores from France, and that barracks "are building in Pondicherry. They most probably look "forward to dispute with us the government of this "Country; and considering their views with those of "Hyder Ally, who has reduced many petty Princes "around him, we ought to prepare ourselves against the "designs of either. Were we able when necessity "should require to take the field with a well-regulated "and well-paid army, with good conduct, we might hope "one vigorous campaign would restore peace to the "Country; we are sensible of the necessity of peace, and "every endeavour shall be used towards a continuance "of it."—The rest of this Letter, and some of the Enclosures which it contains, are put in the Appendix, and may appear worthy of inspection.

See Letter from Seringapatam dated 20 Sept. 1775, on Ben. Sec. Conf. 12 February 1776.

Appendix, No. 149.

Your Committee have indeed found that Hyder Ally in the beginning of these quarrels had discovered a distrust and resentment against the English, advising Ragoba to be aware of them as a deceitful people. It should however be added, that he was suspected at the time of tampering with the ministerial party and the Nizam, to the disadvantage of Ragonaut Row and his allies. We have seen that he had nevertheless afterwards assisted that Prince with money, and that the Peshwa had lately threatened to send a great force against him. It appears in reality, that about this time a very large body of Maratta horse penetrated into the Mysorean country, committing great ravages; and that Hyder detached the chief part of his army, under his son Tippoo Saib, to oppose them.

Country Correspondence 1777, Letter to Gov. Stratton, 12 Jun. N° 149.

We have observed, that the Nabob of Arcot had been invited, by the ministerial powers at Poona to assist with his mediation in procuring a peace for them with the Company; but that afterwards, upon the deputation of Colonel Upton, they had refused to accede to the articles proposed in his favour, assigning, as a chief ground of their refusal, that the Rajah of Tanjore, a relation of the Ram Rajah, had been dispossessed of his Country, and that they would not treat upon any terms of concession with the Nabob, till after the restoration of the Maratta Prince. This event had now taken place; and though the inclinations of the Nabob had not been much consulted therein, he had however been obliged to acquiesce in it, and was so far become a less object of resentment to the Poona Administration. It is evident indeed, that his inveterate enmity to Hyder Ally made him almost of course a well-wisher to the Marattas, who had been before their troubles Hyder's most formidable opponents. How far Mahommed Ally was at this time to be dreaded by other Powers as an enemy, and of what importance he appeared to the Company as their ally, will be found in the Letter above referred to, and has been seen by the First Report.

The Subah of the Decan had been manifestly employed in watching the turns of fortune of the several combatants, and endeavouring to convert every change to his own advantage. In this view, though he had latterly sent a large body of troops to join the ministerial army, he was well known not to wish them to be engaged in action, especially against the British forces; and he has appeared, at the very time, to have been forward in proposing a plan of hostile union against the same Power, with whom he was seemingly connected in close alliance. But a representation made by himself of his own conduct and designs, with some remarks on those of other Powers, having been given by him to Colonel Upton, who passed through Hyderabad in the beginning of April on his return to Bengal, we shall desire to refer the House to it, as the latest information of his political views, and particularly of his real or pretended attachment, both to the English and Marattas.

Appendix, No. 151. Letter from the Nizam, dated 23 April 1777.

Moodajee Boosila, the Rajah of Berar, was imagined to have been well disposed to the cause of Ragonaut Row. But in a Letter received from him on the 28th March 1777, by the Governor General, he mentions his having determined to send Ragojee his son, with 5,000 men, to pay a visit to the Peshwa, as a measure which their long friendship had rendered absolutely necessary. He however had sent a Vackeel to reside at Calcutta, and seemed with much sincerity to desire a connection of friendship with the Company; and though he had lately declined compliance with a request made to him by them, he softened his refusal by the warmest assurance of his attention to remedy the complaints which had induced them to make it. If, however, the insinuations of the Nizam were to be credited, he was not entirely sincere in these professions of friendship, but had at the same time formed a design to urge his demand of Chout from the province of Bengal, at the head of an army.

Tookajee Holkar and Madajee Scindia, upon whose declarations in his favour Ragoba had so often repeated his reliance, were now openly engaged in measures very contrary to his interests; and they appear also to have been very troublesome and alarming neighbours to the Company's ally, the Nabob Vizier.

Ben. Country Corr. 1777, received 28 March.

Appendix, N° 153.

In regard to the dominions and ſituation of the Vizier, many very material alterations had taken place in this interval, ſince your Committee cloſed their laſt remarks upon them, at the concluſion of the Rohilla war. Souja Dowla, who, ſoon after that event, began to feel a decay of health, did not long ſurvive it, but died in the beginning of the year 1775. Previous to his death, Mr. Middleton left his Durbar in obedience to the commands of the Governor General and Council, and returned to the Preſidency, bringing with him fifteen lacks of rupees, which he has before been mentioned to have received, in part of the Rohilla agreement. It appears alſo, that five lacks had been received on the Company's account at Benares, being an aſſignment by the Vizier on the Rajah Cheit Sing; and the Commander of the Company's brigade ſtationed in Oude had alſo received three lacks, in further acquittal of his engagement, on account of the aſſiſtance given him in that war.

Appendix, N° 154. Letter from Governor General and Council, February 24th 1775.

Your Committee do not find, that before his death Souja Dowla had diſcharged any more of his debt due on that account. He appears to have nominated his only legitimate ſon, Miza Ammany, otherwiſe called Aſoph ul Dowla, as his ſucceſſor in the Soubadarry of Oude; and the Bengal Government determined to ſupport his pretenſions, though by all accounts he poſſeſſed neither the qualities of the heart or head equal to ſuch a ſtation, his right however not ſeeming to have been diſputed.

In theſe reſolutions of advancing the ſucceſſion of Aſoph ul Dowla, your Committee find, that the Supreme Council paid no regard to the bonds of treaty by which they were connected with his father. They conſidered thoſe as mere perſonal obligations, and avowedly directed the line of their conduct towards the ſon, by a view of drawing from it the greateſt poſſible benefit to the Company's affairs; having determined, that the ſpecific conditions of their former alliances with the Vizier expired with him. Under the controul of theſe intentions, Mr. Briſtow, who was appointed to ſucceed Mr. Middleton in the Reſidency of Fizabad, ſet out in the beginning of February 1775, to enter upon the duties of his function, being particularly charged with the buſineſs of ſettling the payments of the different ſums due from the late Vizier. It ſhould be further obſerved, that the Council, in their orders to Colonel Galliez, diſcouraged the offer of any preſent from the Nabob to the army, or to individuals.

It is not the purpoſe or intention of your Committee to enter in this place into a minute inveſtigation of the proceedings tranſacted at the Court of Oude by the Reſident on the part of the Company; we think it proper only to obſerve, that a Treaty was agreed to between the Nabob and Mr. Briſtow on the 21ſt May 1775, which was confirmed by the Governor General and Council, on the 6th June following, by which the provinces of Corab and Iliabad were guaranteed to the Nabob, and the ſtipulated ſubſidy for the ſervice of the brigade was increaſed to two lacks ſixty thouſand Sicca rupees per month. But the great point of advantage which the Company derived from this treaty, was the ſovereignty and poſſeſſion in perpetuity of the diſtricts under Rajah Cheit Sing, as hereunder ſpecified:

The tribute reſerved on theſe Provinces amounting to 22,10,000 rupees, payable by Cheit Sing to the Nabob, was of courſe transferred to the Company; and the Nabob moreover engaged to pay all balances according to the engagements of the late Vizier, as they ſhould become due.

The advantages and honourable ſtipulations acquired to the Company by this Treaty, are earneſtly pointed out in the joint Minute of Meſſrs. Clavering, Monſon, and Francis, recorded on the Secret Conſultations of the 7th December 1775, and they claimed great merit with the Directors on account of this meaſure, which they declared to be ſtrictly and excluſively their own, in deſpite of the oppoſition given to it by the Governor General and Mr. Barwell; and they expreſſed alſo the higheſt ſatisfaction to obſerve, that by the terms of the Treaty, the guarantee of the Nabob's dominions, and the ſervice of the Company's troops, were exactly confined within the ſame limits which the Court of Directors in their laſt Letter had thought fit to preſcribe to them for their engagements with the Vizier. It is however to be obſerved, that the Governor General, in his remarks upon theſe beneficial repreſentations, perſiſted in his prophetic apprehenſions, that the conditions of the Treaty could never be fulfilled, and therefore ought not to be eſteemed advantageous; neither did he think it honourable to have extorted from the Nabob conceſſions inconſiſtent with their former Treaties, to which the neceſſity of his ſituation alone obliged him however unwillingly to ſubmit.

Appendix, 157. Ben. Sec. Conf 29 February 1776.

Your Committee have remarked, that the Court of Directors had at the end of the year 1775, expreſſed their ſentiments very ſhortly on the line of policy which the majority of their Council in Lengal had reſolved to follow in regard to Aſoph ul Dowla.

" Although the death of Sujah Dowla may render it " neceſſary to make new arrangements with his ſucceſſor, " we cannot agree with our Council, that our Treaties " with the State of Oude expired with the death of that " Nabob."

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal, dated 15 December 1775.

But it is to be obſerved, that when they were informed of the further proceedings of the Calcutta Board upon this ſubject, and had conſidered the conditions upon which the new Treaty with the Nabob was formed, the Court ratified it with their complete ſanction in the following words:

" It is with ſingular ſatisfaction we obſerve at any time " the attention paid by our ſervants to the great intereſts " of their Employers; and it is with particular pleaſure we " here ſignify our entire approbation of the late Treaty " concluded with Aſoph ul Dowla, ſucceſſor of Sujah Dowla, " by which ſuch terms are procured as ſeem to promiſe " us ſolid and permanent advantages."

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal, dated 24 December 1776.

In conſequence of this engagement, the Company's brigades remained in thoſe provinces, but ſtill the frontiers were perpetually haraſſed by flying parties of the Marattas. The temper and conduct of the Nabob ſeemed ill-ſuited to accommodation and harmony with his neighbours or dependants; who indeed on their part did not ſhew a readineſs to ſervice and obedience. The inſtructions of the Governor General and Council to their ſervants, both civil and military, pointed out the extent and limitation of their interference in theſe diſputes; and it was particularly however recommended to them to avoid engaging the Company in any new Treaty for the purpoſe of guarantee, or otherwiſe, without obtaining the expreſs orders of the Board.

The pretenſions of the Nabob to the Vizierat, met with many interruptions; and other competitors were ſtrongly ſupported by different Powers, particularly by the Nizam. The ſituation and conduct of the King was naturally thereupon marked with doubt and irreſolution; nor did he ſeem at laſt to act with confidence, or perfect inclination, when he ſent his ambaſſador, in the month of April 1776, to inveſt the Nabob Aſoph ul Dowlah with the Kilaat.

And your Committee have found, that frequent accounts were afterwards received at Calcutta of continual alarms from the threatening appearances of the enemy, particularly on the frontiers of the province of Korab; and that the Governor General, in conſequence of theſe informations, and of intelligence ſent by Colonel Goddard (then

(then commanding the new-eſtabliſhed battalions) had ſtated his apprehenſions of a combination being formed by the King, the Marattas, the Seikes, and the Rohillas, to invade the dominions of the Vizier; and that having thereupon ſuggeſted the expediency of eſtabliſhing a defenſive alliance with the Nabob Nudjif Cawn, he recommended the private deputation of Major Hanney to his Durbar, for the purpoſe of ſettling all terms of agreement by perſonal negociation.

See the Minutes of the ſeveral Members of the Board on Cons. 28 and 29 Auguſt 1776, and General Clavering's Minute of Diſſent, incloſed in the General Packet to England, 23d September.
Appendix, N° 164.

That this meaſure, after much debate and explanation (the whole of which will be found in the Appendix) was agreed upon by the majority of the Council, and Major Hanney was accordingly diſpatched after receiving his inſtructions; by which he was directed to inſiſt upon Nudjif's previous compliance with certain requiſitions before he ſhould paſs the boundaries of their own dominions. It will not be improper here to remark, that many doubts of the Nabob's friendly diſpoſition towards the Vizier, were entertained by the Company's Reſident at Oude, who however at the ſame time declared his opinion, that although the Marattas had got poſſeſſion of the conquered Countries on the other ſide of the Jumna, "the awe in which foreign Powers were held by "the Britiſh troops, and the ſubordination and diſcipline "introduced among the Vizier's forces under the com-"mand of Britiſh officers, would prove a ſecurity to his "dominions," and defeat the accompliſhment of that combination which was certainly projecting againſt him.

Letter from Mr. Briſtow, dated 22 Auguſt 1776.
Appendix, N° 165.

The deputation to Nudjif Cawn appears not to have had an immediate ſucceſs, as in anſwer to Major Hanney's Letter, containing the motives of his viſit and the requiſitions preſcribed, the Nabob endeavoured to excuſe himſelf for delaying a compliance with them; but nevertheleſs aſſured him of a welcome reception at his Durbar. In conſequence however of the accounts which Major Hanney immediately tranſmitted to the Supreme Council, freſh debates and difference of opinion enſued; but it being finally reſolved to make no alteration in their original inſtructions, Major Hanney was of courſe left in attendance at Chunar Gur, till Nudjif Cawn ſhould be diſpoſed by compliance with the requiſitions preſcribed to allow him to proceed. In the meantime, at the period in queſtion a deſultory kind of warfare ſeems to have been carrying on in various parts near the frontiers of the Vizerat; in which Nudjif Cawn is found combating with the Marattas and Jauts, and in great diſtreſs for money to pay his troops. The Vizier's affairs, and eſpecially his finances, do not appear to have been in a more flouriſhing condition; and the balances due to the Company, already conſiderable, were likely to increaſe.

In regard to the King, the confidence which he does not ſeem to have fully reſtored to Nudjif Cawn, diminiſhed daily: his diſtreſſes, under the cabals of his Miniſters, and the diſappointment of his expectation of being relieved, had a great influence on his conduct; while the proſpect before him was the more unpromiſing from the certainty that Nudjif Cawn, however unable or unwilling in the preſent ſituation of affairs to aſſiſt him, was the only perſon he could ultimately look to for ſupport.

See General Letter 25 Nov. 1776, N° 168.

The Rana of Gohud, whom Colonel Goddard had recommended to the protection of the Company and the Vizier, as his ſmall dominions might be eſteemed a good barrier to theirs, was obliged to make peace with the Marattas, after a ſpirited reſiſtance to their attacks. The Governor General and Council, in their Secret Letter of the 9th May 1777, take notice of this with other circumſtances deſcriptive of the poſture of affairs at that period, when they were in immediate expectation of Colonel Upton's arrival at the Preſidency, on his return from Poonah.

Extracts of an Act, made in the 13th year of the Reign of King George the Third, intituled, "An "Act for eſtabliſhing certain Regulations for the "better Management of the Affairs of the Eaſt "India Company, as well in India as in Europe."

Preamble.

WHEREAS the ſeveral powers and authorities granted by charters to the United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies, have been found, by experience, not to have ſufficient force and efficacy to prevent various abuſes which have prevailed in the government and adminiſtration of the affairs of the ſaid United Company, as well at Home as in India, to the manifeſt injury of the public credit, and of the commercial intereſts of the ſaid Company; and it is therefore become highly expedient that certain further regulations, better adapted to their preſent circumſtances and condition, ſhould be provided and eſtabliſhed.

A Governor General and Four Counſellors to be appointed, in whom the whole Civil and Military Government of Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, ſhall be veſ

And, for the better management of the ſaid United Company's affairs in India, Be it enacted, that for the Government of the Preſidency of Fort William in Bengal, there ſhall be appointed a Governor General and Four Counſellors; and that the whole Civil and Military Government of the ſaid Preſidency, and alſo the ordering, management, and government of all the territorial acquiſitions and revenues in the kingdoms of Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, ſhall, during ſuch time as the territorial acquiſitions and revenues ſhall remain in the poſſeſſion of the ſaid United Company, be, and are hereby veſted in the ſaid Governor General and Council of the ſaid Preſidency of Fort William in Bengal, in like manner, to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever, as the ſame now are, or at any time heretofore might have been, exerciſed by the Preſident and Council, or Seleſt Committee, in the ſaid kingdoms.

In caſe of difference of opinion, the deciſion of the major part to be concluſive; and in caſe of death, removal, or abſence, the Governor or eldeſt Counſellor to have a caſting voice.

And be it enacted, that in all caſes whatſoever wherein any difference of opinion ſhall ariſe, upon any queſtion propoſed in any Conſultation, the ſaid Governor General and Council ſhall be bound and concluded by the opinion and deciſion of the major part of thoſe preſent: and if it ſhall happen, that by the death or removal, or by the abſence of any of the Members of the ſaid Council, ſuch Governor General and Council ſhall happen to be equally divided, then, and in every ſuch caſe, the ſaid Governor General, or in his abſence the eldeſt Counſellor preſent, ſhall have a caſting voice, and his opinion ſhall be deciſive and concluſive.

And be it further enacted, that the ſaid Governor General and Council, or the major part of them, ſhall have, and they are hereby authorized to have, power of ſuperintending and controlling the government and management of the Preſidencies of Madras, Bombay, and Bencoolen reſpectively, ſo far and in ſo much as that it ſhall not be lawful for any Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, or Bencoolen, for the time being, to make any orders for commencing hoſtilities, or declaring or making war againſt any Indian princes or powers, or for negotiating or concluding any Treaty of Peace, or other Treaty, with any ſuch Indian princes or powers, without the conſent and approbation of the ſaid Governor General and Council firſt had and obtained; except in ſuch caſes of imminent neceſſity as would render it dangerous to poſtpone ſuch hoſtilities or treaties, until the orders from the Governor General and Council might arrive, and except in ſuch caſes where the ſaid Preſidents and Councils reſpectively ſhall have received ſpecial orders from the ſaid United Company; and any Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, or Bencoolen, who ſhall offend in any of the caſes aforeſaid, ſhall be liable to be ſuſpended from his or their office, by the order of the ſaid Governor General and Council; and every Preſident and Council of Madras, Bombay, and Bencoolen, for the time being, ſhall, and they are hereby reſpectively directed and required, to pay due obedience to ſuch orders as they ſhall receive, touching the premiſes, from the ſaid Governor General and Council for the time being, and conſtantly and diligently to tranſmit to the ſaid Governor General and Council, advice and intelligence of all tranſactions and matters whatſoever, that ſhall come to their knowledge, relating to the Government, Revenues, or Intereſt, of the ſaid United Company; and the ſaid Governor General and Council for the time being ſhall, and they are hereby directed and required to pay due obedience to all ſuch orders as they ſhall receive from the Court of Directors of the ſaid United Company, and to correſpond from time to time, and conſtantly and diligently tranſmit to the ſaid Court an exact particular of all advices or intelligence, and of all tranſactions and matters whatſoever, that ſhall come to their knowledge, relating to the Government, Commerce, Revenues, or Intereſt, of the ſaid United Company; and the Court of Directors of the ſaid Company, or their ſucceſſors, ſhall, and they are hereby directed and required from time to time, before the expiration of fourteen days after the receiving any ſuch letters or advices, to give in and deliver unto the High Treaſurer, or Commiſſioners of his Majeſty's Treaſury for the time being, a true and exact copy of ſuch parts of the ſaid letters or advices as ſhall anyway relate to the management of the Revenues of the ſaid Company; and, in like manner, to give in and deliver to one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State for the time being, a true and exact copy of all ſuch parts of the ſaid letters or advices as ſhall anyway relate to the Civil or Military Affairs and Government of the ſaid Company; all which copies ſhall be fairly written, and ſhall be ſigned by two or more of the Directors of the ſaid Company.

The Chancellor, or Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, may iſſue Warrants for the Examination of Witneſſes in India, which ſhall be deemed competent Evidence to both Houſes of Parliament.

And be it further enacted, that in all caſes of proceedings in Parliament, touching any offences againſt this Act, or any other offences committed in India, it ſhall and may be lawful for the Lord High Chancellor or Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, and alſo for the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons for the time being, in like manner to iſſue his or their warrant or warrants to the Governor General and Council of the ſaid United Company's Preſidency of Fort William, and to the Chief Juſtice and Judges of the ſaid Supreme Court of Judicature, or the Judges of the Mayor's Court at Madras, Bombay, or Bencoolen, as the caſe may require, for the examination of Witneſſes; and ſuch examination ſhall be returned to the ſaid Lord High Chancellor or Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, or to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons reſpectively, and proceeded upon in the ſame manner, in all reſpects, as if the ſeveral directions hereinbefore preſcribed and enacted in that behalf were again particularly repeated; and every ſuch examination returned either to the Lord Chancellor or Speaker of the Houſe of Lords, or to the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, as aforeſaid, ſhall be deemed good and competent evidence, and ſhall be allowed and read in both Houſes of Parliament, or either of them reſpectively, as occaſion may require; any law or uſage to the contrary notwithſtanding.

No Proceedings in Parliament, touching Offences in India, to be diſcontinued by any Prorogation.

And whereas, by the uſage and cuſtom of Parliament, no proceedings by bill in Parliament, have continuance from one ſeſſion to another: and whereas it would be impracticable that the examination taken upon ſuch warrant as aforeſaid, could ever be returned within the ordinary length of a ſeſſion of Parliament; Be it enacted, that from and after the firſt day of November, One thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy-three, no proceedings in Parliament, touching any offence committed or to be committed in India, wherein ſuch warrant as aforeſaid ſhall have been iſſued, ſhall be diſcontinued by any prorogation or diſſolution of the Parliament; but that ſuch proceedings may be reſumed and proceeded upon in a ſubſequent ſeſſion, or in a ſubſequent Parliament, in either Houſe of Parliament, in like manner, to all intents and purpoſes, as they might have been in the courſe of one and the ſame ſeſſion; any law, uſage, or cuſtom, to the contrary notwithſtanding.

Inſtructions from the Court of Directors of the United Company of Merchants of England, trading to the Eaſt Indies;

To Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Governor General, Lieutenant General John Clavering, the Honourable George Monſon, Richard Barwell, eſquire, and Philip Francis, eſquire, Counſellors, conſtituted and appointed the Governor General and Council of the ſaid United Company's Preſidency of Fort William in Bengal, by an Act of Parliament, paſſed in the laſt Seſſion, intituled, "An Act for eſtabliſhing certain Regulations "for the better management of the Affairs of "the Eaſt India Company, as well in India as in "Europe."

Preamble.

THE Legiſlature of this kingdom having entruſted you with the civil and military government of the ſaid Preſidency of Fort William, and alſo with the ordering, management, and government of all the territorial acquiſitions and revenues in the kingdoms of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, for the term and in the manner directed and preſcribed by the ſaid Act (to which you will refer yourſelves, with reſpect to the execution of ſuch powers, and the obſervance of ſuch rules and directions therein contained, as are incumbent on you to execute and perform) we, the ſaid Court of Directors, in virtue of the power reſerved in the ſaid Act, whereby the ſaid Governor General and Council, for the time being, are directed and and required to pay due obedience to all ſuch orders as they ſhall receive from the Court of Directors of the ſaid United Company, do now proceed to give you ſuch orders and inſtructions, to be by you executed and put in force, as appear to us the moſt prudent and effectual for the good government and management of the Company's affairs in India.

Harmony recommended, and Attention to the Preſervation of Peace in India, and Security of the Company's Revenues.

I. And firſt, after earneſtly recommending to you the moſt perfect harmony amongſt yourſelves, as an object of the higheſt concern to the proſperity of the Company, and the due execution of the great truſt repoſed in you, we direct, that you fix your attention to the preſervation of peace throughout India, and to the ſecurity of the Poſſeſſions and Revenues of the Company.

Regulation of Proceedings of Council; and Correſpondence with Country Powers.

II. We direct, that you aſſemble in Council twice in every week, and that all the Members be duly ſummoned; that the correſpondence with the Princes or Country Powers in India, be carried on by the Governor General only; but that all Letters to be ſent by him be firſt approved in Council, and that he lay before the Council, at their next meeting, all Letters received by him in the courſe of ſuch correſpondence, for their information: we likewiſe direct, that a copy of ſuch parts of the country correſpondence be communicated to our Board of Trade (to be conſtituted as hereinafter mentioned) as may anyways relate to the buſineſs of their department.

Treaties with Indian Powers.

III. As it is now become unlawful for the Preſidents and Councils of our other Settlements to make peace or war with any Indian Powers, or to conclude any treaties with ſuch Powers, without your conſent or approbation, except in caſes of imminent neceſſity, or where they ſhall have received ſpecial orders from the Company, we direct, that you attentively view the general poſture of our affairs in India, reſpecting the Country Powers, their intereſts, and probable connections with each other, with us, and other European Nations; and that you take ſuch meaſures as ſhall, upon the whole, be moſt conducive to our general intereſt: and in all your deliberations and reſolutions, that you make the ſafety and proſperity of Bengal your principal object; and in all treaties with Indian Powers, or conventions with European Nations, whereby our commerce can be affected, we direct, that before any ſuch treaties ſhall be agreed to by you, you take the opinion of our Board of Trade thereon in writing.

Eſtabliſhment of a Board of Trade, with Power to appoint ſubordinate Officers.

IV. As the welfare of the Company muſt in a great meaſure depend on the proper management of their Commercial Affairs in Bengal, and particularly on receiving well-choſen inveſtments, in order that thoſe valuable purpoſes may be anſwered, we have judged it expedient to eſtabliſh a Board of Trade; and thinking it incumbent on us to avail ourſelves of the abilities and experience of our late Council, we therefore direct, that Samuel Middleton, William Alderſey, John Reed, Philip Milner Dacres, Thomas Lane, James Lawrell, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, William Lambert, George Vanſittart, and Nicholas Grueber, being our eleven ſenior civil ſervants, be our Board of Trade, for managing, conducting, and tranſacting our trade and commerce in Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa; and we hereby empower our ſaid Board of Trade to appoint ſubordinate Officers and Agents under them, from amongſt our covenanted ſervants only; and to ſuſpend or remove any ſuch Officers or Agents, when they ſhall find it neceſſary for our intereſt ſo to do; but in every appointment made by our Board of Trade, we direct, that they do not require any perſon, who ſhall be employed by the Governor General and Council in the collection or management of the Revenues, to execute any office under the ſaid Board; it being our intention, that none of our ſervants ſhall hold employments in thoſe different departments at the ſame time.

Appointment of Preſident of the Board of Trade.

V. We hereby appoint Samuel Middleton, eſq. Preſident of our Board of Trade; and in caſe of his death, reſignation, or removal, the ſenior Member in rank ſhall ſucceed.

VI. That ſeven Members of the Board do conſtantly reſide at Calcutta; that four be appointed Chiefs of Subordinates, or Reſidents at the Aurungs, as the Board ſhall deem neceſſary; and that the appointment to each Chiefſhip or Reſidency be determined by a ſeparate ballot of the Members of the Board; but that no ſuch Chief or Reſident be permitted to remain at the ſame Subordinate or Aurung for more than three years ſucceſſively.

APPENDIX. No. 2.

Orders to Subordinates to be ſigned by Four Members.

X. That all orders to the Aurungs, or to ſubordinate Factories, be ſigned by at leaſt four Members of the Board of Trade reſiding at Calcutta.

It is our order, that our Board of Trade aſſemble twice in every week; that five Members, and not a leſs number, do conſtitute a Board; that they regularly enter all their proceedings upon Conſultation, and all diſſents, if ſuch ſhall at any time be made by any Member of the ſaid Board, together with all Letters received and ſent in their department; that copies thereof, ſigned by the Members of the Board, be from time to time delivered to you, and by you tranſmitted to us, and duplicates by the next conveyance, as hath been uſually practiſed by our Preſident and Council reſpecting their Conſultations and Proceedings; and that if the Board of Trade ſhall at any time have particular information or remarks, which they ſhall think neceſſary to communicate to us, the ſame be tranſmitted by you; and we further direct, that you tranſmit at the ſame time your ſentiments at large upon the ſubject.

Senior Member of the Board to preſide in the Abſence of the Preſident.

XII. That in caſe of ſickneſs of the Preſident, or of his being unavoidably prevented from attending at any meeting of the Board of Trade, the ſenior Member who may then be preſent do take the chair; and that the Board do thereupon proceed to the diſpatch of buſineſs.

XIII. That there be paid to the Preſident of our Board of Trade £. 2,000 ſterling per annum, and to each of the other Members of the ſaid Board £. 1,500 per annum, by quarterly payments; which ſums are to be in lieu of commiſſion upon the Revenues, and in full for ſalary, diet money, and every emolument, except ſuch advantages as may ariſe from carrying on a legal trade, and the uſual commiſſion to the Preſident on coral and diamonds, which we direct to be given to him.

Requiſition for Money by the Board of Trade to be complied with.

report to you as ſkilled in the proviſion of the Company's inveſtment.

Salaries to Officers in the Revenue Department, to be provisional only.

XVI. When you take into conſideration the ſalaries to be allowed to the Officers employed in the Revenue Department, we recommend the ſtricteſt œconomy, and direct, that no greater ſalaries be eſtabliſhed, than the importance of their ſeveral ſtations may render neceſſary; which ſalaries are to be deemed proviſional only, until they ſhall have received our approbation.

Conſignment of Ships to be made to the Governor General and Council, and ſeparate Invoices to the Board of Trade.

XVII. It is our intention to conſign all our Bengal ſhips directly to you; but we ſhall make ſeparate invoices of ſuch parts of their cargoes as may be intended for ſale, and conſign the ſame to our Board of Trade; who are hereby directed to apply the produce thereof towards the proviſion of our inveſtment. Our orders for inveſtments will be tranſmitted through your hands to our Board of Trade; and if at any time we ſhould require an inveſtment larger than your finances may enable them to furniſh, you are to ſignify to the ſaid Board of Trade, what diminution you may deem neceſſary, and direct them to limit their purchaſes accordingly; but in all tranſactions of this nature, we ſhall hold you reſponſible for any deviation from our orders.

Proceedings of Board of Trade to be inquired into by the Governor General and Council.

XVIII. We empower and direct you to inquire, from time to time, into the books, correſpondence, accounts, and proceedings of our Board of Trade, in order that you may be fully informed of the meaſures taken, and proviſions made for lading our ſhips with proper cargoes for Europe, and for completing ſuch cargoes in due time; and that you communicate to us ſuch obſervations as may occur to you thereon, and particularly if you ſhould obſerve any miſconduct in their department, that you inform us thereof by the earlieſt opportunity.

Members of the Board of Trade to be proſecuted for Breach of Truſt or Oppreſſion.

We alſo further direct, that before the removal of any Company's ſervant from any office, the party be made acquainted, in writing, with the accuſation preferred againſt him; that he be ſummoned to make his defence, having a reaſonable time allowed him for that purpoſe; and that you proceed on all ſuch occaſions with the greateſt tenderneſs and circumſpection; and we further direct, that all ſuch charges made before you, againſt any of our ſervants in your department, with all proceedings thereon, be regularly entered upon your Conſultations, and with them tranſmitted to us.

Accuſations againſt Company's Servants to be made in writing; Time to be allowed for defence; and all Proceedings to be tranſmitted to Europe.

Aſſiſtance to be given to Board of Trade for recovering Debts due to the Company.

XXI. As it hath frequently happened, in our intercourſe with the native manufacturers of Bengal, that by reaſon of advances made to them at the beginning, they have been largely indebted to us at the cloſe of the ſeaſon, it is our expreſs direction, that you afford effectual aſſiſtance to our Board of Trade for obtaining full payment of all outſtanding debts due from the Natives of Bengal to the Company, upon application made by our Board of Trade to you for that purpoſe.

Agents for Foreign Companies, Free Merchants, and others, to be prevented from embaraſſing the Board of Trade.

XXII. And as the Agents of Foreign Companies, Free Merchants, and others, may greatly embarraſs our Board of Trade in the proviſion of our inveſtments, by obtaining from the Company's manufacturers the goods manufactured by means of our advances; we direct, that you forthwith form ſuch regulations, as ſhall effectually guard our property againſt attempts of this nature.

Eleven ſenior Servants to be ſummoned to Cal

XXIII. We direct, that ſo ſoon as poſſible after the arrival of theſe our orders and inſtructions at Fort William, you ſummon Samuel Middleton, William Alderſey, John Reed, Philip Milner Lacres, Thomas Lane, James Lamb, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, William Lambert, George Vanſittart, and Nicholas Grueber, being our eleven ſenior civil ſervants, to aſſemble within thirty days at Calcutta: and that you deliver to them an authenticated copy of theſe our inſtructions; and it is our order, that our ſaid ſervants, immediately upon receipt of ſuch copy, do forthwith proceed to carry into execution ſuch parts as anyways relate to the eſtabliſhment or conduct of a Board of Trade in Bengal.

Copies and Extracts of Inſtructions to be delivered to them.

Governor General and Council to give Advice to the Board of Trade.

XXIV. Having thus communicated to you our ideas on the ſubject of the Company's inveſtments, under the direction of a Board of Trade, we moſt earneſtly recommend, that you cordially unite with our ſervants in that department, and that you afford them every aſſiſtance in your power, in order to enable them to anſwer the eſſential purpoſes intended by their appointment.

Europeans not to exerciſe any Office in the Company's Service, unleſs appointed by the Court of Directors.

XXV. As we have never permitted our Governor and Council, or our Select Committee in Bengal, to admit Europeans into our ſervice, unleſs by the appointment of the Court of Directors; nor to licenſe free merchants, free mariners, or others, to reſide in India; we expreſsly direct, that you do not, on any account, or under any pretence whatſoever, ſuffer any European to hold any poſt, or to exerciſe any office in our ſervice, civil or military, who ſhall not have been appointed or admitted into the Company's ſervice by the expreſs authority of the Court of Directors.

Copies of ſuch parts of Letters or Advices as are to be delivered to the Lords of the Treaſury, or Secretary of State, are to be tranſmitted to the Court of Directors by every Ship.

XXVI. You will obſerve, that by the before-mentioned Act, you are required to correſpond with the Court of Directors from time to time, and conſtantly and diligently to tranſmit to them exact particulars of all advices or intelligence, and of all tranſactions and matters that ſhall come to your knowledge, relating to the Government, Commerce, Revenues, or Intereſt of the Company; and that the Court of Directors are required, within fourteen days after the receipt of any ſuch Letters or Advices, to deliver in to the Lords of the Treaſury, a copy of ſuch parts of the ſaid Letters or Advices as ſhall anyway relate to the management of the Company's Revenues; and in like manner, to deliver in to one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, a copy of all ſuch parts of the ſaid Letters and Advices as ſhall any way relate to their Civil and Military Affairs and Government: in order, therefore, to enable us to comply with the directions of the ſaid Act, we hereby order and direct, that you tranſmit to us, by every ſhip, an exact copy, and a duplicate by the next conveyance, of all ſuch parts of your Letters and Advices, as are by this law directed to be delivered to the Lords of the Treaſury, and to his Majeſty's Secretary of State reſpectively; and that every copy and duplicate be authenticated under the hands of the Governor General and Council.

Intelligence reſpecting foreign Companies to be communicated.

XXVII. In your correſpondence with the Court of Directors, it is our order, that the moſt regular and preciſe intelligence be from time to time communicated, reſpecting the commerce, the number of forces, and the general ſtrength, of all foreign Companies in India; and ſuch intelligence muſt, ſo far as it is practicable, be continued by every Britiſh ſhip which ſhall ſail for Europe.

Military Expences to be enquired into, and ſuperfluous Charges retrenched.

XXVIII. Our military expences at Bengal having increaſed to a degree which is become inſupportable to us, we in an eſpecial manner enjoin you to make ſtrict inquiry into the cauſes of ſuch increaſe, and particularly into the number of Laſcars, draught bullocks, and boats kept for the uſe of the army; into contracts for ſupplying the troops with proviſions, and into all contingent charges; and we direct, that you forthwith retrench every ſuperfluous charge, and reduce every incidental expence to the loweſt ſum poſſible.

Annual Expence of public Buildings reſtricted to One hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling; and Accounts of Expenditure to be ſent to the Court of Directors.

XXIX. Having found it neceſſary to limit expreſsly the charges of erecting, repairing, or completing fortifications, barracks, and all other public buildings in Bengal and its dependencies, to the annual ſum of One hundred thouſand pounds ſterling, and having given orders to our Governor and Council to that purpoſe, we hereby hereby confirm our ſaid orders, and direct that you, on no account or pretence whatever, permit more than the ſaid ſum to be annually expended on the above-mentioned ſervices; and that the keeping of our fortifications and public works in a defenſible ſtate and condition, be firſt conſidered in the expenditure thereof, until a further reduction can take place; and that a very exact and particular account of ſuch expenditure be tranſmitted to us by every opportunity, with your ſentiments and obſervations minutely on the ſtate of the ſaid works and fortifications.

Orders relative to the Supreme Court of Judicature; and to the Fees of the Clerks and miniſterial Officers.

XXX. As in purſuance of the Act of Parliament, a Supreme Court of Judicature, conſiſting of a Chief Juſtice and three other Judges, is intended to be erected at Fort William in Bengal, to exerciſe and perform all civil, criminal, admiralty, and eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction at the ſaid Preſidency; we direct, that upon the eſtabliſhment of ſuch Court, you give all neceſſary aſſiſtance to the Judges; that you provide a Court-houſe, and proper Offices for ſuch Clerks and miniſterial Officers as ſhall be appointed by them; and when the fees to be payable to the Officers of the Supreme Court are fixed, we direct, that you cauſe tables thereof to be hung up in the moſt public places, in the different languages of the Country; that no perſon take more than ſuch fees, upon pain of being diſmiſſed; and you will take into conſideration the amount of thoſe fees, in approving the ſalaries of the reſpective Officers; and you are to tranſmit to us, ſo ſoon as poſſible, a particular account of ſuch ſalaries and fees.

Salaries to be paid to the Governor General and Council, and to the Judges and Officers of the Court of Judicature.

XXXI. We direct, that you duly pay to the Governor General, to each of the Council, to the Chief Juſtice, and to each of the Judges, the ſeveral ſalaries eſtabliſhed by the ſaid Act; obſerving at the ſame time, that thoſe ample ſalaries given to them by Parliament, are to be in lieu of all fees of office, perquiſites, emoluments, or advantages whatſoever, and therefore that we are not to be at any further expence on their account; and as the Officers of the Court are to be allowed ſuch ſalaries as ſhall be approved by the Governor General and Council, we recommend the ſtricteſt frugality in that reſpect; and direct, that no greater allowances be made to any of them, than their reſpective ſtations ſhall require.

Governor Haſtings, and the Preſident of Board of Trade, to be allowed Company's Houſes.

XXXII. But in conſideration of our reſpect for Warren Haſtings, eſquire, we direct that he continue to enjoy our principal houſe, together with the plate and furniture, both in town and country, rent-free; and that our Preſident of the Board of Trade ſhall, in like manner, have his choice of the next beſt houſe belonging to the Company, without the payment of any rent.

Reduction of Bond Debt in Bengal recommended.

XXXIII. As the reduction of our debt on bond or intereſt notes in Bengal, is of the utmoſt conſequence to our proſperity, we recommend it to you, to pay every attention to this object, conſiſtent with the ſafety and protection of our poſſeſſions, and with the requiſitions that ſhall be made to you for our inveſtments.

Lands and Farms to be continued on Leaſe; and no Abatement of Rent to be made, without the Licence of the Governor General and Council.

XXXIV. The Lands and Farms of the Provinces of Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, having been already let by our Governor and Council, and chiefly upon leaſe for a term of years, we have approved of the conduct of our ſaid Governor and Council in letting them; and in caſe it ſhould happen that any Lands or Farms fall to the Company before the expiration of the time for which they have been let, our order is, that you advertiſe for propoſals, and proceed in the ſame manner to relet ſuch Lands and Farms as hath heretofore been done, to the higheſt bidders, who may be able to give good ſecurity for the performance of their engagements. And it is our order and direction, that no forbearance of rent be permitted when due, nor any diminution or abatement of Revenue made, until, upon full repreſentation to you of all circumſtances which may entitle any Farmer to indulgence, the Collectors of Revenue ſhall have obtained your licence for temporary forbearance, or for the abſolute remiſſion of any part of our Rents or Revenues; and we alſo direct, that ſuch licence do ſpecify the reaſon for every indulgence or remiſſion, the name of the perſon to whom made, the groſs amount of the Farm rented, and the ſpecific ſum or ſums received for or in lieu of the whole; and it is our further pleaſure, that a regular account be kept of all ſums finally remitted to Renters, and that you tranſmit ſuch account to us annually, under the head of Abatements to Farmers; accompanied with the general rent-roll of the Provinces, for the year in which ſuch abatements may be made.

Enquiry to be made into paſt Oppreſſions, and Regulations to be formed for preventing future Abuſes.

XXXV. We direct, that you immediately cauſe the ſtricteſt enquiry to be made into all oppreſſions which may have been committed either againſt the Natives or Europeans, and into all abuſes that may have prevailed in the collection of the Revenues, or any part of the civil Government of the Preſidency; and that you communicate to us all information which you may be able to obtain relative thereto, or to any diſſipation or embezzlement of the Company's money; and that you ſo ſoon as poſſible form ſuch regulations as ſhall ſeem moſt effectual for the remedy thereof, and for regulating the police of the Country; paying the greateſt attention therein to the protection and welfare of the Natives, and to his Majeſty's European ſubjects, as well as to the intereſt of the Company.

Company's Buſineſs in Bengal to be carried on as uſual by Contract, and Preference given to the loweſt Propoſal.

XXXVI. As all the Company's buſineſs, which can conveniently be performed by contract, is ſo performed in Bengal; we have only to direct, that all contracts, with the conditions, be publicly advertiſed, and ſealed propoſals received for the ſame; that every propoſal be opened in Council, and the preference given to the loweſt, provided ſufficient ſecurity ſhall be offered for performance; and that all ſuch propoſals, with all proceedings thereon, be entered in a book, to be kept apart for that purpoſe, and regularly tranſmitted to us.

All Proceedings and Diſſents to be entered on Conſultations, and tranſmitted to the Court of Directors.

XXXVII. In tranſacting the buſineſs of your department it is our order, that you enter, with the utmoſt perſpicuity and exactneſs, upon Conſultations, or Minutes of Council, all your Proceedings whatſoever, and all diſſents, if ſuch ſhould at any time be made by any Member of your Board; together with all Letters received and ſent in the courſe of your correſpondence; and that broken ſets of all ſuch Proceedings, to the lateſt periods poſſible, be tranſmitted to us by every ſhip; a complete ſet at the end of every year; and a duplicate by the next conveyance.

New Committee of Treaſury to be appointed, and all Iſſues of Money to be made by Warrant of Governor General and Council.

XXXVIII. We direct that all monies which may ariſe from our Revenues, or be received by you on our account, be ſecured under three locks as uſual; that the keys be kept by the Governor General, and ſuch other Members of Council as you ſhall appoint, who ſhall be a Committee of Treaſury; that exact particulars of all monies paid into our Treaſury be firſt regularly entered on your Conſultations, ſpecifying from whom received, and on what account; and that all iſſues of money from our ſaid Treaſury be made by warrant under your hands, directed to the Committee of Treaſury, and not otherwiſe.

Paymaſters and other Perſons applying for Advances, to ſpecify what Caſh they have in hand, before the Application be complied with.

That all applications for money be made to you in writing; and that all Paymaſters, and other perſons, who may apply for money in advance, do at the ſame time ſpecify whether they have any of the Company's money in hand, and to what amount; and alſo the particular ſervices to which the money applied for is intended to be appropriated; and it is our expreſs order, that no advance be made from the Treaſury upon any application which ſhall be deficient in any of the circumſtances above-mentioned. And we direct, that the Committee of Treaſury prepare exact Accounts, monthly, of all monies received and iſſued by that Board; that the monies in the Treaſury be viewed monthly by thoſe Members of the Council who may not be of the Committee of Treaſury; and that they compare the caſh in the Treaſury with the balance of the ſaid Committee's Accounts, and report their Proceedings to the Council at large; and we alſo direct that the ſaid Accounts, and copies of all receipts and warrants, be tranſmitted to us by every opportunity for our information.

APPENDIX. No. 3.

Former Orders of the Company to be ſtrictly attended to, and carried into execution.

XXXIX. It is alſo our expreſs direction, that you not only ſtrictly attend to the ſtanding orders of the Company, communicated to their Preſidency of Fort William, but to all ſuch orders and inſtructions as the Court of Directors have tranſmitted to the Governor and Council, or Select Committee of the ſaid Preſidency; and in an eſpecial manner to thoſe which anyways relate to forming proper ſtatements of our Revenues, and to the keeping of our Treaſury Accounts; and if any of our orders remain unexecuted, you are to take care that the ſame be carried into execution, in every inſtance, wherein they have not been annulled by the before-mentioned Act of Parliament, or ſuperieded by our preſent orders and inſtructions.

Your opinions are deſired, whether theſe inſtructions are legal, and conſiſtent with the proviſions of the Act of Parliament of the 13th of his preſent Majeſty, ch. 63.

We are of opinion, theſe inſtructions are legal, and conſiſtent with the proviſions of the Act of Parliament of the 13th of his preſent Majeſty, ch. 63.

APPENDIX, No 3.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 28th Auguſt 1771.

Par. 32. WE therefore expect and require you to be attentive to the conduct of our ſervants who ſhall be appointed Reſidents at your Subordinates; and if any of them ſhall appear to have acted contrary to our pleaſure (which you are to ſignify to them in this reſpect, and involved us in any expence not abſolutely neceſſary for carrying on our commercial concerns, we require you to ſuſpend ſuch perſons our ſervice, and inform us of the nature and extent of their offences, that they may receive from us ſuch further puniſhment as their diſobedience ſhall deſerve.

18th December 1771.

Warren Haſtings, eſquire, our Preſident and Governor of Bengal.

1. Notwithſtanding we have ſo often expreſſed, to the ſucceſſive Governors and Councils of our Preſidency of Bengal, our ſolicitude to promote the proſperity and happineſs of the Natives of thoſe Provinces, from which the public, as well as the Company, derives ſuch great advantages; and that to effect the ſame, we have repeatedly given the moſt peremptory orders for laying open to the Natives the ſeveral articles of the inland trade, more particularly thoſe of ſalt, beetlenut, and tobacco, which are conſidered by them as the neceſſaries of life; yet we are at length conſtrained to believe, that our intentions have been counteracted, and our orders diſobeyed, even by ſome of our ſervants, whoſe ſtations we had reaſon to hope would have prevented them from purſuing their private emolument by any indirect and unwarrantable means.

2. We therefore ſhall not heſitate to declare, that we have received ſuch information as will not permit us to doubt, but that ſeveral of our Council, who were Members of that Board at the time of the diſpatch of the Lord Mansfield in April 1771, and many of our ſervants in the different diſtricts of the Country, appointed as Superviſors of the Collection of our Revenues, had, in manifeſt violation of our orders, entered into a combination, and unduly exerciſed the power and influence derived from their ſtations, in order to carry on a monopoly in the ſeveral articles of ſalt, beetlenut, and tobacco; and that they had been ſo far loſt to the principles of juſtice and humanity, as to include rice and other grain in the ſame deſtructive monopoly; by which an artificial ſcarcity was made of an article ſo neceſſary to the very being of the inhabitants.

3. As upon a charge of this nature, we cannot but apply every means in our power to detect the guilty, and, by exemplary puniſhment, prevent the continuance of ſuch proceedings, as are not only a diſhonour to our ſervice, but a reproach to human nature; and as we repoſe the moſt perfect confidence in your abilities, integrity, and zeal for our ſervice, we have thought fit to commit to your ſole care the detection of thoſe crimes which have been charged on the ſervants of the Company: It is therefore our pleaſure and command, that you enter, without delay, into a ſtrict ſcrutiny of the conduct of the ſeveral Members who compoſed our Council at the time of the Lord Mansfield's departure from Bengal in April 1771, and of the perſons appointed to ſuperviſe, in the different diſtricts of the Country, the collection of the Revenues, in reſpect to their having been engaged in a monopoly of ſalt, beetlenut, tobacco, and grain. And in this inveſtigation we moſt ſeriouſly enjoin you, not to ſuffer any bias of friendſhip to interrupt or weaken your reſearches; and this we have the greater reaſon to expect, ſince the reſult of your enquiries may bring due chaſtiſement upon the offenders, and thereby conciliate the minds of the Natives to our Government, and reſtore proſperity to thoſe extenſive Provinces, which are entitled to our utmoſt care, both from the ties of intereſt and humanity.

4. Relying therefore upon your judgment and impartiality, and not doubting but they will lead you to the means of obtaining full evidence of thoſe enormities which may have been committed, we hereby direct, that if it ſhall appear to you that any Member or Members of our before-mentioned Council, or any of our ſervants appointed to ſuperviſe the collection of our Revenues, or any other perſons in our ſervice, civil or military, have been anyways concerned in theſe unwarrantable monopolies, ſuch ſervant or ſervants be forthwith diſmiſſed our ſervice; and we hereby declare them to be actually ſo diſmiſſed, as unworthy of holding any office or employment under the Company.

POSTSCRIPT.

Since writing the above, being well aſſured that the Reſident of Hughly in 1770 and 1771 has been particularly engaged in the monopoly of rice complained of in the above 2d par. and although this grievance was of ſuch a degree, it appears that the Governor only reprimanded him for it; you are therefore eſpecially to make his conduct one of the immediate objects of your enquiry; and if he ſhall have been a delinquent in that reſpect, he muſt be puniſhed in the manner we have ordered other defaulters to be.

Extract

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 7th April 1773.

Par. 28. Having, as we conceive, fully inveſtigated the cauſes of the failure of our inveſtments in goodneſs, price, and quantity, and much to our concern, proved alſo that almoſt every ſtream has been polluted, we now arm you with our full powers, to make a complete reformation. The taſk, we are ſenſible will be arduous, but we rely on your zeal for the ſervice of the Company; and as we have the ſatisfaction to aſſure ourſelves that you will not miſuſe the powers we have delegated to you, we heſitate not to promiſe you our entire ſupport and protection.

APPENDIX, No. 4.

Letter from the Court of Directors to Governor Haſtings.

16th April 1773.

Warren Haſtings, eſquire, our Preſident and Governor of Bengal.

1. WE have received by the Nottingham your Letter addreſſed to our Secret Committee, dated at Coſſimbuzar, the 1ſt September 1772; informing us of the meaſures you had adopted for carrying into execution the orders of the Secret Committee, dated 28th Auguſt 1771, and of the arrangements and regulations which you deemed neceſſary for the public peace and welfare of the Provinces. And although the public records, to which you refer us, are not come to hand, we aſſure you that ſo far as we are enabled to judge of your Proceedings by your own Letter, and by that our Council received by the ſame conveyance, they appear to us in the moſt favourable light; the ſteps you have taken judicious, and indeed the whole of your conduct ſeems to have fully juſtified the choice of the Secret Committee, who entruſted to your management the execution of a plan of the utmoſt importance.

2. We have been long ſenſible of the utter impropriety of lodging an abſolute power in the hands of Mahomed Reza Cawn, but the remedy was not without its difficulties; we truſt the evil is on the point of being eradicated. Inconveniences generally attend great and ſudden alterations; but we dare ſay that your agency will render them as few, as temporary, and as light as poſſible.

3. Although you will obſerve, that ſundry changes have lately taken place in the direction of the Company's affairs at home, thoſe changes will not in the leaſt affect the meaſures in which you are engaged; on the contrary, we take this early opportunity not only for teſtifying our entire approbation of your conduct, but of aſſuring you of our firmeſt ſupport in accompliſhing the work you have ſo ſucceſsfully commenced; and we doubt not but it will iſſue in the deliverance of Bengal from oppreſſion, in the eſtabliſhment of our credit, influence, and intereſt in India, and conſequently in every advantage which the Company or the Nation may juſtly expect from ſo important a tranſaction.

4. As you have diſtinctly marked in your Letter thoſe objects of enquiry and regulation which we ſhould otherwiſe have pointed out to you, we aſſure ourſelves that you will proſecute your enquiries with ſteadineſs, impartiality, and to full effect; notwithſtanding the many difficulties and temptations which we are ſenſible may be thrown in the way of perſons engaged in enquiries of this nature, in order to weaken their zeal for the public good, and to render their endeavours ineffectual for the great purpoſes of reformation.

5. Your attention to the ſettlement of the Revenues, as a primary object, has our entire approbation, and it is with the utmoſt ſatisfaction we obſerve, that the farming ſyſtem will be generally adopted, more eſpecially as the reſearches and diſcoveries made in the two preceding years muſt have nearly aſcertained the value and produce of the lands, ſo that impoſition on the part of the Farmers, reſpecting the value of the lands and oppreſſion of the tenants, may, we hope, be eaſily avoided.

6. The extirpation of Mahmud Reza Khân's influence was abſolutely neceſſary; and the apprehending of Shitabroy equally ſo, as the latter has been too long connected with Mahmud Reza Khân to be independent of him; but if that had not been the caſe, it would have been abſurd to continue a Naib Dewan in the Province of Babar, after aboliſhing that office in Bengal: and as to any hopes which Mahmud Reza Khân may entertain of profiting by changes in the Court of Directors, thoſe hopes muſt ſpeedily vaniſh; for however different their ſentiments may be in ſome particulars, they heartily concur in the propriety and neceſſity of ſetting him aſide, and of putting the adminiſtration of the Company's affairs in the hands of perſons who may be rendered reſponſible in England for their conduct in India.

7. Your choice of the Begum for guardian to the Nabob, we entirely approve; the uſe you intend making of Nundcomar is very proper; and it affords us great ſatisfaction to find, that you could at once determine to ſuppreſs all perſonal reſentment when the public welfare ſeemed to claſh with your private ſentiments relative to Nundcomar.

8. We obſerve with great pleaſure the teſtimonial given by you of Mr. Middleton; you will aſſure him of our entire approbation of his conduct on this occaſion. And as the Committee have concurred heartily in ſupporting a meaſure which in the courſe of debate the Majority had ſtrenuouſly oppoſed; we cannot be diſſatisfied with their conduct, unleſs the peruſal of their debates ſhould oblige us to alter our opinion reſpecting them.

9. As the ſhortneſs of our time will not permit us to be more particular, we can only repeat to you our aſſurances of protection and ſupport, in carrying into full execution the arrangements you have ſo happily begun; and as we deſire particularly that you will diſtinguiſh and encourage merit wherever you find it, ſo do we moſt ſtrictly conjure you not to ſuffer rank, ſtation, or any connection or conſideration whatever, to deter you from bringing every oppreſſion to light, and every offender, Native or European, to condign puniſhment.

10. If the abolition of the office of Naib Dewan, and ſtepping forth as principals, ſhould in any degree alarm your European neighbours, we rely on your prudence for removing every improper jealouſy that may be entertained on this account.

11. Notwithſtanding this Letter is ſigned by us the Court of Directors, we mean it as ſecret, and tranſmit it confidentially to you only; and we leave it to your diſcretion to lay the contents, or any part thereof, before the Council, if circumſtances ſhould in your opinion render it neceſſary, or if you ſhould judge it for our intereſt ſo to do, and not otherwiſe.

Letter from Governor Haſtings to the Secret Committee of the Court of Directors.

Coſſimbuzar, 1ſt September 1772.

To the Secret Committee of the Honourable Court of Directors, for the Affairs of the Honourable United Eaſt India Company.

Gentlemen,

Para. 1. This accompanies a duplicate of my Letter of the 24th April laſt.

2. Since

APPENDIX. No. 4.

2. Since that date I have duly received the duplicate and triplicate of your commands of the 28th Auguſt 1771.

3. The immediate departure of the Colbrooke, which ſailed (as I recollect) the day after my Letter of the 24th April had reached her, prevented my giving you further intelligence of the iſſue of the meaſures which I had taken for the arreſt of Mahmud Rizza Cawn. As your commands were peremptory, and addreſſed to myſelf alone, I carefully concealed them from every perſon except Mr. Middleton, whoſe aſſiſtance was neceſſary for their execution, until I was informed by him that Mahmud Rizza Cawn was actually in arreſt, and on his way to Calcutta. To have conſulted the Board on a point on which your authoritative commands had left me without a choice, or to have deſired their aſſiſtance when I had ſufficient power to act without it, would have been equally improper. But I will confeſs that there were other cogent reaſons for this reſerve. I was yet but a ſtranger to the characters and diſpoſition of the Members of your Adminiſtration. I knew that Mahmud Rizza Cawn had enjoyed the ſovereignty of this Province for ſeven years paſt; had poſſeſſed an allowed annual ſtipend of nine lacks of rupees, the uncontrouled diſpoſal of thirty-two lacks entruſted to him for the uſe of the Nabob, the abſolute command of every branch of the Nizâmut, and the chief authority in the Dewannee. To ſpeak more plainly, he was in every thing but the name, the Nazim of the Province, and in real authority more than the Nazim. I could not ſuppoſe him ſo inattentive to his own ſecurity, nor ſo ill verſed in the maxims of Eaſtern policy, as to have neglected the due means of eſtabliſhing an intereſt with ſuch of the Company's Agents, as by actual authority, or by repreſentation to the Honourable Company, might be able to promote or obſtruct his views. I choſe therefore, to avoid the riſk of an oppoſition, to put the matter beyond diſpute, and then to record what I had done. The ſame reflections occurred to me when I propoſed to entruſt Mr. Middleton with the execution of your commands, which might with more certainty have been effected by an order to the Commanding Officer of the Brigade ſtationed at Burrampoor: but this would have been productive of much diſturbance.

I was convinced that I might ſecurely rely on Mr. Middleton, and his behaviour juſtified that confidence. Indeed I am bound in juſtice to bear the ſame teſtimony to his faithful attention to your intereſts in many other inſtances which I have had occaſion to experience of his ſubſequent conduct, in which he has ſhewn himſelf a zealous aſſerter of your rights, and a ſupporter of the authority of your Government.

4. Your public Records will inform you that Mahmud Rizza Cawn was brought without delay to Calcutta, where he has been detained ever ſince in an eaſy confinement; that it was judged adviſable and conſiſtent with the tenor of your commands, that Rajah Shitab Roy ſhould be arreſted, and brought likewiſe to Calcutta. For the particulars of theſe tranſactions, and the debates concerning them, I beg leave to refer you to the Proceedings themſelves, which will better explain than I can, the motives which influenced the reſolutions of the Board, and the opinions of the different Members upon them. Something more may be neceſſary to be ſaid concerning my own conduct, which, as it was grounded ſolely on the ſecret inſtructions which you had been pleaſed to give me for my guidance, become a proper ſubject of this addreſs.

5. It may at firſt ſight appear extraordinary that Mahmud Rizza Cawn and Rajah Shitab Roy have been ſo long detained in confinement without any proofs having been obtained of their guilt, or meaſures taken to bring them to a trial. Very valid reaſons for this delay have been aſſigned in our Minutes. I beg leave to call to your recollection, that by a ſtrange concurrence of unforeſeen cauſes, your Adminiſtration had at this time, every object that could engage the care of Government, war only excepted, all demanding their inſtant attention; the ſettlement of the Revenue of Bengal—the diſmiſſion of the Naib Dewan and Naib Subah of the Provinces—the enquiry into his conduct for a courſe of years preceding—the diſmiſſion of the Naib Dewan of Babar, and enquiry into his conduct—the eſtabliſhment of the Dewannee on the plan directed by the Honourable Company—the arrangement of the Nabob's houſehold—the reduction of his allowance and expences—the eſtabliſhment of a regular adminiſtration of juſtice throughout the Province—the inſpection and reformation of the offices at the Preſidency—and, independent of all theſe, the ordinary duties of the Preſidency, which, from the amazing growth of your affairs, were of themſelves ſufficient to occupy the whole time and application which we could beſtow upon them, and even more than we could beſtow, from the want of a regular ſyſtem, the natural conſequence of the rapidity with which theſe affairs have accumulated. So circumſtanced, we were under an abſolute neceſſity to leave many affairs ſuſpended, that we might give due diſpatch to the reſt. The firſt in immediate conſequence claimed our immediate regard: this was the ſettlement of the Revenue. It was late in the ſeaſon; the Lands had ſuffered unheard-of depopulation by the famine and mortality of 1769; the collections violently kept up to their former ſtandard had added to the diſtreſs of the Country, and threatened a general decay of the Revenue, unleſs immediate remedies were applied to prevent it. The farming ſyſtem for a courſe of years, ſubjected to proper checks and regulations, ſeemed the moſt likely to afford relief to the Country, and both to aſcertain and produce the real value of the Lands without violence to the Roiats. It was therefore reſolved that this buſineſs ſhould firſt take place; and it was deemed neceſſary for this purpoſe, that a Committee, compoſed of the Members of the Council, ſhould be appointed to carry it into execution. The arrangement of the Dewannee, and the regulation of the Nabob's houſehold, were added to the charge of the Committee; and as theſe comprehended the moſt valuable parts of your concerns, it was thought proper that I, as Preſident, ſhould be joined with it. This rendered it neceſſary to ſuſpend the trials of Mahmud Rizza Cawn and Rajah Shitab Roy, and this reaſon is aſſigned for it in our Minutes. Neither Mahmud Rizza Cawn nor Rajah Shitab Roy, complain of the delay as a hardſhip. Perhaps all parties, as is uſual in moſt caſes of a public concern, had their ſecret views, which on this occaſion, though oppoſite in their direction, fortunately concurred in the ſame points. Theſe had conceived hopes of a relaxation of the Company's orders; Mahmud Rizza Cawn had even buoyed himſelf up with the hopes of a reſtoration to his former authority by the intereſt of his friends, and a change in the direction, and his Letters and the Letters of his Dewan to the City, declared theſe expectations.—I pretend not to enter into the views of others; my own were theſe: Mahmud Rizza Cawn's influence ſtill prevailed generally throughout the Country; in the Nabob's houſehold, and at the Capital, it was ſcarce affected by his preſent diſgrace; his favour was ſtill courted, and his anger dreaded; who, under ſuch diſcouragements, would give information or evidence againſt him? His agents and creatures filled every office of the Nizâmut and Dewannee; how was the truth of his conduct to be inveſtigated by theſe?—It would be ſuperfluous to add other arguments to ſhew the neceſſity of preſſing the enquiry by breaking his influence, removing his dependants, and putting the directions of all the affairs which had been committed to his care, into the hands of the moſt powerful or active of his enemies. With this view too, the inſtitution of the new Dewannee obviouſly coincided. Theſe were my real motives for poſtponing the enquiry. Whether my precautions will have their effect, is yet a queſtion of doubt.

6. The ſame principles guided me, though not uninfluenced by other arguments of great force, in the choice of Munny Begum, the widow of the Nabob Meer Jaffier, and of Rajah Goondaſs, the ſon of Mahrajah Nundcomar, Nundcomar, the former for the chief Adminiſtration, the latter for the Dewannee of the Nabob's houſehold; both the declared enemies of Mahmud Rizza Cawn. To the latter indeed I was principally inclined by your commands; and I hope it will appear that I have adopted almoſt the only expedient in which they could be exactly fulfilled. You directed that "if the aſſiſtance and information of Nundcomar ſhould be ſerviceable to me in "my inveſtigating the conduct of Mahmud Rizza Cawn, "I ſhould yield him ſuch encouragement and reward as "his trouble, and the extent of his ſervices, may deſerve." —There is no doubt that Nundcomar is capable of affording me great ſervice, by his information and advice; but it is on his abilities, and on the activity of his ambition and hatred to Mahmud Rizza Cawn, that I depend for inveſtigating the conduct of the latter; and by eradicating his influence, for confirming the authority which you have aſſumed in the adminiſtration of the affairs of this Country. The reward which has been aſſigned him will put it fully in his power to anſwer theſe expectations, and will be an encouragement to him to exert all his abilities for the accompliſhment of them. Had I not been guarded by the caution which you have been pleaſed to enjoin me, yet my own knowledge of the character of Nundcomar would have reſtrained me from yielding him any truſt, or authority, which could prove detrimental to the Company's intereſt. He himſelf has no truſt or authority, but in the aſcendancy which he naturally poſſeſſes over his ſon. An attempt to abuſe the favour which has been ſhewn him, cannot eſcape unnoticed; and if detected, may ruin all his hopes. The ſon is of a diſpoſition very unlike his father; placid, gentle, and without diſguiſe: from him there can be no danger.

APPENDIX. No. 4.

7. You will perceive by the Records, that this appointment has not taken place without oppoſition from a majority of the Gentlemen who form the Committee now at this place.—I know not whether you will approve or diſapprove of the ſilence which I have obſerved, with reſpect to your orders, in the arguments which I have uſed in ſupport of my recommendation. My reaſon was, that I thought the meaſure in itſelf ſo proper, that I did not doubt of its receiving the confirmation of the Board at large; and unleſs ſome material advantage could be gained by it, I did not think myſelf at liberty to divulge your ſecret commands. I am at this time moſt firmly perſuaded, that no other meaſure whatever would have been likely to prove ſo effectual, either for promoting the enquiry which you have directed, or giving ſtrength and duration to the new ſyſtem.

8. I hope I ſhall not appear to aſſume too much importance, in ſpeaking thus much of myſelf, in juſtification of the motives which led me to this recommendation: that I had no connection with Nundcomar or his family prior to the receipt of your Letter by the Lapwing; that on the contrary, from the year 1759 to the time when I left Bengal in 1764, I was engaged in a continued oppoſition to the intereſts and deſigns of that man, becauſe I judged him to be adverſe to the welfare of my Employers; and in the courſe of this contention, I received ſufficient indications of his ill-will to have made me his irreconcileable enemy, if I could ſuffer my paſſions to ſuperſede the duty which I owe to the Company: my ſupport of Nundcomar on the preſent occaſion could not therefore proceed from partiality. It will be as obvious, that my preference of him to other competitors could not ariſe from intereſted motives. I may be charged with inconſiſtency; but the reaſons which I have urged in the Minutes of the Committee, in ſupport of this meaſure, will, I truſt, acquit me to my honourable Employers; and if my conduct ſhall ſtand the teſt of their judgment, it is a point of duty to bear with the reproaches of the uninformed part of the world. To the ſervice of the Company, and to your commands, I have ſacrificed my own feelings (pardon the preſumption of this repetition); and I have combated thoſe of others joined with me in the adminiſtration of your affairs. I claim your approbation of what I have done, not as a recompence of integrity, but as the confirmation of the authority which you have been pleaſed to confide in me, and of your own which is involved in it.

9. I with pleaſure do juſtice to the Committee, in declaring that, ſtrenuouſly as they oppoſed the meaſure while it was a point of debate, it had no ſooner received the ſanction of your Council, than they all concurred with me in ſupporting both that and the other reſolutions which were connected with it, as ſteadily as if they had never diſſented from it.

10. The appointment of Munny Begum I believe will require no apology. It was unanimouſly approved; and if I can be a judge of the public opinion, it is a meaſure of general ſatisfaction.

11. The only man who could pretend to ſuch a truſt was the Nabob Yeterám e' Dowlah, the brother of Meer Jaffier; a man indeed of no dangerous abilities, nor apparent ambition, but the father of a numerous family; who, by his being brought ſo nigh to the Muſnud, would have acquired a right of inheritance to the Subahſhip; and if only one of his ſons, who are all in the prime of life, ſhould have raiſed his hopes to the ſucceſſion, it would have been in his power at any time to remove the ſingle obſtacle which the Nabob's life oppoſed to advancement of the family. The Guardian at leaſt would have been the Nazim while the minority laſted; and all the advantages which the Company may hope to derive from it, in the confirmation of their power, would have been loſt, or could only have been maintained by a contention hurtful to their rights, or by a violence yet more exceptionable. The caſe would be much the ſame were any other man placed in that ſtation. The truth is, that the affairs of the Company ſtand at preſent on a footing which can neither laſt as it is, nor be maintained on the rigid principles of private juſtice: you muſt eſtabliſh your own power, or you muſt hold it dependent on a ſuperior, which I deem to be impoſſible.

12. The Begum, as a woman, is incapable of paſſing the bounds aſſigned her. Her ambition cannot aſpire to higher dignity. She has no children to provide for, or miſlead her fidelity. Her actual authority reſts on the Nabob's life, and therefore cannot endanger it; it muſt ceaſe with his minority, when ſhe muſt depend abſolutely on the Company for ſupport againſt her ward and pupil, who will then become her maſter; of courſe her intereſt muſt lead her to concur with all the deſigns of the Company, and to ſolicit their patronage. I have the pleaſure to add, that in the exercile of her office ſhe has already ſhewn herſelf amply qualified for it, by her diſcernment, œconomy, and a particular attention to affairs.

13. In the execution of your commands, of the 8th May 1771, I hope I ſhall not appear to you to have been guilty of remiſſneſs. The enquiry therein directed, I have been obliged to entruſt to the previous conſideration of a Committee, the many weightier affairs of your Government rendering it abſolutely impoſſible for me to enter on a ſcrutiny of that nature myſelf; which however I mean to take up as ſoon as I conveniently can, after my return to the Preſidency.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient,
and faithful ſervant,

us on your advices per Nottingham, but we cannot omit the preſent opportunity to expreſs the ſatisfaction which we receive from that readineſs and zeal for our ſervice, with which you have united with our Preſident, Mr. Haſtings, in carrying into execution thoſe eſſential objects, which, from the nature of them, we judged it neceſſary confidentially to commit to his immediate care and conduct.

3. And here we muſt obſerve, that the meaſures taken in conſequence of the removal of Mahomed Reza Cawn from the office of Naib Dewan and Naib Subah, have manifeſted to us ſo much judgment and prudence, as confirm us in the hope we had, of the many advantages which would thereby reſult both to the Company and to the Country in general. And as we are fully ſatisfied of our Preſident's conſtant and ſteady endeavours to effectuate every good purpoſe intended by that Miniſter's diſmiſſion, we have the further pleaſure to find that you are actuated by the ſame principle for the advancement of the Company's intereſt and welfare; we therefore rely on your continuing to yield him every aſſiſtance and ſupport for the full accompliſhment of all regulations which may conduce thereunto. Your unanimity in this reſpect will merit our higheſt commendation, and we doubt not but that the further meaſures you may take for effecting the ſame will inſure you our firmeſt protection.

Extract of the General Letter from Bengal; dated the 5th September 1772.

Par 2. As the early diſpatch of the Nottingham from the Coaſt to Europe may poſſibly occaſion her arrival with you before the Lapwing packet, on which we purpoſe forwarding a minute detail of our Proceedings, we ſhall in this Letter confine ourſelves to a ſummary relation of the meaſures that have been purſued in compliance with your orders; and it will ſuffice, we flatter ourſelves, until a fuller explanation can reach you, accompanied by the ſeveral Records to which we muſt refer.

3. The Preſident, upon the receipt of your commands, executed the commiſſion you intruſted to him, by the ſeizure of the Naib Soubah Mahomed Reza Cawn; he was accordingly brought down under a guard to Calcutta, where he has ſince that time continued under reſtraint at his own houſe.

4. At the ſame time we deemed it neceſſary, in purſuance of the 20th Par. of your above-noted commands, to order to the Preſidency Raja Sitabroy, the Naib Dewan of the province of Bahar, that the great deficiency in the Bahar Revenue, which you charge to the miſconduct of the Officers of the Government, might be explained and adjuſted.

5. Theſe previous meaſures taken, we thought it neceſſary, in further proſecution of your commands, to iſſue a proclamation at the City and at Patna, advertiſing the removal of the Nabob Mahomed Reza Cawn and of Rajah Sitabroy, and the abolition of the office of Naib Dewan of the Provinces. Advertiſements were at the ſame time affixed at the public Cutcherries, deſiring all who might have any cauſe of complaint againſt the late Naib Soubah to prefer the ſame, that they might be enquired into and redreſſed. Advertiſements have in like manner been affixed at all the public Cutcherries, to encourage the people to inform againſt any perſons whatever engaged in purchaſing up grain in the time of the famine, to the deſtruction of the poor, and in direct contradiction to the expreſs orders of the Government.

6. Thus far have we proceeded in the execution of your orders; and upon the return of our Preſident we flatter ourſelves with being enabled to give you the reſult of thoſe meaſures which we already have, and hereafter may find it neceſſary to purſue, for the accompliſhment of your intentions upon the ſubject above-mentioned.

7. Agreeably to the recommendations repeated in your Letters for farming the Lands of the Provinces upon long leaſes, we framed ſuch regulations as appeared to us the beſt calculated for carrying that plan into execution in the moſt effectual manner, and for the future management of the collections. The next thing conſidered was the mode in which theſe regulations were to be executed; and on this head nothing appeared more adviſable than to form a Committee of our own Members, who by an actual viſitation of the diſtricts, and local enquiry into their preſent ſtate and reſources, might not only be able to ſettle the Lands to the greateſt advantage on the new ſyſtem, but alſo to furniſh us with lights to guide us in time to come to thoſe concluſions, which are ever the moſt earneſt object of our ſolicitude: we mean ſuch as tend to your intereſt and honour, to the proſperity of this Country, and conſequently to our own reputation.

8. In purſuance of theſe ideas a Committee was formed, of which it was thought indiſpenſable that the Preſident ſhould be a Member; not only becauſe the ſettlement of the Revenue deſerved his firſt attention, but becauſe there were alſo various matters of importance to be tranſmitted at the City which demanded his preſence and immediate agency.

9. The Committee was accordingly compoſed of the Governor, the Chief of the Revenue Council at Moorſhedabad, and Meſſrs. Dacres, Laurell, and Graham.

10. In the beginning of June they proceeded to Kiſtnagur, the chief town in Nuddea. This diſtrict was an important though diſagreeable ſubject for their firſt operations; every thing bore the moſt diſcouraging aſpect, the Country had been greatly deſolated by the famine, the Lands were abandoned, and the Revenue falling to decay; in ſpite of all theſe obſtacles, we have the pleaſure to learn from the Letters of the Committee, that they finiſhed the ſettlement upon advantageous terms. The next ſhip will convey to you their Proceedings at large; at preſent we muſt content ourſelves to inform you from their advices, that the Lands were all let to farm for the term of five years, on an increaſing rent from the firſt year, the amount of which is, Rupees 10,64,530. 10. 8. 2. to the laſt, the amount of which is, Rupees 13,19,695. 10. 8. 2.

11. From Nuddea the Committee proceeded to Moorſhedabad; they arrived there the beginning of July, and have ever ſince been employed in the management of the various affairs which were committed to their charge.

12. Beſides the ſettlement and new arrangement of the two diviſions of Rajeſhahy, and the numerous leſſer collections comprehended with thoſe under the general name of the Huzzoor Zellahs, they were alſo charged with the execution of your commands concerning the reformation of the Nabob's houſehold, and the reduction of his expences. They were further inſtructed to conſider the means and ſettle a plan for conducting the buſineſs of the Khalſa, upon the new ſyſtem preſcribed by your orders for taking the office of Dewan upon ourſelves. The adminiſtration of juſtice has alſo been an object of their deliberation, and they have it in reference to take the ſilk inveſtment under their inſpection and conſideration, for the forming of ſome general reſolutions, that may tend to the reſtoration of that important branch of your commerce.

13. The appointments which have been thought indiſpenſable upon the abolition of the office of Naib Soubah, are as follows: a Guardian to the young Nabob, a Dewan of his houſhold, and for the buſineſs of the collections a Dewan of the Khalſa. The perſons named to theſe truſts are, Munnee Begum (the relict of the late Nabob Jaffier Ally Cawn) Guardian; Rajah Goordaſs, the ſon of Maha Rajah Nundcomar, Dewan; and Rajah Rajibullub, the ſon of the late Maha Raja Dullubram, Dewan of the Khalſa.

14. The nomination of Munnee Begum to the ſuperintendance of the houſehold and guardianſhip of the perſon of the Nabob, is a meaſure from which we expect the happieſt conſequences; her known averſion to Mahomed med Rezza Cawn, and oppoſition of intereſts to his, renders her the fitteſt perſon to eradicate his influence in the houſhold, and her high rank and abilities equally qualify her to repreſent the dignity of the family, without any danger to the Company from ſuch pretenſions as might be apprehended from any male relation of Jaffier Ally Cawn, or from the ambition of any other man of conſideration, to whom ſuch a truſt might be delegated.

15. The Company having thought proper to ſtand forth themſelves as Dewans of theſe Provinces, it became naturally a ſubject of conſideration, whether it would not be expedient to remove the ſeat of the collections from Moorſhedabad to Calcutta. The opulence it might be expected to bring with it, by drawing the principal families of the Country to reſide here, by which the demand for imports from our mother-country would be greatly increaſed, and the opportunity we ſhould have of the more immediate inſpection and controul of the Revenue, ſupported by other concurrent arguments, convinced us of the urgency of this meaſure, which we have therefore reſolved upon. The arrangements which appear to us neceſſary to be taken upon this occaſion have been fully weighed and digeſted by the Governor and Committee at the City, and having received the aſſent of the Board, we have empowered them to take the neceſſary ſteps for carrying it into execution. Our Proceedings at large upon this ſubject will wait upon you by the firſt direct diſpatch from this Preſidency.

16. The removing the ſeat of the collections to the Preſidency, having rendered unneceſſary the Revenue Eſtabliſhment at Moorſhedabad, it has been of courſe withdrawn; and the reluctance with which the late arrangements have been ſubmitted to by a part of the Nabob's houſhold, required the preſence and conſtant attention of a perſon of authority, to prevent the Nabob's affairs from falling into more diſorder than that from which we have endeavoured to retrieve them. We joined in opinion with the Committee, on the propriety of continuing the Chief of the Durbar Reſident at the Nabob's court, and acquieſced in their propoſition of uniting the charge of the collections with the proviſion of the raw ſilk inveſtment, which, from experience, we are perſuaded will be better encouraged, and receive more improvement by the adoption of this mode, than by continuing it under the direction of a ſeparate authority; and we hope this meaſure will meet your approbation.

17. After the allotment of ſuch diſtricts as we judged might be moſt conveniently ſettled by the Committee of Circuit, thoſe which fell under our immediate management were the Calcutta lands, the Zellahs of Midnapore, Burdwan, Houghly, Burbhoom, and Jeſſore. Burdwan was laſt year farmed out for the term of five years; Houghly, Burbhoom, and Jeſſore, have been let upon leaſes of the ſame time from this period, and to good advantage; the Calcutta lands and Midnapore will next be concluded upon, and we hope in our ſubſequent advices to be enabled to give you ſuch an account of the ſettlement of the Revenue upon the plan already deſcribed, as ſhall prove to your entire ſatisfaction.

18. Midnapore and the Calcutta lands as yet remain unleaſed; the former, becauſe the Oriſſa year, agreeably to which the ſettlement is made, is not yet expired; the latter, becauſe we have not been able to obtain an explanation of the heavy balances which have accumulated from the year 1174, amounting at preſent to about 14,50,000 Rupees: and here we are concerned to be under the neceſſity of remarking, that the call we made on the Collector, Mr. Holme, for the neceſſary Papers to lead to a ſettlement of the Calcutta lands, being about a month after enforced by a peremptory order from the Superintendent Mr. Barwell, was noted by the Collector with a degree of contumely and evaſion that has forced us to the diſagreeable neceſſity of removing Mr. Holme from his office; and it was with much reluctance we proceeded to this extremity, but it was neceſſary in order to vindicate our authority from the diſregard with which it had been treated. As ſoon as the explanation of the balance due from the Calcutta lands is prepared, we will effect the ſettlement of thoſe lands on the general plan which we have adopted from your inſtructions. When the whole is completed, the Revenue of Bengal for the five ſucceeding years, the time to which the leaſes extend, ſhall be exhibited to your view in one general ſtatement.

APPENDIX. No. 5.

APPENDIX, No. 5.

Copy of a Letter from Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Governor of Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 11th November 1773.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for the Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Fort William, 11 November 1773.

Honourable Sirs,

1. I HAVE been duly honoured with your Letter of the 16th April by the Harcourt, and Duplicate of the ſame by the Egmont.

2. I am at a loſs for words to convey the ſenſe which I entertain of the honourable terms in which you have been pleaſed to expreſs your approbation of my ſervices. While my gratitude is excited by theſe inſtances of your kindneſs, I feel my zeal encouraged by the aſſurances which you have been pleaſed to afford me of your continued protection; my beſt expreſſion of thanks for both muſt be made by my future conduct; which, (if I know my own heart) will never be drawn by any bias, however powerful, from the purſuits of your intereſts; nor do I wiſh or aſpire to any reward ſuperior to your applauſe.

3. While I indulge the pleaſure which I receive from the paſt ſucceſſes of my endeavours, I own I cannot refrain from looking back with a mixture of anxiety on the omiſſions, by which I am ſenſible I may ſince have hazarded the diminution of your eſteem. All my Letters addreſſed to your honourable Court, and to the Secret Committee, repeat the ſtrongeſt promiſes of proſecuting the enquiries into the conduct of your ſervants, which you had been pleaſed to commit particularly to my charge. You will readily perceive that I muſt have been ſincere in thoſe declarations, ſince it would have argued great indiſcretion to have made them, had I foreſeen my inability to perform them; I find myſelf now under the diſagreeable neceſſity of avowing that inability, at the ſame time that I will boldly take upon me to affirm, that on whomſoever you might have delegated that charge, and by whatever powers it might have been accompanied, it would have been ſufficient to occupy the entire attention of thoſe who were entruſted with it; and even with all the aids of leiſure and authority, would have proved ineffectual. I dare appeal to the public records, to the teſtimony of thoſe who have opportunities of knowing me, and even to the detail which the public voice can report of the paſt acts of this Government, that my time has been neither idly nor uſeleſsly employed; yet ſuch are the cares and embarraſſments of this various ſtate, that although much may be done, much more even in matters of moment muſt neceſſarily remain neglected. To ſelect from the miſcellaneous heap which each day's exigencies preſent to our choice, thoſe points on which the general welfare of your affairs moſt eſſentially depends; to provide expedients for future advantages, and guard againſt probable evils, are all that your Adminiſtration can faithfully promiſe to perform for your ſervice, with their united labours moſt diligently exerted. They cannot look back without ſacrificing the objects of their immediate duty, which are thoſe of your intereſts, to endleſs reſearches, which can produce no real good, and and may expoſe your affairs to all the ruinous conſequences of perſonal malevolence both here and at home.

4. May I be permitted, in all deference and ſubmiſſion to your commands, to offer it as my opinion, that whatever may have been the conduct of individuals, or even of the collective Members of your former Adminiſtrations, the blame is not ſo much imputable to them as to the want of a principle of Government adequate to its ſubſtance, and a coercive power to enforce it. The extent of Bengal and its poſſible reſources are equal to thoſe of moſt ſtates in Europe. Its difficulties are greater than thoſe of any, becauſe it wants both an eſtabliſhed form and powers of Government, deriving its actual ſupport from the unremitted labour and perſonal exertion of individuals in power, inſtead of the vital influence which flows through the channels of a regular conſtitution, and imperceptibly animates every part of it. Our conſtitution is no where to be traced, but in ancient charters, which were framed for the juriſdiction of your trading ſettlements, the ſales of your exports, and the proviſion of your annual inveſtment. I need not obſerve how incompetent theſe muſt prove for the government of a great kingdom, and for the preſervation of its riches from private violence and embezzlement.

5. Among your ſervants, who, for a courſe of years have been left at large in the poſſeſſion of ſo temping a depoſit, it is not to be wondered at that many have applied it to the advancement of their own fortunes, or that thoſe who were poſſeſſed of abilities to introduce a ſyſtem of better order, ſhould have been drawn along by the general current, ſince few men are endowed with ſo large a ſhare of public virtue, as to ſacrifice their intereſts, peace, and ſocial feelings to it, and to begin the work of reformation on themſelves.

6. I ſhould not have preſumed to expatiate on a ſubject of this nature, although my own juſtification has made it in ſome meaſure neceſſary, but that your late advices have given hopes, that we ſhall ſpeedily be furniſhed with your inſtructions for eſtabliſhing a ſyſtem of law and polity, which we hitherto want. Whenever this work ſhall be accompliſhed on a foundation of conſiſtency and permanency, I will venture to foretel, from the knowledge which I have of the general habits and manners of your ſervants, that you will hear as few inſtances of licentiouſneſs amongſt them as among the Members of any community in the Britiſh Empire. As this, whenever attempted, muſt neceſſarily be a work of time, I intreat your permiſſion to ſubmit to your conſideration, ſuch defects in your preſent ſyſtem as my experience has ſuggeſted to me, and I hope my intention will be judged with candour; although my own ambition may be gratified by the regulations which I wiſh to recommend.

7. I ſhall offer but two points to your notice; one is, the rapid ſucceſſion of your Governors; the other, the undefined powers of the reſpective Members of your Adminiſtration. Both are productive of the ſame ill effects; a want of vigour and conſiſtency in public meaſures; and a general diffidence, and the conſequent ſpirit of intrigue, in thoſe whoſe intereſts or ſervices are, by any mode of relation, connected with our Government.

8. Theſe well-known infirmities in our conſtitution, were frequently alluded to by the Vizier in the late conferences which I had with him at Benares. He lamented the perpetual hazard to which he was expoſed, of loſing the Engliſh friendſhip by the continual changes of their Chiefs, who were no ſooner known to him, and a confidence eſtabliſhed with them, than they were recalled, and others ſubſtituted in their ſtead, whoſe tempers he was to ſtudy, and whoſe affections he was to conciliate anew, and then to loſe them as he had loſt their predeceſſors, and have the ſame fruitleſs labour to repeat for ever. He once aſked me, in plain terms, what aſſurances I could give him, that new conditions would not be required of him, or that thoſe for which I ſhould have pledged the faith of the Company, ſhould not be eluded by a new act of Government, if ſix Members of the Council ſhould at any time propoſe an infraction of the treaty, and four only joined me in oppoſing it?

9. The powers of the Governor, although ſuppoſed to be great, are, in reality, little more than thoſe of any individual in his Council. Their compliance, his own abilities, or a ſuperior ſhare of attention, and the opinion that he poſſeſſes extraordinary powers, may give him the effect of them, and an aſcendant over his aſſociates in the Adminiſtration; but a moment's conſideration is ſufficient to diſcover the nakedneſs of his authority, and to level him with the reſt. Happily, I find myſelf ſufficiently ſecured againſt ſuch effects. The notice with which you have diſtinguiſhed my ſervices, the injunctions which you have laid on the other Members of the Board to afford me their ſupport, and the degree of reſponſibility which you have been pleaſed to attribute to my particular conduct, have contributed to ſtrengthen my hands againſt any improper oppoſition. At the ſame time, I muſt do the Gentlemen of the Board the juſtice to declare, that I have found in them ſo cordial a diſpoſition to co-operate with me in every meaſure for the public good, that I feel no want of extraordinary powers for myſelf; nor under ſuch favourable circumſtances, is it my wiſh to poſſeſs them. I mention this want only as a defect in the ſervice, which is rendered ſtill more important by the falſe opinion, that the principal authority reſts conſtitutionally in the hands of the Preſident, when in effect it is merely accidental.

10. To draw the line between him and the other Members of the Adminiſtration, and to define the powers which may be entruſted to his charge, would not be an eaſy taſk. In me it may be deemed aſſuming; yet I conceive it to be my duty, becauſe I am convinced that the future proſperity, and even the being of the Company, and the national intereſts in this great kingdom, depend upon it. The diſtant and ſlow interpoſition of the ſupreme power which is lodged in your hands, cannot apply the remedies to the diſorders which may ariſe in your ſtate. A principle of vigour, activity, and deciſion, muſt reſt ſomewhere. In a body of men intruſted with it, its efficacy is loſt by being too much divided.

11. It is liable to ſtill worſe conſeqoences; the leſs the number is of which the body conſiſts, becauſe the majority is eaſier formed. Fixed to a ſingle point only, it can command confidence and enſure conſiſtency. I am compelled to affirm, becauſe I know not by what arguments to prove, what appears to me a ſelf-evident maxim.

12. On the other hand, there is a danger that ſuch a power may be abuſed, unleſs powerful checks be provided to counteract the miſapplication of it. Theſe I leave to your wiſdom to form, if the modification of it, which I ſhall propoſe, ſhall be found inadequate to the purpoſe. I will not take up more of your attention on this ſubject, but proceed to deſcribe the points of diſtinction which appear to me neceſſary for aſcertaining the reſpective provinces of the Council, the Select Committee, and the Preſident.

" 1ſt. The Select Committee ſhall have the " power of making peace and war, and of deter- " mining all meaſures reſpecting both, independent " of the Council at large. But they ſhall enter " into no treaty of alliance, whether offenſive or " defenſive, for a longer duration than two years, " without a ſpecial authority from the honourable " the Court of Directors. Every ſuch treaty ſhall " be communicated to the Council at large, as " ſoon as it conveniently may be, that their opinion " upon it may be tranſmitted with it to the Court " of Directors.

" 2d. It ſhall nevertheleſs be allowable for the " Preſident to bring any matter before the Council " at large, although included within the foregoing " limitations; and the deciſion of the Council " thereon ſhall be valid, and binding on the Select " Committee

" Committee. But no other Member of the Com" mittee ſhall be allowed the ſame privilege.
" 3d. The Preſident ſhall have the privilege of act" ing by his own ſeparate authority, on ſuch urgent
" and extraordinary caſes as ſhall in his judgment
" require it, notwithſtanding any deciſion of the " Council or of the Committee paſſed thereon.
" On every ſuch occaſion the Preſident ſhall
" record his reſolution to act, in the manner above
" ſpecified, in virtue of the power thus veſted in " him; and ſhall expreſsly declare, that he charges
" himſelf with the whole reſponſibility.
" 4th. All civil appointments within the pro" vinces ſhall be made by the Board at large; but the " Preſident ſhall be empowered, of his own autho" rity, to prevent any particular appointment, and " to recal any perſon, not being a Member of the " Board, from his ſtation, even without a reaſon
" aſſigned All appointments beyond the provinces,
" and all military appointments which are not in the " regular line of promotion, ſhall be made by the
" Preſident alone."

13. I ſhall forbear to comment on the above propoſitions; if juſt and proper, their utility will be ſelf-apparent. One clauſe only in the laſt article may require ſome explanation; namely, the power propoſed for the Governor of recalling any perſon from his ſtation, " without " aſſigning a reaſon for it." In the charge of oppreſſion, although ſupported by the cries of the people, and the moſt authentic repreſentations, it is yet impoſſible in moſt caſes to obtain legal proofs of it; and unleſs the diſcretionary power which I have recommended be ſomewhere lodged, the aſſurance of impunity from any formal enquiry will baffle every order of the Board; as on the other hand, the fear of the conſequences will reſtrain every man within the bounds of his duty, if he knows himſelf liable to ſuffer by the effect of a ſingle controul.

14. I beg leave to return to the firſt ſubject herein offered to your conſideration, by declaring, that as I have no wiſh in life equal to that of being uſeful in the ſphere which has been allotted me, ſo it is my fixed reſolution to devote my ſervices to the Honourable Company, ſo long as your pleaſure and my health will allow me. And I offer it as my humble opinion, that on whomſoever you ſhall think fit to beſtow the place which I now hold in your ſervice, it will be adviſable to fix him in it for a long period of time. I have already mentioned the principal evils which ariſe from the too frequent change of your Governors. I will beg leave to add another, in which I ſhall need your candour to obviate any miſconſtructions of it to my own prejudice.

15. The firſt command of a ſtate, ſo extenſive as that of Bengal, is not without opportunities of private emolument; and although the allowances which your bounty has liberally provided for your ſervants may be reaſonably expected to fix the bounds of their deſires, yet you will find it extremely difficult to reſtrain men from profiting by other means, who look upon their appointment as the meaſure of a day; and who, from the uncertainty of their condition, ſee no room for any acquiſition but of wealth, ſince reputation, and the conſequences which follow the ſucceſsful conduct of great affairs, are only to be attained in a courſe of years. Under ſuch circumſtances, however rigid your orders may be, or however ſupported, I am afraid, that in moſt inſtances they will produce no other fruits than either avowed diſobedience, or the worſt extreme, of falſehood and hypocriſy.

Theſe are not the principles which ſhould rule the conduct of men whom you have conſtituted the guardians of your property, and checks on the morals and fidelity of others. The care of ſelf-preſervation will naturally ſuggeſt the neceſſity of ſeizing the opportunity of preſent power, when the duration of it is conſidered as limited to the uſual term of three years, and of applying it to the proviſion of a future independency; therefore, every renewal of this term is liable to prove a reiterated oppreſſion.

16. It is perhaps owing to the cauſes which I have deſcribed, and a proof of the exiſtence, that this appointment has been for ſome years paſt ſo eagerly ſolicited, and ſo eaſily reſigned.

There are yet other inconveniencies attendant on this habit; and perhaps an inveſtigation of them all would lead to endleſs diſcoveries. Every man whom your choice has honoured with ſo diſtinguiſhed a truſt, ſeeks to merit approbation, and acquire an eclat by innovations, for which the wild ſcene before him affords ample and juſtifiable occaſion. But innovations of real uſe require a length of time, and the unremitted application of their original principles, to perfect them. Their immediate effects are often hurtful; and their intended benefits remote, or virtually diffuſed through ſuch concealed channels, that their ſource is not eaſy to be traced. Of this nature are the late regulations in your revenue, cuſtoms, and in the commerce of the country, which have been attended with an immediate loſs in the collections, and in the price of your inveſtment; and it will require a long and intricate train of reaſoning, to prove that the future increaſe of population, of national wealth, of revenue and trade, ſhould ſuch be the happy effects of theſe expedients, were really produced by them. But who that looks only for preſent applauſe, or preſent credit, would hazard both for remote advantages, of which another might arrogate the merit, and aſſume the reward? Or who will labour with equal perſeverance in the accompliſhment of meaſures projected by others, as of thoſe of which he was himſelf the contriver?

17. Although I diſclaim the conſideration of my own intereſt in theſe ſpeculations, and flatter myſelf that I proceed upon more liberal grounds, yet I am proud to avow the feelings of an honeſt ambition, that ſtimulates me to aſpire at the poſſeſſion of my preſent ſtation for years to come. Thoſe who know my natural turn of mind will not aſcribe this to ſordid views. A very few years poſſeſſion of the Government would undoubtedly enable me to retire with a fortune amply fitted to the meaſure of my deſires, were I to conſult only my eaſe; but in my preſent ſituation I feel my mind expand to ſomething greater; I have catched the deſire of applauſe in public life. The important tranſactions in which I have been engaged, and my wiſh to ſee them take complete effect, the public approbation which you have been pleaſed to ſtamp on them, and the eſtimation which that cannot fail to give me in the general opinion of mankind, lead me to aim at deſerving more; and I wiſh to dedicate all my time, health, and labour, to a ſervice which has been ſo flattering in its commencement.

18. Such are my views, and ſuch my ſentiments; I expoſe them without reſerve, becauſe I am conſcious that you will find nothing unworthy in them, whatever opinion you may form of their expediency.

19. I ſhall wait your determination with becoming expectation, but without anxiety; nor ſhall I ever leſs eſteem the favours I have already received, becauſe others are withheld, which it may be either not expedient or impracticable to grant.

I have the honour to be,
with the greateſt reſpect,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt obedient,
and moſt humble ſervant,
Warren Haſtings.

vinces; and that the Abdallah's return gives us the proſpect of their being undiſturbed another year.

4. Our principal doubts now ariſe from the nature of our connections with Sujah Dowlah and the King, on which we have little more to ſay than in general to approve the inſtructions left by Lord Clive.

5. As all our views and expectations are confined within the Caramnaſſa, we are impatient to hear our troops are recalled from Allahabad; the reaſon for their remaining there no longer ſubſiſts. As Sujah Dowlah has now had three years to repleniſh his coffers and recruit his army, and muſt be ſuppoſed to be in a ſtate of defence againſt any country powers who may invade him, therefore we ſee no neceſſity for further connection between us than what may ariſe from the 2d article of the Treaty, by which we are "to march to his aſſiſtance at his expence when his dominions are invaded." And with reſpect to the King, the ſame reaſon ſubſiſts for our not continuing the brigade at Allahabad, that Sujah Dowlah, as his Vizier, muſt ſupport and protect him: we therefore hope that the next advices will be, that you have recalled that brigade; or, if very ſufficient reaſons are not aſſigned for continuing them, we ſhall deem you accountable for all the conſequences it may be productive of.

6. As it ſeems not impoſſible that Sujah Dowlah may undertake to eſcort the King to Delhi, it becomes neceſſary we ſhould give you our idea of the proper conduct to be held on that occaſion, which entirely coincides with Lord Clive's opinion in his Letter to the Select Committee, that to march any part of our army on ſuch an expedition, might bring on the total ruin of our affairs; and we add, that ſhould you be perſuaded into ſo raſh and dangerous a meaſure, we ſhall deem you reſponſible for all the conſequences; and as ſuch a meaſure would be attended with the greateſt danger to our affairs, be aſſured we ſhall be extremely jealous of every one, high in our ſervice, civil or military, who ſhews a tendency to ſuch an expedition.

S. C. Proceedings 16 January 1767.

7. The Treaty entered into with the Soubah of the Decan by our ſervants at Fort Saint George, and the tendency of your negociation with the Country Powers on the approach of the Abdallah, gave occaſion to the ſhort remark we made on ſuch treaties and alliances in our Letter to you of the 20th November laſt. We now repeat our diſapprobation of ſuch alliances, which we think no circumſtance in our affairs can require, and determined as we are not to aim at any power or poſſeſſion but what we hold in virtue of the Mogul's grants, and what ariſe from the office of Dewan, and conſequently are confined within the boundaries of Bengal, Bahar, and Orixa, we truſt our own force will always ſuffice for the protection and defence of theſe; ſhould they not, foreign aſſiſtance will avail us very little; the experience of all the country wars we have been engaged in, evinces how little advantage is to be derived from the country troops in a general action, who rather croud upon us for protection than afford us any advantage over the enemy, and never fail to quit their allies, and make peace at their expence whenever the iſſue grows precarious.

Par. 16.

8. We entirely diſapprove the idea adopted of ſupporting the Soubah of the Decan as a barrier againſt the Marattas. It is for the contending parties to eſtabliſh a balance of power among themſelves: their diviſions are our ſecurity; and if the Marattas moleſt us, you muſt conſider whether an attack from Bombay, which being near the capital of their dominions, may not be preferable to any defenſive operations with the country powers on your ſide of India.

Extract of the Company's Select Letter to Bengal; dated 17th March 1769.

Par. 2. The contents of Sir Robert Barker's Letter would be very alarming to us, if we had not received your ſentiments on a ſimilar repreſentation of Sujah Dowla's proceedings from General Smith, and did not Lord Clive's advice in his Letter to you of the 16th January 1767, and our Letter to you of the 16th March 1768, par. 4, 5, and 6, direct you how to conduct yourſelves with reſpect to the King and Sujah Dowlah.

3. With ſuch directions before you, we cannot ſuppoſe you can be ſo raſh as to carry your attachment to the King ſo far as to engage us in hoſtilities with Sujah Dowlah for his ſake. And we have been ſo very full and explicit on this ſubject in our laſt Letter to you, under date of the 11th November laſt, that we do not think it neceſſary to add any thing thereto.

4. That you may be appriſed of the general plan we would have adopted for all India, with reſpect to our political concern, we have incloſed copies of our further advices to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George on that ſubject, which are to govern you as well as our other Preſidencies, ſo far as you or they may be called to interfere in thoſe matters.

5. From the ſaid advices you will obſerve the conduct of that Preſidency has merited our ſevere reprehenſion, for deviating from our moſt poſitive and expreſs orders. We have therefore found it neceſſary to entruſt the management of theſe important concerns to a Select Committee, who are to conduct them upon a more permanent ſyſtem, by confining the Company's influence and poſſeſſions within the boundaries of the Carnatic and the Northern Circars; the names of the Gentlemen who are to compoſe the Committee are, viz.

Charles Bourchier, Eſq. Preſident,
Joſiah Du Pre, Eſq.
Warren Haſtings, Eſq.
Brigadier General Joſeph Smith,
Alexander Wynch, Eſq.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Fort Saint George; dated 13th May 1768.

10. The Dewanny of Bengal, Bahar, and Orixa, with the poſſeſſions we hold in thoſe provinces, are the utmoſt limits of our views on that ſide of India. On the Coaſt, the protection of the Carnatic and the poſſeſſion of the Circars, free from all engagements to ſupport the Soubah of the Decan, or even without the Circars, preſerving only influence enough over any country power who may hold them to keep the French from ſettling in them; and on the Bombay ſide, the dependencies thereof, the poſſeſſion of Salſette, Baſſein, and the caſtle of Surat. The protection of thoſe are eaſily within the reach of our power, and may mutually ſupport each other, without any country alliance whatever. If we paſs theſe bounds, we ſhall be led on from one acquiſition to another, till we ſhall find no ſecurity but in the ſubjection of the whole, which, by dividing your force, would loſe us the whole, and end in our extirpation from Indoſtan.

11. Much has been wrote from you and from our ſervants at Bengal, on the neceſſity of checking the Marattas, which may in ſome degree be proper; but it is not for the Company to take the part of umpires of Indoſtan. If it had not been for the imprudent meaſures you have taken, the Country Powers would have formed a balance of power among themſelves, and their diviſions would have left you in peace. But if at any time the thirſt for plunder ſhould urge the Marattas to invade our poſſeſſions, they can be checked only by carrying the war into their own country; it is with this view that we laſt year ſent out field officers to our Preſidency at Bombay, and put their military force on a reſpectable footing, and when once the Marattas underſtand that to be our plan, we have reaſon to think they will not wantonly attack us.

12. You will obſerve, by the whole tenor of theſe diſpatches, that our views are not to enter into offenſive wars in India, or to make further acquiſitions beyond our preſent poſſeſſions. We do not wiſh to enter into any engagements which may be productive of enormous expences, and which are ſeldom calculated to promote the Company's Company's eſſential intereſts; on the contrary, we wiſh to ſee the preſent Indian powers to remain as a check one upon another, without our interfering; therefore we recommend to you, ſo ſoon as poſſible, to bring about a peace upon terms of the moſt perfect moderation on the part of the Company, and when made, to adhere to it, upon all future occaſions, except when the Company's poſſeſſions are actually attacked; and not to be provoked by freſh diſturbances of the country powers to enter into new wars.

Extract of the Company's Separate Letter to Fort Saint George; dated 17th March 1769.

25. When we reflect on the vaſt length of country from the northern parts of Chicacole to the ſouthern diſtricts of Madura and Tinnevelly, the number of garriſons to be maintained, and the wild independence of moſt of the Rajahs and Polygars, from whom nothing can be collected but by a ſtanding force, we regret our having ever paſſed the boundaries of the Carnatic, even for the poſſeſſion of the Circars; for we have great doubts whether the charges will not always exceed the collections, and apprehend many ill conſequences from ſo great a diviſion of our forces.

The preſervation of the advantages we hold in the Bengal provinces, is the great object of our attention. Every thing muſt yield to that extenſion of influence, or poſſeſſions on your Coaſt will diſable you from affording ſuccours to them ſhould any unhappy event require it; and no advantage that can be obtained on your ſide of India can be brought in competition with the loſs we ſhould ſuſtain by having Bengal the theatre even of a ſucceſsful war.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated 30th June 1769.

Par. 3. In ſeveral of our Letters ſince we have been engaged as principals in the politics of India, and particularly during the laſt two or three years, we have given it as our opinion, that the moſt prudent ſyſtem we could purſue, and the moſt likely to be attended with a permanent ſecurity to our poſſeſſions, would be to incline to thoſe few Chiefs of Indoſtan who yet preſerve an independence of the Maratta power, and are in a condition to ſtruggle with them; for ſo long as they are able to keep up that ſtruggle, the acquiſitions of the Company will run the leſs riſque of diſturbance.

4. The Rohillas, the Jauts, the Nabob of the Decan, the Nabob of Oude, and the Myſore Chief, have each in their turn kept the Marattas in action, and we wiſh them ſtill to be able to do it; it is therefore with great concern we ſee the war continuing with Hyder Naique, and a probability of a rupture with Sujah Dowlah and Nizam Ally. In ſuch wars we have every thing to loſe, and nothing to gain; for ſuppoſing our operations be attended with the utmoſt ſucceſs, and our enemies reduced to our mercy, we can only wiſh to ſee them reſtored to the condition from which they ſet out, that is, to ſuch a degree of force and independence as may enable them ſtill to keep up the conteſt with the Marattas and with each other. It would give us therefore the greateſt ſatisfaction to hear that matters are accommodated both at Bengal and on the Coaſt; and in caſe ſuch a happy event ſhall have taken place, you will do your utmoſt to preſerve the tranquillity.

5. We eſteem ourſelves bound by Treaty to protect the King's perſon, and to ſecure to him the poſſeſſion of the Korah and Illahabad diſtricts. When we wrote the 11th November 1768, we apprehended the conſequences of keeping the brigade at Illahabad would be creating in Sujah Dowlah a jealouſy that would involve us in freſh troubles, having at that time no cauſe to eſteem him an enemy; but, impreſſed as you were with the opinion of his hoſtile intentions and growing ſtrength at the time of the diſpatch of the Valentine, we ſhall not blame your caution for deferring the execution of our orders for its removal; nor ſhall we at this time attempt to give poſitive directions for your conduct, which in ſuch critical caſes ought ſeldom to be done, and in which the ſituation of affairs may be varied by unforeſeen events at the very moment we are writing. But having given you, with as much preciſion as poſſible, a general view of the ſyſtem by which we wiſh to ſee our affairs regulated, we muſt leave it to you to improve to the utmoſt of your power every opportunity of drawing towards that point; and whenever you think yourſelves obliged, for our ſecurity, upon emergent occaſions to adopt meaſures of a contrary tendency, you are to give us very full reaſons for a ſuch a deviation, and endeavour to return to the path we have marked out as ſoon as circumſtances will admit.

6. Upon theſe reaſons we ſhall judge whether you merit praiſe or cenſure; and if you had obſerved this courſe in the Letter of your Select Committee by the Valentine, we ſhould have had no cauſe of diſpleaſure; but to ſay you are aſtoniſhed at our orders, is as uſeleſs as unbecoming.

7. The only article of our preſent engagements, that ſeems to throw a difficulty in the way of the limited plan which we wiſh to eſtabliſh, is, the obligation before mentioned with reſpect to the King's perſon, and the diſtricts aſſigned him out of Sujah Dowlah's country. If you have ſucceeded in reſtoring confidence between the King and Sujah Dowlah, which we ſincerely hope, this difficulty may be eaſily removed; for, in ſuch caſe, it is probable that the King, ſeeing our poſitive determination not to take any part in the proſecution of his projects towards Delhi, may truſt to Sujah Dowlah for that ſervice; the care and management of the Korah and Illihabad diſtricts will then naturally belong to Sujah Dowlaa, or ſome equivalent will be ſettled between themſelves, in lieu of that revenue; which done, we hope there can be no occaſion for any part of our forces at Illihabad, and we ſhall be ſubject to no further claim or requiſition from the King, excepting for the ſtipulated tribute for Bengal, which you are to pay to his agent, or remit to him, in ſuch manner as he may direct.

8. Should the event of your deputation to Sujah Dowlah have proved contrary to our wiſhes, and been productive of a war, we have very little doubt of the ſucceſs of our troops: but having no point to gain, nor ambition to ſatisfy, beyond the bounds of the Bahar province, we hope peace was ſoon reſtored, and that you obtained a reimburſement of your expences, and avoided all engagements of ſuch a ſort, as may have a tendency to embroil you again.

9. We find by your advices by the Kent and the Vereſt, that Sujah Dowlah's offer of coming to Calcutta had been no further attended to, and that Mr. Cartier, General Smith, and Mr. Ruſſell, had proceeded upon their deputation. No obſervation of ours upon this meaſure can alter the conſequences, which, whether they are good or bad, have been long ſince paſſed; but as, upon the peruſal of your Letters, Proceedings, and Country Correſpondence, we do not ſee ſufficient reaſons to juſtify ſome parts of the inſtructions given to thoſe Gentlemen, we ſhall point out to you wherein our judgment does not coincide with yours.

10. The number of Sujah Dowlah's forces not being limited by any Treaty, your demand upon that ſubject can only be juſtified upon the principle of ſelf-defence, where conſideration of juſtice muſt ſometimes give place to neceſſity; but we do not ſee in the preſent inſtance, any ſuch danger impending. Colonel Barker, in his Letter of the 23d March 1768, gives an opinion that a ſingle brigade would be an overmatch for all Sujah Dowlah's army; this opinion ſtands uncontroverted, and indeed, it is founded upon the uniform experience of our former ſucceſs; we do not therefore ſee the neceſſity of coming to a reſolution, ſo very diſguſting and humiliating, without ſome overt act committed on his part, manifeſtly ſhewing his hoſtile intentions againſt us; whenever that happened, you were able enough to reduce him, and we could not have been charged with being the aggreſſors, whereas, if a war ſhould break out in conſequence of this and other aggravating circumſtances attending the deputation, the breach of friendſhip will be imputed to the Company.

Extract of the General Letter from Bengal; dated the 10th November 1772.

Par. 1. We addreſſed you laſt from this Department by the Nottingham, in a ſhort Letter, informing you of the hoſtile preparations of the Marattas, with our conjectures on the probable objects of their operations; and ſignifying to you the line which, independent of contingencies, we had laid down for ourſelves in relation to Conſ. 16 April. thoſe powerful and enterprizing neighbours. The communication which the Preſident and Select Committee have made to us of their Conſultations on this ſubject, has met with our approbation; to theſe we refer. We only in this beg leave to aſſure you, that your Adminiſtration here adopt with ſincerity and ſatisfaction the plan which you have preſcribed to us for our political tranſactions with the country powers, and we flatter ourſelves it would not be unpleaſing to you to find, that before your orders could reach us, we had acted in ſo much conformity to your ſentiments. The ſecurity and tranquillity of theſe provinces ſhall be the ultimate end of all our negociations, and you may truſt that we are too well aware of the ruinous tendency of all ſchemes of conqueſt ever to adopt them, or even to depart from the abſolute line of ſelf-defence, unleſs impelled to it by the moſt obvious neceſſity, and the immediate exigency of the circumſtance. How far the ambitious temper of the Vizier may involve him in difficulties, from which it may require our exertions to extricate him, we cannot yet within any degreee of certainty foretel. In the meantime you will obſerve, we have pertinaciouſly refuſed to engage ourſelves farther with him than in the paſſive defence of his dominions, and in affording him that countenance and ſupport, at his formal requiſition, which by the nature of our connections and the faith of ſubſiſting

Select Committee. Treaties, we conceive ourſelves bound to beſtow. The Letter and Proceedings of the Select Committee will ſupply you with every neceſſary information on this head.

APPENDIX, No. 7.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 28th Auguſt 1771.

Par. 45. IT is with the moſt ſerious concern we learn from your late advices, that the incurſions of the Marattas had ſpread ſuch a terror and deſpondence into the minds of thoſe powers, which were the remoter barrier of our poſſeſſions, that the irreſolution and timidity of the moſt potent of them have given riſe to ſuch ſucceſſes as have encouraged the Marattas to invade the dominions of the King, and lay claim to a part of the territory of Soujah Dowlah. But the conduct of the Rohillas and Jauts is rather a matter of concern than ſurprize to us, as the King and Soujah Dowlah neglected that occaſion to unite with thoſe powers effectually to repel the common diſturbers of the empire, and confine them within the limits of their former poſſeſſions. To whatever cauſes this general timidity or ſupineneſs may have been owing, we find ourſelves equally affected, and the tranquillity of the provinces endangered thereby; but as the projects of the King, or the conduct of the Vizier, are at preſent too myſterious for us to decide on the motives of their inactivity, and as we know not what alliances may be formed to juſtify us in carrying our arms beyond the bounds of their dominions, we are prevented from propoſing any preciſe plan for your guidance in this reſpect. But ſhould your ſubſequent advices enable us to form a more certain judgment of the expediency of departing from the plan we have laid down, we ſhall communicate to you by ſome early conveyance, how far we may be diſpoſed to carry our arms beyond the bounds of the provinces, or the territories of our allies, and become the parties in an offenſive war. In the meantime we truſt that your ſole objects will be the ſecurity of our poſſeſſions, and thoſe of the powers with whom we are connected both by treaty and intereſt; and as this appears to have been the guide of your conduct upon the Marattas invading the province of Korab, we with pleaſure approve the meaſures you have taken for defending the dominions of the King and Vizier from their inroads and depredations, more eſpecially as thoſe meaſures are not only juſtified by neceſſity, but are within the line which we have preſcribed for your conduct in ſuch a conjuncture.

APPENDIX, No. 8.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 7th April 1773.

Par. 33. THOUGH your advices of laſt year have not been anſwerable to the hope we had of your having been able to acquire actual poſſeſſion of the fortreſs of Chunar Gur, yet it affords us a ſenſible pleaſure to find that the Vizier has propoſed it ſhall be garriſoned by our troops, while affairs to the Weſtward may require our interpoſition, or himſelf ſtand in need of our aſſiſtance; and as you have ſo far advanced towards the completion of our wiſhes in this reſpect, we truſt that you will not loſe ſight of ſo important an object, but take every favourable opportunity to preſs the Vizier to cede it to us in perpetuity, or at leaſt for ſo long as it may be neceſſary for us to retain it. The importance of this poſt being the ground of our deſire to have it in our poſſeſſion, we cannot be ſuppoſed to aim hereby at extending our acquiſitions, ſince this can only be conſidered as giving ſecurity to what we already poſſeſs in the kingdom of Bengal.

APPENDIX, No. 9.

Select Letter from Bengal; 20th September 1772.

To the Secret Committee of the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Gentlemen,

1. MR. Alderſey addreſſed you in a Letter of the 10th inſtant, by the Nottingham, and forwarded to you the tranſlation of a Letter which the Preſident has juſt received, and tranſmitted to him from the Vizier.

2. As the tenor of this Letter will ſerve to ſhew the intentions of the Vizier, and the danger to which the peace of his country is expoſed, whether from the effects of his own ambition, or that of his ſuppoſed enemies, we think it neceſſary, for the clearer elucidation of this intereſting ſubject, to forward to you the copies of the two Letters preceding this, in the correſpondence with the Vizier; viz. the tranſlation of a Letter from him, received the 17th of July, and the Preſident's reply, which was written with the concurrence of the Board, to whom it was previouſly communicated.

3. We are ſorry to ſay, that the ſtate of affairs, ſo remote from our own view as thoſe of the Vizier, is ſo imperfectly imperfectly known to us, that we can venture to give no other opinion upon them than mere conjecture, founded on the advices which have been occaſionally tranſmitted to us by the General Sir Robert Barker, and by the Vizier himſelf.

4. Permit us, however, to aſſure you, that it has been the ſtudy of your Adminiſtration, by every precaution in their power, to prevent your being drawn into an unneceſſary war; nor ſhall they relax of their attention to that end.

We are, with the utmoſt reſpect,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful and moſt obedient
Fort William, humble ſervants,
September 20th, 1772. Warren Haſtings.
W. Alderſey.

APPENDIX, No. 10.

Extract of the Select Letter from Bengal; dated the 10th November 1772.

Par. 30. IN one point, you may reſt aſſured of our unanimous concurrence; that no object or conſideration ſhall either tempt or compel us to paſs the political line which we have had laid down for our operations with the Vizier. We have told him, and repeated, that we will aſſiſt him with your forces in the defence of his dominions againſt all invaders; but that we will not engage in any offenſive war, not ſuffer your army to be carried beyond the borders of his territories; and to this reſolution we will ſteadily adhere.

APPENDIX, No. 11.

Extract of the General Letter from Bengal; dated 10th November 1772.

6. WE have had no exact advices communicated to us of late, of the proceedings of Shaw Allum, or of his manœuvres in conjunction with his new allies. Till we have better aſſurances of his friendly intentions towards us, and of the juſtneſs and propriety of his views, we cannot think ourſelves either bound in honour or juſtifiable towards you, in the ſupport of them. In the meantime we regard his motions as too inconſequential to cauſe either jealouſy to us or alarm. The probable iſſue of his raſh enterprize will be, after having been led through all Indtia the ridiculous pageant of the Maratta power, to throw himſelf once more, friendleſs and forlorn, into your arms for protection and ſupport; the only event in our opinion which is capable of giving trouble to us in regard to him.

Extract of the Select Letter from Bengal; dated the 10th November 1772.

Par. 4 The Marattas, after the defeat of the Rohillas, proſecuted without any interruption their ravages on the defenceleſs country, if we except a little reſiſtance which they encountered from Nedjib Gur and ſome other forts, which however ſoon capitulated, and furniſhed the conquerors with the moſt acceptable of all plunders, grain and treaſure.

5. Their inſolence was now immoderate. Their ſucceſs had been equal to their moſt ſanguine expectations, and ſeemed to pave the way for further depredations to the ſouthward; they were in poſſeſſion of the perſon of the King, whoſe authority they contemned, and whoſe name and mandates they regarded ſolely as the inſtruments of their own aggrandizement; and ſo far were they from re-eſtabliſhing him in his Government, that they poſitively refuſed to perform their engagements of ſharing with him the ſpoils of the vanquiſhed, and he was left almoſt deſtitute, in the midſt of a rich and plentiful camp, of the common neceſſaries required to ſupport at leaſt an appearance of dignity.

APPENDIX, Nos. 10, 11, & 12.

APPENDIX, No. 12.

Extract of the Select Letter from Bengal; dated the 15th January 1773.

Par. 1. IN our laſt per the Greenwich, we gave you information that Byſagu had marched towards Delhi with a determination of intimidating the King into a compliance with his terms in favour of Zabita Cawn, and that his Majeſty was preparing to oppoſe him with all his troops ſhould he appear deſirous of puſhing matters to extremity.

2. The King's accuſtomed malevolent fortune ſeems at this time to have exerted its utmoſt influence, for as neither party would recede from their pretenſions, a battle enſued, which, after an obſtinate conflict of ſome hours, terminated in the total rout of the beſt appointed army the King ever poſſeſſed, and he became once more a priſoner in the hands of the Marattas.

3. They had, previouſly to this event, preſerved ſome little reſpect to the royal name; but a battle fought, and the ſlaughter of a conſiderable number of their body, had given them, for the firſt time, an appearance of a plea to treat him as a vanquiſhed monarch, and of which they did not fail to poſſeſs themſelves, by exacting from him a compliance with thoſe demands which firſt occaſioned the war, and with others of a more diſtreſſing nature.

4. He has ceded to them the provinces of Corab and Kurrah, and they have obliged him to appoint Zabita Cawn Buxy of the empire, with the proprietary of thoſe lands uſually annexed to this office. They require him to make over all the country conquered from the Jauts, to pay him the balance of the ſums he promiſed them when he firſt joined them, and to remain conſtantly in their protection.

5. The Vizier tranſmitted us the intelligence of this event, in terms ſufficiently expreſſive of his terror, and which ſeemed to us upon the firſt alarm to be not altogether without foundation, until we had conſidered with attention every poſſible circumſtance reſulting from it.

6. For, allowing that by the poſſeſſion of Corab and Kurrah the Marattas were become the formidable neighbours of the Vizier's country, we reflected, that previous to their rupture with the King, when they were in fact acting as one party and united in a common cauſe, they held in reality the ſame poſſeſſion of thoſe provinces, were as much in the vicinity of the Vizier's dominions, and might have invaded them with better proſpects of ſucceſs, as we had but a few battalions in his country, which the reſpect and delicacy we have ever ſhewn his Majeſty would have ever prevented our making uſe of until they had, by commencing hoſtilities, made an open declaration of their intentions, than at this time, when we have a complete brigade in the province of Oude, another at Patna in readineſs to march at a moment's warning for its defence and protection.

7. We allow the probability of Zabita Cawn, with the other Rohilla Chiefs paſſing the line of their own boundary into the Vizier's country, while the Marattas invaded it from the ſouthward: but yet we judged that the Rohillas, who had fought their ſafety in an alliance with the Marattas, to which they were of neceſſity compelled, would, when left to themſelves, attempt at leaſt to re-eſtabliſh their own independence rather than contribute to the increaſe of a Power, which they are well aſſured would uſe very little ceremony of cruſhing them in their turn, and which the Vizier, with the countenance of the Engliſh, ſeems to be the only Hindoſtan Prince capable of checking the rapidity of its progreſs.

8. We were certain likewiſe that much of the ſeaſon would be expended by delays attending the ſettlement of the ceded provinces, and by the Ganges not being fordable until the end of February, before the Marattas would have leiſure to invade the Vizier's provinces; in which undertaking, from all preſent appearances, they would undoubtedly be foiled.

9. How far our engagements with the King ought to influence us in defending him in the right of poſſeſſions we know to have been forcibly wreſted from him, at a time when no public act of his can be deemed valid, and when there is great reaſon to imagine he will himſelf ſolicit our aſſiſtance to protect them, or how far at this juncture it would be political or expedient to interfere, muſt remain undetermined until we have ſufficient leiſure to conſider the ſubject with that attention which the importance of it demands.

10. In the meantime, as the fortreſs of Allahabad is of the greateſt conſequence, and the only poſt belonging to the Vizier on that ſide of the river, we have judged it proper to direct Colonel Champion, ſhould the Vizier require it, to throw into the fort an adequate garriſon, to defend it againſt every attempt; but have deſired him at the ſame time to give the moſt explicit and poſitive orders to the Officer who may command, on no inducement whatever to exceed the limits of his ſtation.

Copy of the 9th Paragraph of a Letter from the Governor and Council in Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors; dated the 1ſt March 1773.

The circumſtance of the King's ſurrendering the province of Korab to the Marattas, hardly, as we have obſerved before, makes any difference as to our ſituation with regard to theſe turbulent and ambitious people. They had before declared their intention of attacking the Vizier, and by their motions, ſhewn themſelves ready to fall upon him. Our intereſt, our engagements obliged us to take up his defence, and our meeting his enemies in the above-mentioned provinces, inſtead of receiving them in his own proper dominions, was as conſonant to this principle, as it was conformable to our connections with the King, and the intereſt which we have in the protection of his demeſnes. We ſtill act on the principles we ſet out of protecting our allies, without forming any deſigns againſt other people. In no ſhape can this compulſatory ceſſion by the King releaſe us from the obligation we are under to defend the provinces which we have ſo particularly guaranteed to him, and which his own Viceroy, Mineer ul Dowlah, at this time puts under our protection: independent of our own conviction of the propriety of this plan, your orders in the 5th paragraph of your Letter of the 30th June 1769, on a caſe exactly parallel to that before us, left us without an option.

Copy of the 5th Paragraph of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 30th June 1769.

We eſteem ourſelves bound by Treaty to protect the King's perſon, and to ſecure to him the poſſeſſion of the Korah and Illahabad diſtricts. When we wrote the 11th November 1768, we apprehended the conſequences of keeping the brigade at Ilahabad, would be creating in Suja Dowlah a jealouſy that would involve us in freſh troubles, having at that time no cauſe to eſteem him an enemy; but impreſſed as you were with the opinion of his hoſtile intentions and growing ſtrength at the time of the diſpatch of the Valentine, we ſhall not blame your caution for deferring the execution of our orders for its removal; nor ſhall we at this time attempt to give poſitive directions for your conduct, which in ſuch critical caſes ought ſeldom to be done, and in which the ſituation of affairs may be varied by unforeſeen events, at the very moment we are writing; but having given you with as much preciſion as poſſible a general view of the ſyſtem by which we wiſh to ſee our affairs regulated, we muſt leave it to you to improve, to the utmoſt of your power, every opportunity of drawing towards that point; and whenever you think yourſelves obliged for our ſecurity, upon emergent occaſions, to adopt meaſures of a contrary tendency, you are to give us very full reaſons for ſuch a deviation, and endeavour to return to the path we have marked out, as ſoon as circumſtances will admit.

Extract of the Company's Select Letter to Bengal, the 11th November 1768.

Par. 31. As the war on the coaſt of Coromandel has been a very important event in our political ſyſtem in India, we think it proper to tranſmit you copy of all we have wrote to our ſervants at Fort Saint George on the ſubject, that you may know our ſentiments on the points diſcuſſed therein, and that the ſeveral Preſidencies may act on one uniform plan. We find this the more neceſſary, becauſe we obſerve they are countenanced in their wild ideas of eſtabliſhing a new Subah in the Decan, by the ſeveral Letters you have wrote them, and which indicate that you poſſeſs much more of the ſpirit of conqueſt than is conſiſtent with that permanency which is our object. You will therefore pay the ſame attention to the Letters addreſſed to our ſervants at Fort Saint George, as if they were addreſſed to yourſelves. And this leads us to a recapitulation of what we have wrote to you, and what advices we have received from you, relative to your conduct towards the neighbouring Powers.

32. It is evident that Lord Clive, in forming the Treaty of 1765, conſidered Suja Dowla as the proper barrier againſt the Marattas and the Northern Powers; and that his enemies might not take advantage of the weak ſtate to which our arms had reduced him, a brigade was for ſome time ſtationed at Allahabad. When the terms of the Treaty were fulfilled, and Suja Dowla had made ſome progreſs in recruiting his forces, Lord Clive withdrew the brigade, leaving only one battalion at the requeſt of the King. This was in July 1766. But in October following, the approach of Abdallah, and the earneſt ſolicitations of Suja Dowla, obliged the Select Committee to order a brigade to be ſtationed again at Allahabad, intending however, we ſuppoſe, to withdraw it as ſoon as the apprehenſions of an invaſion ſhould ceaſe: and Lord Clive, in his Letter to the Select Committee, 16th January 1767, recommends the withdrawing it as ſoon as poſſible, leaving a detachment of only one battalion to quiet the fears which the Vizier entertained even againſt the King himſelf, who had invited the Marattas to croſs the Nerbuddah, and join him, promiſing them our aſſiſtance in the execution of his favourite deſign of marching to Delhi. It is certain that the King, finding himſelf diſappointed in this ſcheme by our non-concurrence, was upon the point of throwing himſelf into the hands of the Marattas, forgetful as well of his own true intereſt as of his obligations to the Engliſh. That deſign you may be aſſured he has not, nor perhaps ever will, totally relinquiſh; but he ſtill flatters himſelf with the hope of our aſſiſtance, and ſo long as he ſees the ſtrong ſupport of one of our brigades at Allahabad, he will either be forming ſchemes to embroil us in the politics of the country, or ſoliciting us to gratify him in his project of going to Delhi. To deprive the Bengal provinces of one entire brigade, merely to allay his fears, or to feed his hopes, is a moſt pernicious conceſſion, and therefore we cannot but wiſh to hear of your having evacuated Allahabad. Poſitive orders upon this head we cannot give you, becauſe you muſt undoubtedly act according to the emergency of affairs; but we inſiſt upon your looking back to your own and Lord Clive's reaſonings upon the firſt ſtationing of a brigade at Allahabad; and ſuffer not yourſelves to be duped by any ill-founded alarms of the King or Suja Dowla. The motive you alledge for continuing the brigade in that ſtation, is to watch the motions of the Marattas, and other Country Powers; and hence ariſes our anxiety, becauſe it ſeems founded on the principle expreſſed in your Letters to Fort Saint George, and in the Letter of Preſident Verelſt; viz. "That the Engliſh are "to maintain the character of umpires of Indoſtan;" a principle that may involve us in every war from Delhi to Cape Comarin. One invariable maxim ought ever to be maintained; which is, that we are to avoid taking part in the political ſchemes of any of the Country Princes. If Suja Dowla's dominions ſhould ever be actually invaded, we are bound by Treaty to aſſiſt him; but as to any ambitious views of his, he muſt execute them as well as he can, without the leaſt aſſiſtance from us; nor are you to interfere in or be anxious concerning the quarrels, defeats, or victories, of any Indian Power whatſoever: for the more they diſpute and fight with one another, the leſs will they be enabled or inclined to act offenſively againſt us.

33. The effects that we look for from withdrawing the brigade, will be, either that the King will put himſelf in Suja Dowla's power, follow the brigade, or fling himſelf into the arms of the Marattas, or any other Power who will give him hopes of an army to conduct him to Delhi; either of which would be far more eligible than the preſent jarring ſyſtem. If he puts himſelf in Suja Dowla's power, he, as Vizier, will poſſeſs himſelf of the power of diſpoſing of his revenues, and of the royal authority, and we ſhall be no longer embarraſſed with his machinations to excite us to a rupture with Suja Dowla. If he flings himſelf into the hands of the Marattas, or any other Power, we are diſengaged from him, and it may open a fair opportunity of withholding the 26 lacks we now pay him; but the moſt eligible for us would be to have him follow the brigade into the Bahar province; in that caſe you muſt inform Suja Dowla, that in virtue of the Treaty of Illahabad we, as guarantees, eſteem the King's poſſeſſions under our immediate protection, and that we ſhall repel any attempts that he may make to poſſeſs himſelf of them. But though this language is to be held, we do not mean that you ſhould engage in a war with Suja Dowla, even though he ſhould poſſeſs himſelf of the King's poſſeſſions; no intereſts of the King being of that importance to us as to plunge us into a war.

34. This being the concluſion we wiſh to have theſe affairs brought to; we rely on your abilities to conduct them, ſo as neither to involve us in a war, nor draw on us the imputation of violated faith.

35. The nature of the orders we have given you above, require the moſt profound ſecrecy, and therefore the knowledge of them muſt be confined to the Select Committee only, unleſs you ſhould have occaſion to produce them to the Council in juſtification of any meaſures you may take in conſequence.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultation; dated 12th October 1773.

PRESENT,

The honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Preſident,

William Alderſey,
P. M. Dacres,
Henry Goodwin,
John Graham,
George Vanſittart, } Eſquires.

The Governor's Reply to the General's diſſent.

The Preſident deſires to enter the following Minute, in reply to thoſe recorded by the General in the laſt Proceedings:

Remarks on the General's diſſent to the Preſident's meaſure at Benares.

The objections made by the General to the article of the Treaty which reſpects the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad to the Vizier, are theſe:

1ſt. That they are repugnant to the Treaty of Illahabad.

2d. That the condition of the ceſſion were much below its worth, and what might have been obtained for them.

3d. That an exchange might have been obtained for them of the lands of Chunar, and that part of the Zemindary of Gauzypore which lies on the ſouth ſide of the Ganges.

4th. That it has contributed to the Vizier's purpoſe of accumulating as much power, wealth, and country as he poſſibly can, and rendering himſelf a ſtill more formidable and dangerous neighbour than he has hitherto been.

5th. That beſides the advance of a ſum of money, a continuation of half the revenues ariſing from theſe provinces ſhould have been obtained for the Company for a number of years.

6th. That equal advantages might have been obtained from the King for his reinſtatement in thoſe provinces, viz. the renunciation of his ſtipend of twenty-ſix lacks per annum, and grants for the Soubahs of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, to the Company, for ever.

To theſe I ſhall reply in their order.

1ſt. The 4th article of the Treaty of Allahabad runs in theſe words:

"The King Shaw Allum ſhall remain in full poſſeſſion "of Corah, and ſuch part of the province of Illahabad as "he now poſſeſſes; which are ceded to his Majeſty as "a royal demeſne for the ſupport of his dignity and "expences."

The General affirms, that in conſequence and by virtue of this ceſſion, the Company were to hold the provinces of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, in perpetuity. No ſuch declaration is made in the above, or in any ſubſequent Treaty, nor is the ceſſion of Corah and Illahabad either mentioned or alluded to in any other. Although no concluſion is drawn from this affirmation, I have thought it of conſequence to remove it, becauſe it ſeemed to imply, that the poſſeſſion of Corah and Allahabad, and that of the Dewannee of Bengal, &c. ſtood upon the ſame tenure, and that if the former were loſt to the King, the right of the Company to the latter ceaſed with it.

The true ſtate of the caſe, as I conceive it, is this:

This Government beſtowed the diſtrict of Corah and Allahabad upon the King Shaw Allum, of its own free will, "for the ſupport of his dignity and expences." He firſt abandoned, and afterwards by a ſolemn grant he gave them away to the Marattas; we diſapproved of the grant, becauſe it fruſtrated the purpoſe for which theſe lands were beſtowed on the King, and becauſe we ſaw danger on admitting ſo powerful a neighbour on the borders of our ally. It was therefore reſolved to reſume the poſſeſſion of thoſe lands, not from the King, whoſe property and right were annulled by his own alienation of them, but from the Marattas their new proprietors.

If it was repugnant to the Treaty "to poſſeſs ourſelves of the provinces of Corah and Allahabad, and to cede them to the Vizier, becauſe the King had an undoubted right of doing what he judged proper with thoſe provinces, with reference to the Engliſh;" it was alſo repugnant to the Treaty to oppoſe the Marattas to whom he had aſſigned them, and to prevent them from taking poſſeſſion according to the intention of his grant. Yet this meaſure was reſolved on, after having been very maturely debated both in the Select Committee and at the Board, with the preſence, concurrence, and advice of the General in both. What was the opinion of the Board at that time on the ſubject, will beſt appear from the following extract of the Conſultation of the 1ſt February, at which the General was preſent.

"The Board are entirely of opinion with the Select "Committee, that they have the juſteſt grounds to con- "teſt this point with the Marattas. The province of "Corah was a grant of the Company to the King, and "declared to have been made for the ſupport of his dig- "nity and expences. By its being made an article of "their Treaty with the Vizier, they muſt be conſidered "as the guarantees of it. The preſent transfer is un- "queſtionably

" queſtionably an act of violence; and as ſuch, can be " repelled by none with ſo good a plea of right, as by " thoſe from whom it was originally held. Were it even " a voluntary ceſſion, the equity of it might well admit " of a diſpute, and the Company might juſtly reclaim the " poſſeſſion of it; both becauſe the conditions of their " original grant to the King were defeated by his aſſign- " ing it to another Power, and their intereſts are like to " be endangered by it.—Reſolved, that meaſures be im- " mediately taken for the defence of the provinces of " Corab and Currah, againſt the Mahrattas: that the " President be deſired to communicate this our intention " to the Vizier: that Colonel Champion be directed to " conſult with him on the proper means of effecting it; " and, if adviſable, to croſs the river at Illahabad, either " with the whole, or ſuch a part of the brigade as he " ſhall judge adviſable for this ſervice, &c."

2d. Mr. Laurell has given his opinion, founded on the teſtimony of the moſt authentic records, that the net revenue of the provinces of Corab and Illahabad, after deducting all charges, may amount to 22,09,416 rupees, " if the country remains in peace, and is affected with " no unuſual calamity." This is a condition in which we have no right to expect them to continue long; and in war, or even the threatening of a war, it may be queſtioned, whether the collections would be ſufficient to defray the charges of the forces which would be required, at once to guard the country againſt an enemy, and to curb the ſeditious ſpirit of the people. I beg leave to quote an expreſſion which I have heard attributed to Nudjiff Cawn, and which ſtrongly marks the troubleſome and precarious tenure of thoſe diſtricts: " that the Ryots never pay their rents but with the dagger held to their throats." In effect we find, that on bare expectation of an invaſion of the Marattas the laſt year, notwithſtanding their diſtance, and the ſpeedy approach of our forces, the Zemindars and Farmers had withheld their rents, and ſome of the Rajahs had actually riſen up in rebellion; which circumſtances are mentioned by Mr. Laurell to have rendered the ſtate of the collections ſo precarious, that he was glad to accept of an agreement from Munneer o Dowlah, to rent the whole country for the net ſum of 16 lacks.

To the refractory ſpirit of the people let it be added, that the neareſt point of Illahabad lies at the diſtance of 180 miles, meaſured in a ſtrait line from our cantonments at Dinapore—The length of Corab and Illahabad, with the ſame meaſure, is 150 miles, and their breadth, which is in every part nearly the ſame, but 20: that they are annually expoſed to the attacks of the Marattas, who have an ancient claim to the poſſeſſion of Corab, which they are not likely to forego; and then let a calculation be formed of the probable amount which theſe lands would yield to us on a medium of ten years, with the probable amount of their expences.

Upon the whole, whatever may be the General's opinion, I am convinced that the terms which I obtained from the Vizier were fully adequate to the real worth of the lands, all circumſtances conſidered. I will not pretend to ſay, whether more might or might not have been extorted from him: it was not without much pains and perſuaſion that I brought him to theſe terms: beſides, I beg it may be remembered, that the Vizier was as well acquainted with the obvious difficulties which would have attended our retaining poſſeſſion of this territory on behalf of the Company, as I was with his motives for wiſhing to acquire it.

3d. I cannot avoid complaining of a want of candour in the aſſertion, " that had I perſevered in the demand of the Gauzypore lands, it is probable I might have obtained an equivalent in them for the exchange of Corab and Illahabad." The General may well remember, that he himſelf informed me of the extreme reluctance which the Vizier had to yield up the ſmalleſt part of that country. But I will plainly declare that territory was not my aim; my attention was wholly fixed on the means of relieving the diſtreſſes of the Company, by an acquiſition of ready money, rather than of embarraſſing them by an extention of poſſeſſion, which in the caſe ſuppoſed by the General would not have been an equivalent; but ſince the whole Zemindarry pays to the Vizier no more than 22½ lacks under our guarantee, and that part of it which the General refers to compoſes but about one-third of it, from which we could in juſtice claim no more than the proportional rent, that is ſeven or eight lacks.

4th. I have already declared my opinion, with my reaſons for it, that the acquiſition of Corab and Illahabad will increaſe the Vizier's dependance on the Company. I have often heard of the treacherous deſigns of the Vizier, and the danger of allowing him to poſſeſs either wealth or power; but I never heard this opinion well ſupported: on the contrary, I conceive that he would be a much more uſeful ally, if he had a greater degree of both; but while the policy prevails, of curbing him in every improvement, we do not only deprive ourſelves of every benefit of his alliance, and make him a burthen to us, but we alienate his affections, and teach him to abhor the hand which is held out to oppreſs, inſtead of relieving him. The additional revenue and ſecurity which the Vizier would have acquired, by the reduction of the Rohillas, had, I own, a conſiderable ſhare in the reaſons which induced me to conſent to that propoſition, although the ſtipulations which were propoſed for the Company were undoubtedly the firſt conſideration. I preſume that the General himſelf, when he firſt communicated the propoſal, was aware that the reduction of the Rohillas would have been an accumulation of wealth, power, and country to the Vizier, and a far more important one than the poſſeſſion of Corab and Illahabad.

In the above ſentiments, reſpecting the treatment of the Vizier, I am ſupported by the opinion of the honourable Court of Directors, which is ſtrongly implied in many of their commands, and pointedly expreſſed in the following paragraph of their Letter of 30th June 1769, which, though alluding to a different ſubject, evidently marks both their opinion and that of the General at another period, of the little danger which we have to apprehend from the power of the Vizier.

" The number of Suja Dowla's forces not being limited " by any Treaty, your demand upon that ſubject can " only be juſtified upon the principle of ſelf defence, " where conſiderations of juſtice muſt ſometimes give " place to neceſſity; but we do not ſee, in the preſent " inſtance, any ſuch danger impending. Colonel Bar- " ker, in his Letter of the 23d March 1768, gives an " opinion, that a ſingle brigade would be an overmatch " for all Suja Dowla's army. This opinion ſtands uncon- " troverted; and indeed it is founded upon the uniform " experience of our former ſucceſs. We do not there- " fore ſee the neceſſity of coming to a reſolution ſo very " diſguſting and humiliating, without ſome overt act " committed on his part, manifeſtly ſhewing his hoſtile " intentions againſt us. Whenever that happened, you " were able enough to reduce him; and we could not " have been charged with being the aggreſſors: whereas, " if a war ſhould break out in conſequence of this and " other aggravating circumſtances attending, the breach " of friendſhip will be imputed to the Company."

5. This being a mere ſpeculative opinion, unſupported by reaſons, I ſhall decline anſwering it: obſerving only, that a ſtipulation for the continued payment of one-half of the revenue (if the Vizier had agreed, to which I am morally certain he would not) would have made it neceſſary to join our own Officers with the Vizier's in the management of the collections, and beſides continual conteſts would have entailed upon us all the bad conſequences, but in a greater degree, of an unconnected poſſeſſion.

6. The renunciation of the tribute which we cannot pay, and the grant of the Sunnuds for Bengal which we do not want, cannot in propriety be termed equal advantages with a poſitive payment of 50 lacks in money, and the Vizier's engagement to bear the whole expence of our troops when they ſhall be employed by him. Beſides, I know not by what right the King could give, or the Company take from the Nabob, the little ſhare which he poſſeſſes of the Soubaſhip. and which he holds by treaty. But the General adds, that "it is now more "than probable we ſhall ſoon ſee theſe Sunnuds in the "hands of other nations." And what will they avail them? It was not the want of the Sunnuds of Shah Allum which defeated the long concerted projects of the Duc De Choiſeul; nor will the poſſeſſion of them quicken the deſigns of the Marattas againſt us. The ſword which gave us the dominion of Bengal, muſt be the inſtrument of its preſervation; and if (which God forbid) it ſhall ever ceaſe to be ours, the next proprietor will derive his right from the ſame natural charter.

Opinions of what might have been done always have an advantage in the compariſon with what have been done. Any conjectures may be hazarded of the probable conſequences of the former; no events can refute them: the latter are fixed to certain and unavoidable proofs. I feel the force of this inequality in the preſent argument with the General; I can only oppoſe my own opinions to his conjectures, which cannot overthrow them. The meaſures which I have adopted can at this time admit of no amendment or variation, nor can any reaſoning avert the effects which muſt follow them, although it will always be eaſy to infer every diſappointment and every ill conſequence as the neceſſary deductions from them.

The remainder of the General's Letter conſiſts in a charge which reſpects the Board more immediately than myſelf; I ſhall beg leave however to reply to it. He complains "that he was not included in the commiſſion which the Board thought proper to entruſt to my ſole management; that he was never preſent at any of the conferences held between the Vizier and myſelf, excepting the laſt day, when every thing had been concluded; and that the natives of Indoſtan, influenced by theſe appearances, muſt view his conſequence in a leſſer degree than any of his predeceſſors, whom they have been taught to look on with reverence and reſpect." This latter charge he afterwards repeats in terms which too ſtrongly imply that his attendance at Benares was required for that purpoſe only.

The charges are ſevere, but how far they are merited may beſt appear from a [illegible] ſtate of my conduct in the points to which they ref[illegible]

Immediately on my arrival at Benares I acquainted the General very circumſtantially with the ſubject and deſign of my commiſſion. I ſhewed him my inſtructions, which he read with attention, and to the beſt of my remembrance expreſſed an approbation of every part, excepting that he mentioned a regret that ſome more notice had not been taken in it of himſelf. I expreſſed to him my wiſh to have the benefit of his aſſiſtance; and that he might know with what degree of cordiality he might in reaſon beſtow it, I very frankly informed him, that as it appeared evident to me that the Vizier was hitherto very little acquainted with the regular powers of our conſtitution, and had placed no dependence on the Government itſelf, but made all his applications to the Commander of the army, it was my intention to convince the Vizier, that in his concerns with the Company his immediate dependence was on the Governor alone, and to eſtabliſh a direct communication between him and myſelf without any intervention. At the ſame time I aſſured the General, that I conſidered the ſecond place as due to him, and that it ſhould be my ſtudy to add as much as was in my power to his importance within that limitation. In other points my views were no other than ſuch as were contained in the ſubſtance of my inſtructions.

I can truly declare that my whole ſubſequent conduct was conſiſtent with this declaration; I can indeed offer but one proof of it, to which the General himſelf will bear evidence, in the information which he received from the Vizier of my deſire, as I have before expreſſed it to him, that the General might be prevailed on to take the command of the army, in caſe the projected expedition againſt the Rohillas ſhould take place.

APPENDIX No 12.

With reſpect to his not participating in the conferences with the Vizier, a thouſand obvious cauſes forbid it. The purpoſe to which I have juſt alluded would have made the preſence of the military Commander a circumſtance equally of reſtraint and indelicacy; the commiſſion which I had undertaken required ſpeedy diſpatch; the very eſſence of it was the power of inſtant deciſion. Both theſe purpoſes would have been fruſtrated by the General's intervention; the converſation muſt have been broken by the interpretation of every word that was ſaid on both ſides for the General's information, his opinion muſt have been conſulted on every new point that aroſe out of the debate, and arguments diſcuſſed on both ſides till we ſhould concur in the ſame determination, while the Vizier was to ſit patiently and wait the iſſue of our diſcuſſions, or catch the difference of our ſentiments, and apply it, as he eaſily might, to his own advantage. Who too ſhould be the interpreter between us? I could not. A fourth perſon therefore muſt have been admitted to the conference to act in that capacity; the other Members of the Board muſt of courſe have been called in, or they would have had real cauſe to be offended; and if the Nabob had thought it neceſſary to ſupport his part of the negociation with an equal weight of numbers, our buſineſs would have been determined by a diet inſtead of a conference, and moſt probably concluded with nothing decided, or by compulſion, inſtead of a free and amicable accommodation.

The inſtances quoted by the General, were not applicable to the circumſtances of my commiſſion. There might have been no impropriety in the junction of General Carnac with Lord Clive; they ſtood in a different predicament together; their views, their way of thinking, their objects, were the ſame. Each equally ſtood in need of an interpreter; nor did the caſe then ſubſiſt of a difference of intereſt between the Government and the military authority. General Smith was joined in the deputation of 1768, becauſe his rank entitled him to it: their buſineſs was ſimple; to be effected by command, and not by perſuaſion, and might (I will preſume to affirm) have been concluded full as well by the General alone, as by the joint powers of a Committee. In a word, the Board in the two commiſſions above-mentioned, thought proper to compoſe them of more than one perſon. The Board choſe to delegate the truſt repoſed in me to myſelf ſingly; I have every reaſon to be convinced, that the effect was anſwerable to their intentions; and ſo well aſſured was I of the neceſſity of this mode before I accepted of the charge, that I would not have undertaken it on other conditions.

It will be recollected, that the various points referred to my management, were none of them fixed to any ſpecific terms; but the undefined ideas and wiſhes of the Board, and the political principles of the Court of Directors, given me at large for my guidance. The ſpirit of theſe laſt is ſtrongly repugnant to the imperious manner in which the Vizier has been too often treated by our Government, and enjoins a ſtile of perſuaſion in the place of command. Every circumſtance of the negociation required, that it ſhould be managed by that familiar and confidential intercourſe, which can take place only between two perſons, unembarraſſed by interruption, and unchecked by the reſerve which always attends a converſation held between ſtrangers, and before many witneſſes. Fortunately too, the habit which I had acquired of ſpeaking the Indoſtan language, though imperfect, yet aided on the part of the Vizier by a very clear and eaſy elocution, and an uncommonly quick apprehenſion, greatly facilitated this mode of communication, and not only forwarded the concluſion of our debates, but I am perſuaded left him much better pleaſed with what had paſſed, than if it had been conveyed to him through the doubtful channel of an interpreter.

I will only add my regret, that the General ſhould have ſuffered his feeling, on this occaſion, to hurry him into expreſſions of too perſonal reſentment, which I think his natural moderation would have led him to avoid, had he allowed himſelf time for cool and deliberate reflection.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations; dated the 4th October 1773.

George Vanſittart, Eſquire.

THE inſtructions given to the Governor before his departure for Benares, which the Board at that time thought proper to ſeal up and depoſit in the cuſtody of Mr. Alderſey, are now opened, and recorded as follows, with the Letter written in conſequence.

The Governor's Inſtructions given.

To the Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Preſident and Governor of Fort William, &c. &c.

Honourable Sir,

At our Conſultation of the 19th April we expreſſed our approbation of the reſolution of the Secret Committee, for your obtaining a perſonal interview with the Vizier; and as in conſequence of the Vizier's repeated deſire, you have now determined on proceeding for that purpoſe to Benares, we ſhall beg leave to lay before you ſuch points in the political intereſts of the Company, as, from the orders of the Court of Directors, and the preſent ſtate of affairs in this Government, are the more immediate objects of our wiſhes; at the ſame time the circumſtances of our ſituation and connection with the King and the Vizier are liable to ſo many variations, that we find it difficult to mark out any preciſe line for your conduct, nor indeed do we judge it neceſſary, as we repoſe an entire confidence in your experience and abilities to improve to the utmoſt for the Company's benefit the different events that may occur.

It is evident that the Treaties which at preſent ſubſiſt between the Company and the Vizier, are ſettled upon an unequal footing. We are called on every occaſion to his aſſiſtance, without any immediate advantage to our Employers, or even any regular or adequate adjuſtment of the ſtipulation in the Treaty for the payment of our expences; while on his part, the aid which he is bound to afford us, is left looſe and undefined, and in all probability, from the nature and conſtitution of his army, in caſe of real danger, would prove uſeleſs and ineffectual; it is therefore adviſable to effect an alliance with him on grounds of reciprocal advantage and ſupport.

Of ſuch an alliance, one of the moſt eſſential articles will be to ſecure the regular payment of ſufficient ſubſidies for the charge of ſuch bodies of our troops as may march at the requiſition of the Vizier; and although in our former Treaty the ſtipulation is made only for our extraordinary expences, yet when we conſider that whilſt removed at ſuch a diſtance from our territories they are in effect loſt to our own ſervice, we think it reaſonable that the whole expence ſhould be borne by him; but this can only be effected by your addreſs and judicious management, as the engagements now ſubſiſting between us, from which we mean not to depart, do not entitle us to claim it as a right.

While the King continues at Delhi, whither he proceeded in oppoſition to our moſt ſtrenuous remonſtrances, we ſhall certainly conſider the engagements between him and the Company as diſſolved by his alienation from them and their intereſt; the province of Corah in this caſe will revert to them as to the original proprietors, by his inability to hold it on the terms, and for the purpoſes to which it was ceded to him.—As the poſſeſſion of ſo remote a country can never be expected to yield any profit to the Company, and the defence of it muſt require a perpetual aid of their forces, and prove a ſource of much jealouſy to the neighbouring Powers, it muſt be our earneſt wiſh to be freed from ſo inconvenient a poſſeſſion, on the beſt terms which can be obtained for the diſpoſal of it. If the King's pretenſions are removed, the claim of the Vizier to this diſtrict will come next in preference, both on account of our alliance with him, its contiguity and relation to his dominions, and this preference being conſonant to the Company's orders. In that caſe it would undoubtedly be our firſt wiſh to obtain from him the diſtricts of Chunar and Gawzipore, in exchange for it. The Honourable Company have earneſtly enjoined us to endeavour to effect this, for the ſole purpoſe of placing the King in the poſſeſſion of a territory, ſituated ſo near to our borders, and would no doubt be well pleaſed with the acquiſition of it to their own poſſeſſions; yet we are aware of the repugnance of the Vizier to part with ſo valuable and important a territory, and we cannot, either in juſtice or in obedience to the commands of our Superiors, which recommended the ſtricteſt delicacy in our negociations with their ally, uſe any peremptory requiſition with him to engage his acquieſcence in ſuch an accommodation. We content ourſelves with intimating the utmoſt extent of our deſires on this head, leaving the accompliſhment of them to your management and diſcretion, in ſuch a mode and to ſuch a degree as you ſhall find yourſelf enabled to effect it.

If, however, as is moſt probable, the King ſhould make overtures to renew his former connection, we are of opinion that his right to reclaim the diſtricts of Corah and Illahabad cannot with propriety be diſputed; and we authorize you to reſtore them on the condition of his granting to the Company a ſolemn renunciation of the tribute which has been allowed him from the provinces of Bengal and Bahar, both of the arrears which may be due, and of all future payments for ever.—While we require this as a juſt retribution for the ſervice afforded him in maintaining the poſſeſſion of theſe diſtricts againſt the Marattas, to whom his weakneſs had abandoned him, we are juſtified by the ſtronger plea of abſolute neceſſity, in inſiſting upon it, as our finances are utterly unable to ſupport any longer ſo ruinous an expence.

It is probable, that the ſevere proof which he has recently experienced of his utter inability to ſupport his pretenſions to the power and dominions of his anceſtors, and the diſgraceful treatment which he has received from his falſe protectors, will exempt him from the hazard of the like deluſion hereafter, and induce him to remain contented with his former reſidence, in a ſtate more ſuited to the moderate compaſs of his genius, and the reduced influence of his family. In that caſe it will be his beſt policy to connect himſelf again with the Vizier, and entruſt him with the adminiſtration of his affairs, as we do not ſee how it is poſſible for him to ſubſiſt by his own ſtrength, and the ſtate of our finances rendering it inconvenient to us to burthen ourſelves with ſo unprofitable a charge. The pride of the Vizier may be gratified with ſuch connection, and his authority may derive ſome degree of ſupport from the veneration which is yet paid to the royal name. This point, therefore, we heartily recommend to your attention; the power of the King and of the Vizier being united, and the object for which the preſence of the King near the borders of Bahar was deſired by the Company, being removed by the renunciation of the tribute, it will then become an immaterial conſideration in what part of the territories of the Vizier he ſhall hereafter reſide.

We refer to you to adjuſt the claim of the Vizier on the Company, for the Tuncaw granted him by the King on the treaſury of Moorſhedabad, and herewith furniſh you with the extracts from our Conſultation of the 13th May, containing the only information which we have hitherto received concerning that tranſaction; and you will no doubt be furniſhed with the reſt from the Select Committee.

We empower you to receive on behalf of Cheet Sing, the ſtipulation which was formerly made with the Vizier in favour of his father Rajah Bulwand Sing, in conſideration of his ſervices to the Company in the year 1764.

In a Treaty of firm alliance with the Vizier, a free intercourſe of commerce with his dominions ought to form an article; and as you are acquainted with the earneſt wiſhes of the Company on this head, you will no doubt pay the greateſt regard to them. The regulation of this commerce, with reſpect to the mode of carrying it on, and the duties to be paid, will be an object of your attention; and we rely on your care and judgment for adjuſting theſe to the ſatisfaction of our Employers. A ſimilar regulation to that which we have lately adopted with reſpect to duties on our own territories, would be the moſt deſirable, if the Vizier's conſent can be obtained.

Mr. Laurell will have our orders to meet you at Benares, and furniſh you with ſuch informations as he may have collected regarding the diſtricts of Corah and Illahabad. He will alſo be directed to conform to any meaſure or ſtipulation which you may engage in for the ceſſion of theſe diſtricts.

We have found it neceſſary this ſeaſon, for the more effectual protection of the Vizier's dominions, to extend our operations to the country of the Rohillas on the north of the Ganges. We approve of your concerting with the Vizier any plan which may be neceſſary for his future ſecurity on that ſide, conſiſtently with the ſpirit of the Company's orders.

In conſequence of the meaſures you may adopt, it will reſt with you to determine whether or not any troops ſhall be ſtationed in the Vizier's dominions; if there ſhould, we recommend that the ſecond brigade do relieve the firſt, and take its tour of that duty.

We have already obſerved, that we mean rather to intimate our wiſhes than lay down any abſolute rules for your conduct on this occaſion. For your more particular guidance we furniſh you with copies of the public Treaties, and the Company's orders, extracted from their ſeveral Letters, ſince the laſt Treaty that was entered into with the Vizier.

Should you be able to afford any leiſure to inſpect into the ſtate of our affairs in the province of Bahar, and to regulate the expences of the revenue and factory at Patna and Dinapoor Cantonments, we deſire your aſſiſtance in theſe eſſential points, and ſhall ſend the proper inſtructions to the Chief and Council at Patna, to conform to any regulations you may think it proper to give them.

We are, with regard,

Honourable Sir, &c. &c.

APPENDIX. No. 13.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultation, the 7th October 1773.

PRESENT,

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſquire, Preſident.

General Sir Robert Barker being arrived at the Preſidency, takes his Seat at the Board.

William Alderſey, Philip M. Dacres, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, Geo. Vanſittart, } Eſquires.

The General obſerves, that from the tenor of the Board's inſtructions to the Preſident, from his Letter to the King, and from the Report of his proceedings, as well as the Board's approbation of them, it ſeems abſolutely determined, that the tribute to the King from the revenues of Bengal, &c. ſhould ceaſe to be paid: he therefore deſires to know, if this is to be underſtood as a formal and final reſolution on the ſubject; and if it is not, he wiſhes that a formal determination may be now made, and recorded on the face of the Conſultations. The General's Obſervation.

Reſolved, for the reaſons already aſſigned on the Records of the Board, particularly in the Letter to the Court of Directors from this Department, dated 10th December 1772, that the payment of the tribute to the King Shaw Allum, ſhall be withheld, until expreſs orders concerning it are received from the Court of Directors. Reſolution to withhold the King's tribute.

The General having, on a former occaſion, recorded his reaſons for being againſt this meaſure, now enters his diſſent to the reſolution, in the following Minute: The General diſſents.

The General having already given his opinion on a meaſure which he conſiders truly impolitical to the intereſt of the Company's welfare in this country, it becomes neceſſary that he ſhould now enter his diſſent to the reſolution which has juſt paſſed the Board, to ſtop the payment of his Majeſty's tribute from Bengal.

The reaſons for this meaſure in the Minute of the Board, are in general, that the King hath withdrawn himſelf from our protection; that he has abandoned us, and deſerted from his place of reſidence; and that he has given the province of Corah and Currah, and which in fact is giving away alſo the province of Allahabad, to a ſet of people whoſe views are prejudicial to the Company's intereſt: that he is a pageant of our own creating; and that it is of little importance to the Company, whether he is treated as the ſovereign of Hindoſtan or no; and concludes by ſaying, "that the great want of currency in Bengal renders it impoſſible to pay the tribute."

In anſwer to theſe reaſons, the General begs leave to inform the Board, that the King has expreſſed himſelf in repeated Letters both to the Vizier and the General, his earneſt deſire and wiſh for a continuation of the favour and protection which the Engliſh have hitherto ſhewn him; and he believes alſo his Majeſty's ſentiments are thus expreſſed in the Letters which appear on the Records of the Select Committee. The King's motives for quitting his reſidence at Allahabad are alſo explained—that he wiſhed to be accompanied there by the Engliſh; that he had waited ſeven years, in hopes they would have come to ſuch a reſolution, but having deſpaired, he had determined on making uſe of the next moſt reſpectful Power in Hindoſtan to reinſtate himſelf in his empire, and to conclude a ceremony which it was neceſſary to have performed at the capital, before he would be the declared ſovereign of the empire; he choſe the Marattas for this purpoſe, at a time when no hoſtile intentions appeared between them and the Engliſh. That they have deceived him, and have carried their own purpoſes into execution under his banner, cannot be eſteemed a fault or deception in in him; it is well known he even riſqued the conſequences of a battle with them before he would conſent to the grant of the provinces of Corah and Currah, and the loſs of the action was the loſs of the province. In what reſpect therefore he has forfeited his engagements with us, the General is at a loſs to underſtand; he was under no tie or promiſe to remain perpetually at Allahabad, nor were the provinces of Corah and Allahabad conditionally ceded to him, but given and granted in the fulleſt extent of the words. But we ſeem to have drawn concluſions from what does not appear to be intended by the Treaty of Allahabad, and we have acted in conſequence, by withholding from him the revenue of 26 lacks per annum; by which it appears to the General, that the Company have forfeited the Firmaund granted to them, dated the 12th Auguſt 1765, at Allahabad, wherein it is expreſſed, that the Dewannee is given "on condition of their being "ſecurity for the ſum of 26 lacks of rupees a year for "our royal revenue." And an infringement of the articles of agreement between the King Shaw Allum and the Company, relative to the tribute to be paid to him from the revenues of Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, dated Auguſt 19th, 1765, wherein "the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, in conſideration of his Majeſty's having been graciouſly pleaſed to grant them the Dewannee of Bengal, &c. do engage themſelves to be ſecurity for the regular payment of the ſame."

The obſervation of his Majeſty's being a pageant of our own creating, ſeems more calculated to ſoften the appearance of the meaſures lately taken, than to ſupport them. It is well known that Shaw Allum is the hereditary Prince of a line of Emperors who have governed this country for upwards of 300 years; that he was acknowledged by the Natives before he was by us; that he ſtruck coin, and was raiſed to the Muſnud by the aſſiſtance of Munneer a Dowla, at Daoudneggeer; that he was greatly aſſiſted and ſupported by the Engliſh is certain, and it would, in the General's opinion, have been found policy to have continued that ſupport to him. The lowneſs of the Company's finances cannot vindicate the meaſure; the Company ſhould have advanced as much as they could, and have acknowledged the tribute due.

For theſe reaſons the General diſſents from the reſolution of the Board, of withholding from the King the annual tribute from the Bengal revenues.

Extract of the Secret Letter from Bengal; dated the 10th December 1772.

Par. 4. It was about the time that Shaw Allum had abandoned his reſidence at Corah, to throw himſelf into the arms of the Marattas, in proſecution of his idle ſcheme of reſtoring the Mogul empire to its ancient dignity and extent, that Major Morriſon ſet out, as he ſaid, on his return to Europe over land. He ſoon fell in with the King, and it is too apparent that it was his preconcerted intention to take ſervice with him, without conſidering how far ſuch engagements might oblige him to appear in arms againſt his own country, and the ſervice from which he had received his bread, and notwithſtanding the probability and general belief that the Marattas, with whom in effect he was enliſted, were preparing to invade the province of our ally the Vizier, and even to enter Bengal. In purſuance of this, he wrote the Letter to our Board, referred to in the preſent piece. We took notice of this Letter in our laſt; but independent of the arrogance of the ſtrain which dictated to us the part we were to take in a great public matter, we judged it highly impolitic and unſafe to anſwer the drafts of the King till we were ſatisfied of his amicable intentions, and thoſe of his new allies; and indeed, independent of this, the ſtate of our treaſury rendered it impracticable to comply with theſe payments, or with thoſe which he would doubtleſs have continued to demand in full of his ſtipend, as it was then empty of caſh, beſides that, the great amount of our debt at intereſt, required our firſt attention to its diminution, and the immediate diſcharge of the intereſt due upon it, inſtead of ſquandering away the wealth of the Company on a pageant of authority, from which you never derive any real benefit; and on theſe grounds we have ſuſpended the payment of his ſtipend till this time. This is the complaint which the Shaw and the ambaſſador of his preſence, Major Morriſon, have to prefer againſt your Adminiſtration here.—But this is not all; you, Gentlemen, are alſo charged with the crime of beſtowing only 26 lacks on the King of Hindoſtan, inſtead of the crores which uſed to come into the royal treaſury from Bengal; and Major Morriſon is deputed with full powers from a foreign Prince, to treat with his own Sovereign for the revenues of theſe countries, which are already by ſolemn treaty granted to the Company, and for which a valuable conſideration has been paid. With as much right and much greater propriety, the Major might have been ſent to the King of France; and we do not doubt, that whenever Bengal is to be put up to auction, that Monarch will bid high. It is evidently the Mogul's intention ſo to do, ſince he fixes its value at his preſent ſtipend 26 lacks, and leaves Morriſon to make for him the beſt bargain above that ſum which he can.

APPENDIX, No. 14.

Extract of the Company's Select Letter to Bengal; dated 11th November 1768.

Par. 32. IT is evident that Lord Clive, in forming the Treaty of 1765, conſidered Sujah Dowla as the proper barrier againſt the Marattas and the Northern Powers; and that his enemies might not take advantage of the weak ſtate to which our arms had reduced him, a brigade was for ſome time ſtationed at Allahabad. When the terms of the Treaty were fulfilled, and Sujah Dowla had made ſome progreſs in recruiting his forces, Lord Clive withdrew the brigade, leaving only one battalion at the requeſt of the King. This was in July 1766; but in October following, the approach of Abdalla'h, and the earneſt ſolicitations of Sujah Dowla, obliged the Select Committee to order a brigade to be ſtationed again at Allahabad; intending, however, we ſuppoſe, to withdraw it as ſoon as the apprehenſions of an invaſion ſhould ceaſe; and Lord Clive, in his Letter to the Select Committee, 16th January 1767, recommends the withdrawing it as ſoon as poſſible, leaving a detachment of only one battalion, to quiet the fears which the Vizier entertained even againſt the King himſelf, who had invited the Marattas to croſs the Nerbuddah and join him, promiſing them our aſſiſtance in the execution of his favourite deſign of marching to Delhi. It is certain that the King, finding himſelf diſappointed in this ſcheme by our nonconcurrence, was upon the point of throwing himſelf into the hands of the Marattas, forgetful as well of his own true intereſt, as of his obligations to the Engliſh. That deſign you may be aſſured he has not, nor perhaps ever will, totally relinquiſh; but he ſtill flatters himſelf with the hopes of our aſſiſtance, and ſo long as he ſees the ſtrong ſupport of one of our brigades at Allahabad, he will either be forming ſchemes to embroil us in the politics of the country, or ſoliciting us to gratify him in his project of going to Delhi. To deprive the Bengal provinces of one entire brigade, merely to allay his fears or to feed his hopes, is a moſt pernicious conceſſion, and therefore we cannot but wiſh to hear of your having evacuated Allahabad. Poſitive orders upon this head we cannot give you, becauſe you muſt undoubtedly act according to the emergency of affairs; but we inſiſt upon your looking back to your own and Lord Clive's reaſonings upon the firſt ſtationing of a brigade at Allahabad, and ſuffer not yourſelves to be duped by any ill founded alarms of the King or Sujah Dowla. The motive you alledge for continuing the brigade in that ſtation, is, to watch the motions of the Marattas, and other Country Powers; and hence ariſes our anxiety, becauſe it ſeems founded on the principle expreſſed in your Letters to Fort Saint George, and in the Letter of Preſident Verelſt, viz. "That the Engliſh are to maintain the character of umpires of Indoſtan," a principle that may involve us in every war from Delhi to Cape Comarin.—One invariable maxim ought ever to be maintained, which is, that we are to avoid taking part in the political ſchemes of any of the Country Princes. If Sujah Dowla's dominions ſhould ever be actually invaded, we are bound by Treaty to aſſiſt him; but as to any ambitious views of his, he muſt execute them as well as he can, without the leaſt aſſiſtance from us; nor are you to interfere in, or be anxious concerning the quarrels, defeats, or victories of any Indian Power whatſoever; for the more they diſpute and fight with one another, the leſs will they be enabled or inclined to act offenſively againſt us.

33. The effects that we look for from withdrawing the brigade, will be, either that the King will put himſelf in Sujah Dowla's power, follow the brigade, or fling himſelf into the arms of the Marattas, or any other power who will give him hopes of an army to conduct him to Delhi; either of which would be far more eligible than the preſent jarring ſyſtem. If he puts himſelf in Sujah Dowla's power, he, as Vizier, will poſſeſs himſelf of the power of diſpoſing of his revenues and of the royal authority, and we ſhall be no longer embarraſſed with his machinations to excite us to a rupture with Sujah Dowla: if he flings himſelf into the hands of the Marattas, or any other Power, we are diſengaged from him, and it may open a fair opportunity of withholding the 26 lacks we now pay him; but the moſt eligible for us would be to have him follow the brigade into the Bahar province. In that caſe, you muſt inform Sujah Dowla, that in virtue of the Treaty of Illahabad, we, as guarantees, eſteem the King's poſſeſſions under our immediate protection, and that we ſhall repel any attempts that he may make to poſſeſs himſelf of them; but though this language is to be held, we do not mean that you ſhould engage in a war with Sujah Dowla, even though he ſhould poſſeſs himſelf of the King's poſſeſſions, no intereſt of the King being of that importance to us, as to plunge us into a war.

34. This being the concluſion we wiſh to have theſe affairs brought to, we rely on your abilities to conduct them, ſo as neither to involve us in a war, nor draw on us the imputation of violated faith.

35. The nature of the orders we have given you above, require the moſt profound ſecrecy, and therefore the knowledge of them muſt be confined to the Select Committee only, unleſs you ſhould have occaſion to produce them to the Council in juſtification of any meaſures you may take in conſequence.

APPENDIX, No. 15.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated 10th April 1771.

44. THE advantages which muſt accrue to the Company, from the reſidence of the King within our provinces, are both, in the view of œconomy and ſound policy, too obvious to need any illuſtration. This object therefore exacts your moſt ſerious attention, and requires every judicious effort which can improve his confidence in our attachment to him, and thereby the better engage his compliance with our wiſhes in this reſpect.

45. As this point is equally delicate and important, we recommend to you to lay hold of the firſt favourable opportunity which ſhall offer for an overture to the King on this ſubject, in which we doubt not but your own judgment will ſuggeſt to you the expediency of repreſenting all the benefits his Majeſty will find, from having the forces of the Company nearer his perſon, and ready to unite on any occaſion (in ſupport of our alliance with him) without being obliged to march through the territories of any one who may be diſpoſed to take advantage of our ſituation, in any accidental circumſtance of weakneſs and diſtreſs. To this plea muſt be added, the ill effects of the continual drains of the ſpecie of Bengal, on account of his annual tribute, which, when carried beyond our poſſeſſions, muſt, in a great degree, be loſt to the neceſſary circulation, and may prevent that punctuality in our remittances which we have hitherto maintained, and may in time wholly incapacitate us from fulfilling the ſtipulations we are ſo deſirous to preſerve inviolate.

APPENDIX, No 15.

46. Theſe and ſuch further arguments as ſhall appear moſt conducive to the end, will, we hope, prevail on the King to eſtabliſh his reſidence at Rajahmaul or Mongheer, or ſuch other place within the provinces as may be thought moſt proper for the purpoſe, and moſt likely to preſerve to us that influence which is ſo eſſential to the Company's welfare.

47. The political intereſts of the Company make us no leſs ſolicitous to obtain from Sujah Dowlah an exchange of the territories of Bulwan Sing, for the provinces of Khorah and Allahabad, now held for the King; ſince, by ſuch an exchange, our frontiers would be more eaſily defended, a greater influence would be preſerved by us over the neighbouring Powers, and we might poſſibly be relieved from the neceſſity of keeping up ſo large and expenſive a military eſtabliſhment as we have at preſent in Bengal.

48. We are not inſenſible of the difficulties which may oppoſe your negociations on this ſubject. Theſe, however, we perſuade ourſelves, may in time be overcome, by a proper attention on the part of our ſervants, and by their availing themſelves of the circumſtances which may occur, either in the ſituation, deſires, projects, temper, or wants of this Prince: and we recommend to you to lay hold of every opportunity which may offer for accompliſhing, by a friendly negociation, ſo deſirable an end.

49. There is another object of the moſt eſſential conſequence, which calls for the utmoſt exertion of your ability; we mean, the obtaining from Sujah ul Dowla the abſolute ceſſion to us of the fort of Chunargar.

50. As we have experienced the ſtrength of this fortreſs, and are ſenſible of the vaſt importance the poſſeſſion of it would be to the Company, you muſt uſe your utmoſt endeavours to acquire, by friendly means, what could not be retained without violence. We therefore enjoin you not to leave uneſſayed any effort which prudence can ſuggeſt, for obtaining from Sujah Dowlah the ceſſion of Chunargur fort: but as our view is to acquire it by treaty, not by force, and conſidering alſo the ſituation, power, and influence of this Subah, your negociations muſt be conducted with the greateſt caution and delicacy; and you muſt ſtrive, by every fair and honourable means, to ſtrengthen his friendſhip, and engage his confidence; nevertheleſs, you muſt not abate of your attention to all his motions, nor forego any opportunity to impreſs him with an opinion of our activity and power.

51. And here we take occaſion to obſerve, that ſhould we at any time obtain from him the ceſſion of this fortreſs, you muſt not fail to keep in it a ſtrong garriſon of Europeans, under the command of an able and experienced Officer; which ſuch poſſeſſion would enable you to do, ſince the ſecurity which our poſſeſſions would thereby receive, would admit of a reduction in our other garriſons.

APPENDIX. No 16.

APPENDIX, No. 16.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee of Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 31ſt December 1773.

Para. 2. UPON the retreat of the Marattas to the Decan, the territories which they had occupied naturally attracted the attention of the neighbouring Powers, and the Vizier among others turned his views towards this object. He communicated his deſigns of invading that Country to the Preſident, and expreſſed at the ſame time a deſire of being aſſiſted by your forces; but while this was in agitation, he ſuddenly changed his reſolution, and ſeemed determined to carry his arms againſt the Rohillas. The Vizier had long entertained deſigns againſt this tribe, whoſe Country lies contiguous to his own, and whoſe Chief, Hafez Rhamet, had refuſed to perform the conditions upon which he had obtained protection from the ravages of the Marattas during the laſt campaign. He had mentioned his intentions on this ſubject to the Preſident while he was at Benares, offering to pay 40 lacks of rupees to the Company for the aſſiſtance of their troops on the reduction of the Rohilla Country, beſides the monthly ſtipulation for the expences of the army. The Preſident at that time encouraged this propoſal; but the execution of it was afterwards, at the deſire of the Vizier himſelf, ſuſpended for a more favourable opportunity, when he might run leſs hazard of oppoſition, and be more at liberty to act with vigour. This opportunity ſeemed now to preſent itſelf; the late revolution among the Matattas afforded little probability of interruption from that quarter, and the Vizier having acquitted himſelf of his firſt engagement to the Company, by a payment made to Mr. Lambert, felt himſelf relieved from anxiety on that account, and more at liberty to enter into any new undertakings; at the ſame time that the treachery of the Rohillas furniſhed him with a pretence of proceeding to extremities with them. He accordingly renewed the propoſition, and applied for the aſſiſtance of your forces on the ſame conditions as before.

3. From the engagements which ſubſiſted between the Vizier and the Company, and the aſſurances given him by the Preſident at Benares on the firſt projection of this enterprize, we thought ourſelves not at liberty to reject it; we reſolved accordingly to comply with his requeſt; and having obtained the concurrence of the Board at large, and taken every precaution to bind the Vizier to the performance of his part of the agreement, in caſe the meaſure ſhould be adopted, we ſent orders for the march of the brigade at Dinapore to the Chief at Patna, in whoſe hands they are to remain till the Vizier ſhall require the brigade to join him. He has ſince however entered the Doaub, or the lands which lie between the rivers Jumna and Ganges, and is engaged in the reduction of the forts of the Country which are in the poſſeſſion of the Marattas. We ſhall be well pleaſed to find that he does not make uſe of the liberty we were under the neceſſity of granting him; for although we conſider every acceſſion of ſtrength to Suja Dowla as beneficial to the intereſts of our Employers, yet we adopt with diffidence any meaſure of ſuch conſequence, until we ſhall have received the orders and ſentiments of the Company.

4. And here we muſt beg leave to repeat our earneſt deſire, that you will be pleaſed to furniſh us with your explicit commands for our conduct, with reſpect to the Countries ſituated beyond the limits of theſe provinces, and thoſe of your ally; whether our future operations are to be invariably circumſcribed by thoſe bounds, or in what caſes you will approve and authorize our proceeding beyond them. You are well acquainted with the ſtate of the neighbouring Powers. Of theſe the Marattas only are formidable to your poſſeſſions. The reſt are weak, and (the Vizier alone excepted) every way inconſiderable; nor ſhould we regard the Marattas themſelves in a light of much more importance, were the force and connections of your three Preſidencies united under one active controul, which we do not heſitate to foretel will, whenever ſuch a plan ſhall take place, render you the ſovereign arbiters of Indoſtan, while the preſent ſyſtem continues.

We certainly labour under great diſadvantages with reſpect to the Marattas, ſince in every conteſt with them, they being neceſſarily the aggreſſors, and we acting only on the defenſive, it can never be in our power to hurt them effectually, nor even to act againſt them longer than they chuſe to ſtand in our way; but they, on the contrary, have it continually in their option to aſſail us at home, and by the immediate effect of their ravages, or by their alarms, diſturb the peace of our Country, and affect our Revenues, although we are ſufficiently able to defeat the moſt ſtrenuous efforts which they may at any time make againſt us.

5. Having thus expoſed the ſtate of your political intereſts, it might be deemed preſumptuous to anticipate the orders which you may be pleaſed to preſcribe for our future guidance in the ſupport of them. We confeſs that we ſhould enter on ſuch a ſubject with great diffidence, from the fear that what we might offer as matter of mere ſpeculation, might be conſtrued into an intention of regulating our conduct accordingly, nevertheleſs we venture to offer to your conſideration the meaſures which occur, as reſulting from this ſituation of things. Theſe may be reduced to the three following propoſitions:

1ſt. To unite the powers of the three Preſidencies into one manageable ſyſtem; an object which we ardently wiſh to ſee accompliſhed.

2d. To ſtrengthen the Vizier, by adding the territories of the Rohillas within the Ganges to his preſent dominions: and,

3d. To raiſe up a new power in the perſon of the King; which might either be employed in conjunction with the Vizier in oppoſing the Marattas, or, ſhould there ever be an occaſion for it, to ſerve as a counterpoiſe to the Vizier. It would always be eaſy for us to hold the ſcale between them.

6. For the firſt of theſe propoſitions, the advantages are ſo great and ſo obvious, that any arguments in ſupport of it would be ſuperfluous. The ſecond we ſhould much incline to adopt, for reaſons which you will find largely diſcuſſed on our Proceedings in this Department of the 19th and 26th ultimo. The third, however beneficial the iſſue of it might prove, is liable to ſo many uncertain events in the accompliſhment of it, would carry our arms to ſo great and indefinite a diſtance, and would involve us in ſo heavy an expence, until we could extract from it the means of reimburſement, that we barely offer it to your notice, but do not recommend it.

7. Upon the whole, whether it be your pleaſure that we ſhould implicitly adhere to the defenſive line hitherto preſcribed to us, or extend our views to bounds more remote, we earneſtly entreat that we may be furniſhed with ſuch clear and full inſtructions from you, as your wiſdom ſhall judge expedient to enable us to act with confidence and with vigour in the execution of every meaſure which may be preſented to us for the advancement of your intereſts, and in ſtrict conformity to your intentions.

APPENDIX, No. 17.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 1ſt March 1773.

Par. 8. YOU will be pleaſed to take notice of the many reſtrictions under which we have laid the General, as to the object and extent of his operations; cautious of giving the leaſt colour to the Marattas for charging us with being the aggreſſors in the war; and equally ſtudious of avoiding all engagements which might involve us in diſtant connections unneceſſary to the defence of your poſſeſſions.

10. We have not however neglected, in undertaking theſe meaſures, to ſtipulate for ſuch ſubſidiary payments as will defray all the extra expences incurred by them; and the precautions which we have taken to enſure the punctual diſcharge of them, will, we perſuade ourſelves, free us from any hazard of ſuffering by the charges of this expedition. As we have been peremptory in our declarations and orders on this ſubject, we mean moſt rigidly to abide by them.

11. We muſt however obſerve, that we have extended our orders in one inſtance beyond the abſolute line of defence of the Vizier's dominions; we refer to what we have inſtructed the General reſpecting the Country of Hafez Rhamut Cawn, a ſmall territory lying on the eaſtern ſide of the Ganges. Our reaſons however are obvious; by allowing the Marattas, to get a footing there, the frontier on that ſide having no natural boundary or defence, would be continually expoſed to their incurſions, as by excluding them from this ſpace, we form a complete field of operation, with the river for a barrier, difficult at all times for an enemy to paſs, and dangerous to them in their retreat.

12. Although every thing ſeems thus to point to immediate hoſtilities with the Maratta armies in theſe parts, in ſupport of our allies, yet we are ſtill perſuaded that a general and direct war with theſe people is not near. They muſt be ſenſible of the little they have to expect in attacking us, and alſo of the little inclination we have to diſturb them in their other operations, provided they keep clear of our frontiers. To have remained idle ſpectators while they were invading the dominions of the Powers with whom we were moſt intimately connected, would have made them look upon us as weak and inactive, and conſequently a fit ſubject of their attempts; but to ſhew ourſelves active and ſteady in ſupport of our friends, muſt impreſs them with an idea of our ſtrength and vigour, and deſtroy any hopes they might entertain of prevailing againſt us in our own territories. We look therefore on our preſent meaſures as the beſt means to prevent a general rupture with them; at all events, as we can never be abſolutely aſſured againſt the enterprizes of ſo capricious a people, if we have a war with them, it is better to meet them beyond the line of your own frontiers, ſupporting the Vizier, our beſt barrier, our expences paid, and in a manner defending ourſelves, rather than to confine ourſelves to our own poſſeſſions, and our own reſources.

13. You will alſo be pleaſed to obſerve, that in our plan of defending others, we have not omitted the immediate protection of our own provinces. We have given it in particular inſtruction to the General, to be watchful of the motions of the Marattas, ſhould they bend towards Babar, the only province open to their incurſions; and have directed the meaſures he is then to purſue: beſides, we have taken care, in the diſtribution of the force left in Bengal, to have a brigade ready at Patna, and to ſecure a ſpeedy junction of the other corps, in caſe of an alarm.

14. Such are the meaſures which on this occaſion we have thought fit to purſue; and we humbly ſubmit them to your wiſdom for an approval.

APPENDIX, No. 18.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee at Bengal; dated 31ſt March 1773.

Par. 5. THESE conſiderations, joined to the advance of the Maratta army, has induced the General, in concert with the Vizier, to paſs the boundary of his Country into that of Hafez Rhamet, conformably to his inſtructions; and he is now encamped nearly oppoſite to the Marrattas on the banks of the Ganges.

6. In his ſubſequent advices, he gives us information that the good effects of the ſtep he has taken were already apparent, as it had prevented the Marattas croſſing the river, forming a junction with the Rohillas, and laying waſte the Vizier's country. But that as he had not declared his intentions of defending the Corah province, he was in hopes they would advance with confidence and poſſeſs themſelves of it; an event of all others to be wiſhed for, as the only means within the limits of his inſtructions to relieve the perpetual anxiety of the Vizier, and prevent the annual demand of our aſſiſtance; and that otherwiſe he ſees no end of our ineffectual campaigns in that quarter.

7. The Vizier at the ſame time is extremely deſirous that ſome deciſive blow be ſtruck, to weaken the enormous power of the Marattas, and regards this to be a favourable criſis for that purpoſe. He ſays further, that the Company will derive great advantages, ſhould they permit their troops to accompany him to Delbi, or wherever he may find a neceſſity of leading them; ſince in that caſe he will take upon himſelf the payment of the brigade, and excuſe them the delivery of the King's tribute.

8. The General has thrown a battalion into the lines of Cawnpore, not only to render his own paſſage ſafe acroſs the river, ſhould he find a neceſſity for it, but alſo to hold a claim to the Corah province on the part of the Company; and we have poſitively directed him, ſhould the Vizier ſtill delay making over the aſſignment we have required, or ſome other equivalent for the ſums now due, and for the monthly payment of the extra charges of the brigade, to quit him with the brigade immediately, and make the defence of Corab his ſole object.

9. In all theſe tranſactions we have kept in view your orders reſpecting the interchange of Corab for Gazeypore, and all our negociations are concentering towards this point.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 16th Auguſt 1773.

2d. Our Letters of laſt ſeaſon were full and particular as to the motions and ſuppoſed deſigns of the Marattas; the part we had determined to take on the occaſion in ſupport of our ally the Vizier; and the inſtructions we had for this purpoſe given the General, when he proceeded to join the firſt brigade in Sujah Dowlah's dominions: according to the conjectures we then formed, the Marattas avoided a general action, and diſperſed on the approach of the Vizier with our troops.

3d. We at the ſame time informed you, that we had directed General Barker to receive poſſeſſion of the provinces of Corab and Allahabad from Munnier ul Dowla, Naib of the King, who had expreſſed his deſire to put theſe diſtricts under our protection; as the King his maſter, when defeated laſt year by the Marattas, had been compelled, whilſt a priſoner in their hands, to grant Sunnuds for the ſurrender thereof to them; but as the indiſpenſable occupations of the General called him to a diſtance, and engaged too much of his time to allow the attention requiſite to ſo material an object, the nature of which demanded the immediate ſuperintendance of a perſon well ſkilled in the buſineſs of the Revenues, we thought it eſſentially expedient, as well for preſerving the Company's influence and participation in the affairs of thoſe provinces, as for eſtabliſhing a right to the future diſpoſal of them in the moſt advantageous manner, whenever it might become a ſubject of negociation, to depute a Member of our Board to receive charge of the provinces of Corab and Allahabad from the General; and Mr. Lawrel was accordingly inveſted with the execution of this truſt, and inſtructions given him nearly ſimilar to thoſe of the General, which you have been furniſhed with in our Proceedings of the 17th February; adding, that although we took poſſeſſion of the Country as allies of the King, yet he was not to deliver it over to any Power whatever, not even to the King himſelf, without our expreſs orders: for we judged, that ſurrendering it to him in his preſent helpleſs ſtate would be in fact giving it up to the Marattas.

4th. The Vizier Sujah ul Dowlah about this time, in his Letters expreſſed the greateſt deſire to have an interview with the Governor; and as that circumſtance concurred with our wiſhes, for having many points of the greateſt conſequence adjuſted which could not well be effected without a perſonal conference, we acquieſced in opinion with the Select Committee, whoſe proceedings on this ſubject were laid before us, that ſuch an interview at this period might be attended with very beneficial conſequences to the Company's affairs.

The Honourable Warren Haſtings, Eſq.
Brigadier General Barker.

Three Letters from the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

Read tranſlations of the three following Letters from the Nabob Suja ul Dowla, encloſing Papers of Intelligence.

Ordered the Papers of Intelligence be entered after this day's proceeding.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla.

I have already written to you repeated Letters with intelligence from the capital, from which you have probably been particularly acquainted with the ſtate of affairs. Matters are now at the laſt extremity; the Marattas are victorious, and his Majeſty has conſented to give Sabiter Coun the Buxeyſhip and the other affairs of the Jauts, and to cede to them the Countries of Kora and Kurra, and every thing agreeable to their requeſts. I therefore write you, that now, my friend, you muſt on no account whatever be negligent in your planning and ſcheming for the affairs of this quarter, and be firm and ſtaunch to the buſineſs. Now that the King has given Corab and Kurra to the Marattas, and they are on every account become victorious, I likewiſe will take my meaſures as I ſhall think beſt, and I am prepared to oppoſe and repel my enemy: but ſend General Barker to me with ſpeed and expedition, for it is neceſſary; and if you have any ſcruples in ſending the General with the command, it is requiſite that you on no account entertain any difficulties thereon, and giving two or three Members of the Council with the General, you diſpatch him hence. This likewiſe was formerly the caſe, that the Council came with him; ſend him therefore in company with the Council, for the General's coming is very proper, and the greateſt advantages are centered therein. I have before written you particularly. You will not remain inattentive in forming your plan of operations for this quarter, and be careful and mindful of yourſelf, for the time of action is at hand, and I, by the bleſſing of God, am prepared, and will in every manner endeavour in oppoſing my enemies. I have written all the circumſtances for your information, and encloſe you a Paper of Intelligence.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla.

I have before written you, and I now encloſe you the Papers of Intelligence which have arrived from the capital. There is now an engagement between his Majeſty and the Marattas; you will accordingly learn the particulars from the encloſed advices. Your friend will now ſet out in company with the Engliſh forces, and remain prepared upon his confines for their ſecurity and defence, that he may oppoſe any enemies who may have an intention on this quarter; but from my foreſight my mind is in anxiety and uneaſineſs; for if the Marattas become victorious, and they bring his Majeſty to another condition, you muſt then reflect in what ſituation are you and I, my friend, and that there is room for perplexity and diſtreſs to every one. You, my friend, will not now remain negligent to this quarter, and in forming your plans accordingly. Affairs now carry with them a different aſpect, and you muſt conſider this with much attention and circumſpection, and that whenever the enemies of his Majeſty have conquered him, you muſt then certainly underſtand that they will entertain an intention on this quarter. My Country is in reality the door of Bengal, and I am what you may call the barrier to that Country; it is therefore abſolutely neceſſary that you remain careful and attentive to yourſelf, and in forming your plans for this quarter, and the ſending General Barker is in the higheſt degree proper and adviſable. You, my friend, are not acquainted with the advantages that are derived from the preſence of the General; but know for certain, that his being here is productive of the greateſt benefits; it is likewiſe very beneficial for the affairs of the Engliſh Company, as well as good for my concerns. It is therefore beſt that you diſpatch the General here with all expedition. You wrote me that you was with life and ſoul intent on the performance (as well in trifles as in matters of importance) of the affairs of your friend, and that you were deſirous of the benefits and advantages of his concerns: I have therefore written you particularly, that you muſt not now be negligent to the affairs of this quarter; and you muſt abſolutely ſend the General, for my pleaſure is centered therein. The time of action is now at hand. Other intelligence from the capital, which arrives with me morning and evening, I ſhall tranſmit for my friend's information.

A true tranſlation.

Perſian Tranſlator.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla.

I have before this ſent you two Letters, with Papers of Intelligence, which has probably arrived. The further accounts which have arrived at this time, I have alſo ſent you. You will be fully acquainted with the ſituation of things. From theſe accounts it appears, that his Majeſty's affairs are at an end. At all events, I am ready and prepared for oppoſition; nor will I, by the bleſſing of God, be deficient; if my friend alſo ſhould be inclined to thoſe meaſures, it may be happily executed. You muſt reflect, that the ſuperiority gained by the Marattas over his Majeſty has many evil conſequences, that they will form an attempt on me and you. In this there is not the leaſt doubt. By the bleſſing of God, my friend has experience, forethought, and underſtanding; upon mature reflection you muſt conſider, that whenever the Marattas have got the King into their own hands, they will, taking him along with them, make an attempt upon me and you; their ſtrength and power will then be increaſed; creaſed; as affairs will then be at the extremity, and the opportunity loſt, to oppoſe them will be attended with difficulty. I myſelf am a ſoldier, and the Engliſh Sardars, in the ſame manner, are ſoldiers; whatever can be done by me, by the bleſſing of God, in conjunction with the Engliſh troops, who are joined and united with me, I am ready and prepared to oppoſe and puniſh the enemy; nor am I under the leaſt uneaſineſs or apprehenſion. All this that has been wrote, does not proceed from an apprehenſion of danger or anxiety, but merely from a principle of caution and forethought, that I have wrote it. By the favour of God, the Engliſh Sardars alſo ſtand the foremoſt in knowledge and experience. You alſo will not be inattentive to the means and meaſures neceſſary on this occaſion, but with expedition form ſome regular and ſubſtantial plan. To me it appears adviſable, that you ſend General Barker to me with ſpeed and expedition, and that you, with the camp, come and continue at Patna, and another brigade be prepared and ready to join me in caſe of neceſſity. By the aſſiſtance and power of the Almighty, your friend, with the Engliſh forces, is ready to oppoſe and puniſh the enemy, and will effectually oppoſe them. Now, my friend, the time for action is arrived, I have therefore wrote you fully on the ſubject: whatever may be your ſentiments, deſires, and intentions, you muſt let me know with ſpeed, nor muſt you be inattentive to the neceſſary meaſures, but quickly determine on them, and ſend the General to me with ſpeed and expedition. What can I write more? you yourſelf have judgment and forethought.

Reſolution of the Committee.

Notwithſtanding the alarms of the Vizier, expreſſed in the foregoing Letters, it does not clearly appear that the Marattas have acquired any acceſſion of power, or that this revolution is likely to affect the intereſts of the Vizier; ſince, whatever influence they derive from the ſanction of the King's name, when he was even with you and independent, every advantage of that kind muſt be either loſt or very much diminiſhed by their late rupture with him, by their having violently poſſeſſed themſelves of his perſon, and their uſurpation of his dominions. It is true, that by the poſſeſſion of the provinces of Corah and Currah, they are become the immediate neighbours of the Vizier; but if we conſider the King and the Marattas acting conjunctively as one party, they had in fact the ſame poſſeſſion of Corah, and were as much in the vicinity of the Vizier's dominions antecedent to their rupture with his Majeſty, and could, with the greater facility, have invaded the province acroſs the Ganges, which alone ſeparated them from the Vizier, had ſuch been their intention, becauſe the tenderneſs and delicacy which has ever been obſerved both by us and our ally towards his Majeſty, would have prevented our purſuing the ſame ſteps to oppoſe them, until they had openly declared themſelves. It does not therefore appear, upon a ſpeculative conſideration of the argument before us, on what the Vizier grounds his apprehenſions. As it is incumbent on us, however, to weigh well every probable iſſue of this event, we will venture, aſſiſted by the General's knowledge of affairs in thoſe parts, to conſider the ſubject in every point of view.

We will ſuppoſe (which indeed is moſt likely) that the Marattas will immediately poſſeſs, or attempt to poſſeſs themſelves of the province of Corah, and the other lands ceded to them by the King, and that they may be tempted likewiſe to invade the Vizier's territory; in ſuch caſe, it is probable their new ally, Zabiter Cawn, will be immediately diſpatched to his own dominions to unite himſelf with Hafiz Khamet, and the other Rohillas, and with them, and from that quarter, make their incurſions, while the Marattas enter it to the Southward. It is however ſtill more probable, that the Rohilla Chiefs, who have ſought their preſent ſafety in a treacherous alliance, to which neceſſity compelled them, with the Marattas, will, from the ſame principle, abandon, their cauſe, or employ the confidence repoſed in them to re-eſtabliſh their own independence, rather than contribute to the aggrandizement of a power which in the end muſt overwhelm them. The attempt, ſuppoſing every circumſtance to favour it, can hardly take place this ſeaſon, ſince they will require ſome time in ſettling Tbutyebanabad, and of poſſeſſing themſelves of the ceded provinces, before they can paſs the Ganges; neither will this river be fordable earlier than the end of February, from which period there will remain only four months to the ſetting in of the rains. There is at this time one complete brigade in the province of Oude, and another at Patna, in readineſs to join them ſhould it be required, which is ſurely not probable, ſince three battalions of Sepoys, with the preſence of the General, were found fully ſufficient to reſtrain the Marattas from entering Sujah Dowla's provinces, when flushed with the moſt rapid unexpected victories, if they really entertained ſuch an intention.

APPENDIX. No. 18.

Opinion with reſpect to the Vizier.

On theſe grounds then we are clearly of opinion, that the Vizier's dominions are liable to little preſent hazard from the Marattas; that they will not attempt the invaſion of them, nor, if they ſhould, is there much fear of their ſucceeding. We think it however a very fortunate circumſtance, that the Board formed the reſolution of marching the firſt brigade into that quarter; for had that province been left deſtitute, as it would have been in effect guarded ſolely by the Vizier's forces, they might have been tempted to form ſuch a deſign with great colour of ſucceſs. All then that appears neceſſary to be immediately undertaken for the protection of that Country, is to leave matters exactly in the ſame ſtate in which they at preſent ſtand.

With reſpect to his Majeſty Shaw Allum.

Thus far we have conſidered the ſubject as it reſpects our alliance with the Vizier alone. It remains to be determined how far our engagements with the King will influence us to ſupport them in the right of thoſe poſſeſſions we know to have been exacted from him. It is poſſible he may ſolicit our aid: and, in point of right, we ſhould certainly be juſtified in affording it to him, ſince no act of his could be deemed valid in his preſent ſituation, and whilſt he continues a mere paſſive inſtrument in the hands of the Marattas; but whether it would be political to interfere, or whether, at this time eſpecially, it would be expedient, muſt continue a doubt with us. We have agreed, that the utmoſt which the Marattas can do this ſeaſon, will be to poſſeſs themſelves of Corah. They will be there full as vulnerable the next year as the preſent one. It is far from improbable, that the Marattas themſelves, within that period, may be diverted to other objects, by the demiſe of their late Chief Mada Row, and the ſucceſſion of Narrain Row, who may (as was the caſe with his brother) meet with competitors in his own family before he is thoroughly eſtabliſhed. On this ſubject however it may not be prudent to form any precipitate reſolution; we therefore ſuſpend the conſideration of the propriety of entering into the defence of the Corah province, until we are directed by clearer lights.

Immediate Meaſures to be taken.

In the meantime, as the fortreſs of Allahabad is ſituated on that ſide of the river, and is the only place there belonging to the Vizier, and a poſt of great conſequence; it is reſolved, that if he deſires it, we will garriſon it with a part of the firſt brigade, and take immediate ſteps for putting it in a poſture of defence; this we think not only due to the Nabob, but a neceſſary meaſure in inſuring us a footing on that ſide of the river, whatever our future determinations may be reſpecting the reſt of the Country.

Stores to be provided for the Service of the Garriſon, agreeably to the detail given by the General.

Reſolved, that the following detail of ſtores delivered in by the General, be provided and forwarded without delay, for the ſervice of that garriſon. There is no doubt of the Vizier's ſoliciting this aſſiſtance; ſhould he not, theſe ſtores may be appropriated to the uſe of our own own troops; but that the moſt expreſs and peremptory orders be given not to exceed the bounds of that frontier, or attempt any thing offenſively, whatever the provocation, againſt the Marattas.

The Preſident to write to the Vizier: alſo a Letter to Colonel Champion.

Agreed, that the Preſident addreſs the Vizier, informing him of the above intentions ſo far as they reſpect him, and that a Letter be written to Colonel Champion, containing the ſubject of the preceding reſolution.

Detail of Stores given in by the General.

It will be requiſite that orders be ſent to Colonel Champion to march one battalion of Sepoys, with a detachment of artillery, conſiſting of one ſubaltern officer and 20 men, including non-commiſſioned officers, and 40 Laſcars, two ſix pounders and a howitzer, with their proportion of ammunition, to the garriſon of Allahabad; and that Colonel Wilding be ordered to embark for tranſportation to that garriſon with all expedition, the five iron four-pounders, on garriſon carriages, with all the round and grape ſhot belonging to thoſe guns, 100 barrels of looſe powder, and 100 barrels of muſquet ammunition; 250 ſtands of ſpare arms, 20,000 muſquet flints, all the howitzer ſhells, with their fuzees, &c. and that the Commiſſary be directed to ſend up a ſuitable proportion of ſmall ſtores for this ordnance.

But as the Vizier has a conſiderable number of both heavy and light cannon, with a large quantity of powder and ball, I ſhould recommend that he be deſired to ſend cannon and ammunition to that garriſon, in which caſe it will be unneceſſary to remove the guns and cannon ammunition from Chunar Gur. But at any rate the muſquet ammunition, flints, ſpare arms, and howitzer ſhells, ſhould be ſent; his Excellency ſhould be deſired to ſend in ſpades, pickaxes, mamonties, &c. with gunnery bags, and proviſions for 4,000 men for three months. This appears to be all that is immediately neceſſary for the defence of Allahabad, ſince the forces will be able to raiſe the ſiege of that place, long before they can have expended ſuch a quantity of proviſions; but a ſupply of ammunition and ſtores muſt be ſent from the grand magazine at Patna to refurniſh the garriſon of Chunar Gur, as well alſo from the Preſidency, to ſupply the grand magazine; the indent for which, the General will lay before the Committee as ſoon as it is prepared.

Whatever battalions of Sepoys the Vizier may think proper to join in forming the garriſon of Allahabad, a proportion of ammunition ſhould be ſent with them from his magazines, ſince the above is only calculated for the Engliſh troops; and Colonel Champion ſhould confer with his Excellency on the number of troops and quantity of ammunition, which it will be neceſſary for him to ſupply for the defence of that garriſon.

To Colonel Champion, commanding the firſt brigade.

Sir,

Letter to Col. Champion.

As our late intelligence of the overthrow of the King's troops by the Marattas, and of their having exacted from him the ceſſion of the provinces of Corah and Currah, renders it probable they will extend their views to the poſſeſſion of the fort of Allahabad; you will be pleaſed, after having conſulted with the Vizier on the ſubject, and he appears deſirous of it, to march one battalion of Sepoys with a detachment of artillery, conſiſting of one ſubaltern officer, twenty men, including non-commiſſioned officers, and forty Laſcars, two ſix-pounders and a howitzer, with their proportion of ammunition, to that garriſon; you will likewiſe confer with his Excellency on the number of artificers and military ſtores neceſſary to be provided, with the quantity of proviſion, which may be required for the ſupport of the garriſon, until the ſeaſon of action is expired; and on the proportion of his own forces, guns, ammunition, &c. he may judge requiſite to ſend with your troops for the defence of the fort.

At the ſame time we direct you to give the moſt expreſs and peremptory orders to the officer who may command this garriſon, not to exceed, on any account, the limits of his ſtation, or attempt any thing offenſively againſt the Marattas, whatever may be the incitement or provocation.

We are, Sir,
Your obedient ſervants.

Read, three Letters from Gabriel Harper, under dates the 2d, 6th, and 25th of December 1772.

Ordered, they be entered after this Proceeding.

Reſolved, that this day's Proceedings be ſubmitted to the Council, in their Secret Department.

It appears from all the Papers of Intelligence encloſed in the preceding Letter from the Vizier, from the camps of his Majeſty, and the reſpective Maratta Sardars, that on the 22d Rumzane, the diviſion of Biſagee, amounting to 15,000 men, marched to Secoy of Arub, about four coſs from the capital; Tookojee with his diviſion, and Sabiter Cawn, amounting in all to about 20,000 horſe, marched along the banks of the Jumna, to oppoſe the troops of his Majeſty under the command of Nudjif Cawn, Biſagee himſelf being oppoſed to Monſieur Madox, with the two Engliſh diſciplined battalions, and his Majeſty's other regular troops; and that the action was general, and laſted till about four o'clock in the afternoon, when the Marattas made a general charge; after a ſevere ſtruggle, his Majeſty's troops were obliged to give way; nevertheleſs, they retreated regularly, and diſputed the ground as they retreated. Eleven pieces of artillery and five elephants, with a large number of horſes and camels, were taken by the Marattas. The action was bloody on both ſides. Side Mahomed Bulloach, a conſiderable Riſala Dar on the part of his Majeſty, was killed, and ſeveral Jemmadars of note on the ſide of the Marattas; between three or four thouſand men on both ſides, are ſuppoſed to have fallen in this day's action. The tents of Nudjif Cawn and Monſieur Madox fell into the hands of the Marattas; at length, the troops were actually routed, and Nudjif Cawn, who put great reliance in his Moguls, is much aſhamed of their conduct on the occaſion, and was obliged to take refuge under the conduct of Madox's battalions, when they jointly retreated, and continued to oppoſe the Marattas till the cloſe of the evening. It is reported that Nudjif Cawn is wounded. One or two detachments of the Marattas made their way into the city, and plundered great part of it, which obliged the inhabitants to fly for ſhelter into the King's fort. Excepting Monſieur Madox, with the two diſciplined battalions, and Nudjif Cawn, with a handful of his choſen men, all his Majeſty's forces were entirely routed; but they continued reſolutely to defend themſelves under the walls of the fort till eight o'clock at night, when they retired.

From intelligence received, under date 24th Ruzani, it appears that his Majeſty wrote to the Marattas, acquainting them, that he would comply with all their demands; and ſent Huſſain ut Dine Cawn to them for that purpoſe. Other advices of this date add, that affairs are on the point of being concluded, by his Majeſty's having agreed to give up Corah and Kurrah, and Saharanpoor to the Marattas; to appoint Sabiter Cawn Buxey, to relinquiſh the territories of the Jauts, which his Majeſty had conquered; and, in ſhort, to comply with all the demands which they may now or hereafter make.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor of Fort William, &c. &c. &c. and to the Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

In my laſt addreſs I had the honour to acquaint you, that the Marattas had marched towards Delhi. By accounts accounts that I have juſt received, they were arrived at Duncore Gaut on the Jumna, which is nine coſs from the capital. Byſagee by Arzus to the King, is endeavouring to lull him into ſecurity, and a belief of their good intentions; but his Majeſty ſeems to have a perfect knowledge of what they mean to do, and appears reſolutely bent to oppoſe their attempts in favour of Zabita Cawn; for this purpoſe (as he concludes they will not reſtrain from force to accompliſh their deſigns) he is taking every meaſure to ſtrengthen himſelf in Delhi, has recalled all the troops from different parts, mounted a number of guns, and aſſigned the poſts to be occupied by the different bodies of troops.

Inate Ulla Cawn a few days ago marched from Burati with the troops he had collected, to oblige his father to agree to his demands; he was followed by Hafez Rhamet Cawn, with all his forces, a part of which he detached againſt his ſon four days ago; Inate Ulla Cawn did not decline the battle, and very ſoon defeated the Chiefs ſent againſt him, and obliged them to retreat to the main body; the day following, Hafez Rhamet, with all the army, marched, and Inate Cawn waited for them, being encouraged from his ſucceſs the preceding day, to hope to defeat his father alſo; but when the armies were on the point of engaging, ſome Chiefs of each party interpoſed, and brought about a reconciliation; and Inate Cawn is now with his father, who has promiſed him every thing he can in reaſon require.

The Vizier is now conſtantly at his camp, five coſs from hence, diſciplining his troops, and preparing for the field; and the fortifications at this place are going on with great alacrity.

I have the honour to ſubſcribe myſelf,
with the greateſt reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Fayzabad, Your moſt obedient humble ſervant, 2d December, 1772. Gabriel Harper.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor of Fort William, &c. &c. &c. and to the Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I had the honour to addreſs you on the 2d inſtant; and am now to acquaint you, that part of the forces of Byſagee and Tootogee have croſſed the Jumna, and are making great ravages in the neighbourhood of Delhi; his Majeſty continues reſolute to oppoſe their meaſures in favour of Zabita Cawn, and has publicly declared his intentions of fighting the Marattas, ſhould they perſiſt in their unreaſonable demands.

Inate Ulla Cawn, after defeating the troops ſent againſt him by Hafez Rhamet, and being reconciled, as I had the honour to acquaint you in my laſt, has again quarrelled with his father, and with his troops is retiring from the Rohilla Country; it is not certain whither he intends to go, but I think it moſt likely he will come to the Vizier, who I imagine will be happy at ſuch an opportunity of encreaſing his animoſity already exiſting between himſelf and Hafez Rhamet Cawn.

I have the honour to ſubſcribe myſelf,
with the higheſt reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Your moſt obedient and
Fayzabad, moſt humble ſervant,

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, &c. Preſident and Governor of Fort William, &c. &c. &c. and to the Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

The ſucceſs of the Marattas againſt the King's forces on the 18th and 19th inſtant, the particulars of which have been ſent to the Governor by the Vizier, has reduced his Majeſty to the unhappy neceſſity of agreeing to the demands of the enemy; which are ſo exorbitant, that they will leave his Majeſty ſcarcely any thing. The provinces of Cora and Allahabad for themſelves; the poſt of Buxey, with all the territory dependent on it, for Zabita Cawn, are the principals. They require him to give up all the lands he has taken from the Jauts, to pay them the balance of the ſums he promiſed on his firſt going to them, and to remain conſtantly in their protection. The Vizier, who I believe always intended to get ſuch a body of troops to the King's aſſiſtance on the Engliſh troops coming into the Subah of Oude, has now given up all thoughts of the kind, and ſeems only ſolicitous for the ſafety of his Country: for this purpoſe he intends to proceed with the firſt brigade and his own army to the moſt eligible place near his frontiers, to oppoſe any attempts of the enemy. APPENDIX. No. 18.

From the ſucceſs the Marattas have had in every thing they have undertaken, they will probably be bold enough to march immediately into the province of Corah and Allahabad; and this, if any thing, will induce the Vizier to croſs the Ganges; for it ſeems always to have been his intention to attempt the defence of thoſe Countries, as he in ſome meaſure looked on them united to his own, and had formed hopes of obtaining them from the King.

The death of Mhadarow, with the ſucceſſion of Narrain Row, are confirmed beyond all doubts.

I have the honour to ſubſcribe myſelf,
with reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Your moſt obedient and
Fayzabad, moſt humble ſervant,

Read, two Letters from General Barker, dated the 6th and 12th inſtant, encloſing tranſlation of a Shocca from the King to the General; received 7th March. Two Letters from General Sir R bert Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Yeſterday I arrived at his Excellency's encampment at Ghouni, between the rivers Gurrah and Gumbary; and this morning I had a viſit from him.—He informs me the Marattas ſtill continue at Ramgaut. They have detached Zabita Cawn to Hafez Rhamet, with hopes of prevailing on him to join their arms; and are ſending threats to the Pattan Chief, Muzzaffa Jung, ſon to the late Ahmud Cawn, at Furruckabad; who, however, has agreed with the Vizier to withhold himſelf from their invitation, provided his Excellency will aſſiſt him in the defence of the place. In conſequence of this the Vizier has ſent over two thouſand infantry, to take poſſeſſion of the head of the bridge of boats thrown over the Ganges near Furruckabad.

The Marattas have ſent Acber Ally Cawn to inform his Excellency, that his Majeſty, having conferred the provinces of Corab and Kurrab on them, it is their intention to take poſſeſſion of thoſe countries; and they have therefore given him this early notice, that in caſe he has any troops on that ſide, they may be removed.—Upon the Preſident's information to the Vizier, of my being ordered to join the army, he ſuſpended the tranſaction of every kind of buſineſs until my arrival, and now appears deſirous of conducting himſelf as may be moſt agreeable to the advice and council of the Adminiſtration at Calcutta.

This conduct of the Vizier has thrown every thing in ſuſpence. Hafez Rhamet waits to ſee the effects of my arrival, charged, as he ſuppoſes I am, with the reſolution tion of the Board; Muzzatta Jung, until he can discover how the Nabob is disposed to assist him; and the Marattas, in expectation of the juncture of these powers. It is necessary therefore that something should be done. To remain inactive at a time when the expectation of the whole are at the highest pitch, will be to lose the opportunity of making that impression on their present undetermined state that might turn to our advantage, particularly as we are just now in the same situation as when the Marattas last season defeated and ravaged the Country of Zabita Cawn. Hafez Rhamet therefore cannot flatter himself with security, while we remain within the former prescribed line, until he is divested of these apprehensions, by our actual march across it; and we are in hopes that this movement will cause a decision in our favour. Hafez will probably refuse the invitation of the Marattas; it is possible Zabita Cawn will not return to them; and Muzzatta Jung will resolve to defend Furruckabad. Considering all these matters, together with the advice and request of the Vizier, I have come to a resolution of crossing the boundaries of his Excellency's dominions, and hope it will meet with your approbation.

In consequence of the troops having marched to such a distance from the Corah province, I have judged it necessary to order the 13th battalion at Chunar Gur into the lines at Cawnpore, not only to secure our passage across the Ganges, but to hold a claim and possession of that province in the Company's name, until I shall receive your instructions in what manner it is to be disposed of; and I hope you will judge it expedient to transmit them as soon as possible, or at least as soon as it is determined whether these provinces are to belong to the Marattas or the Company. His Excellency has eight thousand men at Cawnpore, Moneer ul Dowlah, four: now there is no danger of those lines being forced before the troops could arrive there; and as to their entering the province, it would probably reduce them to the very thing we wish for, a battle; since they could not, with any sort of reputation, desert their new acquisition without risking one blow, or making some effort to maintain their possessions.

Yacoot Cawn, Vackeel from the King, has brought kelaats or dresses for the Vizier and myself; but his embassy is purposely intended to convey a secret Letter from the King to me, under a private seal, the impression of which he gave me at his departure from the Corah province; a translate of this Letter shall be sent to-morrow.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
humble servant;

Letter from the General.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

This morning Captain Cockerell joined the army, and by him I received your Letter of Instructions, under date the 19th of February, which you may be assured it shall be my utmost endeavours to act conformable to.

Since my last address the army has made two marches, which has brought us two cos within the district of Hafez Rhamet Cawn, and I shall continue to proceed to the most convenient spot on the banks of the Ganges opposite to Ramgaut, where the Maratta army still remain encamped. Hafez Rhamet has made a march from Oundlah to meet and join the detachment of their forces, which they have given out is to cross the river by a bridge of boats, now preparing for the purpose under the command of Fuesgee Nulha. Notwithstanding this advancement of our troops, Moneer ul Dowlah was on the point of setting out for Cawnpore, agreeable to the tenor of my address, to have taken possession of those provinces in right of the Honourable Company, as their Naib; but the arrival of your instructions has occasioned this to be altered, and he now proceeds as his Majesty's Naib; and the detachment of Sepoys I had ordered for the defence of the lines, will continue in the same manner I before designed. The information you have desired relative to those provinces, shall be observed and forwarded with the utmost dispatch.

I could wish you had not so strictly circumscribed my operations to the Northward of the Ganges, as I am persuaded you would have had no reason to complain of an infringement, if you had granted a greater limitation to the Southward, and you would put it in my power to have harassed the Maratta arms with greater success; since, if they should make an attack on the frontiers of Corah, my being enabled to have crossed the Ganges at Furruckabad, and so fallen on their rear or heavy division of their army, might have proved of the greatest benefit. Permit me to recommend this matter to your consideration.

Mahajee Syndiah, who had marched towards the Decan, and had reached Jypoor, has received orders to join their main body.

I am,
Gentlemen,
with respect,
Your most obedient
humble servant,
R^t Barker.

Shocca from the King to General Sir Robert Barker.

Translate of a Shocca from the King to General Sir Robert Barker, in his own hand.

Our situation, and the situation of Shajyahanabad, must be known to you from report. We did not pay attention to your advice, and we have seen the consequences. We are now fallen alone into the hands of the Marattas. At this time it is necessary to confirm a peace with the Maratta Sardars, and give them admission into Corah and Kurrah, on condition that they return home; after they shall have retired you will receive us. When we ourselves, and the whole royal family shall have joined you, whatever may be advisable may with ease be carried into execution. If in case of a war, which God forbid, they should become superior, all those Countries will be ruined; if on the contrary they should be defeated they will fly from thence to the capital, and proceed upon a new plan; that is, they will send for Gazyodin Cawn, who they give out is approaching; they will cause the Vizeret to be conferred on him; they will collect a fresh army, and carry their intentions into execution. It is therefore advisable, by friendly means, to send them home. When we and you shall be together, whatever may be necessary to be done will with ease be carried into execution. If you are at all events determined on a war, in that case also a different plan must be formed; that is, you must by some means draw them to a greater distance from Shajehanabad, and then commence the war, and send a brigade, a battalion of Europeans, some battalions, and a body of cavalry, from the Vizier, under an experienced Chief, with necessaries for the journey, and a sum for our expences to the presence, as there are no kind of necessaries here, and nothing can be done without money. This you must send, that immediately on hearing their defeat we may with this force proceed to join you;—moreover, you must send an ample sum of money, five or six lacks of rupees, that we may be supplied with necessaries, and not distressed on the road.

Letter from the Vizier to the President.

Read, a Letter from the Vizier to the President, received the 24th March.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

After expressing his desire of an interview with Mr. Hastings, he proceeds: the friendship and regard that subsist ſubſiſt between us, require no comment. By God's bleſſing, they will receive daily increaſing ſtrength; and the obſervance thereof, as was neceſſary and proper, has, on both ſides been brought to paſs, and I am ſenſible that it will ever continue to be our mutual ſentiments. I am exceſſively thankful and pleaſed with the friendſhip which you have performed, and may the Almighty preſerve you for all this goodneſs; for the reſt, I write you a few circumſtances which proceed from my penetration and foreſight. By God's bleſſing, in theſe days you, my friend, are likewiſe endowed with wiſdom, and you will reflect on them maturely and conſiderately; it is apparent that the Marattas are adventurers from the boundaries of iſlands and ports, and the Decan, to the country of Hindoſtan, and are ever planning and engaged in the conquering of Countries; that they poſſeſs not the quality of moderation; and this following is what they ſeek for, and the ideas that they entertain, "We muſt get ſuch a "Country in our poſſeſſion, we muſt advance forward, "and make greater acquiſitions and conqueſts." It therefore occurs to me, that hereafter a footing of cordiality will not ſubſiſt between the Marattas and the Engliſh Sardars; and you muſt certainly believe that they entertain a warlike intention, and from the depravity of their race, and their deſire of ſubduing Countries, will commit acts of hoſtility; it therefore appears to me, that there cannot be a better time for oppoſing them than the preſent, for by God's bleſſing the Engliſh forces and your friends are ſufficient to counteract them, and there is no one in Hindoſtan who is able to cope with us; retaining therefore in view, the aſſiſtance of the Almighty, I am ſenſible that the purpoſe of my heart will be effected, and in the performance of it I have conſidered the advantage of the Company, and the good name and reputation of the Engliſh Sardars. It is this; there is a Treaty ſubſiſting between me and the Engliſh Sardars, that I ſhould pay the Batta of ſuch troops who ſhould come for my aſſiſtance and ſupport; I am now reſolved, that if the Engliſh Sardars, bracing up the girdle of reſolution, will be firm in oppoſing the Marattas, I will pay the brigade that is with me, and diſcharge the whole of it myſelf; if when I entertain an intention of going to Delhi it accompanies me, I paying the amount of their wages; and I will clear the account of the Bengal tribute, which the Company pay annually to his Majeſty, and take theſe matters upon myſelf, and there will never be any variation therein. My friend, you are poſſeſſed of wiſdom and penetration, and well underſtand the iſſue of future events. In this matter there is no loſs or calamity whatever; it is as well advantageous now as hereafter, and may be productive of the moſt beneficial conſequences to the Engliſh Company; and you muſt certainly believe that in ſix months or a year, terms of amity will not ſubſiſt between the Marattas and the Engliſh Sardars, and they, from the character they bear to lay waſte the whole world, will commence improper acts of hoſtility; at that time it will be abſolutely neceſſary for the Engliſh to oppoſe them, and then this advantage which I have repreſented, cannot be obtained. Where is the neceſſity of giving them leiſure to collect ſtrength, and letting the advantage ſlip through your fingers? It is a ſaying of the anticnts, "that the ſource of a ſpring may be choaked "by a ſingle clod, but let it flow on and you will not "croſs it with an elephant." It is adviſable not to poſtpone till to-morrow what can be done to-day; and why ſhould you make a difficulty of what can be performed with eaſe and facility? It appears to me that this is the time of operation, and that ſuch an opportunity will not again happen, for I flatter myſelf, and indeed am certain, that affairs will be ſettled agreeable to our wiſhes, and all matters take a favourable turn, and be the ſource of advantage to the Engliſh Company; for I take upon myſelf the payment of the whole brigade, and excuſing them the delivery of the Bengal tribute to the King. Do you, my friend, attentively conſider this, and ſend me a proper anſwer to this with expedition; and give orders that a brigade of Engliſh troops, being united with me, exert themſelves in oppoſing and puniſhing the Marattas; and that they accompany me to Delhi, or any other place that I may have formed an intention of going to. By God's bleſſing every thing will be well. I have the utmoſt confidence and greateſt reliance on your friendſhip, and in this affair which I have ſolicited, may be the advantage of the Engliſh Company, the end of all quarrels and diſturbances, their good name and reputation: and this does not appear to me any loſs or diſadvantage whatever; and it is on every account beſt and adviſable, and the cauſe of the pleaſure and ſatisfaction of your friend. My writing proceeds from my advice. You, my friend, will likewiſe reflect upon the matter; and Colonel Champion will write the reſt.

The Deliberations of the Committee.

From the above advices the following appears to be the ſtate of affairs in that quarter. The General and the Vizier have croſſed the boundary of the Vizier's Country, and are encamped near the Marattas on the oppoſite ſide of the river; that Zabita Cawn had been deputed from the Marattas and Hafez Rhamet to perſuade him to join them, and that he had accordingly marched from Oundlah, the place of rendezvous for the Rohilla forces, to meet a body of their troops who were to croſs the river by a bridge of boats, notwithſtanding the advance of our army; yet it is ſuppoſed he does not entertain any deſign to unite himſelf with the Marattas, it being cuſtomary for that Chief to treat with both parties and adhere to neither:

That Muzzatta Jung, who by the death of his father Aneed Cawn, holds poſſeſſion of Furruckabad, had thrown himſelf into the Vizier's protection, and that the Nabob had actually ſent 2,000 of his infantry to aſſiſt him in the defence of his city:

That the Marattas have formally declared their intentions of poſſeſſing themſelves of Corah and Kurrah, conformably to the grants of the King, and have required the Vizier to withdraw his troops from thoſe provinces —That the Vizier had awaited the General's arrival, and by this means thrown every thing into a ſtate of ſuſpence—Hafez Rhamet is in expectation of the reſult of the Vizier's councils before he declares himſelf—Muzzatta Jung, until he can diſcover how far the Nabob is determined to aſſiſt him and the Marattas, regards the junction of thoſe powers as a meaſure unavoidable.—The General is of opinion that ſomething ſhould be done at this criſis, to make an impreſſion on their undetermined ſtate, which might turn to our advantage; that as the allies are at preſent ſituated and confined to a certain preſcribed line, the Rohillas cannot look for any ſecurity, and that our paſſing it at this juncture might be productive of a very favourable diverſion, for Hafez Rhamet would probably refuſe the invitation of the Marattas; Zabita Cawn might ſeize this occaſion of aſſerting his independence, and Muzzutta Jung would continue firm in his reſolution of defending Furruckabad, and that the General has been induced by theſe conſiderations to paſs the boundary of the Vizier's dominions; that he had likewiſe ordered the 13th battalion into the lines of Cawnpore, not only to ſecure a paſſage acroſs the Ganges, but to hold a claim and poſſeſſion of the Corah province on the part of the Company; that the Vizier appeared entirely ſatisfied with our intentions of holding this Country, until it ſhall be determined in what manner it is to be diſpoſed of, and thinks that the General ſhould direct Meuire ul Dowlah to continue the management of it in the name of the Company—That the good effects of the ſtep the General had taken in paſſing the bounds of the Vizier's dominions are already apparent, ſince it has been the means of preventing the Marattas from croſſing the river, forming a junction with the Rohillas, and ravaging the Nabob's territories; but that as he had not made his intentions public, of defending the Corah province, it is very probable the Marattas will advance confidently to poſſeſs themſelves of it, an event he is extremely deſirous of, as the only means within the limits of his inſtructions to relieve the anxieties of the Vizier, and the annual demands of our aſſiſtance; otherwiſe, that he ſees no end of the ineffective campaign in that quarter. The Vizier in the meantime ſeems extremely anxious that ſome deciſive blow be ſtruck to weaken the overgrown power of the Marattas, and thinks this to be the moſt favourable ſeaſon for undertaking it; that if our troops are permitted to accompany him to Delhi, or to any place where he may find a neceſſity of leading them, it will be the ſource of much advantage to the Company, ſince he will take upon himſelf the payment of the whole brigade, and excuſe them the delivery of the Bengal tribute to the King.

The King is deſirous that the Marattas be permitted to take quiet poſſeſſion of the ceded provinces, imagining, that in this caſe they will ſpeedily return to the Decan, and that then he will be able to join us with the royal family; but that if we are determined on a war with them, it ſhould be commenced at ſome diſtance from the capital: and that a brigade, with a body of the Vizier's troops, be ſent with a large ſum of money, to facilitate this junction, ſhould the Maratta army be defeated.

The Reſolution of the Committee in conſequence.

The Committee, having ſeriouſly conſidered the purport of the above advices, are of opinion, that nothing ſhould be done on our part until the poſſeſſion of Corah, and the grant of aſſignment from the Vizier for the arrears now due, and for the monthly payment of the 1,15,000 rupees, are finally ſecured to us. Thus far however it may be expedient to extend the lines of our inſtructions to the General, by authorizing him, in caſe the Marattas ſhould either attack Corah, or approach ſo near, as to place it in his power, by croſſing the river, to incloſe them between the province of Corah and his army, and attack them in their rear, that we permit him to paſs the river: that this ſtep once taken, and attended with ſucceſs, he be directed again to have recourſe to the orders he has already been furniſhed with, in the caſe of his having croſſed the boundary of the Corah province for the ſame purpoſe; that is to ſay, that he do not ſuffer himſelf to be drawn further from the borders of that province; but return immediately within the preſcribed line, after he has executed the ſervice he had undertaken.

That the Committee approve of his having entered the dominions of Hafez Rhamet; and that he be directed to divert the Vizier from the hope of accompanying him to Delhi, as we are determined invariably to purſue the defenſive plan we have adopted.

Agreed, that the following Letter be ſent to General Barker.

To Brigadier-General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief under the Preſidency.

Letter to General Barker.

Sir,

We have been favoured with your Letters of the 6th and 12th inſtant, incloſing a tranſlate of a Letter from the King. Theſe, with extracts from your Letter to the Preſident of the 10th ſubmitted to our peruſal, have enabled us to form a competent judgment of the tranſactions in your quarter.

The aſſignment which we have required from the Vizier for the arrears now due, and for the monthly payment of 1,15,000 rupees, is a point of ſuch immediate concern to us, that we are reſolved to admit of no operation in concert with him, or for the defence of his territories, unleſs he ſhall have firſt complied with this requiſition. Should he, contrary to our expectations, refuſe us this ſecurity, you muſt immediately leave him, and make the defence of Corah your ſole object. Our inſtructions on this point are ſo very clear and explicit, that we refer you again to them for our reſolution upon it, which is fixed and unalterable. We are in daily expectation of hearing from you, that the alternative which we have enjoined is already carried into execution.

In conſequence of your repreſentations, we deem it expedient to extend the line of our inſtructions, by authorizing you, in caſe the movements of the Marattas ſhould put it in your power, by croſſing the river, to incloſe them between the Corah province and your army, and by this means to attack them in their rear, to paſs the river; but ſhould the Marattas, in conſequence of this ſtep, be entirely defeated, or compelled to retire, we again direct you to recur to the orders we have already given you, in the caſe of your croſſing the boundary of the Corah province for the ſame purpoſe; we mean, that you do not ſuffer yourſelf to be drawn further from the borders of that country, but retire immediately within the preſcribed line of your operations, after you have executed the ſervice which drew you beyond it.

We approve of your having entered the dominions of Hafez Rhamet at Furruckabad, or from any other part within the dominions of Hafez Rhamet; for this purpoſe, we deſire you will aſſure the Vizier, that we can by no means conſent to quit the defenſive plan we have adopted; and we recommend to you to divert him from all thoughts of our attending him to Delhi, or to any other place whither his ambition might lead him.

We are,

Fort William, Sir,

Read the following Letters from Colonel Champion, under dates the 28th January, the 5th, 7th, 8th, 11th, 12th, 17th, 19th, 26th, 28th February, and 3d inſtant.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, and Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have been honoured with your orders dated the 9th inſtant, and have conſulted with his Excellency according to your inſtructions. He by no means will give his conſent to my detaching a battalion of Sepoys, artillery, &c. for the garriſon of Allahabad; obſerving at the ſame time that it will be weakening the troops on which he has his greateſt dependance; but has agreed to ſend immediately four heavy pieces of cannon, with a thouſand rounds to each gun; a complete battalion of regulars, with four field pieces and five hundred matchlocks; ſo that the garriſon will be completed to three thouſand; and he has alſo ſent orders for four months proviſion to be laid in, &c. As I could not perſuade him to comply with your intentions of having a reinforcement ſent from the brigade, I then thought it beſt to have that battalion of Sepoys commanded by our own officers, and a field officer to command the garriſon, which he very readily acquieſced in, and was well pleaſed with the propoſal; therefore I intend to detach Lieutenant Colonel Upton to command, with one captain, a lieutenant, and two enſigns, for which I hope, Gentlemen, to receive your approbation. The two twenty-four pounders belonging to the brigade will in a few days be at Allahabad with their ſtores; they are to wait there for further orders. I have this moment received advices from the officers commanding the brigade boats, that there is not a foot water in the Ganges near to Allahabad for above a coſs in length, which has obliged them to unload our boats; and will be the cauſe of detaining them eight or ten days; therefore I have ſent expreſs orders to have the lighteſt boats diſpatched forward with ammunition. And on a further converſation with his Excellency, I find he is determined to throw a bridge acroſs the Ganges, and to act offenſively againſt the Marattas, ſhould they enter the Corah and Currah provinces in a hoſtile manner. I then thought it neceſſary to aſk him, if he had received a duplicate of my orders? and on his replying in the negative, I explained them to him; at which he ſeemed greatly ſurpriſed, and has declared his intention of addreſſing dreſſing the Board on the ſubject this evening. On being aſked, if he eſteemed that country as his own? he anſwered, that he did, as the King had quitted it without any permiſſion; and further, that his opinion was, that by your orders of the 9th inſtant, you meant to prevent their taking poſſeſſion of that country: from its appearing to me abſolutely his intentions to repel his force to theirs, I would wiſh to be honoured, by the utmoſt expedition, with your inſtructions how far I am to engage the troops under my command in his ſupport; for a defeat to him may be attended with the utmoſt conſequence to ourſelves; and I hope my Letter of the 15th inſtant will be fully replied to. He mentioned to me, that Nedjiff Cawn, who by our accounts engaged to march with the Marattas, has made propoſals of joining him, on drawing near to our army; and that Mr. Maddox, with his detachment, had alſo offered to come in to him, but was afraid of being apprehended by us. As I am informed that the Adminiſtration had long ſince iſſued their pardon to this man, I told his Excellency I could have no objection under that circumſtance. By our laſt accounts, dated from Delhi, January 22d, the Marattas had not marched.

Gentlemen,

By advices dated February 1ſt, at night, from Delhi, the two Maratta Chiefs had marched. Toocojee Holkar to a place called Palker Gunge, ſix coſs, and Buſagee to Aukley Gaut, four coſs to the Eaſtward of Delhi; and that they had diſpatched Abbar Alla Cawn to his Excellency and Myur ul Dowla, to ſettle about the delivering up the province of Corah, &c. declaring they have no intentions of commencing hoſtilities againſt the Vizier, and hope that he will not prevent their taking poſſeſſion of thoſe countries which the King has lately ceded to them.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to acquaint you, that I have juſt received advices from the Weſtward, dated 5th inſtant in the morning, which mention that the Marattas had marched in two diviſions, and had directed the news writers to inform his Excellency they were determined to take poſſeſſion of thoſe provinces which were ceded to them by the King. And the ſame Papers mention alſo, that Nudjiff Cawn had refuſed to act with them, although they had offered a lack of rupees per month for himſelf and his people.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In conſequence of the Marattas having ſent to his Excellency in the moſt public manner, that they are determined to take poſſeſſion of the Corah and Currah provinces; he came to the reſolution yeſterday evening of croſſing fifteen thouſand horſe over the Ganges before day, and to lay waſte their Country for twenty coſs to the Weſtward of Corah: upon my receiving this piece of intelligence, I immediately wrote to him, requeſting he would defer his intentions till I had the honour of an interview with him; which he readily complied with, and this morning he paid me a viſit: when I made uſe of all the arguments and perſuaſion in my power for him to ſet aſide his deſigns, repreſenting the conſequence of his commencing hoſtilities. To which he anſwered, that he was determined to prevent their taking poſſeſſion of the provinces of Corah and Currah, and that he would rather ſuffer a defeat and periſh, than ſee them in their hands. I again obſerved to him my orders, and that while we remained united, and were on our guard, there was nothing to be apprehended, were they double their numbers. He further replied, that he had long ſince wrote to them, intimating, that upon their marching towards Furruckabad, he ſhould eſteem it an open declaration of war, and would act accordingly.

His Excellency intends, after the Marattas have made two marches more, to move up to the frontiers of his Country which lies neareſt to Furruckabad, he having received ſtrong aſſurances that a body of Affgans were ready to join him, alſo Hafez Mahomed Cawn and Zuttee Cawn, and that he had wrote to the Seeks to ſend him a conſiderable body of cavalry. He intends taking the boats which form the bridge at Cawnpore along with him. Letters from the Weſtward, dated the 6th inſtant, bring advices that the Marattas only marched four coſs on that day, and were to halt till Zabita Cawn and Nedjiff Cawn's forces had joined them, which were on their march with that intent.

I have the honour to remain,
with the utmoſt reſpect,

humble ſervant,

Gentlemen,

I have to acquaint you that the Marattas are on their march towards us, and were the 8th inſtant at Jahangurrpoor. His Excellency informs me, that he has received repeated aſſurances from Zabita Cawn that he will not act againſt him, and Nedjiff Cawn and Hafez Rhamet Cawn declare their intentions of joining him; alſo Muzatta Jung, who has a force ready to join; and he either has made, or is collecting, boats to throw a bridge acroſs the Ganges at Furruckabad. His Excellency obſerves, that it is neceſſary, in order to ſecure thoſe people in his intereſt, that we march to Saundee; and it is agreed that I march the 13th inſtant.

marched thirteen coſs, and encamping at Rampore, which is eighty coſs from Furruckabad; and they intend being at Ramgaut the 15th, which is twenty coſs further. Zabiter Cawn has wrote to Hafez Rhamet Cawn, that if he has the leaſt ſpirit of a ſoldier he will immediately join our forces and his Excellency's, but that he cannot at preſent ſhew himſelf, being in the power of the Marattas. They talk of leaving their baggage, &c. at Ramgaut, ſurrounding the city of Furruckabad, and demanding a contribution from Muzzatta Jung. I march with the troops under my command to-morrow morning.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have been honoured with your Letter dated the 2d inſtant, and have delivered yours to his Excellency, which ſeemed to give much ſatisfaction. At preſent he is come to no reſolution, but to-morrow I ſhall be able to write you more fully. By Letters dated the 14th inſtant the Marattas were at Ramgaut, and by accounts had written to the King, preſſing him to join, or to ſend one of his ſons. In the evening of that day they had determined to march towards Furruckabad. Muzzatta Jung has made a bridge acroſs the Ganges, near the fort of Furruckabad, and is ready to join the Vizier with a large force.

I have the honour to remain,

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor of Fort William, &c.

Sir,

I am this day favoured with a Letter, which I believe contains the ſentiments and orders of the Board, dated the 1ſt February, for my entering into immediate meaſures with his Excellency for the defence of the Corah and Currah provinces; but as this had no ſignature, I hope ſoon to receive the duplicate.

Upon my acquainting the Nabob with the contents of the Letter, he expreſſed great ſurprize, having flattered himſelf much with the peruſal of your's the preceding day, that the Board were determined to ſupport him effectually, by permitting our troops to croſs the Ganges in conjunction with his Excellency's, ſhould the Marattas attempt any thing againſt the Corah and Currah provinces; and in conſequence thereof, he had entered into a ſolemn engagement with Muzzatta Jung, conſented on his part, to permit the Vizier's troops to take poſſeſſion of the bridge which he has thrown acroſs the Ganges.—Five thouſand, moſtly infantry, marched yeſterday morning with five pieces of cannon, and this morning have taken poſſeſſion of it, with a ſmall fort which commands it on the Furruckabad ſide of the river.—He ſays he is determined to adhere ſtrictly to his engagements with Muzzatta Jung; and requeſts of me to march the army nearer to the aforementioned bridge, in order to intimidate the Marattas, and confirm Muzzatta Jung and Hafez Rhamet Cawn in his intereſt, as the former was much inclined, and the latter wavering and undetermined what part to take; but on our near approach, Hafez Rhamet Cawn would be convinced that he was ſerious in ſupporting him; and he would in conſequence thereof immediately join. And he expreſſed his further reſolution, that if the Marattas marched paſt Furruckabad, he would croſs with his whole army, and join the forces of Hafez Rhamet Jung, and Muzzatta Jung, and fall on their rear, whilſt we marched back on this ſide the river, as far as Cawnpore, where the bridge ſhould be ready for us to croſs over; and he made not the leaſt doubt but that he ſhould very ſoon drive the enemy out of the Corah province.

He is at this time collecting boats, to throw a bridge acroſs the Gamberia, which is not fordable: when it is completed, he will march. He propoſes moving nearer to Furruckabad. I much doubt his reſolution of croſſing the Ganges without our forces: however, at preſent the beſt appearances ſhould be put on, in order if poſſible to prevent the junction of thoſe troops with the Marattas, the main body of which are ſtill at Ramgaut. I have juſt received accounts of a body of 5,000 having croſſed the Jumna at Calpee—I ſhould ſuppoſe with an intention to plunder. To morrow we ſhall receive further accounts regarding them. I hope ſoon to ſee the General, who no doubt is better acquainted with your ſentiments, and how far he can venture to act on ſo important an occaſion.

News from Delhi, the Maratta Camp.

It appears from the laſt Papers from Delhi, dated the 16th inſtant, that the Marattas were croſſing, and were encamped with their buzar and carriage cattle, at Inoor Gunge.

The troops appeared to be diſſatisfied with their commanders, being deſirous of returning to the Decan; but Byſagee has pacified them with aſſurances, that after they take poſſeſſion of Furruckabad and the province of Corah, and have adjuſted the revenues of theſe territories, that he would return with them to the Decan. Madajee Scindia, the Chief, who ſeems ſo much diſſatisfied with Byſagee and Tuccojee, was plundering the Country about Roame, which is 40 coſs from Delhi, and belongs to the Jauts; from whence it is ſaid he will march to Jamnagur, which is in the Ragapoot's Country. There is, however, little credit to be given to theſe appearances of diſagreement amongſt the Maratta Chiefs, as it ſeems to have been one of their fixed ſyſtems in politics to appear to diſagree, the better to cover their real deſigns.

Byſagee and Tuccogee ſent orders to Nedjiff Cawn to join their army with the troops he had under his command, which, by the ſeveral Papers, ſeem to be about 2,500 or 3,000: as it was not in his power to refuſe them, he endeavoured to make terms, and demanded an hundred rupees per month for each horſeman, and permiſſion to encamp one coſs from the body of their army; from which I ſhould ſuppoſe the purpoſes embraced, the firſt opportunity to leave them.

Read the five following Letters from General Barker, dated the 15th, 20th, 21ſt, 23d, 24th March, with one Enclоſure in the firſt.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, Gentlemen of the Select Committee, at Calcutta.

Gentlemen,

At an interview with his Excellency the Vizier this morning, the balances of the Company's extra expences was finally ſettled to the end of February, agreeable to the ſtatement which I herewith tranſmit to you; the ready ſpecie will be paid immediately, and the orders on his Zemindars are to be ſent to me. The balances of the laſt year the Nabob has deſired may be diſcharged from his Tuncaw of ten lacks on the Muxadabad treaſury, accepted by the honourable John Cartier, eſquire, amounting to two lacks ſeventy-nine thouſand rupees; one lack has been paid by his Excellency to the Paymaſter of the Brigade, and the remainder you will perceive is regulated in the ſtatement, and for the ſettlement of the future payments, Lamb Cawn is ſent for to camp; this I hope to ſee by ſome regular monthly mode, ſince he does not chuſe to give Tuncaws on the Gazypoor Zemindary.

The information of this morning is, that the Maratta Sardars, after a conſultation on the approach of his Excellency's and the Engliſh forces, came to a reſolution of ſending all their valuable baggage to Coel, where a bridge is to be thrown over the Jumna for its paſſage, and the main army is to rendezvous at Pallara, in the neighbourhood of Furruckabad. I ſhall nevertheleſs continue my route towards Ram Ceat, to ſee what determination the Rohilla will come to. This retreat of the Maratta forces will do them much diſcredit with the generality of the Powers, and may ſtir ſome of the northern chiefs near the Gauts of the Jumna, to effect ſome diverſion. In this place, Gentlemen, I cannot but lament the ſignal advantages that might have been taken, had not you thought it improper for your forces to have croſſed the great river, for had my croſſing been directional, I could not fail of attacking their heavy baggage, the collecting of all their late campaigns, with unlooked ſucceſs, and this muſt either have brought on a general engagement, or their abſolute flight from the Country. If this is not effected, I cannot at preſent ſee any benefit the Honourable Company will reap by the poſſeſſion of the Corah province, ſince the Marattas may take the ſame advantage of the abſence of your forces, which they have been doing theſe three years paſt.

I am, Gentlemen,
with reſpect,
Your moſt obedient,
humble ſervant,
R. Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since the date of my laſt, a few repeated marches brought me yeſterday about 10 coſs from Ram Gaut; and I there received information that a body of Marattas, under the command of Tookajee Holkar, had croſſed the Ganges with intent to ſeize and carry off the Rohilla Hafez Rhamet Cawn, who has been carrying on the ſame double dealings as heretofore practiſed by that treacherous ſect. This body of Marattas were, however, firſt obliged to make themſelves maſters of a poſt and ſmall fort in the road to Hafez's camp, defended by the Buckſhe, Tuccoo; after a very warm attack, carried the poſt, or rather obliged the Buckſhe to propoſe terms of capitulation, by having expended all his ammunition, and then made him priſoner, with great part of his baggage. This buſineſs detained the operations of the Marattas on this ſide till this morning, and the near approach of our forces has I ſuppoſe preſerved Hafez from an attack on the line of march. This morning I received information that the Gaut of Curruckpore, about 2½ coſs from Ram Gaut, was the only place fordable, and that a body of Marattas were at that juncture croſſing for the aſſiſtance of Tuccogee. I heſitated not immediately to quit my firſt route to ſecure this Gaut, and on my arrival found a body of about 5,000 were on the bed of the river, apparently juſt croſſed, and the oppoſite banks were crowded with their forces. I immediately made a motion to attack them, but they waited not for a trial, re-croſſing the river with ſome expedition; the whole body then took their route towards Ram Gaut, along the oppoſite banks of the river where Biſſagee was encamped; and I proceeded with the troops under my command to this place, which is ſituated between the Curruckpore and Ram Gauts, and near alſo to the poſt of the Buckſhe, the remains of whoſe troops, amounting to 1,500, have requeſted my protection. In this ſituation I was alſo very near oppoſite to Biſſagee's encampment, the main channel of the river near under their encampment. The troops had ſcarcely lodged their arms, when Biſſagee began a cannonade from the high grounds on the oppoſite banks; the diſtance was very great, nevertheleſs many of his ſhot came into our encampment; however, no accidents have enſued, and a few ſhot returned from our 12 pounders diſperſed them.

I muſt beg leave to aſſure you, that no hoſtilities were commenced, or a ſhot fired, until the Marattas had diſcharged upwards of twenty rounds into the encampment. Further occurrences you ſhall be acquainted with as they happen.

Gentlemen,

Under cover you will be pleaſed to receive a duplicate of an Addreſs I tranſmitted to you by yeſterday's daulks. During this morning the Marattas made their appearance in ſmall bodies on the oppoſite ſide of the Ganges and ſeemed to brave us by frequent diſcharges of ſmall arms.

The Rohilla Hafez Rhamet Cawn, is come in to his Excellency; and to-morrow I purpoſe to give you information what may be determined regarding him.

Since my arrival at this place I find there are a great many places where the Ganges may be eaſily forded between the Curruckpore Gauts and Anoopſhair, about ten coſs diſtant; indeed it is almoſt inconceivable how exceedingly narrow the channel is at this time.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Encloſed I tranſmit you a duplicate of my Letter of the 21ſt.—In conſequence of a conſultation with his Excellency on the ſituation of the Maratta forces, which certain intelligence adviſes us were ſeparated by the Ganges, Tuccogee Holkar being in the Rohilla diſtrict about ten or fifteen coſs to the Weſtward of Ramgaut, and Biſſagee at the diſtance of only three coſs from the oppoſite banks; it was determined, as an advantage that promiſed much to diſtreſs and diminiſh the power of this tribe, that his Excellency the Vizier, with his cavalry, and that of Hafez Rhamet, ſhould march to attack Tucco in the Rohilla diſtrict, while the Engliſh troops croſſed the Ganges to attack Biſſagee.—Permit me, Gentlemen, here to aſſure you, that upon a mature conſideration on the ſpirit of your inſtructions, the latitude you gave to my operations from the frontiers of Corah, and that had you known the circumſtances of the very inſufficient defence the Ganges has proved to the irruptions of the Marattas into the Rohilla diſtricts lying to the Northward of the river, from the number of the fords, it would no doubt have attracted your attention. I conſider myſelf ſituated and empowered in like manner to make uſe of the advantage which offers itſelf of making an attack on their forces under Biſſagee, particularly as the diſtance was ſo ſmall that my return could be immediate. I therefore croſſed the Ganges at the Gaut of Curruckpore yeſterday morning (the depth of water no where exceeding 3½ feet) without the ſmalleſt oppoſition. The army immediately encamped; and I puſhed on with the grenadiers of the army, and two battalions of Sepoys, to the diſtance of about three coſs. We ſaw ſeveral ſtraggling parties of their cavalry on our advance, to the number of near fifteen hundred. When the party reached the ground Biſſagee had occupied the evening before, intelligence was brought in that he had decamped with the greateſt precipitation, immediately on the advance of our troops beginning to croſs, and halted not till he had reached the diſtance of fifteen coſs. After remaining a few hours on the ground, I ordered the party to return to the encampment on the banks of the river. On our return, the party of horſe which had retired on our approach in the forenoon, made their appearance in our rear, and were very troubleſome. From ſome ſuſpicions of the treachery of the Rohilla, I ſuppoſe the plan of the attack of Tuccojee, by the joint endeavours of the Vizier and Hafez, was not undertaken.

As this attempt has failed to bring them to an action, I ſhall re-croſs the Ganges to-morrow, and wait for your further inſtructions; during which time I ſhall be able to ſettle the affairs of the Rohilla with his Excellency.

By the accompanying Papers of Intelligence, you will perceive how exceedingly terrified they are. Their retreat may be termed a flight; and it is ſaid the common villagers armed, and plundered their baggage, ſo great was their conſternation.

I had an Officer yeſterday wounded.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I now beg leave to tranſmit a duplicate of my Addreſs to you under date of yeſterday. This morning the troops repaſſed the Ganges at the ſame Ghaut which they forded on the 22d inſtant. The Marattas made no attempts to interrupt the rear. Biſſagee with his diviſion took his march towards Caoul it is reported, and Tuccogee with about 15,000 continues in the Rohilla diſtricts on this ſide of the river; Sunebul he has already deſtroyed, and threatens the other principal towns. Yeſterday I had a viſit from Hafez Ramut and his Excellency the Vizier, when the ſituation of the affairs of the Rohilla were debated. The coming in of Hafez has aſſuaged his Excellency a good deal; and upon conditions of the Rohilla immediately clearing off the laſt year's treaty of 40 lacks of rupees, it has been determined to afford their families and country protection from the ravages of the Marattas; of which the Nabob is to pay the Company 20 lacks for the part they will take in this protection: but in default of the fulfilling of this agreement by the Rohilla, his Excellency agrees to pay the ſum of fifty lacks of rupees to the Company, for their aid in putting him in poſſeſſion of the Rohilla diſtricts, commonly known by the territories of Hafez Ramut.

In conſequence of the determination to protect the Rohilla, I ſhall to-morrow proceed with all expedition towards Buſſouly, about 18 coſs diſtant, whither the intelligence adviſes us Tuccoges has marched in expectation of ſecuring the family of Hafez Ramut Cawn.

Agreed, that the following reply be immediately made to the above Letters:

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief of the forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your ſeveral Letters, with their Encloſures, under date the 15th, 20th, 21ſt, 23d, and 24th ultimo.

We remark with much ſatisfaction the caution obſerved by you in not commencing hoſtilities with the Marattas, and in delaying to fire until our army had received repeated ſhots from them; but we cannot approve your having afterwards exceeded our orders, by croſſing the river Ganges to attack the Marattas, nor of the reaſons aſſigned for that meaſure. We muſt deſire you to carry in remembrance the very peremptory orders we have ourſelves received from our honourable Employers, to act only on the defenſive, and to avoid by every poſſible means the marching of our forces to ſuch a diſtance from our provinces as to leave them deſtitute of their aid. It was for this reaſon, and not from any opinion we had of the ſufficiency of the Ganges as a barrier againſt the Maratta army, that we made that river the boundary of your operations beyond the province of Corah. We are however ſatisfied, from your immediate return to your former ſtation within the preſcribed line, that you meant to conform yourſelf to the ſpirit of our inſtructions; nevertheleſs, as we have been particular in providing for every probable emergency, by recommending the manner in which we would have you act, and as the obſervance of the defenſive plan which we have been obliged to adopt can only be enſured by a literal adherence to the line marked out, we muſt inſiſt on your conducting yourſelf for the future by the letter, and not by the ſpirit of your inſtructions.

It was with ſome reluctance that we exceeded our original plan of defence in ſuffering our troops to paſs beyond the frontiers of the Vizier's dominions, and we were principally induced to this by the natural boundary which the Ganges and mountains formed to the Rohilla diſtrict, and of courſe to your operations in it, added to the danger to which the Vizier's dominions were expoſed, by the eaſy acceſs the enemy might have through that open country to his territories. But theſe lines once paſſed, it is not in our power to preſcribe any limitation to the progreſs of our troops, which either the retreat of the enemy, or any other favourable emergency, might lead to. The latitude allowed in our laſt Letter to you, was upon the ſame principle.

We approve of the plan formed for the protection of the Rohilla Country, and of the ſtipulation you have made in behalf of the Company, for the moiety of the ſum of forty lacks to be paid by the Rohilla Chief for this aid; and we authorize you to enter into ſuch engagements with the Vizier and the Rohillas. But we cannot as yet agree to the alternative propoſed, as it might not at this time be diſcreet to create new enemies, until our hands are entirely cleared of the Marattas, and eſpecially for an object of no permanent advantage to the Company; we therefore deſire that you will not engage in any meaſures for reducing the Country of the Rohillas, in caſe of default in their engagements with the Vizier, before you have adviſed us of every circumſtance, and have received our further inſtructions upon the ſubject.

That a plan of this kind would yield the moſt eſſential advantage to the Vizier in extending his territories, completing the defenſive line of his poſſeſſions, and freeing him from the moſt troubleſome neighbourhood, we can well conceive; but as this cannot be atchieved by the Vizier without the aſſiſtance of our forces, we can never conſent to engage in it (although we ſhould even be authorized by the treachery or miſconduct of the Rohillas) without ſuch previous conditions as ſhall ſecure to the Company an equivalent for ſo important a ſervice rendered to our ally. And here we cannot avoid expreſſing our regret, that in the whole courſe of our alliance and operations with the Vizier, this neceſſary and equitable precaution has never yet been ſufficiently attended to; but every meaſure we have adopted in conjunction with him, appears wholly to have been calculated for his particular advantage; while he thus reaps the ſole benefit, to the entire excluſion of the Company, it muſt check us in every ſcheme propoſed for the ſucceſs of the cauſe in which we are jointly engaged, unleſs ſome more equal plan of alliance ſhall be formed with him.

We are,

Fort William, 15th April 1773. Sir, Your moſt obedient Servants.

It having been reſolved to take preſent poſſeſſion of the province of Corah, in behalf of the Company, the Committee are of opinion that it will be eſſentially neceſſary both for the ſecuring the Company's rights in that province, and as a preparatory ſtep to any exchange of that diſtrict, or other mode of ceſſion which may be reſolved on, immediately to depute a Member of the Board to Corah, to receive charge of it from the General, and to inveſtigate and form an account of its revenue; and that he be inveſted with full powers to exerciſe ſuch an authority and controul over the Naib Moneer ul Dowla, and the other Officers of that Government, as may be requiſite for theſe ends.

The ſervice in which the General is immediately engaged, as well as the nature of this truſt, which is totally foreign from theſe duties of his profeſſion, and requires the ſuperintendance of a perſon experienced in the buſineſs of the revenue, preclude us from receiving the aid of his ſervices on this occaſion. Beſides, that ſuch an expreſs deputation will have the effect of marking, in the moſt public and authentic manner, the determination of this Government to maintain its rights to the property or diſpoſal of the province of Corah. And this opinion we conceive to be of very great importance towards procuring an equivalent for the ceſſion of it, whenever that ſhall be made a ſubject of negociation, the more ſo as the remote ſituation of that Country too apparently ſhews that it cannot be our intention to return the poſſeſſion of it.

The Vizier having in ſeveral of his Letters expreſſed an earneſt deſire to have an interview with the Preſident, and many points of conſequence requiring an adjuſtment, which cannot be effected without a perſonal conference; the Committee are further of opinion, that a meeting between the Vizier and the Preſident, would at this ſeaſon be productive of great benefit to the Company's affairs.

Reſolved, That we ſubmit theſe ſubjects to the conſideration of the Council at large.

Warren Haſtings.

PRESENT,

The honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire,
William Alderſey,
Philip Milner Dacres.

Read, and approved, the laſt Proceeding.

Read, Three Letters from General Barker, under dates the 26th and 28th March, and 4th April.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Agreeable to the information in my laſt addreſs, I yeſterday proceeded towards Biſſouly, to relieve the families of Hafez and ſome of the other principal Chiefs; and Hafez with his own troops advanced a few coſs in order to keep the Marattas in play till our arrival; but Tucco made not the attempt on this town, retreating immediately by the way of Mauradabad to join on the banks of the Ganges. The town of Mauradabad laid under contribution, and pillaged and burnt ſome other conſiderable villages; in conſequence of this, I alſo altered my rout, and this day marched towards Moradabad. I am juſt now informed that Tucco erected a bridge of boats at Poot, and has paſſed the river, breaking up the bridge on his retreat: a great deal of his baggage was however left on this ſide in his flight, and it was immediately plundered by the neighbouring Zemindars. The Country of the Rohillas is for this time freed from theſe invaders, without any probability of their re-croſſing the river whilſt our troops remain here; and in the interim of receiving your further inſtructions, I ſhall endeavour to ſettle the Treaty between his Excellency and the Rohillas; ſome difficulties will however intervene I fear, from the pleas Hafez will be able to make on account of the very great probability of his being reduced to the ſame circumſtances, while the Maratta Tribes are permitted to remain unoppoſed between the rivers. I muſt obſerve to you, Gentlemen, that I foreſee a very ſmall proſpect of meeting the intent of this campaign, ſince there is little probability of giving the Maratta forces the ſmalleſt check, unleſs by your troops being permitted to lay down before ſome of the principal cities between the rivers, in which caſe the ſecurity of their families and baggage might urge them to a trial; and if this ſhould happen, I ſhould not doubt of giving them ſome ſignal blow, and perhaps be a means of obliging them to retire to the Decan. Encloſed are ſome of the lateſt Papers of Intelligence.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient,
Camp near Chajura, 26th March 1773. humble Servant, Robt Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since my laſt, informing you of Tucco Gur's retreat acroſs the Ganges, Buſa, in order to breed a diverſion in his favour, returned to the banks of the river at Ram Gaut, where the Nabob had left a guard of about four thouſand men, and a few pieces of cannon, to defend the fords; an attack which Buſa made yeſterday morning upon this detachment, with certain advices of the junction of the two Chiefs, has brought me back to this place; the Marattas choſe not to remain upon our near approach, but decamped at three o'clock in the morning, and retired towards the Calliac Nudder, about 15 coſs within land.

Upon a re-peruſal of my ſeveral Addreſſes, which were wrote as occurrences happened, I find it neceſſary to be more explicit in my reaſons for two operations, viz. marching immediately to the fords at Curruckpere or Ram Gaut, on the 20th, and my croſſing the river to diſlodge Biſſagee on the 22d, from the oppoſite banks.

When I marched from Shaw Sewan the 20th, at two in the morning, I expected to have ſurprized Tuccoo in his attack at Aſſuhpoor, where the Rohilla Buckſhey Ahmed Khan was poſted; but on the march I received information of his having capitulated, and Tuccoo, upon advice of our approach, in full march for the fords at Curruckpore. It became therefore neceſſary to gain the fords before him, which I did not a quarter of an hour, and Buſa upon this manœuvre was marching to his aſſiſtance. A conſiderable number had croſſed, and multitudes were on the oppoſite banks. On our appearance thoſe who had juſt croſſed retired with precipitation, and Tuccoo, who was advancing, went to the right about and fled up the river, whilſt Buſa kept moving ſlowly upwards on the oppoſite banks to engage our attention.

Upon

Upon our arrival at Ram Gaut, diſtant about 3 coſs from Curruckpore, I found there were ſeveral fords, and it was ſaid there were ſeveral others higher up. Buſugee had affronted our colours moſt indignantly by his preſumptuous cannonade on the day of our arrival, with his inſolent parades and firing of ſmall arms the ſucceeding day. Tuccoo was at the diſtance of 15 coſs up the banks of the river, Buſagee not encamped above 3 coſs from the oppoſite banks. To have followed Tuccoogee without diſlodging Buſa would have given him every advantage of falling on our ſupplies in the rear and cutting them off, and grain was at this time only 6 ſeer for a rupee in our Buzar. I could not prevail on his Excellency to croſs the river and attack Buſa; nor did I think it conſiſtent with the re uration of your forces that the Vizier ſhould attack the moſt conſiderable body of the Marattas, particularly the party to who had commenced open hoſtilities with us and their firſt Chief. In this exigency therefore, conſidering your inſtructions under the ſame predicament as thoſe for my conduct on the boundaries of the Corah province, I croſſed, and having diſlodged Buſagee, I returned to purſue Tuccoo, who has now quitted the Rohilla Country alſo; and I hope this will meet with your approbation.

I am, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient,
humble Servant,
R^t Barker.

Head Quarters,
Camp near Ram Gaut,
28th March 1773.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since I laſt addreſſed you, the troops have continued encamped near Ram Gaut; the Vizier oppoſite the ford of Curruckpore, and Hafez Rhamet with his forces at the Gaut of Poot, where Tuccoogee croſſed from the Rohilla Diſtricts: nothing material has occurred ſince. The Marattas are encamped at the diſtance of 20 or 25 coſs on the medium road between Caoul and Delhi. I wait with impatience for your further inſtructions, and have thrown a bridge of boats acroſs the Ganges, to chaſtiſe the audaciouſneſs of the Marattas if they ſhould reſume their wanton boaſt of parade ſo near our encampment as they did before. The Intelligencer adviſes that they have daily meetings, but are not yet determined what plan to purſue. The hot ſeaſon is advancing faſt, and if it ſhould be your intention to carry the arms of the Company againſt them between the rivers, I would beg leave to recommend, on account of the mortality that it is probable might happen among the younger officers, Europeans, and ſoldiers, from the violent heats of this part of the country (unleſs abſolute occaſion ſhould require immediate operations) that I might be permitted to defer croſſing the river till the firſt week after the rains. The country between the rivers would render us ſubſervient to many difficulties at this dry ſeaſon, from the barrenneſs, the devaſtation of the Maratta army, and the want of water, there being only wells to be relied on, and thoſe but few. In the meantime I ſhall order granaries to be formed at Cawnpore and Furruckabad, leſt our daily ſupplies ſhould at any time fail. I am, however, very apprehenſive for his Majeſty's ſafety, leſt if the Marattas determine to retreat, they may retort on him, and carry the whole royal family with them.

I am, Gentlemen,
with reſpect,
your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
R^t Barker.

Head Quarters,
4th April 1773.

Agreed, we acknowledge the receipt of his Letter, and refer him to our former orders for his further proceedings; which, we are of opinion, at this time require no addition; and the rather, as the General himſelf writes, that even if an offenſive war were to be carried on againſt the Marattas, it had better be ſuſpended till the heats are paſſed and the rains ſet in.

APPEND. No. 18.

The General, in the account enclosed in his Letter of the 15th March, having inſerted the ſum of 2,79,000 R^s, the balance of the extra charges of the laſt campaign, as having been diſcharged by an order on the King's Tuncaw, in favour of the Vizier, for 10 lacks accepted by Mr. Cartier, the late Preſident; the Committee are willing to take advantage of the preſence of Mr. Middleton, to refer to him for information of the particulars of this Tuncaw, and of the orders which Mr. Cartier may have given concerning the payment, as no mention appears to have been made of it in the public Records, either in the Council or Select Committee.

Mr. Middleton informs the Committee, that he received from his predeceſſor, Mr. Alexander, two of his Majeſty's Tuncaws, in favour of the Vizier, one for 10 lacks of rupees, and the other for one lack. Mr. Alexander at the ſame time delivered him a Letter from the then Preſident, Mr. Cartier, dated in November 1771, deſiring that theſe two Tuncaws might be diſcharged in preference to any other; in conſequence of which four lacks were paid in part, and are indorſed off the Tuncaws of 10 lacks. Soon after the diſburſement of this money, the Muxadabad Council of Revenue received an order from the Board, prohibiting any further payments from their Treaſury, on account of the King's ſtipend; therefore there ſtill remains a balance of ſeven lacks due on account of theſe Tuncaws. Mr Middleton further informs the Committee, that the order mentioned in the General's Letter for 2,79,000 R^s on account of the extra charges of the army, is now in his poſſeſſion; but is not paid nor accepted, he having not received authority to do either.

Reſolved, we refer it to the Council, whether the payment of the remaining balance of theſe Tuncaws ſhall be allowed; as this muſt be firſt decided before we can determine on crediting the Vizier for 2,79,000.

Agreed alſo, that in our Letter to the General, we remark the acceptance of the Tuncaw on Monere ul Dowlah, for 11,000 rupees, which we ſuppoſe could only be diſcharged from the revenues of the Corah province; and as he is now informed of our intentions relative to the collections of that diſtrict, we would have him decline any further aſſignments on them.

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief under the Preſidency.

Sir,

Since we wrote you under date the 15th inſtant, we have received your Letters of the 26th and 28th March, and 4th inſtant, with their Encloſures.

For your further proceedings we refer you to the ſeveral inſtructions you have already received, to which we think there is no neceſſity for adding any thing at this time; and the rather as you are of opinion yourſelf, that even if an offenſive war ſhould be carried on againſt the Marattas, it had better be ſuſpended until the heats are paſſed and the rains ſet in.

We hope that the aſſignment granted by the Vizier to the Nabob Moner ul Dowlah, of 1,10,000 rupees, is not to be paid out of the Corah Revenues, although we ſee no other means we can have to diſcharge it.

As you are now fully informed of our intentions relative to the collections of that diſtrict, we deſire you will not in future accept of any aſſignments on them.

We ſhall write to you ſhortly concerning the aſſignments given for the laſt year's expences on his Majeſty's Tuncaw.

humble ſervants,
Warren Haſtings.

APPENDIX. No. 18.

Bengal Select Consultations, the 14th May 1773.

PRESENT,

The honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.
W^m Alderſey, and P. M. Dacres, } eſquires.

Read, the following extracts from the Proceedings of the Council in their Secret Department.

Extract from the Secret Department Conſultation, of the 13th May 1773.

The Preſident lays before the Board, the following extract from the Proceeding of the Select Committee:

The Board are of opinion, that in conformity to the orders iſſued by the Committee of Revenue, the laſt to the Council of Revenue at Moorſhedabad, to ſtop payment of the King's tribute, no part of it can be regularly diſcharged until they ſhall have formed ſome general reſolution concerning the ſubject of the King's right to the perpetual receipt of his tribute.

Agreed, That the aſſignment of any part of his tribute, whether to the Vizier or any other perſon, can make no alteration in the propriety of the former reſolution regarding it; neither does it confer any right to the perſons in whoſe favour ſuch aſſignment is granted, unleſs made by the authority of Government, or formally accepted of by it. Nevertheleſs, as many circumſtances relating to this tranſaction have occaſionally appeared, which were not originally entered on our Proceedings, and as we are yet unacquainted with what paſſed between the General and the Vizier, upon the occaſion of the Vizier's receiving the Tuncaws from the King, we cannot proceed to a final reſolution on this ſubject, until we ſhall be furniſhed with more complete materials for this purpoſe;

Agreed therefore, that for the preſent we ſuſpend our determination on this matter, and that it be referred to the Preſident as an article in his inſtructions, to ſettle this point with the Vizier at his propoſed interview.

Reſolved, in the mean time the Select Committee be deſired to write to the General, informing him of this reſolution, and directing him to require from the Vizier ſome other mode of payment for the extra charges of the brigade with him, as we cannot admit of their being blended with an account which yet remains undetermined; if after a candid enquiry it ſhall appear that the Vizier has a right to receive the account of his aſſignment, the balance thereof ſhall be immediately paid to him, but we will not prejudge the matter againſt ourſelves, by allowing him preſent poſſeſſion.

Agreed, we now write the General as follows:

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief under the Preſidency.

Sir,

Upon a reference to the Preſident and Council, of our Proceedings of the 15th April, relative to the acceptance of the aſſignments from the Vizier of 2,79,000 rupees on his Majeſty's Tuncaw, in part payment of the extra charges of the army, it is their opinion, that no part of it can regularly be diſcharged in conformity with the orders iſſued for ſtopping payment of the tribute, until ſome general reſolutions are firſt formed on this ſubject, and on the King's right to the perpetual receipt of the tribute; and that the aſſignment of any part of it, whether to the Vizier or any other perſon, can make no alteration in the propriety of that reſolution, nor confer any right on the perſons in whoſe favour ſuch aſſignments have been made, unleſs they were with the aſſent of Government, or they had been formally accepted.

As we are yet uninformed of the manner the Vizier became poſſeſſed of the aſſignments in queſtion, or of the circumſtances on which he has grounded a claim upon the Company for the payment of them, independent of the King's right transferred to him, we avoid coming to any immediate determination upon it; and ſhall wait till we can obtain other lights beſides the imperfect materials which we have collected on our Records, and wiſh to be furniſhed by you with the particulars of what paſſed between the Vizier and you, on the occaſion of his advancing the ſums for which he received the Tuncaws from the King.

We deſire you will for the preſent inſiſt upon ſome other mode of payment from the Vizier, of the extra charges of the brigade, as we cannot, nor will admit of their being blended with an account which yet remains undetermined; at the ſame time aſſuring the Vizier, that if, after a fair enquiry into this affair, it ſhall appear that he is entitled to the amount of the aſſignment, the balance of the Tuncaw ſhall be immediately paid.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since my addreſs of the 4th inſtant, nothing worthy communication has occurred. The intelligence from the Maratta encampment contains nothing but conſtrained boaſt of men who are deſirous of keeping up the ſpirits of their people with a declaration of their intention of re-croſſing the river to give us a meeting. I only hope they will be as good as their declarations, as I promiſe it will ſave your arms much trouble and expence. Encloſed you will receive two Papers of Intelligence, one from the Maratta encampment, the other from Delhi; the laſt is but juſt arrived, and the ſhort ſpace of time for the diſpatch of the daulks, prevents my being able to ſend you a tranſlation of it; the contents are of an extraordinary nature.

I am, Gentlemen,

R^t Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since my laſt addreſs the Marattas have detached a body of men towards Currumbauſs, a ford about ſeven coſs above this place, which they have received intelligence of; and they have given out, that the main body, with Buſagee and Tuccogee, will march to-morrow by the ſame route. Leſt it may appear extraordinary to you that Hafez has remained at ſuch a diſtance from the Vizier ever ſince he firſt came in, I muſt beg leave to inform inform you, that when we firſt quitted Ram Gaut in purſuit of Tuccoo, they ravaged the diſtricts of Mauradabad, &c. Upon his re-croſſing the river, Hafez marched to the Gaut of Poor, to ſecure that ford, where he has continued ever ſince; a meaſure equally neceſſary and uſeful It has not therefore been poſſible to come to any determination relative to the balance of laſt year's agreement, between the Rohilla and the Vizier; nor will it, until affairs are finally determined with the Marattas; ſince urging the matter at this juncture might cauſe a junction between thoſe powers, for he has as much to apprehend from the Vizier as them.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

The day before yeſterday I informed you of the march of a detachment of Marattas towards Currumbauſſa, and of a report that the main body were to follow as yeſterday: for the ſecurity of the Rohilla Country, and apprehending that the intentions of the Marattas were only to attack Haſez, and after ravaging the country to re-croſs at the fords above Succurbaut, which they could eaſily have effected had they been permitted to croſs, I thought it neceſſary to move alſo towards the reported ford at Currumbauſſa; which I did yeſterday morning, and have ſince learnt that the advanced detachment of the Marattas of about 4,000 regulars, and ſome of the Bendurra, after making a ſhort ſtay at Currumdaſſa moved up the banks of the river towards Abar, where there is ſaid to be a very good ford, and which is defended by about 5,000 of the Rohilla troops with ſome pieces of cannon.

The main body of the Marattas marched yeſterday to Debbhi, a town about eight coſs from this, where they have halted; Abar is about nine coſs from Currumbuſſa; the Vizier with his forces continues at Ram Gaut, for the ſecurity of the bridge of boats and the ford of Curruckpore.

Our late inactivity has appeared to them very differently from the real cauſe, imagining we were waiting for the ſwelling of the rivers, and then to commence our operations acroſs the Ganges, with this advantage, of their not being able to make any attempt on the Rohilla or the Vizier's dominions during our abſence. Theſe reflections have induced them to throw out hints of a deſire to come to ſome reconciliation, which they have communicated through Nuzzuf Cawn (whoſe intimacy with the Engliſh is not unknown to them) requeſting his influence with the mediation. The anſwer I have returned to Nuzzuf Cawn, to be communicated to the Maratta Sardars, I encloſe a tranſlation of, and is to this purport; that if the Maratta Sardars are inclined to a peace, they muſt give up every pretenſion to Corah and Currah, leave the whole up the country between the rivers at the diſpoſal of the King and Vizier, and themſelves return to the Decan without delay; that I alſo adviſe them in a friendly manner to retire with the laurels and credit they have been acquiring theſe five years paſt, and not to hazard the diſcredit of them with forces whoſe proweſs is univerſally known. Theſe conditions cannot poſſibly be agreed to; I think and I hope it will produce ſome determination, of which you ſhall be early adviſed.

I am,
Gentlemen, &c. &c.
R^t Barker.

Head Quarters,
Camp near Currambuſſa,
15th April 1779.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since the date of my laſt the Marattas have continued in the ſame ſituation near Dubbhi, and ſo have your forces on this ſide the river; the contents of my Letter to Nudjuff Cawn has aſtoniſhed the Maratta Sardars a good deal; they have not yet come to a determination what to do, but ſeem deſirous of a reconciliation; and I underſtand they have ſent a Vackeel to the Vizier to prevail on him and Hafez Rhamut to bring about a peace and ſave their credit. I yeſterday was favoured with your Letter of the 30th ultimo, and from its contents I flatter myſelf you will not diſapprove my attempt acroſs the Ganges.

I am in hopes that the preſent delay of operations may continue till the river has ſwelled ſufficiently to render the ford unpaſſable, and conſequently any attempt on Hafez or the Vizier's country impracticable; ſhould therefore the Marattas, from a failure in their overtures of a peace, form any attempts on the province of Corah in their way to the banks of the Jumna, to which intent they have already thrown out ſome declarations, I purpoſe to take the advantage which your extenuation of the former inſtructions authorizes, to croſs the river at Ram Gaut or this place, and attack their rear; but you may be aſſured of my ſtrict attention to your plan for my operations on that ſide the river.

Your inſtructions, under date the 17th February, directs the defence of the Corah province, as an ally to the King; viz. "It is underſtood, that whether you remain in quiet poſſeſſion of this province, or are engaged "in hoſtilities in it, you are to act only as in alliance with "the King, and you are to confirm and maintain his "Naib Muneer ul Dowla, the actual government of it; "but he is to remain under your controul, and to be "accountable to the Company for the revenues of the "province, till ſuch time as it ſhall be finally ſettled in "what manner they are to be hereafter diſpoſed." Notwithſtanding Muneer ul Dowla is nominally Naib of thoſe provinces on the part of the royal houſe, he acts in reality for the Company; and the King himſelf, entertaining no other idea, which he evinces in a Letter I have received from him, requeſting that a Jaghire, which he appropriated ſome time ago for the uſe of one of his ſons, might be paid as heretofore out of the revenues of theſe provinces, and requeſting the Board will grant him ſome alleviation to his diſtreſſes, by permitting Muneer ul Dowla to remit him one or more lacks of rupees, to be accounted for hereafter as the Board may direct.

His Excellency continues to pay the monthly extra expences regularly.

I am, Gentlemen, with reſpect,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
Rob^t Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

The encloſed Papers of Intelligence from the Maratta camp, will inform you of the undeterminate and irreſolute ſituation they ſtill continue in; nor can I, with any proſpects of advantage, croſs the river, for I am too well aſſured they will not venture to remain within 20 coſs of me, and it is almoſt as certain the Marattas would retreat to the capital, of courſe render it impoſſible for me to attempt a purſuit, your inſtruction only authorizing me to act for the defence of the province of Corah and the Rohilla poſſeſſions on this ſide of the Ganges; or, it is not impoſſible but the Marattas might croſs the river higher up, and commit depredations afreſh on the already diſtreſſed country. Unleſs therefore the Marattas ſhould ſhould move towards the province of Corah, I ſhall not think of croſſing the river; but in that caſe I ſhall not heſitate to purſue them with all expedition, as it will be a means of ſecuring a paſſage for the King to the Vizier, as well as render the Marattas cautious how they attempt the Corah provinces with our army following in the rear.

A Vackeel from Buſſagee has been ſome days in the Vizier's camp, and he was introduced to me, but no buſineſs was talked on, any further than very warm cautions on my part againſt their preſuming to advance towards the Corah province. His Excellency tells me he will keep matters in the ſame ſtate of ſuſpence, if poſſible, till the riſing of the Ganges ſhall render the preſent fords impaſſable, and this muſt very ſhortly be the caſe, as it appears the ſnow on the mountains already begins to thaw, by the river having roſe ſomewhat ſince our coming to this ground.

R. Barker.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

This day I have received your Letter, of the 15th ultimo, and with much concern it has conveyed to me your diſapprobation of my purſuit of the Marattas acroſs the Ganges; I hope the further explanation contained in my addreſs of the 28th March, will induce you to think more favourably of that meaſure, and that it will appear to you an act abſolutely neceſſary, for without ſuch an operation it would have been impoſſible for me to quit that ford for the relief of the Rohilla poſſeſſions, ſince by ſo doing it ſhould have given Beeſa every advantage of cutting off both our communication and ſupplies from the Vizier's dominions, a danger much to be apprehended from a body of horſe; and to have remained inactive and inſulted on the banks of the river, would not have been to have acted with that ſpirit which your inſtructions recommend to me in the proſecution of the war on this ſide of the Ganges; nor was it poſſible for me to view the nature of your inſtructions as you ſeem to have intended, or that my croſſing the Ganges would tend ſo immediately to the carrying off your forces to a greater diſtance from your own province than the purſuit of any body of Marattas on this ſide of it. Did the courſe of the Ganges run from north to ſouth, ſuch a ſurmiſe might be made; but if you will be pleaſed to examine into the map of Hindoſtan, you will find I am as unlimited on this ſide as the other with regard to diſtance; and your inſtructions inform me, that the latitude granted to my operations in the Corah province, which lying open to the Marattas may afford them too great an advantage in the attack, ſhould they be allowed to lie unmoleſted near its borders; but on the other ſide of the Ganges you conſidered that river as a ſufficient ſecurity againſt ſuch attempts, and therefore direct that I do not ſuffer any conſideration to lead me acroſs it. I am now informed, by your Letter of the 15th April, to avoid, by every poſſible means, the marching of your forces to ſuch a diſtance from your provinces, as to leave them deſtitute of their aid; it was for this reaſon, and not from any opinion you had of the ſufficiency of the Ganges as a barrier againſt the Maratta army, that you made that river the boundary to my operations beyond the province of Corah. It was natural for me to ſuppoſe, when you reſolved on the defence of Hafez country, that you meant to extend your forces to the diſtance of his territory, ſhould there be occaſion, otherwiſe your intentions might have proved abortive. I can aſſure you, Gentlemen, that at all times where I have urged the meaſure of proſecuting the war between the rivers, it was never my intention to carry your arms to a further diſtance than you have already preſcribed, nor had I any other view but of reducing the Maratta poſſeſſions that lie on the ſouth-eaſt of Ram Gaut. The ſiege of Ettawa and Kanonga would have produced a general action or the reduction of thoſe places, the reſtitution of which, or a grant of them to his Majeſty, could not fail of producing ſolid advantages to our honourable Employers; and I have reaſon to ſuppoſe the excluſion of the tribute, which the Company have engaged themſelves to pay annually to his Majeſty, might not have been the only advantage which they would have derived from ſuch an important campaign. Theſe were my motives, and if I have urged any meaſure which has not been conſonant with the ſyſtem and plans our honourable Employers have laid down, I can only ſay that it proceeds from a deſire of advancing and promoting the honour and intereſt of the Company in this empire.—Neuroo Pundit, the Maratta Vackeel, has left the Vizier, ſatisfied with the aſſurances of his Excellency to ſend along with them to the Decan a truſty perſon, who ſhall be impowered to ſettle the affairs of this quarter with their Chief, Narrain Raio; and with this happy excuſe the Marattas are in full march to the Jumna, in order to croſs that river: thus they have been ſuffered to go off with apparent reputation, when their moſt ſanguine expectations could promiſe them ſafety in a precipitate retreat only. As your Letter, of the 15th ultimo has deprived me of the only means of enforcing the payment of the moiety of the 40 lacks, viz. that affrightening the Rohilla to performance of their Treaty, it is well known, that neither promiſe or oaths have been able to bind this treacherous ſect of people to their engagements; their own intereſts, or their own fears, are the only ſprings by which they can be moved. I ſhall wait your further orders on this head, provided they pay not their promiſed ſtipulation. And here I cannot but remark your obſervation, that in the whole courſe of our alliance with the Vizier, an equivalent for our aſſiſtance has never been yet ſufficiently attended to; but every meaſure we have adopted in conjunction with him, appears to be wholly calculated for the peculiar advantage reaping the ſole benefits of the entire excluſion of the Company. As this in a great meaſure reflects on my conduct, and the inattention I have given to the Company's welfare, permit me to obſerve, that his Excellency giving the moiety of the 40 lacks of rupees to be received from the Rohilla, together with a payment at the rate of 14 lacks per annum, for the expence of the troops during their aſſiſtance in this undertaking, or an offer of half a crore of rupees, with his endeavours to obtain a remiſſion of the tribute from Bengal, cannot be eſteemed an entire excluſion of the Company; and if he has been remiſs in the diviſion, it was left with you, Gentlemen, to propoſe, and I am convinced he would readily enter into every previous condition that would ſecure to the Company an equivalent for ſuch important ſervice.

I cannot conclude this Letter without regretting, that inſtead of receiving your ſentiments on the plan on which you would have me proceed as circumſtances alter, and the conduct which I ſhould obſerve to the ſeveral Powers on matters which are perpetually on the change, of which you have had regular advices, your Letters are filled with admonitions. Since therefore it has been your pleaſure that I am invariably to attend to the direct literal ſenſe of your inſtructions, you may be aſſured, that I ſhall now religiouſly obſerve them, let whatever conſequences enſue.

I am, Gentlemen, with reſpect,

Ordered, the Encloſures in the General's Letter, of the 11th April, be entered after the Proceeding.

The

The Preſident informs the Committee, that he is lately adviſed, from good authority, that Baboo Sucheram, the new Miniſter of Narrain Raio, on his firſt appointment ſent Buſagee an order to return with the forces under his command to Poona; that Buſagee in reply alleged, that the diſpute he was engaged in prevented his complying immediately with the order, which ſhould be obeyed as ſoon as he had brought them to a concluſion; and that Succuram, on the receipt of this anſwer, ſent a ſecond and peremptory order for his immediate return, whatever might be the ſituation of his affairs. In conſequence of which the Maratta forces have ſince retreated, and with ſome precipitation, towards their own country.

Agreed, we reply to the General's Letters, in the following manner:

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your ſeveral Letters under dates the 11th, 13th, 15th, 20th, 27th April, and 6th inſtant.

We are ſorry to obſerve, that you have taken our remark upon the inequality of our alliance with the Vizier, as a reflection upon yourſelf. We cannot perceive on what this ſuſpicion can be grounded; and can aſſure you, that we meant neither to apply it to you, nor had any part of your conduct in view at the time we wrote it.

As we meant only to give you inſtructions for your future conduct, and to avoid diſcuſſions upon haſty tranſactions, we forbear to reply to the arguments contained in your Letter of the 6th inſtant, but by this general remark, that we directed the army to march beyond our own territories through neceſſity, and upon the principle of defence alone; and that it was never our intention to enter into any active or offenſive operations.—We are glad to hear of the retreat of the Marattas, and hope there will be no further occaſion to require the preſence of the army at ſuch a diſtance from our borders.

Should the King, from the near approach of the armies of the Engliſh and the Vizier towards Delhi, be induced to make overtures for putting himſelf again under our protection, we deſire you will uſe every means in your power to diſcourage ſuch a propoſal; and in no manner pledge the faith of the Engliſh for his ſafety, if he offers to join the Vizier's upon ſuch an aſſurance, for we wiſh moſt maturely and deliberately to conſider a ſtep of ſo much importance to the Company, before it receives our aſſent; and we deſire therefore, that you will give us the earlieſt intelligence that may be intimated to you of the King's having ſuch a propoſal in view.

We are,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants.

Fort William,
27th May 1773.

The General's Letter of the 6th May, above recorded, containing many reflections upon the orders of the Select Committee; the Committee think it neceſſary to enter the following remarks for their own juſtification.—As a Member of the Board, and of the Select Committee, the General was entitled to know the reaſons on which my inſtructions given to him are grounded; and more eſpecially, as in the extenſive province of his command, many emergencies might occur for which his inſtructions would have made no proviſion, and by knowing the principles and tendency of our political meaſures, might adopt them to ſuch extraordinary cauſes when they happened; but if the latitude is allowed him, to put interpretation at his pleaſure on the reaſons there aſſigned for the orders given him, and to inveſtitute himſelf the judge in what caſes they are applicable to thoſe orders, or empower him to tranſgreſs them; it is ſurely unneceſſary, and we muſt conſider it as an indiſcretion, to ſubject the authority of Government to the appearance of ſo much levity or weakneſs, in preſcribing any limits to his operations, or laying down any rules for his conduct which are to depend on his will the inſtant they are communicated to him.

APPENDIX No. 8.

The orders of the Board are full, minute, and peremptory, and implicit obedience is required to them. Every caſe which occurred to the foreſight of the Members of the Adminiſtration, of whom the General was one and perſonally preſent, was diſtinctly conſidered, and the mode of action preſcribed for each; the ſituation of the army in which the General thought proper to croſs the Ganges and attack the Marattas, was foreſeen, and expreſsly deſcribed in the inſtructions, which forbid him to croſs the river from the Rohilla diſtricts, whatever advantage or provocation the neighbourhood of the Marattas might afford him. The immediate conſequences of his thus tranſgreſſing the bounds preſcribed to him are immaterial; the Government was charged with the reſponſibility; it was their duty and it was their intereſt to keep the reins of controul in their own hands; once let fall they would not eaſily be reſumed. If they had ſuffered this ſingle inſtance of deviation from their commands to paſs unnoticed, by what power was the army to be reſtrained from proceeding to any diſtance, or engaging in the moſt dangerous enterprizes? or on what principle could the Commander be judged culpable for following the dictates of his own judgment, when he was thus indefinitely authorized to do it?

Every motive which ſwayed the Board could not be committed to record, neither was it neceſſary. It will eaſily be ſeen that it was with reluctance that the Board aſſented to the march of the army beyond our own frontiers; compelled to it by the double obligation of protecting the perſon and poſſeſſions of the Vizier our ally, and maintaining our own rights to the province of Corah, wreſted from the hands of the King, to whom it was conditionally granted on the part of the Company, and threatened with an inſtant invaſion. In both theſe objects we were happily furniſhed with clear and undoubted authority from the Company, and we were peremptorily forbid to go beyond them. Conſonant to the orders which had been given to us were thoſe we gave to the General, to defend the poſſeſſions of the Vizier and the province of Corah, and to make them the ſole object of his attention: he was forbid to paſs the borders of Corah, except for an inſtant in the proſecution of an immediate ſervice, becauſe no limitation could be fixed beyond it; he was allowed a greater latitude on the eaſtern ſide of the river, and authorized to penetrate into the Rohilla diſtricts, becauſe the whole ſpace which he was allowed to act in was bounded by ſuch clear limits, that it was impoſſible for him to paſs them without a breach of orders, and there was no danger of his acting at any diſtance within that extent. We knew that the whole ambition of the Vizier was to go to Delhi, and to declare open war with the Marattas; we knew, that both were points of powerful attraction to the ambition of a military Commander, and that the neighbourhood of the Marattas would afford an equal invitation to the luſt and pride of every officer of the army. It was our ſole fear only that we dreaded being led to exertions, which might involve us in an endleſs war with a Power with whom it was not our intereſt, and contrary to our duty, to break, and deprive our own poſſeſſions of the ſervice of one-third of our army for perhaps years to come. Theſe were the grounds of our precautions, and not any geographical diſtance, which the General ſuppoſes: be the ſole conſideration which excited them. Nothing more evidently marks this principle than the diſtinction made in our Letters of the 30th March from the original inſtructions given him, by allowing him to paſs the Ganges, and attack the Marattas if they ſhould attempt to invade the Corah province, and he could thus include them between his army and that province; but on no account to croſs the river to attack them in a ſituation which ſhould oblige him to a further removal from the preſcribed line of his operations.

We cannot have a more convincing proof of the neceſſity of the precautions which we had taken, than the Letter now before us, in which the General informed as he was of our reſolution to act on the defenſive only, and equally informed with the Board of the peremptory commands of the Court of Directors, not to mention the engagements between the Maratta ſtates and his Majeſty's miniſters at Fort Saint George, which though not binding on this Government, ought nevertheleſs to be a prudential conſideration in its concerns with that nation, yet heſitates not to declare, that it "was his view to reduce the "Maratta poſſeſſions, which lie to the ſouth-eaſt of Ram "Gaut, to beſiege Ettawa and Kinnoge, bring the Ma- "rattas to a general action, or reduce thoſe places," and we muſt include, as a conſequence inevitably implied, to conquer the whole extent of country ſituated between the Ganges and Jumna, a country exceeding in extent and power the whole diſtrict of Corah and Illahabad. Theſe he owns to have been his motives in the meaſure which he was proſecuting, of which we muſt ſuppoſe from the context the croſſing of the Ganges to be a conſequence, as the whole ſcope of his argument is the juſtification of that meaſure, in diametrical oppoſition to every letter of his inſtructions, and without a ſingle advantage offered in reverſion, which could recompence the Company, for the riſque and expence which would attend ſo irregular and boundleſs a project. If this is inſufficient to ſhew the tendency of the General's meaſures, whatever might have been his intention, the Letter from the Vizier to the Preſident will amply juſtify the Board in their apprehenſions of the conſequences which even the ſlighteſt deviation from their orders, in a point ſo eſſential, might produce to the Company's intereſt.

The reſtitution of theſe countries to the Marattas, or a grant of them to the King, and the exemption of the tribute, are the ſole benefits mentioned by the General as likely to be derived from ſuch a campaign. We ſhould not think ourſelves juſtified in involving the Company in a war at ſuch a diſtance, and with ſuch an enemy, on the ſole proſpect of recompence in the ſale of our conqueſts, which it would be impoſſible for us to maintain to their preſent poſſeſſors. We would gain nothing by the grant of them to the King; and as to the exemption of the tribute, it can be no object, while we actually withhold it on principles which it is unneceſſary to diſcuſs in this place, and moſt certainly the mere deed of renunciation cannot be ſo valuable an acquiſition as to juſtify our obtaining it at the price of ſo deſperate an expedient as a diſtant and endleſs war with the Marattas. The General ſeems to expect other advantages from the undertaking; we ſee none could poſſibly attend, unleſs by a previous Treaty, ſecuring for the Company an equivalent nearer home in exchange for the acquiſitions made by our arms in the proſecution of it. There is a wide difference between an actual ſtipulation for an equivalent in lieu of conqueſts to be made, and a negociation for the ceſſion of them when they are made, and when it is known that we cannot keep them. We find in many of the General's Letters, expreſſions which cannot be read in whatever ſenſe they were written, without conveying the idea of reproach caſt on the Adminiſtration, for reſtraining the General from commencing hoſtilities againſt the Marattas. A paſſage of this kind occurs in the Letter before us. "Thus (ſays he) they have been "ſuffered to go off with apparent reputation, when their "moſt ſanguine expectations could promiſe them ſafety "in a precipitate retreat only." We cannot perceive how it concerns the honour of this Government to ruſh unprovoked upon every Power which may become an object of our jealouſy or ambition, or whoſe weakneſs may afford our arms a ſure pledge of victory. We have received no injury from the Marattas; there are actually engagements ſubſiſting between them and the Company at their other Preſidencies, and we are forbid to engage in an offenſive war with them. Our duty and the general intereſts, the honour of our Employers, therefore equally enjoin the defenſive plan which we have adopted. Perhaps too it may be eaſily proved that even the deſtruction of the Marattas, could it have been effected as the General's advices ſeem to declare, by permitting him to act againſt them, although it would certainly have proved a circumſtance of infinite advantage to the Vizier, would have been an unfavourable event, or an unſeaſonable one at leaſt to the Company, in the preſent ſtate of our connections with him. We decline purſuing this argument, of which thus much only is introduced to ſhew that we had no objection in policy more than in duty, intereſt, or honour, to attempt the deſtruction of the Marattas, becauſe they chanced to lie within our reach (which however is a ſuppoſition liable to great doubt) and our forces had no other enemy to ſerve as an object to their military ardour. In a word, the campaign has terminated as we could wiſh and intended, nor ſhould we have been better pleaſed to have received the news of greater ſucceſs or more ſplendid advantages, by an open war with the Marattas.

The latter part of the Letter having received our reply, and being on a ſubject foreign from the deſign of theſe reflections, we forbear to remark further upon it.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Reports have for ſome time paſt prevailed, that a conſiderable part of your troops, under the command of General Sir Robert Barker, had advanced near to Delhi; that ſome ſkirmiſhes had happened, and that an engagement with the Maratta army was expected. Theſe reports have alarmed the Nabob, who is apprehenſive that a rupture between the Engliſh and the Marattas may endanger the tranquillity of his country. As we have no intimation from your Honour, &c. of the object of the expedition, or of the operations of the troops, we are unable to give the Nabob any ſatisfaction. The intereſt of our Honourable Maſters on this coaſt is ſo materially concerned in the meaſures your Honour, &c. may adopt with reſpect to the Marattas, that we cannot avoid expreſſing our wiſh that you would be pleaſed to give us ſuch information as may appear to you neceſſary, that our meaſures may not at any time counteract your views and deſigns.

To

To the honourable A. Wynch, eſquire, Preſident, and the reſt of the Members of the Select Committee at Fort Saint George.

Gentlemen,

We have been favoured with your Letter of the 17th May, expreſſing your apprehenſions leſt the meaſures purſued by us in this quarter ſhould anyways interfere with the Company's affairs under your management.

Senſible as we are of the important advantages attending on a free communication between the different Settlements, you may be aſſured we ſhall always tranſmit to you the earlieſt information of any event or meaſure which we judge likely to affect the general ſyſtem; but as your Adminiſtration are well acquainted with the cautious plan we have invariably purſued in reſpect to the Marattas, and as the ſteps we have taken this year tended rather to ſecure than endanger the public tranquillity, by preventing hoſtilities, which muſt have inevitably followed had our troops not marched, we omitted to adviſe you of circumſtances from which we did not apprehend any material conſequence.

Our engagements with Sujah ul Dowla obliged us, at his repeated and earneſt ſolicitations, to march a part of our army to protect him from an invaſion of the Marattas, which they had publicly threatened; and the intelligence of the King's defeat, and that the Marattas had extorted from him a grant of the province of Corah, which we had ceded for the ſupport of his dignity, induced us to advance our troops to the borders of that country to oppoſe their taking poſſeſſion, for we thought ourſelves certainly entitled to the reverſion of Corah, when the King could no longer maintain them.

Our troops were however ſtrictly enjoined to act only on the defenſive; and ſo religiouſly did we adhere to this our original plan, that although the two armies were a long time within view of each other, and the Marattas threw out repeated provocations, no hoſtilities took place on our part; a cannonading was indeed one day commenced by their army, and returned by ours, but it laſted only a few hours, for we acted no further than they abſolutely obliged us.

The campaign has terminated as we foreſaw, and entirely to our wiſh. The Marattas, after being near three months encamped oppoſite to our army on the Weſtward ſide of the Ganges, have at length retired; this retreat has been occaſioned either by a poſitive recal, which we were adviſed was immediately iſſued upon the eſtabliſhment of the new Government at Poona, or from a conviction that they could effect nothing in this quarter; and we are led to hope, from the little ſucceſs which has attended their expedition againſt the Vizier, that they will not attempt again to moleſt him.

We are, with eſteem,

Fort William, Gentlemen,

Agreed, we at the ſame time write to the Preſidency of Bombay as follows:

To the honourable Wm Hornby, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Gentlemen of the Secret Department at Bombay.

Gentlemen,

Senſible that any military operations at either of the Preſidencies muſt affect the intereſt of all, and of the important advantages that muſt reſult from a free intercourſe between the different ſettlements; apprehenſive wherein that you may have received fallacious reports of our intentions of marching a part of the army to the Weſtward, we think it adviſable briefly to inform you of our views and deſigns in that meaſure; and doubt not, when any thing material may happen to the Company's affairs under your management, that we ſhall be favoured with the like communication.

Our engagements with Sujah ul Dowla obliged us, at his repeated and earneſt ſolicitations, to march a part of our army to protect him from an invaſion of the Marattas, which they had publicly threatened; and the intelligence of the King's defeat, and that the Marattas had extorted from him a grant of the province of Corah, which we had ceded for the ſupport of his dignity, induced us to advance our troops to the borders of that country, to oppoſe their taking poſſeſſion, for we thought ourſelves certainly entitled to the reverſion of Corah when the King would no longer maintain it.

Our troops were however ſtrictly enjoined to act only on the defenſive, and ſo religiouſly did we adhere to this our original plan, that although the two armies were a long time within view of each other, and the Marattas threw out repeated provocations, no hoſtilities took place on our part; a cannonading indeed was one day commenced by their army, and returned by ours, but it laſted only a few hours, for we acted no further than they abſolutely obliged us.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Council of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

By Letters juſt received from his Excellency I am informed, that the King is on the point of ceding the Corah and Allahabad provinces to the Marattas; and as he talks of acting offenſively againſt their taking poſſeſſion of theſe provinces, I could wiſh to receive your orders on a matter of ſo much conſequence; and until I am honoured therewith I ſhall abide by the inſtructions which I have already received from you. From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla. Received 28th January 1773.

I at this time learn from the writers of intelligence, that a battle will ſhortly take place between your friend and and the Marattas. Notwithſtanding, by God's bleſſing and the aſſiſtance of our joint union, I am prepared to oppoſe them, and I am ſenſible that the Engliſh forces and your friend are enough and ſufficient to give them an anſwer, and in a proper manner to retort an injury; yet from my forethought I write you, that the forces of the enemy are compoſed of horſe, and I believe they will croſs the river, and ravage and lay waſte the country; it is therefore beſt that another camp, that is to ſay, five or ſix battalions, ſhould proceed and be ready near Benares, and they will then be a barrier to Azom, Abad, Benares, and Allahabad, and be very beneficial. For the reſt, I have before written you repeatedly to diſpatch General Barker; and you, my friend, likewiſe wrote me, that you obſerved the pleaſure and ſatisfaction of your friend, as well in trifles as matters of importance. He therefore flatters himſelf, from the friendſhip between us, that you will diſpatch the General hence with ſpeed and expedition, for in his coming many benefits and advantages are contained, and he is properly acquainted with the ſituation and affairs of this quarter.

My Friend,

I well underſtand the affairs and matters of this quarter, and retaining this in view, I write you that your ſending the General is exceſſively adviſable, and by the bleſſing of God the concerns of the Company and myſelf will take a proper turn, and the good name and reputation of my friend exceed his predeceſſors, and be productive of preſent and future benefits. With reſpect to what you have written, that the General is engaged in affairs in Calcutta, ſince by God's bleſſing my friend is there, I know that the General's preſence is not neceſſary, and it is my utmoſt pleaſure and exceſs of ſatisfaction that you diſpatch the General. In theſe times, your Letters ſhould arrive with me, and mine with you in the ſpace of two days, for it is neceſſary we ſhould be acquainted with each others ſituation; and what you write Colonel Champion on the ſubject of war and military matters, and the affairs of this quarter, you ſhould likewiſe write me agreeably thereto, that being both acquainted with it we ſhould act in conſequence thereof, and ſuffer it not to happen, that you write one thing to Colonel Champion, and I be ignorant of it, and when we begin to act there ſhould then be a contrariety and difference in our operations; on this account therefore it is requiſite you will make your heart perfectly eaſy on my part. By God's bleſſing, and the aſſiſtance of the union of the Engliſh Sirdars, I am prepared to oppoſe my enemies. Whoever ſhall entertain an intention againſt me, ſhall be ſeverely puniſhed; nevertheleſs of my forethought, the ſending a camp to the diſtricts of Benares is highly adviſable, and the diſpoſition of the General is exceſſive right and proper, and will be the ſubject of your friend's utmoſt ſatisfaction. Conſidering my heart in impatience, you will ever be writing me your friendly Letters.

Tranſlation of a Letter from the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla to the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

After uſual compliments.

I have received your Letter relative to the royal revenues. You have been pleaſed to write that the ſituation of the country on account of the late deſtructive famine is not unknown; that the inhabitants were reduced to the laſt diſtreſs, and the country left deſolate; that no one has ever ſeen or even heard of ſo ſevere a misfortune in the country; that it will require a length of time for the country and inhabitants to recover their former ſtate; yet by the favour of the Almighty, the good fortune of his Majeſty, and the prayers of your friends, you flatter yourſelf that the country will become flouriſhing as heretofore, and that you ſhall require honour by tranſmitting the revenues, that I am well acquainted with your ſincere attachment to his Majeſty. What you have wrote is ſtrictly true; I myſelf was at Calcutta in the ſeaſon of the famine, and beheld with mine own eyes the diſtreſs of the inhabitants, and made his Majeſty fully acquainted with the circumſtances on my return to the preſence.

The duty, loyalty, and ſervices of the Engliſh Sirdars, are ſtrongly impreſſed on his Majeſty's mind; he eſteems you his moſt faithful well-wiſhers and the ſupporters of his throne; if from certain accidents there have been delays in tranſmitting the royal revenues, where is the conſequence? By the bleſſing of God and your endeavours, the country again flouriſhes, and you yourſelf ſincerely intent on ſending the revenues: you will tranſmit them in the beſt manner, and as heretofore they will regularly and monthly be paid. May the Almighty, agreeable to what you have wrote, ever protect your honour by your tranſmitting the royal revenues. Concludes with compliments.

Extract of a Letter from the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla to the honourable Mr. Hiſtings.

It is reported, that in a few days after the concluſion of affairs, the Maratta Sirdars will proceed from the capital towards Furrouhabad, and the country of the Vizier; they have ſome thoughts alſo of returning to the Decan; the Vizier with life and fortune is from his heart firmly united with you and the Engliſh Sirdars, and eſteems his own ſafety to be immediately connected with theirs, nor am I diſunited from the Vizier and the Engliſh Sirdars; I am now as your Naib, with ten thouſand good horſe and foot, and eight pieces of cannon ready and prepared the Chucklah of Corah, which is the frontier of the Company, and will give up my life in the ſervice of the Vizier, you, and the Engliſh Company. I will not retire before the Marattas, but will continue firmly prepared to receive them; you muſt ſupport me with expedition; at this time it appears abſolutely neceſſary that you ſhould ſend General Barker with ſix or ſeven battalions to join the Vizier; by the favour of the Almighty victory ſhall be yours. You have not a ſcarcity of troops or artillery; to ſubdue the Marattas is extremely eaſy; the Vizier alſo is prepared to receive them; I myſelf, agreeable to his directions, marched from Corah, and encamped on the ſixth Shouval with my troops at Caunpoor, on the banks of the Ganges. Further, agreeable to the directions of the Vizier I have, beſide my old forces, begun to entertain new, both horſe and foot; a copy of his Letter to me on that ſubject I encloſe for your inſpection.

The purport of the Vizier's Letter to Munneer ul Dowla.

After mentioning the ſituation of affairs at the capital, is to deſire he will immediately prepare for the defence of the Corah province, and promiſes to join him in a ſhort time; deſires he will immediately raiſe twenty or five-and-twenty thouſand men, and not to be uneaſy about the payment of theſe troops; repeats his intentions of joining him with expedition.

Uſual introduction.

We have received your Erzere, ſetting forth the attachment, duty, loyalty, and good intentions, and acknowledging the receipt of our royal Thouah, ſtrictly enjoining the payment of the revenues; and that Munneer ul Dowla alſo alſo has repeatedly wrote on the ſame ſubject; but the ſituation of the country, from whence alone money is to be obtained, how ſhall you deſcribe it? That in conſequence of the late famine, the whole wears the moſt deſolate appearance; but that you flatter yourſelf, by the favour of the Almighty, that the country will as heretofore become populous and flouriſhing; and that you will acquire honour in tranſmitting the royal revenues. We have received the above, and fully comprehend the contents. By the favour of the Almighty, the duty, obedience, ſtrict adherence to treaties, the probity of the Engliſh Sirdars is in the ſtrongeſt manner impreſſed on our royal mind, that they never have, or will, in the minuteſt circumſtance, or on any occaſion, deviate from their engagements. As the above-mentioned Sirdars engaged and promiſed to us, that wherever we ſhould reſide, they never would be deficient in their duty, in their obedience, or in tranſmitting the ſtipulated revenues, now that you have wrote in this manner, relative to the ſaid revenues, it is apparent that the Engliſh Sirdars, and that you alſo, approve of the difficulties we labour under, increaſed by the difficulties and loſſes that have at this time occurred, otherwiſe the treaties and engagements of the Sirdars admit of no alteration; and this circumſtance now gives us the greateſt ſurprize; yet it is not entirely a deficiency in you, it may be ſuppoſed by evils inſinuated, and of the times that Sirdars, known for their faith and probity, are inclined alſo to ſwerve from their integrity, though inconſiſtent with their principles, without remedy. A Letter, giving an account of this affair, will be wrote to Europe; that conſidering the ſtrict adherence to faith and treaties, what can be the reaſon of it? We are convinced, that if we continue to exiſt, there will be no difficulty from that quarter; and that the revenues will be paid as heretofore. As we eſteem you and the other Sirdars the ſupporters of our empire, and our ſincere well-wiſhers at this time, it was neceſſary that you ſhould have made an addition to the revenues, on hearing the difficulties we laboured under, and given a ſhining proof of your duty and ſervices; and not on the contrary to make ſuch a declaration as this. It will be conſiſtent with the good ſenſe of loyalty of you, and the other Sirdars, that adhering, as heretofore, to the duty and attachment, you ſend the revenues what is now due, and may become due, as formerly, to the preſence, and thus ſtudy our ſatisfaction; for we eſteem you our truly faithful ſubject, and the ſupport of our empire. Concludes as uſual.

A true tranſlation.

Perſian Tranſlator.

From theſe Letters, and from all other late Intelligence received from the Northward, the following appears to be the ſtate of affairs in that quarter:

The defeat of the King having placed the King under the abſolute controul of the Marattas, they have extorted from him a formal ſurrender of all his dominions, conſiſting of the provinces of Kora and Kerra, and the diſtrict of Serampore, which was lately conquered, by their aſſiſtance, from the Jauts. His towns are diſſipated. Nedjif Cawn, the only man of credit or ability near his perſon, has been diſmiſſed from his ſervice, and abandoned to the Marattas, who have placed guards round his houſe, and made demands upon him for large ſums of money. The King himſelf appears to have given up the little authority which he had left, to Heſſum o Din, an unworthy favourite, and a creature of the Marattas. The titular office of Buxey of the Empire has been conferred on Narrain Row, the Maratta Chief; and that of Naib Buxey, with the diſtrict of Sarampoor, to Zabita Cawn, who, though treated as their vaſſal, and in himſelf of no conſequence, is nevertheleſs repreſented as the means by which the other Rohilla Chiefs are united in the ſupport of the Marattas, although the dread impreſſed on them by their late misfortunes accounts more rationally for ſo unnatural an attachment. No attempts have been yet made by the Marattas, to take poſſeſſion of the province of Kora. It is not probable that they will venture upon it without their whole force, unleſs aſſured of meeting with no oppoſition from the forces of the Company in that neighbourhood. The Vizier either is, or affects to be, extremely alarmed at this ceſſion, which he repreſents as the immediate ſtep to an invaſion of his territories; and declares, that he has a certain knowledge that ſuch is their intention. He has urged Moneer ul Dowla to raiſe a force, and ſtand on his defence, promiſing to join him; and Moneer ul Dowla writes, that he has actually enliſted 10,000 horſe for that purpoſe. On theſe promiſes the Board now proceed to conſider whether it is incumbent upon them, or adviſable, to oppoſe the entrance into the province of Kora.

The Board are entirely of opinion with the Select Committee, that they have the juſteſt ground to contend this point with the Marattas. The province of Kora was a grant of the Company to the King, and declared to have been made for the ſupport of his dignity and expences; but its being made an article of the treaty with the Vizier, they muſt be conſidered as the guarantees of it. The preſent transfer is unqueſtionably an act of violence, and as ſuch can be repelled by none with ſo good a plea of right as by thoſe from whom it was originally held: were it even a voluntary ceſſion, the equity of it might well admit of a diſpute, and the Company might juſtly reclaim the poſſeſſion of it, both becauſe the conditions of the original grants to the King were defeated by his aſſigning it to another Power, and their intereſts were likely to be endangered by it.—With reſpect to the expediency of engaging in hoſtilities with the Marattas for the defence of Kora, it is undoubtedly liable to many objections: the decayed and yet unſettled ſtate of our own provinces requires a longer interval of reſt and ſecurity; the Maratta armies, weakened by a long campaign, will be more reduced by being diſperſed in the protection of every new conqueſt, and as there are no fortified places of great importance in the Kora province, and as it will always be at our option to begin inſtant hoſtilities with them on the advice of any reinforcements coming from Poona, they may be attacked with the ſame, if not greater probability of ſucceſs, at a diſtant period from that time, ſhould they have even made themſelves maſters of that territory. It is ſcarce poſſible to foreſee the iſſue of a war with ſo formidable a Power, or to preſcribe the exact bounds of it; yet this is what we muſt endeavour at if we engage in it. The Company have repeatedly promiſed to furniſh us with full and clear inſtructions on the conduct to be obſerved with reſpect to the Marattas, of whoſe increaſing powers their Letters are filled with expreſſions of the ſtrongeſt, and indeed the juſteſt apprehenſions. Not knowing what line their orders may preſcribe, there is this riſque alſo to be feared from our engaging too haſtily in hoſtilities with the Marattas, that it may counteract the intentions, and put it out of our power to conform to them when we ſhall be better informed: on the other hand, there is great cauſe to apprehend that our forbearance on ſuch an occaſion may prove injurious to our reputation, and by implying an idea of our weakneſs, intimidate our friends, and encourage the Marattas to form more dangerous projects againſt us, which it is our ſole aim by this pacific conduct to prevent. It is well known that the politics of the ſtate are more built on conveniency, than on reſentment or the point of honour: if they can aſſiſt us with impunity they will not wait for other provocation, or ſuffer the want of a juſt cauſe to retard their operations; neither are they likely to involve themſelves in a war for the ſake of retaliating an equivocal affront if they are unprepared for it, or unlikely to run an unequal hazard in the precaution of it. Although we are informed of the preciſe lines which the Honourable Company mean to lay down for our guidance, yet we are well aſſured, from the conſtant and uniform tenor of all their commands, that they will not approve of our permitting the encroachments of the Marattas, either upon their own poſſeſſions or that of their near allies, if by a mere defenſive conduct on our parts they may be prevented: the 45th paragraph of their General Letter by the Grafton, expreſſing their ſentiments ſo pointedly to this effect, that it precludes any further heſitation on the preſent argument; and we ſhall ſubjoin it as the ſtrongeſt authority for fixing our determination in tenor of the propoſition, to undertake the defence of the province of Kora againſt the Marattas.

Extract of a General Letter per Grafton; dated the 28th of Auguſt 1771.

It is with the moſt ſerious concern we learn from your late advices, that the incurſions of the Marattas had ſpread ſuch a terror and deſpondence into the minds of thoſe Powers which were the remote barriers of our poſſeſſions, that the irreſolution and timidity of the moſt potent of them have given riſe to ſuch ſucceſſes as have encouraged the Marattas to invade the dominions of the King, and lay claim to a part of the territory of Sujah Dowla; but the conduct of the Rohillas and Jauts is rather a matter of concern than ſurprize to us, as the King and Rajah Dowla neglected that occaſion to unite with thoſe Powers, effectually to repel the common diſturbers of the empire, and confine them within the limits of their former poſſeſſions. To whatever cauſes this general timidity or ſupineneſs may have been owing, we find ourſelves equally affected, and the tranquillity of the provinces are endangered thereby; but as the projects of the King, or the conduct of the Vizier, are at preſent too myſterious for us to decide on the motives of their inactivity, and as we know not what alliances may be formed to juſtify us in carrying our arms beyond the bounds of their dominions, we are prevented from propoſing any preciſe plan for your guidance in this reſpect. But ſhould your ſubſequent advices enable you to form a more certain judgment of the expediency of departing from the plan we have laid down, we ſhall communicate to you, by ſome early conveyance, how far we may be diſpoſed to carry our arms beyond the bounds of the provinces or the territories of our allies, and become the parties in an offenſive war. In the meantime we truſt, that your ſole objects will be the ſecurity of our poſſeſſions, and thoſe of the Powers with whom we are connected, both by treaty and intereſt; and as this appears to have been the guide of your conduct upon the Marattas invading the province of Kora, we with pleaſure approve the meaſures you have taken for defending the dominions of the King and Vizier, from their inroads and depredations; more eſpecially as thoſe meaſures are not only juſtified by neceſſity, but are within the line which we have preſcribed for your conduct in ſuch a conjuncture.

Reſolved, That meaſures be immediately taken for the defence of the province of Kora and Kurra againſt the Marattas; that the Preſident be deſired to communicate this our intention to the Vizier; that Colonel Champion be directed to conſult with him on the proper means for effecting it, and, if adviſable, to croſs the river at Allahabad, either with the whole brigade, or ſuch part of it as he ſhall judge adviſable for this ſervice; but on no account or provocation whatever to paſs the boundary of thoſe provinces, without further orders from this Board.

Reſolved, that the Preſident be deſired to addreſs the Vizier again upon the ſubject of the payment of the extraordinary charge of the brigade, and to propoſe an aſſignment; Gazypoor Revenue, or ſome other adequate ſecurity, for that purpoſe.

Reſolved, that the General do prepare to return with all convenient expedition, to take the command of the firſt brigade.

Ordered, that our Secretary do write to Colonel Champion in the following terms:

To Lieutenant Colonel Champion, commanding the third brigade.

Sir,

The honourable the Preſident and Council having judged it expedient to enter into immediate meaſures for the defence of the provinces of Cora and Curra, againſt the attempts of the Marattas, I have it in command from the Honourable Board, to ſignify their orders to you, that you immediately concert with the Vizier the proper means for effecting this purpoſe; and if you ſhould mutually think it adviſable, that you croſs the river at Allahabad, either with the whole brigade under your command, or ſuch part of it as you ſhall deem neceſſary for the ſervice required. You are on no account or provocation whatever to paſs the boundaries of thoſe provinces of Cora and Curra, without the further orders of the Board, but confine your operations ſolely to their defence.

I have the honour to be, &c.

The General delivers in the following Letter and queries to the Board.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Council of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

As it is my earneſt wiſh to acquire the approbation of this Adminiſtration, I have on the accompanying paper drawn up, for your peruſal, a few queſtions relative to the nature of the ſervice I am going upon; the want of which appeared to be the occaſion of thoſe difficulties I was ſo unhappy to be involved in my laſt campaign to the Weſtward.

I am, Gentlemen,

Calcutta, February 7th 1773.

Your moſt obedient ſervant, (Signed) Rob^t Barker.

General Barker, previous to his taking the command of the army, requeſts the Board's conſideration on the following queſtions, ſince the diſtance he will be at from the Preſidency, and the length of time required to communicate with the Adminiſtration on matters of immediate deciſion, will render it impoſſible for him to avail himſelf of their inſtructions with that expedition which the nature of the ſervice may require. The General ſubmits to the Board, whether ſome general plan ſhould not be laid down as a groundwork or guide to the conduct which he is to obſerve in the enſuing campaign; as it is his ardent deſire to execute every thing the Board can expect, without extending or deviating in any reſpect from their intentions.

Queſt. 1ſt. Should the Marattas advance to the limits of the Korah province, and there perform ſuch motions as may appear to deſign an attack on the provinces, and by ſeparation, or otherwiſe, throwing themſelves into an unguarded unguarded poſition, afford an opportunity of being advantageouſly attacked, will it be allowed, or muſt the troops wait till they have actually croſſed the line?

2d. Should the Marattas croſs the Ganges, and in conjunction with Zibetah Khan, attack Huffiz Rhamat (who is not actually engaged with the Confederates) in order to induce him to engage with them in attacking the Vizier's poſſeſſions, and ſhould Kaſeſs or the Vizier requeſt the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces, how far will the Board grant ſuch aſſiſtance, or are the troops to wait till Haffis is reduced, and the whole of the Rohilla united to the Marattas, for the purpoſe of attacking the Vizier's dominions?

3d. Whether the Marattas croſſing the Ganges into the Rohilla Country (not being in actual hoſtilities with thoſe Powers) is not a declaration of war againſt the Vizier? which if allowed, 4th, Should not every advantage be taken, ſuch as ſecuring or deſtroying the bridge of boats, or otherwiſe preventing their repaſſing the river?

5th. Should the Marattas in conjunction with the Rohilla (by which they will become very numerous) ſeparate and form two armies, the one for the attack of the Kora province, the other for the attack of the Vizier's dominions, in order to ſeparate our force by the river Ganges, will not the Board grant the General a diſcretional power to draw his reinforcements from the 2d brigade, ſince the time of writing to the Preſidency will render abortive every advantage that might otherwiſe be received from ſuch reinforcement?

6th. Whether the General ſhould not have authority to make every advantage of the aſſiſtance of foreign Powers, either to breed diviſions or act offenſively againſt the enemy?

7th. Whether the General may draw money by way of loan from any foreign Power if he can acquire it, in caſes where the troops are in great diſtreſs for ſubſiſtence, and no expectation of ſupplies from the provinces?

Agreed, that they be conſidered on Monday next; and ordered in the meantime that they be ſent round to the different Members of the Board for their information.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 15th February 1773.

Reſumed the conſideration of the General's Letter and Queries, recorded upon the Conſultation of the 11th inſtant.

The Preſident lays before the Board the following two Letters from Colonel Champion, directed to the Select Committee and to himſelf.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have been honoured with your orders, dated the 9th inſtant, and have conſulted with his Excellency according to your inſtructions. He by no means will give his conſent to my detaching a battalion of Sepoys, Artillery, &c. for the garriſon of Allahabad; obſerving at the ſame time that it will be weakening the troops on which he has his chiefeſt dependance; but has agreed to ſend immediately four heavy pieces of cannon, with a thouſand rounds to each gun, a complete battalion of regulars, with four field pieces and five hundred matchlocks, ſo that the garriſon will be completed to three thouſand; and he has alſo ſent orders for four months proviſions to be laid in, &c. As I could not perſuade him to comply with your intentions, in having the reinforcement ſent from the brigade, I then thought it beſt to have that battalion of Sepoys commanded by our own officers, and a field officer to command the garriſon, which he very readily acquieſced in, and was well pleaſed with the propoſal; therefore I intend to detach Lieutenant Colonel Upton to command, with one Captain, a Lieutenant, and two Enſigns, for which I hope, Gentlemen, to receive your approbation. The two twenty-four pounders belonging to the brigade will in a few days be at Allahabad with their ſtores; they are to wait there for further orders. I have this moment received advice from the officers commanding our brigade boats, that there is not a foot water in the Ganges near to Allahabad for above a coſs in length, which has obliged them to unload our boats, and will be the cauſe of detaining them eight or ten days; therefore, I have ſent expreſs orders to have the light boats diſpatched forward with ammunition. And on a further converſation with his Excellency, I find he is determined to throw a bridge acroſs the Ganges, and to act offenſively againſt the Marattas, ſhould they enter the Korah or Kurra provinces in a hoſtile manner. I then thought it neceſſary to aſk him, if he had received a duplicate of my orders? and on his replying in the negative, I explained them to him, at which he ſeemed greatly ſurprized, and has declared his intentions of addreſſing the Board on the ſubject this evening. On being aſked, if he eſteemed that Country as his own? he anſwered, that he did, as the King had quitted it without any permiſſion; and further, that his opinion was, that by your order of the ninth inſtant you meant to prevent their taking poſſeſſion of that Country. From its appearing to me abſolutely his intention to repel his force to theirs, I could wiſh to be honoured, with the utmoſt expedition, with your inſtructions, how far I am to engage the troops under my command in his ſupport; for a defeat to him may be attended with the utmoſt conſequence to ourſelves; and I hope my Letter of the 15th inſtant to you, will be fully replied to. He mentioned to me, that Neziff Cawn, who by our accounts had engaged to march with the Marattas, has made propoſals of joining him, on drawing near to our army; and that Mr. Madox, with his detachment, had alſo offered to come in to him; but he was afraid of being apprehended by us. As I am informed, that the Adminiſtration had long ſince iſſued their pardon to this man, I told him, I could have no objection under that circumſtance. By our laſt accounts, dated January the 23d, I find the Marattas had not marched.

I have the honour, &c.

Camp near Mohawn, January 28th 1773. (Signed) A. Champion.

P. S. The troops under my command, with thoſe of his Excellency, march to-morrow morning towards Cawnpoor.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to addreſs you yeſterday, acquainting you with having communicated to his Excellency the nature of my orders received from you, dated the 15th November and the 9th inſtant; but from the great deſire I had to tranſmit his deſigns to you without loſs of time, prevented my paying that attention to the tranſlation of his words, which I ought to have done, and ſhall in future be more attentive to.

When he was aſked, if he conſidered the provinces of Korah and Allahabad as part of his dominions? he replied, that the world knew that theſe provinces belonged to him: that the Engliſh were pleaſed to cede them to the King for part of his ſupport, with which he was perfectly ſatisfied; but as his Majeſty had, without his knowledge or concurrence, beſtowed them on the Marattas, he was determined, by force of arms, to prevent their taking poſſeſſion of theſe Countries. He further added, the Marattas had the King in their power, and they may on ſome future occaſion prevail on him to cede to them the provinces of Oude or Bengal. Would the Engliſh or myſelf, myſelf, in ſuch caſe, pay any reſpect to his Majeſty's Sunnuds? His Excellency alſo obſerved, that ſhould the Marattas obtain poſſeſſion of Korah or Allahabad, he would be obliged conſtantly to keep up a numerous army to prevent their making frequent incurſions into his Country; that ſucceſs would make them bold, and even the Engliſh would find them troubleſome neighbours. He talked much of his affection and ſteady friendſhip for the Engliſh, and obſerved, that his ſtrict alliance with them had rendered him hateful to all the Powers of Indoſtan. This day we have received no particular news from above.

APPENDIX. No. 18.

I have the honour, &c.

January the 29th 1773. A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor of Fort William.

Sir,

I have the honour to acquaint you, that the troops under my command arrived this day at Cawnpoor, and thoſe of his Excellency will be here to-morrow. There is every thing neceſſary provided for croſſing the Ganges; but ſince my making known to the Nabob your inſtructions to me, he has declared he will not paſs over till the laſt extremity.

By our advices from Delhi, dated the 26th inſtant, the Marattas had not marched, and they ſeem from all accounts to be under great conſternation at our approach; and was I to form a judgment, I ſhould think they will not venture to move down this ſeaſon.

I have the honour, &c.

Agreed on the following Anſwers to the General's Queries:

The General is on no account, nor from any appearances whatever, to begin hoſtilities with the Marattas, nor croſs the line of the Korah province, not even with the ſmalleſt diviſion of the force under his command, until they ſhall have begun the war by an actual invaſion of it, and by open and direct hoſtilities. He is to confine all his operations on that ſide of the Ganges to the ſole defence of the province of Korah, and is ſtudiouſly to avoid every meaſure which may draw the Company's arms beyond it, or engage them in an offenſive war. If the Marattas ſhall have begun a war by an actual invaſion and attack of the Korah province, the General will in ſuch caſe proſecute ſuch meaſures as he ſhall judge moſt adviſable for repelling their attempts and deſtroying their force, and for this purpoſe he may either paſs the borders of Korah to attack them with advantage, or purſue them beyond the borders. But the Board muſt leave it to the judgment and diſcretion of the General to determine how far, in any circumſtance of affairs, it may be neceſſary to purſue the enemy, ſtill recurring to the firſt object of the war, namely, the defence of the province of Korah, to which he is invariably to attend; and having executed the immediate ſervice which may have induced him to paſs the preſcribed line of his operations, he is again to withdraw within it.

2d. If the Marattas ſhall have croſſed the Ganges, and Haſiſs Ramut Cawn ſhall ſolicit the aſſiſtance of the Company's forces to repel them, the General will be authorized and inſtructed to enter into a treaty of alliance with Haſiſs Ramut Cawn for the defence and protection of his dominions, on ſuch conditions as ſhall fully indemnify the Honourable Company from the additional charge which may be incurred by ſuch an engagement; and having done this, to carry the war into that part of the Rohilla dominions which is ſituated on the eaſt ſide of the Ganges, but on no account to croſs the Ganges, either for the purpoſe of completing the defeat of the Marattas, or protecting the Rohilla diſtricts lying on the weſt ſide of that river.

3d. The Board cannot admit the conſtruction of a declaration of war againſt the Vizier from the Maratta forces having croſſed the Ganges, nor ſhall they conſider the war begun in that quarter, unleſs by ſuch an engagement as we have allowed in the preceding reply, or by an actual invaſion and attack of the Vizier's dominions. In either caſe (and in no other) the General will be authorized and inſtructed to uſe his diſcretion, either in confining the war to the territories of the Vizier, or carrying it to the utmoſt extent of the Rohilla diſtricts lying within the laſt bank of the Ganges. We are induced to wait for the actual commencement of the war on the part of the Marattas in the latter caſe, by the conſideration of the confined ſituation of that country, and the hazard to which the Marattas muſt inevitably be expoſed by allowing themſelves to be ſhut up within its confines, if they ſhould advance ſo far as to preclude their own retreat before the month of at which time the deſcent of the floods will render the river impaſſable.

Our reaſon for anticipating the war for the defence of Haſiſs Rhamut Cawn, ſhould he require it, is obvious. Little danger is to be apprehended from the addition of the weak aid which he may afford to the Marattas if he unites with them, but it is of ſo much conſequence to preſerve that authority and influence which the actual poſſeſſion of that country and its defences may give him in it, if he unites with us.

4th. This is anſwered in the preceding reply.—We have explained in what caſe we ſhall conſider the war as begun, and have preſcribed the bounds of his operations; but the mode of conducting them is left entirely to the General.

5th. If the Marattas by a divided attack, as the General has ſuppoſed in the inſtance alluded to, and by an augmentation of their ſtrength, ſhall become too powerful to be oppoſed with effect by a ſingle brigade, the General will be authorized and inſtructed to call ſuch reinforcement from the ſecond brigade as he ſhall judge requiſite for the ſervice. But as this will leave the province of Patna deſtitute of its proper defence, it is earneſtly recommended to the General, whenever he ſhall find himſelf compelled to make uſe of this expedient, to keep a ſtrict watch on the motions of the Marattas, and to guard againſt any attempt which they may be encouraged, by ſuch an occaſion, to make in that province, by ſending back the reinforcements, and replacing the ſecond brigade in a ſtate for its protection.

6th. To give the General the authority required in this queſtion, will anſwer very little purpoſe, unleſs he be at the ſame time empowered to make uſe of the means, by which the aſſiſtance of foreign Powers is to be obtained and ſecured. We have not money to purchaſe alliances; and we are prohibited by the Company's orders, and equally by ſound policy, from undertaking remote conqueſts, and forming offenſive engagements with foreign States or Princes. If, by practiſing on the common fears to which all the Powers of Indoſtan are expoſed, from the ambition of the Marattas, or by holding out the proſpect of ſome immediate advantage, the General ſhall be able to prevail with any of them to co-operate with him, we ſhall conſider it as a moſt eſſential ſervice; but we will rather forego this advantage than purchaſe it by pay or promiſes.

7th. Though we are unwilling to ſuppoſe ſuch a diſtreſs to exiſt as is ſuppoſed in this queſtion, we muſt admit the poſſibility of it. Wherever it ſhall happen, the moſt deſperate remedy muſt be applied, if no other can remove it.

To obviate the effects of ſuch a calamity, the Preſident has been deſired to require of the Vizier an aſſignment on the Revenue of the Zemindary of Gazypoor, or ſome other adequate ſecurity, for the further payment of the extra charge of the brigade, while it ſhall be employed on his ſervice; and to repeat to him the declaration, that no remittances can or will be made from theſe provinces for that purpoſe. If the Vizier really feels the apprehenſions which he has expreſſed of a Maratta invaſion; and means to deal ſincerely and honourably by this Government in return for the aſſiſtance afforded him, we have no doubt of his acquieſcing in ſo reaſonable a proportion; but it may happen otherwiſe; and indeed the principles on which it has been lately reſolved to maintain the province of Korah againſt the pretenſions of the Marattas, may afford him one ſpecious argument for refuſing to bear any ſhare of the charge incurred, by an undertaking in which the intereſt of the Company alone may appear to be directly concerned, and his own but in its remote conſequences. It will be neceſſary therefore to mark out the diſtinct plan and deſign of our operations on each ſide of the Ganges, and to preſcribe, as far as the nature of each ſervice will admit, the principal points which are to be attended to in the proſecution of them.

It has been reſolved, that as allies to the King we will defend the province of Korah againſt the threatened invaſion of the Marattas; and as allies to the Vizier, that we will defend his Country and Government againſt any attempts from the ſame enemy. Although the declared motive for the firſt ſervice is the maintenance of the King's right, and although as the original proprietors of the Korah province, we may juſtly lay claim to the reverſion of it whenever the King ſhall part with it, or be unable to keep poſſeſſion of it, yet the principal and only cauſe which has urged us to this undertaking, is the ſecurity of the dominions of the Vizier our ally, which would be expoſed to continual danger, were the Marattas to become the maſters of a country immediately bordering upon them. We have therefore as juſt a right to require the reimburſements of the charge incurred in this ſervice, as in that which reſtricts the more immediate ſafety of his dominions; neither will it be practicable to ſeparate the expences of this expedition from thoſe of the forces which may remain on the other ſide of the Ganges.

We will not therefore allow of any reduction of the ſum which the Vizier has engaged to pay for the monthly charges of the brigade, although a part of it may be employed in the province of Korah.

Yet as this ſum (which is all that we can claim by treaty from the Vizier) is inadequate to the whole amount of the pay and charges of the brigade, and we cannot afford to make up the deficiency by remittances from theſe provinces, we ſhall expect and require, that the province of Korah ſhall pay for its protection by contributing to the charge of it.

On theſe grounds therefore it is our deſire, that the General do uſe his endeavours to ſecure the poſſeſſions of the province of Korah, both againſt the Marattas and every competitor; and to confirm and maintain the Nabob Monier o Dowlah in the Government of it, as the repreſentative of the King, obliging him to aſſign a monthly payment of one lack of rupees from the treaſury of the province for the pay of the brigade, and for a proviſional ſecurity againſt any loſs or diſappointment to which the Honourable Company may be ſubjected by this deſtination of their troops, and by a failure of the other means appropriated to their pay and diſburſements. The General is to keep in his own hands the controul of the province of Korah, until the Board ſhall hereafter determine in what manner it ſhall be diſpoſed of.

In the operations on the other ſide of the Ganges, we have no other object beſide the ſecurity of the Vizier's Government and dominions. To enſure the due and effectual attainment of this end, we have required an aſſignment from the Vizier, of a part of his revenue, or an equivalent ſecurity for the ſum ſtipulated for the extra charges with which it will be attended, being (1,15,000 Rupees) one lack fifteen thouſand per month. And we direct, that the like aſſignment or ſecurity be previouſly demanded and received for the proportionable charge of any additional force which the General may find it neceſſary to call into the territories of the Vizier. If the Vizier ſhall refuſe to comply with this requiſition in its fulleſt extent, and ſhall perſiſt in the refuſal, it is our poſitive command that the General do immediately abandon him, and withdraw his whole force from the territory of the Vizier; either employing it, if neceſſary, in the Korah province, or remanding ſuch part of it as ſhall exceed the exigencies of that ſervice to the province of Bahar. In caſe of ſuch an event, he is to give us immediate advice thereof, that we may reſolve on the neceſſary meaſures for recovering the arrears which may ſtill be due from the Vizier, and the further expences of the brigade. If the above precautions are rigidly attended to, there will be little hazard of a want of money to pay the troops. Should any unforeſeen accident or circumſtance deprive us of theſe reſources, we repeat, that we muſt ſubmit to the alternative propoſed by the General, as to an unavoidable neceſſity, and leave it to him to act in every ſuch inſtance as his judgment ſhall direct him, for the good of the ſervice, and the ſafety of the troops under his command.

Read, and approved, the Conſultation of the inſtant.

The Secretary having prepared the following Inſtructions for General Barker, agreeable to the Reſolution of the 15th inſtant, lays them before the Board for their conſideration.

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker.

Sir,

Inſtructions to Brig. General Sir Robert Barker, on his joining the army.

The ſituation of affairs on the frontiers of our poſſeſſions, and in the countries of Corah and Oud, requiring the appearance of the Company's forces to encourage their allies, and check the hoſtile deſigns of the Marattas; we have judged it expedient that you proceed to theſe parts without loſs of time, to aſſume the command of the troops employed in thoſe ſervices, and to tranſact ſuch other matters as ſhall be from time to time intruſted to your management by the Select Committee or this Board. In the meantime, for your immediate direction, you will conſult the following Inſtructions, conforming to them as cloſely as circumſtances will permit.

1ſt. You will repair with all convenient expedition to join the firſt brigade in the country of Oud, and to take the immediate command of it; but as we deem it highly neceſſary that you have an interview as ſoon as poſſible, with the Vizier, it is left to your diſcretion to proceed to him before you join the brigade, ſhould he be abſent from it.

2d. On a meeting with him, you are to conſult together on the beſt plan of operations for fulfilling the objects of your commiſſion, viz. the defence and ſecurity of his country, and of the provinces of Corah and Allahabad.

3d. Although for the firſt object our intention was to confine our operations altogether within the limits of the Vizier's dominions, yet for reaſons, with which as a Member of the Board you are well acquainted, we have determined to include in the line of defence the Rohilla diſtrict laying on the ſame ſide of the river, known by the name of the Country of Hafiz Rahmet Cawn; and for that purpoſe you are hereby authorized to enter into treaty with Hafiz Rahmet Cawn for the defence and protection of his dominions, on ſuch conditions as ſhall fully indemnify the Company for the additional charge and hazard which may be incurred by ſuch an engagement.

4th. But ſhould Hafiz Rahmet Cawn either fall into the hands of the Marattas, or from any other ſimilar circumſtance be rendered incapable of entering into ſuch an engagement, you are ſtill to conſider his dominions as an object of your operations; and if the Vizier require you to undertake their defence, and engage to perform the conditions which we have deſired you to claim from Hafiz Rahmet Cawn, you will not heſitate to comply, but adopt the meaſure heartily, and purſue it as included in the Inſtructions for the immediate defence of the Vizier's dominions.

5th. It is however underſtood, that in all this you rigidly and ſtrictly adhere to the maxim laid down, of confining your operations on that ſide within the Ganges, and on no account croſs the river, or carry the war into the Rohilla diſtricts beyond it.

6th. It is further the determination of the Board, of which you will take particular notice, that no operation for the Vizier's defence ſhall be carried into execution without a previous ſtipulation on his part, for the extra charges attending the ſuccours we afford him. We have eſtimated this at rupees 1,15,000 per month, and have required an aſſignment on his revenue for the amount. You will therefore, as a preliminary, demand and receive the aſſignment required by us; and in caſe an additional force ſhould be hereafter called for on his requiſition, you are (previous to their march) alſo to require and receive a proportionable aſſignment for the extra expences on that account.

7th. If in either caſe the Vizier ſhould refuſe complying with theſe requiſitions in their fulleſt extent, and ſhall perſiſt in the refuſal, it is our poſitive command that you immediately abandon him, and withdraw your whole force from his territory, either employing it needful in the Corah province, agreeable to the Inſtructions hereafter given, or remanding to Babar ſuch part of it as ſhall exceed the exigencies of that ſervice; but in ſuch an event you are not to fail giving us the moſt ſpeedy advice, that we may reſolve on what future meaſures are to be purſued.

8th. The recovery of the arrears due from the Vizier for the expences of the laſt campaign is alſo to be a particular object of your attention; you are to endeavour immediately to get them diſcharged, or a proper ſecurity given for the payment on a future day.

9th. The next general object to be given you in charge is the defence of the Corah province; for this purpoſe it will be neceſſary that you immediately croſs the Ganges with ſuch part of your army as you judge neceſſary, to take poſſeſſion of it as allies to the King Shaw Allum.

10th. Should the Marattas on this motion keep at a diſtance without croſſing the boundaries of that province, you are to remain in quiet poſſeſſion without interfering in any manner with them or their tranſactions beyond it; but ſhould they croſs that line, and actually invade the province, you are then to endeavour to expel them by force, proſecuting ſuch meaſures as you ſhall deem moſt adviſable for that purpoſe.

11th. It is underſtood that whether you remain in quiet poſſeſſion of this province, or are engaged in hoſtilities in it, you are to act only as in alliance with the King, and you are to confirm and maintain his Naib Minnur ul Dowlah in the actual government of it; but he is to remain under your controul, and to be accountable to the Company for the revenues of the province, till ſuch time as it ſhall be finally ſettled in what manner they are hereafter to be diſpoſed.

12th. But as the defence of the province is undertaken for the King's behalf, we expect and require that part of the revenue ſhall be applied to defray the extra expence of the expedition; for this purpoſe you will demand and receive of Minnur ul Dowlah, monthly, one lacle of rupees, which we eſtimate to be nearly the expence which will be thereby incurred.

13th. We alſo recommend, that while you are in theſe provinces you endeavour to obtain in the beſt manner your prudence ſhall ſuggeſt, as exact an account as poſſible of their revenues, without taking any ſteps that may alarm Minnur ul Dowlah; and you will tranſmit to us ſuch accounts, with your ſentiments on the means of their further improvement.

14th. Whatever may be the circumſtances which attend the taking poſſeſſion of this province, whether war or peace, you are by no means to deliver over the poſſeſſion, either to the King or the Vizier, or any other Power whatſoever, or quit the controul as above directed, till our further pleaſure on this ſubject ſhall be ſignified to you.

15th. We repeat again, that in all your operations, whether for the defence of the Vizier's territories, or the Corah provinces, you are ſtudiouſly to avoid engaging the Company in an offenſive war with the Marattas; all your manœuvres muſt be directed to cover and protect theſe dominions, and to expel all hoſtile invaders from them; but you are on no conſideration whatever to carry the war beyond thoſe limits as above explained.

16th. It is not however meant ſo far to reſtrain your actions in the field as to prevent you from ſeizing on certain advantages (the war being once begun) beyond the ſtrict limits of the Corah province, or purſuing a ſignal ſucceſs to complete it on the other ſide. Theſe muſt be left to your diſcretion and experience, in which we repoſe our entire confidence; but it is our poſitive injunction, that the immediate end of ſuch an excurſion being accompliſhed, you retire again within the limits preſcribed, and act afterwards according to the ſpirit of theſe Inſtructions.

17th. This latitude is only given for your operations in the Corah province, which laying open to the Marattas, may afford them too great an advantage in the attack, ſhould they be allowed to lie unmoleſted near its borders. But on the other ſide of the Ganges, we conſider that river as a ſufficient ſecurity againſt ſuch attempts, and therefore direct that you do not ſuffer any conſideration to lead you acroſs it.

18th. If the Marattas, by a divided attack, or by an augmentation of ſtrength, ſhould become too powerful to be oppoſed with effect by one brigade of the Company's forces, you are hereby authorized to call for and order from Patna, any part of the 2d brigade which you ſhall think neceſſary for your reinforcement; but in this caſe you are to keep the moſt watchful eye over the motions of the Marattas, and if they ſeem to point towards Babar, truſting to that province being deſtitute of forces, you are with all expedition to ſend back your reinforcement, or even detach ſuch further ſuccours as may be wanting for its ſecurity; at all events you will not fail to adviſe us the moment you come to the reſolution of drawing troops from Patna, that we may on our part take ſuch ſteps here as we ſhall judge adviſable for the protection of the province during their abſence.

19th. Such are the points on which for the preſent we think it neceſſary to inſtruct you. As a Member of our Board you are acquainted with the motives on which they are drawn up, and you will be regularly furniſhed with ſuch occaſional Inſtructions as the alteration of circumſtances or progreſs of affairs ſhall render neceſſary. In the meantime theſe are for your guidance in the general line of your conduct, and as to the particular operations in the field, they will be left as is moſt proper to your ſole direction, in full confidence of their being carried on with all the ſucceſs that can be wiſhed for, the honour and advantage of the Company, and the reputation of this Government.

We are, with eſteem,
Sir,
Your moſt humble ſervants,
&c. &c.

POSTSCRIPT.

To avoid any miſapprehenſion of our Inſtructions reſpecting the Corah province, we think it neceſſary to add this explanation, that we mean by it, the province of Corah properly ſo called, that part of Allahabad which lies between the Jumna and the Ganges, and the diſtrict of Currah, which altogether form the territory ceded to the King by the treaty with the Vizier in 1765.

Agreed, they be written fair, and ſigned.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 19th April 1773.

PRESENT,

The honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident,

William Alderſey, P. M. Dacres, Richd Barwell, Eſqrs. James Lawrell, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, Geo. Vanſittart, Mr. Lane at the Cutcherry.

Mr. Lambert indiſpoſed.

The Preſident lays before the Board the following Extract from the Select Committee Proceedings of the 15th inſtant:

Extract of the Select Committee Proceedings of the 15th April 1773.

It having been reſolved to take preſent poſſeſſion of the province of Corah on behalf of the Company, the Committee are of opinion that it will be eſſentially neceſſary, both for ſecuring the Company's rights in that province, and as a preparatory ſtep to any exchange of that diſtrict, or other mode of ceſſion which may be reſolved on, immediately to depute a Member of the Board to Corah, to receive charge of it from the General, and to inveſtigate and form an account of its revenue; and that he be inveſted with full powers to exerciſe ſuch an authority and controul over the Naib Muneer ul Dowla, and the other officers of that Government, as may be requiſite for theſe ends. The ſervice in which the General is immediately engaged, as well as the nature of this truſt, which is totally foreign from the duties of his profeſſion, and requires the ſuperintendance of a perſon experienced in the buſineſs of the revenue, preclude us from receiving the aid of his ſervices on this occaſion; beſides, that ſuch an expreſs deputation will have the effect of marking in the moſt public and authentic manner the determination of this Government to maintain its right to the property or diſpoſal of the province of Corah. And this opinion we conceive to be of very great importance towards procuring an equivalent for the ceſſion of it, whenever that ſhall be made a ſubject of negociation; the more ſo, as the remote ſituation of that country too apparently ſhews, that it cannot be our intereſt, and therefore not our intention, to retain the poſſeſſion of it.

The Vizier having in ſeveral of his Letters expreſſed an earneſt deſire to have an interview with the Preſident, and many points of conſequence requiring an adjuſtment which cannot be effected without a perſonal conference, the Committee are further of opinion, that a meeting between the Vizier and the Preſident would at this ſeaſon be productive of great benefit to the Company's affairs;

Reſolved, That we ſubmit theſe ſubjects to the conſideration of the Council at large.

The Board approve of both propoſitions offered by the Select Committee.

It being agreed to ſend a Member of this Board on a deputation to Corah as above;

Mr. Lawrell has offered his ſervices on the occaſion.

Mr. Barwell begs leave to repreſent to the Board, for their previous conſideration, whether the right of ſeniority is to be precluded by a propoſition ſo unprecedented, as the offer of ſervices from a junior Member of the Council before his ſeniors have been conſulted, or their inclinations made known; Mr. Barwell himſelf would have been very happy to have contributed his endeavours in this line of public ſervice; but as he can never ſo far condeſcend as to place himſelf in competition with any Member of this Board who may be junior to himſelf, he requeſts information of the Board, whether from the propoſal made by Mr. Lawrell they mean that that Gentleman ſhould be permitted to put himſelf up againſt his ſeniors for employs, for which they may be equally fit from their knowledge and abilities? Mr. Barwell has already remarked, that he means not to condeſcend to put himſelf on a footing with his juniors, and if the Board mean to take Mr. Lawrell's offers ſo far into conſideration as to oppoſe them in any ſhape to the right of his ſeniors, he muſt for himſelf decline urging the wiſh he has already expreſſed to ſerve the Company in this line; and he cannot conclude without expreſſing his moſt earneſt hope, that ſuch an inſtance of predilection be not drawn into precedent.

The queſtion being put, Whether Mr. Lawrell ſhall be appointed to the ſuperintendance of Corah, or no?

Mr. Vanſittart is of opinion he ſhould

Mr. Graham is of opinion, that Mr. Lawrell's offer of his ſervices does not nor was not intended to preclude or invalidate the rights of his ſeniors; but as he eſteems Mr. Lawrell a proper perſon for executing the truſt in queſtion, and as the offer was made previous to Mr. Barwell's Minute, which implies but does not record a claim, he thinks Mr. Lawrell's ſhould be accepted.

Mr. Goodwin does not aſſent, as he does not think Mr. Lawrell's offer ſhould preclude his ſeniors.

Mr. Dacres aſſents to the appointment of Mr. Lawrell.

Mr. Alderſey alſo aſſents; and,

The Preſident likewiſe gives his aſſent.

Reſolved, That Mr. Lawrell be appointed to the ſuperintendance of Corah.

Mr. Barwell begs leave to ſubmit to the judgment of the Board, whether it might not be admitted, before this Reſolution takes effect, to read over the orders of the Company reſpecting the line drawn for a preference in all appointments, and whether that line ſhould be attended to; or whether, if not attended to, particular reaſons ſhould not be aſſigned for the deviation? and as Mr. Barwell further wiſhes to know the ſentiments of every Member of the Adminiſtration on ſo general a point as the right of ſeniority, if it is not too great a favour, he makes it his particular requeſt, that the whole ſcope of this matter, and not any one particular queſtion, be ſubmitted to the opinion of the abſent Members;

Read, the under-mentioned Paragraphs of the General Letters: Par. 39. of General Letter, 23d March 1770; Par. 28 and 29 of Letter 28th Auguſt 1771.

Upon theſe orders, which are the lateſt we are furniſhed with, it is evident that the Company, in particular inſtances, leave a diſcretionary power in the Board to ſet aſide the claim of ſeniority. The Board conſider, that to require the opinion of abſent Members on points already determined, or on matters of mere ſpeculation only, is irregular and unprecedented; in either caſe it would ſubject the Board to many embarraſſments, and an uſeleſs increaſe of buſineſs; for if admitted in one inſtance, on the requiſition of any Member of the Board, it muſt be allowed in all; the propoſitions muſt be accompanied with every document on which an opinion of it can be properly grounded, which would be very voluminous; and the abſent Members would have the load of reſponſibility of the meaſures of Government ſuperadded to thoſe immediately entruſted to them; to call upon the opinions of abſent Members, muſt obviouſly imply an inſufficiency in the Board to determine without them, and thus weaken the requiſite powers of Government: to require their judgment on Reſolutions already taken, can anſwer no end, and in either caſe may be productive of perſonal diſſatisfaction without neceſſity. For all theſe reaſons the Board are of opinion, that they cannot acquieſce in Mr. Barwell's requeſt.

Reſolved, That the Preſident be deſired to inform the Vizier of the above appointment, and of his intentions to afford him a perſonal interview.

Ordered, That the Secretary do prepare a draft of Inſtructions for Mr. Lawrell, from the Reſolution of the Select Committee, and the General's Inſtructions, to be laid before the Board, together with a Letter to the General, acquainting him of theſe Reſolutions.

PRESENT,

Mr. Barwell begs to lay before the Board the following Minute, in conſequence of the appointment reſolved on at their laſt aſſembly:

Mr. Barwell's Minute.

I could have wiſhed, Gentlemen, that the occaſion had not offered, which influences me to tranſgreſs upon your time; but as it has been my misfortune to differ in opinion, and to oppoſe your ſenſe and wiſhes in the late appointment of Mr. Lawrell to the Eliabad and Corah ſtation, I am neceſſitated to requeſt you will reſolve me the following queſtion: Whether you had any, and what, objections to the Gentlemen, Mr. Lawrell's ſeniors, and particularly to myſelf, that you precluded the option, which the rules of the ſervice give them, to all appointments falling to the lot of the Members of the Board? or, whether you have been ſolely influenced to the acceptance of Mr. Lawrell's ſervices, by his previous voluntary tender of them, without any intention to derogate from the merit or abilities of others, who might have wiſhed to have executed the truſt repoſed in that Gentleman?—Pardon me for propoſing this queſtion, but it is become indiſpenſably neceſſary. The Gentlemen, my ſuperiors in rank, have given their aſſent to Mr. Lawrell's nomination (I too, in juſtice, muſt declare, that I think his abilities may credit the commiſſion confided to him) and have obſerved an entire ſilence touching their own rights, further than by remarking the lateſt orders of the Company give the Board a latitude to deviate from the long-eſtabliſhed and fixed rule of ſeniority. As I was the only perſon preſent at the debate of the 19th ultimo, ſuperior to Mr. Lawrell, who expreſſed a diſapprobation of the meaſure, I of courſe appear conſpicuous, and particularly pointed to by every obſervation on the record of that day, in ſupport of his nomination; and as I would not have my name preſented to the public in an ambiguous light, I cannot be ſilent. An implied reflection, uncanvaſſed by me, would naturally prejudice my character in the opinions of all men. If no reflection is implied, I demand of your juſtice to declare as much; if any is implied, I expect from the ſame juſtice the particulars of my demerits. Excuſe this jealouſy with which I regard my reputation, a reputation that has hitherto been unſullied, and unaſperſed, during the long courſe of my ſervices. In almoſt every ſtation I have filled, it has been my happineſs to be diſtinguiſhed by the favourable notice of my Employers: and as I have filled, amongſt the various ſtations of the ſervice, many of the firſt conſequence, and diſcharged my duty in all to the public ſatisfaction, I confeſs it would mortify me much to find myſelf juſtly charged with any particular deficiency for the diſcharge of any particular branch of public duty; but as this is a point of too delicate a nature for me to dwell upon, I leave it, in the confidence of being able to preſerve the good opinion which the Company have entertained of my paſt ſervices, and to vindicate their ſentiments in my favour.

(Signed)
Richd Barwell.

The Preſident replies to the above Minute of Mr. Barwell's in the following manner:

The queſtion, variouſly propoſed by Mr. Barwell, namely, "Whether the Board had any, and what, objections to the Gentlemen, Mr. Lawrell's ſeniors, and "particularly to himſelf, in the nomination of Mr. Lawrell to the Corah commiſſion—Whether the Board intended to derogate from the merit or ability of others, "who might have wiſhed to execute the truſt repoſed in "that Gentleman—Whether any reflection is implied on "Mr. Barwell, with a demand on the juſtice of the "Board to declare the particulars of his demerits?"—is contrary to the rules of the ſervice, and unprecedented. Neither the Members of the Board collectively, nor individually, are obliged to reply to any queſtion put to them by a ſingle Member, much leſs to account to him for their private ſentiments, or to arraign the conduct and impeach the character of others. Preſident's Reply.

The demand made on the latter part of the above quotations, is in effect to require of the Board to bring a formal accuſation againſt him, or to give him a plenary abſolution and acquittance of all blame which may be imputed to him through the whole courſe of his ſervices. I know of no cauſe or neceſſity for the former—there would be the higheſt impropriety in the latter.

The general order alluded to by Mr. Barwell, was not before the Board when they reſolved on the appointment of Mr. Lawrell; nor does it any where appear to have been the ground of that Reſolution; on the contrary, they proceeded in this as hath been uſual in all extraordinary commiſſions, by making the election without any regard to the line of ſeniority; but merely to the nature of the ſervice which was to be performed, and to the fitneſs of the perſon who ſhould offer himſelf for that ſervice.

I have ſaid, that this is the rule of the ſervice. Many reaſons might be aſſigned why this ought to be ſo.

Thoſe to whoſe lot ſuch commiſſions would fall by ſeniority, may wiſh, from private motives, to decline them, although they might not chooſe to aſſign the reaſons, or declare their reluctance to go upon any ſervice in which the public intereſt is materially concerned; and it would be contrary to good policy to intruſt ſuch commiſſions to the charge of perſons who accepted of them with reluctance.

Extraordinary ſervices require particular talents to execute them; with which certain perſons may be endowed in a degree beyond others, who may be better qualified for affairs of a different kind, or for buſineſs in general. Why ſhould the Government preclude itſelf from the benefit of making its own election in ſuch caſes; or why muſt muſt it be accompanied by an invidious and partial compariſon of the merits of thoſe who may be competitors for it?

Perhaps alſo, as Mr. Barwell has aſſerted, objections founded on incapacity, on peculiarities of diſpoſition which diſqualify them for the particular ſervice which is to be performed, or on the general run or tenor of their character, which do not depend on detached circumſtances, nor can be eaſily eſtabliſhed by legal proof.

To prevent miſconſtructions, I declare that I do not in theſe inſtances mean to allude to any particular perſons, but only to ſhew the inconveniences which would ariſe from an invariable choice of the ſenior Members of the Board in all extraordinary commiſſions. I will however add, for the information of my honourable Employers, who, from the abundance of argument which has been waſted on this ſubject, may be led to ſuſpect ſome unworthy motive in the diſtinction which has apparently been paid to Mr. Lawrell, that I myſelf was influenced by two conſiderations which may be deemed perſonal. I know Mr. Lawrell to be poſſeſſed of much knowledge in the general buſineſs of the revenue, of uncommon talents in accounts, and a great ſhare both of method and aſſiduity; qualifications peculiarly adapted to the ſervice on which he was to be employed.

Lawrell.

Barwell.

Mr. Barwell has made it neceſſary to declare, that although I have the juſteſt deference for his abilities, I have not yet had an opportunity of experiencing their effects but in points of controverſy or oppoſition, nor derived any benefit from his aſſiſtance; that, whether from a different mode of thinking, or contrariety of temper, or from whatever cauſe, it has not been my good fortune to be upon a footing of confidential communication with him; and therefore I would not judge him to be the fitteſt perſon for a ſervice which was to be preparatory to my own, and which would impoſe upon me the neceſſity of taking his aſſiſtance, and of conſulting with him on points of the utmoſt importance to the political intereſts of the Company, and requiring inſtant deciſion if the propoſed interview with the Vizier ſhould take place.

I am ſorry to be compelled to ſuch a declaration. I am ſatisfied to refer the Court of Directors for the juſtice of it to their public records; and hope I ſhall ſtand juſtified in their opinion, for the motives which have led me to the preference of Mr. Lawrell, in a caſe which was never yet conſidered as determinable by the ſtrict line of ſeniority.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

Mr. Barwell further begs leave to record his ſentiments in the following Minute.

Mr. Barwell's Anſwer to the Preſident's Obſervations.

The honourable the Preſident's obſervations, touching the queſtions I propoſed to the Board on the ſubject of the Corah appointment, which took place in favour of Mr. Lawrell, are ſuch as might have occurred to my mind; becauſe the propriety of the ſentiments urged for a deviation from the ſtrict line of ſeniority on extraordinary occaſions, and under very particular circumſtances, are doubtleſs obvious, and will always be admitted by men capable of diſtinguiſhing what is beneficial for the public ſervice. I ſhould not have given the Board the trouble of my preceding Minute, but for the reaſon therein aſſigned; the jealouſy with which I conceive every man will regard his own character, who is conſcious of meriting well from the public, and deſirous of vindicating himſelf againſt any public exception that can be made to his pretenſions to ſerve the Company in any line of duty to which he may with propriety aſpire. In this reſpect having acquitted myſelf of the duty I owed to myſelf, I can only lament my not being favoured with the Governor's confidence, to balance in his mind the objections which he declares to have preponderated againſt me. At the ſame time that I feel the deepeſt concern at ſo public a mark of his diſſatisfaction, I can ſafely aver my unhappineſs in the particular which he has reluctantly noticed, to be my thinking differently of the ſubjects which appear upon your records; my principle would be very much miſtaken indeed, if an idea of oppoſition ſhould be aſcribed to me, an idea I diſclaim as entirely foreign to my thoughts, while I admit that a free and impartial diſcuſſion of points that fell under the Board's conſideration, made me deem it my duty to ſpeak my particular ſentiments. Where they appear repugnant to the ſenſe of the majority, my wiſhes, my inclination, and my intereſt, lead me to deſire nothing more ardently than to conform to every opinion, the propriety of which may have been admitted by the ſanction of your approval: you may imagine then that the occaſions which aroſe, were a force upon my inclinations, and compelled me in the inſtances in which I have differed, either to give up my own judgment without conviction of its being erroneous, or to recoil it. Your candour, I am convinced, did not impoſe on me the firſt; and I am ſatisfied you will be no longer diſpleaſed with the laſt, when you credit my obſervation, that it was the reſult of the firſt.

The utility of the meaſure which has given riſe to the preſent argument, I approved from ſentiments formed regarding it long ſince; and theſe I ſubmitted to the Governor, actuated equally to lay them before him by private delicacy and deference to his ſtation, as by my public duty. It proved my happineſs on this occaſion to hear from him, that the ſame ſubject had a place in his thoughts, and that it would be ſhortly perfected and brought before the Board. You have ſince ſeen and approved the Governor's plan; and I flatter myſelf, from his great political knowledge and abilities, every happy conſequence will reſult to your affairs in the execution of the commiſſion with which he is entruſted. Pardon me, if you think I have unneceſſarily engaged your time; and let the idea which renders a ſubject intereſting to any particular character, influence your indulgence to the perſon who may be under the impulſe of that idea.

(Signed) Rich^d Barwell.

The Preſident craves the indulgence of the Board, while he ſubjoins a few words as a cloſe to the ſubject of the forgoing Minutes. The Preſident's ſecond Minute.

He ſincerely acknowledges the ſatisfaction he has received from the very candid and liberal reception which Mr. Barwell has been pleaſed to give to his explanation of the motives which induced him to prefer Mr. Lawrell for the deputation to Corah; and he here repeats, that his ſole view was to ſecure, in the execution of the important negociations which had been aſſigned him by the Board, a cordial and effective aſſiſtance from the Gentleman who was to be entruſted with the preparatory meaſures of them.

He is ſorry there was not at that time ſuch an eſtabliſhed confidence between himſelf and Mr. Barwell as might afford him the certainty of that aſſiſtance. As he ſhall always be happy to benefit by Mr. Barwell's abilities, he ſhall on his part with great cheerfulneſs ſtudy to ſecond the deſire which that Gentleman has expreſſed, that there may be a perfect cordiality, and an unreſerved communication of ſentiments between them, ſo that in future there may be no room for ſuch objections, as the Preſident has been compelled in this inſtance to make uſe of; convinced, that while he at the ſame time finds his inclinations gratified, and his labours relieved, the public ſervice will equally benefit by a mutual harmony ſubſiſting between all the Members of the Adminiſtration.

APPENDIX. No. 18.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 26th April 1773. — Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident. Wm Alderſey, Rd Barwell, Jr Lawrell, Hy Goodwin, Jr Graham, Wm Lambert, George Vanſittart, eſquires.

Mr. Lawrell applies for two aſſiſtants in the buſineſs of his deputation to the province of Corah.

Mr. D. Anderſon and Mr. T. Graham appointed Aſſiſtants to Mr. Lawrell.

Agreed, that Meſſrs. David Anderſon and Thomas Graham, be appointed aſſiſtants to Mr. Lawrell; and that the Reſident of the Durbar be informed of Mr. Anderſon's appointment in the following Letter.

Ordered, that the Secretary do acquaint the Board of Revenue with the appointment of Mr. Graham.

To the Durbar.

To Samuel Middleton, eſquire, Reſident at the Durbar.

Sir,

We have to acquaint you, that yeſterday we appointed Mr. David Anderſon, who is at preſent under you at the Durbar, to be aſſiſtant in a deputation under Mr. Lawrell, to the country of Corah, and that he is ordered to hold himſelf in readineſs to depart with Mr. Lawrell immediately.

We are, Sir, &c.

The Secretary lays before the Board the following drafts, which he has prepared of Inſtructions to Mr. Lawrell, and of a Letter to General Sir Robert Barker.

Inſtructions to Mr. Lawrell.

To James Lawrell, eſquire.

Sir,

Having judged it expedient to depute a Member of Council to receive charge of the ſuperintendance of the province of Corah from the General, who was by his Inſtructions inveſted with that truſt, you have been choſen to proceed thither for that purpoſe; and though, as a Member of the Board, you are acquainted with our intentions reſpecting that province, and the ſervice required from you there, yet, for your better guidance, we now convey you the following Inſtructions; to which you will pleaſe to adhere, and to repreſent to us ſuch circumſtances as ſhall appear to you to require a deviation from theſe orders, or an addition to them, that we may duly inſtruct you accordingly.

On your arrival at Allahabad you will immediately apply to the General (who will be inſtructed to that effect) to put you in regular poſſeſſion of the authority which has been delegated to him in the adminiſtration of that province; and you will receive from him ſuch Accounts, Eſtimates, and Papers concerning the Revenue, as he may have procured in conſequence of our Inſtructions to him.

As you will take poſſeſſion of the province in the name of the Company, acting as allies to the King Shaw Allum, you will take care to maintain his Naib Munier o Dowla in the actual government of it; but you will exerciſe, and you are hereby inveſted with full power for exerciſing, ſuch an authority and controul over him and the other Officers, as may be neceſſary to enable you properly to inveſtigate and form an account of the revenue. This inveſtigation and account you are particularly enjoined to undertake, and to tranſmit it to us when finiſhed, with ſuch remarks as ſhall occur to you in the courſe of this inquiry, and may prove of uſe to us hereafter in any negociations for the diſpoſal of that province, this being the immediate end and object of your commiſſion.

The defence of Corah being undertaken ſolely on behalf of the King, it is underſtood that the nett revenue, after defraying the ordinary charges, ſhall be wholly applied towards diſcharging the extra expence incurred by the Company on that account. For this purpoſe it will be neceſſary that you demand and receive, monthly, the nett income as above explained, and this we ſuppoſe will amount to a lack of rupees per month; but whatever may be the ſurplus amount of the collections, after payment of the other charges, we expect that the charge be ſo regulated, as to leave this amount at leaſt for the reimburſing our extra expence.

You will accordingly explain to the Nabob Munier ul Dowla, that he is to be accountable to the Company for the collections, from the entrance of our forces into that country, till ſuch time as it ſhall be finally ſettled in what manner it is hereafter to be diſpoſed of.

It being our intentions, by your appointment, to maniſeſt in the moſt public manner our determination to maintain the Company's influence and participation in the affairs and revenues of that province, and ultimately to eſtabliſh a right to the future diſpoſal of it in the moſt equitable manner, when it ſhall become a ſubject of negociation; and as we conceive that this public declaration of our intentions may be of great importance alſo towards procuring an equivalent for its ceſſion; you will therefore on all occaſions teſtify that you act upon thoſe views. And you are on no account, whether in war or peace, to deliver over the poſſeſſion of Corah, either to the Marattas or the Vizier, or any other Power whatſoever, or quit the controul as above directed, without expreſs orders from us for that purpoſe. We mean that this order ſhall alſo extend to the King; for although we have taken poſſeſſion of it, and hold it in his name, yet to ſurrender it to him while he continues in his preſent helpleſs ſtate, or in power of the Marattas, would be in effect to give it up to the latter; or to any other State who might have the poſſeſſion of his perſon.

To avoid any miſapprehenſion of theſe Inſtructions reſpecting the Corah province, we think it neceſſary to explain, that we mean by that expreſſion the province of Corah, properly ſo called, the diſtrict of Currah, and ſuch part of the Allahabad province as was confirmed to the King by the treaty with the Vizier in 1765.

We have nothing more to add at this time, but to recommend to you to be full and frequent in your advices, and to refer you to what further Inſtructions we may find neceſſary to give, according as the lights with which you may furniſh us, or other intelligence, ſhall enable us to be more particular.

For your information we encloſe a copy of that part of our Inſtructions to the General, which relates to the object of your preſent miſſion, and alſo of the Letter which we have now written to him, in conſequence of your appointment.

Proper Letters of introduction to the Vizier, and the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla, will be furniſhed you by the Preſident.

We have appointed Mr. David Anderſon and Mr. Thomas Graham, aſſiſtants to you in the buſineſs of your deputation. We wiſh you ſucceſs, and are, Sir,

Your moſt obedient ſervants.

To Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

It formed an article of our Inſtructions to you on your departure from the Preſidency, that at the ſame time you undertook the defence of the province of Corah, you ſhould alſo ſuperintend the conduct of the Naib Munur ul Dowla, in the management of its revenues, and the other dependant diſtricts, and obtain the moſt accurate and authentic accounts of them. This object ſtill appears to us in a light of the greateſt importance, as well for preſerving the Company's immediate influence and participation in the affairs of thoſe provinces, as for eſtabliſhing a right to their future diſpoſal of them in the moſt advantageous manner, whenever it ſhall be made a ſubject of negociation. But as not only the nature of the ſervice in which you are actually employed, and the great and important duties of your ſtation, but alſo the diſtance to which the operations of the Company have drawn you, preclude us from availing ourſelves of the continuance of your ſervices in this particular point; we have

have judged it expedient to depute a Member of our Board to execute thoſe powers, relative to the ſuperintendance of Corah, &c. which were formerly delegated to you; and Mr. Lawrell, the Gentleman we have appointed, will for this purpoſe directly proceed to Allahabad.

On his arrival there, you will pleaſe to conſign over to him the charge of the province of Corah and its dependencies. We cannot ſuppoſe that your other indiſpenſable avocations have afforded either time or opportunity to obtain accounts of the revenue or ſtate of the country. If you have poſſeſſed yourſelf of any ſuch materials, we deſire you will deliver them to Mr. Lawrell. You will alſo ſignify to Muner ul Dowla the nature of Mr. Lawrell's appointment, and the powers which he is to exerciſe, that he may treat both with a proper deference and regard.

All this you will pleaſe to execute in the moſt public formal manner that the diſtance of your ſituation will admit, in order to manifeſt our intentions by this ſpecial deputation; which are, as we have ſaid above, to preſerve an influence and participation in the affairs and revenues of thoſe provinces, and to eſtabliſh a right to the future diſpoſal of them, when it ſhall become a ſubject of negociation, in the moſt advantageous manner for our Employers.

We deſire you will afford Mr. Lawrell all the aſſiſtance and ſupport in the execution of his truſt which your ſituation may enable you to give, or he ſhall have occaſion to require.

We could wiſh to allot, for Mr. Lawrell's accommodation during his ſtay at Allahabad, the houſe which was built there by the Company for the uſe of the Commanding Officer: we requeſt, therefore, that you will ſend the neceſſary directions that the houſe may be prepared for Mr. Lawrell's reception.

Fort William, We are, &c.

Agreed, that they be drawn out fair, and ſigned.

Mr. Lawrell intending to proceed on his deputation to Corah in a few days, now takes his leave of the Board.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 31ſt May 1773.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident. William Alderſey, Thomas Lane, Rich^{d} Barwell, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, Geo. Vanſittart.

The Preſident lays before the Board the following Letter he has received from Shujah ul Dowla:

From the Nabob Shujah ul Dowla. Received the 9th June 1773.

What you have written me on the ſubject of an interview, has given me infinite pleaſure and ſatisfaction; my deſire to ſee you is greater than can be expreſſed. I ſhall now return to Fyzabad, and it is neceſſary that you come up agreeable to your promiſe, and I ſhall give you the meeting at Benares. In this interview many affairs which have as yet been brought to no iſſue, will, with our mutual advice and concurrence, be eſtabliſhed upon a proper and advantageous footing. It is alſo certain, that what cannot take effect in the preſent year will be concluded in the next, and that this meeting will be a means of ſtrengthening the bonds of friendſhip and alliance ſubſiſting between us, as well as of eſtabliſhing an uniform and equally deſirable object of policy between us.

A true tranſlation.

The Preſident acquaints the Board that in conſequence of the above Letter, with their conſent he intends to proceed to the interview with the Vizier already reſolved, on the 19th ultimo; and requeſts the permiſſion of the Board to take Mr. Vanſittart with him, that he may be benefitted by his aſſiſtance in the buſineſs to be tranſacted with the Vizier.

Agreed to.

Mr. Lambert ſends in the following Letter:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, Governor, &c. Council Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Mr. Lambert requeſts leave to accompany the Preſident on account of his ill health.

The very weak condition to which my ſevere illneſs at Moorſhedabad reduced my conſtitution, had long ago (and indeed more eſpecially ſince the return of the hot ſeaſon) ſhewn me the abſolute neceſſity of a change of ſituation for the perfect re-eſtabliſhment of my health; but the multiplicity of weighty buſineſs in which this Board has for ſome time been engaged, made it my duty to defer applying to you for permiſſion to remove from the Preſidency, and I ſhould moſt cheerfully have perſevered in the reſolution as long as I could poſſibly have been able to attend to the performance of the buſineſs of this ſtation.

The approaching unhealthy ſeaſon in Calcutta I could therefore wiſh to avoid; but as I am anxious at the ſame time to render what ſervice may be in my power in aſſiſting and promoting the public buſineſs, I would, with your permiſſion, take the preſent favourable opportunity that the Governor's propoſed viſit offers me (ſhould it meet his approbation) to accompany him out of the provinces. I ſhould not, as I have before remarked, have declined contributing my part to the diſcharge of the weighty buſineſs of the Preſidency, but my phyſicians have urgently preſſed me to try what ſalutary effect a change of air and climate may produce.

Fort William, I am, reſpectfully, &c.

Agreed, that Mr. Lambert be allowed, for the benefit of his health, to accompany the Preſident in his trip up the country.

Received the following Letter from Brigadier General Sir Robert Barker:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Council of Fort William. General Barker.

Gentlemen,

Your Letter of the 26th of April I have had the honour to receive; and it gives me ſatisfaction to find the Board have deputed one of its Members for a particular examination into the revenues of the Corah province. The diſtance I have been at has not allowed me to make any other than a general obſervation on the collections of this province, and you may be aſſured I ſhall with pleaſure afford Mr. Lawrell every information that has come to my knowledge in relation to the buſineſs he is deputed upon.

I have wrote Muneer ul Dowla to requeſt he will have the Company's houſe and lands prepared for the reception of Mr. Lawrell, in the beſt manner the very incomplete ſituation of the building, as left by General Smith, will admit of.

Inſtructions to the Preſident.

The Board having aſſembled this day ſolely for the purpoſe of deliberating on the Inſtructions to be given to the Preſident, reſpecting his interview with the Vizier, and the other affairs in his journey to Benares, they have accordingly agreed on a ſet of Inſtructions, which they have ordered to be drawn out and ſigned: but as in an affair ſo delicate as the negociation with foreign Powers, was the leaſt intimation to eſcape of the intentions of the Company, it might ſerve to fruſtrate the accompliſhment; Ordered, That the Inſtructions be not, for the preſent, entered on the Conſultations; but that the Secretary draw out the fair copy with his own hands, for ſigning and delivering to the Preſident; and that he alſo make out a copy to be ſealed up and left with the ſenior Members of Council preſiding in his abſence, to be kept till his return, or until the Board ſhall order otherwiſe.

Received the following Letter from Mr. Lawrell:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of Council, Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Mr. Lawrell arrived at Allahabad.

I have the pleaſure to acquaint you I arrived here this day; and in conſequence of your Inſtructions I immediately applied to General Sir Robert Barker, to be put in regular poſſeſſion of the authority you have delegated to me over the province of Korab and its dependencies.

Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 19th July 1773.—Preſent, William Alderſey, eſquire, Preſident. Philip M. Dacres, Thos Lane, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, eſquires.

Received the following Letter from Mr. Lawrell at Corab:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of Council, Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

Mr. Lawrell, Corah.

In my Letter, under date the 12th inſtant, I had the honour to inform you that I had written to General Sir Robert Barker, to deliver over to me the authority delegated to him in the adminiſtration of theſe provinces. Upon receiving his anſwer I accompanied the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla to the public Cutcherry, where in the moſt formal manner I took poſſeſſion of the diſtricts of Allahabad and Corab in the name of the Company acting as allies to the King Shaw Allum; and I ſhall on all occaſions publicly declare your determination of maintaining the Company's influence and participation in their affairs and revenues.

The General informs me, that the great diſtance at which he has been obliged to act during the late campaign, has prevented him from procuring any accounts or eſtimates of the revenues: I have therefore begun an inveſtigation of the amount which theſe diſtricts have yielded for ſome years paſt; and as ſoon as I have collected the neceſſary Papers, I ſhall tranſmit you a complete account thereof, with ſuch remarks as that you may be enabled to form an accurate judgment of their preſent capacity and value.

A few days before my arrival here, the year 1180 of the Fuſſiller æra expiring, the engagements of moſt of the Farmers were diſſolved; and as they were unwilling to enter into new ones until they ſaw what form of Government would be adopted, I found every thing in a ſtate of ſuſpence and uncertainty, though the ſeaſon of cultivation, which laſts but a ſhort time, was near at hand. To prevent the evil conſequences which would have ariſen from a continuance of affairs in this State, I am employed, in concert with the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla, in eſtabliſhing order and regularity in the management of the public affairs, and in inſpiring the Farmers with confidence and aſſurance of ſupport and protection under the executive Government of Muneer ul Dowla. The rains have ſince ſet in, and I have the pleaſure to inform you, that the Ryots are every where buſy in cultivating their lands.

As Muneer ul Dowla is to be continued in the executive Government, I have inſinuated to him my inclination, that he ſhould become anſwerable to the Company for a fixed nett revenue. He has hitherto however given me no poſitive anſwer, and complains much of the loſſes he ſuſtained laſt year, and of the miſerable ſtate to which the provinces are at preſent reduced, owing to his being abſent greateſt part of laſt ſeaſon with the army, and the want of government that enſued, added to the diſorders occaſioned by the apprehenſions which the Natives univerſally entertained of an invaſion of the Marattas. Theſe cauſes are now indeed removed; but their effects ſtill manifeſtly ſubſiſt. A want of inhabitants is complained of throughout the whole country; and in Corab, where the lands have long been continued in the poſſeſſion of their original proprietors, ſeveral of the Zemindars and Rajahs, encouraged at firſt by the proſpect of a revolution, and afterwards by an experience of their own ſtrength, and the inefficacy of Muneer ul Dowlah's troops, are even now in open rebellion. Notwithſtanding however all theſe unfavourable circumſtances from the Nabob's informations, and the enquiries I have made amongſt perſons of the beſt authority and credit in this place, I am led to hope, that whether the collections are received from the ſeveral Zemindars and Renters, or whether the Nabob becomes anſwerable for the whole himſelf, if theſe provinces are diſturbed by no foreign enemy, I ſhall be able to ſecure to the Company, during the courſe of the preſent year, a revenue conſiderably exceeding what you mention in your Letter of Inſtructions.

In obedience to your orders, I have called on Muneer ul Dowlah, for his collections from the entrance of our forces into the country; but though he has profeſſed the greateſt readineſs to comply with my demands, and has promiſed to lay before me his accounts of laſt year, he has nevertheleſs, in this reſpect, ſhewed a dilatorineſs in the performance not entirely conſiſtent with his profeſſions. I ſhall continue to urge him on the ſubject, and as ſoon as I have procured and adjuſted his accounts, I ſhall do myſelf the pleaſure of tranſmitting them to you, with ſuch obſervations and remarks as may occur to me regarding them.

To William Alderſey, eſquire, &c. Council at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

I arrived here on the 3d inſtant; and as I learn that the Vizier is already on his way to Benares, I think it neceſſary to proceed without loſs of time to meet him; I have therefore only ſtopt here till ſuch time as all my boats were come up; and this morning they were again diſpatched on to Munneer, where I intend to join them the morning of the 8th, going over land for the greater expedition, and taking a view of the Cantonments of Dinapore in my way.

I purpoſe on my return to examine the Revenue Papers, and, with the aſſiſtance of the Gentlemen of the Board who have accompanied me, make any alterations which may appear requiſite in the buſineſs of this province. The plan which Captain Brooke had formed for the ſettlement of the Jungultirry, or mountainous diſtricts of Curruckpore, appearing to me adviſable, I have impowered him to conclude it, and directed him for the preſent to correſpond with me concerning them. I forbear to trouble you with other particulars till I return from Benares, and enter more fully on the conſideration of the Revenue Department.

To William Alderſey, eſquire, and the reſt of the Gentlemen of Council at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

I arrived here yeſterday, and was met by the Vizier a few miles from the city; the General and Mr. Lawrell had arrived ſome time before me.

The firſt two or three days from my arrival will neceſſarily be taken up with viſits of ceremony, and other arrangements, but I mean as ſoon as poſſible to proceed on buſineſs. I will not at preſent pretend to give any intimation of my expectations, nor do I wiſh during the courſe of the negociations, which I truſt will be ſhort, to amuſe you with the different proſpects of ſucceſs or obſtructions which may occur, that I may not miſlead your judgment upon them; I therefore propoſe to delay writing on the ſubject till the buſineſs be concluded, or ſomething be done proper for your attention. This conduct I hope will meet your approbation.

To William Alderſey, eſquire, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

This day I finally concluded an agreement with the Vizier, the original of which I ſhall have the pleaſure of laying before the Board on my return; in the meantime I think it my duty, by the earlieſt opportunity, to communicate the ſubſtance of it to you for your ſatisfaction, as follows: He has completed his Negociation.

The diſtricts of Corah and Allahabad are ceded to the Vizier, on condition of his paying 50 lacks of rupees to the Company, 20 of which in ready money, and the remaining 30 in two years, by equal payments.

He has engaged to pay the whole expence of the Company's forces which may hereafter march to his aſſiſtance, on his requiſition; which has been computed and fixed at 2,10,000 rupees per month for a brigade.

I have obtained a renewal and formal confirmation of his former engagements with Rajah Cheit Sing.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. &c.

Honourable Sir,

In obedience to the orders I have received from the Board, under date 23d June, I have the honour to lay before you the ſeveral accounts and eſtimates I have collected and prepared relative to the revenues that at preſent ariſe or may hereafter be drawn from the territories of Allahabad and Korah. That you may the more fully and clearly comprehend the nature of theſe accounts, I ſhall proceed to give you an explanation of each, agreeable to the numerical order in which they are arranged in the ſeparate liſt.

N° 1, 2, 3, and 4. The Jumma Waſel Baky of Allahabad for the Fuſſillee years 1176, 77, 78, and 79, exhibiting the amount ſettlements made by the Farmers, Phouzdars, Aumils, and Zemindars, in their reſpective diſtricts during theſe years; alſo the revenue they actually collected.—I muſt however remark, that the three laſt Mehals are inſerted at the rate they were farmed out by Government, and the ſum collected was what was brought to account clear of all Moſuſſil charges; whereas the collections of the firſt ſeven Mehals, being the groſs revenue levied by the Farmers, &c. according to the Kanoongoe Accounts, were liable to ſeveral deductions and expences before they could be brought into the Government's treaſury. It were, I am ſenſible, to be wiſhed that the ſeveral Mehals in theſe ſtatements could have all been inſerted on one uniform plan; but as the three laſt had been farmed out to individuals, and the Government, contented with receiving regularly the amount of their annual ſettlement, had not interfered further, I was unable to procure their Moſuſſil Papers. On the other hand, when I applied to the Nabob for the Sudder Accounts of the firſt ſeven Mehals, I was informed that the King, when he marched to Delhi, had carried them and all the public records along with him.

N° 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9. The Jumma Waſel Baky of Korah for the years 1176, 77, 78, 79, and 1180, drawn out on the ſame form as the preceding accounts of Allahabad.—Theſe accounts were delivered to me by the Nabob Munneer ul Dowla's officers. The firſt column exhibits the Jumma, or the amount of the Government's ſettlement with the Farmers and Zemindars; the ſecond ſpecifies the amount actually realized into the treaſury of Korah; and the four laſt columns ſhew the particulars of the balances. In the account of the year 1180, the Nabob has omitted to inſert the mint; but as theſe ſtatements are wanted ſolely to enable us to form an eſtimate of the preſent revenue, my having pointed out this miſtake will I imagine be ſufficient.

N° 10. A Sudder Account Jumma Waſel Baky of Allahabad for the year 1180, ſupplied me by the Nabob Munneer ul Dowla, ſhewing the amount of his ſettlements and collections during laſt year.—I could have wiſhed to have accompanied it with a ſtatement of the Moſuſſil collections, but the Kanoongoes informed me, the year having ſo recently expired they had not had ſufficient time to adjuſt their accounts.

N° 11. A ſtatement of the province of Allahabad, ſpecifying the quantity of waſte lands, and the total number of Begaes at preſent in a ſtate of cultivation; the quantity to be deducted on account of Jaghires, Ahema, and other grants, with their eſtimated produce, and finally exhibiting the meaſurement of the Malguzarry lands, with the value thereof, taken from the regiſter of the Kanoongoes, according to their lateſt accounts and valuations.

N° 12. An account of the Jaghire and Etamghaw lands in Allahabad, ſpecifying the amount of their revenues, and the names of their holders.

N° 13. A ſimilar account for Korah.

N° 14. An abſtract account of the Ahema and other charity lands, ſhewing the quantity thus alienated at preſent in the ſeveral Pergunnahs of Allahabad.

N° 15. The ſame account of Korah.

N° 16. Accounts Achrajaut of Allahabad and Korah, being abſtracts of the eſtabliſhed as well as extra charges incurred on account of theſe provinces, for the year 1179.—I was deſirous of procuring a ſimilar account for laſt year; but at the time of my leaving Allahabad, the Nabob's officers had not been able to adjuſt it. The charges which appear under the head of Allahabad ſeem very heavy, owing to the greateſt part of the pay of the horſemen and ſepoys being defrayed from its revenue, though kept up equally for the protection of both provinces. The amount of this article ought therefore to be conſidered as a general charge for Allahabad and Korah, and the proportion which each ought to bear, will be ſhewn in the eſtimate of expences for the year 1181.

N° 17. An eſtimate of the groſs collections of both provinces, ſhewing the amount of the Government's revenue, and the ſum alienated in Jaghires, Etamghaw, Atreſma, and other grants.

No. 18. An eſtimate of charges which, from the accounts of former years, and the moſt authentic informations, it is thought will be neceſſary for making the collections of Allahabad and Korah for the preſent year.

N° 19. An eſtimate of the nett revenue of the provinces of Allahabad and Korah.

By the eſtimate, N° 17, corroborated by the accounts of the collections for 5 years paſt, it appears, that the total produce of the lands, duties, and other ſources of revenue in theſe provinces, amounts to ſo large a ſum as R° 349,52,274. 13. 9; but by the grants of Etamghaws, Jaghiers, Ahema, and other alienations, it has been diminiſhed in Allahabad to R° 9,90,541. 8. 9; and in Korah to R° 18,65,201. 2. making together only R° 28,55,742, 10. 9. Some of theſe grants however had, previous to my arrival, been reſumed by the Nabob Muneer ul Dowla. If we re-annex their revenue (rated laſt year as per account N° 19, at R° 1,73,587. 0. 1. to thoſe of the Government, they will then amount to R° 30,29,329. 10. 9. the ſum which may be collected annually from the Ryots of Allahabad and Zemindars of Korah; and from this ſum, if a deduction is made of 10 per cent. for the Moſuſſil charges of Allahabad, and we admit an allowance for Nankar, abatements and balances on a medium of former years, as per account N° 19, then will be left the ſum of R° 26,83,416. 11. 10.; from which, if we further deduct the amount of Sudder charges, computed as per eſtimate N° 18, at R° 4,74,000. there will then remain R° 22,09,416. 11. 10. the nett revenues which may be realized annually to Government. This is the revenue which, from theſe accounts, and the reſult of my enquiries, I am of opinion, if the country remains in peace, and is affected with no unuſual calamity, we may in future years expect to reap from theſe provinces; and I doubt not but conſiderable augmentations may hereafter be made by examining the Sunnuds of Etamghaws, Jaghires, Ahema, and other alienations, and reſuming ſuch as may be found defective by the reverſion of Jaghires which are only granted for life, and by the retrenchment which may be made in the various articles of expence, when our Government becomes more firmly eſtabliſhed, and its effects are diffuſed throughout the whole detail of public affairs.

With reſpect to the preſent year, our expectations muſt be ſomewhat leſs. In my Addreſs to the Board of the 28th June, I repreſented to them the many diſadvantages under which the provinces laboured from the apprehenſions of the inhabitants, occaſioned by the threatened invaſion of the Marattas; from the ſuſpence in which the Farmers and Zemindars were kept during the moſt critical ſeaſon, reſpecting their future maſters; from the rebellion actually raiſed by ſome of the Rajahs; and, in ſhort, from the irregularities and diſorders which ſubſiſted in every branch of the Government. Finding, that under all theſe circumſtances, the collection of the revenue muſt be extremely precarious, whilſt Muneer ul Dowlah ſhould be continued in the executive Government as Naib to the King, unleſs he were bound to exert himſelf by ſome ſtronger tie than merely zeal and attachment to the intereſt of the Company, I thought it neceſſary to apply to him; and did, after ſome time and with much difficulty, prevail on him to grant me a writing, by which he made himſelf reſponſible for the nett ſum of 16 lacks of rupees during the preſent year, excluſive of the rents of the Jaghires already re-annexed to the public revenue, and of ſuch reſumptions as on an examination of the Sunnuds may be made hereafter; and without demanding any deductions for the charges of his own maintenance in the ſtation of Naib to the King. It remained for the approbation of the Board to confirm this agreement, and no obligation was granted by me in the meantime on the part of the Company.—Here, Sir, permit me to ſubmit to you my ſentiments on this ſubject. If our ſyſtem of policy ſhall ſtill render it neceſſary that Muneer ul Dowlah ſhould be continued as Naib to the King, it will, I think, be highly prudent in us to accept of this ſecurity for a certain revenue, and reſign to him the ſurplus of his collections as a compenſation for the charges of his expenſive ſtation; but on the contrary, if it ſhould be deemed no longer requiſite to ſupport him in this character, Muneer ul Dowlah will expect to be releaſed from his obligation; and we may, in my opinion, readily conſent to annul it, and take the collection of the revenues into our own hands, with a confidence of realizing a larger ſum than that for which he is become reſponſible, though perhaps leſs than that which in my eſtimate I have computed the provinces will hereafter yield.

APPENDIX No. 18.

It has ever been the cuſtom to allow the Ryots a total reſpite from collections, from the beginning of June till the end of September, in order that they may have leiſure to ſettle their annual accounts, and attend to the cultivation of their lands. So that during my reſidence at Allahabad, there has nothing been collected, unleſs ſome inconſiderable ſums received by Muneer ul Dowlah on account of duties and other articles of the Sayer revenue.

I am, &c.

Benares, the 22d Auguſt 1773. (Signed) James Lawrell.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. &c.

Honourable Sir,

The Nabob Muneer ul Dowlah has delivered me a ſtate of his account current with the King, as Farmer of the provinces of Allahabad and Korah during the Fuſſille year 1180. A tranſlation of it I beg leave to lay before you for your approbation. The balance which thereby appears due from him I have nearly received.

I am, &c.

Benares, the 1ſt September 1773. (Signed) James Lawrell.

Agreed, That we teſtify our approbation of Mr. Lawrell's Proceedings, in the following Letter to him:

To James Lawrell, eſquire.

Sir,

Reply to Mr. Lawrell.

We have received your Letter of the 2d inſtant, with the ſeveral Papers mentioned to be encloſed. Although we have been favoured with Advices at the ſame time from the honourable the Preſident, apprizing us of the iſſue of his negociations with the Vizier; and although we learn thereby that the ceſſions of Korah and Allahabad are comprehended in the Treaty; yet can we not omit expreſſing our ſatisfaction with the reſult of your reſearches into the ſtate of the revenue of theſe provinces. They appear to us to have been proſecuted with much accuracy and attention, as well as with great diſpatch; and we doubt not but they proved of utility and aſſiſtance to the Preſident in concluding his ſtipulations with the Vizier. We are, &c.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 27th September 1773.

PRESENT:

William Alderſey, eſq; Preſident,
Henry Goodwin, John Graham, eſqrs.
Mr. Dacres indiſpoſed.

The Governor propoſes Kullyan Sing to ſucceed Satabroy his late father.

Received, the following Letter from the Governor, which he diſpatched expreſs in a ſmall boat from Patna.

To William Alderſey, eſq; &c. Council at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

From an entire conviction of the merits and faithful ſervices of the deceaſed Maha Rajah Shitabroy, and in conſideration of his late ſufferings, I am induced to recommend that the office of Royroyan of the province of Bahar, now vacant by his death, be conferred on his ſon Raja Kullyan Sing.

Although the young Rajah has already manifeſted a proper diſpoſition to buſineſs, and was actually entruſted by his father with a ſhare in the public affairs, yet as his experience cannot be ſuppoſed as yet to have procured him that complete knowledge which time will beſtow, I have in the meanwhile directed Sudderam and Ryollaram, both old dependents on the family, men of abilities and intelligence in the revenue, to act as his Naibs, and aſſiſt him in the managment of the buſineſs; and have given inſtructions to the Council of Patna accordingly.

I have diſpatched this as ſpeedily as poſſible, that if this recommendation meets your approbation I may be favoured with your anſwer at the city, in time to enable me to obtain from the Nabob his Sunnud, appointing Rajah Kullyan Sing alſo to the office of Naib of the Nizamut, in the ſame manner as his father held it, as I conclude that you will join me in opinion that the two offices ſhould continue united.

Patna, 22d September 1773. I am, &c. (Signed) Warren Haſtings.

Reply to the Governor.

The Board approving the Governor's nomination;

Agreed, That Raja Kullyan Sing be accordingly appointed, and that the following reply be immediately diſpatched to the Governor's Letter:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq; Governor, &c.

Honourable Sir,

We this morning received by an expreſs Pulwar, your Letter of the 22d inſtant from Patna; and we now return this anſwer to it by a ſpecial Dawk, to ſignify our entire approbation of the appointment of Raja Kullyan Sing to ſucceed his father Mha Raja Shitabroy as Roy Royan of the province of Bahar, as well as of the ſubſidiary arrangements you have made for aſſiſting him in the execution of that office.

We doubt not the Nabob will with equal readineſs concur in your recommendation, for nominating the young Rajah his Naib for that province, on the part of the Nizamut

Fort William, 27th September 1773. We are, &c.

Ordered, That notice of this appointment be ſent to the Board of Revenue, that they may tranſmit the neceſſary directions to Patna.

APPENDIX. No. 19.

APPENDIX, No. 19.

Letter from Governor Haſtings to the Court of Directors, 10th September 1773.

To the Secret Committee of the Honourable the Court of Directors for the Affairs of the honourable united Eaſt India Company.

Benares, 10th September 1773.

Gentlemen,

1. IN conſequence of the powers which I received from the Council of Fort William, I have concluded a Treaty with the Vizier, dated the 7th inſtant, by which the diſtricts of Cora and Illahabad are ceded to him for the ſum of fifty lacks of rupees, of which twenty are to be paid in ready money, fifteen at the expiration of one year, and fifteen at the expiration of two years, from the date above-mentioned; and the payment of the charges of the forces, which may hereafter be employed for his aſſiſtance, is fixed at the rate of two lacks ten thouſand rupees per month, for one brigade.

2. I have alſo obtained from the Vizier a confirmation of the Zemindarry of Gazypoor, &c. in the name of Rajah Cheit Sing and his poſterity, on the ſame tenure and conditions on which they were held by the late Rajah Bulram Sing, his father.

3. Mr. Lambert, a Member of your Council, who accompanied me to Benares, is gone with the Vizier to Fyzabad, to receive the firſt payment of twenty lacks, which the Vizier has ſolemnly promiſed to make immediately on his arrival there.

4. I have ordered the firſt brigade, which was cantoned in the province of Oude, to return without delay to Bengal.

5. I arrived at this place on the 19th Auguſt. I ſhall make a ſhort ſtay of a week or ten days at Patna; and if no buſineſs, which I do not foreſee, ſhall occur to detain me at the city of Moorſhedabad, I expect to be in Calcutta again by the 5th of October. It is a pleaſure to me to add, that by the diligence and aſſiduous attention of the other Members of your Adminiſtration, your affairs will ſuffer no inconvenience from my ſhort abſence.

6. The particulars of my proceedings in the execution of the preſent commiſſion, and of the motives and probable conſequences of the engagements which have been formed, ſhall be duly tranſmitted to you by the Mercury, immediately after my return to the Preſidency. In the meantime I think it expedient to give you, in brief, my opinion of the advantages which are likely to accrue from the Treaty. Theſe are,—a very ſerviceable ſupply of ready money;—an addition to the current ſpecie of your provinces; an increaſe of the Vizier's dependence on the Company's protection, by the acquiſition of the ceded diſtricts;—a relief from the burthen of maintaining ſo remote a territory, which you could not have held in property without a vaſt expence, and numberleſs inconveniences, which you could not have protected for the King without yet greater and inſuperable difficulties, which he was incapable of preſerving by himſelf, and had actually abandoned by a formal ceſſion of them to the Marattas; and which the Vizier laid claim to as his own, and would have poſſeſſed himſelf of had we not prevented him;—finally, a conſiderable ſaving of your military expences, and a greater ſecurity to your own poſſeſſions.

7. The Maratta armies which have ravaged the countries contiguous to the dominions of the Vizier for theſe four years paſt, have actually repaſſed the Nerbuddah; and it is not improbable that they will have ſufficient employment nearer home to prevent their attempting the renewal of ſuch diſtant enterprizes the enſuing ſeaſon.

8. Perſuaded of the importance of theſe informations, and of the ſeaſonable relief which every pecuniary acquiſition or ſaving muſt afford to the general exigencies of your affairs, I have thought it my duty to communicate them to you by the moſt expeditious means. I have therefore diſpatched this Letter in duplicate over land to your Preſidency at Bombay, with a requeſt that they will forward it from thence by the uſual route to England.

9. I have the honour to be, with reſpect,

Gentlemen,

Your faithful humble ſervant,

Warren Haſtings.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 12th October 1773.

2. About a week ago our Preſident returned from the interview with the Vizier at Benares, and brought with him the original of a new Treaty concluded between them at that city. This he laid before us immediately after his arrival, with a report in full of all his proceedings, from his departure hence till his return. The matters which were negociated in this interview, and the Treaty which he concluded, appeared to us of ſo great importance in the affairs of the Honourable Company, that we judged it expedient to diſpatch your packet the Mercury without delay, to carry you the moſt early advices of this tranſaction; and for your complete information, we tranſmit you herewith copies of our inſtructions to the Preſident, his report on his return, with all the papers referred to in it, together with the Conſultations, Minutes, &c. at large, which have paſſed upon it. Theſe are ſo full, and appear to us to contain ſo clear a ſtate of the tranſactions, with the motives and reaſonings, that to expatiate upon them here would be ſuperfluous, and indeed could only prove a tranſcript of the proceedings themſelves. Nevertheleſs, we think it neceſſary, for the convenience of an immediate reference, to ſtate in brief the heads of what has been concluded upon.

3. The provinces of Corah and Illahabad are ceded to the Vizier, on condition of his paying fifty lacks of Rupees to the Company, twenty of which in ready money, and the remainder in equal payments at the expiration of one and two years.

4. The equivalent which the Vizier is to pay for the charge of our troops, when ſent to his aſſiſtance at his requiſition, is ſtipulated and fixed at two lacks and ten thouſand rupees per month, inſtead of the payments of thirty thouſand, fixed by General Smith in the year 1767, and augmented in the two laſt campaigns to one lack fifteen thouſand.

5. We have obtained from the Vizier a renewal of the Sunnuds in favour of Rajah Cheit Sing and his poſterity, on the ſame footing as it was granted to his father Bulwan Sing, excepting only the increaſe of 2½ lacks to his annual tribute, which the Rajah had agreed to at his acceſſion in 1770.

Fort William, the 4th October 1773. Received per Mercury, 26 Mar. 1774.

At a Conſultation; PRESENT:

The honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. being returned, now reſumes his ſeat at the Board as Preſident. Secret Dep^t. Monday.

APPENDIX. No. 19.

The inſtructions given to the Governor before his departure from Benares, which the Board at that time thought proper to ſeal up and depoſit in the cuſtody of Mr. Alderſey, are now opened, and recorded as follows, with the Letters written in conſequence. [Entered in Appendix, No. 13.]

The Governor delivers in to the Board the following report of his negociations with the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah at Benares, and his other proceedings during his abſence from the Preſidency, with all the papers referred to in the Report.

The Governor's Report, and ſubſidiary Papers.

To William Alderſey, eſquire, &c. Council at Fort William.

Fort William, 4th October 1773.

Gentlemen,

I have already adviſed you, in my Letter of the 7th September from Benares, of the iſſue of my negociations, and the ſum of the Treaty concluded with the Vizier; I now lay before you No. 1, the Treaty itſelf, a counterpart of which remains in his poſſeſſion. The other papers which accompany this I ſhall refer to, numbering them in the order in which they may occur.

In the courſe of my journey to Benares, I repeatedly addreſſed the King, adviſing him to ſend ſome perſon of confidence to meet me there with full powers to treat upon his affairs. He did not comply with my advice, but contented himſelf with writing to the Vizier, and to Munneer o'Dowlah, to demand the balance of the tribute of Bengal, the regular payment of it in future, and the reſtitution of Corah and Allahabad to Munneer o'Dowlah on his behalf; but without empowering them to deviate from thoſe demands. Under ſuch circumſtances, your inſtructions directed me to treat for the ceſſion of theſe countries with the Vizier. I propoſed to him the exchange of the territory of Rajah Cheyt Sing for them, but I found him inflexibly averſe to it. He replied, that if I inſiſted upon it he had not the power to diſpute it, and muſt of neceſſity ſubmit, but that he would never willingly conſent to part with a ſpan of his territory; that his principal inducement to wiſh for the diſtricts of Corah and Illahabad was, that he might have the credit of re-poſſeſſing all the territory which he before enjoyed and had inherited from his father; that an exchange would defeat his purpoſe—that he could have no reaſon to give up a valuable part of his country with a certain revenue, for a diſtrict which even in time of peace would not yield him near ſo large nett revenue as was paid him by Rajah Cheyt Sing; and in war, or even the alarm of war, nothing, beſides being continually expoſed to the invaſions of the Marattas. Theſe arguments were certainly juſt; and as my view was to confirm and ſtrengthen the alliance between him and the Company, and this propoſal if inſiſted upon would have been productive of a contrary effect, I thought it adviſable to drop it; indeed I mentioned it but ſlightly, knowing his repugnance to it; and I flatter myſelf, that the ſum of 50 lacks of rupees, and the ſtipulation of 2,10,000 rupees per month, for the payment of an incomplete brigade whenever required for his ſervice, will appear to you, Gentlemen, and to our Honourable Maſters, a very advantageous compenſation for a territory, which perhaps ought in policy to have been given to him, even though no return had been made for it.

To have kept it ourſelves would have been inconſiſtent with the repeated and peremptory commands of the Company. The 7th, 8th, and 10th paragraphs of their General Letter, dated the 11th May 1769, are ſo directly in point, and mark ſo forcibly their ſentiments concerning the impropriety of holding territories beyond the boundary of their own provinces, and ſeparated from them, that this Adminiſtration would have been culpable in the higheſt degree in retaining poſſeſſion of Corah and Illahabad for any other purpoſe than that of making an advantage by the diſpoſal of them; it would have impoſed upon us the neceſſity of ſending our troops continually out of the provinces of Bengal, not at the requiſition of the Vizier and at his charge, but at our own expence, and for the protection of the diſtant acquiſitions; and as the Marattas muſt unavoidably paſs either through theſe diſtricts, or near them, to invade the Vizier, this would furniſh him with a perpetual excuſe for refuſing to bear his proportion of the expence of the forces which ſhould be employed in his protection; nor indeed would it ever be neceſſary for him to call for their aid, ſince the preſence of our army, for the protection of the lands lying on his frontier, would make them a ſecure barrier to him, and thus leave us the whole burthen and immediate hazard of the war, although he would be the greateſt, and in the end would probably appear the only gainer by it. Nor is their contiguity leſs exceptionable on account of the tendency which our poſſeſſion of them would have to deſtroy the harmony and good underſtanding which our Honourable Maſters ſo earneſtly enjoin us to maintain with the Vizier their ally; ſince, as he himſelf obſerved to me upon it, they do not form a compact and detached ſpace, which would admit of an eaſy defence from one central ſtation with its bounds clearly defined, but conſiſt in a narrow line without breadth, extending along the weſtern frontier of his dominion, and ſo intermixed with them (many parts lying on the eaſtern bank of the river) that his Aumils and ours would be for ever engaged in mutual quarrels, which could not fail to weaken the friendſhip between him and the Company, as it would be impoſſible to examine on which ſide the right lay at ſo great a diſtance from our obſervation; nor (to uſe the words of our Honourable Maſters) "could we ſend "a man or a gun for the defence of theſe new acquiſitions, "without paſſing through his country, which would be a "perpetual ſource of diſpute and complaint."

Had we reſtored theſe diſtricts to the King who ſo lately abandoned them, and who is confeſſedly unable, by his own ſtrength, to maintain them, we ſhould ſtill have been burthened with the care of their defence, or we ſhould have given them only nominally to the King, but in reality to the Marattas; the evil conſequences of which it is needleſs to enumerate.

By ceding them to the Vizier, we ſtrengthen our alliance with him; we make him more dependant upon us, as he is more expoſed to the hoſtilities of the Marattas; we render a junction between him and them, which has been ſometimes morally impoſſible, ſince their pretenſions to Corah will be a conſtant ſource of animoſity between them; we free ourſelves from the expence, and all the dangers attending either a remote property, or a remote connection; we adhere literally to the limited ſyſtem laid down by the honourable Court of Directors; we are no longer under the neceſſity of exhauſting the wealth of our own provinces in the pay and diſburſements of our brigades employed at a diſtance beyond them, but, by fixing the ſum to be paid by the Vizier for their ſervices at their whole expence, and by removing every poſſible cauſe for their paſſing our own borders but at his requiſition and for his defence, we provide effectually for the protection of our frontier, and reduce the expences of our army even in employing it; and laſtly, we acquire a nett ſum of 50 lacks of rupees, moſt ſeaſonably obtained for the relief of the currency of the provinces.

General Sir Robert Barker favoured me, at my requeſt, with the calculation on which the ſum was fixed at 2,10,000 rupees for the pay, batta, and extra charges of a brigade employed without the provinces; and I herewith encloſe it, No. 2.

No. 3, is a Perſian copy of a Cowtnâma or engagement which I obtained from the Vizier, confirming to Rajah Cheyt Sing and his poſterity the ſtipulations formerly made in behalf of his father Bulwunt Sing. No. 4, is an Engliſh tranſlation of it.—No. 5, a copy of the Vizier's pottah or rent-roll, fixed with Rajah Cheyt Sing, for the year 1178, and alluded to in the Cowtnâma.—No. 6, an Engliſh tranſlation of the pottah.—No. 7, the tranſlation of a

APPENDIX. No. 19.

Letter which I wrote to Rajah Cheyt Sing, as a further aſſurance of the conditions promiſed in the Cowtnâma

The Cowtnâma was executed in my preſence, and atteſted by me. The Vizier deſired, that the ſtipulations made in favour of the Rajah might be executed in this mode, rather than by an article in the Treaty; and it was equally ſatisfactory to the Rajah. I muſt remark, that he had already given the Rajah a Cowtnâma of this tenor, ſoon after the death of Bulwunt Sing, through the ſolicitation of Captain Harper, by the orders of the Select Committee. He could therefore have no reaſonable plea to refuſe the confirmation of it. Nevertheleſs, he ſeemed to think his former act of ſo little validity, that he preſſed me in very earneſt terms for my conſent, that he ſhould diſpoſſeſs the Rajah of the forts of Lutufgur and Bidgygur, and take from him 10 lacks of rupees, over and above the ſtipulated rents; and he ſeemed greatly diſſatisfied at my refuſal. He argued, that the Treaty of Illahabad related to Bulwunt Sing ſolely, and was never meant to extend to his poſterity; and I confeſs the Letter of the Treaty expreſſes no more; yet I cannot conceive, that either the Rajah or Lord Clive, when the Treaty was made, could have intended it in that ſenſe. It has certainly been differently underſtood, both by the Company and by this Adminiſtration; and that Vizier himſelf had before put it out of all diſpute, by the ſolemn act paſſed in the Rajah's favour, on his ſucceſſion to the Zemindarry. I am well convinced, that the Rajah's inheritance, and perhaps his life, are no longer ſafe than while he enjoys the Company's protection, which is his due by the ties of juſtice, and the obligations of public faith, and which policy enjoins us to afford him ever moſt effectually. His country is a ſtrong barrier to ours, without ſubjecting us to any expence; and we may depend upon him as a ſure ally, whenever we may ſtand in need of his ſervice.

The day before my departure from Benares a Khowaſs, or attendant on the King's perſon, a man of no conſequence, arrived with a Letter to me from his maſter: of which, and my anſwer, I encloſe tranſlations No. 8 and No. 9. You will obſerve, that the acquiſition of Corah and Illahabad, the payment of the tribute, and the aſſiſtance of our troops, were the objects of his commiſſion. As I ſee no uſe in falſe profeſſion or concealment, and have ever found plain dealing the beſt policy, I hope you will approve of my reply.

Whatever policy ſuggeſted the firſt idea of the tribute, and whatever title he may be conceived to have had to the payment of it while he remained under our protection and united his fortune with ours, his late conduct has forfeited every claim to it, and made it even dangerous to allow it even if the reſources of Bengal and the exigencies of the Company could any longer admit of it. Our conduct towards him has certainly afforded matter of admiration to the whole people of Indoſtan, whether they conſtrue it as the effect of a miſtaken principle of duty, the juſt return of benefits received, or attribute it to ſome hidden cauſe: we have perſevered, with a fidelity unknown to them, in an unſhaken allegiance to a pageant of our own creation, and laviſhed on him the wealth of this country, which is its blood, although not one of his own natural ſubjects has ever afforded him the leaſt pledge of voluntary obedience; although our conſtituents have been compelled to withhold the legal claims of our own ſovereign; although we have loaded them with an accumulated debt of a crore and a half of rupees, almoſt the exact amount of the ſums remitted, for the uſe of a man who in return has ungratefully deſerted, and ſince headed armies againſt us. It is unjuſt to agree in ſupport of his pretenſions on the Company, that the tribute is no more than a reaſonable acknowledgment for the favour which they received from him in the grant of the Dewanny: they gave him all! they received nothing from him but a preſumptuous gift of what was not his to give, but what they had already acquired by their own power, the ſame power to which he was indebted for his crown, and even for his exiſtence.

The Vizier was at firſt very deſirous of the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh force to put him in poſſeſſion of the Rohilla country lying north of his dominions and eaſt of the Ganges. This has long been a favourite object of his wiſhes; and you will recollect that the firſt occaſion of my laſt viſit was furniſhed by a propoſal of this kind. He had certainly juſt grounds of reſentment againſt the Chiefs of this nation, who had not only failed in their engagements to pay him 40 lacks of rupees for his protection againſt the Marattas, but had actually ſupplied them with money when they appeared in arms againſt him. He offered to make the Company a conſideration for this ſervice of 40 lacks of rupees, beſides the ſtipulated ſum for the expences of our troops; but he afterwards laid aſide this deſign, fearing that it would diſable him from fulfilling his engagements for Corah and Illahabad. I encloſe for your obſervation No. 10, the original agreement of the Rohilla Chiefs, witneſſed by General Barker; No. 11, a tranſlation of the ſame; No. 12, a tranſlation of a Letter which I received from Hafiz Rahmut Cawn, in whoſe name the agreement was ratified; and No. 13, a tranſlation of a narrative delivered to me by the Vizier in reply to it: the meaſures to be purſued for his ſecurity on that quarter, muſt therefore be determined by future occurrences. I was pleaſed that he urged the ſcheme of this expedition no further, as it would have led our troops to a diſtance from our own borders, which I would wiſh ever to avoid, although there are powerful arguments to recommend it.

The Vizier having no occaſion for the ſervices of the firſt brigade, I have directed it to return within the provinces, and I have ordered Lieutenant Colonel Muir, with a battalion of Sepoys from the 2d brigade, to relieve Lieutenant Colonel Wilding in the fort of Chunar.

In conſequence of the ceſſion of Illahabad and Corah, Mr. Lawrell will return to the Preſidency. On my arrival at Benares he made a report to me of his proceedings, and delivered me accounts and eſtimates of the collections and revenues of thoſe diſtricts; copies of which he has alſo tranſmitted to you. Theſe appear to have been collected with great induſtry, and were very uſeful to me in my negociations.

The Vizier inſiſted very ſtrongly on his right to the balance of the King's Tuncaws on the treaſury of Moorſhedabad. He ſaid, that he advanced the money for which they were granted to him on the faith of Lord Clive's agreements at Illahabad, before there was the ſmalleſt intimation that the tribute would be diſcontinued, and that Mr. Cartier had both promiſed him payment and accepted his aſſignments on them. As theſe arguments appear to be well-grounded, and the amount of the Tuncaws was actually due to the King before he ſeparated himſelf from our protection, I thought our credit required that this demand ſhould be complied with, and I accordingly agreed to it.

His engagements for the extra expence of the firſt brigade during the laſt campaign have been adjuſted, and the account cloſed to the 15th of this month. The balance being 4,52,834. 13. 3. is to be paid by an aſſignment, 3,23,000 on the King's Tuncaw, and the remaining 1,29,834. 13. 3. in ready money, at Fyzabad. No. 14 is a copy of the account.

In the courſe of our conferences, he made a demand upon me for the pay of the 19th battalion of Sepoys, from the time it was firſt ſtationed with him, and was very urgent for the payment. I told him I was not then furniſhed with the neceſſary papers to enable me to adjuſt the account at Benares, this being the firſt intimation that I had ever received of his having ſuch a claim; but promiſed to ſettle it equitably after my return to Calcutta. The vehemence with which he inſiſted on the immediate concluſion of this buſineſs, notwithſtanding the length of time in which it had remained unnoticed, proved an interruption to the other more important affairs which were depending. The encloſed tranſlation of our correſpondence on the ſubject, No. 15, will explain the circumſtances of this demand. You will obſerve, that the Vizier denies his having agreed to pay 15,000 rupees a month for his half of the extra expences of the brigade at Illahabad; but this circumſtance ſeems to be very well atteſted; and he at length acquieſced to refer it to our records, and if theſe ſhould eſtabliſh the claim, to allow it to ſtand againſt his advances for the 19th battalion.

I had much converſation with the Vizier concerning a free intercouſe of commerce with his dominions, and recommended to him an eſtabliſhment of cuſtoms ſimilar to that which we have lately adopted in Bengal, of which I gave him a plan and explanation in writing; but I found it impoſſible to convince him of the utility of either. He ſeemed confirmed in the perſuaſion, that the current ſpecie of his country would be drained by a free trade with ours: that if the Engliſh Gomaſtahs were authorized to reſide there, they would exerciſe an authority prejudicial to his revenue, notwithſtanding any regulations or reſtrictions of our Government, and involve him in diſputes which perhaps might end in the ruin of his connections with the Company. I promiſed that no Engliſh Gentleman ſhould reſide in his country, and that I would never interfere in any diſputes between Engliſh Gomaſtahs and his people, which I left to be decided by his officers, who might exerciſe the ſame authority over them as over his own ſubjects. As I found it impoſſible to overcome his objections, and I learnt that Myrzapoor was the mart from which not only his dominions, but all the interior parts of Indoſtan were ſupplied with goods from Bengal, I judged it improper to preſs him any further to agree to innovations ſo much againſt his will, when I could effect the ſame purpoſes by an agreement with Rajah Cheyt Sing, to whom the town of Myrzapoor belongs, as well as all the intermediate country from the borders of Babar. I informed him of my intention; to which he ſaid he had no objection; I accordingly ſettled with Rajah Cheyt Sing, that the articles of broad cloth, copper, and lead, bought at the Company's ſales, ſhould paſs duty-free through his territories at Myrzapoor, and that on all other goods he ſhould collect an equal rate of duties from all merchants, European or Native, or others, indiſcriminately. No. 16 is the Rajah's agreement, with the rates of duties, and No. 17, a tranſlation of it. Theſe rates are in general a medium between what was before charged to the Engliſh merchants, and that paid by the Natives. The former was only half of the latter. The eſtabliſhment of the duties on an equal footing, will be a benefit to the fair trader, and of courſe a general encouragement to the exportation of goods from Bengal. The exemption allowed on the articles above-mentioned, will be particularly ſerviceable in promoting the Company's ſales of the productions of England, which is the purpoſe to which, in their Letter to the Select Committee, dated the of 1766, they expreſsly direct, that the 8th article of the Treaty of Illahabad ſhould be confined. Rajah Cheyt Sing having deſired, that the general reſidence of Europeans in this country might be prohibited, and that any particular perſons to whom an indulgence might be granted, ſhould be reſtricted to Benares; and having at the ſame time informed me, that Meſſrs. Fowke, Motte, and Scott, had conducted themſelves ſo entirely to his ſatisfaction, that he had no objection to their remaining; I gave notice to all others to quit his territories by the end of December, and told him, that after that time they would be no longer under the Company's protection; and if they proved refractory, he might ſeize and ſend them away by force. I did not heſitate to comply with his requeſt in this particular, becauſe it is literally conformable to the Company's orders.

During my ſtay at Benares, a Vackeel from Nudjiff Cawn came to me with a Letter from him, requeſting the continuance of his annual penſion of two lacks of rupees, which Lord Clive ſettled upon him at Illahabad. Encloſed No. 18, is a tranſlation of his Letter. His repreſentation concerning his attendance on the King to Delhi, and his conduct ſince, has been entirely confirmed to me by the General. I ſee no pleaſure therefore for withholding the allowance engaged to him by Treaty, and I think it may be of material conſequence to keep him attached to our intereſt. But as I would not give him an anſwer at Benares, I deſired his Vackeel to accompany me to Calcutta; and I now refer his claim to your determination.

I applied to the Vizier for the diſmiſſion of Mr. Gentil, uſing ſuch arguments as I thought moſt likely to induce him to make it his voluntary act, but not inſiſting on it. He promiſed that he would diſmiſs him, but I confeſs I much doubt whether he will. As the peremptory injunctions of the Company in the 52d and 53d paragraphs of their Letter to the Commiſſioners, dated the 23d March 1770, required my endeavours to obtain this point, ſo I have literally obſerved their orders in the mode in which I ſolicited his compliance with it. At the ſame time I muſt declare my opinion, that the man has acquired his importance only from the notice with which he has been thus repeatedly honoured, having neither abilities nor influence which are likely to affect our intereſt.

The Vizier left Benares the 10th of laſt month, on which day I alſo departed; Mr. Lambert accompanied him to Fyzabad, to receive the 20 lacks promiſed in the firſt payment for the ceſſion of Corah and Illahabad, and the balance of the extra charges of the brigade being R[s] 1,29,834. 13. 3. both which ſums he has aſſured me ſhall be inſtantly paid on his arrival.

I made a ſhort viſit to Chunar, where I fixed the boundary of the lands appertaining to the fort, and made ſome other arrangements of too little moment to ſwell this Letter with the relation of them.

On my return to Patna, the Chief and Council of the Factory delivered to me the particulars which I had deſired, of the charges at the ſaltpetre factories, together with the ſtatement of the quantity provided, and the medium price (all charges included) for ſeven years paſt. It appears that the price has not of late been increaſed, and I imagine it will hardly admit of a reduction. I encloſe the accounts No. 19, for your obſervation.

In the courſe of our converſation, the Vizier frequently expreſſed the ſatisfaction which he had received from our meeting, and from the friendly and confidential intercourſe which had taken place between us. Though ſuch profeſſions are not always to be received in their literal ſenſe, I took occaſion from them to aſk him whether it would be agreeable to him that a perſon in whom I confide ſhould be appointed by me to reſide near his perſon, for the ſake of perpetuating and ſtrengthening the good underſtanding ſo happily begun, as well as for the tranſaction of ſuch ordinary affairs as might not ſuit the formality of a correſpondence by Letter, but which in their amount always found to be productive of important effects; that I deſired it myſelf, but unleſs it was equally his wiſh, I would neither propoſe nor conſent to it, as it would not in ſuch a caſe be productive of the good effects which I meant to derive from it. He declared to me that it would be entirely pleaſing to him; I told him that I would again addreſs him after my return to Calcutta on the ſame ſubject, when I ſhould have made choice of a perſon duly qualified for ſo important a truſt. It now reſts with you, Gentlemen, to determine on the propriety of this appointment. I will offer it frankly as my opinion, that if you ſhall think it proper to entruſt me with the ſole nomination of ſuch a Reſident, and the power of recalling him whenever I ſhall judge his preſence to be no longer neceſſary, it may be attended with good effects. In any other mode I fear the appointment would exclude me from being any longer the channel of connection between this Government and the Vizier, and prevent me from availing myself of that influence with him, which I I have taken much pains to eſtabliſh, and I hope not altogether unſucceſsfully.

I have addreſſed the Board of Revenue in a ſeparate Letter, concerning ſuch matters as fell under my obſervation in that department.

Permit me, Gentlemen, to conclude my Letter, with my acknowledgments for your indulgence in permitting Mr. Vanſittart to accompany me on this ſervice. It is a juſtice which I owe both to him, and to Meſſrs. Lawrell and Lambert, the other Gentlemen of the Board, who were with me at Benares, to declare, that the cordial aſſiſtance which I received from them was of the moſt effectual ſervice to me in my proceedings.

I have the honour to be,
with an unfeigned eſteem,
Gentlemen,

Treaty with Sujah ul Dowlah, No. 1.

The Vizier of the Empire, Aſiph Jah Shujah ul Mulk, the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah, Aboul Munſoor Cawn Bahador, Sifdar Jung Sippah Salah, on the one part, and Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident of the Council, Governor of Fort William, and Commander in Chief of the forces of the Engliſh Company, in the provinces of Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, for and in the name of the Engliſh Company, on the other part, do agree on the following articles:

1ſt. Whereas in the Treaty concluded at Allahabad the 16th Auguſt 1765, between the Vizier and the Company, it is expreſſed, that the diſtricts of Corah and Allahabad were given to his Majeſty for his expences; and whereas his Majeſty has abandoned the poſſeſſion of the aforeſaid diſtricts, and even given a Sunnud for Corah and Currah to the Marattas, to the great prejudice of the intereſts both of the Vizier and of the Engliſh Company, and contrary to the meaning of the ſaid Treaty, and hath thereby forfeited his right to the ſaid diſtricts, which has reverted to the Company from whom he received it; it is therefore agreed, that the aforeſaid diſtricts ſhall be put into the poſſeſſion of the Vizier, on the following conditions; and that in the ſame manner as the province of Owd, and the other dominions of the Vizier, are poſſeſſed by him, ſo ſhall he poſſeſs Corah and Currah, and Allahabad, for ever: he ſhall by no means, and under no pretence, be liable to any obſtructions in the aforeſaid countries from the Company and Engliſh Chiefs; and excluſive of the money now ſtipulated, no mention or requiſition ſhall by any means be made to him for any thing elſe on this account. This agreement ſhall be obſerved by all the Engliſh Chiefs, Gentlemen of the Council, and by the Company, nor ſhall it ever be broke or deviated from.

Conditions, viz.

He ſhall pay to the Company fifty lacks (50,00,000) of Sicca rupees, according to the currency of the province of Owd, as follows:

2d. To prevent any diſpute ariſing concerning the payments which ſhall be made by the Vizier for the expences of the Company's troops that may march to his aſſiſtance; it is agreed, that the expence of a brigade ſhall be computed at two lacks ten thouſand (2,10,000) Sicca rupees per month, according to the currency of the province of Owd. By a brigade is meant as follows; viz.

2 Battalions of Europeans.
6 Battalions of Sepoys.
1 Company of Artillery.

The expence of the ſaid troops ſhall be defrayed by the Vizier, from the time that they ſhall have paſſed the borders of his dominions till they return within the borders of the province of Bahar; and, excluſive of the above-mentioned ſum, no more ſhall on any account be demanded from him. Should the Company and the Englief Chiefs have occaſion to ſend for the troops of the Vizier, the Company and Engliſh Chiefs ſhall alſo pay their expences in the like manner.

From the Governor to Cheyte Sing, No. 7.

At this time the Vizier of the Empire having given you an Agreement, under his hand and ſeal, which I have counterſigned and alſo affixed my ſeal to; it is neceſſary, that conformable thereto, and according to the Treaty concluded at Allahabad by Lord Clive and the Vizier, reſpecting Rajah Bulwand Sing, your deceaſed father; you, with the greateſt cheerfulneſs pay to the Vizier the rents thereby eſtabliſhed; in which caſe, the Company will always attend to your welfare, and afford you their care and protection; and in the Agreement aforementioned there ſhall never be any breach or deviation.

From the King to the Governor, No. 8.

We are informed, by our loyal ſervant Munneer ul Dowlah, that you, the ſtrength of our empire, have ſent your own Aumils into the diſtricts of Allahabad and Corah. My choſen ſervant! It is now two years ſince we have received any money from Bengal, Allahabad, or Corah; and our diſtreſs for money is in the greateſt degree. The Engliſh Chiefs are bound, by a Treaty of allegiance to our ſacred perſon, to pay our tribute from Bengal, and what place ſoever we may reſide, to let Corah and Allahabad remain in the hands of our own ſervants. From this Treaty we are aſſured there will be no deviation. Conſidering the loyalty and rectitude of you, our loyal ſervant, we have full confidence that you will remit to our preſence the balance of our tribute from Bengal, and continue the monthly payments in future; and that you will deliver up Corah and Allahabad into the hands of Mumeer ul Dowlah, and at the ſame time enforce payment of our revenue from thence regularly, month by month. Do you, our loyal ſervant, in concert with our brother, as dear as life, the Vizier of the Empire, come to our royal preſence. Should it happen, that you cannot yourſelf come, let General Barker be ſent; and after their arrival, we ſhall aſſent to whatever they may propoſe. We had intentions of ſending to you our noble kinſman, Majad ul Dowlah, to communicate to you our commands, and to reconcile you to our royal perſon, of which we informed you in a former Shukha. Afterwards this counſel occurred to our enlightened mind; that if we were informed that you had intentions of ſettling the affairs of our empire, we would then ſend our noble kinſman to you; that after learning from him our royal commands, you might diſpatch the General, with the Vizier, to our preſence; and we could then be aſſured, that where we had two ſuch ſupports with us, as the Vizier and the General, your emulation would not ſuffer you to permit the uſurpers and diſturbers of the peace of our empire, ſuch as the Jauts and the Rohillas, to hold poſſeſſion ſo near our capital: as for the reſt, know that our royal favour attends you. Remit our tribute from Bengal, and give up Corah and Allahabad, which will give the utmoſt ſatisfaction to our ſacred perſon.

Poſtſcript, in the King's own hand.

Do you, our loyal ſervants, come with cheerfulneſs to our preſence. After ſettling affairs here, we ſhall give our royal aſſent to whatever you may repreſent.

From the Governor to his Majeſty Shah Allum, No. 9; written the 13th September 1773.

I have had the honour to receive your Majeſty's commands, by the hands of Mahomed Jacoob Cawn, which I have thoroughly underſtood.

Long before my arrival at Benares, I repeatedly addreſſed your Majeſty with a requeſt that ſome perſon of confidence, and empowered to treat upon your Majeſty's affairs, might be appointed to meet me at that place; and I was happy, when you intimated to me your pleaſure, that Mugid ul Dowlah was deputed for this buſineſs, becauſe I had no doubt, that with the aſſiſtance of ſo capable a perſon every thing would be adjuſted to your Majeſty's ſatisfaction, as I repreſented in the addreſſes which I ſent on this ſubject: but upon my arrival at Benares, I underſtood that the orders for his departure were repealed, and that your Majeſty's attention was engaged in other affairs. In this caſe I was remedileſs. The Vizier heving afforded me a meeting at the abovementioned place, after many conferences, I judged it moſt expedient, for the ſecurity of the peace and tranquillity of theſe parts, and even for the benefit of your Majeſty's affairs, that the Chucklahs of Corah and Allahabad ſhould be reſtored to his poſſeſſion; and I have accordingly aſſigned them to him. I think it incumbent upon me to explain to your Majeſty fully my motives for this tranſaction: while the union between yourſelf and the Company ſubſiſted, your Majeſty is witneſs, and all the world have ſeen, that poſtponing the conſideration of every other concern, the wealth and forces of the Engliſh Company were continually employed in promoting your proſperity, and in the care of your ſafety. The ſame deſire and attachment ſtill prevail; but the neceſſity of the times requires other meaſures and other councils. When your Majeſty ſeparated yourſelf from the Engliſh and the Vizier, and gave your preference to, and conferred your royal favours on others, whoſe views have ever been hoſtile to your former friends and allies, whatever power your Majeſty poſſeſſed inſtantly became theirs; and, preſuming upon it, they oppoſed their forces to the Vizier, and the forces of the Engliſh Company; and even proceeded to acts of violence againſt both, which we forbore to repel, from reſpect to your perſon, which authorized their proceedings. What return of loyalty and ſervices your Majeſty received for the grace which you thus beſtowed upon them, your Majeſty beſt knows. In addition to your other bounties, you were pleaſed to grant them Sunnuds for the diſtricts of Corah and Currah, which in effect would have alſo given them the command of Allahabad. By whatever means the Sunnuds were obtained, it is evident that your Majeſty either wanted power to retain thoſe diſtricts, or that you abandoned them of your own free will to ſtrangers, whoſe deſigns and intereſts were ever contrary to the deſigns and intereſts of the Company. As theſe diſtricts were originally aſſigned by the Company, for the purpoſe of paying your expences, when they ceaſed to be your property, by the univerſal principles of juſtice they reverted to the Company, from whom you firſt received them; and I accordingly cauſed poſſeſſion to be taken of them in the name of the Company, both for the ſecurity of their rights, and to prevent an enemy from uſurping them. And I have given them to the Vizier for theſe reaſons: firſt, becauſe as his intereſts and the Company were the ſame, and this country lay contiguous to his, the defence of it would be more eaſy, and our mutual alliance become ſtronger by this addition to his dominions: ſecondly, becauſe the Vizier, being your firſt ſervant, and the only repreſentative of your perſon, it would enable him hereafter more effectually to ſerve your Majeſty, and to retrieve your affairs. —It was certainly my intention to have put theſe diſtricts again into your hands; and it was with this view that I ſo repeatedly entreated your Majeſty to ſend a perſon of your confidence, to ſettle with me the means of effecting this, and the other arrangements dependant on the Company. But as no one came, and being informed that nobody would come, and I know that without ſome well-concerted plan of defence to reſtore them to your hands would be in effect to give them up to the Marattas, and prove a certain means of arming their hands againſt us, I was therefore compelled to change my firſt deſign, and act as the neceſſity of the ſeaſon adviſed.

Upon the affairs of Bengal: I have before in my Letters repreſented the diſtreſſed condition of the people, and the poverty of the country, which are ſolely owing to the heavy drafts which have been made of its current ſpecie for your Majeſty's remittances. As it is the will of God, and agreeable to the commands of the Engliſh Company my maſters, that I am intruſted with the care and protection of the people of theſe provinces; and as their condition, which is at this time on the edge of miſery, would be ruined paſt remedy, by draining the country of the little wealth which remains in it; I muſt plainly declare, that until the ſafety and welfare of theſe provinces will admit of it, I cannot conſent that a ſingle Rupee be ſent out of them, which it is in my power to detain. This declaration I make from the integrity of my heart, and a real attachment to your Majeſty, which will not ſuffer me to deceive you by doubtful promiſes, while I am certain that they can have but one effect. For the reſt, I pray to the Almighty for a more favourable ſeaſon, to enable me to ſhew my zeal for your Majeſty's ſervice, and ſhall continually communicate with the Vizier on the means of exerting our endeavours in conjunction for this purpoſe, which, God willing, may be ſpeedily and happily accompliſhed.

N° 11. Tranſlation of the Agreement given by Hafez Rahmut Cawn to the Vizier.

As the Vizier of the Empire, the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah, will put the Rohilla Sirdars in full poſſeſſion of their country, it is at his own option to effect it, either by peace or war, ſhould the Marattas at this time, without coming to an engagement, or peace being eſtabliſhed, croſs the river and retreat, owing to the rainy ſeaſon, and after that has elapſed, commit diſturbances in the country of the Rohillas. The quelling of theſe diſturbances ſhall belong to the Vizier. The Rohilla Sirdars, after the aforeſaid buſineſs, do agree to pay the Vizier the ſum of forty lacks of rupees on the following terms; viz. as the Marattas are now committing diſorders in the country of the Rohillas, the Vizier ſhall march from Shahabad to ſuch place as may be thought proper to arrive at, in order that the Rohilla dependants may come out of the jungles, and arrive at their own homes. The ſum of ten lacks of rupees ſhall be paid in ready money in part of the ſtipulation, and thirty lacks of rupees ſhall be diſcharged in three years, beginning from the Fuſſully year 1180. This Agreement is ſealed in the preſence of General Sir Robert Barker.

No. 12. Tranſlation of a Letter from Hafez Rahmut Cawn to the Governor.

After the uſual compliments, and expreſſing his deſire of an interview, he proceeds: "the bonds of friendſhip and affection, and the mutual intercourſe which have long ſubſiſted and taken root between me and the Engliſh Sirdars, may be not unknown to you. Having heard of your fame, I wiſh that a perfect harmony and concord ſhould be eſtabliſhed and confirmed between us, and I hope that you will have the ſame inclination on your part. It is from theſe motives, as well as in conſideration of there being no difference or diſagreement between us, that I repreſent to you the following few circumſtances, that you may have them in your memory at the time of diſcuſſion.

Laſt year, when his Majeſty and the Maratta Sirdars were at variance with the Nabob Zabitta Cawn, and when, after confuſion was thrown into that Nabob's affairs, his Majeſty and the Marattas croſſed the Ganges to come into theſe parts, the Rohilla Sirdars, for the protection of their women, fled to the ſkirts of the jungles. At this time the Vizier of the Empire and General Barker arrived at Shahabad, and ſent Captain Harper to me, with a meſſage to come and join them, in which they perſiſted with great perſeverance. As our intereſts were equal I therefore went, and had an interview with the Gentlemen; when an agreement was concluded between us, in which I agreed to pay 40 lacks of rupees on account of Peſhcuſh to the King and the Maratta Sirdars; and the Gentlemen on their parts engaged to effect my ſecurity, by eſtabliſhing peace between me and the King and the Maratta Sirdars, declaring, that they would in a day or two after that march from Shahabad, fall upon and come to extremities with the Marattas, and to put an end to their operations, Notwithſtanding this, the Gentlemen never came to any negociation with the Marattas, ſo as to put an end to their operations, nor ventured to attack them, but finally returned towards Fyzabad, leaving their engagements unfulfilled. When the rainy ſeaſon commenced, the Marattas of themſelves croſſed the Ganges, and encamped in the Duabe, threatening me ſtill with hoſtilities. During the rains I repeatedly called on the Nabob, the General, and Captain Harper, to conclude theſe affairs with his Majeſty and the Marattas; but they came to no determination on the ſubject, nor took any meaſures for effecting my ſecurity. When the rainy ſeaſon was drawing to an end, and the Marattas had approached near the banks of the Ganges, they then demanded of me ſums of money, which, after much temporizing, I was at laſt obliged to pay them; afterwards they went to the Preſence, and procured a Sunnud for Corah and Allahabad, with which they returned to the banks of the Ganges, and made preparations of bridges for croſſing it, and at the ſame time ſent a perſon of their confidence to demand payment of the money which had been ſtipulated, ſaying, it belonged to them and the King; and alſo with many inducements requeſted that I would let them paſs through my territories, aſſuring me that they would commit no depredation or ravages on the Ryots, and they would paſs through with expedition towards the Soubah of Onde, or whitherſoever they thought proper; they alſo engaged to remit to me a large ſum on account of the ſtipulation, and to do whatever was agreeable, and would give ſatisfaction to the Rohilla Sirdars. At this juncture the Nabob and the General being arrived near, they ſent to me Syed Shaw Muddun and Mahomed Mukrim Cawn, deſiring that I would enter into no terms with the Marattas, and they would give me back my engagement for 40 lacks of rupees, and do every thing both for my preſent and future ſecurity. Having therefore in view the long friendſhip which had ſubſiſted between the Nabob Vizier, the Engliſh Gentlemen, and myſelf, I declined all offers made me by the Marattas, and came over to them; in revenge for which it is well known that the Marattas recroſſed the Ganges, and plundered Moradabad and Sumbril. The Gentlemen promiſed that they would croſs and canton on the other ſide of the Ganges during the rains, and would not return to Fyzabad or Calcutta until they had entirely driven away the Marattas, and fully ſatisfied themſelves both with reſpect to their own and my ſecurity: but at length they left every thing unfiniſhed, and, after temporizing for a long time with the Marattas, returned to their own homes, leaving me ſtill a prey to the Marattas. You are no doubt acquainted with all theſe proceedings: it is a point which requires juſtice and conſideration. As a friendſhip has long been eſtabliſhed between us, I doubt not but you will at all times and on all occaſions wiſh to preſerve it. Other particulars the Major will inform you of.

The Vizier's Narrative of the Behaviour of the Rohillas. No. 13.

The caſe of the Rohillas is as follows: That from the beginning to this time I have treated them with friendſhip and attention, and on their part I have met with nothing but ill-treatment, treachery, and a breach of faith. Accordingly, when the Marattas marched with a large army againſt Nijib ul Dowla and the Rohilla Sirdars, and beſieged Nijib ul Dowla in Sukkertaul, and Hafiz Rahmut, Doondee Cawn, and the reſt, at Illahabad, where they reduced them to the greateſt ſtraits and difficulties, if I had not aſſiſted them, they would all have been ruined, and deprived of their women, country, and government; but by the favour of God I afforded them at that time ſuch aſſiſtance, that the Marattas were put to flight, and took their route to the Deccan, and the territory, property, and women, of the Rohillas, remained in ſecurity. Again; the year before laſt, when the Marattas advanced their troops againſt the Rohillas, Zabitta Cawn received a total defeat, and Hafiz Rahmut and the others being unable to oppoſe them, took ſhelter with their women at the foot of the hills, where, if I had made ten days delay, they would all have periſhed by the bad water and unſalutary air; by the favour of the Almighty, I went with the Engliſh troops to Shahabad, and ſtopt the approach of the Marattas, and ſometimes uſing authority and menaces, and ſometimes friendly mediation, and temporiſing according to circumſtances, I cauſed them to paſs the Ganges, and releaſing from confinement, delivered to Zabitta Cawn, the daughter of Ally Mahomed Cawn, a principal Chief of the Rohillas, and nine of the women and daughters of Nijib ul Dowlah, and the wife and ſon of Zabitta Cawn, together with 400 women the Marattas had taken priſoners. I alſo called to me Hafiz Rahamet Cawn, and the others who had taken protection under the hills, and replaced them on their former footing in the poſſeſſion of their country. My friend, General Barker is well acquainted with theſe circumſtances, in whoſe preſence they entered into an engagement for the payment of 40 lacks of rupees, and pledged their faith and religion for its performance. In the ſequel, they did not remain ſteady to this agreement, but in the heighth of the rains, antecedent to every other perſon, Zabitta Cawn firſt went and connected himſelf with the Marattas, and and Hafiz Rahmut Cawn ſent the holy Coran, which contains the religion of the Muſſulmen, to the Marattas, as a token of his friendſhip. He alſo gave them five lacks of rupees, and eſtabliſhed a friendſhip and good underſtanding with them. The whole world are well acquainted, that envoys from Hafiz Rahmut were with the Marattas, and treated with them in the above manner. Myſelf continuing firm and ſteady to my engagements, I proceeded in concert with the Engliſh troops, from Fyzabad to the aſſiſtance of the Rohillas, and arrived by ſucceſſive marches at Ramgaut. I previouſly acquainted Hafiz Rahmut Cawn that he ſhould make preparations, and that I ſhould ſhortly arrive and act in conjunction with him, as Hafiz Rahmut Cawn had entered into intrigues with the Marattas, notwithſtanding I was near him, and the Marattas at a conſiderable diſtance: he, nevertheleſs, under various pretenſions and evaſions, drew near the Maratta army to ſuch a degree, that the morning when I arrived with the Engliſh forces, and came upon the Marattas, Hafiz Rahmut was within 7 or 8 coſs of them; when, from neceſſity only, he came and waited on me. I am certain, that if I had been 4 gurries later with the Engliſh forces, he would have joined the Marattas, and fallen upon me; and that only from my near approach he was compelled to come to me. Afterwards, when the Marattas could not face the Engliſh forces and myſelf, and ſet out for the Decan, Hafiz Rahmut Cawn did not pay me a ſingle Daam on account of the agreement ment executed in preſence of the General as aforementioned; nor did he treat me with that reſpect, or preſent me with the cuſtomary preſents, which are uſed amongſt mankind as marks of friendſhip and hoſpitality. The heavy burden of increaſed expences which I have ſuſtained, both on account of my own troops, and thoſe of the Engliſh, are as evident as the ſun at noon-day. I made no uſe of menaces concerning taking the money by force, otherwiſe, had I been ſo inclined, I would have taken it in the ſpace of a day. I paſſed the matter over, and took no notice of it; and they on their part pleaded excuſes, evaſions, and delays. They even encamped at 3 or 4 coſs diſtance from mine and the Engliſh army, with an intention to come to a battle, ſhould I inſiſt on the payment of the money. Of the truth of this, every Gentleman that was with me can witneſs; my mentioning it is unneceſſary. In ſhort, the Rohillas have been guilty of treachery, baſeneſs, and a breach of faith; and have paid no regard either to their oaths or agreements. I have notwithſtanding hitherto put up with this behaviour, but can do it no longer To oblige them to make reparation is expedient and juſt.

APPENDIX. No. 19.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor to the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah. No. 15.

Mahomed Elich Cawn has repeatedly and fully explained to me your Excellency's commands upon the ſubject of the accounts of Captain Harper's battalion. The ſtate of this matter is as follows: I am informed by the General that at your requiſition the brigade, of which the General had then the command, was ſent to Allahabad, and there continued, at your own requeſt, about three years; that it was agreed between the King, yourſelf, and General Smith, that for the batta of this force 30,000 R' ſhould be paid monthly; viz. 15,000 R' by the King, and 15,000 R' by yourſelf; that your ſhare of this payment never was paid, but was always underſtood to have been balanced by the advances made by you on account of the 19th battalion, of which about 5,000 rupees monthly were due from you for batta and extra expences, and 10,000 rupees were advanced by you on account of their pay, by which means it was always conſidered the account was ſettled.

I alſo find it mentioned in ſome authentic Papers, which have accidentally fallen into my hands, that the brigade aforementioned was called to Allahabad, and continued there at your own expreſs requiſition, and the Company have been ſo informed in many Letters from the Adminiſtration of Bengal. Of the truth of this I am myſelf entirely unacquainted; I know not the dates of the arrival or return of the brigade which went to Allahabad, nor of the appointment or continuance of the 19th battalion with your perſon; nor have I one Paper or Account which can ſhew me what ſums have been received, and what are due, on either of theſe accounts. The perſons who were privy to theſe tranſactions (on which a knowledge of theſe accounts depends) are either in England or Calcutta. How therefore can I poſſibly attempt to ſettle this account here without a ſingle voucher to aſſiſt me? Reflect alſo, that this is a buſineſs of ſeven years ſtanding, and that ſince the commencement of it Mr. Cartier, and other Gentlemen appointed by the Government of Calcutta, have had a meeting with your Excellency, for the purpoſe of ſettling all matters between you and the Company. If this account was not ſettled with them, nor with the other Engliſh Chiefs who had the immediate cognizance of it, in what manner and by what means am I to ſettle it, who never heard of ſuch an account, nor expected ſuch a demand to be made upon me, till my arrival here? I therefore ſent you word, that upon my return to Calcutta I would carefully examine the Paymaſter's books, and make ſuch inquiries as might be proper from their perſons who had any knowledge of them, and of your agreements with the Engliſh Company concerning them; and if it ſhould appear that any thing was juſtly due to your Excellency, it ſhould be faithfully and moſt certainly paid you.

From the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah. Received 4th September 1773.

I conſider you as my true friend, and ſhall write you the plain truth. With reſpect to the account of Captain Harper's battalion, on which I troubled you, the fact is this: the pleaſure with which I heard of your coming into theſe parts is not to be expreſſed; and ſince I have met you, the knowledge, wiſdom, and underſtanding with which I have obſerved you are endowed; your addreſs, and the regard which you have ſhewn, both for the preſervation of our friendſhip and public faith, have all given me the utmoſt degree of ſatisfaction; I therefore reſolved at home, that ſeveral matters which had been put off for years, ſhould be ſettled now. Of former affairs you already know, that while the Nabob Jabut Jung (Lord Clive) remained in the Country, our negociations were ſettled in the beſt manner; but from the Gentlemen who came after him I never got an anſwer to my Letters in leſs than four months; then, what could become of other affairs? Ever ſince Lord Clive's time I have had a battalion ſtationed with me, and whatever was the batta ſettled for it, Lord Clive, on the conſideration that it was too great a diſtance from Calcutta to ſend money for the payment of it, ſettled, that the whole of its pay ſhould be advanced by me; and that whatever ſums I might advance on that account, over and above the batta, ſhould be repaid me. Accordingly, this mode took place. At that time Purſued Roy my Vackeel, was in Calcutta; and upon his coming away, the ſurplus money which I had advanced on account of the payment of the battalion, was paid to him, with which he purchaſed ſeveral articles, and was bringing them up to me, when they were ſtopped at Patna. Afterwards a fire happened at Patna, in which the whole of theſe goods were burnt; as a recompence for which, 300 and odd Engliſh firelocks were given me at the time of my going to Allahabad. This tranſaction may have come to your knowledge; General Barker is well acquainted with it.—With reſpect to the batta of the brigade which was quartered at Allahabad, and which you ſay was called there by my deſire, the caſe is this; when Coſſim Cawn joined himſelf with the Rohillas, and was going to ſet diſturbances on foot, I ſent for the Engliſh troops; in about ten days after whoſe arrival at Allahabad, the diſturbances were concluded, and the enemy, ſeeing that I and the Engliſh Chiefs acted in concert, and that the Engliſh troops were at Allahabad, diſperſed; and in about ten days or a month after the arrival of thoſe troops at Allahabad, I diſmiſſed them. That friendſhip which ſubſiſted between me and General Smith, is known to all the world. You muſt alſo be well acquainted, that at length I carried on a correſpondence to Calcutta, and had ſome controverſy with the Gentlemen reſpecting the troops that I kept in my ſervice: although no number of troops was mentioned in the Treaty, nor was it any infringement of the Treaty, yet, purely out of regard to the friendſhip and ſatisfaction of the Engliſh Gentlemen, I made no uſe of this argument, but diſmiſſed my troops. After the concluſion of the diſturbances with Coſſim Cawn, I knew nothing of the Engliſh troops being ſent for. If they were ſent for, General Smith did it of his own accord. There was never any agreement between General Smith and me, regarding the 30,000 Rupees, on account of batta for the brigade at Allahabad; nor do I know any thing of it. General Smith was at that time gone to Souragepore, and had a congreſs with Hafiz Rhamut Cawn; and upon hearing of ſome diſturbances of the Marattas in the diſtricts of Bundlecund, he required my aſſiſtance: upon which I ſent Beney Perſaud with my troops to him. You write, "that of the 30,000 rupees, half was to be "paid by me, and half by the King." If the King ſent for thoſe troops, why ſhould I pay half? or, if I ſent for them, why ſhould the King pay half? Beſides this, the troops were ſtationed at Allahabad, which is at the diſtance of ſeven days march; and in ſuch caſe, what uſe could they be of to me? Reſpecting the diſturbance of the Abdallah, if there was any diſturbance, it muſt have been at Lahore, and I am entirely unacquainted with it; nor could thoſe troops be required upon that occaſion. You are juſt and wiſe: if I had ſent for thoſe troops there muſt be ſome Letter or Voucher for it, or it muſt be mentioned in your Records, and let them be produced. This I have wrote out of pure friendſhip, and from a conſideration that you are juſt.

Tranſlation of Raja Cheyt Sing's Agreement relative to Duties. N° 17.

Whereas the duties of the Syers dependent on me, have been fixed and decreed in the preſence of the Governor at the following rates, which are to be taken from the Engliſh and Indoſtan Merchants without diſtinction; for this cauſe I give in writing, that I will demand no more, nor will conſent to an exemption in favour of any man, excepting broad cloth, and lead, and copper, purchaſed of the Company, which ſhall be accompanied by a Letter from the Governor. On them I will conſider the duties as excuſed and diſcontinued, nor in any reſpect interrupt or impede them.

At Benares, 2 per-Cent. on the Purchaſe Price as uſual.

Repreſentation of Nudjiff Cawn, as delivered by his Vackeel. No. 18.

When Major Munro was encamped at Benares, there were great diſturbances in the diſtricts of Corah and Allahabad, and I was in Bundlechund. The Major ſent me a Letter of Invitation through Raja Kyaularam, together with a bill for 30,000 rupees, and gave me hopes of Shujah ul Dowla's Country. In the Letter he deſired me to join the Engliſh by the way of Corah, and immediately upon my arrival to eſtabliſh my own authority there, and drive out Shuja ul Dowla's people, becauſe, he ſaid, the Chucklah of Corah and Subahdarry of Allahabad were ſettled upon me. Upon the receipt of this Letter I marched to Corah with 7 or 8,000 horſe, and drove away Shujah ul Dowla's people, and I was active in aſſiſting Colonel Fletcher and General Carnac at the ſiege of the fort of Allahabad, and in the war with the Marattas. Theſe circumſtances are well known to many Engliſh Gentlemen. When the Vizier ſurrendered himſelf to the Engliſh, they gave up to him the Soubah of Oude, and Corah and Allahabad were made over to the King. The King told Lord Clive that he ſhould not get a ſingle Daum by the acquiſition of Corah and Allahabad, for that I ſhould expend the whole revenue for the payment of my troops. Lord Clive ordered that I ſhould receive two lacks of rupees per annum out of the revenues of Bengal for my ſupport, and told me, that for my pay and the pay of my troops I ſhould receive from the King whatever he might appoint; that if my inclination to ſerve the King ſhould not continue, I might live where I pleaſed; and there ſhould be no failure in the payment of theſe two lacks, only I muſt not join with any perſon who was an enemy of the King, the Engliſh, or the Vizier: accordingly this is inſerted in the Treaty. I am now in the King's ſervice, whom I attended agreeable to the permiſſion of General Barker, and have been guilty of no infringement of my agreement, and I am now alſo ready to obey your commands. As the Engliſh Gentlemen never act contrary to their engagements, I flatter myſelf you will pay my allowance as uſual, together with the arrears. I am ever ready to act agreeably to your directions.

Ordered, That the Patna ſaltpetre accounts be entered after the proceedings of this day, in the Public Department.

The Board embrace this opportunity to expreſs their entire approbation of the meaſures adopted by the Preſident, in his congreſs with the Vizier at Benares; in particular of the Treaty concluded between the Vizier and the Company, and the ſtipulations obtained from the former in behalf of Raja Cheyt Sing, as they are equally calculated for the immediate intereſts of the Company as for the ſecurity of the provinces, by ſtrengthening our alliance with the Vizier, and by ſupporting Raja Cheyt Sing, in ſtrict conformity to the political ſyſtem laid down and repeatedly enforced by our honourable Employers. They approve of the Letter which the Preſident wrote to the King: under the circumſtances of his ſituation and ours it would have been as improper as impolitic to have complied with his extravagant and abſurd requiſitions; and as he neglected to pay any attention to the Preſident's repeated advice to ſend a perſon of confidence to treat on his affairs, the Preſident, in proceeding to negociate the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad with the Vizier, acted ſtrictly conformable to his inſtructions. The repugnance of the Vizier to part with any of his territory, was a circumſtance of which the Board was previouſly aware; and as to have inſiſted on it might have affected our alliance and good underſtanding with the Vizier, the Board approve of the Preſident's having accepted the ready money compenſation for Corah and Illahabad, which in its amount greatly exceeds what were their expectations. The ſtipulation for the charge of a brigade, according to the General's calculate, appears to them to be equivalent to the expence; and it is further ſatisfactory, as it aſcertains a point which, whilſt it was left in a ſtate of indeciſion, might have continued to be the ſource of diſagreeable altercation with the Vizier.

Ordered, in conſequence of the Governor's agreement with the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah and Rajah Chiet Sing, that a public advertiſement be iſſued, to forbid any European whatever under the Company's protection, from going to or reſiding in any part of the dominions of Sujah ul Dowlah, under pain of forfeiting that protection; and to command all thoſe who are already there to quit thoſe territories before the 31ſt of December next under the like penalty: alſo to give notice that all Gomaſtahs, not Europeans, reſiding there on the part of any Engliſh Gentlemen, ſhall be amenable in every reſpect to the laws of thoſe provinces; and that the Company's Government will by no means interfere in caſe of their engaging in any diſputes or difficulties with the ſubjects of the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

Agreed, That we write the following circular Letter with copies of this advertiſement, to be publiſhed at all the ſubordinate factories.

APPENDIX. No. 19.

To Samuel Middleton, eſquire, Reſident at the Durbar.

Sir,

Encloſed you will receive an advertiſement to prevent Europeans from going up into Sujah Dowlah's Country, &c. which we deſire you will cauſe to be iſſued, and made as public as poſſible at the City and Coſſimbuzar factory.

Fort William, 4th October 1773. We are, with eſteem, &c.

The ſame to Patna, Dacca, and Chittagong.

With reſpect to the continuance of Meſſrs. Motte, Fowke, and Scott, at Benares, as Raja Cheit Sing has expreſſed his approbation of their conduct, and a ſeeming inclination that they ſhould continue their reſidence in his diſtrict;

Agreed, That theſe three Gentlemen be permitted to remain there until further orders; and the Secretary is accordingly directed to make them acquainted with this permiſſion.

In conſequence of the Governor's propoſition to appoint a perſon to reſide at the Court of Suja ul Dowlah, for tranſacting ſuch matters of correſpondence and communication with the Vizier as he ſhall think proper to entruſt to his management;

Agreed, That we do delegate to the Governor the power of nominating ſuch an agent whenever he judges it requiſite, acquainting the Board of the perſon he chuſes to nominate, for their approbation; and the further power of recalling him at his pleaſure, informing the Board of his having done ſo.

To enable us to judge of the validity of Suja Dowlah's claim for the expence of the 19th battalion of Sepoys, whilſt ſtationed with him; Ordered, that the military Paymaſter General be directed to ſend in an account of the payments made to the 19th battalion of Sepoys ſince Lord Clive's departure from Bengal, ſpecifying from whence thoſe payments were iſſued: Ordered alſo, that the Secretary to the Select Committee be called on to refer to the records of his office, and aſcertain to us, whether it was ever ſtipulated that Sujah Dowlah ſhould pay half, or any part of the 30,000 rupees, agreed for in lieu of the monthly extra expences of a brigade ſtationed at Allahabad.

Agreed, That we poſtpone the conſideration on Nudjiff Cawn's ſtipend till the arrival of the General.

The Preſident acquaints the Board, that whilſt he was at the city, he obtained Sunnuds from the Nabob, appointing Killyan Sing (ſon of the late Rajah Sitabroy) Naib of the Nazim in the Bahar province, and conferring on him the title of Maha Rajah.

N. B. The Minutes and Proteſt of General Barker, are entered in Appendix, No. 13 and 33, and Governor Haſtings' Minute in Appendix, No. 12.

In anſwer to the demand made by the General, regarding the powers granted to the Preſident ſolely to negociate with the Vizier at Benares, the Board now declare, that they judged the inveſting him with ſuch excluſive powers ſtrictly proper and abſolutely neceſſary. It was proper, becauſe conformable to the orders of the Company, which poſitively direct the conduct and execution of the country correſpondence to be the particular province of the Preſident; nor do the Board think they could with conſiſtency have beſtowed on the General a participation of that power in the buſineſs of a diſtant negociation, which they would not have reſerved to themſelves, even at the ſeat of the Government; for ſuppoſing that the conferences with the Vizier had been held at the Preſidency, the diſcuſſion and execution of the reſolves of the Board would of courſe have been left to the Preſident. It was neceſſary, becauſe the eſſential requiſites in the buſineſs to be tranſacted, were diſpatch and immediate deciſion: the duties of the Government would not admit of a tedious abſence of our Preſident, and he has in his own Minute, which has now been read, elucidated in ſtrong and juſt colours the indeciſion, controverſy, and delay, in which every point to be treated on might have been involved, if liable to be checked by diſcuſſion and impeded by the different ideas of a plurality of negociators. The Board conſider it further incumbent on them to add in this place, that they alſo eſteemed it neceſſary, in order to impreſs the Vizier with a proper idea and knowledge of the ſtation of their Preſident, which ſeems of late years to have been totally eclipſed in theſe parts by the ſuperior influence of the Commanding Officer, who will always derive ſufficient conſequence from the command of the army, without being admitted to interfere in the peculiar province of the Preſident, by appearing the principal agent in the political Government. —The Board having thus fully explained the motives which induced them to veſt in the Preſident excluſive powers for negociating with the Vizier, it would be ſuperfluous to ſubjoin, that no perſonal reflection was or could be intended towards the General, or towards the other Gentlemen of the Board, who were preſent at Benares.

They have already aſſigned their reaſons for ſtopping the payment of the King's tribute, they do not think it neceſſary to repeat them, but ſhall make only a few obſervations on the General's objections. It is true, there was no declared war between us and the Marattas at the time when the King put himſelf under their protection, but they have been regarded as our natural enemies ever ſince the acquiſition of the Dewanny, both by the Adminiſtration here and by the Court of Directors, who have repeatedly inſtructed us to encourage the other tribes in Hindoſtan to oppoſe them, and by no one has the neceſſity of treating them even as avowed enemies been more warmly urged than by the General in his Letters.

Allowing that the King's ceſſion of Korah, &c. to the Marattas; that his marching with them at a time when their intentions appeared ſo hoſtile that it was found neceſſary for our troops and the Vizier's to advance to oppoſe them; and that his adviſing them to ſow diſſentions between us and the Vizier before they attacked us (which facts ſtand eſtabliſhed on our Records) proceeded all from compulſion, they will ſerve only to prove him under the abſolute bondage of the Marattas; and although the Illiabad Treaty does not expreſsly ſtipulate that he ſhould remain in that neighbourhood, yet it certainly implies that he ſhould continue his connection with us, and could never be intended to oblige us to pay a tribute to our enemies. If the Company have forfeited the Dewanny by ſtopping the payment of the tribute, they would not have prevented the forfeiture by paying a part, as the General propoſes; for their ſecurity was for the regular payment of the whole, and the King has repeatedly demanded it. To have paid a part therefore would be uſeleſs, by adding to the Company's diſtreſs, and as to advancing as much as they would, it appears from the accumulated debts in Bengal, and the heavy loan they have been obliged to borrow in Europe, that their advances have in fact already exceeded their own means. The acknowledgment of Shaw Allum as King in the village of Dondnagur, by the troops compoſing the army with which he had invaded the Bahar province, hardly deſerves to be dignified by the expreſſion of raiſing him to the Muſnud. The Board believe he was firſt formally proclaimed at Patna, by the authority of this Government, and if by acknowledgment a payment of tribute is implied, he has never been acknowledged by any but the Engliſh, not even by the Vizier his firſt ſervant.

The General having declined being preſent at this Conſultation, as the matter in debate is in ſome reſpects perſonal to himſelf, the above Minutes were communicated cated to him; and he ſends in the following reply, requeſting that it may be recorded in the ſame Proceedings; which is ordered accordingly as follows:

General Barker begs leave to obſerve, in ſupport of the declaration contained in his Minute of diſſent to the late Treaty of Benares, that although it is not expreſsly the tenor of the fourth article of the Treaty of Allahabad with the Vizier, yet the adminiſtration of that period muſt have viewed it in that light; and he therefore quotes the 20th paragraph of their General Letter on this ſubject, under date the 30th September 1765; viz. "With "reſpect to the other articles of the Treaty, you will "obſerve that a ſufficient proviſion is ſecured for the "ſupport of the King's honour and dignity, without "danger of his becoming a future incumbrance; and "that twenty-ſix lacks yearly are granted to him on the "revenues of Bengal; a revenue far more conſiderable "than he ever before enjoyed. In gratitude for this "inſtance of our attention to his intereſt, his Majeſty "has been pleaſed to beſtow on the Company the moſt "important grants ever yet obtained by any European "State from the Mogul's Court: beſides confirming to "the Company all their former poſſeſſions, and ſecuring "to them in perpetuity the reverſion of Lord Clive's "Jaghier, he has conferred on them the Dewannee of "Bengal, Bahar, and Oriſſa, and ratified in the ſtrongeſt "terms an agreement we propoſed concluding with the "Nabob, if the King's conſent could be procured; "ſubjects which it will be neceſſary to explain in a ſepa"rate paragraph." And that the 4th Article of the Treaty with the Vizier was merely a confirmation of this grant to his Majeſty, of which he was in abſolute poſſeſſion.

The General, in his communication of the Vizier's propoſals for the reduction of the Rohilla, by no means wiſhed to poſſeſs him of ſo large a tract of country. He had many other propoſals for the conſideration of the Board, had this means been adopted at the time, which would effectually have ſecured the neceſſary balance of power; and if he miſtakes not, the Preſident is in poſſeſſion of ſome remarks of the General's upon this ſubject.

Relative to the quotation which has been taken up by the Preſident from the General's Letter, of the 23d March 1768, he begs leave to obſerve, that ſince that time the Vizier has made conſiderable improvements, both in the diſcipline of his troops and knowledge of arms; and that an increaſe of wealth muſt indubitably enable him to be a ſtill greater proficient in the military ſcience; although he is by no means of opinion, that his Excellency's preſent force ſhould give the Company the leaſt cauſe for apprehenſion.

(Signed) R^t Barker.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee of Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 11th October 1773.

Par. 2. IN our former advices we acquainted you, that the Marattas having extorted from Shaw Allem a grant of the provinces of Corah and Currah, were advancing to take poſſeſſion; that your Adminiſtration, conſidering the right of the Company to that Country when relinquiſhed by the King, as well as the danger that would ariſe to your territories, and thoſe of Sujah Dowlah, were the Marattas to obtain ſo near a footing, determined, in concert with the Vizier, to oppoſe their deſigns, and to cover the frontier from an invaſion.

3. In conſequence of this reſolution, a brigade was ordered to march and join the Vizier's army. They proceeded to Ramgaut in the Rohilla Country, where the General, having put himſelf at their head, they encamped on the banks of the Ganges, as we confined ourſelves to that defenſive plan which you have been pleaſed to preſcribe. The General was ordered not to commence hoſtilities, but to remain on the Northern ſide of the Ganges; and the Marattas not daring to attack your forces, the armies continued nearly in this ſituation for two months, without coming to an engagement. On the rapid approach of our army, a conſiderable party of the Marattas, who were then in the Rohilla Country, fled with precipitation, and re-croſſing the Ganges joined the main body; at one time they ventured to cannonade our encampment from the oppoſite bank of the river, but being preſently ſilenced by a diſcharge from our artillery, they afterwards confined their operations to laying waſte the neighbouring Country, and at laſt, either recalled by their own Government, or apprehenſive of remaining ſo near our army during the rains (where, in caſe of an attack, they would have been unable to ſecure a retreat, which was open to them at every other ſeaſon) they retired to the Decan towards the beginning of May.

4. The campaign has fully anſwered our intentions; and we entertain hopes that the Marattas, obſerving the concord which ſubſiſts between the Company and the Vizier, and the ſteady ſyſtem on which they act, will deſiſt in future from alarming the frontiers with threatened invaſions. The little ſucceſs that has this year attended their arms, and the internal diſſentions which ſubſiſt among themſelves, give ſome probable grounds for this expectation.

5. The ſcene of the Marattas operations lay principally in the Rohilla Country, which, from its ſituation and the weakneſs and jealouſy of its Chiefs, was part cula'y expoſed to their incurſions. One of the leaders of this nation, Hafez Rhamet, whoſe territories lie contiguous to thoſe of Sujah Dowlah, and to the province of Corah, had formerly entered into a Treaty with the Vizier, in which he agreed to pay him 40 lacks of rupees for his protection and aſſiſtance; the half of which ſum the Vizier promiſed to pay to the Company, in conſideration of the ſuperior part they took in theſe tranſactions. Hafez Rhamet having for ſome time acted a very double part, at laſt joined the army, and continued his promiſes of fulfilling the Treaty; but protracted the time until the Marattas had retired, and the troops were in conſequence recalled. Being then relieved from the apprehenſion of preſent danger, he declined paying up the ſtipulated ſum, on pretexts of inability, and that it was neceſſary firſt to conſult the other Rohilla Chiefs. The Vizier, highly exaſperated at this conduct of the Rohilla, propoſed immediately to compel him to a compliance with his engagements, by marching into his Country, or in caſe of his refuſal, to reduce it, and unite it to his own. For this purpoſe, he applied to your Adminiſtration for their aid and concurrence; but before we could come to any reſolution, many points of a delicate nature were previouſly to be examined and ſettled.

6. The alarm of an invaſion of the Marattas had for three ſucceſſive ſeaſons occaſioned the march of one of the brigades, at the requiſition and for the aſſiſtance of the Vizier; but the ſum ſtipulated as an indemnification for this extraordinary expence being not only greatly inadequate to the actual amount, but often irregularly paid, the Company was ſubjected to a heavy charge, their military ſtrength greatly weakened, and the wealth of the Country was expended in the pay of the troops. Under ſuch circumſtances the friendſhip of Sujah Dowlah grew to be a burden to the Company, and it was evident that an union ſubſiſting on terms ſo unequal, could neither be cordial nor laſting. It became therefore neceſſary to provide ſome remedy for this defect in our alliance with the Vizier.

7. The actual poſſeſſion of the Corah province was another point that required particular attention, and opened a proſpect of advantage to the Company; but from its remote ſituation, and our ignorance of the real ſtate of the Country, we thought proper to recommend to the Council to depute one of the Members to proceed thither, and to prepare ſuch materials as might enable us to determine upon the manner of diſpoſing of it moſt beneficial to the Company.

8. While theſe important matters were under our conſideration, the Vizier frequently expreſſed an earneſt deſire of a perſonal interview with our Preſident: and this meaſure appearing the moſt effectual means of bringing them to a concluſion, and of ſtrengthening that friendſhip in which the Company are united with the Vizier, we recommended it to the Council, and it was carried into execution. But as you will be informed by the Board, of the ſucceſs which has attended the Preſident's negociations, we beg leave to refer you on this ſubject to the Letter from that department.

APPENDIX, No. 21.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 3d February 1772.—Preſent, the honourable John Cartier, eſq. Preſident. Samuel Middleton, and William Alderſey, eſquires.

Extract of a Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal, to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort Saint George; dated Fort William, 3d February 1772.

THE means of thoſe Princes, whoſe extent of territory or conſequence in the empire ſhould lead them to combine their ſtrength to ſtem the torrent and prove a counterbalance to the Maratta Power, are not inadequate, if they could be brought to act on one general plan for the ſecurity of the whole; but as it is, they are divided, irreſolute, and incapable of taking any effectual meaſure to avert the impending danger. It is to no purpoſe that we have ſtimulated the Vizier to undertake, in conjunction with the Rohilla, ſomething of ſufficient importance to convince them that a vigorous oppoſition will follow any further advances they may make to the Eaſtward: he will do nothing without the aid of a body of our troops, which however at this particular juncture we do not deem it prudent to grant him.

Extract of Letter from General Barker to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal; dated at Faizabad, 21ſt January 1772.

I did myſelf the pleaſure to addreſs you on the 10th inſtant, with information that at the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla's earneſt deſire and requeſt to ſee me at Fayzabad, I had determined to proceed to that place in my route to Allahabad. The 19th I arrived here, and found his Excellency much indiſpoſed, not having quitted his apartments for fourteen days, nor did he appear to be in a condition to have performed his promiſe of meeting me at Benares. At a conference I had with him yeſterday morning, he informed me with much concern and anxiety, his preſent ſituation was become ſo critical, that meaſures were neceſſary to be taken without loſs of time for preventing what inevitably threatened his reputation and poſſeſſions. To obey his Majeſty's directions under the preſent circumſtances he was reſolved not to do, for the ſame reaſon I before mentioned to you; that the Maratta Chiefs had gained too great an aſcendency over his Majeſty for him to ſupport the dignity of his ſtation, by which he might be neceſſitated to concur in meaſures oppoſite to his inclination and intereſt, or otherwiſe leaving the King under worſe pretences, than not joining him at all. To remain inactive, and ſee the Rohillas reduced, was as bad or worſe; for, he very juſtly obſerved, that the Rohillas would, to prevent a total extirpation, undoubtedly give up a part of their Country, and would of conſequence be neceſſitated to join their arms with the Marattas. Such a general confederacy would immediately fall on him, as their next object in view; and he further obſerves, that in this caſe he muſt claim the performance of our Treaty for the defence of his poſſeſſions. Or, on the other hand, ſhould the Marattas not receive any conditions of peace from the Rohillas, and the King determined on their overthrow, ſuch an acquiſition of country and riches would ſtrengthen that Power (already arrived at too great a heighth) to a very dangerous degree, particularly as by eſtabliſhing themſelves ſo immediately adjoining to his dominions, they would be ever ready to fall on him when opportunity offered, by his force being called to the aſſiſtance of his allies. Under this dilemma he has only two plans to adopt, the one will require a ſhew of ſupport and approbation of the Engliſh Government, the other to remain in his preſent ſituation waiting the event of conſequences, and relying on the ſupport of his friends and allies. To prevent however his own reputation from ſuffering, and the trouble and expence which muſt neceſſarily and will moſt certainly attend his friends the Engliſh by their aſſiſtance, he could wiſh they would adopt his firſt plan; and purpoſes the march of his whole force to that frontier of his dominions contiguous to the poſſeſſions of the Rohillas. He has already received Letters from Hafez Rhamut Kaun, the ſon of Dundee Kaun and Zebta Khan, requeſting his aſſiſtance to ſave them from the impending blow. A Coul Nama, or Treaty, has been ſent him from the latter, with blanks for filling up ſuch terms as may be moſt agreeable to him. And he is aſſured, that on his appearance at the frontiers with the approbation of the Engliſh Government, which he obſerves can noway appear or be credited, but by my being with him, he can effect a compromiſe between the Rohillas, the Marattas, and the King, ſo that by giving up a part of their Country for his Majeſty's ſupport, they ſhall remain in poſſeſſion of ſuch parts as will be a barrier to his own dominions; for he obſerves that the King is uneaſy in his preſent ſituation, and would moſt heartily join in any accommodation to render himſelf more independent of that aſpiring Power. The Marattas from ſuch appearances would not refuſe a compromiſe for a ſum of money, ſince by advices from the Decan it is not improbable but they may be wanted for the defence of their own poſſeſſions, Hyder Ally having given a total defeat to the Maratta force ſtationed in his country, and Nizam Ally beſieged a fort they had poſſeſſed themſelves of in his Subah, to the aſſiſtance of which Jannou Gee is called from Nagpoor, and the certainty of Tucco Gee, one of the Chiefs at the capital and the friend of Zabiter Khan, joining to effect ſuch ſalutary meaſures. In this caſe his Excellency obſerves, he can with propriety take upon him the office of Vizier, and much greater confidence will be placed in his propoſals, for the knowledge of the concern the Engliſh have in theſe negociations, by the preſence of their chief officers: but without the appearance of ſuch a ſupport he will not undertake it. His Excellency has by this conveyance addreſſed the Preſident, on the urgency of his ſituation; and I ſhall wait the reſult of your determination with impatience. He has requeſted a battalion of Sepoys might be ordered from the garriſon of Allahabad, to the lines of Cawnpoor, which I have taken upon me to direct. Should the Nabob's propoſal meet with the concurrence of the Board, and his negociations prove ſucceſsful, I ſhall deem it one of the luckieſt events that could have happened for the intereſt of the Company. For the knowledge of ſuch an accommodation, effected by the mediation of the Engliſh, will ſtrengthen their reputation, and will be the only means of preventing the almoſt certainty of an attack on the Vizier's or Company's poſſeſſions, ſooner or later.

Extract of Letter from the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal, to General Barker; dated the 3d February 1772.

Sir,

We have read with attention in your Letter of the 12th ultimo, the Vizier's propoſals to effect a general pacification;

pacification; and we conſider the requiſition he has made, of our aſſiſtance to attain this end, in ſo moderate and unaſſuming a light, that we can have no poſſible objection of authorizing you to act on the part of the Honourable Company in the negociations that may occur on this ſubject

We approve therefore of your having ordered the battalion to Cawnpoor, and if upon a thorough conviction it ſhall appear to you that the Marattas will certainly make an attempt on the provinces of our allies, we ſhall in that caſe obtain the concurrence of the Board to a brigade's marching to Buxar; though, as the ſeaſon is ſo far advanced, we imagine that nothing important in its conſequences will be undertaken by them before the ſetting in of the rains.

Extract of Letter from General Barker to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal; dated the 28th January 1772.

Encloſed I ſend you a Letter which the Nabob ſent to me yeſterday morning; it was wrote in conſequence of his having received advices from the capital. The Marattas, were made uneaſy from Letters they had received from the Decan, and were deſirous of puſhing on matters here with as much expedition as poſſible; in conſequence of which, they were urging his Majeſty to march with all expedition towards Succurtaul to attack Zabiter Cawn, and that the King had actually moved out of the capital ſome coſs for that purpoſe, but for want of money his people refuſed to go with him. The Vizier alſo obſerves, that Byſagee will undoubtedly advance him a ſmall ſum for the ſubſiſtence of his attendants, or otherwiſe oblige him to go, as he ſuſpects their intention is to force Zabiter Cawn into a compromiſe, and by getting from him a ſum of money, be at liberty to co-operate in meaſures with their Chiefs in the Decan. It is this which the Vizier is deſirous to prevent, but, as I before obſerved to you, without the appearance of the Engliſh approbation he cannot do it, for he has hinted to me in confidence what I was delicate of communicating in public; but the times ſeem to require it. His Excellency obſerved to me, that I was no ſtranger to the terms he was on with the Rohillas, and he openly confeſſed his inclination and wiſh at one time to reduce thoſe Powers. Since the death of Doondee Cawn, for whom he had an utter averſion, he has been more reconciled, and he now diſcovers it is highly neceſſary for political reaſons, to protect them in their preſent eſtabliſhment; that this difference between them has occaſioned a diffidence on their ſide, and that he ſhall not be credited unleſs the Engliſh appear to adopt the ſyſtem, and his pride would be hurt was he to attempt it, and be refuſed; that there is no time to be loſt; that if his army moves to the weſtern frontiers, and I am with him, he is aſſured Zabiter Cawn will not advance a rupee; that inſtead of a compromiſe it will produce an oppoſition. I have before wrote to you that the Nabob had received Letters from the ſeveral Rohilla Chiefs; but then theſe Letters are wrote to him in a ſtile as if he was one and the ſame as the Engliſh, and he doubts, that without ſuch a concurrence, they mean to do nothing with him alone.

To the honourable John Cartier, eſq. Preſident, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have had the pleaſure to receive your Letter of the 3d inſtant. It gives me great ſatisfaction, that my tranſactions with his Excellency the Vizier have met with your approbation: we arrived at this place on the 13th, and ſet out for the north weſtern extremes of the Nabob's dominions to-morrow. This ſituation at Nuuamow, being on the banks of the Ganges, will be exceedingly convenient for me, as I ſhall then be in readineſs to proceed in a Snake in ten or eleven days to the Preſidency, ſhould the ſervice, or you, Gentlemen, require my appearance with expedition.

The Nabob has made ſeveral propoſals to act conjunctively with the Rohillas and Pattaus, in oppoſition to the Marattas; but his propoſals have not been ſo well received as he expected; they have however ſo far agreed to act mutually for a general defence of this quarter of the empire. The Rohillas urged the Nabob to march to the aſſiſtance of Zabiter Cawn, and poſt himſelf oppoſite to Succurtaut, as in this ſituation he would be in readineſs to defend ſuch of the fords as are paſſable at this ſeaſon of the year, and they themſelves would reinforce Zabiter Cawn. This the Nabob declined, nor could I prevail on him on any account to proceed ſo far without the ſecurity of an Engliſh force joined to his army. He propoſed however to march acroſs the Ganges, from the frontiers of his dominions, into the Pattau diſtrict, and there recover ſuch of the new acquiſitions which the Marattas poſſeſſed themſelves of when they inveſted Turruchabad, and by ſuch a diverſion take off a part of their attention from Succurtaut; but then the Vizier required an equal diviſion of the recovered countries to anſwer or defray the charges of ſuch an expedition; this I verily believe the Nabob would have executed, becauſe in ſuch an operation he would have been near his own country; and was the Marattas to detach a principal part of their army againſt him, he had the Engliſh at his back, whom he knew would march to ſupport him, and by this ſituation he covered his own country and the Corah province. Neither the Pattau or the Rohilla reliſhed or would agree to this mode of diviſion of country; it is therefore reſolved, that his Excellency ſhall preſent his whole force on the north weſtern frontier of his dominions, in which ſituation he ſhall be in readineſs to defend either his own or the Corah province. Hafez Rhamet, with the combined forces of the Rohillas, from the aſſurance that I have given them, that the Vizier will take no improper advantage of their being abſent from thoſe parts of the Rohilla Country which lay contiguous to his Excellency's dominions, whilſt I am with him, will march to the defence of Zabiter Cawn, and fords of the Ganges; thus the appearance of ſo reſpectable an oppoſition will check the order of the Marattas intention, and probably put a ſtop to their further progreſs this ſeaſon; and this I am in hopes will anſwer the full intent of the diverſion which the Gentlemen of the Madras Adminiſtration could wiſh to have performed, by amuſing their armies in this quarter, without admitting them to gain any advantage. At the ſame time Letters are wrote from the Vizier, myſelf, and ſeveral of the Rohilla Chiefs, requeſting his Majeſty would withdraw his intention of reducing the Rohillas and Pattaus; and repreſented the conſequences of eſtabliſhing the Marattas in their country, and increaſing the ſtrength of that already too preſumptive Power. The Rohillas are willing to give ſuch proportion of their country, as may be judged neceſſary for the ſupport of the royal houſe, and to aſſiſt his Majeſty in ſuch further operations as may be proper to carry into execution; and I am in great hopes, from the little proſpect there is of the Marattas ſucceeding in the reduction of the Rohillas this ſeaſon, the King will liſten to our advice; on the other hand, ſhould the Maratta arms prevail, and they effect a paſſage acroſs the river to reduce the Rohillas, it appears they muſt winter on this ſide of the Ganges to acquire any advantage from ſuch a paſſage, as the river is fordable only three months longer, from the melting of the ſnow in the Northern mountains in the hot months; in which caſe I have a plan of operation to propoſe immediately on the taking off the rains, which I am in hopes will meet with your approbation; but it is too long to appear in this Letter. The grand point at preſent appears to be the prevention of a compromiſe between the Rohillas and Marattas, which I am endeavouring at, by ſpiriting up the Rohillas and Pattaus, and perſuading perſuading them that although the Marattas ſhould gain ſome advantage this ſeaſon, the near approach of the rains will ſoon afford them an opportunity of recovering their loſſes. I have aſſurances from Zabiter Cawn, that he is determined to maintain his poſt at Succurtaut, and it is imagined he can do it; Hafez Rhamet and the other Rohillas, are ſatisfied with regard to their Eaſtern poſſeſſions, and are drawing together for the defence of the river. And I propoſe on our arrival at Munancow, to throw a few of the Nabob's battalions, and ſome thouſand of his beſt horſe, on the frontiers of Corah. Thus, Gentlemen, I am in hopes by theſe meaſures to fruſtrate the intentions of the Marattas, and put a ſtop to their rapid progreſs, at leaſt for this ſeaſon, and anſwer all the purpoſe which the Gentlemen of the Madras Adminiſtration can expect, without commencing actual hoſtilities with them ourſelves.

The lateſt advices from the royal encampment inform me that his Majeſty had, by the aſſiſtance of the Marattas, taken a fort called Gouſe Gur, belonging to Zabita Cawn, in which there were ſix guns, a large quantity of grain, and ſome treaſure, which was immediately divided between the King and the Marattas in equal ſhares: they are now encamped within ſixteen coſs of Succurtaut, and ſome parties have been examining the fords. Zabita Cawn has reinforced his advanced guards, and is encamped with a conſiderable body of Rohillas on the oppoſite banks of the Ganges for the defence of the river.

I ſhould imagine that if the Marattas ſucceed in their attempts of croſſing the river, and make a rapid progreſs through the Rohilla Country towards the Vizier's territories, as they have already given it out that they intend cantoning at Lucknow, you will judge it neceſſary to advance a brigade nearer to his Excellency's dominions; for in this caſe the approach of the Marattas will be very quick.

Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

His Excellency the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla has juſt been with me in conſequence of Papers of Intelligence which arrived from the Weſtward late laſt night: they bring advices, that a body of Marattas, amounting to thirty thouſand men, commanded by the Surdar Maha Gee Sindea, had made good their paſſage acroſs the Ganges under cover of their cannon, and gave a total defeat to the Rohillas and Affgans poſted there for the defence of the fords, and commanded by Sadut Cawn, an Affreidi. This Surdar is ſaid to be killed, and the few of the troops who eſcaped the ſlaughter have taken ſhelter with Zabiter Cawn in Succurtaul. This blow has greatly diſheartened the ſeveral Rohilla Sardars, and it is reported they are each preparing for their own ſecurity and their families. The Marattas, flushed with their ſucceſs, will undoubtedly loſe no time in attacking Zabiter Cawn in his lines, and there is too much reaſon to apprehend they will ſucceed; their progreſs through the Rohilla country and towards the Vizier's dominions will conſequently be very rapid. Conſidering therefore the length of time it will take to receive your approbation for marching the 1ſt brigade, I have determined to direct Colonel Champion to begin his march immediately; and the exigency of the ſervice will I hope vindicate my conduct therein: ſhould it however be contrary to your approbation, your orders for countermanding will neceſſarily reach Colonel Champion before he can have advanced far beyond the Carramnaſſa. In the meantime I ſhall take every meaſure, in concert with his Excellency, for the defence of his dominions, that may be neceſſary on the occaſion. I ſhall do myſelf the pleaſure to addreſs you as any material tranſactions from the Weſtward occur, and in a day or two will tranſmit you a full account of the late action.

To the honourable John Cartier, eſq. Preſident, &c.
Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

From Sir R. Barker.

Since my laſt addreſs to your Board, the Maratta Vackeel, Bahar Gur, has had an audience with the Vizier, and has received a killaut or dreſs. The Nabob has alſo diſpatched Ellich Cawn with propoſals to the Marattas; they have it ſeems, through Babur Gee, offered him the mediatorſhip of the affairs between them and Hafez Rhamet, and the Nabob appears much inclined to undertake the buſineſs; their inducements I am unacquainted with; but he purpoſes to acquire a large ſum from the diſmayed Rohilla, and by giving a proportion to the Marattas, retain a ſufficient ſum to defray the expences which he has been at for the march of his own troops, and the extra expence of the Engliſh forces, with an overplus to reward him for the undertaking. He is now fully intent on this buſineſs; and although I have repreſented to him the probability of his being drawn into a Treaty that will hereafter bring diſhonour both on himſelf and friends, he is not to be diverted from his ſcheme, but declares he will enter into no meaſures that will be detrimental to his allies, or the attachment and friendſhip he has with the Engliſh; and to convince me of the truth of this, nothing is to be concluded on without my approbation. I have poſitively told his Excellency, that I diſlike this Treaty; that it is inconſiſtent with his intereſt and his connection with the Engliſh; that I had much rather ſee him form an alliance with the Rohillas, who may yet be aſſembled againſt the Marattas, than have any thing to ſay to thoſe aſſuming Powers, as I ſuſpect much they have bad deſigns. He aſked me, if the Engliſh forces will join, or be in readineſs to ſupport him in the undertaking? but he has already experienced, that I can give him little ſatisfactory anſwers to theſe queſtions. He tells me he has no choice; for he muſt either join the Marattas in the total reduction of the Rohillas, or bring on a compromiſe between thoſe Powers; for the alternative is an attack on his dominions after the reduction of the Rohilla. I have therefore ſent Captain Gabriel Harper to Hafez Rhamet, and I will do my endeavours to procraſtinate this Treaty until I receive your inſtructions.

Gentlemen,

Some advices from the Decan have thrown the Maratta Chiefs, Byſagee and Sindeah, into a conſternation. It is reported, that Mhadarow has releaſed from his confinement Ragonaut Row, and promiſed him a conſiderable command in the Weſt; in conſequence of which it is imagined imagined they will conclude a peace with the Rohillas, and re-croſs the river.

The encloſed Papers of Intelligence corroborates this information. The Vizier gives not much credit to this news, leſt it may be propagated to amuſe; but he appears uneaſy under an apprehenſion of being excluded from this Treaty.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
R^t Barker.

Camp, near Shawabad,
10th April 1772.

Ordered, That we ſend an anſwer to the General in the following terms:

To Brigadier General Sir R^t. Barker, Commander in Chief under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your Letters of the 9th, 10th, and 14th inſtant, with the Papers of Intelligence encloſed in the Letters.

It appears by your Letter of the 9th, that the Vizier has formed a plan for a general pacification, to be effected by his intervention, between the Rohillas and the Marattas; and the objects propoſed by it are, that in lieu of a certain ſum of money to be paid them by the former, the Marattas may evacuate their country; and that he himſelf likewiſe may receive a proportionable conſideration to defray the expence of the expedition he has ſet on foot, and as an acknowledgment for his trouble in the mediation. The plan you have adopted ſeems to be the reverſe of this. You ſuppoſe that any compromiſe that will add to the weakneſs of the Rohillas, and ſtrengthen the hands of the Marattas, and which ſhall leave them at liberty and uninterrupted to proſecute their deſigns in other quarters, will only enable them to return with greater advantages, and poſſeſſed of a more effectual means of completing the reduction of the Rohilla country at another ſeaſon, and conſequently to carry their arms into the dominions of the Vizier, by which the Company muſt be ultimately involved in an offenſive and hazardous war againſt the whole power of that State. This we conclude to be the principal ground of your objections, although not expreſſed in your Letter. And the conduct which you are deſirous the Nabob ſhould purſue on this occaſion is, that he ſhould form an alliance with the Rohillas againſt their common enemy, and commence, with the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces, an immediate war with the Marattas.

In conſequence of theſe diſſimilar views, the Vizier has ſent a Vackeel to the Marattas, to treat of peace; and you have, on the other hand, diſpatched Captain Harper as a plenipotentiary on the part of the Company to the Rohilla Chiefs, in order to procraſtinate a Treaty that is to counteract his Excellency's views, until you ſhall receive our inſtructions. We have ſtated the caſe thus largely on both ſides, that you may the better underſtand the grounds of our reſolutions upon it.

The Committee are confirmed in the opinion they have for ſome time paſt entertained, that the Marattas will not make any ſtay in the Rohilla country, but that they will be obliged to quit it even before the rains ſet in; and every day's intelligence renders the probability of this event the more apparent. We therefore ſo far concur in opinion with you, that any conceſſions made to the Marattas to promote their departure would be ſuperfluous, and highly improper. If their departure is to be purchaſed, although the Vizier might be an immediate gainer by it, yet we do not think ourſelves authorized to engage in any plan which in its conſequences may lead us into inevitable hoſtilities: for this reaſon, we cannot approve of a promiſe being made to him of the junction of our forces in the proſecution of an offenſive war; the more eſpecially as the Court of Directors, in their Letters by the Lapwing, have promiſed to furniſh us with clear and preciſe Inſtructions reſpecting the carrying on hoſtilities againſt the Marattas at a diſtance from our own borders; and theſe may be very ſoon expected.

From all theſe conſiderations, the Committee approve of your endeavours to diſſuade the Vizier from entering into any negociations which may lead to an alliance with the Marattas, ſince we might by this means be precluded from taking ſuch meaſures as the Company's exact orders may render neceſſary; at the ſame time, we do not think any Treaty made with thoſe Powers would be longer obſerved by them than as it ſhould prove conſonant to their own intereſts.

As you have already deputed Captain Harper to the Rohillas, of courſe the commiſſion with which you have intruſted him muſt have had its effect long before this reaches you: we have therefore only to deſire that you will recal him as ſoon as you conveniently can, as the character in which Captain Harper has been ſent to the enemies of the Marattas, carries with it too much the appearance of our being principals in theſe negociations, which we are ſolicitous of avoiding.

We deſire you will inform us very particularly of all proceedings and events in your quarter, of the nature of your inſtructions to Captain Harper, and of the conſequent operations, that we may have the ſubject at large before us, and be better enabled to form our reſolutions upon them, at the time the receipt of the Company's orders may enable us to take a more deciſive part in theſe tranſactions, than we think ourſelves at preſent authorized to do.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour to receive your Letter of the 30th ultimo yeſterday, and have taken the earlieſt opportunity of replying thereto. With concern it is that I obſerve by your Letter, that my opinions and meaſures have not appeared to you in the light I expected. Upon the reperuſal of all my addreſſes to your Board, both preceding and ſucceeding thoſe acknowledged in your before-mentioned Letter, I cannot diſcover any alterations in the plans I had laid down for my conduct, farther than the fluctuating changes in the motions and behaviour of the Powers in this quarter abſolutely required; I even flatter myſelf you will find my conduct totally uniform, and that it has been my greateſt care to prevent the appearance of our having taken too active a part in the negociations expected to be brought about between the Rohilla and the Vizier, and his Excellency and the Marattas.

It has been my wiſh to ſee the Vizier form an alliance with the Rohilla, as will evidently appear by my ſeveral Letters. From my firſt arrival at his Excellency's Court in January laſt, and ſince the entire defeat of Zabiter Cawn, and the general conſternation the whole Rohilla Power were thrown into, it became more particularly neceſſary, not only to preſerve them from total extirpation, but alſo to ſecure his Excellency's dominions from the eſtabliſhment of ſuch troubleſome neighbours by ſuch an alliance. I alſo propoſed a grand ſtep towards ſtopping the further progreſs of the Maratta arms, at leaſt this ſeaſon. When the propoſals were therefore made by the Maratta Vackeel to the Nabob, for appointing him mediator between them and the Rohilla, he immediately thought of gaining over the Rohilla, and taking the management of their affairs with the Marattas entirely upon himſelf, in conſideration of his receiving from them a crore of rupees, as will appear by my addreſs of the 22d April; and the Vizier at the ſame time diſpatched Elick Cawn to the Marattas with their own Vackeels, to treat with them concerning the evacuating of the Rohilla diſtricts, by the payment of a ſum of money: the Vizier however apprehending little effect from his embaſſy to the Rohilla Sardars without the influence of the Engliſh, requeſted Captain Harper might attend his Vackeel upon this occaſion, to give weight to his propoſals. I accordingly ingly acquieſced; but from what part of my Letters it appears I had ſent him as plenipotentiary on the part of the Honourable Company, I am at a loſs to conceive; for, believe me, Gentlemen, it was the fartheſt from my intentions that the Honourable Company ſhould be in any reſpect whatſoever mentioned in the agreement between the Rohilla and the Vizier; and for your further ſatisfaction on this head I muſt beg leave to ſend you under cover a copy of the inſtructions I gave to that officer upon the occaſion.

By the deceitful behaviour of the Marattas, in denying the promiſes made by their Vackeels, Bibur Gee and Mulkaur Raid, when Elick Cawn arrived to treat with them on the part of the Vizier, all negociations between them and his Excellency were entirely broke off, ſo you may plaſe to obſerve by my Letter of the 10th May, and he then became more urgent for the junction of the Rohilla, leſt the Marattas might under-rate his propoſals, and both forming a junction, fall upon his dominions, which muſt inevitably have brought on hoſtilities between the Marattas and the Company's troops: I was therefore again ſolicited for Captain Harper's return to the Rohilla Chiefs, finally to conclude the wiſhed-for alliance, they having agreed to the payment of ſixty lacks of rupees. This I have the pleaſure to inform you is at laſt nearly effected, and to-morrow or next day I expect Captain Harper's arrival, with Hafez Rahmet Cawn accompanying him. On the other hand, from cauſes yet unknown, and notwithſtanding the Marattas refuſed to permit of the Nabob's having any concern in the mediatorſhip of the Rohilla, Sindeah, attended by Hyſein dit dine Cawn, has ſet out with Elick Cawn to the Vizier's camp, with hopes of prevailing on him to proceed to the royal preſence, as will appear by Letter of the 18th, duplicate of which is incloſed: but the Vizier ſeems inflexible in his determination not to form any alliance with ſuch a ſet of people, who can ſo readily commit a breach of promiſe; and my further concluſion on this matter is ſet forth in the afore-mentioned Letter. —After the knowledge of your ſentiments relative to the operations of the Marattas, it would be extraordinary indeed had I endeavoured to bring about immediate hoſtilities, and it therefore concerns me to find you have drawn ſuch an inference. Be aſſured, whatever my private ſentiments may be on this head, I ſhall never adopt a plan ſo contrary to your wiſhes and thoſe of your honourable Employers—conſcious that his Excellency would enter into no treaty with the Marattas, but muſt hereafter prove an inconvenience to his alliance and friendſhip with the Engliſh, I dreaded its happening; and here indeed my views are diſſimilar with thoſe of the Nabob: I endeavoured to diſſuade him from it. Their deceitful conduct has happily effected my intentions, and finally his determination. Should however the Nabob's junction with the Rohillas, and the refuſal he means to give Sindeah, induce the Marattas to undertake any hoſtilities immediately, my endeavours ſhall not be wanting to bring it to a ſpeedy concluſion; but if they croſs the river to winter between the Ganges and Jumna, and defer any further attempts, I hope to be favoured with your orders, in conſequence of the expected Inſtructions from the Honourable the Directors, for my future guide.

I am, Gentlemen,
with reſpect,

Gentlemen,

On the 21ſt inſtant Captain Harper returned from the Rohilla Sardars, having at length prevailed on Hafiz Rhamet Cawn to proceed with him to Shawabad the ſecond day's march. However Captain Harper came poſt to join me, leaving the Rohilla to follow by eaſy marches, in order to ſettle the mode for his reception. The jealouſy of Hindoſtaners has been very particularly evinced in this viſit; for notwithſtanding Hafiz Rham t has been encamped within three coſs ſince the 23d of the month, until this morning he could not prevail on himſelf to perform the meeting. His Excellency and myſelf proceeded about three miles to meet the Rohilla, and the ſame attention and ceremony was obſerved as at the reception of Zabiter Cawn.

I hope in a few days to have the ſatisfaction of communicating to you the final concluſion of this agreement with the Rohilla Sardars in general; and am, with reſpect, Tranſlation of a Treaty entered into between the Vizier of the Empire Sujah ul Dowlah, and the Rohilla Sardars, reciprocally interchanged.

Agreement. Firſt, Friendſhip is eſtabliſhed between us: and we Hafez Rammet Cawn and Zahita Cawn, and all the other Rohilla Sardars, great and ſmall, have agreed and determined with the Vizier of the Empire Sujah ul Dowlah, that we adhere to the ſubſtance of this writing, and never deviate from this agreement; that we eſteem his friends as our friends, and his enemies as our enemies; and that we and our heirs during our lives ſhall adhere firmly to this our oath and agreement; that we ſhall be united and joined together for the protection of the country of the Vizier, of the empire, and of our own country; and if any enemy, which God forbid, ſhould make an attempt againſt us and the Vizier, we the Rohilla Sardars and the Vizier of the Empire ſhall uſe our joint endeavours to oppoſe him; we all the Rohilla Sardars ſhall alſo join and unite in any meaſure that may be determined by the Vizier of the Empire for the benefit of the Nabob Mahummed Zabita Cawn. We both parties ſwear by the Almighty, his Prophet, and the ſacred Koran, that we will firmly adhere to this ſolemn Agreement, nor ever deviate from this our Treaty.

This Treaty confirmed by oath, and ſealed in the preſence of General Sir Robert Barker, written on the 11th of the month Rubba ul wul 1186 Nigarree.

Tranſlation of an Agreement on the part of the Rohilla Sardars with the Vizier.

The Vizier of the Empire Sujah ul Dowlah ſhall eſtabliſh the Rohilla Sardars in their different poſſeſſions, obliging the Marattas to retire either by peace or war; this to depend on the pleaſure of the Vizier.

If at this time, without either war or peace, the Marattas, on account of the rains, ſhall croſs and retire, and after [illegible] xpiration of the rainy ſeaſon they ſhould again [illegible] e country of the Rohillas, their expulſion is the [illegible]ſiels of the Vizier.

The Rohilla Sardars, in conſequence of the above, agree to pay 40 lack of rupees to the Vizier, in the following manner: as the Marattas are now in the country of the Rohilla Sardars, the Vizier of the Empire ſhall march from Shawalad, as far as may be neceſſary, to enable the families of the Rohillas to leave the jungle, and return to their habitations: ten lacks of rupees in ſpecie, in part of the above ſum, ſhall then be paid; and the remaining thirty lacks in three years, from the beginning of the year 1180 Fuſſuli.

This Agreement ſealed in the preſence of General Sir Robert Barker.

Extract of the Proceedings of the Preſident and Council at Fort William, in their Secret Department, 18th February 1773.

Extract of Inſtructions given by the Board to General Barker.

N. B. A complete copy of the Inſtructions given by the Board to General Barker is included in the collection of original papers reſpecting Corah and Allahabad.

3. Although, for the firſt object, our intention was to confine our operations altogether within the limits of the Vizier's dominions, yet, for reaſons with which as a Member of the Board you are well acquainted, we have determined to include within the line of defence the Rohilla diſtrict lying on the ſame ſide of the river, known by the name of the country of Hafez Ramut Khân; and for that purpoſe you are hereby authorized to enter into a Treaty with Hafez Ramut Khân, for the defence and protection of his dominions, on ſuch conditions as ſhall fully indemnify the Company for the additional charge and hazard which may be incurred by ſuch an engagement.

4. But ſhould Hafez Ramut Khân either fall into the hands of the Marattas, or from any other ſimilar circumſtance be rendered incapable of entering into ſuch an engagement, you are ſtill to conſider his dominions as an object of your operations; and if the Vizier require you to undertake their defence, and engage to perform the conditions which we have deſired you to claim from Hafez Ramut Khân, you will not heſitate to comply, but adopt the meaſure heartily, and purſue it as included in the Inſtructions for the immediate defence of the Vizier's dominions.

5. It is however underſtood, that in all this you rigidly and ſtrictly adhere to the maxim laid down, of confining your operations on that ſide within the Ganges, and on no account croſs the river, or carry the war into the Rohilla diſtricts beyond it.

Letter from the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah; received the 14th April 1773.

Upon intelligence being given to General Barker and myſelf, that the Marattas were going to croſs the river, and had intentions of commencing hoſtilities in the territories of Hafez Rahamut Cawn, we determined to proceed thither by rapid marches, in order to afford that country protection. Accordingly we ſet out, and arrived in time for that purpoſe. Togojee, with the part of the army which he commanded, not being able to find a croſſing place, fled off on this ſide the river, and the other part under the command of Byſagee, which croſſed, ran off on the other ſide. The ſecond day we learned that Togogee was a conſiderable diſtance off on this ſide the river, and that Byſagee had halted near us on the oppoſite ſhore. We therefore judged, that if we were at once to croſs part of our army and attack Byſagee, it might probably put a ſpeedy end to the preſent diſturbances, and in conformity to this our opinion, the General immediately croſſed with the Engliſh troops in order to begin the attack; but Byſagee, who had got previous information of the ſtep we were meditating, haſtened his retreat, and fled to the diſtance of 20 coſs, ſo that the Engliſh troops were obliged to croſs again on this ſide. As we have now got certain information that Togogee with his force has intentions of plundering Biſſoolee and other places belonging to the Rohillas, we have therefore determined to march after him, in order to afford thoſe places relief; accordingly Hafez Rahamut is already gone, and to-morrow we ſhall follow. I have promiſed the General, that whenever we ſhall drive the Marattas out of the Rohilla country, and Hafez Rahamet Cawn ſhall fulfil his agreement by the payment of 40 lacks of rupees, I will give half of that ſum to the Engliſh Sirdars. Should the Rohilla Sirdars be guilty of a breach of their agreement, and the Engliſh Gentlemen will thoroughly exterminate them, and ſettle me in their country, I will in that caſe pay them 50 lacks of rupees in ready money, and beſides, exempt them from paying any tribute to the King, out of the Bengal Revenues; the General will alſo write you particularly on this matter himſelf.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 15th April 1773.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I now beg leave to tranſmit a duplicate of my addreſs to you, under date of yeſterday.—This morning the troops repaſſed the Ganges at the ſame Gaut, which they forded on the 22d inſtant.

The Marattas made no attempts to interrupt the rear. —Biſſagee with his diviſion is marched towards Cavul it is reported; and Tuccogee, with about 15,000, continues in the Rohilla diſtricts on this ſide of the river; Sunibar he has already deſtroyed, and threatens the other principal towns.

Yeſterday I had a viſit from Hafez Rhamet, and his Excellency the Vizier, when the ſituation of the affairs of the Rohilla were debated. The coming in of Hafez has aſſuaged his Excellency a good deal; and upon conditions of the Rohilla immediately clearing off the laſt year's treaty of forty lacks of rupees, it has been determined to afford their families and country protection from the ravages of the Marattas, of which the Nabob is to pay the Company 20 lacks for the part they will take in this protection, but in default of the fulfilling of this agreement by the Rohilla, his Excellency agrees to pay the ſum of 50 lacks of rupees to the Company for their aid in putting him in poſſeſſion of the Rohilla diſtricts, commonly known by the territories of Hafez Rhamet.

In conſequence of the determination to protect the Rohilla, I ſhall to-morrow proceed with all expedition towards Luſſuly, about 18 coſs diſtant, whither the intelligence adviſes us Tuccojee has marched in expectation of ſecuring the family of Hafez Rhamut Cawn.

I am, Gentlemen, with reſpect,
Your moſt obedient,
humble ſervant,
R. Barker.

Agreed, that the following reply be immediately made to the above Letters:

To Brigadier General Sir Robt Barker, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your ſeveral Letters, with their Encloſures, under dates the 15th, 20th, 21ſt, 23d, and 24th ultimo.

We remark, with much ſatisfaction, the caution obſerved by you, in not commencing hoſtilities with the Marattas, and in delaying to fire until our army had received repeated ſhots from them. But we cannot approve approve your having afterwards exceeded our orders, by croſſing the river Ganges to attack the Marattas, nor of the reaſons aſſigned for that meaſure. We muſt deſire you to carry in remembrance the very peremptory orders we have ourſelves received from our honourable Employers, to act only on the defenſive, and to avoid, by every poſſible means, the marching of our forces to ſuch a diſtance from our provinces, as to leave them deſtitute of their aid. It was for this reaſon, and not from any opinion we had of the ſufficiency of the Ganges as a barrier againſt the Maratta army, that we made that river the boundary of your operations beyond the province of Corah. We are however ſatisfied, from your immediate return to your former ſtation within the preſcribed line, that you meant to conform yourſelf to the ſpirit of our inſtructions. Nevertheleſs, as we have been particular in providing for every probable emergency, by recommending the manner in which we would have you act; and as the obſervance of the defenſive plan which we have been obliged to adopt, can only be enſured by a literal adherence to the line marked out, we muſt inſiſt on your conducting yourſelf for the future by the letter, and not by the ſpirit, of your inſtructions.

It is with ſome reluctance that we exceeded our original plan of defence, in ſuffering our troops to paſs beyond the frontiers of the Vizier's dominions; and we were principally induced to this, by the natural boundary which the Ganges and mountains formed to the Rohilla diſtrict, and of courſe to your operations in it; added to the danger to which the Vizier's dominions were expoſed, by the eaſy acceſs the enemy might have through that open country to his territories. But theſe lines once paſſed, it is not in our power to preſcribe any limitation to the progreſs of our troops, which either the retreat of the enemy, or any other favourable emergency, might lead to. The latitude allowed in our laſt letter to you was upon this ſame principle.

We approve of the plan formed for the protection of the Rohilla country, and of the ſtipulation you have made in behalf of the Company, for the moiety of the ſum of 40 lacks, to be paid by the Rohilla chief for this aid; and we authorize you to enter into ſuch engagements with the Vizier and the Rohillas. But we cannot as yet agree to the alternative propoſed, as it might not at this time be diſcreet to create new enemies, until our hands are entirely cleared of the Marattas, and eſpecially for an object of no permanent advantage to the Company. We therefore deſire that you will not engage in any meaſures for reducing the country of the Rohillas, in caſe of default in their engagements with the Vizier, before you have adviſed us of every circumſtance, and have received our further inſtructions upon this ſubject.

That a plan of this kind would yield the moſt eſſential advantage to the Vizier, in extending his territories, completing the defenſive line of his poſſeſſions, and freeing him from the moſt troubleſome neighbourhood, we can well conceive; but as this cannot be atchieved by the Vizier without the aſſiſtance of our forces, we can never conſent to engage in it (although we ſhould even be authorized by the treachery or miſconduct of the Rohillas) without ſuch previous conditions as ſhall ſecure to the Company an equivalent for ſo important a ſervice rendered to our ally. And here we cannot avoid expreſſing our regret, that in the whole courſe of our alliance and operations with the Vizier, this neceſſary and equitable precaution has never yet been ſufficiently attended to; but every meaſure we have adopted in conjunction with him, appears wholly to have been calculated for his particular advantage. While he thus reaps the ſole benefit, to the entire excluſion of the Company, it muſt check us in every ſcheme propoſed for the ſucceſs of the cauſe in which we are jointly engaged, unleſs ſome more equal plan of alliance ſhall be formed with him.

Fort William, 15th April 1773.

We are, Sir,
Your moſt obedient ſervants.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 15th April 1773.

The Vizier having in ſeveral of his Letters expreſſed an earneſt deſire to have an interview with the Preſident, and many points of conſequence requiring an adjuſtment which cannot be effected without a perſonal conference, the Committee are further of opinion, that a meeting between the Vizier and the Preſident would at this ſeaſon be productive of great benefit to the Company's affairs.

Reſolved, that we ſubmit theſe ſubjects to the conſideration of the Council at large.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 19th April 1773.

The Preſident lays before the Board the following extract from the Select Committee Proceedings of the 15th inſtant:

Extract of the Select Committee Proceedings of the 15th April 1773.

It having been reſolved to take preſent poſſeſſion of the province of Corah on behalf of the Company, the Committee are of opinion that it will be eſſentially neceſſary, both for ſecuring the Company's rights in that province, and as a preparatory ſtep to any exchange of that diſtrict, or other mode of ceſſion which may be reſolved on, immediately to depute a Member of the Board to Corah, to receive charge of it from the General, and to inveſtigate and to form an account of its revenue; and that he be inveſted with full powers to exerciſe ſuch an authority and controul over the Naib Muneer ul Dowlah and the other officers of that Government, as may be requiſite for theſe ends.—The ſervice in which the General is immediately engaged, as well as the nature of this truſt, which is totally foreign from the duties of his profeſſion, and requires the ſuperintendance of a perſon experienced in the buſineſs of the revenue, preclude us from receiving the aid of his ſervices on this occaſion; beſides, that ſuch an expreſs deputation will have the effect of marking in the moſt public and authentic manner the determination of this Government to maintain its right to the property or diſpoſal of the province of Corah. And this opinion we conceive to be of very great importance towards procuring an equivalent for the ceſſion of it whenever that ſhall be made a ſubject of negociation; the more ſo, as the remote ſituation of that country too apparently ſhews, that it cannot be our intereſt, and therefore not our intention, to retain the poſſeſſion of it.

The Vizier having in ſeveral of his Letters expreſſed an earneſt deſire to have an interview with the Preſident, and many points of conſequence requiring an adjuſtment which cannot be effected without perſonal conference, the Committee are further of opinion, that a meeting between the Vizier and the Preſident would at this ſeaſon be productive of great benefit to the Company's affairs;

Reſolved, that we ſubmit theſe ſubjects to the conſideration of the Council at large.

The Board approve of both propoſitions offered by the Select Committee.

Letter to the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah; written 22d April 1773.

I have received your Excellency's Letter, mentioning the particulars of your operations againſt the Marattas, your promiſe to the General that whenever the Marattas ſhall be driven out of the Rohilla country, and Hafez Rehmet Cawn ſhall fulfil his agreements by the payment of the forty lacks of rupees, you will give half that ſum to the Company; and that ſhould the Rohilla Chiefs be guilty of a breach of their agreement, we will thoroughly exterminate them and ſettle your Excellency in the country, country, you will in that caſe pay them 50 lacks of rupees in ready money, and exempt the Company from the King's tribute. Upon the ſame ſubject the General has alſo written to me very fully. Every circumſtance you have written to me I conſider as a proof of the cordial attachment which ſubſiſts between us, and of the confidence and reliance which you place in the friendſhip of the Engliſh Company; but the points which you have propoſed require much conſideration, and the previous ratification of a formal agreement before I can conſent to them; otherwiſe I may incur the diſpleaſure of my Employers. It is true that I have long thought the junction of the Rohilla country with yours, either by a ſure and permanent obligation of friendſhip, or by reducing them to obedience, if they ſhould render ſuch an attempt juſtifiable by any act of enmity or treachery, and be an adviſable point for you to attain, becauſe by that means the defenſive line of your dominions would be completed by including within it all the land lying on that ſide the river Ganges; and you will be in no danger from an attack on that quarter, whenever the Marattas ſhall commit diſturbances in another. But it appears to me that it is an object not to be attained by an occaſional viſit of that country; and its diſtance from the province of Bengal will not admit of the continuance of the Engliſh forces longer than the period which remains of the dry weather. You will pleaſe to remember they were ſent for your aſſiſtance, and to defend the province of Corah againſt the Marattas; thus far only I am authorized by the commands of my Superiors, to employ them beyond the limits of their own poſſeſſions, and even this is the cauſe of a heavy loſs and riſque to their affairs, eſpecially in the expences of their troops and ſtores, and in the abſence of ſo great a part of their force, which was originally deſtined for the ſole defence of the countries dependant on Bengal. You have frequently repeated in your Letters the remarks, that to wait till the enemy was at your door, and then to write for the aſſiſtance of our forces would anſwer no good purpoſe; but that every year the ſame cauſe would require their return to the ſame ſervice, and paſs without effecting any purpoſe to real advantage. My friend, all this is true; but it proceeds from the want of proper meaſures having been taken, and from the imperfect footing on which affairs between us have been eſtabliſhed. The concern which the Company take in your ſafety, and the duties of friendſhip which their commands and our own inclinations equally enjoin us to obſerve inviolably to their allies, and eſpecially to one ſo cloſely united to them by an approved attachment, would not ſuffer us to withhold our aid when your affairs required it; but it has always been with reluctance that we have ſuffered the army to paſs the frontiers of our own country, becauſe the loſs and inconveniencies attending it was certain; and although joined with your forces there is no cauſe to fear the moſt powerful efforts of our enemies, yet the events of war are at the diſpoſal of the Almighty, and the only fruits which the moſt ſplendid ſucceſſes can afford us, are the reputation of having maintained the faith of our alliance in oppoſition to every incentive of ſelf-intereſt and ſelf-defence; thus circumſtanced we are precluded from deriving any benefit from your ſupport, and ours can only afford you a relief from preſent danger, without any proviſion for future ſecurity. For theſe reaſons I have often wiſhed for a perſonal interview with you, for the purpoſe of removing difficulties, and of perpetuating the alliance with your Excellency on terms more ſuitable to our mutual intereſts. Your Excellency hath alſo repeatedly expreſſed the ſame inclination; I therefore write, that if your affairs will at this ſeaſon admit of your giving me a meeting, I will haſten to obtain it as ſoon as I am able after the receipt of your Letter in reply to this; if otherwiſe, I muſt wait for it at ſome more diſtant period, as the affairs of this Government will indiſpenſably require my preſence at this place after three or four months, and it is uncertain when I ſhall again have an interval of leiſure for ſuch a journey.

In the meantime, as your Excellency and the General are at a great diſtance from the province of Korah, and the affairs of that province require the preſence of a perſon on behalf of the Company, to regulate and take the charge of it, until it ſhall be determined in what manner it ſhall after be diſpoſed of, I have judged it adviſable to depute Mr. James Lawrell, a Gentleman of the Council of Calcutta, on this ſervice, and he will ſet out accordingly in a few days; which I hope you will approve. APPENDIX No. 21.

Extract of Letter from the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah; received the 10th March 1773.

By God's bleſſing, what is fixed for the expence of the Engliſh forces will be delivered to Colonel Champion, the commanding officer of the troops here, without repeated applications; and there will be no deviation therein. You muſt remain eaſy on this head, and conſidering the exceſſive deſire of my heart to have a meeting with you, keep me conſtantly receiving your friendly Letters; for correſpondence is half an interview.

Extract of Letter from the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah; received the 24th March 1773.

After expreſſing his deſire of an interview with Mr. Haſtings, he proceeds: the friendſhip and regard which ſubſiſt between us, require no comment. By God's bleſſing, they will receive daily increaſing ſtrength; and the obſervance thereof, as was neceſſary and proper, has on both ſides been brought to paſs; and I am ſenſible that it will ever continue to be our mutual ſentiments. I am exceſſively thankful and pleaſed with the friendſhip which you have performed, and may the Almighty preſerve you for all this goodneſs. For the reſt, I write you a few circumſtances, which proceed from my penetration and forethought. By God's bleſſing, in theſe days, you, my friend, are likewiſe endowed with wiſdom, and you will reflect on them maturely and conſiderately.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, 9th June 1773.

Read, the following Letters from General Barker, under date the 10th, 13th, and 20th May.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour of addreſſing you on the 6th, in anſwer to your Letter of the 15th April, which I muſt confeſs gave me much uneaſineſs, as it conveys an idea of your having ſuppoſed me inclined to exceed your inſtructions, by carrying your forces beyond the bounds of your limitation without orders. Had I ſuppoſed you would have drawn ſuch a ſurmiſe from my bare croſſing the river, an act of neceſſity, notwithſtanding the ſucceeding day muſt have informed you of my return to my former ſtation, you may reſt aſſured I ſhould not have taken ſuch a ſtep, as I ſhould be ſorry to give riſe to a ſuſpicion, on any account, which appears to have been ſo readily adopted by the Adminiſtration againſt one of its Members. It requires no great penetration to diſcover the conſequences of carrying your forces to a diſtance, which you ſeemed to apprehend in your Letter of the 15th; and however my Letters may have inclined to the meaſure of carrying the war, when once begun, between the two rivers, and profiting for the many needleſs marches which your forces have made into this quarter; in juſtice to my ſervices, you could not ſuppoſe me guilty of putting ſuch into execution, without your orders for ſo doing.

In conſequence of the retreat of the Marattas towards the Jumna, the Rohillas are but little inclined to perform their agreements, and already begin to heſitate, from motives that they deem the defence afforded their country by the Engliſh forces and the Vizier, equally neceſſary for the ſecurity of his Excellency's dominions; and that no terms of accommodation have been ſettled with the Marattas, by which only a permanent peace and ſecurity to their poſſeſſions can be enſured to them; that the Marattas may return to them the next ſeaſon, and with equal propriety demand the performance of their Treaty with them for 35 lacks: will we in that caſe be anſwerable to defend their poſſeſſions, or procure an eſtabliſhed peace between them and the Marattas?

Your Letter of the 15th ultimo, expreſſing that your forces were at a great diſtance from your provinces, and there being no manner of occaſion, ſince the retreat of the enemy, for their longer continuance in this part, at a conference with his Excellency, he purpoſes to return within his own dominions, which I readily concurred in, both in regard to the Company's forces and his own. The brigade will therefore march in two days hence towards the banks of the Gumpty, between Lucknow and Sultunpoor, where they will have a temporary ſhelter againſt the latter part of the dry ſeaſon, and alſo the rainy weather, in expectation of your further orders.

Yeſterday I had a Letter from Nuzzif Khan, who received his diſmiſſion from the Marattas when they began their retreat. He expreſſed his concern at the part neceſſity has obliged him to take in the late operations of the Maratta, and profeſſed his attachment to the welfare of the Company with great warmth. In juſtice to this perſon, permit me to aſſure you, that he has ſhewn a very ſteadfaſt attachment; and being preſent at all the tranſactions theſe two years paſt, I may be allowed to form no indifferent judgment of his worth and abilities. From my firſt arrival at Rumgaut he has been urgent to join your forces; but I denied him, from the hopes that he could render me more material ſervice from his continuance. He failed not to give me moſt minute and exact informations of the Marattas debates and intentions; and would, I am perſuaded, have rendered your arms moſt eminent ſervice, had the Marattas ever ventured to come to a general engagement. He is now in great diſtreſs, and hopes his attachment to the intereſt of the Company, and the former regard he bore in the opinion of the Engliſh Gentlemen, will recommend his ſituation to your conſideration. To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since the date of my laſt, the Papers of Intelligence adviſe us of the Maratta force having croſſed the Jumna.

Hafez Rhamet ſtill declines anſwering the payment of the Treaty, until he can conſult the other Rohilla Sirdars, who are to bear a proportion of it; but it appears more to delay time, that he may diſcover how the affairs of this quarter are likely to turn out. His Excellency and myſelf will remain ſome days after the troops, that we may uſe our endeavours to ſettle this buſineſs, if poſſible; and I beg leave to ſend you the copy of the Rohilla Treaty, by which you will perceive how literally it has been executed and performed, notwithſtanding the evaſion of their Chiefs.

I concert with the Vizier. I have alſo been weighing the worth and abilities of the Nabob Nuzzif Cawn; and it has been determined he ſhould return to his Majeſty, as a perſon thoroughly capable of adviſing and aſſiſting in the welfare of the royal houſe. He will carry Letters of Recommendation from us both, to the King to this purport; and deſiring his Majeſty to confide in his integrity, preferably to thoſe mercenary Miniſters who at preſent direct his councils.

Nuzzif Cawn has aſſured me, and his veracity and obſervations are to be depended upon, that the Maratta forces at Ram Gaut under Buſa and Tuccoo amount to no leſs than fifty thouſand men, of which 35,000 were regular good cavalry, the remainder Bendarra only; and that Syndeah had with him 10,000 good horſe and 5,000 Bendarra. To the honourable Warren Haſtings, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have received your Letters of the 27th April.

Although it did not occur to me before as at all neceſſary, permit me now to inform you, that the aſſignment granted by the Vizier on the Nabob Moneer ul Dowla for 1,10,000 rupees, will not affect the revenues of the Corah province from the time the Board determined to take it under their own immediate management; and as the Nabob was acquainted with their orders for its defence, I cannot conceive he would be guilty of ſuch an attempt. His claim on Moneer ul Dowla was a balance of an old account of caſh advanced to his Majeſty by Elick Cawn.

His Excellency and myſelf, after ſtaying three days at Curremboſs without obtaining any determinate anſwer from the Rohilla Chiefs relative to their fulfilling of their engagements, determine to follow the troops: accordingly the Vizier has proceeded for his capital by very expeditious marches, and I am following with the brigade. APPENDIX, No. 22.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 19th November 1773.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following intelligence, which he has received from the Weſtward: Intelligence from the Weſtward.

"On the 13th of the month Sawbn, the Nabob Nudjiff Cawn Behadre, by the bleſſing of God and the King's auſpices, was victorious, and Nowal Sing the Jaut was defeated and fled to the fort of Dhygee; thouſands of men were killed and wounded on both ſides, and many of the tents and horſes of Nowal Sing the Jaut, with other valuable effects, have fallen into the hands of the royal troops. The Nabob Nudjiff Cawn Behadre has obtained a very great victory."

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following Letters, received from the Vizier:

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah; received 23d October 1773.

By the Papers of Intelligence I learn, that Narrain Row, Serdar of the Decan, has been aſſaſſinated by the order of Ragonaut Row, who I look upon it for certain will ſucceed him in the Government. Copy of a paper containing this intelligence I enclose for your peruſal.—I have now determined to take poſſeſſion of the country in the Duabe, which formerly belonged to the Rohillas, and is Letters from the Vizier.

now poſſeſſed by the Marattas: for this purpoſe I ſhall ſhortly diſpatch my army thither, and ſhall follow myſelf. Should I therefore have occaſion for the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces to carry on my operations in that country, I deſire to know what is your pleaſure, whether you will let me have the forces when I ſhall call for them, or you will not. If it be agreeable to you to ſupply me with them, it will be beſt and moſt proper; and ſignify the ſame to me, that I may immediately begin conſidering upon and forming my plan of operations. Let me have your anſwer fully and particularly to this, that I may take my meaſures accordingly.

Letter from the Vizier.

I have before written you ſeveral Letters, which you may have received. I have now learnt that Hafir Rhamut Cawn, and other Serdars, have intentions of taking poſſeſſion of Uttawah, and the reſt of the country belonging to the Marattas; I therefore write to inform you, that if ſuch is their intention, I will not put up with it, but ſhall undoubtedly undertake an expedition againſt them; for, in the firſt place, they have not made good a ſingle D'aam of the 40 lacks of rupees according to their agreement; and, in the next, they are now going to take poſſeſſion of another country; this I will never ſubmit to, and am therefore determined to puniſh them. During our interview at Benares we had ſome converſation on this ſubject, and it was then agreed on, that I ſhould pay to the Company the ſum of 40 lacks of rupees, after the expulſion of the Rohillas; and two lack ten thouſand rupees monthly, on account of the Engliſh brigade, during my operations in the Rohilla country; and that I ſhould, with the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces, endeavour to puniſh and exterminate the Rohillas out of their country. If therefore theſe terms are agreeable to you, I deſire to know whether you will aſſiſt me with the Engliſh forces, or you will not. Leſt you ſhould want to diſcuſs and ſettle this matter anew, I now ſend you a ſeparate paper, containing the points we before conferred upon, in order that you may come to a final determination concerning them; for if you ſhould write to me, and want my anſwer, much time will be loſt. Should I have occaſion to call for the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces on this expedition, whenever I diſmiſs them I will pay to the Company forty lacks of rupees, ready money, on condition of the entire expulſion of the Rohillas. and during the time of their ſervice, the ſum of 2,10,000 rupees ſhall be paid to them monthly, on account of their expences. But one thing more I muſt mention, which is, whenever you ſhall ſend me thoſe troops, I hope they may be commanded by General Barker, who is well acquainted with the affairs of this quarter, and eſpecially with my negociations with the Rohillas; for this reaſon it is abſolutely neceſſary that the General ſhould have the command of thoſe troops, which will afford me the greateſt ſatisfaction.

In the courſe of our interview at Benares, I ſpoke to you about 10,000 fire arms, and you were pleaſed to ſay, that you would give me an anſwer on that ſubject on your arrival in Calcutta. As there is no diſunion between us, and the alliance between the Company and myſelf has become more firmly cemented than ever, ſince our interview at Benares, inſomuch that our armies, ſtores, and every thing elſe belonging to us, are equally the property of both; I therefore applied to you for a place for my family, and you told me, that if it was poſſible you would remove the fort of Calcutta, and appropriate it to my uſe. If therefore you will ſupply me with 10,000 fire arms, I ſhall conſider them as equal to the fort of Calcutta. In ſhort, your complying with this application will afford me the greateſt ſatisfaction, and be a means of perpetuating the friendſhip between us, from which I have the greateſt hopes. The money for the fire arms ſhall be paid immediately. I have paid the money, according to my agreement, to Mr. Lambert, of which I give you this information. I have already acquainted you with my intentions of making a journey to Corah, but as I always take medicines at this ſeaſon of the year, I have delayed it longer than I intended on that account; however I ſhall now ſet out immediately, and therefore it is neceſſary that you favour me with an anſwer to theſe matters without delay; they are of the greateſt importance, and I ſhall wiſh to hear from you concerning them with the greateſt impatience. Let your anſwer be ſent with the utmoſt expedition.

On a ſeparate Paper.

On condition of the entire expulſion of the Rohillas, I will pay to the Company the ſum of forty lacks of rupees in ready money, whenever I ſhall diſcharge the Engliſh troops, and until the expulſion of the Rohillas ſhall be effected, I will pay the expences of the Engliſh troops; that is to ſay, I will pay them the ſum of 2,10,000 rupees monthly.

A true Tranſlation.

The Board deliberates upon the foregoing Letters from the Vizier.

From the advices now before the Committee, it appears abſolutely neceſſary that ſome immediate reſolutions ſhould be taken with reſpect to the requiſition made by the Vizier, as well as for guarding againſt thoſe attempts and charges which the abſence of the Marattas may give riſe to in the Duabe, or tract of country lying between the rivers Ganges and Jumna: and the Committee having maturely deliberated on the meaſures proper to be adopted, are unanimouſly agreed in the following opinions and reſolutions:

That ſhould the Vizier perſiſt in his intentions with reſpect to the Rohilla country, and determine to proſecute the enterprize with ſteadineſs to a concluſion, the Government, conſidering the ſtrict alliance and engagements which ſubſiſt between the Company and Sujah Dowlah, and particularly what paſſed between the Vizier and the Preſident at the conference at Benares, cannot on this occaſion refuſe him ſupport and aſſiſtance; that the terms propoſed by the Vizier appear highly advantageous to the Company, not only on account of the ſum which is ultimately ſtipulated as a conſideration for this ſervice, but by immediately relieving them from the heavy expence of a large part of their army. Provided, therefore, full aſſurance and ſecurity can be obtained of the Vizier's intention and ability to make good the many payments which will in this event be due to the Company;

Reſolutions in conſequence:

Reſolved, that the 2d brigade now quartered at Dinapoor be ordered to march on the Vizier's requiſition: and, to prevent delay,

Agreed, that orders for this purpoſe be lodged with the Chief at Patna, to be iſſued by him on the receipt of the Vizier's requiſition for the march of our troops, on the terms above ſpecified; and in the meantime, that every preparation be made for putting the 2d brigade in readineſs to take the field on the ſhorteſt notice.

Agreed, in conſequence, that the following Letter be written to the Chief at Patna:

Bengal Select Conſultations, the 22d November 1773.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq; Preſident, General Sir Robert Barker, William Alderſey, and P. M. Dacres, eſquires.

The Preſident lays before the Committee, the following draft of a Letter to the Vizier, which he has prepared, agreeable to the reſolution of laſt meeting,

To the Vizier.

Letter to the Vizier.

Some days ago I received your Letter, containing the intelligence of the death of Narrain Row, the late Sirdar of the Decan, and the ſucceſſion of Ragonaut Row to the Government; at the ſame time intimating your reſolution to take poſſeſſion of the country in the Duabe, which formerly belonged to the Rohillas, and is now poſſeſſed by the Marattas; and deſiring to know, whether I will ſend the Engliſh forces, in caſe you ſhould have occaſion to call for their aſſiſtance.

I am ſince honoured with another Letter from you, to the following purport; viz.—"That you have learnt, "that Haſſir Rhamut Cawn and other Sirdars, have intention of taking poſſeſſion of Ettawah and the reſt of the "country of Duabe belonging to the Marattas; and that "in ſuch caſe you are reſolved to carry into execution the "plan which was concerted between us at Benares, for "their expulſion from the country lying to the North of "yours; and deſiring to know, whether I will aſſiſt in the "execution of this deſign;" repeating the conditions formerly propoſed, with other particulars of importance, which I clearly underſtand.

As the ſubject of both the above Letters are intimately connected, and admit of only one and the ſame determination, I ſhall reply particularly to both in this addreſs.

With reſpect to the Duabe, you are the maſter to act in whatever manner you ſhall deem moſt fitting for the advancement and ſecurity of your own affairs. You know, that you may always command the forces of the Company for the defence of your own dominions; if you ſhould engage in a war, beyond their borders, and ſhould ſtand in need of aſſiſtance, I certainly cannot ſit ſtill and ſee your danger, without endeavouring to relieve you; and for that reaſon, I hope you will avoid an enterprize at this diſtance, which you cannot be well aſſured of performing with your own ſtrength, as the commands of my Superiors are, as I have repeatedly informed you, peremptory, that I ſhall not ſuffer their arms to be carried beyond the line of their own boundaries, and thoſe of your Excellency their ally, although in one inſtance I have ventured to go beyond them.

Concerning the country of the Rohillas, whatever was formerly propoſed at Benares, that I am now equally ready to agree to; that is, the brigade which is now at Dinapoor ſhall march whenever you require it to join you, and proceed with you into the country of the Rohillas, which lies North of your dominions, to aſſiſt you in the entire reduction of it; and your Excellency on your part will ſupply them monthly with the ſtipulated ſum of 2,10,000 R^s for their expences; and whenever the country ſhall be ſo far conquered, that you ſhall remain in poſſeſſion of it, although the enemy may lurk in the hills and jungles, or a few refractory Zemindars, as is uſual, may withhold their allegiance, and your Excellency ſhall diſmiſs the brigade, you will on its departure pay 40 lacks of rupees to the Company, as a conſideration for that ſervice. To prevent future miſunderſtandings, I have been thus explicit. I muſt beg leave further to add, that if the expedition ſhall be once undertaken, it will be abſolutely neceſſary to perſevere in it, until it ſhall be accompliſhed. You will therefore reflect, whether it will be in your power to make the above payments punctually with others which are already due; and whether you can reſolve on going through with the undertaking. If you are not certain of accompliſhing theſe neceſſary points, I muſt requeſt that you will ſuſpend the execution of your undertaking, till a more favourable time, as I cannot hazard or anſwer for the effects of diſpleaſure of the Company, my maſters, if they ſhall find themſelves involved in a fruitleſs war, or in an expence for the proſecution of it. But if you are ſatisfied of your ability to perform theſe conditions, and will engage to perform them, the brigade which is at Dinapoor ſhall attend you on your requiſition; and that there may be no delay, if you will ſignify your orders for the march of the brigade to Mr. Lane, the Chief at Patna; and will ſend a Letter from him to me, containing your acquieſcence in theſe conditions in the forms of the form encloſed, he will cauſe the brigade to proceed to you immediately, being furniſhed with the proper orders from me, to the Commander of the forces for that purpoſe.

On the receipt of your firſt Letter, I ordered all the detachments of the brigade at Dinapoor to be aſſembled, and every preparation to be made to enable it to take the field; and I hope it will be in readineſs for that purpoſe whenever you may require.

Although in the encloſed form, I have mentioned nothing of the mode in which the money for the expences of the army is to be defrayed, I think it proper to obſerve, that it would be highly expedient that a ſure and effectual mode be previouſly formed for the regular payment of the army. This will prevent difficulties, and will be the ſubject of much eaſe both to you and myſelf, as the charges of the army muſt be regularly paid, or the moſt fatal conſequences may attend the neglect of it; and I have not money to ſend with it.

Having ſummoned the brigade at Dinapoor to my aſſiſtance, I now ſend you this declaration, that no ſubject of future doubt or diſcuſſion concerning the terms or ſervice on which it is to be employed, may remain between us—That it is my reſolution to employ the ſaid brigade in the reduction of the country of the Rohillas which lies between my borders, the river Ganges, and the mountains; and I will not require them to paſs thoſe boundaries: that beſides the ſtipulated ſum of 15 lacks of R^s which will be due on the 19th of Jemadee ul Sanci next, on account of the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad; I will pay month by month, punctually, the ſum of 21,000 R^s for the extra expence of the brigade, during the time of its ſervice, according to the terms of the late Treaty concluded between us; and 40 lacks of R^s in ready money, when this ſervice ſhall be concluded; that that is to ſay, whenever I ſhall diſmiſs the ſaid brigade, or one half of it, whether the country of the Rohillas ſhall be conquered and eſtabliſhed in my poſſeſſion, or an accommodation ſhall have taken place with them.

Bengal Select Conſultations, the 26th November 1773.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. General Sir Robert Barker, William Alderſey, and P. M. Dacres, eſquires.

Report of the Council's Reſolutions And

THE Preſident reports to the Committee, that this morning he laid before the Council at large the proceedings of this Board of the 19th and 22d ultimo, on the ſubject of the requiſition made by the Vizier for the aſſiſtance of a brigade; and that the reſolutions and meaſures of the Committee have been approved in Council, agreeable to the following extract of their Conſultations:

Extract of the Conſultation of the Board.

Extract of their Conſultations.

The Preſident thinks it requiſite to accompany this reference with a brief explanation of the nature of the meaſure propoſed, and of the motives which determined his opinion in the reſolution of the Select Committee now before the Board, in the following Minute.

I have long conſidered the power of the Rohillas as dangerous to the Vizier, the only uſeful ally of the Company, and as ſuch have wiſhed to ſee it annihilated. We have till lately had a very imperfect knowledge of the Rohilla ſtates, and conſequently the advices tranſmitted our Honourable Maſters on that ſubject muſt have been too defective for them to form an accurate judgment upon them. It is our duty to correct our information to them as we receive more lights; and I am inclined to believe that ſuch information would induce them to adopt the ſyſtem with reſpect to thoſe Powers which are now propoſed.

I muſt therefore declare, that although the honourable the Court of Directors have been pleaſed to rank the Rohillas among the Powers capable of oppoſing the Marattas, I cannot regard them in that light, their Country is too remote from that of the Marattas, and too much out of the line of the incurſions of theſe people, for them either to be able to oppoſe theſe with effect, or to have much to apprehend from them. The Marattas may occaſionally attack them from the allurements of plunder only, but they can never form a ſufficient ſcheme of conqueſt over a Country ſo diſtant and ſo difficult to hold.

On the other hand, the Subadar of Oude muſt always be an object of jealouſy and enmity to the Rohillas: his power is to be dreaded by them; and the ſituation of their Country contiguous to his, and in a manner encloſed within the ſame natural boundaries, muſt make the poſſeſſion of it always a deſirable object with him, both for ſecurity and advantage. Theſe are ſources of enmity between them, which from the nature of things cannot fail of producing ſuitable effects; and it is more probable that we ſhould ſoon ſee the Marattas and Rohillas join in hoſtilities againſt the Vizier, than that they ſhould continue in war with one another.

But let us next view the advantages which would reſult to the Vizier, the ally of the Company, and to the Company itſelf, from the poſſeſſion of that part of the Rohilla Country which is the object of the expedition now propoſed: our ally would obtain by this acquiſition a complete compact eſtate, ſhut in effectually from foreign invaſions by the Ganges all the way from the frontiers of Bahar to the mountains of Thibet, while he would remain equally acceſſible to our forces from the above province, either for hoſtilities or protection; it would give him wealth, of which we ſhould partake, and give him ſecurity without any dangerous increaſe of power; and would undoubtedly, by bringing his frontier nearer the Marattas, to whom ſingly he would be no match, render him more dependent on us, and cement the union more firmly between us. I muſt further declare, that I regard as none of the moſt inconſiderable benefits to the Company from the meaſure, beſides the forty lacks of rupees held out to us, the eaſing them immediately of the burden of one-third of their whole army, while at the ſame time it is employed uſefully for their intereſts, and conveniently for keeping up its own diſcipline and practice in war.

APPENDIX No. 23.

With theſe reaſons for the proſperity of the expedition, on general principles I muſt confeſs I entertain ſome doubts as to its expediency at this time, ariſing from the circumſtances of the Company at home expoſed to popular clamour, all its meaſures liable to be canvaſſed in Parliament, their charter drawing to a cloſe, and his Majeſty's Miniſters unqueſtionably ready to take advantage of every unfavourable circumſtance in the negociation for its renewal.

In this ſituation here appears an unuſual degree of reſponſibility annexed to ſuch an undertaking; I would therefore recommend it to ſerious conſideration, and at the ſame time I think it my duty to declare, that I find myſelf embarraſſed in a peculiar manner in my deciſion, from the circumſtances of what paſt between the Vizier and myſelf at Benares. The Board will recollect, that this very Country was included in the line of defenſive operations which they thought fit to adopt laſt year in ſupport of the Vizier; and it is now neceſſary to acquaint them more fully, that the Vizier at the interview did propoſe this expedition to me, and earneſtly ſolicited my aſſiſtance; that I regarded this requeſt as a lucky circumſtance in the negociation; and availing myſelf of it, as the means of purchaſing the Vizier's compliance in the other meaſure, which was the principal object of my commiſſion, I conſented to it; engaging to aſſiſt him in the enterprize on the conditions with which the Board are already acquainted. Afterwards, from a ſuſpicion of his own ability to make good ſo many pecuniary engagements at once as thoſe he had come under, he himſelf made the propoſal for ſuſpending the Rohilla expedition; but the condition which took its riſe from it, viz. that the future payments of the extra charges of the army ſent at any time to his aſſiſtance ſhould be fixed at 2,10,000 R' per month for a brigade, was ſtill allowed to be made an article of the new Treaty. And it was further agreed, that the ſtipulation for Corah, which I had before with difficulty raiſed to 45 lacks of rupees, ſhould now be made 50, in conſideration of his being exempted from the additional burthen of the projected campaign, and better enabled to fulfil his other payments. It is unneceſſary to explain the motives which urged the Vizier to make conceſſions for the liberty of relinquiſhing a point which he had apparently ſo much at heart, and what I was not ſolicitous to purſue; the detail would be tedious. The Gentlemen who were with me, and to whom I made daily communication of the progreſs of the negociations, will remember, that ſuch was the iſſue of this part of them. The expedition remained only ſuſpended; and I gave him every reaſon to expect, that whenever it could again be with prudence reſumed, and he deſired it, it ſhould be undertaken.

This is the predicament in which I now ſtand with the Vizier; and although, from a fear of his not being able to fulfil his part of the agreement, I wiſh to avoid engaging in the project at preſent, yet it appears to me, that a direct refuſal, after what paſſed, would have an unfriendly aſpect, and might admit of the conſtruction of artifice and inſincerity in our dealings with him.

Moved by the doubts which I have expoſed to the Board, and thus hampered by my ſituation with the Vizier, no better method occurred to me for freeing us from this dilemma, than the Letter which is now in reference before the Board: I have there expreſſed my conſent to the expedition in terms which, if he agrees to them, are moſt likely to ſecure the advantages hoped from it; but we are more likely to make him relinquiſh the deſign. I truſt the Board will find it ſo guarded, both in the ſubſtance and expreſſion, that the Vizier muſt neceſſarily feel himſelf engaged to perform every condition required of him, with the moſt rigid punctuality, at the hazard of forfeiting the Company's friendſhip, or revolt againſt the terms impoſed upon him, and drop all thoughts of proſecuting the deſign; and that I verily believe will be the iſſue of this correſpondence.

The Board, after due conſideration of the matter in reference from the Select Committee, and of the Preſident's repreſentation, concur heartily in wiſhing to avoid the expedition propoſed, without entering into the diſcuſſion of the propriety of ſuch an enterprize on general principles. The Board ſee in their full force all the circumſtances of doubt, as to its preſent expediency, which the Preſident has ſo clearly ſet forth; and they are alſo ſenſible of the embarraſſment he is under, from what paſſed on the ſubject between him and the Vizier at Benares. They are equally ſolicitous to ſave the honour of the Company, and watch over its intereſts; and for that reaſon they approve of the Letter now before them, which ſeems equally calculated to ſave both. The conditions, if accepted, would undoubtedly ſecure the greateſt poſſible advantages from ſuch an enterprize; but they appear to them more calculated to drive the Vizier into a refuſal, which is what they truſt in, as its moſt probable, and almoſt infallible conſequence, and which they wiſh for, as the proper reſult of this propoſition, and the preſent circumſtances of affairs.

Letter forwarded, and orders iſſued in conſequence.

Agreed, That the Preſident be requeſted to forward the Letter, as prepared by him, to the Vizier: and that the order of the 19th ultimo, to the Chief at Patna, and to the Commanding Officer at Dinapoor, be forthwith iſſued.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 26th November 1773.

General Barker's Minute.

The General has already given it as his opinion, that the provinces of Corah and Allahabad ſhould be reſtored to the King for ſuch acquiſitions to the Company as are premiſed in his Minutes and Letters to the Board on that ſubject; in which caſe the conqueſt of the Rohilla country for the Vizier became an object of our attention, becauſe in this he would have accumulated nothing more than was neceſſary to put him on a par with his neighbours, and to enable him to reſiſt the hoſtilities of any force united with the King againſt him, or, what is the ſame thing, to have enabled him to pay for the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh forces when called to his aid: but now that he is in poſſeſſion of Corah and Allahabad, I think it would be impolitical, from the ſame parity of reaſoning, to put him in poſſeſſion alſo of the Rohilla country; unleſs the Company can acquire by it, the poſſeſſion of thoſe lands in the Zemindarry of Cheit Sing, lying to the South of the Ganges.

If the Vizier has the Rohilla country added to thoſe of Oude, and the provinces of Corah and Allahabad, he will be in poſſeſſion of a revenue of nearly two crores and an half per annum; a ſum, that in ſome future day might render an enterprizing genius a very troubleſome neighbour, on the North Weſt frontiers of the Company's dominions: and although we have no preſent occaſion to ſuſpect the ſincerity of Sujah ul Dowlah's attachment to our intereſt; yet it muſt not be forgotten that he is an Hindoſtanner, or that a ſucceſſor might enter the Government with very different ideas and diſpoſition.

The General agrees with the Preſident, that the Vizier's dominions would become compact, and not ſubject to invaſions; but the General ſuppoſes it will become too compact, and not ſufficiently open to invaſion; it is from the apprehenſion of invaſion that cements the Vizier's friendſhip with the Engliſh, and makes him that ſtaunch ally we find him.

Had we riſen the King to the poſſeſſion of the Doab, including the provinces of Corah and Allahabad, it would then have been neceſſary to ſtrengthen the Vizier, becauſe the intereſts of theſe two Potentates are ſeparate, and it is political to guard againſt the one by the ſufficiency of the other. It was on this account the General wrote down to the Board, the propoſal for adding the Rohilla diſtricts on the North of the Ganges to the Vizier's dominions; but the caſe is exceedingly altered; one-half the General's propoſal only is adopted, and we appear to be raiſing a particular Power, at the expence of the empire, and in defiance to royalty, for the tranſitory advantage of a pecuniary object, and by it to raiſe a Power, who, from ambitious views, or imaginary reſentment, may hereafter, at a time when the Company's affairs may be embarraſſed, have ſtrength to form foreign alliances to invade the Company's poſſeſſions.

Indeed, the General is of opinion, that it is the political intereſt of this Government, according to the preſent ſyſtem, to inſtil into the mind of the Vizier the neceſſity, and indeed propriety, of his ſtudying the welfare and defence of his preſent poſſeſſions, without extending his ambition to conqueſts that may endanger his own tranquillity, and that of the Company's his ally. He has already a ſufficiency to ſecure himſelf from any ſudden invaſion, and we can at all times prevent the fatal conſequences of ſuch an event, when it is likely to take place; unleſs the Company are pleaſed to adopt the ſyſtem of ſupporting the two great Powers of Hindoſtan, the King and the Vizier, in oppoſition to the reſt of the empire, and in which caſe only, the General thinks it would be neceſſary to ſtrengthen the Vizier, to render the intereſt of either dependent on our deciſion.

APPENDIX, No. 24.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 30th December 1773.

Par. 2. SOON after the departure of that ſhip, we received in reference from the Select Committee, accompanied by an explanatory Minute by the Preſident, a propoſal and requiſition of the Vizier's, for our aſſiſtance in an attack which he meditated on the Doaub, or the Country lying between the Jumna and the Ganges, beyond the province of Corah, and alſo on that of the Rohillas to the North of the Ganges.

3. We determined, without the ſmalleſt heſitation, againſt his firſt propoſition; but the ſecond, involving many queſtions reſpecting the political intereſts of the Company in thoſe parts, we thought it deſerving a more deliberate diſcuſſion. The Preſident ſtated, very fully and clearly, both his opinions and his doubts on the ſubject; and after a ſerious examination of them, and ample diſcuſſion of every point, we determined, that in the preſent juncture it would be adviſable to ſhun entering with the Vizier into ſuch an undertaking as the conqueſt of the Rohilla provinces provinces to the North of the Ganges, as far as we could conſiſtently with our engagements, and the friendſhip and cloſe connection which we wiſh to preſerve with him. In this view, we agreed on ſuch a reply to the Vizier, as under the appearance of compliance muſt either induce him to relinquiſh the project, or bind him to ſuch conditions in the acceptance of our aſſiſtance, as muſt turn altogether to the Company's benefit; but indeed we deem him too wiſe to his own intereſts not to decline our aid on thoſe terms; which is the effect we confidently expect from the reply. The ſubject appears in full in the Conſultations.

4. The General, who concurred with the reſt of the Board in approving the Letter which the Preſident propoſed to be written to the Vizier, thought it however neceſſary to record his ſeparate reaſons againſt the meaſure of attacking the Rohillas, founded chiefly on his opinion with regard to the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad; to which, as we formerly adviſed, he had entered a Minute of objection.

5. About this time we alſo reſumed the conſideration of the General's Letter from Benares, requeſting leave to reſign the ſervice; which had been deferred till the return of the Preſident, on account of the ſeveral facts alluded to, which could only be cleared up by the general orders and military correſpondence in his poſſeſſion.

7. It gave us concern to find the General aſſign reaſons for wiſhing to quit the ſervice, which we thought reflected on our conduct in military meaſures; and particularly on the adminiſtration of our Preſident, in executing the duties of his ſtation as Governor, and at the ſame time aſpire at an authority inconſiſtent with the Conſtitution of your ſervice. The Preſident thought it neceſſary to vindicate himſelf in a formal reply; wherein he ſtated the facts circumſtantially, ſupported by proper documents, and, we think, ſufficiently demonſtrated that there was no juſt cauſe for the General's complaints. In a ſubſequent Minute, we expreſſed our ſentiments on this reply; adding ſuch an expoſition of our own conduct, and our ideas of your orders reſpecting the Commander in Chief's authority, as the General's Minute made it incumbent upon us to record.

8th. We would avoid engroſſing your attention on a ſubject of this ſort by any animadverſions on the diſpute, while the meaſures which gave riſe to it are themſelves in our Proceedings before you, ſubmitted to your judgment and approval. Although we have had frequent occaſion to cenſure the conduct of the General in points wherein we believe he has erred, more from a miſguided apprehenſion of his privileges and of the authority of the Board, than a propenſity in his diſpoſition to altercation; yet we gladly do juſtice to his character in declaring, that we believe him to be poſſeſſed of many virtues, which qualified him in an eſpecial manner for command in a ſervice like this; a courage approved in the courſe of many years trial; a thorough practical knowledge of his profeſſion, and great gentleneſs of manners; and as a man, he is a reſpectable member of the community. In a Letter the General delivered in upon his reſignation, he has acknowledged with reſpect and gratitude the honours with which he has been diſtinguiſhed in your ſervice.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee of Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 9th November 1773.

Par. 2. We have now the pleaſure to tranſmit a copy of a Letter which we received within theſe few days from Mr. Moſtyn, the Reſident at Poona; giving an account of a remarkable revolution which has happened in the Maratta ſtate, and of the diſſentions which it has occaſioned among their Chiefs. We are happy in reflecting that this event will probably contribute to the continuance of the public tranquillity.

APPENDIX, No. 25.

APPENDIX No. 25.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 17th January 1774.

Par. 2. OUR Letter from the Public Department will explain the cauſe of the delay in the Egmont's diſpatch. This delay has afforded us the opportunity of acquainting you with the reſult of the Vizier's propoſition, and our offer of aſſiſtance in his expedition againſt the Rohillas, on the terms and limitations of which we adviſed you.

3. It was with pleaſure we found the plan we had adopted anſwer ſo completely to our intention. The Vizier, on receipt of the Preſident's Letter written agreeably to the reſolution of the Board, returned an immediate anſwer, declining our aſſiſtance in his diſtant expeditions on the conditions we required; but at the ſame time deſiring the brigade might be held in readineſs to march whenever he ſhall find it neceſſary to call on it for the defence of his own dominions.

4. This affair being happily terminated in the manner we wiſhed, we ſhall now remain ſpectators only of the operations of the different Powers in thoſe diſtant parts, preſerving however a watchful eye over the courſe of events, that we may be prepared to interpoſe whenever the intereſts of the Honourable Company are likely to be affected by them. In this view we ſhall, in compliance with the Vizier's requeſt, hold one brigade in readineſs to march to his aſſiſtance within his own territories, including the provinces of Corah and Allahabad; and we acknowledge we ſhall not be ſorry to find that he calls for them on this footing, as we ſhall then be eaſed of ſo conſiderable a part of the military expence, and have the diſcipline of our troops preſerved in an actual ſervice, at ſo little diſtance from our frontiers.

5. The Preſident on his return from Benares, as will appear from our Conſultations, propoſed to us the appointment of a Reſident at the court of the Vizier, for the more immediate communication with him in ordinary buſineſs, and ſuch other matters as the Preſident ſhould think proper to confide to his management; and this appearing to us a meaſure of great convenience and advantage in the correſpondence of this Government with the Vizier, we approved of the propoſal, and left the nomination to the Preſident. He accordingly made choice of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton for that employment, which met with our entire approbation. In conſideration of the great diſtance of the place of his reſidence from Calcutta, whence he muſt draw the chief neceſſaries for his table, we have allotted him one thouſand rupees per month for his extraordinary expences.

6. The Select Committee having juſt received advices from Mr. Moſtyn, the Reſident at Poona, they have thought proper to lay them before us. By theſe we learn, that there prevails great diſtractions among the Maratta Powers; that Ragoba, the murderer of his nephew, has marched with an army of ſixty thouſand men to attack Nizam Ally, or, as he gives out, to free him from the bondage of Ruckna Dowla, his Dewan; that Sabajee Bouncello had joined Nizam Ally, and that the army were within a few coſs of each other.

7. In this ſituation of affairs in that quarter, we think we have little to apprehend from the Marattas on the ſide of Bengal, and there ſeems at preſent the faireſt proſpect of tranquillity for ſome time to come.

The Preſident lays before the Board the following tranſlation of a Letter, which he has received from the Vizier Sujah Dowlah:

APPENDIX. No. 26.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah, the 10th January 1774.

Suja Dowla refuſes the brigade on the terms offered.

I have received your friendly Letter, informing me that the Engliſh brigade is at my ſervice, either for the protection of my own dominions, or to aſſiſt me in my operations againſt the Rohillas. It it is known that the firmeſt union ſubſiſts between us, and I am certain that you will ſuffer the Engliſh forces to join me for the protection of my own dominions; but as the diſtance between us is now ſo great, that much time will be taken up in writing to you and receiving your anſwer, for precaution ſake I requeſt you will ſend a poſitive order to the Commander in Chief of the forces at Patna to march them to the frontiers of Oude or Corah (both which Countries now belong to me) whenever I ſhall require them: at preſent I have no occaſion for them; and ſhould I chance to call for them, I will not require their proceeding further than the frontiers of Corah and Currah. I make this requeſt by way of precaution only, and to guard againſt future events. Whenever I ſhall write to the Commander in Chief at Patna for the troops, let them immediately be ſent; and it is becoming our union that you give orders accordingly, which will give me great ſatisfaction. My friend, I requeſt this of you, that I may be at eaſe with reſpect to my own dominions, as well as to prevent future delays; otherwiſe I have at preſent no occaſion for the troops.

Agreed, that advice be given of the above Letter in our preſent advices to the Court of Directors by the Egmont.

APPENDIX, No. 26.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 15th March 1774.

Par. 2. SOON after the diſpatch of the ſhip Egmont, the Vizier availed himſelf of the diſcretionary orders we left with the Chief at Patna, to ſend the ſecond brigade to his aſſiſtance as ſoon as he ſhould make a formal requiſition for that purpoſe.

3. You will obſerve in our laſt, that at the ſame time we adviſed you of the Vizier's having declined our former offer, we informed you that we ſhould keep the brigade in readineſs to march to his aſſiſtance whenever he ſhould require it; and declared, we ſhould not be ſorry to take this ſtep, as it would eaſe us of a conſiderable part of our military expence, and preſerve our troops from inaction and relaxation of diſcipline.

4. We therefore immediately confirmed the order for the marching of the brigade, and directed Colonel Champion, Commander in Chief, to join them as ſoon as poſſible, to aſſume the command.

5. The declared intention of the Vizier in this requiſition is ſtill the conqueſt of the Rohilla country, and we afford our preſent aſſiſtance under the ſame conditions of reſtrictions which were formerly tendered to him; our troops are to be employed only in his own Country, or in that of the Rohillas laying between the Ganges and the mountains; and he is to pay the forty lacks of rupees in ready money whenever the ſervice againſt the Rohillas, if it is undertaken, ſhall be concluded; as well as the monthly ſubſidy of two lacks ten thouſand rupees for the extra expences of the brigade, as ſtipulated with the Preſident at Benares. His Letter, recorded in the Conſultations, expreſs in a very clear and conciſe manner his acceptance of theſe conditions, being a tranſcript, with little variation, of the draft ſent to him by the Preſident, as recorded in our Proceedings. To our former full Advices and Proceedings on this ſubject tranſmitted to you, we have only to add at preſent, that we deem the expreſs object of this expedition, viz. the conqueſt of the Rohilla country above deſcribed, as a point of no great difficulty, were it to be undertaken; neither is it likely to involve us in any troubles with the other Powers; the lateneſs of the ſeaſon, and the other deſigns in which the Vizier ſeems to be deeply engaged, as particularized in our Inſtructions to the Commander in Chief, leave little probability of any attempt being made in the proſecution of this undertaking during the preſent year.

6. The Inſtructions we have given to the Commander in Chief are peremptory as to his keeping within the limits of the Vizier's dominions, except in the caſe of attacking the Rohillas as above defined; and we have charged him to act on the defenſive only with regard to every other Power.

29. The Preſidency of Fort Saint George adviſed us in a Letter, dated the 18th January, of their apprehenſions of an invaſion from the Marattas, and of their having in conſequence ordered a conſiderable force into the field to be ready to oppoſe their attacks; but as the Nabob had declared his inability to ſupply them with money for this expence, they earneſtly preſſed us to ſend them as large a remittance in caſh or bills as our circumſtances would admit.

30. We are under the neceſſity of replying to them, that we were unable to comply with their application, without adding to the heavy load of our preſent debt; and that they might not be deceived by falſe expectations from us, we peremptorily declared we could not ſupply them.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 3d February 1774.

The Preſident lays before the Committee, a Letter juſt received from the Vizier; of which the following is the tranſlation.

Letter from the Nabob Shujah ul Dowlah.

Having ſummoned the brigade at Dinapore to my aſſiſtance, I now ſend you this declaration, that no ſubject of future doubt or diſcuſſion, concerning the terms of ſervice in which it is to be employed, may remain between us: that it is my reſolution to employ the ſaid brigade in the reduction of the country of the Rohillas, which lies between my borders, the river Ganges, and the mountains; and I will not require them to paſs theſe boundaries: that beſides the ſtipulated ſum of fifteen lacks, which will be due on the 19th Semade ul Sane next, on account of the ceſſion of Corah and Illahabad, I will, according to my agreement, pay, month by month, punctually, the ſum of 2,10,000 rupees, for the extra expences of the brigade during the time of its ſervice, and forty lacks of rupees, in ready money, when this ſervice ſhall be concluded; that is to ſay, whenever the whole, or half of the country of the Rohillas ſhall fall into my poſſeſſion, or an accommodation ſhall have taken place with them, and I ſhall diſmiſs the brigade. But I am the maſter in theſe matters, and have the power either to keep or diſmiſs the brigade. Whenever I pleaſe I will diſmiſs it; and until ſuch time as I think proper to diſmiſs it, it ſhall remain with me. Never, never, ſhall it leave me, without my diſmiſſion.

Select Committee Proceedings.

The President lays before the Board the following Extract from the Proceedings of the Select Committee of the 3d February; by which they will perceive that the Vizier has made uſe of the licence granted him in conſequence of the Reſolution of the Board of the 26th November; and has actually ſummoned the brigade to his aſſiſtance, in the proſecution of his original deſign againſt the Rohillas.

The Vizier calls for the brigade, which is ordered to march.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq^r. &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

Having this day received a Letter from the Vizier (copy of which I have the honour to tranſmit you herewith) requiring the aſſiſtance of the 2d brigade, I immediately ſent your Letter to Lieut. Colonel Tottingham, commanding at Dinapore, agreeably to your order to me for that purpoſe, dated the 19th of November laſt.

Tranſlation of a Letter from the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah to Mr. Lane.

I underſtand, from a Letter which I have at this time received from Mr. Haſtings, that he has given orders to you to aſſemble together the troops of the brigade at Dinapoor, and to hold them in readineſs to march into this quarter whenever I write to you to diſpatch them. I therefore have written, and now encloſe you, a Letter to Mr. Haſtings, together with a copy of it for your own peruſal; the original I requeſt you will forward to Mr. Haſtings, and let the brigade be immediately diſpatched to me. Let your orders be given, that the whole brigade ſhall march together, and not two battalions ſeparately, and three or four days after them again another two battalions, and ſo diſperſed in different bodies. It is more adviſable and proper, that on the arrival of this Letter you immediately, without delay, diſpatch the whole brigade to me at once, ſo that it may arrive with me with the greateſt expedition, and even ſurpaſs celerity itſelf.

The Secretary lays before the Board, the Draft of Inſtructions for Colonel Champion, prepared agreeable to the orders of the 3d inſtant.

Reviſed and completed the above Inſtructions; and,

Agreed upon writing two Letters to the Chief and Council at Patna; the firſt to be immediately diſpatched to that place, and the other given in charge to Colonel Champion, agreeable to the tenor of his Inſtructions.

Ordered, That one copy of theſe Papers be referred for the information of the Select Committee, and that they be alſo recorded in this Department as follows:

APPENDIX No. 26.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

Col. Champion's Inſtructions.

1. Having thought proper, at the requiſition of the Vizier, to grant him the aſſiſtance of one brigade of the Honourable Company's forces; and the troops being already on their march towards his dominions, you will pleaſe to repair with all convenient ſpeed to take upon you their immediate command; and although you are acquainted, as a Member of the Adminiſtration, with the motives and intentions of this expedition, we judge it neceſſary for your more particular guidance in the general line of your operations, to give you the following Inſtructions, truſting the particular conduct in the field to your military ſkill and capacity.

2. The expreſs purpoſe for which the Vizier at this time demanded our aid, being the reduction of the Rohilla country lying between the Ganges and the mountains, you are immediately on your arrival in his Country to acquaint him that you are ready to proceed on that ſervice, and require his further Inſtructions. For the general ſtipulations, in the caſe of his requiring the aſſiſtance of our forces, we refer you to the accompanying copy of a treaty executed between our Preſident and the Vizier at Benares, in Auguſt laſt; and for the particular conditions on which we afford him our aſſiſtance in this expedition, to the tranſlation of an addreſs from the latter on his making the requiſition of a brigade.

3. As the Vizier appears completely occupied at preſent in his expedition into the Doauba, for the recovery (in the behalf of the King Shaw Alum) of the territory ſeized by the Marattas, we imagine he will hardly find time this ſeaſon to attempt any thing towards the conqueſt he meditates of the Rohilla country before deſcribed. We think it however neceſſary to ſuppoſe the poſſibility of ſuch a ſervice taking place in deſcribing the line of your operations, which is to be as follows:

4. You are not to paſs the boundary which divides the province of Oude from the Rohilla country, except at the expreſs requiſition of the Vizier, and in that caſe you are to confine all your operations to that Country as above deſcribed, and to the dominions of the Vizier—you are in no caſe, nor on any account whatever, to permit the troops, or any part of them, to paſs the river Ganges from the Rohilla country, nor the boundaries of the Vizier's dominions, comprehending his ancient poſſeſſions of Oude and the new acquiſitions of Corah and Allahabad. At any rate, whatever be the particular ſervice which you are required to proceed upon within the line of theſe Inſtructions, you will uſe the neceſſary precaution to receive this requiſition from the Vizier in writing, to obviate future doubts or diſputes which may ariſe upon them.

5. If upon your arrival with the army you ſhould find that the Vizier has not returned from his expedition into the Doauba, or concerted his plan for immediately executing his intentions on the Rohilla country, we think it will be neceſſary that you ſhould, as ſoon as poſſible, have an interview with him, as well for the purpoſe of concerting the operations in which our troops are to be employed for his aid, as to give you a proper introduction to him in the ſtation which you now fill of our Commander in Chief; but as ſuch interview taking place within the limits of the poſſeſſions which were formerly conquered by the Marattas, and have been lately regained by the Vizier in behalf of the King, may be liable to future misrepresentation, and be construed an act of hostility against that Power on the immediate part of this Government, a consequence which we wish studiously to avoid, we would recommend that you advise him of your approach, appoint a place for meeting him, and proceed thither without any other military force than a retinue suitable to your station, and a guard sufficient for your security; you will publicly declare, that you go only to meet the Vizier, and with no intention of joining in any operations against the territories of which the Marattas had possessed themselves; and as soon as you have settled with the Vizier the necessary plan for your operations, you will immediately return to the army.

6. The military conduct of the expedition is entirely left with you; but as the regular payment of the troops is an essential point, and will depend altogether upon the exactness of the Vizier, you will be particularly attentive to make proper applications to him for this purpose; but should he neglect or evade to furnish the monthly subsidy, you will, in conjunction with the Resident at his Court, set before him, in the strongest terms, the impropriety of his conduct.

7. If such instances should, contrary to our expectations, prove ineffectual, and one month shall have elapsed beyond the period in which the payment should have been made, we authorize and enjoin you to suspend your operations, and to return to Benares, there to wait our further orders; declaring to the Vizier, in the name of the Board, that you consider this failure in his engagements as equivalent to a dismission of the troops, and that you shall halt at Benares until the balance due both of the subsidy and for such other conditions as shall have been performed conformably to the tenor of his Letter in Consultation 3d February, shall have been fully discharged.

8. You will perceive that the Vizier's payments are not to become due till the brigade shall have passed the borders of his dominions. It will be necessary therefore to advise us of this date, in order to ascertain the demand; in the meantime we have sent Instructions to the Chief and Council at Patna, to supply the Paymaster with a sum sufficient for the pay and charges of the brigade to the end of this month, trusting to the punctuality of the Vizier for the future supplies; nevertheless, to guard against every possibility of distress which may attend the troops from the want of money, we herewith deliver to you a letter of credit upon the Chief and Council at Patna, for 2,50,000 rupees, to be used in case of your having left the Vizier, and being then reduced to extreme necessity for employing it.

9. Whenever the Vizier shall think it expedient to dismiss the troops, you are to require such dismission in writing, to proceed immediately to the frontiers of our provinces with all convenient expedition, according to the stipulations of the agreement; but if he shall not have discharged the balance due for the charges and other conditions of this expedition, you are to halt at Benares until the same shall be fully discharged, as we have above directed, or until you shall be furnished with our orders for your further conduct.

10. We recommend in the strongest manner that you cultivate a good understanding with the Vizier, and that you pay the strictest attention to the behaviour and discipline of the troops, that no subject of complaint may arise on that head, either from himself or from any people of the countries with whom we are not in a state of hostilities.

11. For the more convenient execution of military law and justice, we furnish you with a regular warrant for assembling courts martial according to Act of Parliament.

12. You will correspond regularly with the honourable the President and Select Committee, and receive their orders both as to your political and military operations.

Fort William, We are, with esteem, &c.
the 14th February 1774.

To Thomas Lane, esquire, Chief, and Council, at Patna.

Gentlemen,

We desire you will advance the Paymaster of the second brigade a sum sufficient for its pay and charges to the end of this month of February, receiving his bills for the amount upon the Military Paymaster General. After having furnished this supply, you are to make no further advances whatever to this brigade without our express orders, until it shall return again within the provinces.

The supply for the monthly expence of the garrison of Chunar must be furnished as before.

Fort William, We are, &c.
the 14th February 1774.

To Thomas Lane, esquire, Chief, and Council, at Patna.

Gentlemen,

Notwithstanding our orders of this day's date, respecting the advances to the second brigade, we have, in case of exigency, of which the Commander in Chief will be the judge, authorized him to draw upon you for the sum of two lacks and a half of Sicca rupees; and to his bills for that amount you will accordingly pay due honour.

Fort William, We are, &c.
the 14th February 1774.

Bengal Select Consultations, the 27th April 1774.—Present, the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President. William Aldersey, Philip Milner Dacres, esquires.

Read, the following Letter from the Commander in Chief; dated 13th April.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

This morning I had some conversation with the Vizier concerning the measures to be pursued in order to effectuate the conquest which he meditates; but it will be necessary that I have another interview or two with him, before I can give such accurate information on that subject as it is my wish to convey to you.

In the meantime however I am to inform you, that he has resolved forthwith to commence war against Kaffiz Rhamet and the other Rohilla Chiefs, and intends to canton in their Country during the rains.

As I imagine we shall meet with little or no resistance till we approach their strong holds under the mountains, I should suppose common prudence will teach the inhabitants to drive away their cattle, and destroy or conceal the grain which they cannot carry with them.

I have therefore been very earnest with his Excellency to take every possible precaution to prevent any distress to the troops from the want of provisions. He has assured me he will take such measures as that your army shall be duly and sufficiently supplied with the necessaries of life; and you may depend, Gentlemen, upon my giving due attention to the procurement of these indispensable requisites.

This day the brigade advanced to Jugdispore, about three cos from hence; and to-morrow his Excellency and I, with the allied armies, will reach Surumnagur, about five cos beyond Jugdispore.

As there is now no doubt that hostilities will be commenced against the Rohilla Chiefs, the Vizier's life will not only be liable to the common incidents of open war, but to the secret underhand machinations of his enemies; and therefore, supposing myself advanced into the Rohilla country, and the whole or part of it conquered, I wish to avail me, Gentlemen, of your advice and instructions how to act in case any unforeseen accidents should deprive us of our ally, the Vizier of the empire.

Before

Before we enter into the Rohilla dominions, regard ſhall be had to the laſt part of paragraph 4th of the Board's Inſtructions.

At preſent I have only further to add, this is my ſeventh addreſs to you unacknowledged; and that I have the honour to remain, with great reſpect,

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

Head Quarters, 2 coſs above Sandy, 13th April 1774. — Your moſt obedient humble ſervant, A. Champion.

Agreed, That the following anſwer be written.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your Letter of the 13th inſtant.

As we conclude that you will have entered the Rohilla dominions, and commenced hoſtilities againſt them, long before this reply to your Letter can arrive, it will be unneceſſary to give you any further Inſtructions on that ſubject; you will be guided by thoſe you have already received.

We cannot too much recommend to you the continuance of that attention which you have paid to the ſupplying of the army with the neceſſaries of life, the want of which in that Country will probably be the greateſt difficulty they will have to contend with. As ſo little is left of the fair ſeaſon, we deſire likewiſe that you will take immediate meaſures for ſecuring dry and healthy quarters for the troops when the rains ſhall oblige them to retire from the field. On this ſubject we muſt, from paſt experience, earneſtly recommend to you to avoid the neighbourhood of the hills and jungles, in whatever ſpot you may fix upon for this purpoſe.

The ſubject on which you have required our Inſtructions in the latter part of your Letter, is of too delicate and dangerous a nature for us to give our ſentiments upon it thus prematurely: on this, as on former occaſions, we muſt rely on chance, which we hope will preclude the neceſſity of our interpoſition. Should it however happen otherwiſe, you muſt be guided by the urgency of preſent circumſtances; always bearing in mind, that this is a point in which we have no right to interfere beyond the meaſures to which the care of our own ſecurity may compel us.

Fort William, the 27th April 1774. — We are, Sir, Yours, &c.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations the 9th May 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident. William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

The following Letter, addreſſed to the Preſident by Colonel Alexander Champion, dated the 23d ultimo, was immediately committed to the Members of the Board, and is now recorded.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

I have the pleaſure to ſalute you with the hopeful news of victory over the Rohillas. When the purſuit is over, expect more particular accounts; in the meantime I remain,

Sir,

Your moſt obedient humble ſervant, A. Champion.

23d April 1774.

P. S. We are in poſſeſſion of the enemy's encampment, with their tents ſtanding, after a cannonade of almoſt two hours.

Read, the following Letters from Colonel Alexander Champion to the Committee; dated the 19th and 24th ultimo, and 2d of May. APPENDIX No. 26.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Since my Letter of the 17th to the Governor, Hafiz Rhamet has by Letter expreſſed earneſt inclinations to come to an accommodation with the Vizier, which has been the cauſe of my halting here to-day. The Nabob claims no leſs than two crore of rupees; and unleſs he greatly abates his demands, it is not likely that an amicable deciſion can take place.

Hafiz has given away two coſs to poſſeſs himſelf of a bridge over the Babul Nullee, about ten coſs from hence; if he does not retreat farther, I expect to be with him early on the 21ſt, as the united armies will march from hence to-morrow.

I have the honour to remain, Gentlemen, Your moſt obedient humble ſervant, A. Champion.

Camp 3 coſs Weſt of Shajehanpore, 19th April 1774.

P. S. I have juſt received intelligence that the enemy have all re-croſſed the bridge, and poſted themſelves on the ſide of the Nullah, with a determined reſolution of ſtanding their ground to the laſt extremity.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In a Letter of the 22d to the Preſident, I gave a full account of the progreſs of the army from the 19th, the ſucceſs of the feint made uſe of to draw the Rohillas out of their poſt behind Cuttera, with my reſolution of taking the advantage of their movement; and yeſterday I had the inexpreſſible ſatisfaction of tranſmitting a ſhort note to the Governor, with news of the victory, of which I am now to give the particulars.

About three o'clock in the morning, the brigade, with five battalions of the Vizier's regulars, and the Nigib Pultan, conſiſting of about 4,000 matchlock men, began to croſs to the Weſtward ſide of the Gurra river, and with much perſeverance dragged the artillery over a broad and heavy ſand to the oppoſite plains.

The armies marched in three columns towards the Babul Nullah, with intentions to have on our right flank when we ſhould engage; we had proceeded about five miles when our ſcouting horſemen brought notice that they had deſcried ſome of the enemy's cavalry, nor had we advanced half a coſs more, when I could ſee their colours, and very little further when their tents appeared.

My intelligence proved very good, for I ſoon afterwards clearly obſerved, that we were upon the enemy's left flank, within 1,200 yards of which, on a riſing ground, which had hitherto obſtructed our view, was a village and tope, which I ordered to be immediately occupied by part of the left column of the matchlock men; this was a poſt of great importance, and it was a great overſight of the enemy not to have poſſeſſed themſelves of it, as we might have paid very dear for diſlodging them.

Having led the line about 200 yards beyond this village, we filed off to the right towards the Nulla, by ſubdiviſions, and now, about eight o'clock, the enemy's artillery opened upon us. The compliment was returned by two guns, which I had placed on an eminence to amuſe them whilſt our army was forming in order of battle.

The corps of Cadets and Sepoy Grenadiers, led by Major Hanway, and three battalions of the brigade Sepoys, compoſed the right wing, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Leſlie; theſe, and the European regiments, ſoon gave a full front to the enemy, and whilſt they gradually inclined to the right, under a ſevere cannonade, returned the ſalute with their guns.

The three remaining battalions of our own Sepoys, under the command of Major Eyres, compoſed a ſecond line, and the two diviſions of the Nigib Fultan covered the flanks of our army, whilſt we advanced ſlowly towards the enemy; the cannonade on both ſides became very ſmart, and by degrees as the Nabob's regulars, who had marched in the rear of our column, came up, they dreſſed with the European regiment, and became the left wing in place of the matchlock men, who inclined to the left to give them ground and cover their flank; but this wing was not completely formed till nine o'clock.

Hafiz and his army, conſiſting of about 40,000, ſhewed great bravery and reſolution, annoying us with their artillery and rockets; they made repeated attempts to charge, but our guns being ſo much better ſerved than theirs kept ſo conſtant and galling a fire, that they could not advance, and where they were cloſeſt there was the greateſt ſlaughter; they gave proof of a good ſhare of military knowledge, by ſhewing inclinations to force both our flanks at the ſame time, and endeavouring to call off our attention by a briſk fire on our center.

They ſeemed particularly deſirous to diſtreſs our right flank, and with that view brought four guns and a large quantity of rockets from a conſiderable diſtance, to enfilade us; at the ſame time lining the Nullah, which could not for ſome time be obſerved for long graſs, with ſome of their troops, in order to ruſh upon us, ſhould our right be thrown into confuſion.

Perceiving their intention, I directed a few ſhells to be played upon them, whilſt a battalion from our right was ordered to diſlodge the enemy from the Nullah; the battalion ſent on this ſervice ſoon performed it, and advanced ſo briſkly after the enemy, that fearing leſt they ſhould go too far, I ordered the battalion on the right of the ſecond line to ſupport them.

Never was I more fully convinced of the utility of a ſecond line than on this occaſion, for in the courſe of the day I found it neceſſary to ſend all the three battalions which formed it to cover the right flank. It is impoſſible to deſcribe a more obſtinate firmneſs of reſolution than the enemy diſplayed; numerous were their gallant men who advanced, and often pitched their colours between both armies, in order to encourage their men to follow them; and it was not till they ſaw our whole army advancing briſkly to charge them, after a ſevere cannonade of two hours twenty minutes, and a ſmart fire of muſquetry for ſome minutes on both flanks, that they fairly turned their backs.

The battalions then formed into ſeparate columns, and with beat of drum and fifes playing, the army preſſed in glory through the Rohilla camp.

And now came on the after-game of the few horſe the Nabob ſent to the field; no ſooner was the enemy irrecoverably broke than they puſhed after them, and got much plunder in money, elephants, and camels, &c. &c. &c. Their camp equipage, which was all ſtanding, and proves we came on them by ſurprize, with whatever effects they could not carry off, fell a ſacrifice to the ravages of the Nabob's people, whilſt the Company's troops, in regular order in their ranks, moſt juſtly obſerved, "We have the honour of the day, and theſe banditti the "profit."

I wiſh I could pay the Vizier any compliment on this occaſion, or that I were not under the indiſpenſable neceſſity of expreſſing my higheſt indignation at his ſhameful puſillanimity; indiſpenſably, I ſay, becauſe it is neceſſary that Adminiſtration ſhould clearly know how little to be depended on is this their ally.

The night before the battle, I applied to him for ſome particular pieces of cannon, which I thought might prove of great ſervice in action; but he declined giving the uſe of them; and though the honour of the Engliſh arms was called in queſtion by the forward raſhneſs of the enemy in challenging us to battle, and abandoning the poſt; yet did the Vizier urge me to decline the fight, and make another march on the Eaſtern ſide of the Gurrah towards Peilybret. Thus would he have inſpired the enemy, whoſe numbers would have been reinforced with near twelve thouſand men, haſtening under different leaders to their aid.

However, when he found me determined, he promiſed ſolemnly to ſupport me with all his force; and particularly engaged to be cloſe at hand with a large body of cavalry to be uſed as I ſhould direct; but inſtead of being nigh me, he remained beyond the Gurrah, on the ground which I had left in the morning, ſurrounded by his cavalry and a large train of artillery, and did not move thence till the news of the enemy's defeat reached him.

To this breach of his faith was owing the danger which followed from the enemy's enfilading the right flank of your army, which might have been attended with conſequences that I dread to think of; but for the advantage derived from our ſecond line. This however was not all; for if his cavalry had been up, to have preſſed upon the enemy in their flight, they muſt have made prodigious havock, might have totally diſabled them from making head again, and rendered any defence of Peilybret abſolutely impracticable, by thinning their numbers, and getting between the remainder and their ſtrong hold.

I have been thus particular with regard to the Vizier's conduct, that it may be better known how to deal with him in future.

Of the enemy above 2,000 fell in the field, and amongſt them many Sirdars; of your army little more than a hundred, and not a ſingle Officer. Standards we have taken without number, and above fifty pieces of cannon; but what renders the victory moſt deciſive, is the death of Hafiz-Ramet, who was killed whilſt bravely rallying his people to battle: one of his ſons was alſo killed; one taken priſoner; a third returned from flight to-day, and is in the hands of Sujah Dowlah.

I cannot, Gentlemen, better convey to your minds the ſenſe which I have of the conduct of your army on this occaſion, than by encloſing herewith a copy of my return of thanks ſignified in the orders of this day. I have to wiſh, that it was in my power moſt liberally to reward ſuch diſtinguiſhed gallantry; but ſince that is not the caſe, I do moſt earneſtly recommend them to every poſſible mark of the bounty and favour of Government.

I have only to add, that the Gentlemen who ſhewed ſuch alertneſs and preſence of mind in carrying my orders to the different bodies of the army during the courſe of the action, were, Captain Allen M'Pherſon, Captain Edward Shewon, Lieutenants William Bruce and Robert Raine, and Enſigns John and Alexander Murray: and that I am,

With much reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient,
humble ſervant,

Camp on the Field of St. George, 24th April 1774.

P. S. I have the honour to encloſe a general return of the killed, wounded, and miſſing of the ſeveral corps engaged at the battle of St. George.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

In a Letter of the 27th I informed you, that the army would canton at Birelly during the enſuing rainy ſeaſon; but that the time of going into cantonments muſt depend on a conference which I ſhould have with his Excellency the Vizier in a few days thereafter.

I am now to acquaint you, Sir, that the Nabob and I, with the combined armies, are within five coſs of Birelly; and that having intimated to his Excellency that I was ready to perform what further ſervices he might require before before the ſetting in of the rains; he anſwered, that he thought nothing more could be undertaken; and requeſted I would canton the troops.

The whole of Hafiz Rhamet's country, with Aily and Biſſouly, belonging to the ſon of Dundy Cawn, who has delivered himſelf up, is already in the Nabob's poſſeſſion; and the only part of the Rohilla dominions unoccupied by his troops, is Zabita Cawn's country, which I hold alſo as conquered, becauſe Zabita Cawn himſelf is at the Vizier's court, and cannot get away, even if he were diſpoſed to diſpute, which it is probable the fate of his friend Hafiz will at all rates deter him from attempting.

This being the caſe, I have the pleaſure to think, that the ſum ſtipulated to be paid to the Company is now due, and may be demanded when you pleaſe.

In the courſe of the ſervice, I have obſerved the greateſt circumſpection; I have not, in one inſtance, interfered between his Excellency and any of the Natives in the conquered country; ſo that I am confident he cannot have the ſmalleſt plea for prolonging the terms of payment of the Company's money.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your moſt obedient

humble ſervant,

A. Champion.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following Tranſlation of a Letter from the Vizier.

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

Praiſe to the Creator of the world, that by his favour I have obtained the wiſhes of my heart. To-day, which is the 11th of Saffor, the Engliſh troops and mine were oppoſed to thoſe of Hafiz Rhamet Cawn, and there enſued a warm conflict, which laſted for the ſpace of one par. A number, of nearly 50,000 Rohillas, Affghans, attacked us on all ſides, and cloſed upon us; but as the favour of the Almighty was on our ſide, we gained a complete victory. Hafiz Rhamet was ſlain, and much plunder fell into our hands of the conquered army. May this victory prove happy to my friend, for in reality the alliance betwixt us renders our mutual victories equally intereſting to both. In the engagement General Champion and the Engliſh troops behaved with great ſpirit and activity, and it is owing to the favour of God, to a fortunate opportunity, and to the zealous efforts of the Engliſh troops, that this victory has been acquired. There are other principal Rohilla Chiefs who are maſters of a large army, but by the bleſſing of God they ſhall be reduced to ſubjection.

Agreed, That the above Papers be laid before the Board for their information.

Agreed, That the following anſwer be written to Colonel Champion.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your Letter of the 19th, and alſo of the 24th, which has been laid before the Board; and you will be informed of their ſentiments in a ſeparate Letter.

We have only on this occaſion to expreſs our ſincere ſatisfaction at the deciſive advantage gained over the Rohillas, which we aſcribe entirely to your good conduct, and to the bravery of the troops under your command.

We are, Sir,

Your moſt obedient humble ſervants.

Agreed, That a Letter to the Honourable the Court of Directors, informing them of this advantage gained over the Rohillas, be prepared to be dispatched over land.

APPENDIX, No. 27.

Copy of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 14th May 1774.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

THE daily expectation of an approaching criſis in the operations of your army in the Rohilla war, has induced us to delay, from time to time, the diſpatch of our accompanying advices, in the hopes of being able to tranſmit more complete information. This is now in our power. By a Letter from Colonel Champion to the Preſident, dated the 2d inſtant, we learn, that the Vizier had formerly declared to him, that he had no further occaſion for the ſervices of the troops in the field before the rains; that he was accordingly preparing to canton them at Brietly, the capital of the new-acquired dominions; that the whole of the Country lately poſſeſſed by Hafez Rhamet, with Ouly and Biſſouly, belonging to the ſon of Doondy Cawn, is already in the poſſeſſion of the Vizier; and the only part of the Rohilla dominions unoccupied by his troops, is the territory of Zabita Cawn, who is in the Vizier's camp, in his cuſtody, and unable, were he at liberty, to oppoſe him; ſo that we think we may, without preſumption, congratulate you on the happy accompliſhment of the undertaking begun and decided almoſt in the ſame inſtant of time, and the right which you have unqueſtionably acquired to the ſum ſtipulated for the ſervice.

We have the honour to be,
Honourable Sirs,
Your faithful and moſt
obedient humble ſervants,

Fort William, the 14th May 1774.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council in Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 24th Auguſt 1774.

Par. 2. You were then informed, that the brigade employed under the command of Colonel Champion, in the ſervice againſt the Rohillas, was preparing to canton at Bareilly for the rains. Soon after, on the requiſition and urgent ſolicitation of the Vizier, this deſtination was changed, and the brigade marched forwards to the city of Biſſouly, which is near the centre of the Rohilla country, on that ſide of the Ganges, and immediately entered into quarters, with the intention of paſſing the whole ſeaſon of the rains there. But on the news of an accommodation among the Maratta Chiefs, and on the appearance of ſome hoſtile acts on the part of the King, fearing to be interrupted in the courſe of his operations if they were delayed, the Vizier has ſince importuned the Commander in Chief to take the field again, and to march againſt the remainder of the Rohilla forces, who were aſſembled under the command of Fyzoolla Cawn, at Patter Gur, in the northernmoſt diviſion of that country, hoping that by their diſperſion, which would at this time be with leſs difficulty effected, any deſigns which may have been formed by the King or the Marattas to be executed after the rains, will be anticipated and rendered abortive. To this requeſt Colonel Champion, though with reluctance, and having firſt objected to it on account of the dangers to which the troops (the Europeans eſpecially) would be ſubjected from ſickneſs, by being expoſed to the inclemency of the preſent ſeaſon, aſſented. We own the force of the Colonel's objections, and think they outweigh the arguments urged by the Vizier, to prove the neceſſity of preſent ſervice, as we are perſuaded that our forces in that quarter, joined to thoſe of the Vizier, and aided by our other reſources, are ſuperior to any oppoſition which we can foreſee in any probable event of things: but it may accelerate the iſſue of the war, and diſcourage foreign attempts; and our advices from the Commander in Chief, and from the Reſident, mention, that the ſeaſon was and had been for ſome time uncommonly favourable for ſuch a deſign.

3. By a Letter from Colonel Champion to the Committee, dated 5th Auguſt, he was then advanced with the army 24 coſs beyond Biſſouly. We know not how near this may have carried him to Patter Gur.

4. The King has lately taken into his ſervice Sumroo, the notorious aſſaſſin of the unfortunate priſoners at Patna; it is alſo ſaid that he has invited Gazeo-dun Cawn and Meer Coſſim to his Court, and that he has written Letters to the Abdallee and to the Maratta Chiefs, ſoliciting their return to that quarter; and to Fyzoolla Cawn, encouraging him to perſevere, and flattering him with hopes of ſuccour. Theſe indications of his Majeſty's indiſpoſition towards us, for which many obvious cauſes may be aſſigned, are not likely to affect your intereſt, at leaſt not materially, ſince his ſolicitations will have little weight with the Powers to whom they are made, and who know that he has neither wealth, territory, nor perſonal command, to give them credit. The Abdallee is too remote to become an object of our apprehenſion. The Marattas are not to be deſpiſed, although they muſt have ſuffered extremely from their late inteſtine diſturbances: the faction excited by the Miniſters of that ſtate againſt Ragonaut Row has prevailed, the infant ſon of Narrain Row acknowledged Peſhwa in his ſtead, and Ragonaut himſelf a priſoner in their hands, as we are informed by our laſt advices.

5. It is very probable that they will attempt to recover the Duawb from the Vizier the next ſeaſon, if they have leiſure and means to ſend their forces ſo far; but we have reaſon to believe that they will not venture to act openly againſt our army, nor to invade the Vizier's own dominions; and we venture to promiſe, that whilſt the orders under which we now act continue in force, we ſhall not permit the army, or any part of it, to paſs the line to which its preſent operations are reſtricted, either to prevent or repel any attempts of the Marattas, while they leave us unmoleſted within it.'

6. This conduct the Vizier will probably expect from the repeated declarations made to him by the Preſident, when he firſt engaged in that enterprize; and it is not improbable that ſuch an expectation may be the ground of his preſent eagerneſs to bring the war to a concluſion, that his own forces may be wholly at liberty to defend his new acquiſitions in the Duawb againſt future attacks of the Marattas.

7. As to Meer Coſſim and Gazio-dun Cawn, they are mere names, and can be of no weight, into whatever ſcale they are thrown, but as they mark the temper and inclinations of thoſe who befriended them.

8. The payments of the monthly ſubſidy for the extra charge of the brigade have been made with great punctuality, ſo far as our advices mentioned them.

The Vizier has given the Reſident an aſſignment on his treaſury at Fayzabad, for the 15 lacks due by the treaty for the ſecond payment on account of the ceſſion of

of Corah and Allahabad; and we hope that it is by this time on the way to Calcutta.

We are,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful
obedient humble ſervants,

Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 19th October 1774.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

Par. 1. Our laſt diſpatch was dated the 24th of Auguſt, and encloſed a duplicate of the preceding. It was ſent to Fort Saint George to be forwarded to you on board his Majeſty's ſhips, which were then to return to Europe.

2. In that Letter we informed you, that Colonel Champion had complied with the preſſing ſolicitations of the Vizier, to advance with the brigade in conjunction with his army againſt the Rohilla's under Fyzoolla Cawn, who were in the neighbourhood of Patter Gur; and that on the 5th of Auguſt they had proceeded with this intention twenty-four coſs beyond Beſſouly, the place of their cantonments. The next Letter received from the Colonel was addreſſed to the Preſident, and dated the 8th of Auguſt, adviſing him of an offer made by the Vizier, of ſeven lacks of rupees as a preſent to the brigade for their ſervices to him, and encloſing the copy of an obligation which the Vizier had delivered for the payment of this ſum ſix months after its date. As the Vizier had made his intentions public, this tranſaction could not be concealed from the troops; but Colonel Champion gave them to underſtand that the aſſent of Government was neceſſary to their accepting it, for which purpoſe he addreſſed the Preſident. The Preſident laid his Letter before us, and we referred it to the Council at large, who found, upon a reference to the late Act of Parliament for the better regulation of India affairs, &c. that the acceptance of preſents was poſitively prohibited; and the Colonel was acquainted of the impoſſibility either for them to aſſent or the army to receive the Vizier's donation.

3. The Colonel continued to advance towards Patter Gur leiſurely, and with frequent reſting days, for the eaſe of the troops; the weather was very favourable, and the men continued in good health and ſpirits. On the 10th Auguſt he was within four ſhort marches of Patter Gur, and received information that the Rohillas were retiring unto the hills, but had left a body of their troops at that place. However, on his advancing nearer they all retired; and on the 16th the Vizier took poſſeſſion of Patter Gur without any reſiſtance, and thereby completed his conqueſts of the Rohilla country wherein we were engaged to aſſiſt him. This opened a plea for demanding the 40 lacks, as due by the tenor of our engagement; and the Preſident did accordingly write to the Vizier on this ſubject, and inſtructed the Reſident to make the demand. Fyzoolla Cawn with the Rohilla army, ſaid to amount to 40,000 men, was cooped up within the mountains, and confined between them and the river; and the Colonel's Letters deſcribe them to have ſuffered much from want of proviſions. The Vizier was deſirous of bringing the war to an immediate concluſion, by an accommodation with the Rohillas, and offered Fyzoolla Cawn terms which he rejected. The poſt occupied by the Rohillas was at a place called Loll Dong, which was ſaid to be without the Rohilla territory, and was therefore conſidered by Colonel Champion as beyond the line to which his operations were limited; for which reaſon he would not comply with the Vizier's repeated deſire of attacking them, until he ſhould receive our inſtructions in reply to his Letter of the 29th July, which expreſſed his doubts on this ſubject; and the two armies continued for ſome time inactive, although within ſixteen coſs, or about 22 miles of each other. In the meantime negociations were carried on. Fyzoolla Cawn requeſted that Mr. Murray, the Colonel's Secretary, might be ſent to him, to whom he wiſhed to explain ſome points that he did not chuſe to commit to writing; and the Colonel conſented to his requeſt, in the hopes that he might be perſuaded by Mr. Murray to come to camp, and upon a perſonal interview with the Vizier be brought to accede to the terms offered him; the Vizier likewiſe approved of Mr. Murray's viſit, and furniſhed him with inſtructions. The Vizier, by Mr. Murray, repeated an offer to Fyzoolla Cawn of a ſettlement in the Duawb, with aſſurances of ſupport, on his ſurrendering himſelf and delivering up the half of his treaſure and effects. Fyzoolla Cawn conſented to the latter part of the propoſal, provided the ſettlement was made in the Rohilla country, which had been lately conquered, and not in the Duawb, which he alledged it was impoſſible for him to defend againſt the incurſions of the Marattas: both propoſals were mutually rejected, and Mr. Murray was recalled, without having been able to effect the purpoſe for which he was ſent.

4. The Colonel then, at the urgent ſolicitation of the Vizier, made a movement nearer the enemy, by which he entirely cut off their communication with the river and the Rohilla country, and was now within ten coſs, or about 15 miles of them; but being ſtill under the ſame difficulty with reſpect to his inſtructions, he refuſed to proceed further. The Colonel's Letter, dated the 6th of September, mentions the increaſed diſtreſſes of the Rohilla army; and on the 10th he writes, that they had moved their families farther into the country within the hills. A few days after he would have received our inſtructions, giving him a latitude of action beyond the limits to which he thought himſelf reſtricted, and of courſe would be enabled to bring the war to a ſpeedy iſſue, either by accelerating an agreement or attacking and diſperſing the enemy.—Our proceedings properly cloſe at this period, and we make no doubt but you will be informed of the ſequel by the new Adminiſtration.

5. In reply to the demand which was made on the Vizier for payment of the 40 lacks, he pleaded his inability to avail himſelf of reſources for money; while he was obliged to keep the field, and the Rohilla army remained unſubdued; and while the intentions of the Marattas were unknown, who, by attacking him in another quarter, might oblige him to abandon his conqueſts, which would revert to the Rohillas, and he obliged to ſubdue it a ſecond time. As the Vizier has been hitherto punctual in his pecuniary engagements with us, we are not under any apprehenſion of his not fulfilling this, and we were the leſs ſcrupulous to grant him the benefit of the excuſe he pleaded, ſince we had every reaſon to expect, that an early poſt would bring us the advices of his objection being removed, by the concluſion of a peace, or the defeat of the Rohillas; and to have puſhed him for payment at ſuch a critical conjuncture, might have compelled him to a precipitate and diſadvantageous agreement with his enemy.

6. At the time of our laſt diſpatches, the various accounts we had received of the Marattas, agreed in repreſenting the diſſentions among them to have ceaſed, by the confinement of Ragonaut Row, and the proclamation of the young prince, Madan Row, as Peſhwah; but we have ſince received more authentic advices from Mr. Moſtyn at Poonah, by which it appears, that Ragonaut Row, in place of being impriſoned as was ſuppoſed, is ſupported by Madhajee Sindeah and Tokajee Hoolka, into whoſe hands he had thrown himſelf, and who, though originally attached to the oppoſite faction, now undertook to ſupport him againſt it, having a large force under their command, conſiſting principally of the ſame troops which they had ſo ſucceſsfully employed in the Duawb

and the Rohilla diſtricts in the courſe of the laſt two years; he alſo mentions that freſh diſſentions have ariſen among the Miniſters, ſo that the inteſtine diſtractions of the Maratta ſtate promiſe another year's ſecurity to Hindoſtan from their incurſions.

7. Beneram Pundit, a Vackeel from Shabajee Booſlah, Subah of Berar, the brother and ſucceſſor of the late Janojee, has been attending upon the Preſident upwards of a twelvemonth; he had been mentioned to us by the Preſident as a very intelligent perſon, who has communicated to him on many occaſions the earlieſt information of tranſactions in the Decan, which after-advices have confirmed. He has acquainted the Preſident with the views and claim of his maſter to the government of the Maratta ſtate, in the proſecution of which he may be greatly aſſiſted by the preſent diſſentions among the Miniſters; he has alſo often repeated the earneſt deſire of Shabajee Booſla to enter into a defenſive alliance with the Company through this Preſidency. An opinion that ſuch an alliance may be of great advantage to the Company, has induced us to ſhew every mark of attention to the Vackeel, who is now ſent back with letters and preſents to his maſter, and Dereahboy, the widow of Janojee, who has great ſway in the adminiſtration.

8. The Vizier has lately propoſed an interview with the King, under pretence of regulating the countries lately conquered; and we have agreed that the commanding officer of our army ſhall be preſent, and aſſiſt with his counſel and advice; but we have ſtrictly prohibited him from engaging the Company as guarantee to any of the treaties or agreements that ſhall take place between his Majeſty and the Vizier, or in any other engagements whatever, that ſhall produce any new claims or demands upon them. If the influence of our brigade, employed for the protection of the Vizier's country, ſhould extend itſelf to the ſecurity of any country that may be allotted to the King, we have directed Colonel Champion to make a merit of our protection to his Majeſty, and demand, as a return, the renunciation of his claim to the Bengal tribute, upon the footing of thereby removing every cauſe of further diſcontent between his Majeſty and us.

9. Accompanying we have the honour to forward our Proceedings to the 6th of October inclusive, duplicate of our laſt General Letter, and broken ſet of Country Correſpondence, from the 3d of March to the 21ſt of November.

We are,
Honourable Sirs,
Your faithful and obedient
Fort William, the 15th October 1774. humble ſervants,
Warren Haſtings.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 2d June 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, William Alderſey, abſent, Philip Milner Dacres, eſquire.

Read, a Letter from Colonel Alexander Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I am honoured with your Letter of the 27th ultimo, and you may reſt aſſured of my attention to the procurement of proviſions for the troops; but in this matter, as in others, I muſt, circumſtanced as I am, Gentlemen, chiefly rely on the faith of his Excellency the Vizier, whoſe influence and hearty concurrence is abſolutely neceſſary to render my endeavours effectual; his promiſes are ſolemn and frequent.

You ſeem to have miſconſtrued the 6th paragraph of my addreſs of the 13th of April. I did not extend my views ſo far as to the ſucceſſion to the Vizier's territories in the event I mentioned. If too delicate and dangerous for you, Gentlemen, ſurely it muſt have been too momentous for me to have interfered; I had no thoughts of it; I only wiſhed to know, whether to withdraw your troops immediately from this country, or maintain the conqueſts which I might happen to make, until I received your further orders.

The event has ſhewn, that there was not the leaſt reaſon to apprehend danger to his Excellency's perſon from open war, and the generoſity of his enemies proved a ſecurity againſt private attempts.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Camp, 14th May, 1774. Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following extract from the Secret Department Conſultations of 23d May 1774.

Received a Letter from the Commander in Chief, in the following terms:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Council of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

In a Letter of the 27th ultimo I acquainted the Governor, that the army would canton at this place during the enſuing rains. Under date the 2d inſtant I repeated the ſame information, with this addition, that having requeſted the Nabob to point out wherein the army could further ſerve him before the wet ſeaſon came on, he declared his opinion, that nothing more ſhould be undertaken, and ſignified his deſire that I would canton the troops.

I alſo told the Preſident, that the Vizier is in full poſſeſſion of all Haſez Rhamet's country; this I mentioned from my own knowledge; and upon the Nabob's authority, that he was alſo maſter of Ouly and Biſſuly, belonging to the ſon of Dundy Cawn.

But this morning, after the ground for the cantonments had been pitched upon, his Excellency paid me a viſit, and to my great ſurprize requeſted I would move on with and canton the army near Biſſouly, 18 coſs from hence, on the banks of the Yarwaffadar river; alledging, that he has not yet obtained abſolute poſſeſſion of Biſſouly, in which he ſays there is treaſure to a very large amount.

I immediately propoſed to detach a part of the troops to put him in poſſeſſion of Biſſouly, after which they could in a few days rejoin the army at this place; but I expreſſed diſinclination to canton the troops higher up the Country than we now are.

The reaſons I offered were, that our ammunition and ſtore boats, with the Contractor's arrack boats, &c. had been ordered up the Gambery river in conſequence of his Excellency's expreſs deſire that we ſhould canton near Birelly; that their returning again down the Gambery, and getting back to the Ganges, would take much time, and not only retard the ſupplies of ammunition, of which we are much in want on account of the great expence of the 23d of April, but alſo ſubject the officers and ſoldiers to great diſtreſs for want of neceſſaries and liquors, which are very eſſential for the preſervation of their health in this country, where the quality of the water is often pernicious; that the Yarwaffadar is a river hardly known to us but by name; that the place of its junction with the Ganges, and how far it is navigable to, is uncertain; nor can it be known how the inhabitants of the countries through which it runs, might be diſpoſed towards us; that ſuppoſing the boats were ordered to continue their way up the Gambery river, or directed to return and proceed up the Ganges till they came on a line with Biſſouly, they would in either caſe be above ſeventeen coſs from the place propoſed for our cantonments, and it is not certain whether the road to them would be paſſable in the rains; that we could not afford large detachments for eſcorts, and that even if we could, it would be to little purpoſe, unleſs we were at an abſolute certainty as to the ſtation we ſhould occupy in the rains, with regard to which his Excellency might perhaps change his mind again; that our croſſing and cantoning beyond the Coſſey and Ramgunga rivers, which are very broad and rapid in the rains, would render our communication with the Country we have already conquered, and of courſe with the Nabob's provinces of Oude, Korah, and Allahabad, very difficult; and that our ſupplies of proviſions for the army would conſequently be very precarious, ſince the Nabob confeſſedly depends chiefly on ſuch as will be furniſhed from his own Country.

Beſides theſe reaſons, I had ſeveral others which were not for his ear; viz. that in caſe it ſhould be the pleaſure of Adminiſtration on any account to recal their troops, or in the event that I ſhould find it indiſpenſably neceſſary to return down the Country, from a want of proviſions, or on account of being in too great arrears of pay, the difficulty and danger of recroſſing the ſaid two rivers would be obviated.

All I could ſay had not ſufficient weight with his Excellency; and as the power of controul is entirely in his hands, I can only regret that he makes ſo abſolute and ſo improper an uſe of it. My chief motive, however, for giving ſo implicit acquieſcence to his every requeſt, is to prevent the ſmall pretence or excuſe for not fulfilling the terms of his letter of requiſition of aid; namely, the payment of forty lacks of rupees to the Company, when he ſhould be put in poſſeſſion of the whole or half the Rohilla country, or when an accommodation ſhould take place.

Here I am moſt heartily to hope, that it is clearly underſtood between you, Gentlemen, and his Excellency, what the half of the Rohilla country is: for otherwiſe much altercation may ariſe on this head.

Many circumſtances may perhaps concur to render it inexpedient for you to puſh the conqueſt of the Rohilla country. My Letters to the Select Committee of the 24th April, to which I beg leave to refer you, will pretty clearly ſhew, that there is conſiderable danger in truſting your troops with the Vizier on actual ſervice, ſince you muſt lay your account with ſuſtaining the whole weight of the war: nay, it is worſe, he will feed your Commander with ſolemn promiſes of ſupport, and yet diſappoint him.

But ſuppoſing the Vizier as firm as could be wiſhed, it is not improbable that a foreign enemy may, after the rains, reduce him to the neceſſity of retiring to his own dominions, in order to protect them from invaſion: in this caſe, the Rohilla country will fall a prey to others; for he cannot both keep it and defend his own dominions, unleſs our Government give him another brigade, which perhaps they may not chooſe to do.

Now I do not conceive that we are obliged to maintain him in poſſeſſion of this new acquiſition; and if he ſhall be obliged to evacuate it before the forty lacks are acknowledged due to the Company, he will moſt probably uſe every endeavour to evade payment; for I am ſorry to confeſs, that his Excellency is apt to equivocate.

It is ſaid, that Ahmet Cawn has given his Country, which lies between Dundy Cawn's and Zebedy Cawn's, to the King, and indeed the treatment of the family of Hafez will perfectly juſtify the other Chiefs in every ſtep they can take to avoid coming under the power of Sujah Dowlah.

It concerns me much to have your inſtructions, Gentlemen, how to act, in caſe it proves true that Ahmet Cawn's country is actually ceded to his Majeſty; and I am to requeſt you will favour me with them as ſoon as poſſible.

Whiſperers tell me, there was a previous agreement between Niziſ Cawn on the part of the King and the Vizier, for a partition of the Rohilla country; and that Niziſ Cawn, who we know is in the field, and was on his way to join the Nabob, till he heard of the defeat of Hafiz, is marching to poſſeſs himſelf of Zabedy Cawn's Country, which is the moſt remote of the Rohilla dominions.

On the ſuppoſition of the truth of this news, and that the Nabob ſhould, on account of the advantages he had gained by the force of our arms, diſavow any agreement with Niziſ Cawn, I would gladly have your directions.

All that could poſſibly be effected before the rains, is already done, excepting marching to Biſſouly; which, notwithſtanding what the Nabob ſaid this morning, I am well aſſured is occupied by part of his troops. When he told me there was immenſe treaſure there, I ſuſpected he had diſguiſed his intentions; and my ſuſpicions have been greatly ſtrengthened ſince he was with me, by an information, that the treaſure which he pretends is at Biſſouly, is really in the palace and town of Birelly, every avenue of which is ſhut up by his troops, inſomuch that a ſingle inhabitant cannot get out of the place; and that his ſole view in requiring me to move, is no other than leſt it be known what riches he may find in the place, or the means he may uſe to obtain them.

This much I am under the neceſſity of declaring, that I am greatly afraid the Vizier's behaviour to the family of the Nabob Hafez Ramet, and to the inhabitants of his country, will render our connection with him reproachful to us, and tend to leſſen that reputation of our juſtice which had heretofore prevailed in theſe countries.

As I received my inſtructions from your Board, I have thought it proper to ſubmit theſe matters to your conſideration, that you may do me the honour of ſignifying your pleaſure concerning them.

I remain, with reſpect,

Camp near Birelly, 4th May 1774.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Upon the caſe ſtated by Colonel Champion in the above Letter, that Amed Cawn may have given up his country to the King, the Board are of opinion that we ought ſtill to ſupport the Vizier's pretenſions to that country, but in diſcuſſing this caſe, a doubt having ariſen concerning the propriety of oppoſing the King, ſhould he appear himſelf in perſon to aſſert his pretenſions to any part of the Rohilla country, within the preſcribed line of our plan, or of our preſent military operations,

The queſtion is now put, how in that caſe we ſhould act?

Reſolved by the majority of the Board, that we ſhould oppoſe him.

Meſſrs. Lawrell and Graham are of opinion we ſhould not oppoſe him.

The majority of the Board record the following reaſons for the above Reſolution:

1ſt. Becauſe it is well known that the King has no power of his own, but is entirely governed by thoſe who have poſſeſſion of his perſon or authority, being in effect the mere inſtrument to execute and ſanctify their deſigns. This reaſon induced the Board to authorize General Sir Robert Barker laſt year to act openly againſt the Marattas, although they profeſſed to execute only the commands of the King, and brought him with them into the field to authorize their tranſactions. He is now in the hands of Mudged o Dowlah and Nedjiff Cawn, the former of whom derives his influence from the poſſeſſion of the King's perſon, the latter from the command of his forces; but both are univerſally regarded as acting entirely from their own authority. The ſame reaſon therefore, that would compel this Government to oppoſe the King when he came againſt our ally the laſt year in perſon at the head of the Maratta army, equally ſubſiſts for oppoſing him now, ſhould he lend the ſame ſanction to Nedjiff Cawn, or any other ſtiling himſelf his ſervant.

2d. Becauſe, if it is juſt and lawful to oppoſe the Miniſters of the King in the execution of his orders, it is equally ſo to oppoſe the King himſelf in the execution of the ſame deſigns. This Government owes no allegiance to Shaw Allum.

3d. Becauſe, if it is to be eſtabliſhed as a rule, though the King in perſon may command our acquieſcence in ſuch acts as we ſhould oppoſe were he not preſent, it would prove an infallible means of inviting him to an interpoſition of his perſonal authority in every meaſure which we ſhould be engaged in, and to an actual invaſion of the poſſeſſions of our ally; nor could we, conſiſtently with that principle, diſpute even his pretenſions to the countries or places which are the incontrovertible property of the Company, if he choſe to employ the ſame arguments to enforce them.

4th. Becauſe the admiſſion of ſuch a principle, hitherto unknown and unpractiſed in any other part of the world, would at once annihilate the right which the Company have acquired by treaty to the ſum ſtipulated for the conqueſt of the Rohillá country; ſince the Vizier might juſtly refuſe to diſcharge it if our Commander in Chief ſhould refuſe to proceed in his operations, in caſe of the King's joining the enemy in perſon, no proviſion having been made for ſuch an event in our engagement with the Vizier, which on the part of the Company was expreſsly for the conqueſt of the Rohilla country.

Meſſrs. Lawrell and Graham beg leave to record their objections to this Reſolution as follows:

We are of opinion, that we ſhould not oppoſe the King ſhould he appear in the field in perſon to aſſert his pretenſions to any part of the Rohilla dominions, but leave it to the Vizier to ſatisfy his claim by negociation. To attack the King with our forces is to ſtep farther forth in the cauſe than we have reaſon to believe he would do in his own; for whatever opinion we may entertain of the inſufficiency of the King's title to the empire, or of the emptineſs of his character, the ſame ſacred veneration which is by all nations paid to Majeſty, is obſerved towards him by the ſubjects of Hindoſtan: the principles and tenets of their religion influence them in general to this attachment and allegiance; and the Vizier has in particular a powerful motive in policy for his perſonal attachment, for he can never attempt to depreciate the title or character of the King, which nothing can teſtify more ſtrongly than his appearing in arms againſt him, without virtually leſſening his own dignity and reputation as his Vizier; a circumſtance which we apprehend would neither ſuit with his private pride nor his public ambition. We are firmly of opinion therefore, that the Vizier would not himſelf draw his ſword in anger againſt the King, and we know of no ſuch indiſpenſable call upon us as to induce us to do it for him; beſides, we are yet ignorant what degree of attention or regard may have been paid by his Britannic Majeſty's Miniſters to the miſſion of Major Morriſon, and we think we ſhould be cautious of taking any ſteps at this critical juncture of the Company's affairs, which may be liable to draw down on them or ourſelves the diſpleaſure or cenſure of his Majeſty's Government.

James Lawrell.
J. Graham.

The Preſident remarks on this occaſion an irregularity in Colonel Champion's addreſſing his Letter to the Preſident and Council, when by his inſtructions he is directed to correſpond with the Select Committee; he obſerves, that by dividing his correſpondence between the two Boards, he muſt leave his informations to either very imperfect, beſides ſubjecting himſelf perhaps to receive inſtructions from each Board ſeparately, which may tend to deſtroy the general conſiſtency which ought to be preſerved in his conduct and operations. It is for this purpoſe chiefly that the Select Committee was inſtituted, and particularly charged with the political branch of adminiſtration, having it ſtill in their power to refer to the Board, in caſes of great nicety, or to which they judge their power does not extend. He therefore propoſes that the Commander in Chief be deſired for the future to addreſs his public Letters to the Select Committee, or to the Preſident, according to his original inſtructions.

The Board concur with the Preſident in his opinion and propoſal, and agree that Colonel Champion be directed accordingly; and in the intermediate time, until the Commander in Chief ſhall have it in his power to conform to this order;

Agreed, That any future Letters received from him on the operations of the war, addreſſed to the Board, be opened, conſidered, and anſwered, by the Select Committee.

The following reply is now ſent to the Commander in Chief:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, eſquire, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your Letter which you addreſſed us of the 4th inſtant.

Your objections to the new propoſal of the Vizier, for cantoning the troops at Biſſouly inſtead of Birelly, as it was firſt intended, appear to us ſo well founded, that we cannot but approve of your urging them to him in the manner you did; and although your remonſtrance had not the deſired effect, yet it would ſerve to fix the blame entirely on himſelf, ſhould any prejudice to his affairs ariſe from the meaſure.

As to the reſt, we approve of your compliance after ſo proper a remonſtrance, but forbear ſaying any more on this ſubject, as your later advices to the Preſident inform us of your having actually marched towards Biſſouly, in conſequence of the Vizier's requiſition.

In your inſtructions we reſtricted your authority to the military operations, leaving the direction in all other caſes to the choice of the Vizier; however, for the future we think it proper, confiding in your diſcretion, to inveſt you with the option of refuſing compliance with the Vizier's requiſitions, when they may endanger the troops, or leave them at his mercy.

In this light we advert to the objections which you have ſtated againſt the cantoning of the brigade at Biſſouly. If that place, or any other which he may preſcribe for that purpoſe, ſhall be liable to expoſe the army to ſickneſs or diſtreſs for want of proviſions, or to have their communication cut off from thoſe countries, from which they can be ſupplied with proviſions, we hereby authorize you, in ſuch caſe, to act on your own judgment, and either to return to the ſtation originally propoſed for cantoning at Barelly, or to any other equally eligible in point of health and communication; conſulting however, as far as you ſtill can do it under ſuch circumſtances, the inclination of the Vizier.

We have thus applied the general latitude here given to the particular caſes you have repreſented to us with reſpect to cantoning the troops; in all others we muſt recur to the original conditions agreed on with the Vizier, namely, that in all points but ſuch as immediately reſpect the operations in the field, he is ſolely empowered to preſcribe. Whenever you ſhall deem it neceſſary, on the grounds above deſcribed, to deviate from this rule, and to act by your own authority in contradiction to his, we expect that you be able to furniſh us ſuch reaſons as ſhall vindicate this Government in ſupporting your meaſures in oppoſition to the power which we have hitherto conſented to leave in the hands of the Vizier.

We were fully aware from the firſt, of the difficulties which might ariſe in the execution of the Vizier's project of ſubduing the Rohilla country, as well as from his temper as from circumſtances independent of him, and we flatter ourſelves we have it ſufficiently in our power to provide againſt them. In the caſe of an oppoſition from the King, or Nudjiff Cawn acting for him, we have a clear line to purſue; as we have no knowledge of any treaty of partition between the King and the Vizier, we can take no cognizance of the breach of it. Our engagements with the latter are to aid him in the conqueſt of the Rohilla country; and if he is oppoſed by Nudjiff Cawn, or the King himſelf ſhould perſonally interfere, you are to pay no regard to either, but ſteadily and invariably proſecute the tenor of your original inſtructions againſt all opponents, of whatever power or character they may be.

We cannot entertain ſo bad an opinion of the Vizier as to ſuppoſe him capable of acting in avowed breach of a treaty; but if any plea of that kind ſhould be made for conteſting our right to occupy any part of the Rohilla country yet unconquered, it will be proper to put the queſtion to him, whether ſuch treaty does exiſt or not? If he ſhould acknowledge ſuch a treaty, you muſt undoubtedly abſtain from further hoſtilities in abetment of his breach of faith: but we repeat, that though in reply to a queſtion propoſed by you to us for your inſtruction, we have thus given you our opinion, yet we do not apprehend the poſſibility of ſuch a caſe occurring; and if the Vizier ſhould deny having engaged in ſuch a treaty, we can neither authorize you to examine the identity of it, nor do we ſee by what means you could inveſtigate the truth.

This will not be underſtood to preclude you from giving us any information which may come to your knowledge on every point of this nature.

Conſidering our right to the ſum ſtipulated for the preſent ſervice as now fully acquired, we have recommended to the Preſident to make immediate application to the Vizier, for the payment of the forty lacks; and he will inſtruct his Agent at that Court accordingly. As we do not mean to inſiſt on the Vizier's paying the money on demand, we wiſh to leave the time and conditions of payment to a negociation between him and the Agent; in which the latter will be directed to apply to you for your advice, and to conclude nothing without it. He will however be enjoined to demand peremptorily an acknowledgment of our right to the ſum in queſtion; and if the Vizier refuſes this, to adviſe us without loſs of time, that we may directly diſpatch ſuch inſtructions to you, as the exigency of the caſe may require.

In due attention to your authority, we think it proper to commiſſion you to make the firſt demand for payment of the ſtipulation, on which the Reſident, in virtue of his office, will treat, acting as above expreſſed by your advice and direction.

In two paragraphs of your Letter before us, you barely mention the Vizier's treatment of the family of Haſez Rhamet; but in the laſt place where you notice it, you draw an inference, that, "it will render our connection "with him (the Vizier) reproachful to us, and tend to "leſſen that reputation of our juſtice which had hereto"fore prevailed in theſe countries." Where ſo ſerious a concluſion was to be deduced, we cannot but lament, that being withheld from a knowledge of the promiſes on which it is grounded, ſhould diſqualify us for paſſing a judgment. It has been an invariable maxim in the policy of the Company's Governments, in the execution of any enterprizes which they have undertaken in behalf of their allies, to interpoſe their protection in favour of the conquered Princes, for the ſecurity of their lives and honour; and it will unqueſtionably be the care and attention of this Adminiſtration to adhere to this maxim, which has greatly contributed to the reputation of the Britiſh name, and to perform what may be incumbent on them on the preſent occaſion. We deſire, therefore, to be immediately adviſed of the particulars of the treatment which you allude to, that we may judge of the meaſures proper to be adopted. In the interim, we recommend to you to urge, in your own behalf, and in the name of the Board, ſuch remonſtrances to the Vizier, againſt any vigorous treatment of the Rohilla Chiefs and their families, as you may think the occaſion to require. From the readineſs which the Vizier teſtified in a former inſtance, to be influenced by your advice and perſuaſion, we flatter ourſelves we may expect the ſame good fruits from your interpoſition now. APPENDIX. No. 27.

We have replied in this inſtance to your Letter, as you addreſſed it to us; but we deſire you may direct your anſwer to the Select Committee; and in future continue your correſpondence with them only, as before, according to the tenor of your original inſtructions.

We are, with eſteem,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervants.

Fort William, the 23d May.

Read, the following Letter from the Commander in Chief, addreſſed to the Preſident and Council.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, and Council of Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

In an addreſs of the 4th inſtant, I intimated to you a ſurmiſe, that an agreement had been ſome time ago made between the King and the Vizier, for a partition of the Rohilla country; and it was ſaid Nudjiff Cawn, on the part of his Majeſty, was marching to poſſeſs himſelf of Labitah Caun's country.

On the 5th, the latter part of this intelligence was contradicted; and I adviſed the Governor, that Nudjiff Cawn had determined on coming to this place; where he accordingly arrived two days before the Nabob and I did.

In ſeveral conferences with the Vizier, he aſſured me, that he did not know what buſineſs brought Nudjiff Cawn. On the other hand, Nudjiff told me, that when the Vizier was at Cowriagunge, he prevailed with him to go to Delhi, in order to influence his Majeſty to take the field, and countenance the conqueſt of the Rohillas, on the expreſs condition that half of the country ſhould go to his Majeſty. That he, Nezif Cawn, accordingly induced the King to leave Delhi, and diſplay the royal ſtandard; that his Majeſty having however been taken ill, was obliged to relinquiſh his intentions of continuing in the field in perſon, but commiſſioned Nudjiff Khan to repreſent him, and act in his name as if he were preſent; that accordingly Nezif with his army were in full march to join the Vizier when he received the news of the defeat of the Rohillas; that his buſineſs here was to demand the performance of the condition on which the King's troops took the field; that he had ſent for a copy of the agreement, and would not declare his buſineſs to the Vizier until it came.—It was the expectation of being able to ſend down a duplicate of that writing, that made me avoid mentioning this matter in any of my Letters ſince the 5th; but it has not been produced, nor have I had any conference with the Vizier on that head; and I am now to introduce another ſubject.

The Nabob Fazulla Caun, who, with ſome of his people, was in battle on the part of Nezif, and made his retreat good towards the mountains with all his treaſure, which, according to the moſt moderate accounts, is ſaid to amount to 75 lacks of rupees in ready money, has addreſſed me by Letter, offering to throw himſelf upon my protection; accompanied with a meſſage propoſing to pay the Nabob 20 lacks upon being reinſtated in his country, which yields from ſix to eight lacks per annum.

Determined to deal openly with the Vizier, to prevent the leaſt pretence for a breach of his agreement, I went yeſterday morning, and ſignified Fazulla Khan's deſire to him.

His Excellency ſaid he would not give him back a ſpan of his country for a crore of rupees; that he had no objection to my protecting Fuzulla Khan's perſon, but that the treaſure muſt be conſidered as the property of his Excellency independent of the Engliſh; that he would conſider

APPENDIX. No. 27.

conſider of ſending a body of his own army, with ſome of the Company's forces, in purſuit of the fugitive and his riches. I offered him the grenadier corps for that ſervice, but he deſired leave to think of the matter till the afternoon.

Indiſpoſition having rendered it inconvenient for his Excellency to come abroad, I waited on him again in the evening, and was told, that he would think of the ſubject of the morning's converſation till this day.

Upon my reminding him that was my ſecond viſit in one day, and deſiring immediately to know his determination, he was put to the neceſſity of confeſſing that he had already entered into an agreement to detach part of his own troops under Elich Khan with Nejiff Caun and his army to ſeize the Nabob Fazulla and his treaſure; that as they were cavalry, and as the ſervice required the utmoſt expedition, our infantry could not keep up with them, and therefore it would be unneceſſary to ſend any.

Since the defeat of the Rohillas the Nabob has plundered the whole country, inſomuch, that in Peely Beet, Birelly, Ouly, and Biſſouly; he has found jewels and money above and under ground, elephants, camels, horſes, and other effects, to the value, I am confident, of above fifty lacks of rupees, beſides what the individuals of his army have poſſeſſed themſelves of; and if he can lay hold of Fuzulla Khan's treaſure and effects, his acquiſition in ready money, &c. will exceed a crore of rupees.

Theſe are circumſtances which I believe were not foreſeen, Gentlemen, otherwiſe I perſuade myſelf you would have made further conditions with the Vizier, both on account of the Company and of your army.

The expreſs ſtipulation that your troops ſhould ſerve for a certain fixed ſum, has prevented my interfering, but I cannot help thinking it very unjuſtifiable in the Vizier to call in Nejiff Khan's forces to the excluſion of your brave troops, who reduced the Rohillas to the ſtate of non-reſiſtance, and who therefore ought ſurely to have the preference in any ſervice of advantage; certain it is, that Nejiff Khan cannot have been brought into the meaſure but upon condition of ſharing conſiderably of the riches of Fuzulla Khan, and hopes of further plunder in the country.

It is a matter of very great concern to me, Gentlemen, that no proviſion was made for your army in the event which has happened; but I hope, that if you have not already in conſequence of my Letter to the Governor of the 28th ultimo, you will now be pleaſed to intereſt yourſelves on their behalf, for it muſt be extremely diſcouraging to your troops, if they are not attended to on this occaſion.

By their gallantry they have reduced this country, and of courſe gained to the Company half a million of money; they have moreover been the enrichers of Sujah ul Dowlah to an immenſe amount; before their faces he has ſeized theſe riches, and he has not even thanked them for their ſervices.

Theſe matters, Gentlemen, are in my opinion of the utmoſt importance, and deſerve your moſt ſerious conſideration; the good temper and forbearance of your army under ſuch temptation is matter of the greateſt admiration, and a ſource of much ſatisfaction to me; but I muſt confeſs, that I am afraid that if ſome mark of favour and gratification for their ſervices is not manifeſted, it may be dangerous ever to try an experiment of this kind again,, or to put the temper and patience of any part of your troops ſo much to the proof.

Situated as I am, it falls only to my province to ſubmit theſe matters to your wiſdom and deliberation, and I have only at preſent to add, that upon my honour ſelf-intereſt has not dictated a line of this addreſs, to which I have been prompted by a juſt ſenſe of the Vizier's conduct, and a warm regard for troops who have rendered themſelves very dear to me, and whoſe intereſt I ſhall ever ſeek to promote.

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,

A. Champion.

The Select Committee refer a Letter from Colonel Champion.

Extract of the Select Committee's Proceedings, the 2d June 1774.

The Preſident lays before the Board the Letter written to him by Colonel Champion, dated the 28th April, and referred to in the Letter from Colonel Champion to the Board, now referred to them; an extract of one from the Preſident in reply, dated 21ſt May; an extract of another Letter to Colonel Champion, dated the 28th May, written on the occaſion of a repreſentation made by the Vizier upon the ſame ſubject: and he deſires that theſe may be read before the Board enter on the conſideration of the Letter addreſſed to them by the Colonel, as they contain particular matters relative to the claim of prize money, with which it is neceſſary the Board ſhould be acquainted before they can form any general determination upon the ſubject: and as they expreſs in the fulleſt manner the ſenſe entertained of it by the Preſident, as already declared to the Colonel himſelf, he waves for the preſent any further argument upon the demand made by Colonel Champion, but hopes their judgment upon it will be deciſive, and their orders peremptory.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Governor of Fort William.

Laſt night I ſent you a plan of the battle fought by the combined armies againſt the Rohillas, and am now to inform you, that ſince our arrival here this morning a very unexpected circumſtance has happened.

Soon after our coming to this ground, which has only the river between it and the fort of Peelybeet, a report was circulated by ſome of the inhabitants, that there are near four crore of rupees in it. This came to the hearing of the troops, and to me, through Field Officers, with a repreſentation of the propriety of examining into the truth of the report, in duty both to the Company and to the army.

Though I was ſatisfied in my own mind that there could be no ſuch ſum in the place, and was extremely averſe to make any inquiries into the matter; yet, when I reflected, that if it ſhould afterwards prove true that there really was ſo much treaſure in the fort, which fell in conſequence of the victory obtained over the enemy by the force of our arms, I might be ſubject to the cenſure of Government for inattention to their intereſt, as well as to that of their army, I went to the Nabob, and ſignified to him what I had heard, telling him at the ſame time, that if there were lacks of crores in the fort, a rupee ſhould not be taken away by my people; that let the ſum be never ſo great, it ſhould all be delivered to him, under this only condition, of repealing whatever the Adminiſtration and he ſhould determine upon as juſt and equitable.

In conſequence of this converſation, it was agreed to ſend Lieutenant Colonel Leſlie, Major Hannay, and my Secretary, Secretary, and three of the Nabob's principal Gentlemen, into the fort, to take an account of the treaſure which might be found. Having accordingly gone, they found Hafiz Khamet's family in the greateſt miſery; his eldeſt ſon aſſured them there was no money in the fort, excepting a trifle in the Zinana. His ſtory having every appearance of truth, the Gentlemen commiſſioned gave belief to it, and as they very properly held the women's apartments ſacred, they did not make any attempt to ſearch there for treaſure, and returned, with the moſt earneſt entreaties of interceſſion for the unfortunate family of Hafiz.

In this matter you are not to entertain the moſt diſtant ſuſpicion, that any part of our troops were diſpoſed to wanton enormities. The utmoſt requeſt was, that by aſcertaining the treaſure, it might be put in the power of the Board, in caſe of any conſiderable ſum being found, to determine how much the ſervices of theſe forces entitled them to; ſo that you may reſt ſatisfied of the good temper of the army, which I aſſure you gives me the utmoſt heart-felt pleaſure.

I ſhould be glad, however, to know the ſentiments of the Board, how far they may think their troops entitled to any ſhare or conſideration of treaſure, &c. ſhould any thing conſiderable be found during the further progreſs of their conqueſts, either in the field or garriſon.

Extract of a Letter from the honourable the Governor to Colonel Champion; dated May 21ſt, 1774.

"Hitherto every part of your conduct has met with "my moſt entire approbation; but there is one ſubject, "which in ſome meaſure alarms me; the very idea of "prize-money ſuggeſts to my remembrance the former "diſorders which aroſe in our army from this ſource, and "had almoſt proved fatal to it; of this circumſtance you "muſt be ſufficiently appriſed, and of the neceſſity of "diſcouraging every expectation of this kind among the "troops; it is to be avoided like poiſon. However, in "caſe any conſiderable capture ſhould attend your future "operations, I think you cannot purſue a better conduct "than that which you intended; to determine nothing "yourſelf, but acquaint the Board with the circumſtances, "and wait for their deciſion."

Extract of a Letter from the honourable the Governor to Colonel Champion; dated May 28th, 1774.

"I have received a Letter from the Vizier, complaining "of the claim you made to ſearch for treaſure in Peelibeet.

"I have already expreſſed my ſentiments upon the "ſubject of prize-money to the army; the only inſtance "wherein our troops in the preſent ſervice could have "any pretenſions to it, by the cuſtoms of war, would be "in the actual aſſault of a place by ſtorm; in every other "caſe, it is clear that the capture becomes the ſole pro-"perty of the Power carrying on the war. In the inſtance "of Peelibeet, which made no ſort of defence whatever, "but fell, with the whole Rohilla country, into the hands "of the Nabob, in conſequence of the victory, we had no "more right to ſearch or interfere at all in the riches it "contained, than we had to ranſack every defenceleſs "village or houſe in the open country for plunder.

"It is true, that our General obtained that victory, and "our troops bore the brunt of the action; but ſuch was "the tenure of our engagement with the Vizier; in con-"ſideration of which he ſtipulated to pay a certain ſum to "the Company, and to bear the whole expence of the "ſervice. His own argument is unanſwerable on this "ſubject. If we deprive him of the fruits of his conqueſt, "we infringe the agreement upon which the expedition "was ſet on foot; and he has a right, on his ſide, to refuſe "the payment ſtipulated to us, becauſe he depended on "the fruits of his conqueſt to enable him to make that "payment. I muſt here remark, that the particulars of "this tranſaction, as mentioned by the Vizier, bear a very "different appearance from your account of it; and that "where I approved of the conduct you intended to have "purſued, it reſpected only your intention of delivering "up whatever might be taken to the Vizier, and waiting "for the Board's determination.

"With reſpect to Peelibeet, however, and to every "capture in the preſent ſervice, except perhaps in the "caſe of plunder taken in an actual aſſault, the right is "clearly the Nabob's, and will admit of no diſputation. "This is my poſitive deciſion on the ſubject, which muſt "be regarded by you as an inſtruction for your conduct, "until you receive the ſentiments of the Select Com-"mittee, in caſe you ſhould judge it neceſſary to apply "to them on this ſubject."

The Preſident alſo ſubmits to the Board the tranſlation of a Letter from the Vizier to him, giving an account of the claim of the army to the treaſure ſuppoſed to have been in Pellibeet; which is read for the information of the Board, and returned to the Preſident.

Read, the 9th paragraph of the Company's orders in their General Letter of the 24th December 1765, which are as follow:

Extract of a General Letter from the Court of Directors, dated 24th December 1765.

Par. 9. To prevent this diſhonourable practice of ſtipulating for ſervices that are but the duty of a ſoldier's profeſſion, we poſitively forbid all future ſtipulations, by treaty or otherwiſe, with any of the Country Powers, for any donation or gratification for ſervices to be performed. Company's Orders.

Agreed, That a copy of theſe orders be tranſmitted, with the following Letter, to Colonel Champion. Reply to Col. Champion.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

The Letter which you addreſſed us from Biſſouly, of the 16th ultimo, was duly received.

It gives us great concern to find a claim urged by the army, and ſupported by you with no inconſiderable degree of warmth, which we deem equally improper, and at this time ill-founded. We cannot admit of any right in the troops to a ſhare of the treaſures which the Vizier may acquire in the Rohilla country. He is the principal in the war, and to him every acquiſition of right belongs, treaſure and effects, as well as territory. We know, that by the uſage of war, the plunder that falls immediately under the ſoldier's hand, in the ſtorming of any city or camp, is left with them; but we believe, that in no Country or State there is a right acknowledged in the army to any further ſhare of the fruits of conqueſt. There are indeed inſtances where the Sovereign, in particular ſervices, grants a ſhare of the general plunder to the troops, and previouſly ſettles the mode of dividing it; but in this caſe the Vizier made no ſuch grant, nor did we ſtipulate for any ſuch from him.

We obſerve, Sir, that after enumerating the immenſe ſpoils which the Vizier is ſaid to have gathered, you teſtify your belief, that we did not foreſee theſe circumſtances, otherwiſe you are perſuaded we ſhould have made further conditions for the Company and the army in our treaty with him. To this we reply, that we certainly did not foreſee what we cannot even yet give credit to upon the ſtrength of reports, although we find they have been ſuf-ficient for procuring the implicit belief of the army. An inſtance, which we think almoſt demonſtrative of the exaggeration of theſe reports, is that reſpecting Fiezulla Khan: we cannot conceive that this Nabob, from a Country yielding only a yearly revenue of 6 to 8 lacks, which has beſides been the ſeat of war, or in the cloſe neighbourhood of it, for two years paſt, ſhould be able to amaſs a treaſure of 75 lacks in ready money.

But ſtill, were theſe acquiſitions to prove real, and were we to have foreſeen them, we do not know that we could have exacted better terms for the Company: at any rate, reflections of this kind are of no uſe. Arguments introduced in oppoſition to meaſures already decided, can only be conſidered as accuſations; and we doubt not in this inſtance to juſtify ourſelves fully to our Employers.

It is however certain, that in no event, either would we or could we have made any ſtipulation for the army. The bad effects of a ſimilar meaſure were but too plainly felt in a former period, and our honourable Maſters did not fail on that occaſion to reprobate with their cenſure in the moſt ſevere terms, a practice which they regarded as the ſource of infinite evils, and which, if eſtabliſhed, would in their judgment neceſſarily bring corruption and ruin on their army.

This being their opinion on the general practice, they doubtleſs muſt have ſtronger objections to a partial diſtribution among the troops immediately employed, which could not fail of exciting jealouſy in the others, and carry the appearance of injuſtice to them.

Further, Sir, for your more particular information on a ſubject, concerning which it appears you have ſo widely miſunderſtood both our motives and ſentiments, we think proper to communicate to you, as a Member of the Adminiſtration, an extract of the paragraph of the General Letter of 24th December 1765, in which you will find (what it would ſeem you did not ſuſpect) a poſitive prohibition from the Court of Directors againſt all ſuch ſtipulations for the future.

This plan, independent of argument, muſt appear concluſive on the point. You will therefore take the proper method to convey a poſitive and firm declaration to the troops, that they are not to expect any ſhare of the riches acquired by the Vizier in their conqueſt. Indeed, the conſequences which you ſignify to us are to be apprehended from our refuſing this gratification, are ſufficiently alarming; but at the ſame time, were there no other reaſon, the very appearance of ſo dangerous a ſpirit in the troops, would determine us to oppoſe it in the beginning; and we rely on your conduct and firmneſs, and that ſubordination and ſtrict diſcipline which experience has taught us it has been always your pride to maintain, for enforcing, with the ſupport of your ſecond in command, and the other Field Officers, theſe orders, and procuring a complete acquieſcence in them from all the officers and ſoldiers of the army. Indeed we are perſuaded that the general diſpoſition is to obedience, however a few unruly ſpirits or unthinking men may have expreſſed different ſentiments.

We are ſorry to find you imagine the Vizier does not entertain a proper ſenſe of the ſervice of the army in this campaign; although he may not have teſtified it directly to them, we can aſſure you that he has not been wanting in his Letters to the Preſident, in expreſſions of the warmeſt ſort, both as to their behaviour and the ſervices which they have rendered him. It is not in the manners of the Eaſtern Princes to ſignify directly to the troops their ſatisfaction in them; and very probably the rumours which prevailed of the treaſures which he had acquired, prevented the Vizier from expreſſing his ſenſe of it in private converſation, leſt he ſhould raiſe expectations which it was not in his power to gratify.

We conclude with recommending in the warmeſt manner, that you exert yourſelf in bringing the troops to a proper diſpoſition on the ſubject in queſtion; that you diſcourage in future thoſe occaſional reports of riches and treaſure found by the Vizier, which are generally founded on idle rumour, and the cupidity or ſelf-intereſt of individuals, and which can only tend to miſlead the ſoldier into hopes which can never be realized, and inſtil notions into him very incompatible with his duty and profeſſion.

Fort William, We are, with eſteem, &c.
3d June 1774.

The Board juſtify themſelves of the reflection of Colonel Champion.

The Board, in juſtification of their conduct, which ſeems to be reflected upon in the paragraph of Colonel Champion's Letter, where he ſays, "that they muſt not have foreſeen all the advantages reſulting to the Vizier from the conqueſt of the Rohilla country, otherwiſe they would have made further conditions with him, both on account of the Company and of the army;"—think fit to obſerve, that they believe they had every real advantage in ſpeculation which could ariſe from it; but they neither had not, nor have they even at this time, any idea of thoſe immenſe pecuniary acquiſitions which in the imagination of the army Suja Dowla has obtained. The Board are convinced, from a conſideration of the geographical bounds of the Country, the ſmall amount of its revenue, and the circumſtance of its having been the ſeat of war for two years paſt, and of its having been plundered by the Marattas, that no treaſures could exiſt to ſuch extent as Colonel Champion repreſents to have been found by the Vizier, or as he is ſaid to be in purſuit of: they therefore could found no ſtipulations upon ſuch notions: at the ſame time, if the Vizier ſhould have drawn more advantage from the conqueſt than they foreſaw, the Board are happy in thinking it will better enable him to fulfil the engagement under which he is already bound, and give them good grounds for inſiſting on immediate payment.

Ordered that a copy of theſe Proceedings be ſent for the information of the Select Committee.

Read, the following Letter from the Commander in Chief:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, and Council of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

Col. Champion deſires leave to come down.

His Excellency the Nabob Vizier having requeſted that your army may canton at this place till after the enſuing rainy ſeaſon, I have, in compliance with the ſpirit of your inſtructions, aſſented to his deſire, and have ordered cantonments to be erected with all poſſible expedition.

There is not a ſingle enemy in arms throughout all theſe Countries, ſo that the ſervice of the campaign is effectully over. After the rivers ſhall have ſwelled, the army will not be able to act in the field till the beginning of December; and as the ſituation of my affairs very preſſingly urges the neceſſity of my preſence at Calcutta, I am to requeſt you will favour me with your permiſſion to return to the Preſidency, and to commit the charge of the army to Colonel Galliez in my abſence.

Camp at Biſſouly, I have the honour to be, &c.

Granted.

Agreed that Colonel Champion be permitted to return to the Preſidency. The following Letter of licence is therefore written to him:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

Reply to him.

In compliance with your requeſt of the 10th ultimo, you are permitted to return to the Preſidency whenever you think the circumſtances of the campaign, as well as your own convenience, can allow you.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, 15th June 1774.

The Preſident lays before the Committee, extract from the Conſultations in Secret Department of 3d June.

Read, the following Letters from the Commander in Chief, under date the 21ſt and 30th May.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Notwithſtanding what his Excellency the Vizier told me of an actual agreement having taken place between him and Nizif Khan, reſpecting the ſeizure of Feizulla Khan and his treaſure, as mentioned in my Letter to the Board of the 16th, I have diſcovered that none had been concluded: 1ſt, Becauſe Nizif Khan refuſed to undertake that ſervice without my approbation as Commander of the Engliſh army; and 2dly, Becauſe Feizulla Khan has got to ſuch a diſtance and into ſuch a ſituation as rendered it unadviſable ſo late in the ſeaſon to attempt any thing effectual againſt him, eſpecially as Nizif Khan's affairs make it neceſſary for him to haſten to Delhi.

Alla ulat Khan, an old ſervant, and a creature raiſed by the bounty and patronage of Nizif to the office of Prime Miniſter, has inſinuated himſelf into the King's good graces, and turning traitor to his old maſter and benefactor, has been at great pains to impreſs his Majeſty with unfavourable opinions of Nizif Khan, inſomuch that the King ſeems to withdraw his confidence from him.

The chief cauſe of the King's diſſatisfaction at Nizif Khan, is, his refuſal to put Agra and the adjoining Country into his Majeſty's poſſeſſion; for which Nizif gives this reaſon, that his Majeſty had promiſed him a third of the conqueſts he ſhould make to defray the expences of his troops, and as a gratification for his own ſervices; that inſtead of adhering to this engagement, his Majeſty had given grants to his Court minions, and flatterers, of the Countries which Nizif had conquered by his bravery; that his troops had followed him from affection, and the reliance they had on his aſſurance of ſharing part of his acquiſitions amongſt them; and that his Majeſty, having paid no regard to his royal word, had alſo made him (Nizif Khan) too frequently fail in his, till at laſt, in juſtice to his troops and to himſelf, he was under the neceſſity of endeavouring to be his own paymaſter, by retaining poſſeſſion of Agra and the Country of the Jotts.

Since our arrival here, Nizif Khan received the news of a victory obtained by a body of his troops over the Rajah of Jenagur, by which a Country yielding a very large revenue has fallen into his hands.

I know not whether it is that the King is jealous of our intentions in ſupporting the Vizier, in bringing conqueſt ſo near the royal reſidence, or whether it is ſuſpicions of the ſeeming cordiality between Sujah and Nizif, that has laid hold of Shah Allum's mind; but ſo it is, that Nizif Khan intercepted a Letter from his Majeſty, addreſſed for Sumro, inviting him to his ſervice; and there are certain accounts of his having actually arrived at Delhi with three battalions and 18 pieces of cannon.

The King, it is ſaid, has alſo ſent circular Letters to the Maratta Chiefs, the Seiks, and Coſſim Ally, to join his ſtandard, and enter Hindoſtan. Thoſe meaſures, if his Majeſty has really adopted them, do not proceed from any favourable diſpoſition towards us, or to our ally the Vizier.

In conſequence of theſe advices, I have addreſſed me to the King, aſſuring him of our faithful attachment to his Majeſty; and ſignifying to him, that his employing Coſſim Ally Khan and Sumro, whom he knows are extremely odious to his friends, the Engliſh, ſeem to indicate a leſs degree of his royal favour than we hoped his Majeſty entertained for the Company; and that I was confident his diſmiſſing theſe villainous vagabonds from the preſence, would be highly agreeable to the Engliſh, as well as profitable to his Majeſty, ſince they could not fail inſidiouſly to infect his mind with unwholeſome advice.

Nizif Khan apprehending ſome danger to himſelf from the cabals at Court, and being, I really believe, firmly and faithfully attached to the Engliſh, has privately given me his promiſe to uſe every means in his power to overturn theſe intrigues. APPENDIX. No. 27.

I will, ſaid he, for my own ſecurity, endeavour to lay hold of the ungrateful man that has prejudiced my royal maſter againſt me, who am and have been his moſt faithful ſervant, and in fact for ſome time paſt the only ſtaff of his ſupport. As a proof of my gratitude to and friendſhip for the Company, I will alſo uſe every endeavour to ſecure Sumro, and ſend him to you dead or alive.—With theſe aſſurances he has decamped from hence a little way this morning, on the route to Delhi; and as I have placed people about him, I expect to have regular and authentic advices of his proceedings.

The copy of the agreement between the King and the Vizier, for the diviſion of the Rohilla country, has not been ſent down, owing, I preſume, to his Majeſty's diſtruſt of Nizif Khan.

This faithful Chief has not, however, neglected the intereſt of his royal maſter, having managed matters ſo with the Vizier, as that Zabidy Khan accompanies him to Delhi, in order to be preſented to the King.

His Majeſty is already in poſſeſſion of a very large ſhare of this Chief's country, retaken from the Marattas; the Seiks have the reſt, excepting of about five lacks a year, which ſtill remain to Zabidy Khan himſelf. He is at preſent under the King's diſpleaſure; but I am informed it is intended to reſtore him to the royal grace, and confirm him in his dominions, on condition of ſwearing fidelity to the King, and paying a large annual tribute.

Nizif Khan has a numerous army on foot; and as he leads them to battle himſelf, they have confidence in him, which renders them very formidable to the Country Powers. The Marattas are his inveterate enemies, and will no doubt aim at cruſhing him. It is with you, Gentlemen, to conſider how far it may be proper to countenance and ſupport him. In my opinion, his power is very growing; and as I have not the leaſt doubt of the ſincerity of his gratitude and attachment to the Company, I think our connection with him might be improved to the advantage of Government. He is a very proper man to divert the Marattas from approaching too near our frontiers; and if he is ſuffered to remain in quietneſs a year more, he will be fully a match for them.

I have the honour to be,
Camp, Biſſouly, Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen, 21ſt May 1774. Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Since writing the above, I have ſeen the Nabob Nizif Khan, who ſhewed me a Letter, that inſtant received, in his Majeſty's own hand, deſiring his immediate attendance. He is at a loſs to conceive the cauſe of ſuch urgency; but ſuppoſes it may proceed from a diſcovery of ſome ſiniſter views of his ill-adviſers.—Nazif haſtens to his Majeſty.

A. C.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

I have derived much pleaſure from your favour of the 9th current, and in conſequence of your having communicated my Letter of the 24th ultimo to the Board, the army has been honoured with a compliment from them.

Since the 28th April, I have been frequently conſtrained to addreſs the Board, and you, Gentlemen, as well as the Governor, on ſubjects which I conſider of the higheſt importance. I am extremely deſirous of receiving full and explicit anſwers to my Letters, that I may clearly know how to conduct myſelf.

I am, with reſpect,
Camp, Biſſouly, Honourable Sir, and Sirs, 30th May 1774. Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Agreed,

APPENDIX. No. 27.

Agreed, That the following reply be made to him:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Presidency.

Sir,

We have duly received your Letters of the 14th, 21ſt, and 30th May.

To the queſtion repeated and explained in your Letter of the 14th, it is become almoſt unneceſſary at this time to reply, for the purpoſe of inſtructing you on the meaſures which you ſhould purſue in caſe of the event which you ſuppoſe, as the army muſt of courſe remain in its preſent quarters until the ſeaſon of the year ſhall favour its return within our own frontier. Nevertheleſs, to obviate even the poſſibility of ſuch an event happening at a period in which you may be in doubt, from the inſtructions before you, what conduct it may be proper for you to obſerve, we think it expedient to inform you, that it is our intention invariably to perſevere in the proſecution of the deſign on which we originally engaged in the preſent war, to the term of its accompliſhment; it being our wiſh, and conſiſtent with the intereſt of our Employers, that our engagements with the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah may be continued ſucceſſively without alteration, to the perſons of his lawful ſucceſſors, as we hope their intereſt will ever prompt them to ſeek and to merit the alliance of the Britiſh nation. We therefore direct, that notwithſtanding any changes of circumſtances which may happen, you ſteadily perſevere in the line which we have already laid down for your conduct, until you receive our future orders, or thoſe of the Board to the contrary.

Although we do not think ourſelves qualified to judge of the differences which have ariſen between the two Miniſters of the King, we ſee no ill conſequences likely to befal our affairs from any attempts of Niziſ Cawn to leſſen the power or influence of his rival Abdul Ahed Cawn.

We are at a loſs to account for the concern which the Vizier ſeems to have taken in theſe quarrels, which may perhaps be better explained by the tenor of his engagements with Niziff Cawn, for the participation which you inform us he has made with that Chief, or with the King, of the territory of the Rohillas. We approve of the countenance which you have ſhewn to Niziff Cawn, but need not caution you againſt affording him any aid of our forces for the execution of his deſigns.

We are, Sir,

Fort William, the 15th June 1774. Your moſt obedient, humble Servants.

The Preſident alſo lays before the Committee, the following Letters from Colonel Champion, and the Reſident of the Vizier's Court, addreſſed to him.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident of the Council, and Governor of Fort William.

Sir,

Under date the 21ſt inſtant I acquainted the Select Committee, that the Vizier had not carried any plan for the ſeizure of Fuzullah Khan into execution.

Since that time I received general propoſitions from him, to throw himſelf upon the faith and protection of the Engliſh; when I communicated this information to the Nabob, he propoſed that I ſhould ſend off a detachment to lay hold of Fuzullah Cawn.

I reminded his Excellency of the tender made to him on the 15th, of the grenadier corps for this ſervice, and obſerved to him that I was ſorry he did reject it, becauſe it is now become too late in the ſeaſon to ſend troops to ſo great a diſtance, eſpecially as there are five rivers, and three of them pretty large, between this place and the poſt which Fuzullah Khan has taken up; that even ſuppoſing the troops ſhould come up with him there, it is more than probable the communication with the brigade would be cut off by the ſwelling of the rivers, before the detachment could perform the ſervice; that the preſervation of our troops was my firſt care, and that therefore I could not under theſe circumſtances think of detaching any part of the army into a country ſo totally unknown to us.

In conſequence of this converſation, his Excellency iſſued a Perwannah for Fuzullah Khan, with his family and attendants, &c. coming to my camp unmoleſted, and at the ſame time wrote a Letter, offering him the country lately conquered in the Douab, on the condition of his paying a Nizeranna of twenty lacks of rupees.

Theſe papers were diſpatched yeſterday morning, and about noon Abdurryin Khan, Khanſumma to Fuzullah Khan, came very unexpectedly to this place with a few attendants, and a Letter for you, one for me, and one to my Secretary, of which I ſend you a copy.

The Letters opened here deſcend to no particulars, but Abdurryin Khan, who was fully authorized on the part of his maſter, has made the following propoſitions:

1ſt. To pay the Company eighty lacks of rupees, if they will put him in poſſeſſion of all the Rohilla country, excluſive of Zabadee Khan's; this ſum to be paid in three years, and Fuzullah Khan's ſon to be given as an hoſtage, till the money is paid, or he will give a ſubſidy of 30 lacks per annum.

2d. If the firſt propoſition is not agreeable to the Engliſh, let them put the Vizier in their place, and engage for his faith; in that caſe Fuzullah will pay the eighty lacks to the Vizier in three years, and put his ſon into the hands of the Engliſh till the eighty lacks are paid to the Nabob.

3d. Or he will pay the Nabob ſix annas in the rupee, or, at his Excellency's option, thirty lacks annually, and give the Company twenty-five lacks, if they will influence the Nabob to put him in poſſeſſion of the country and guarantee the Treaty; the twenty-five lacks to be paid, ten lacks in hand, five in two months after the agreement, and the remaining ten in two months more; and in either of theſe caſes he will have fifteen thouſand men ready to join the Engliſh and Vizier on all occaſions.

Theſe propoſitions, excepting the offers made to the Company independant of the Nabob, have been mentioned to him, and he has rejected them all with the greateſt diſdain.

I am ſorry for it, becauſe I cannot help thinking his Excellency much out in his politics, for in my own mind it is perfectly clear that he will not be able to maintain poſſeſſion of this country.

Above a lack of people have deſerted their abodes in conſequence of the defeat of Hafez; they will ever ſeek for an opportunity of returning; ſixty or ſeventy thouſand of them, though few of them in arms, are with Fuzulla Khan, in a place ſurrounded by a jungle, and almoſt inacceſſible, as our own Intelligencers teſtify; there is not therefore the leaſt doubt of his remaining undiſturbed till the next campaign, nor will the Nabob even then venture to ſend his own army without ours.

It is ſaid the Seiks have offered to join Fuzulla with forty thouſand fighting men, to invade the Vizier's country after the rains; and if it ſhould ſo happen that our army is called away either to our own dominions, or for the protection of the Nabob from the Marattas, there cannot be the leaſt doubt that he will loſe this country without a blow.

It is very certain that the Vizier's own ſubjects were ripe for plunder and rapine in his own country, and that nothing but the ſeaſonable accounts of the defeat of Hafez prevented their being in arms. This being the caſe, it is unqueſtionable that unleſs the Vizier has at leaſt a brigade of our troops always with him he cannot poſſibly ſtand his ground.

It appears to me, that the Nabob relies too much upon a belief that he may keep the brigade as long as he pleaſes; and I am perſuaded his rejecting all the propoſals which have been made proceeds from a confidence that there is no chance of the troops being recalled.

Fuzulla

Fuzulla Khan ſends notice that he has for the preſent refuſed to have any connection with the Seiks, from a deſire of being reconciled to the Nabob, and ſtill a more earneſt wiſh of being under the wings of our protection.

I have laid his offers before you in the ſame plain language in which they have been delivered to me; and I ſhall be extremely glad if, upon due conſideration of them, any means can be deviſed by which the public good may be promoted. I wiſh for nothing ſo much, as that ſome meaſure may be adopted that will ſtrike all the Powers of the Eaſt with admiration of our juſtice in contraſt to the Vizier's conduct.

And I think, if ſo brave and daring a people as the Afghans and Neziff Khan were to be of the ſame intereſt with the Engliſh and the Vizier, the Marattas, and all the other Powers they could call to their aid, could not preſume to cope with them.

As to the Doaub, I am aſſured Fuzulla Khan will not accept of it; at all rates I ſhall avoid having any concern in the diſpoſal of it to him, for the reaſons laid down in the 5th paragraph of the Board's Inſtructions.

I remain, reſpectfully,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Camp, Biſſouly,

Aldurryin Khan has deſired leave to remain here till a reply to this addreſs ſhall arrive.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

In conformity to your general commands I took the liberty a few days ago to remind the Vizier of the approach of the period which would bring his Excellency indebted to the Honourable Company a further ſum of 15 lacks of rupees, on account of the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad by the laſt Treaty of Benares He ſuggeſted various expedients for accumulating a fund to enable him to anſwer this claim upon him, but none which appeared ſo plauſible or certain as a journey to Fyzabad; which, with your approbation, he is determined to undertake towards the cloſe of the rains, accompanied only by ſuch part of his troops as may be neceſſary to form his body guard, leaving the remainder under the conduct of his ſons, with the brigade in cantonments until his return.

This propoſal appearing to me by far the moſt eligible, and probably the only certain means he has of commanding to conſiderable a ſum independent of the neceſſary proviſion for the monthly diſburſement of his own and our troops, I did not heſitate to concur in ſentiments with his Excellency upon this meaſure, and even to encourage its adoption. The only objection to it which ſtruck me with any degree of force, was the poſſibility that his abſence might endanger the regularity of the monthly ſupplies to our brigade; and this I did not omit to intimate to his Excellency. Having however received from him the ſtrongeſt aſſurances that an ample and certain fund, either out of the collections of this country or by impoſts from his own Soubah, ſhould be eſtabliſhed for that purpoſe previous to his departure, I ventured to add to my own acquieſcence the ſanction of your approbation. His Excellency in conſequence now addreſſes you on the ſubject, and is making ſome preparations for his journey; not however with an intention to determine finally upon it, or publicly to make known his deſign, until he is favoured with your reply.

The Nabob ſeeming to apprehend that his unexpected return to his capital may poſſibly give riſe to ſome doubts in the breaſt of the Commander in Chief as to the diſpoſition of the brigade during his abſence, urged the expediency of additional inſtructions to Colonel Champion, requiring him to continue the troops in cantonments at Biſſouly until his Excellency rejoins the army, which he means to do at leaſt as ſoon as the ſeaſon will admit of its again taking the field. In reply to this requiſition I could only recommend to the Nabob to ſignify his wiſhes to you, and that you would of courſe adopt ſuch meaſures as might ſeem neceſſary to obviate miſunderſtanding or ſubject of doubt during his abſence.

Beſides his Excellency's Letter on the above ſubject, I encloſe one from him relative to ſome important information, at leaſt ſo it is conſidered by him, which he has received from the Court of Delbi. On this I ſhall take the liberty to offer a few remarks in a future addreſs.

I have the honour to ſubſcribe myſelf,
with the utmoſt reſpect,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
Nath. Middleton.

Biſſoulee,
the 19th May 1774.

The Preſident further informs the Committee, that in reply to Mr. Middleton's Letter of the 19th May, and the Vizier's Letter which accompanied it, he expreſſed his entire acquieſcence in the propoſal of the Vizier, to return to Fayzabad, as he was certainly the maſter of his own actions in a point of this nature, which could no way interfere with his engagements to us; recommending only, in earneſt terms, the neceſſity of his ready return for the purpoſe of taking the field, without loſs of time, on the concluſion of the rains; and that agreeably to the deſire expreſſed by the Vizier, he has written alſo to Colonel Champion, to obviate any miſconſtruction of the Vizier's intentions in this meaſure.

The Committee having thoroughly conſidered the propoſitions ſtated in the Letter from the Commander in Chief to the Preſident, dated the 28th ult°. and unanimouſly agreeing in opinion, that they cannot be accepted conſiſtently with our engagements with the Vizier, or the general deſign on which the preſent expedition was undertaken, the Preſident replied to it accordingly in the following Letter, which was previouſly ſubmitted to the Committee for their approbation and concurrence.

To Colonel Alexander Champion.

Sir,

I am now to reply to your Letter, dated the 28th of May. The following are my ſentiments on the propoſitions which have been made to you by Abduran Cawn, on the part of Fuzulla Cawn.

The firſt is not to be liſtened to. It would be a direct violation of our Treaty with the Vizier.

The ſecond muſt depend ſolely upon the Vizier; and if it is not agreeable to him, we could neither compel nor inſiſt upon his acceding to it.

The third is exactly the ſame with the ſecond, with the difference only of offering money to the Company for influencing the Vizier; for which reaſon I would of the two prefer the ſecond to the third, becauſe ſuch an agreement muſt become public, and a conduct of this kind would breed perpetual diſtruſt in the Vizier, againſt every future advice which we ſhould give him.

Theſe are my particular objections to the ſeveral propoſitions. But I have one general objection to the whole of them, which is, that they are diametrically oppoſite to the principle on which the Rohilla expedition was on our part undertaken, which was not merely on account of the pecuniary acquiſition of 40 lacks of rupees to the Company; for although this might have been an acceſſary agreement, it was by no means the chief object of the undertaking. We engaged to aſſiſt the Vizier in reducing the Rohilla country under his dominions, that the boundary of his poſſeſſions might be completed by the Ganges forming a barrier to cover them from the attack and inſults to which they were expoſed, by his enemies either poſſeſſing or having acceſs to the Rohilla country. This our alliance with him, and the neceſſity of maintaining this alliance ſo long as he and his ſucceſſors ſhall deſerve our protection, rendered advantageous to the Company's intereſt; becauſe the ſecurity of his poſſeſſions from invaſions in that quarter, is in fact the security of ours. But if the Rohillas country is delivered to Fazulla Khan, the advantages proposed from this measure will be totally defeated. The same objections from the Vizier will take place against him, as against Hafez Rhamet; he will be actuated by the same principles of self-defence, and the same impressions of fear, to seek the protection of other Powers against the Vizier, and of course will create the same jealousies and suspicions in the mind of the Vizier; with the additional and strong incentive to a mutual animosity, of an enormous debt, which probably Fazulla Khan will find no other means to get clear of, but by engaging in hostilities against the Vizier.

I cannot subscribe to your opinion, of the Vizier's being unable to maintain possession of the conquered country. It is at least certain, that there is a much greater probability of his maintaining possession of it, supported by the resources of his hereditary dominions, and the credit of the English protection, even without our actual intervention, than that Fazulla Khan should maintain the possession of it; a man of no repute, without natural power or interest, and unprovided with every means of self-defence. The Board undertook the Rohilla expedition on a firm conviction both that the Vizier would be able to maintain his conquest of it, and that it would make his other dominions more defensible. For the reasons before assigned, and with respect to myself, I declare, that if I had not been morally certain of the justness of this reasoning, I would not have consented to enter upon the enterprize at all. Upon the whole, my opinion is, that instead of soliciting the Vizier to relinquish his conquest to Fazulla Khan, every argument should be used to dissuade him from such an intention; and it is my desire you will discourage it as much as is in your power. I make no doubt but, from the explanation I have given, you will be convinced, both of the propriety of adhering to the principles laid down, and the necessity of acting with consistency. Excuse me for adding, that if we suffer our attention to be drawn off from our grand and principal design, by every adventitious allurement that may present itself, our conduct must prove desultory; and we can adhere to no regular plan, nor propose any certain end to our pursuits.

You mention the necessity the Vizier will be under, of constantly having a brigade of our troops with him, as an argument against his retaining the Rohilla country, which you have repeated in several of your Letters. But I should be sorry to regard this circumstance in that light. It has always been my wish, it was a principal reason assigned by the Board to the Court of Directors for our joint undertaking with the Vizier, that a third part of our army should constantly be employed in his country, because it would keep them from losing discipline and vigour by inaction, would prove an encouragement to the officers and soldiers, would save the Company a considerable expence, and perpetuate the dependance of the Vizier upon our alliance. This circumstance therefore cannot operate as an objection, since it is a principal advantage proposed by the Administration to result from the measures they have adopted. If it could have had any weight against the extension of the Vizier's territory, it would have prevented the undertaking entirely, and precluded you from the present command, and the honour you have acquired in it. I cannot suppose, that you mean the reasoning which you have at present adopted on this subject, as a reproach to the Board for having formed a design which, by your argument, must defeat itself, even with all the success that could attend it; but it is astonishing that this consideration should have escaped you, since, by the frequent recitation of this argument, you have undoubtedly been casting the severest reflections on the measures of Government, which, right or wrong, we must now maintain, and which I still think founded on the soundest policy; and I trust the event will prove them so.

The Seiks are at present at too great a distance, and too much engaged in their own affairs, to give any material or lasting opposition to the Vizier; nor are the Marattas likely to get freed from their own internal divisions, or the effects of them, soon enough to renew their pretensions in the next season. But even, although the reason for expecting a junction of the Seiks and Marattas with Fazulla Khan were well founded, neither this alarm on the one hand, nor the temptation of the eighty lacks on the other, ought to have a moment's influence with us to deviate from the line prescribed for the undertaking.

With respect to Fazul'a Cawn, he appears not to merit our consideration. The petty sovereign of a country estimated at 6 or 8 lacks, ought not for a moment to prove an impediment to any of our measures, or to affect the consistency of our conduct. I own it was my original wish, that the King, or Nidjiff Cawn on his part, should have been included in the participation which has actually taken place of the Rohilla dominions, as it would quicken the issue of the war, obviate one source of competition, and still keep the connection of interest between us and the King, and between the King and his Vizier, might be induced to accede to a new participation, by an exchange of the Duab, to be given to the King in lieu of the territory of Zabitah Cawn. If my memory does not deceive me, this plan was recommended by me to the Vizier in person, when the Rohilla expedition was first concerted at Benares; and I own I wish it to take place. This, you will observe, is but a consequence of the original principle of completing the boundary of the Vizier's dominions.

This Letter has been communicated to the Members of the Select Committee; and I am authorized by them to declare their concurrence with the sentiments expressed in it.

I am, Sir, &c.

Read, the following Letter from Colonel Champion.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President, and Council, of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

I am favoured with your Letter of the 9th instant; and I have strewed the laurels before your troops with the same liberality and munificence you so justly bestowed them.

I deem myself much honoured in so ample a testimony of approbation; and,

Camp, Bissouly, I remain, with respect, &c.

Bengal Secret Consultations, 1st July 1774.—Present, the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire. William Aldersey, and Philip Milner Dacres, esquires.

Read, the following Letters from Colonel Champion, under dates the 9th and 11th June; that of the 11th, enclosing translations of two Letters from the wife of Hafiz Rhamet, and a representation from Mahebullah Khan and Futtulah Khan, son to the late Doondy Khan.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I am honoured with a Letter from the Board, under date the 23d past; and in reply thereto I am now to address myself to you.

With regard, Gentlemen, to the option of refusing compliance with the Vizier's requisitions, when they shall ſhall be ſuch as may endanger the troops or leave them at his mercy, which ſeems to be the import of the Board's Letter, I cannot, with ſubmiſſion, regard this as any extenſion of power to me, becauſe it is an authority inherent in, and which I have always conſidered as ablolutely inſeparable from my command.

My Letter therefore of the 4th was not an application for authority to prevent the Vizier's expoſing the army to the riſk of deſtruction at his pleaſure, but that he might be diſempowered from even ſubjecting them to any the leaſt unneceſſary hardſhips or diſtreſs; and moreover, that I might be inveſted with full authority effectually to prevent his perpetrating any enormity under the ſhield of our force, that could in any degree redound to the diſcredit of our reputation.

Bereily would have unqueſtionably been a much more eligible ſituation for the troops than this place, and though I ſhould therefore have been extremely glad to have remained there, yet as we are in daily expectations of the rains breaking upon us, and as the cantonments are now ready, I think it unadviſable to move from hence without an indiſpenſable neceſſity, which I hope will be obviated by the precautions which have been taken.

With regard to the conqueſt of Zabidy Khan's country, I am very glad that ſuch explicit inſtructions have been given; for I muſt confeſs that if the Treaty (which I have reaſon to believe does exiſt) had been preſented, I would probably, circumſtanced as I was, have ſtayed operations till I ſhould have received ſuch orders as the Board have now ſent; more eſpecially after information of the circumſtances mentioned in my Letter of the 21ſt paſt, to the Governor, of the King's having been in poſſeſſion of great part of that country a conſiderable time ago; and my reaſon for bringing that part of the Treaty with the Vizier for half the Rohilla country, under review, was, that I thought it not impoſſible that clauſe might be laid hold of rather than commence hoſtilities againſt his Majeſty, ſince the 40 lacks were already indiſputably due, one of the alternatives in which it was ſtipulated being duly fulfilled.

In compliance with the Board's deſire I am now to mention a very unpleaſing ſubject, the Vizier's treatment of the family of Hafez Ramut, &c.; the inhumanity and diſhonour with which Mihebullah Khan his brother, Fittiullah Khan, late proprietors of this city and country, and their families, have been uſed, is known over all theſe parts; a relation of them would ſwell this Letter to an immenſe ſize, and withal prove very diſagreeable reading. I ſend you tranſlation of two Letters and copy of the third, which, affecting as they are, will convey but a faint idea of the treatment theſe unhappy people have met with.

I could not help compaſſionating ſuch unparalleled miſery; and my requeſts to the Vizier to ſhew lenity were frequent, but as fruitleſs as were thoſe advices which I almoſt hourly gave him, regarding the deſtruction of the villages, with reſpect to which I am now conſtrained to declare, that though he always promiſed as fairly as I could wiſh, yet he did not obſerve one of them, nor ceaſe to overſpread the country with flames till three days after the fate of Hafiz Rhamet was decided; but, Gentlemen, "as in all points excepting ſuch as "immediately reſpect the operations in the field, he is "ſolely impowered to preſcribe," the reputation of the Britiſh name is in his hands, and the line which has been laid down for me is very clear.

The above families have been diſpatched to Fyzabad, that their mal-treatment might not be ſo generally known to us; I have however frequent accounts of them, and it will give me the moſt ſenſible pleaſure, that you ſtretch forth the hand of benevolence effectually to relieve them from ſo undeſcribable a miſery; and that you may the better deviſe the means of ſo doing, without ſubjecting them to greater misfortunes, I am to inform you, that every application of mine in their favour, though profeſſedly taken in good part by the Vizier, yet only ſerved to procure them more rigorous treatment. APPEND X. No. 27.

I ſhall, without loſs of time, make the demand for the 40 lacks, ſtipulated by his Excellency for the ſervices which your troops have performed, and commit the future management of that buſineſs to the Reſident, to whom I ſhall be always ready to lend my advice and ſupport.

Hitherto I have only been able, with Middleton's aſſiſtance, to obtain two months ſubſidy for the troops, ſo that the Nabob is now near two months in arrears; but I am unwilling to countermarch the troops, leſt I might be taxed with too great precipitancy, eſpecially as he has faithfully promiſed to pay off the arrears.

I remain, with great reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
Camp, 12th June 1774. humble ſervant,

Tranſlation of a Letter from a Wife of the late Hafez Rhamet Khan to Colonel Champion.

The Engliſh Gentlemen, renowned through Hindoſtan for juſtice, for equity, and compaſſionating the miſerable. Hafez Rhamet Khan for forty years governed this country, and the very beaſts of the foreſts trembled at his bravery. The will of God is reſiſtleſs: he is ſlain, and to his children not an atom remains, but they are caſt from their habitations, naked, expoſed to the winds, the heats, and the burning ſand, and periſhing for want of even rice and water. How ſhall I either write or ſpeak my condition? my ſighs dry my ink and ſcorch my paper. 'Tis evident, as the Sun, the Engliſh are brave, and merciful, and whoſoever they ſuccour, their children they preſerve, who forget their ſorrows by the kind treatment they receive; nor draw they the ſword in an unjuſt cauſe. Yeſterday I was miſtreſs of an hundred thouſand people—To-day I am in want even of a cup of water, and where I commanded I am a priſoner. Fortune is fickle, ſhe raiſes the humble and lowers the exalted; but I am innocent, and if any one is guilty, it is Hafez. But why ſhould the children be puniſhed for the errors of their father? I am taken like a beaſt in a ſnare, without reſting place by night or ſhade by day. From you, Sir, I hope juſtice and compaſſion, for I am as a bird confined in a cage; 'tis better to give up life by the dagger than famiſh thus by hunger and thirſt. You, I hope, Sir, will reflect on my ſtate, or my misfortunes will be doubled. I have nothing left. Pardon this paper.

Tranſlation of a Repreſentation from Mahubulah Khan and Futty Ullah Khan, ſons of the late Doonde Khan, to Colonel Champion, Commander in Chief; received the 3d June 1774.

Your Petitioners, in conſequence of Letters from the Nawab Vizier, remained in this country; for he being Lord, regarding his promiſes we ſhould be benefitted, otherwiſe we ſhould have fled, as the other Chiefs did, and have preſerved our characters and honours; theſe he has taken away with our effects, and how he has diſhonoured us is known to all. Now with our wives and families we are confined and ſent away to Fayzabad; thoſe who have fled have carried their lives and reputations with them, while we who remained here on the Nawab's promiſes, have loſt both. Therefore we addreſs you, that you who fear God, will for his ſake releaſe our families and ſelves from the confinement, and place us in your own ſervice, and by the favour of God our whole lives ſhall be ſpent in your ſervitude; your name alſo will be renowned, and it will be a ſingular juſtice that you have ſet us free. The Nawab knows not of our writing; perhaps regarding our condition, what you think juſt for us, will from your favour be ordained.

APPENDIX. No. 27.

The Preſident informs the Committee, that on the firſt mention made by Colonel Champion, of the cruelties exerciſed by the Vizier upon the family of Hafez Rhamet, he ſent Inſtructions to the Reſident, of which he begs leave to record the following copy, which he flatters himſelf the Committee will judge to have been the moſt likely to prove effectual for the relief of their diſtreſs, and the only means which on ſuch occaſion he could have taken to have influenced the Vizier to a more generous conduct.

Extract of a Letter from the Preſident to Mr. Nathaniel Middleton; dated 27th May 1774.

Colonel Champion complains of the conduct of the Vizier, in ſuffering, and even in ordering his troops to ravage the country, and in his cruel treatment of the family of Hafez Rhamet. This is a ſubject on which I cannot write to the Vizier; it might widen the breach between him and the Commander in Chief, and poſſibly influence the Nabob to ſome private revenge on the unhappy remains of Hafez Rhamet's family. I deſire therefore that you will take an immediate occaſion to remonſtrate to him againſt every act of cruelty or wanton violence: the country is his, and the people his ſubjects; they claim by that relation his tendereſt regard and unremitted protection.

The family of Hafez have never injured him, but have a claim to his protection, in default of that of which he has deprived them; tell him that the Engliſh manners are abhorrent of every ſpecies of inhumanity and oppreſſion, and enjoin the gentleſt treatment of a vanquiſhed enemy; require and entreat his obſervance of this principle towards the family of Hafez; tell him my Inſtructions to you generally, but urgently enforce the ſame maxim, and that there is no part of his conduct will operate ſo powerfully in winning the affections of the Engliſh, as inſtances of benevolence and feeling for others. If theſe arguments do not prevail, you may inform him directly that you have my orders to inſiſt on a proper treatment of the family of Hafez Rhamet, ſince in our alliance with him the reputation of our national character is involved in every act which ſubjects his own to reproach; that I ſhall publicly exculpate this Government from the imputation of aſſenting to ſuch a procedure, and ſhall reſerve it as an objection to any future engagements with him, when the preſent ſervice ſhall have been accompliſhed.

Agreed, we write him as follows:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your favour of the 9th and 11th ultimo, ſince we wrote you laſt.

With regard to Meer Fette Ali Cawn, ſaid to be ſon of the Nabob Sadoc Ali Cawn, we deſire that he may be ſuffered to remain in your camp until you may receive further orders concerning him, with an allowance of rupees 200 per month, which you are hereby authorized to pay him, and in the meantime, we recommend that you make the proper inquiries for aſcertaining his identity as being the ſon of Sadoc Aly.

We obſerve what you write on the ſubject of the Inſtructions, conveyed to you in a Letter from the Board of the 23d May; and in reply, we will venture to ſay, without ſtopping to examine what are the powers inherent in your command, that it was not ſo much the intention of the Board to alter or extend thoſe they formerly granted to you, as to intruſt you on the points concerning which, in your Letter of the 4th, you requeſted their ſpecial direction; which they have accordingly given in the moſt diſtinct and explicit manner, both in the particular caſes ſpecified by you, and by deſcribing the general circumſtances on which they were willing to allow you a latitude to deviate from the line laid down by your Inſtructions. Had they underſtood your Letter to contain an application for ſuch powers as you have explained in your laſt, they could not have heſitated an inſtant to deny their aſſent. So abſolute a controul over the actions of the Vizier, we conceive, does not reſide in the Adminiſtration itſelf, much leſs can it be delegated to the commander of the army. A full authority effectually to prevent his perpetrating any enormity under the ſhield of our force, would have been in fact to have rendered him ſubject to that force, and to the perſon who directed it, and we ſhould have become his maſters inſtead of his allies. The Commander in Chief, in ſuch a ſituation, would alſo become the arbiter of peace and war with the Vizier; ſince a caſe might occur where force alone could turn the latter aſide from ſome favourite project, of which the other diſapproved, and his power would leave him at liberty to employ it. At preſent we ſtand thus with the Vizier; we have engaged to ſupport and aſſiſt him in a ſpecific ſervice, and ſtipulated for a certain compenſation to the Company; when that ſervice ſhall be performed, the conquered country, its riches, and inhabitants, and all other acquiſitions, muſt be at his diſpoſal, nor have we a right by our agreement to interfere; if indeed it ſhould happen, that elevated by ſucceſs, and ſecure under our protection, he ſhould in the exerciſe of his authority commit ſuch enormities as we ſhould deem unworthy of the character of our ally, we would then not fail in that caſe to remonſtrate againſt them, and take ſuch other ſteps as ſhould appear beſt adapted for bringing him to a more juſt ſenſe of propriety in his conduct; but we ſhould not eſteem ourſelves either obliged or entitled to interfere with authority, or to put power into the hands of our Commander in Chief effectually to prevent any meaſure in the management of his own affairs, which he ſhould think fit to purſue.

After this plain expoſition of our ſentiments reſpecting your ſituation with the Vizier, together with the Inſtructions, both general and particular, which you already poſſeſs, we flatter ourſelves, that few circumſtances will occur hereafter wherein a more immediate reference to us will be wanting for the rule of your conduct. However, when ſuch happens, we ſhall be ready to afford whatever further explanation you may deem neceſſary.

The intemperate and tyrannical conduct of the Vizier after his conqueſts, as you have repreſented, cannot fail to prove highly diſſatisfactory to us; and although we do not regard ourſelves either as anſwerable for his actions, or obliged abſolutely to interfere for reſtraining them; yet we ſhould have been glad to have been furniſhed with ſuch materials as would enable us, upon good grounds, to expoſtulate with him on the injuſtice and impropriety of ſuch a conduct. It was in this view that we requeſted you to acquaint us with the inſtances of his cruelties; but we confeſs ourſelves exceedingly diſappointed in receiving, inſtead of a preciſe account of facts, only three Letters of looſe declamation, which, however pathetically written, contain not one ſingle inſtance of the Vizier's particular cruelty towards the family of Hafez, and indeed expreſs only ſuch ſentiments as we can eaſily conceive to exiſt in the breaſts of that unfortunate family, from reflecting on the ſad reverſe of their fortune alone, without ſuppoſing any peculiar hardſhip in their caſe, or uncommon act of oppreſſion in the Vizier; for this reaſon, we repeat our deſire to be furniſhed with a particular account of the treatment which the family of Hafez Rhamet has received, and we ſhall then take ſuch ſteps for their relief as the circumſtances ſhall require. In the meantime, we hope that the remonſtrances which the Preſident informs us he has directed the Reſident to make to the Vizier on this ſubject, will be ſufficient to render any more direct interpoſition needleſs.

We conclude with taking notice of an expreſſion in your Letter, which, in our judgment, conveys a reflection equally improper and unjuſt. It is that in which you

you say "the reputation of the British name is in the "hands of the Vizier." If this were the case, we who put it into his hands, would undoubtedly stand responsible to our Country and Employers for the wanton prostitution of so precious a trust. But we do not agree that we have in any shape left the national honour at his disposal, or that the British name can be affected by any of his actions, independant of us. Our engagements with the Vizier are clearly defined, and such as we can justify on principles of sound policy and attention to the Company's interest. We afford him our assistance; our honour we commit into no hands but yours: where we trust it is perfectly safe; and that by your conduct in the field, and by maintaining order and discipline among the troops, the British name will acquire new lustre, and the campaign be the means of spreading more wide our national reputation, unconnected with that of the Vizier.

We further must observe on this head, that if the British honour is in the present case in any manner committed, it must be from the Treaty itself, and not from the subsequent operations in execution of it. It then would have been more candid, as it would certainly have been more likely to prove effectual, if you, who, as a Member of the Board, had full communication of the purport and extent of our engagement with the Vizier, had started that reflection before you undertook the conduct of a business so likely to bring disgrace on our name; a consequence which, we believe, never entered into the imagination of any Member of the Board at the time; nor can we now see any cause to apprehend it.

We are, Sir,
Yours, &c.

Extract of Bengal Select Consultations, 14th July 1774. — Present, the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President. William Aldersey, and Philip Milner Dacres, esquires.

Read, the following Letters from Colonel Champion, dated the 16th, 17th, 20th, and 24th June, with their several Enclosures.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esq. President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have the honour to enclose you translation of a Letter received from his Excellency the Vizier, in consequence of my application to him for the 40 lacks due to the Company for the conquest of this country by your troops.

I am, with respect,
Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
humble servant,
A. Champion.

Camp,
16th June 1774.

Extract of a Letter from the Nawal Vizier to Colonel Champion, Commander in Chief.

In this business of the Rohillas, previous to the present time, I conferred with Mr. Hastings, and agreeably to what was agreed on between us, and what was written on the subject I will act. For payment of the aforesaid money promised, I am ready and prepared, and the said sum due is now in my charge, whenever the English troops shall completely and entirely have perfected my affairs, and I shall think proper to dismiss them; then when I dismiss them, the sum of forty lacks of rupees, agreeably to my former engagement, shall be paid.

R. E. Roberts,
Persian Interpreter.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Herewith I transmit you copy of Shah Allum's answer to the address preferred by me to his Majesty, as mentioned in my Letter to you of the 21st May: with it be pleased also to receive copy of the engagement entered into with his Majesty relative to the conquest of this country, which Treaty is said to be written on a leaf of the Koran, and likewise duplicate of a Letter from Nizif Khan to Sumro.

The Postscript to the Royal Letter is written by his Majesty himself.

I have to observe to you, that in my address to the King I made no mention of any transactions between him and the Vizier, directly or indirectly.

At present I construe Nizif Khan's Letter as a snare for Sumro, from the extreme anxiety which runs through it; or perhaps it owes its origin altogether to the machinations of Abdulaid Cawn; for this very day I had some proof of Nizif Khan's fidelity, in sending to camp one of the men who deserted from us.

I am, with respect,
Gentlemen,
Your most obedient
humble servant,
A. Champion.

Camp, Bessouly,

Extract of a Letter from the King to Colonel Champion.

As we imagined that the correspondence so long carried on by Zoolfucca ul Dowlah with Sumro, was by your approbation and consent; and it happening that our brother, dearer than life, the Vizier, was employed in bringing Hafiz Ramet Cawn to punishment, and that we have also given permission to our well-beloved Zoolfucca Dowlah to join him in this expedition, and the disturbances amongst the Sheiks was come to such a height that they ravaged the environs of the city, and had for seven or eight months placed Tannahs of their own in the Purgunnahs belonging to our Khalsa, and plundered and burnt Shahuddura, with a view to the expediency of the times, which rendered the punishment of the Seiks necessary, and also the separation of Sumro from Noie Sing, and that he might not join with the enemies of the empire, such as the Marattas, Seiks, and other rebels, we determined for the present to grant Sumro a pardon, and send him to punish the Seiks, and release Kurnaul, Panneput, and Surhind, which they had usurped: accordingly, three days after he was admitted to an audience, we ordered him on this expedition.

Do you, our faithful subject, in concert with Colonel Galliez, deliberate on the means of promoting our interest, and cause a brigade to be sent to the presence. Our brother, dearer than life, the Vizier, has not performed any part of the Treaty he entered into and sent to us written on a leaf of the Holy Khoran, although by the blessing of God he has been victorious, and acquired immense wealth and territories. Perhaps he has forgot his oath: do you remind him of it, and send to the presence from yourself the proportion stipulated to us. Be assured that you have a place in our remembrance.

Extract of Letter from the King to Colonel Champion.

We send you a copy of a sealed Treaty entered into by the Vizier, written on a leaf of the Holy Koran, and sent to the presence for your information. Notwithstanding which he has not delivered us any part of the wealth, country, artillery, elephants, &c. which by the bleſſing of God he has acquired.

Copy of a Treaty made by the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah, written on a Leaf of the Holy Koran.

God hath ſaid, " Keep your Treaties, and I will abide " by my promiſes."

Conſidering my ſubjection and obedience to his Majeſty Shaw Allum as a bleſſing and happineſs, I engage to God that I ſhall ever have at heart the zealous diſcharge of my duty to my gracious maſter in all his affairs, but more particularly in eſtabliſhing and ſupporting his empire, in defending his life, honour, and dignity, and in keeping the ſecrets of his Government. His Majeſty may reſide at Shawjehanabad or Ackberabad, it is entirely at his own option. I ſhall repreſent nothing contrary to his inclinations of ſuch new territories, as I may wreſt from the poſſeſſions of uſurpers, excluſive of the Jaghiers attached to the Vizier's, and thoſe held without any conditions. One half I ſhall deliver up to his Majeſty, and the other I ſhall take to defray the expence of my troops. I ſhall afford due aid and aſſiſtance to the officers employed by his Majeſty. The attached property and the Peſhcuſhes of the Rajah's, &c. ſhall be a part of the royal revenue.

The friends of his Majeſty ſhall be my friends, and his enemies my enemies. Thoſe who are in his Majeſty's ſervice I ſhall not entertain in mine; I ſhall tranſact no buſineſs contrary to his Majeſty's inclination; and on condition that Abdulaid Cawn ſhall prove ſteady in his loyalty to his Majeſty, and in his friendſhip and attachment towards myſelf, I ſhall certainly be the guardian of his honour, reputation, and life; ſuch faults as Muged ul Dowlah may have heretofore committed I forgive, and I ſhall not give ear to the inſinuations of inſidious men regarding him, without fully aſcertaining them. Calling to witneſs God and his Prophet, the five Holy Perſonages, the twelve Imaums, and the fourteen Maſſaums, with whom may the bleſſing of God reſt.

I have written theſe articles on a leaf of the Holy Koran, and will not hereafter deviate or depart from what I have written.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Candour towards the Vizier having induced me to ſhew him the copy of his engagement ſent down by his Majeſty, his Excellency ſhewed me this morning the original counterpart, of which I encloſe you a tranſlation.

The Vizier ſays, that by not coming in perſon, the King has forfeited any benefits which he could claim under theſe engagements; and that he received fifty thouſand rupees in part for travelling expences. The writings are now before you, and will ſpeak for themſelves; and as that ſent down by his Majeſty ſeems acknowledged by the Vizier, I beg leave to refer you to the 7th paragraph of the Board's Letter to me of the 23d May, and to deſire you will honour me with explicit Inſtructions reſpecting the import thereof; that is, whether or how far, that Treaty is to be at all regarded by you.

I ſend you a Perſian duplicate of the Nabob's Letter concerning the 40 lacks; and am, with reſpect,

Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,

Camp, 20th June 1774. Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,

A. Champion.

Tranſlation of an Agreement under the Seal of Shah Alum, written on the back of a Leaf of the Koran, delivered by the Nawal Vizier to Colonel Champion, Commander in Chief, 20th June 1774.

In the name of God, merciful and compaſſionate.

Whoever is friend of the Nawal Vizier is my friend; his enemy alſo is mine. From the Viziares the bathing-houſe, that is, the ſuperintendary of the private audience chamber and train of artillery as heretofore; while the empire endures, will I never diſmiſs him of whatever new dominions may come into his poſſeſſion, the fixed appendages of the Vizire's excepted. I will confer one half on him for the maintenance of his forces. His dependants and ſervants I will not entertain; but will regard and defend his life, his character, and his honour. I have given the province of Oude as an eſtate to him and his children; and half of what new countries may be conquered I will beſtow. And to no perſons whatever will I give eſtates in this half of the conquered countries, or in the province aforeſaid. God and his Prophet, the five Holy Perſons, the twelve Prieſts, and the fourteen Children, are called to witneſs for the ſatisfaction of the Vizier. I have given this writing on a leaf of the ſacred Koran, that henceforward I may not depart from it. Written on the 19th of Mohurrum, in the year of the Higera 1177, the 15th year of our reign.

R. E. Roberts,
Perſian Tranſlator.

Copy of a Letter from the Vizier to the Colonel.

I have received your Letter, and am acquainted with what you write concerning the 40 lacks of rupees, on account of the conqueſt of the Rohillas. My friend, this matter was ſettled between Mr. Haſtings and me in a former conference; and I am ready to pay the aforementioned ſum in the manner ſpecified in the Treaty between us. God willing, when the Engliſh troops have concluded my buſineſs, and I think proper to diſmiſs them, I will at the time of diſmiſſing them give them the ſum of forty lacks, according to my agreement.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following extract from Mr. Middleton, in reply to the Inſtructions ſent by him to that Gentleman, and recorded in the laſt Proceeding.

Extracts from Mr. *Nath*l Middleton's Letter to the Preſident; dated Biſſouly, 17th June 1774.

Although I cannot by any means acquit the Nabob of the charge which the Commander in Chief alledges againſt him, on the ſcore of his treatment of Hafez Rhamet's family, and his wanton ravages of the country, I can almoſt venture to affirm, that his conduct in theſe particulars would appear on a ſcrutiny to have been leſs culpable than Colonel Champion has been taught to believe. To you, honourable Sir, who are not unacquainted with the pride and haughtineſs of the Nabob's demeanor, it will not appear extraordinary that he ſhould have more enemies than moſt other men; even his own ſervants are very frequently the firſt to aſperſe his character, and to accuſe him of actions which, with all his vices and imperfections, he is incapable of committing. The univerſal prejudice and diſſatisfaction which his denying the army a gratuity they had built with certainty upon, has raiſed againſt him in our camp, has laid open another ſource of unjuſt calumny. Hence, Sir, I am induced to hope, that Colonel Champion, relying too implicitly upon the aſſertions of every one who has thought it neceſſary to add to the popular prejudice, may have viewed his Excellency's conduct through a partial medium. Although I might mention many circumſtances, to prove that my aſſertions are not merely ideal, but drawn from real facts, I think it unneceſſary to take up your time with more than one. Soon after our arrival at Beſſouly, a report was propagated, and obtained almoſt univerſal credit, that the Vizier had, in breach of the ſacred laws of the Haram, forcibly entered the Zenanna of Mahubella Cawn, and wantonly violated the chaſtity of his daughter; and, to make the crime appear ſtill in a more heinous light, it was confidently aſſerted that the unhappy victim, unwilling to ſurvive the diſgrace, had ſacrificed her life to teſtify her own innocence, and redeem the honour of her family. The ſtory carrying with it the colour of probability, and artfully related, with ſuch aggravating circumſtances as could not fail to excite pity in every humane breaſt, a general clamour was ſoon raiſed againſt the Nabob; and as people who were indifferent to the effects of his diſpleaſure did not ſcruple to reproach him with the infamous action to his own dependants, the report was not long in reaching his ears. The uneaſineſs he manifeſted on the occaſion, and the anxious deſire he ſhewed to acquit himſelf of ſo diſhonourable a charge, by his unremitted endeavours to diſcover the author, would have furniſhed ſtrong preſumptive proof of his innocence; but when it was notorious that his Excellency at that time had never been in Mohibilla Cawn's houſe, that his effects were left untouched, and that the daughter who was ſuppoſed to have fallen a ſacrifice to his pleaſures, was yet in being, I could be at no loſs what degree of credit to beſtow upon the information. The other proofs, if required, might have been drawn from the peculiar circumſtances which at that time marked the Nabob's ſituation.

The ſeverity with which the Nabob latterly treated Doondey Cawn's family, may be accounted for, and in my humble opinion in ſome meaſure juſtified. He always conſidered them as priſoners; but until an appearance of treachery and deceit on their part had given him cauſe of diſpleaſure, he did not betray any reſentment: on the contrary, although guards were placed upon their houſes, to prevent any things from being carried away, every liberty of acceſs and egreſs was allowed them, although denied to the family of Hafez Rhamet; and I am perſuaded they would have retained poſſeſſion, at leaſt of all their preſent effects, had they not abuſed the confidence he had repoſed in them, and attempted to ſecrete their property. This procedure effectually cloſed every avenue to an accommodation with Mohibulla Cawn; and thoſe who are acquainted with the impetuoſity and violence of the Nabob's temper, ſeem leſs ſurpriſed that his Excellency ſhould deprive this family of every thing they poſſeſſed, than that Mohibulla Cawn's infidelity ſhould not have coſt him his head.

The family of Hafez have not merited ſuch treatment; though I think it probable they may have ſuffered for the miſconduct of others. They certainly have been improperly neglected, and have ſuffered much diſtreſs and inconveniencies for want of proper accommodations in camp; but my own knowledge does not furniſh me with any inſtances of cruelty or violence wantonly exerciſed upon them.

I have the ſatisfaction to find, that I have in general anticipated your Inſtructions on theſe ſubjects in favour of Hafez Rahmet's family. I moſt earneſtly ſolicited the Nabob, at the time I acquainted you with the ſon's having delivered himſelf up; and he aſſured me a Jaghier, which would afford a handſome proviſion for their maintenance, ſhould be allotted them; but as he thought it probable, that the ſuffering Rohillas of former rank and conſequence, to whom the natural inhabitants might be attached, to remain in the country, might prove a bar to the eſtabliſhment of his own authority, and lay the foundation of future troubles, ſuch perſons as had any claim to his conſideration ſhould be provided for in his own three provinces, or in his newly-acquired poſſeſſions in the Dooaub, when he could be a ſpy and check upon their actions.

The family of Hafez Rahmet and Doondy Cawn, together with a numerous train of dependents, were removed a few days ago, under the eſcort of Nabob Salar Jung, to Fayzabad, there to remain until his Excellency's arrival. From what I have been able to learn, I have reaſon to believe that proper injunctions were laid upon Salar Jung, reſpecting the treatment of theſe unhappy people; and as I ſhall be with the Vizier when he determines their reſpective deſtinies, reſt aſſured, honourable Sir, I will not be inattentive to your commands.

APPENDIX. No. 27.

On reference to the original Letter to the Vizier, containing the conditions which he agreed to, and required for the ſervice of the brigade on the Rohilla expedition, copy of which is entered on our proceedings the 3d February, we find theſe conditions expreſſed literally in the following manner: "After the concluſion of this war, "whenſoever the country of the Rohillas ſhall come "wholly and entirely into my poſſeſſion, or I ſhall be "poſſeſſed of half of the country of the Rohillas, or I "ſhall negociate and make a peace and friendſhip with "the Rohillas, and given the Engliſh brigade their diſ-"miſſion, at that time I will give the ſum of 40 lacks "in ready money. But I am the maſter in theſe affairs, "and the power of retaining or diſmiſſing the Engliſh "army is mine; whenever I pleaſe I will diſmiſs it, and "until I ſhall diſmiſs the Engliſh army, it ſhall remain "preſent with me, and without my diſmiſſion the Engliſh "army never, never ſhall go." By the letter and tenor of the above extract, the Committee conceive the Company are fully entitled to the payment of the 40 lacks, the firſt condition of the agreement being inconteſtably accompliſhed, every part of the country being either actually poſſeſſed by the Vizier, or acknowledging his authority; Fizulla Cawn, the only enemy remaining, having deſerted the country and fled for ſhelter to the hills. It is true, the draft which was ſent to the Vizier is not ſo explicit as the terms which are above quoted from his own Letter, but it was meant to imply the ſame agreement, according to the ideas and expectations which we at that time entertained of the probable iſſue of the war; and that the Vizier ſo underſtood it, is plain from the manner in which he has altered the draft to the form in which this ſubject now appears in his own Letter, which is the only authority to which either party can appeal.

On theſe grounds, the Committee reſolve that the demand of the payment of the ſtipulated ſum of 40 lacks of rupees be repeated, with a poſitive declaration of our immediate right to it, and the Preſident is deſired to expreſs this reſolution to his Excellency.

Agreed, we reply to Colonel Champion's Letter above recited, as follows:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your Letters dated the 16th, 17th, 20th, and 24th of June, with the ſeveral Encloſures mentioned in them.

The Nabob has not properly ſtated the condition of the payment of the forty lacks; the Preſident has written to him and given freſh Inſtructions to Mr. Middleton to explain the nature of his agreement, and to inſiſt on the right of payment; this we hope will prove effectual. We deſire you will alſo urge it if neceſſary.

With reſpect to the Treaties mutually interchanged between the King and the Vizier, as the latter inſiſts on ſecret conditions which invalidate the King's apparent right; as the Treaties were formed without the knowledge or participation of this Government, which could have no right or plea to interfere, but that of being guarantee to them; and as our interpoſition would be productive of much inconvenience and embarraſſment, without the poſſibility of deriving either credit or advantage from it; we again recur to the anſwer which you received from the Board on this very ſubject, in their Letter of the 3d of May, declaring, we will have no concern in theſe engagements, the execution of which we leave entirely to the parties themſelves. It is our intention to perſevere in purſuit of the object which originally engaged us in the preſent enterprize, and to adhere ſtrictly to our engagements with the Vizier, without Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 18th Auguſt 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident. William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

Read, the three following Letters from Colonel Champion, dated the 3d, 19th, and 24th July.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I have received a Letter from the honourable the Council, dated the 3d ultimo, in anſwer to one of mine of the 16th May; and as that Letter was ſent off before I received their favour of the 23d of the ſame month, directing me to correſpond thereafter only with the Select Committee or the Preſident, I addreſſed myſelf to you, Gentlemen, in reply.

I have to teſtify real concern that any part of my Letter appeared to carry too great a degree of warmth; and it gives me ſtill more pain, that it ſhould be conſtrued to convey a reflection, and even to impart an impeachment of Adminiſtration.

When Gentlemen practiſed in thinking are aſſembled to deliberate, the order, the unreſerve of one or more, if ſuch there ſhould happen to be amongſt them, will be tempered by the equanimity, the circumſpection, and political knowledge and experience of their colleagues.

An individual cannot have theſe advantages; therefore I muſt think for myſelf, muſt write for myſelf; this I can ſay, however, that if there has been warmth it has not been of argument; excuſe me then, Gentlemen, to the Board, if I, who am myſelf a ſoldier, in endeavouring to expreſs my ideas of the merits and eminent ſervices of my followers, have not been able to diveſt my language of the glow natural to the perception of the mind on ſuch occaſions.

I have repeatedly peruſed and conſidered my Letter of the 16th, without being able to obſerve the trace of an accuſation, even in implication; I do in all ſincerity declare, that I had not a thought of the kind; and when it is conſidered that I have not been engaged in any altercation, I think it is, with great ſubmiſſion, impoſſible to receive the paragraph alluded to in the manner it has been conſtrued.

With regard to Faizulla Khan's treaſure, and the riches acquired by the Vizier in this country; though the information which I have been able to obtain, has carried conviction to my own mind, I do not pretend to preſcribe a meaſure for the belief of others; but allowing, Gentlemen, that I had been as credulous as is inſinuated, I muſt be pardoned to ſay, and I ſay it feelingly, that I think the diſbelief of an information, conveyed by the Commander in Chief, might have been expreſſed in terms more delicate.

As to the extract of the General Letter of the 4th December 1765, referred to in the Board's addreſs, if I might do it without offence, which is in no caſe my intention to give, I would ſignify my wiſh that I had received earlier communication of a circumſtance which ſo very nearly and ſo materially related to the department I have the honour to direct.

But, Gentlemen, this order of our Honourable Maſters only regards ſtipulations for ſervices to be performed; and the diſturbance which produced the order would never have happened, but for a breach of very ſolemn and repeated promiſes; at all rates our honourable Employers prohibiting ſuch ſtipulations only amounts to this, that inſtead of a certain fixed ſum, the uſual rights of war, whatever theſe are, remain to their army.

Do not let me be miſunderſtood, Gentlemen, with regard to conſequences alluded to in the concluſion of my Letter of the 16th; let it not be imagined that I have ſo bad an opinion of the diſcipline of your troops, as to ſuppoſe they would deliberately commit unpardonable enormity; the conſequences to which I referred, and which I ſhould ever wiſh to avoid, are the irregularities and dangers that might enſue from the diſperſion of the troops in ſearch of that plunder to which the Board themſelves agree the ſoldier has a right. Believe me, Gentlemen, that if the Rohillas had only made a feigned retreat, and had returned to the charge, the Nabob's troops, when they got into the enemy's camp on the 23d April, his Excellency would have had but a bad account of the flower of his army, which could only have been ſaved from total deſtruction by the aſſiſtance of our troops, who kept due order; but if they were alſo to diſperſe, they would in ſuch caſe be in the ſame predicament.

Whatever may be the practice of Eaſtern Princes in general, I am to inform you, that his Excellency's troops not only received his public thanks after the victory; but that his battalions have been handſomely rewarded by an increaſe of three rupees a month to each ſepoy.

In due obſervance to the Board's injunctions, I aſſembled the Second in command, and all the other Field Officers yeſterday morning, and communicated to them the orders of Adminiſtration regarding the claim of this diviſion of the army to a ſhare of the riches acquired by the Vizier, in conſequence of the battle of St. George. The Gentlemen unanimouſly requeſted of me to aſſure Government, that they will ever prove obedient ſoldiers; and of courſe, continue to impreſs the officers and ſoldiers under their command, with a due ſenſe of good order and ſubordination; but they alſo deſired it might be reſpectfully intimated, that they hope to be excuſed if they cannot acquieſce in the opinion which has been delivered regarding the rights and cuſtoms of war.

I remain, with due reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Camp Biſſouly, 3d July 1774

I ſhould have been unintentionally guilty of injuſtice to the officers and ſoldiers of the army, if it had eſcaped me to teſtify here, that I have not diſcovered any indication of turbulence or avidity amongſt them.

A. C.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In a converſation which I had with the Vizier two days ago, in conſequence of a meſſage received through Mr. Middleton, he expreſſed wiſhes that I would march the army towards Feizullah Khan, ſaying, that it had been hinted to him to effectually ſettle this country as ſoon as he poſſible can; that in caſe another enemy ſhould appear after the rains (and perhaps, obſerved he, both the Marattas and Timeer Shaw may) he might be able to withdraw his troops from this country, without any riſk of its being attacked.

I replied, that the country being all under water, and my troops without camp equipage, I wiſhed to remain in cantonments at leaſt till the taking off of the rains, as any movement, eſpecially towards the mountains, muſt at this ſeaſon be attended with the loſs of a conſiderable number of men, without any apparent advantage, ſince Feizullah Khan has only to retire a little further into the hills to baffle all our attempts. I adviſed his Excellency to ſatisfy himſelf at preſent with covering his conqueſts ſomewhat better, by advancing more troops to Moraadabad, informing him at the ſame time, I would order two battalions of Sepoys to be in readineſs to march at his pleaſure, and that if the enemy threatened any general movement towards us, which I did not at all think probable, I would lead the army to oppoſe them. His Excellency ſeemed perfectly ſatisfied with this advice; but I find that he has ſince given orders to put almoſt his whole army in motion; and I am apprehenſive therefore, dangerous as it may be to the health of your troops, I ſhall alſo be under the neceſſity of moving; for however much I diſapprove of this meaſure, yet the Vizier muſt, in caſe of emergency, be ſupported, leſt the enemy ſhould lay hold of the advantages that might be derived from our leaving him too much to himſelf.

I am making every preparation, and taking every precaution in my power, to prevent ill conſequences from our taking the field at this unfavourable ſeaſon; but I own, that if we do march, it will for many reaſons be with the greateſt reluctance on my part.

I am really in an embarraſſed ſituation. The Vizier adopts meaſures without conſulting me; and however undigeſted his plans, I am under the neceſſity of ſubſcribing to them; that is, I muſt act in conſequence of them; and I will do ſo, Gentlemen, according to the beſt in my diſcernment and underſtanding, truſting to your lenity for approbation, and deſiring, that only you may judge from motives, not from effects.

The news-papers inform us, that the King has ſent dreſſes to Coſſim Ally and Ghazyudeen Khan, and invited them to the preſence. This ſeems to alarm the Vizier. I confeſs that I moſt heartily wiſh ſome means were uſed to conciliate his Majeſty both to us and to the Vizier; and I am anxious to receive an anſwer to the Letters which I had the honour of addreſſing to you on the 17th and 20th paſt, that I may clearly know whether any regard is to be paid to his Majeſty's claim to the half of this country.

I am, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Cant[t] at Biſſouly,
19th July 1774.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I had the honour of addreſſing under date the 19th, and am now to adviſe you of the march of the greateſt part of the Vizier's army. All his infantry left this on the 22d and 23d, and his cavalry are preparing to follow without delay.

In this buſineſs the Nabob did not conſult me from the 17th (when he ſeemed to have laid aſide all thoughts of the kind) till yeſterday, when he ſent me a Letter, importing, that it is neceſſary to puniſh Feizullah Khan ere the rains are over, leſt other enemies ſhould then appear; that it had been recommended "to him to finiſh "whatever is to be done with the utmoſt expedition;" and therefore requeſting me to march with the brigade; adding, that as he cannot accompany me himſelf, he will commit the command of his army to his ſon.

Laſt night I ſent the Perſian Interpreter to his Excellency, with my reaſons in writing againſt a movement of the troops at this ſeaſon, but he would not liſten to them; and though I went in perſon this morning, I could not perſuade him to deſiſt from the enterprize.

According to his accounts of the general diſpoſition of other Powers, appearances are alarming enough. He avows expectations of being attacked after the rains by the Marattas on one hand and Timur Sha on the other. He is under conſiderable apprehenſions from the King, whoſe diſtreſſes ſeem to render him deſperate, and to have determined him, as he thinks he is deſerted by us and the Vizier, to try every poſſible effort to extricate himſelf. Feizullah Khan, having large ſums of money, and no alternative being left to himſelf or his followers, they appear reſolved to give all the trouble they can; and their numbers are ſaid to be greatly increaſed by reinforcements of Affghans from different parts.

Theſe are matters which I think worthy of your conſideration. In the meantime I am to inform you, that as his Excellency is ſo very deſirous of my taking the field, as he has the ſole authority of preſcribing the ſervice to be undertaken, and has quoted the Preſident's advice for uſing the utmoſt expedition, I am conſtrained to break ground with all the Sepoys of the brigade, and the European grenadiers.

The regiment will be left here at leaſt till the Nabob himſelf is in condition to move after us, by which time they will be better ſupplied with camp equipages. I mean alſo to leave the hoſpital at this place.

I muſt beg, Gentlemen, that I may be favoured with regular anſwers to my Letters. I wiſh not to be left to myſelf in any matter of moment, becauſe, though I will moſt certainly act for the beſt, yet I may not foreſee meaſures that might be moſt conſonant with the wiſhes of Adminiſtration.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Cant[t] at Biſſouly,
24th July 1774.

The Preſident informs the Committee, that he did give the Vizier literally the advice which is alluded to in the Colonel's Letter of the 24th July, although at a diſtant time, and under very different circumſtances; the Letter which contained it being written in anſwer to the Vizier's firſt information of the victory gained over Hafez Rhamet Cawn, which makes the advice leſs applicable to the preſent meaſure, which he is of opinion might have with ſafety been delayed to the cloſe of the rainy ſeaſon, although he hopes and believes, that if it does not injure the health of the troops, it may prove in every other reſpect of beneficial conſequences, and the means of haſtening the concluſion of the war.

The following is a copy of a Letter written by the Preſident to the Vizier, containing his ſentiments above referred to.

To the Vizier.

After acknowledging the receipt of his Letter, and complimenting him on the ſucceſs of his arms, it proceeds—the diſtance between us prevents me from offering my ſentiments on the meaſures it may be neceſſary to purſue, for the ſucceſs of the cauſe in which we are mutually engaged; your wiſdom alſo renders this ſuperfluous, and the preſence of Colonel Champion, in whoſe bravery and military ſkill, and on whoſe attachment you may entirely rely, leave me at reſt for the iſſue of the campaign, which I hope will as ſpeedily, as I truſt it will be fortunately accompliſhed. The abſence of thoſe who may interrupt the progreſs of your victories, and the diſturbed ſtate of the affairs of the Decan, afford the faireſt ſeaſon to complete what you have ſo ſplendidly begun; but as it appears probable that thoſe troubles are upon the eve of being decided in favour of one or the other party, it is the part of prudence to prevent the revival of their deſigns in the quarter where you now are, by a ſpeedy and complete accompliſhment of your own. From a perſonal knowledge of Colonel Champion, I can inform your Excellency that you poſſeſs in his activity, in which he is equalled by few, the ſureſt means of ſeconding the dictates of your enlightened underſtanding, and the ardour of your own courage; and I hope you will continue as you have hitherto done, to conſult with him on all occaſions.

APPENDIX. No. 27.

Reſolved, That we reply to Colonel Champion, as follows:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have duly received your Letters of the 3d, 19th, and 24th July.

Notwithſtanding our wiſh to have deferred the renewal of our operations till the concluſion of the rains, had circumſtances permitted it, yet as the Vizier had reſolved in taking the field with his own forces, we much approve and commend your reſolution to accompany him, ſince it might have been productive of fatal conſequences if his army acting without our ſupport were to meet with a defeat, and the appearance of his acting by his own ſtrength, might give riſe to public conſtructions prejudicial to the common cauſe.

We think it very probable that the Marattas may endeavour to interrupt your operations the next ſeaſon, as we are informed their domeſtic troubles are appeaſed by the impriſonment of Ragonaut Row; we therefore recommend to you to co-operate with the Vizier in adopting ſuch meaſures as may cruſh the remains of the Rohilla Power before the arrival of a new enemy; and we hope that this premature movement of the Vizier may at laſt prove to effect that good purpoſe.

The conduct of the King appears more calculated to manifeſt his indiſpoſition towards this Government and the intereſt of his Vizier, than to affect either materially. You have better opportunity of foreſeeing the conſequences of it, and we truſt to your judgment and vigilance to obviate or remove them. We cannot alter the line of our conduct towards him; the intereſt of the Honourable Company, and their preſent engagements ſubſiſting between the Nabob Sujah ul Dowla, bind them to a cloſe attachment to him during the courſe of the war in which we have embarked with him, and to proſecute it with vigour, ſteadineſs, and conſiſtency, againſt all opponents, whoſoever they may be. The King has forfeited every claim to our aſſiſtance, which compaſſion, or the habit of attachment might have given him, independent of more weighty conſiderations. From the lateſt advices of the Vizier, corroborated by many circumſtances of your Letters, we are inclined to attribute the late inſtance of ill-judged policy in the King to the Councils of his Miniſter Abdul Abed Cawn, given perhaps in oppoſition to his rival Nedjiff Cawn, whom he has ſeen ſupported by the Vizier and his Government.

In this light Nedjiff Cawn appears to us the fitteſt inſtrument to counteract ſuch meaſures of the King as may be calculated to embarraſs your operations. If you ſee the neceſſity of ſuch a precaution, which we only ſuppoſe on the grounds which have been afforded us, we recommend to you to engage the ſervices of Nedjiff Cawn for this purpoſe, and to adviſe with the Vizier concerning ſuch other meaſures as may be adviſable on the ſame ſubject. We believe it unneceſſary to caution you not to engage perſonally in any deſign which may bear the appearance of an adverſe diſpoſition towards the King, unleſs he ſhould openly declare or act againſt us.

We have already replied in duplicate, by a Letter dated the 14th July, to your Letters of the 17th and 20th of June, and conclude that you have received it.

Fort William, the 10th Auguſt 1774. We are, Sir, &c.

The Preſident delivers in the following tranſlation of a Letter from the Vizier:

From the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

I have delivered to Mr. Middleton a Paper, containing the news which I have lately received concerning Coſſim Ally Cawn and Jemmad ul Moulk: from thence you will learn that his Majeſty has ſent Kellaats for the abovementioned perſons, and that they dreſſed themſelves in them, and that he has alſo ſent for them to the preſence. I before wrote you all the particulars of his taking Sumro into his ſervice. It appears that his Majeſty has ſent for Coſſim Ally Cawn and Sumro, and taken them into his ſervice, on account of their enmity to the Engliſh, and that he ſent for Jemmad ul Moulk to terrify me.

You who, by the bleſſing of God, are poſſeſſed of an enlightened underſtanding, will perceive the event. When I reflect upon the friendſhip ſubſiſting between us, I have no apprehenſion from the enmity of any one; but I do not think it adviſable to uſe any delay. It is very eaſy to prevent theſe meaſures, and to ſettle the affairs of the empire: it is not an underſtanding of ſo difficult a nature as to require any extraordinary effort to drive all the enemies of the Engliſh, and all my enemies, from the preſence of the King, and to regulate the affairs of the empire in whatever manner may appear moſt adviſable; but as I take no ſtep without the advice and approbation of the Engliſh Chiefs, I have determined to act in this buſineſs agreeably to your advice. My friend, you muſt not conſider this as a trifling concern; although there is not as yet any room for apprehenſion, and it is as eaſy to put a ſtop to ſuch proceedings, yet it is evident that a ſmall ſtream may be ſtopped by a ſpadeful of clay, but when the ſame ſtream is augmented an elephant cannot even paſs: an affair of this kind always increaſes. My friend, I have written all theſe particulars for your information. If you are deſirous of putting a ſtop to theſe proceedings, write me a Letter to the following purport: to drive all the enemies of the Engliſh, and my own enemies, from the preſence of the King, and to regulate the affairs of the empire in the moſt expedient manner.

If you write me ſuch a Letter, by the bleſſing of God I ſhall be able, in a ſhort ſpace of time, and with the greateſt eaſe, to execute this buſineſs. There is ſo ſtrict an alliance between me and the Engliſh Chiefs, that we are like two bodies animated with the ſame ſoul. Whatever you adviſe I will execute. I have written you all theſe particulars, that you may not ſay in future, that I neglected to adviſe you of them: I am entirely free from the poſſibility of ſuch an accuſation.

N. B. A news-paper was received with the above Letter to the ſame purport.

To the Nabob Sujah ul Dowlah.

I have received your Excellency's Letter, concerning your having before informed me that his Majeſty has taken into his ſervice, and that he has lately ſent Kellaats to Coſſim Aly Cawn and Jemmad ul Moulk, and invited them into his ſervice; which muſt proceed ſolely from his enmity to the Engliſh, and a deſire of terrifying me; and requeſting, that I would quickly put a ſtop to ſuch proceedings.

I do not think it either adviſable or becoming for me to interfere in the affairs of the King. If ſuch meaſures are purſued as are intended to prejudice your intereſt, or that of the Engliſh Government, which are mutual, I rely on your wiſdom and care to prevent their taking effect: this conduct is conſiſtent with the ſtation you hold in the empire, and with your allegiance to the King, whoſe affairs muſt be ruined by a perſeverance in the ſyſtem which his ill-adviſers have lately perſuaded him to adopt. But I am of opinion, that as you have now on your hands an important buſineſs, which will, I hope, by the bleſſing of God, be ſpeedily brought to a concluſion, it will be better not to interfere at preſent. It is neceſſary that you take no ſteps in which our intereſts are mutually concerned, without conſulting Colonel Champion.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following Letter from the Reſident at the Vizier's Court; adviſing him of his having deputed Mr. Grady to Fyzabad, to receive the 15 lacks of rupees, due at this time for the ſecond payment, on account of the Treaty at Benares.

APPENDIX No. 27.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

The hurry of preparing for the march has prevented the Vizier's addreſſing you, as he intended, on the ſubject of his preſent undertaking, and has alſo deprived me of the opportunity of requiring from his Excellency any further explanation of his views, than what I have already tranſmitted you. I ſhall, however, embrace the earlieſt occaſion, after the hurry and confuſion in which he is at preſent involved has a little ſubſided, to confer with him perſonally on this ſubject, and ſhall not fail to acquaint you with the reſult.

As there ſeems little probability that any concluſive ſtroke can be ſtruck againſt Fuzula Cawn, before the expiration of the time limited for the payment of 15 lacks of rupees, on account of the ceſſion of Corah and Allahabad, and as I am convinced the Nabob would be unable to raiſe ſo conſiderable a ſum here within that period, unleſs ſome ſudden acquiſition of wealth ſhould yield him new reſources, I deemed it expedient to remind his Excellency of the demand, and require him to fall on ſome certain means of obviating any diſappointment or delay in the payment. In reply to which, he aſſured me he had taken the neceſſary meaſures to guard againſt any failure; and that he had every reaſon to expect the money would be ready at Fyzabad by the time it became due. I have therefore, on the faith of theſe aſſurances, and with the Nabob's concurrence, deputed Mr. Grady, whoſe integrity and diſcretion I can entirely rely upon, to proceed immediately to Fyzabad, to receive the treaſure, and to accompany it to the Preſidency, or to whatever place you may be pleaſed to order it. I ſhould have been pleaſed to receive your approbation of this meaſure previous to its adoption, but was unwilling to ſubject the buſineſs to any delays, which it is in my power to prevent.

I beg leave to lay before you the inſtructions with which I have furniſhed Mr. Grady, for the direction of his conduct in the management of this truſt; and I perſuade myſelf, that a prudent and moſt punctual diſcharge of it will ſufficiently juſtify my choice.

Being, until now, ignorant of the Nabob's final determination, I have omitted to addreſs you on the ſubject of an eſcort for the treaſure. To obviate therefore the delay which would be occaſioned by my waiting your commands, I ſhall take the liberty to requeſt an order from the Commander in Chief to Colonel Muer, for ſuch a guard as may be deemed adequate to the importance of the ſervice.

The brigade marched this morning to Chundoreſy, about eight coſs to the Northward of Beſſouly; and the Vizier has moved out of cantonments, intending himſelf to proceed to-morrow.

I am, very reſpectfully, Sir,
Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
*Nathan*ˡ Middleton.

Bengal Select Conſultation, the 22d Auguſt 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

Read, a Letter from Colonel Champion, dated the 29th July.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

My Letters of the 19th and 24th have adviſed you that I had, in conſequence of the Vizier's repeated requiſitions, agreed to take the field with the Sepoy Corps, the Europeans, Grenadiers, &c.

When my intention of leaving the regiment cantonments were ſignified to the Nabob, he moſt earneſtly deſired that I would march the whole brigade. The precaution of having given early orders for making up private tents, and the induſtry which has been uſed, together with the little aſſiſtance given by his Excellency, has enabled me to comply with his deſire; conſequently no part of the troops will be left behind, excepting the ſick, who are to remain in the hoſpital in the Fort of Beſſouly under cover of a body of troops, to be left as a guard for his Excellency's family.

The weather has been remarkably favourable for ſeveral days, and having got the neceſſary ammunition and ſtores from the boats, I will march to-morrow morning.

The deſign of the enterprize, as formerly mentioned, is to reduce Fuzullah Khan, or oblige his forces to diſperſe; which it is hoped, will be effected by our endeavours to cut off their ſupplies of proviſions. For that purpoſe I have recommended to his Excellency to make the neceſſary detachments, and alſo to endeavour to induce the neighbouring Rajahs to haraſs the enemy.

Now that I have got equipage for the Europeans, and have taken every precaution to ſecure our ammunition, ſeveral of the objections which I had to this expedition are removed, and I am leſs fearful of bad conſequences to the troops; but I thought it, notwithſtanding, more adviſable to endeavour to diſſuade his Excellency from proſecuting the meaſure ſo early in this ſeaſon; and I accordingly wrote him a Letter, of which I ſend you a copy, wherein I made uſe of reaſons that appeared the moſt probable to influence him.

The Rohillas are encamped about 18 coſs beyond Negilgur, in the country of the Rajah of Synnagur, who, and the Rajah of Comaw and others, can bring a very reſpectable force to the field. Their dominions, I am informed, extend conſiderably into the plains which run along this; the ſouth ſide of the range of mountains mentioned in the inſtructions under which I act, and the Country to the Weſtward of Negibgur on this ſide of the Ganges, is alſo in poſſeſſion of Gentoos. I have indeed been told, that the Rajahpoots have at times been overpowered by the Rohillas, and obliged to make them pecuniary acknowledgment.

From his Excellency's anſwer, you will perceive, that he conſiders the Company bound to put him in poſſeſſion of all the Country between the Ganges and the mountains, as well as that belonging to the Rajahpoots, as the remainder of what was poſſeſſed by the Rohillas, whom he ſeems to expect I am to chaſe from the diſtricts of the Rajahs, ſome of whom have already ſhewn inclinations of favouring the Rohillas, by ſupplying them with light artillery, grain, and other neceſſaries.

I ſhall ſuppoſe, however, that they are impelled to this by the awe in which it is poſſible they ſtand of the Rohillas; and that upon our approach, they may perhaps through the management of the Vizier, at leaſt withhold future aſſiſtance, if not even diſtreſs the enemy in the rear.

In anſwer to this propoſition, it is ſufficient for me to ſay, that I cannot take upon me at haphazard to exceed the Board's inſtructions in a point of ſuch importance as that of entering into hoſtilities with, or over-running any part of the Country of a people againſt whom I have no authority to war, unleſs in ſelf-defence.

For theſe and other powerful reaſons which might be urged, I am determined not to enter the diſtricts of the Rajahs without your injunctions. I cannot help thinking the ſtyle of the Vizier's addreſs ſomewhat extraordinary, as well regarding his engagements with the Company as in other reſpects. I have thought it moſt prudent to leave it to you, Gentlemen, to make ſuch reply to his Excellency through the Preſident, as may be judged expedient, and I hope to be favoured with a copy of it.

I am very deſirous of receiving reply to my Letters of the 17th and 20th, relative to the agreement between his Majeſty and the Vizier concerning this conqueſt. I deliberately liberately weighed in my mind, whether I ſhould acquieſce in the Nabob's requeſt of moving higher up; I diſcovered that my heſitation gave him much diſſatisfaction, and it was very perceptible that if I had perſiſted in remaining here, he would have been impreſſed with doubts and jealouſies of the ſincerity of our attachment towards him, which I was apprehenſive would be never effectually effected; but indeed his conduct in advancing his army above thirty coſs in front of our troops without my concurrence, rendered a movement on my part abſolutely neceſſary, for the reaſon mentioned in my addreſs of the 19th. Moreover, I am not acquainted that his Majeſty has made any formal declaration to the Adminiſtration, nor has he hitherto attempted to ſupport his claim by force of arms, although the Vizier has been in poſſeſſion of ſeven-eighths of the Rohilla country about three months, and I hope therefore that the motives which prevail with me to comply with his Excellency's requiſition, will ſecure to me the honour of your approbation.

Should I find that the Europeans are likely to ſuffer much from this movement, I mean to leave them at Moradabad or Sembol, where, according ro the report of Officers whom I ſent to examine theſe towns, there is good accommodation.

If from the intelligence which you receive of the tranſactions of the Powers by whom the Vizier ſo confidently declares his expectations of being attacked after the rains, you think there is a probability of its ſo happening, and if you are determined to ſupport him at this diſtance from the Company's provinces, I conſider it incumbent on me to recommend that another brigade be ordered to proceed in due time to the frontiers.

I wrote to the Preſident ſome time ago for a partial ſupply of camp equipage; but in conſequence of our taking the field I muſt requeſt that all poſſible diſpatch may be made in ſending up a complete ſet of tents (or canvas and twine to make them) for the brigade, as it is probable the troops will not otherwiſe have tents to cover them in the cold ſeaſon.

I remain, with reſpect,
29th July 1774, Honourable Sir, and Gentlemen, Beſſouly. Your moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
A. Champion.

Agreed, we anſwer the Colonel's Letter as follows:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have received your favour of the 29th ultimo, with its encloſures.

We can only approve the ſteps which you have taken in conſequence of the requiſition of the Vizier; the diſtance precludes us from giving any inſtructions for preventing the ill effects which may be occaſioned by the march of our forces at ſo unſeaſonable a time. We implicitly rely on your care to the health of the men, the Europeans eſpecially, which we regard as the object moſt requiring your attention in the preſent campaign.

We are very happy to learn that the weather has been ſo favourable to this movement; ſhould it however prove otherwiſe after you have received this Letter, and the Europeans become ſickly, we would rather approve of your hazarding ſomething more in the field without them, than expoſe them to the fatal effects of ſo dangerous a ſeaſon; and adviſe their being again cantoned in the moſt elevated and healthy ſpot you can make choice of.

When the Board, in the inſtructions given to you, deſcribed the line of your operations, and of the territory which they intended to reduce for the Vizier, they had no idea of any Government ſubſiſting within the line of that deſcription but that of the Rohillas. If however, as appears to be the caſe from your Letter, there are doubts upon this ſubject, we know not on what grounds we can decide upon them. As the ſhorteſt expedient, we muſt recur to our original intentions, and declare, that we regard the whole plain country between the Ganges and the hills to be the object of the preſent war, both ſuch diſtricts as form an inconteſted part of the Rohilla territory, ſuch as have occaſionally been held in a ſtate of independence.

It would not anſwer our purpoſe to leave a mixed dominion within that ſpace, and it would afford an inſuperable obſtacle to the proſecution of the war, were we to admit of the privilege of any place whatever within it to afford an aſylum to the enemy. If, therefore, the Vizier ſhall require your aid in reducing the frontier Zemindars, it is our deſire that you do afford him your aſſiſtance. If it ſhould be found neceſſary even to purſue the enemy within the ſkirts of the hills, in order to prevent their collecting freſh ſtrength, we would adviſe the meaſure, although we muſt leave you the judge of that neceſſity. The Letter of our agreement with the Vizier, requiring us to proceed no further than to the ſkirts of the mountains, at the ſame time that we aſſent to the Vizier's requiſition of our aſſiſtance thus far; yet we ſhould be better pleaſed that he choſe the mode of accommodation with the Zemindars, rather than to engage in hoſtilities againſt them, when they may be by ſuch means avoided.

We have read over the Vizier's Letter, but do not remark any paſſage in it liable to exception, excepting only the alluſion repeatedly made to his own conſtruction of his engagement for the payment of the forty lacks ſtipulated for the preſent ſervice. This we think requires no comment or animadverſion, as the Letter addreſſed to him by the Preſident on ultimo, will, we hope, remove all his doubts and objections on this ſubject.

Concerning the movement of another brigade to the frontier of Babar, we ſhall wait the concluſion of the rains before we take this point into conſideration, as there is no probability of your being diſturbed by any other enemy than that we have now on our hands, till long after the ſetting in of the fair weather.

The Preſident informs us, that he has already given orders for the camp equipage of the 3d brigade to be forwarded to you; and a further ſupply to complete the number which may be required for your brigade, ſhall alſo follow with all poſſible diſpatch.

We are, Sir,
Fort William, Your moſt obedient the 22d Auguſt 1774. humble ſervants.

The Preſident likewiſe informs the Committee, That he has received advices that Ragonaut Row, having been abandoned by his followers, has thrown himſelf into the hands of Tuccooge Holcar and Mathegee Syndeah, who were conducting him to Poona a priſoner; and that the inteſtine diviſions which have for ſome time prevailed among the Marattas, are by this event to all appearance entirely accommodated.

The Preſident lays before the Committee, a Letter which he has juſt received from the Commander in Chief, encloſing one from the Vizier, dated the 8th Auguſt.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

Encloſed I have the pleaſure of ſending you copy of a Letter from his Excellency the Vizier, intimating his intentions intentions of making a preſent of ſeven lacks of rupees to the army in the field, in proof of the grateful ſenſe he has of their ſervices.

I cannot help expreſſing much ſatisfaction at this inſtance of his Exceſſency's bounty, which is much the more princely, that it has proceeded entirely from his own free-will and liberality, and that too at a time when there was no hope or expectation of the kind.

His Excellency having himſelf made his intentions public, I ſignified them to the Field Officers agreeably to his wiſhes, for the encouragement of the troops; but I at the ſame time gave him to underſtand, that your aſſent is neceſſary; and I flatter me it will be given with much cheerfulneſs, as it will be very agreeable to his Excellency, a proper mark of favour towards the brigade, and at the ſame time a laſting obligation conferred on,

(The Europeans in good health and ſpirits.)

Copy of a Letter from the Vizier to Colonel Champion, dated the laſt of Jummadee ul Awul, and encloſed in that Gentleman's Letter to the Governor of the 2d of Auguſt.

As the Engliſh brigade came from Calcutta to this place on my buſineſs, and the Gentlemen as well as the brigade have ſubmitted to the greateſt fatigues of hardſhips in the courſe of it, and have not yet received any recompence or gratuity from me, nor have the Gentlemen expreſſed any wiſh or importunity on this account, I have therefore determined to give ſeven lacks of rupees as a gratuity to the brigade and for the Gentlemen's expences. I give this Letter as my bond, that ſix months from this date (the laſt of Jummadee ul Awul) the ſum of ſeven lacks of rupees ſhall be paid to them.

I write this, my friend, for your information.

You may, if you pleaſe, inform Mr. Haſtings of this; but I will undoubtedly pay this ſum.

The Committee are of opinion, that as the promiſe made by the Vizier, and expreſſed in the foregoing Papers, has an intimate relation to the commands of the Court of Directors in the 9th paragraph of the Letter of the 24th December 1765, and to a ſubject on which the Board at large have given their expreſs opinion, the Committee cannot with propriety decide upon it by their own authority.

Reſolved, therefore, That it be ſubmitted to the Board, with a copy of this Minute.

The Board avoid entering into any diſcuſſion on this ſubject, as they find themſelves precluded from deciding upon it by the clear and expreſs prohibition contained in the late Act of Parliament, tranſmitted by the Court of Directors, with their commands of the 29th October 1773. The words of the Act are as follows:

Copy of a Clauſe of an Act of Parliament, An. 13° George 3d, intituled, An Act for eſtabliſhing certain Regulations for the better Management of the Affairs of the Eaſt India Company, &c.

Extract of the Act of Parliament.

And be it further enacted by the authority aforeſaid, That from and after the firſt day of Auguſt, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy-four, no perſon holding or exerciſing any civil or military office under the Crown or the ſaid United Company, in the Eaſt Indies, ſhall accept, receive or take, directly or indirectly, by himſelf or any other perſon or perſons on his behalf, or for his uſe or benefit, of and from any of the Indian Princes or Powers, or their Miniſters or Agents (or any of the Natives of Aſia) any preſent, gift, donation, gratuity or reward, pecuniary or otherwiſe, upon any account or on any pretence whatſoever, or any promiſe or engagement for any preſent, gift, donation, gratuity or reward: and if any perſon, holding or exerciſing any ſuch civil or military office, ſhall be guilty of any ſuch offence, and ſhall be thereof legally convicted in ſuch Supreme Court at Calcutta, or in the Mayor's Court in any other of the ſaid United Company's ſettlements where ſuch offence ſhall have been committed, every ſuch perſon ſo convicted ſhall forfeit double the value of ſuch preſent, gift, donation, gratuity or reward ſo taken and received, one moiety of which forfeiture ſhall be to the ſaid United Company, and the other moiety to him or them who ſhall inform or proſecute for the ſame, and alſo ſhall or may be ſent to England by the order of the Governor and Council of the Preſidency or Settlement where the offender ſhall be convicted, unleſs ſuch perſon ſo convicted ſhall give ſufficient ſecurity to remove him or themſelves within twelve months after ſuch conviction.

Agreed, therefore, that the following Letter be written to the Commander in Chief:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

Anſwer to the Commander in Chief.

The honourable the Preſident and Select Committee having thought proper to refer to our conſideration your Letter to the Preſident of the 8th inſtant, with copy of the Vizier's encloſed, informing him of a donation of ſeven lacks of rupees, granted by the Vizier to the army in actual ſervice under your command, by his obligation, payable in ſix months; we have choſen to avoid any diſcuſſion on the propriety of this meaſure, as we find ourſelves precluded from a deciſion upon it by an expreſs clauſe in the late Act of Parliament, tranſmitted us by the honourable the Court of Directors, which prohibits the ſervants of the Company, civil or military, from receiving any preſents upon any pretence whatſoever. For your better information, we ſend you encloſed a copy of the ſaid clauſe, which will doubtleſs appear to you a ſufficient reaſon for us to refuſe our aſſent to the acceptance of this gift.

APPEND'X. No. 27.

Read, the following Letter from Colonel Champion:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Yeſterday the allied armies arrived at this place, and the Vizier is now in poſſeſſion of the fort of Putter Gur. This morning I ſaluted his Excellency on the completion of the Rohilla conqueſt, and he was pleaſed to acknowledge it, by repeated diſcharges of his whole artillery.

Give me leave now, Gentlemen, through you, to offer my gratulations to the Honourable Board on the occaſion; the ſatisfaction which I derive from the ſucceſs of the expedition, is greatly heightened by the healthful ſtate of the troops.

The main body of the Rohillas are ſaid ſtill to conſiſt of about 40,000, are pent up at Lolldang, being within 16 coſ of us, where they are already in great diſtreſs for proviſions, having only three ſeer of grain for a rupee; they muſt of neceſſity, without delay, either ſubmit to ſuch terms as the Vizier ſhall grant them, or puſh into the hills, and endeavour to purchaſe or wreſt a ſettlement from the Rajahs, till a more convenient ſeaſon offers for making incurſions into the Country; but as his Excellency ſeems deſirous of an accommodation with Fizulla Cawn, it is probable an agreement may take place.

Camp, near Putter Gur, 17th Auguſt 1774. I am, &c. A. Champion.

Agreed, on the following anſwer:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have had the pleaſure to receive yours, dated the 17th ultimo; and we congratulate you upon the entire reduction of the Rohilla country to the Vizier's Government, which we conſider as effected by the ſurrender of Putter Gur, and the inextricable diſtreſs to which the Rohilla army is reduced. Our ſatisfaction is increaſed on this occaſion by the Vizier's intentions of terminating the war in the manner you mention, by an accommodation with the Rohillas, which muſt be eaſily ſettled in their diſtreſsful ſituation; and we hope his Excellency will be diſpoſed to conciliate their affections to his Government, by acceding to lenient terms.

The ſervice being completed, wherein the brigade under your command was engaged, a repetition of our thanks is due to you and the troops who effected it; which we requeſt you to accept, and to make known to them. When we are informed of the final adjuſtment of the Vizier's conqueſts, and the Preſident ſhall have received information from himſelf on that ſubject, we will be able to ſend you orders reſpecting the troops in the field.

We are, &c.

Fort William, 8th September 1774. Warren Haſtings. W. Alderſey. P. M. Dacres.

Bengal Select Conſultations, the 17th September 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire. William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following Letter, addreſſed to him by Colonel Champion, with his reply immediately made.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire.

Sir,

Incloſed I ſend you the correſpondence between the Vizier and Fezula Khan, and myſelf, with the ſubſtance of the converſations which paſſed between Fezulah Khan and Mr. Murray; from which laſt you will clearly obſerve that Fezulah is not his own maſter.

I am juſt now, my good ſir, in a ſituation truly perplexing;—the Rohilla country is completely and entirely conquered—the fugitives are poſted in a very ſtrong ſituation, within the diſtricts of the Rajahs—they have all to combat for. Perhaps the ſucceſs of the event might make Government overlook my going to Lalldang, but ſuch approbation depends on a chance. The matter is very weighty; and there is more riſk than I ſhould chuſe to run, without a neceſſity; yet it is grating to have an enemy ſo near; and it will be dangerous, ſhould they not be reduced, or no accommodation take place; becauſe, ſo ſoon as another enemy is in motion to attack the Vizier lower down, we muſt have troubleſome doings. The Nabob, I ſurmiſe, is privately diſpoſed even to give Fezulla a part of the conquered country; nay, to have a connection, by accepting of Fezulla's daughter as a wife for one of his ſons; yet he will not give ſufficient authority to bring matters to the amicable deciſion he wiſhes for. I ſhould have leſs difficulty in this matter, but for your deſire that I ſhould diſſuade the Vizier from giving any of the Rohilla country to Fezula. I am perfectly firm in the opinion I before ſignified to you on that ſubject; but I muſt not put it in competition with yours. The Vizier ſays, he cannot pay the 40 lacks till he quits the field. He tells us, in a ſhort time the Marattas will be in motion; they will call our attention from hence. The Rohillas, if matters are not decided with them one way or the other, will take the advantage of our abſence; and if we are obliged to go far down, may perhaps recover their Country. Thus the 40 lacks will become precarious; the Vizier will either deny the payment, on pretence that the Rohilla war is not finiſhed, or he will at leaſt delay it, alledging he cannot leave the field.

If the Committee's anſwer to my Letter of the 29th July was arrived, I ſhould know how to proceed with certainty I am hourly importuned by the Vizier, and I wiſh to give way to his inclinations as far as I can; it is therefore reſolved to move five coſ further, near the banks of the Ganges, in order more effectually to diſtreſs the enemy; but I will, if poſſible, delay an attack till I receive the Committee's anſwer to my ſaid Letter: if I am forbid to proceed, the Vizier muſt come to terms, and the ready money which he may get, will pay a conſiderable part of our forty lacks. If I am deſired to go on, I will not heſitate; but whatever happens, be aſſured all is well intended by,

Camp near Puttergur, 26th Auguſt 1774. Sir, &c. A. Champion.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

I have received your favours of the 21ſt and 26th ultimo, which both arrived this morning: the latter incloſing copies of your correſpondence on the ſubject of the late negociations, and of the converſation which paſſed between Fyzula Cawn and Mr. Murray. To this I now reply.

I hope, notwithſtanding the heſitation expreſſed in the concluſion, that you have reſolved on proſecuting the war to a final iſſue, without waiting for the reply of the Select Committee to your Letter of the 29th July; becauſe I think it appears very plainly, that Fizula Cawn and his adherents lay at your mercy; becauſe I apprehend much inconveniences from delays, and becauſe I am morally certain that no good will be gained by negociating. If however, contrary to this expectation, you ſhall have ſuſpended your operations, or from any other cauſe the war ſhall not be concluded on the receipt of this, it is my expreſs deſire that you do on no account depute any perſon under your command to treat with the enemy; but leave it wholly to the Vizier to conduct every meaſure of this kind by his own agents, and in ſuch a manner as he ſhall think proper, ſince he is the principal and we only acceſſaries in the war. Beſides, by allowing Fizula Cawn to treat with both, to make appeals from you to the Vizier, and from the Vizier to you, you can hardly fail both of you to become the inſtruments of his intrigues, and he will acquire a confidence from ſuch an indulgence, which he cannot place on his own ſtrength or conſequence.

Indeed, I could not read without indignation, the converſation of Fizulla Cawn with Mr. Murray. The language of the former was highly preſuming, inſolent, and evaſive; and I think Mr. Murray ought to have left him after the firſt interview. A circumſtance ſtruck me very forcibly in Mr. Murray's narrative. "I came (ſays Fezula Cawn) to this place, which is the diſtrict of the Rajah Gurual." This intimation, which was as wide as eaſt and weſt from the buſineſs before him, too manifeſtly ſhews the foundation on which he built his hopes of ſucceeding, by a refuſal to accede to the propoſitions made him, and that he has availed himſelf of your ſuppoſed inability to purſue him beyond the acknowledged limits of the Rohilla juriſdiction.

Although I have referred you to the Vizier for conducting all negociations, I by no means wiſh that he ſhould loſe time by ſeeking for an accommodation. It will be more effectual, more deciſive, and more conſiſtent with his dignity, indeed with his honour, which he has already pledged, to abide by his firſt offers to dictate the conditions of peace, and to admit only an acceptance without reſervation, or a clear refuſal from his adverſary.

I intend to communicate the ſubſtance of your advices to the Select Committee, for their fuller ſentiments on the meaſures to be hereafter taken. In the meantime, to prevent the danger of delay, I deſire that you will be pleaſed to receive theſe inſtructions for your guide.

I am, Sir, &c.

Fort William, the 16th September 1774. (Signed) Warren Haſtings.

A true copy.
Robert Patton,
Milit^y Secr^y.

The Committee approve the Preſident's anſwer to the Letter written by Colonel Champion; and as it appears that the remainder of the Rohilla forces under Fizula Cawn, at the time in which the laſt advices from camp were tranſmitted, were reduced to a ſtate which muſt have rendered it improbable that they could either hope to regain their poſſeſſions from the Vizier, or maintain their preſent poſt, if our army ſhould proſecute their operations againſt them; it is evident that their refuſal to accede to the Vizier's propoſals, and their demand of terms ſo diſproportioned to their ſituation and circumſtances, were founded on the idea that we would not act beyond certain limits; and that by continuing out of the reach of our operations, they might protract the war, and oblige the Vizier to comply with their terms, or perhaps wait for eventual circumſtances which might conduce to retrieve their affairs.

Reſolved, That orders ſhall be immediately ſent to Colonel Champion, if the war ſhould not be terminated when they arrive, to proſecute the war with the utmoſt vigour againſt the Rohillas, and to uſe his utmoſt endeavours with the army under his command, either to oblige them to yield to the terms which the Vizier may be pleaſed to grant, or entirely ſubdue or diſperſe them, without regarding the limitation of the Rohilla poſſeſſions; provided he can act effectually and expeditiouſly againſt them. And that the following Letter on the ſubject be written him:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

The Preſident has laid before us your Letter to him, under date the 26th ult^o, with the reply which he immediately diſpatched to it, and which agrees with our ſentiments. We now proceed to give you more at large our inſtructions to your conduct in proſecuting the war againſt Fizula Cawn and his adherents.

If upon the receipt of this Letter the war ſhould not have been brought to a concluſion, either by the reduction of the Rohilla army, or an accommodation having taken place between the Vizier and Fezula Cawn, you are authorized and directed by us to purſue the moſt vigorous meaſures, in conjunction with the Vizier, effectually to reduce the Rohilla army, without confining your operations to the Rohilla dominions; and even if they ſhould have croſſed the Ganges, and you have reaſon to ſuppoſe that by croſſing either part or the whole of your army, you may be able ſpeedily to terminate the war, by acting deciſively againſt them, and obliging them to diſperſe, you have alſo our authority for purſuing this meaſure; but as ſoon as this ſervice ſhall have been performed, you will immediately re-croſs with the army, and retire within the limits originally preſcribed to your operations, making Fizula Cawn and his adherents the only objects of your hoſtilities, and undertaking this enterprize only if the occaſion ſhould promiſe immediate ſucceſs.

But if his Excellency the Vizier ſhould be diſpoſed rather to accommodate matters with the Rohillas by negociation, than to proſecute hoſtilities to the utmoſt againſt them, you are to permit him in this reſpect entirely to purſue his own meaſures, and employ his own agents; nor are you at all to interfere unleſs he ſhould ſolicit you to join your ſanction to the terms propoſed, or the accommodations agreed upon, to add to their validity; and in that caſe it will be proper for you to receive from him a formal application in writing; but on no account are you to ſuffer any perſon under your command or authority to be employed as a negociator on the part of the Vizier.

Fort William, the 17th September 1774. We are, &c.

As the orders now intended to be tranſmitted to Colonel Champion, and which cannot be delayed without a great riſque of fruſtrating the deſign, are contrary to the Letter of Inſtructions given by the Board; the Committee are of opinion, that a reference of this day's Proceedings ought to be ſubmitted to the Council at large, for their approbation, or for their appeal, if they judge the latitude allowed to the Colonel liable to dangerous conſequences.

Reſolved, That a copy of this day's Proceedings be laid before the Council next Council day.

Bengal Select Conſultations, the 19th September 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire. William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

The Preſident lays before the Committee the following extract of a reſolution of the Board; in conſequence of which the following Letter was written to the Commander in Chief from this Department.

Extract of Secret Department Conſultation, the 19th September 1774.

The Board approve of the motives which have induced the Select Committee to give the latitude which they have allowed to Colonel Champion, but think it expedient to explain their intentions more fully, and to draw the line of his operations in more direct terms, but conformable to the orders above given him.

Agreed, That the following Letter be written and diſpatched to him from the Select Committee.

To Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

The latitude allowed in our laſt Letter of the 17th inſtant, being a deviation from the expreſs Letter of the original original Inſtructions which you received from the Board, we have thought it neceſſary to communicate to them thoſe orders; which we have accordingly done, and have received their confirmation of them; but leſt the terms of our Letter ſhould not have been ſufficiently explanatory of our intentions, we think it neceſſary to give you this further illuſtration both of our wiſh, and that of the Board, in the latitude above referred to. If Fizula Cawn, or the forces under his command, ſhall have croſſed the Ganges, and preſuming on the limitation of the ſcene of your operations, ſhall venture to encamp ſo near as to put it into your power, by ſuddenly croſſing the river, either with the whole or a part of the brigade under your command, to attack them by ſurprize, and to diſperſe them, in that caſe, and in that caſe only, we think it adviſable, and we direct, that you do exceed the preſcribed line of your operations to attack them, but that you do not perſiſt in any continued operations againſt them on that ſide of the river, or follow them beyond one day's march if they ſhould betake themſelves to flight; and that if you ſhall either have defeated or diſperſed the enemy, or they ſhall have prevented an attack by flight, in either caſe you are immediately to re croſs the river, and confine yourſelf within the original preſcribed line of your operations.

We thought it neceſſary to be thus explicit, not from any doubt which we entertain in your diſcretion, but to enable you with confidence and ſatisfaction to yourſelf, to carry theſe orders into execution.

We are, &c.

APPENDIX, No. 28.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 6th October 1774.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire. William Alderſey, and Philip Milner Dacres, eſquires.

READ, the following Letters from Colonel Champion, dated the 28th Auguſt, 3d, 6th, and 10th September.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

On the 17th inſtant I had the pleaſure of informing you of the Vizier's being in poſſeſſion of the fort of Putter Gur, and of all the Rohilla country; and that it was probable an accommodation would take place between him and the enemy.

His Excellency offered Fizula a Saydad for 15,000 men in that part of the Doab lately taken from the Marattas, on condition of receiving from Fizula the half of his treaſure and effects. The Rohilla Chief dreading the power of the Marattas, declined accepting of a ſettlement in the Doab, but offered half his treaſure and effects, if the Vizier would give him a ſettlement in the conquered country. The Vizier diſſented to this propoſition, but aſſured Fizula Cawn that he would at all times ſupport him in the Doab againſt the Marattas; Fizula then addreſſed me, ſaying, he had ſome things to communicate, which he did not think proper to commit to writing, and requeſted I would ſend my Secretary to hear what he had to ſay; being extremely deſirous to take away all pretence of further delaying the payment of the ſum ſtipulated for the conqueſt of this country, which his Excellency alledges he cannot diſcharge till he is at liberty to quit the field; I directed Mr. Murray, with the written approbation of the Vizier, to proceed to the Rohilla camp, and I took the opportunity of ſending the Field Engineer in company with him, that in caſe no agreement ſhould take place, and we ſhould be obliged to attack the enemy, we might benefit by the Engineer's obſervations.

When Mr. Murray had heard what Fizula had to ſay, he found it was little elſe but declamation on paſt hardſhips, with expreſſions of great diſtruſt in the Vizier, and earneſt wiſhes that I would intercede with his Excellency and the Adminiſtration, to obtain a ſettlement for him and his followers in ſome part of the Rohilla country.

Mr. Murray was commiſſioned to endeavour to bring Fizulah Khan to camp with him, in order that he might perſonally pay his reſpects to the Vizier, and endeavour to ſettle all diſputes. Mr. Murray was ſo far ſucceſsful as to obtain Fizulah's entire conſent to accompany him; but their Councils (in which every petty Serdar muſt be heard) being diſtracted, a majority of the Chiefs denied Fizulah the power of putting his intention into execution. They however propoſed that Aly Mahummud Khan, Fizullah's eldeſt ſon, aged about twenty-five, ſhould be ſent to treat with the Vizier. This propoſition being communicated to his Excellency, was rejected, and Mr. Murray recalled.

The Nabob did me the favour of a viſit yeſterday morning, and importuned me to advance upon the enemy, in conſequence of which I moved to this ground, but ſignified to his Excellency that I could not proceed beyond the acknowledged bounds of the Rohilla dominions; the Vizier ſtrongly urged that Lalldang is within the Rohilla country, and affirmed that the inhabitants of the villages cloſe to it had always paid rent to Zabitah Khan and his father. The truth with regard to the villages, as far as I have been able to learn, is, that they belonged to the Rajahs, but that the Rohillas have often collected the rents; be this however as it may, the enemy being actually encamped on the hills, they are beyond the limits of the country which I was entruſted to conquer; and although I moſt heartily wiſh to comply with the Vizier's requeſt of reducing Fizulah Khan, yet I am extremely ſcrupulous of running any riſk of diſapprobation. If in anſwer to the Letter which I had the honour of addreſſing you on the 29th ultimo, I ſhould be directed to proceed no farther, the Vizier muſt accept of Fizulah Khan's offer, by which if his Excellency's information is juſt he will receive above 30 lacks of Rupees, and if on the contrary, I ſhould be authorized to attack the enemy at Lalldang, I will do it, but I have thought it neceſſary to deſire his Excellency to conſider, that if the enemy's camp is ſtormed their treaſure will fall to the captors, and adviſed him to continue the blockade ſome time longer.

We are now within ten coſs of the enemy, whoſe communication with the Ganges and the Rohilla country is completely cut off, ſo that they can neither retreat to, or receive ſupplies from, any place, excepting the country between the hills.

In caſe peace ſhould be concluded between the Vizier and the Rohillas, I requeſt you will do me the favour of informing me, whether, and how far, I may concern myſelf on the part of Adminiſtration in ſuch treaty as may be agreed upon, either regarding the Doab or the Rohilla country.

His Excellency informed me, that he has received advices of the Marattas having moved to the Southward, but that he doubts not they will pay him a viſit in the courſe of the ſeaſon.

Camp near Mohanpore, Auguſt 28th 1774.

I am reſpectfully, &c.
A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I was duly favoured with your Letters of the 1ſt and 14th July; to the firſt I would have replied earlier, but that I wiſhed to comply with your deſire of obtaining information concerning the identity of Meer Fettee Aly;

and

and I now encloſe the declarations of ſeveral perſons, particularly that of the nurſe who ſuckled him, in teſtimony of his being the real ſon of Saddoe Aly

The ſum which you have been pleaſed to allot for his expences, is by no means adequate to his moſt neceſſary diſburſements. Beſides furniſhing him with tents and other neceſſaries, I had given him 500 R monthly, before the receipt of your Letter. This being a very moderate allowance, eſpecially whilſt he is moving about with the army, I have taken upon me to continue it; and I flatter myſelf it will meet with approbation. I wiſh to receive further inſtructions concerning him.

Regarding my Letter of the 11th June, I am to obſerve, with all due ſubmiſſion, Gentlemen, that you muſt greatly have miſapprehended it; I never wiſhed, nor expreſſed a wiſh, to be the arbiter of peace and war with the Vizier, neither to have the power of correcting his exceſſes by force. "A full authority, effectually to prevent his perpetrating any enormity under the ſhield of our ſtrength, &c" is no more or leſs of denying to ſecond or countenance ſuch proceedings.—And has the Adminiſtration no full authority over the Company's troops? If not, Gentlemen, I am afraid the expreſſion which has been excepted againſt, "that the Britiſh name is in the hands of the Vizier," is but too much juſtified.

It is true, that if the Britiſh name is in any manner committed, it muſt be from the Treaty itſelf; and I am charged with want of candour, for not having ſtated the reflection earlier. After my acknowledgments for this compliment, I anſwer, that had I ſeen the Treaty, which I do not recollect to have done, it would be vanity in me to imagine that I could diſcover faults in it, which has eſcaped the notice of ſo many Gentlemen of nicer diſcernment. If I did not foreſee the evil, it is enough on my part that I complained ſo ſoon as I was ſenſible of its effects; the power of adminiſtering a remedy lay elſewhere.

It is true, Gentlemen, that declamation is uſual in repreſenting miſchiefs; and therefore I ſhould not have been ſurprized that the Letters which I tranſmitted to you had but little effect on your perceptions, if I had not at the ſame time atteſted the truth of the complaints, which I will venture to ſay bear more than one or two inſtances of cruelty; I might add others, ſuch as theſe unhappy captives being driven to the neceſſity of ſupplicating and receiving alms from myſelf and Gentlemen of my family, to purchaſe ſuſtenance; their even begging for water to drink, their ſtruggling who ſhould firſt be ſerved with it, &c. In ſhort, the proofs of the groſs maltreatment of theſe families amounts to an axiom in the minds of the Engliſh army, and even in the Vizier's own troops.

Mr. Middleton, I preſume, has informed the Preſident of the reſult of his application to the Vizier, concerning the 40 lacks.

The troops continue to enjoy good health. No remarkable occurrence ſince my laſt. I remain with reſpect, &c.

Camp near Mohanpore, 3d September 1774. A. Champion.

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Champion to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal; dated Camp near Mohanpore, the 6th September 1774.

Since my laſt, nothing remarkable has happened. We have, however, accounts of the increaſing diſtreſs of the enemy.

I have received ſeveral Letters from the Nabob Zabita Khan, repreſenting that the Vizier is under the moſt ſolemn engagements not to deprive him of the diſtricts or fort of Putter Gur; and although it may not be thought adviſable to interfere, I deem it incumbent in me to make you acquainted with the circumſtance.

APPENDIX No. 28.

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Champion to the Preſident and Select Committee at Fort William in Bengal; dated Camp near Mohanpore, the 10th September 1774

The Vizier has actually addreſſed his Majeſty, propoſing an interview on the banks of the Ganges, and on the ſuppoſition that a meeting will take place I am to requeſt I may be honoured with your inſtructions whether to interfere on the part of the Company, in tranſactions or agreements between his Majeſty and the Vizier, regarding the Doab and Rohilla country, and whether it is your deſire that I ſhould make any mention of what his Excellency calls the Bengal treaſure.

As I have permiſſion from the Board to return to the Preſidency, I meet to avail myſelf of it as ſoon as I can with propriety leave the army. It is therefore probable, that I may be on my way down before the anſwer to this addreſs can arrive; and would recommend, that a ſealed duplicate of your reply ſhould be ſent, under cover, to Colonel Gaſtez, with inſtructions to deliver it to me, if with the army; if not, to open and act in obedience to it.

I truſt you have given ſuch orders regarding the ſupply of camp equipage as that it will be up as ſoon as poſſible.

I am very anxious to receive anſwers from the ſeveral Letters which I have had the honour of addreſſing to you; replies to all thoſe of July are due.

Fuzullah Khan and the Rohilla Chiefs have removed their families further into the country, between the hills. No other occurrence ſince my laſt.

Agreed we anſwer the Colonel's Letter in the following terms:

To, Colonel Alexander Champion, Commander in Chief of the Forces under the Preſidency.

Sir,

We have duly received your Letters of the 28th Auguſt, 3d, 6th, and 10th September.

We muſt conclude, that long before you can receive this, your operations againſt Fizula Cawn will have finally ceaſed, either by his defeat, or by peace concluded with him; leſt we ſhould be diſappointed in this expectation, and a treaty of peace ſhould be propoſed between the Vizier and Fizula Cawn, if both parties ſhould unite in deſiring your interpoſition, we approve of your either atteſting the treaty, or acting as guarantee on the part of the Company for the performance of it; but in every other reſpect we deſire you to conform to our inſtructions in our Letter of the 17th.

We approve of the allowance you have given Fittee Aly Cawn and deſire you will continue it to him.

In reply to the other ſubjects contained in your Letter of 3d ultimo, we have only to refer you to the orders which we have repeatedly and explicitly given regarding the line of your conduct, which do not admit a further diſcuſſion.

Whatever engagements may have been contracted between the Vizier and Z. bita Cawn, we will have no concern in them, or in any other engagements formed without our participation. On this ſubject we have already given you general but full inſtructions.

As we are determined to avoid interfering in any affair which may draw our army beyond the line of its preſent operations, we would not have you interfere in any negociations that will take place at the propoſed interview between the King and the Vizier, in any manner which ſhall pledge the faith of our Government for the performance of any ſtipulations agreed on betwixt them. The preſence of the brigade will be a ſure defence to the Vizier's dominions during the abſence of his forces, and its neighbourhood to the Doab will have a conſiderable influence on the operations in that country, to which we conclude they will be principally confined, if any hoſtilities ſhould take place againſt the Marattas in conſequence of the plan which may be concerted between the King and the Vizier; and in this reſpect we conceive that the ſervice eventually, though not immediately afforded to the King, may merit ſome return on his part. We deſire no other than a formal renunciation of his pretenſions to the tribute of Bengal, which is an object with us, merely from the conſideration that it may prove the ſource of future diſcontent between the King and the Company, ſince we can by no means admit, and are perſuaded that our Superiors will juſtify us in this opinion, that his Majeſty has any right to the exaction of that tribute, or ever received it but as a voluntary act flowing from the bounty and attachment of the Company towards him; and viewing it in this light, we conceive that it is at leaſt as much the intereſt of the King to comply with our wiſhes. We think it neceſſary to add, to obviate any miſconception of our intentions, that we will not agree to any compenſation whatever for this renunciation, nor wiſh to accept it, unleſs it ſhall comprehend all claim of arrears, as well as future payments, on account of the tribute. We think alſo, that it will be ſufficient ſimply to propoſe, or to requeſt it as a matter of courſe, but neither to ſolicit his Majeſty's compliance nor repeat the requeſt, it being, as we have already ſaid, a point of little moment to the Company whether he grants it or not. All other points, of whatever nature, you may leave to be adjuſted between the King and the Vizier, unleſs any ſhould ariſe which we do not foreſee, and which ſhall not be contradictory to the line of your inſtructions; in which we truſt to your diſcretion to act as you ſhall judge moſt fitting for the intereſt of the Company.

In caſe you ſhall have quitted the army before this arrives, and it ſhould reach your hands, we deſire you will forward it to Colonel Galliez, and that he will conform to the contents of it.

Fort William, the 6th October 1774. We are, &c.

Tranſlation of a Letter framed by the Nawab Vizier, to be written from Colonel Champion to Muged o Dowlah, in reply to his Letter, received the 29th Auguſt.

I have received your Letter, and comprehend the particulars: it is evident that the Engliſh Chiefs, the Nawab Vizier, and Nawab Nijuff Chan; are well-wiſhers to his Majeſty, and all three are ready with their lives for his benefit: formerly, when the Marattas cauſed diſturbances at Delhi, the Nawab Vizier marched from Fyzabad to join his Majeſty, but they got thither before him, and the Marattas being enemies to the kingdom, the Nawab Vizier twice afforded the Rohillas aſſiſtance, ſhewed them much friendſhip, and was at infinite expence on their account; and now conformably to his Majeſty's order, has ſubdued the Rohillas accordingly. When this matter was formerly in agitation, and Mahummed Elich Cawn at Delhi, his Majeſty marched thence, but by reaſon of illneſs returned. Now the Nawab Vizier, in conjunction with the Engliſh, has ſubdued the Rohillas, as was befitting; and now the Nawab Vizier and Engliſh Chiefs are ready and prepared to pay the dues of ſervice and obedience to his Majeſty, and if he will ſet out from Delhi and proceed to the banks of the Ganges, here the Nawab Vizier, the Engliſh Chiefs, and Nawab Nujiff Chan, will attend him and pay their reſpects: and it is neceſſary to obſerve, that if his Majeſty will come to the banks of the Ganges, that one matter will alſo be ſettled, which will conduce to the benefit of the empire, and of all parties mutually, and every means will be uſed for the advantage of the King and the Nawab Vizier, and the Engliſh Chiefs will in all ways be ready with their beſt ſervices for his Majeſty, and in no reſpect be inattentive to his pleaſure.

On Colonel Champion deſiring the Vizier, by a Letter, to explain that matter mentioned in the above, which was to be ſettled if his Majeſty came to the banks of the Ganges, his Excellency tranſmitted the following Letter on September 5, 1774.

You deſire me to explain myſelf on the article which was to be ſettled with the King:—It is this, the engagements that ſubſiſt between his Majeſty and me, on the ſubjects of country, I ſent ſome time ago for your peruſal: I am now firm to my agreement to the King, and wiſh to ſee the empire in a proper ſtate, and whatever country of his Majeſty is in the poſſeſſion of enemies, to take it, and reſign it to him; and whenever his Majeſty will come to the banks of the Ganges, you and I meeting him there will debate on his foregoing payment of the treaſure paid into the royal treaſury by the Company for Bengal, and repreſenting it in a proper manner, induce him to excuſe it, and if his Majeſty will quit Delhi, I will attend him, and adjuſt the condition of the empire; after that no enemy will attempt to excite commotions in Hindoſtan, and the kingdom will flouriſh: but if he remains in this manner at Deloi, the Marattas will ſoon endeavour to cauſe diſturbances, and, God not preventing, he again falls into their hands; from this there can be no good, it will be the ruin of the empire.

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Champion, Commander in Chief, to the Nabob Mujed o Dowlah.

The Nawab Vizier has ſignified his wiſhes to me, that if his Majeſty will come to the banks of the Ganges, the engagements which ſubſiſt between the King and him would certainly be performed; and I myſelf am of opinion that his Majeſty's coming would be attended with much advantage, and that all affairs would be ſettled to his ſatisfaction. I hope alſo that his Majeſty will ſeriouſly reflect, that if he calls the Marattas to his aſſiſtance, whether their preſence will not be productive of conſequences contrary to his hopes, the whole empire be thereby deſolated, and no regulation of the affairs of the country take place? For my own part, I think it beſt that if the Nawab Vizier requeſts his Majeſty to come, by all means he do come to the banks of the Ganges, and the agreements between him and the Nawab Vizier be fulfilled. This will cauſe the empire and the royal affairs to flouriſh, and I beg you will entreat his Majeſty to wait for the replies to theſe Letters from Culcutta.

Letter from Bengal to the Court of Directors, 17th October 1774.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

1. The ſame reaſons which induce us to addreſs you from the other Department, on the cloſe of our Adminiſtration, make it alſo expedient that we ſhould write you from this; with an account of our Proceedings ſince our laſt advices. The whole will be left under the care of the new Government, to be forwarded to you by the firſt ſhip.

2. Encloſed are duplicates of our Letters by the Reſolution and Swallow, and triplicate of that over-land of the 25th April laſt.

3. By the firſt of theſe you were informed of the march of the brigade under Colonel Champion to the aſſiſtance of the Vizier in his expedition againſt the Rohilla country, lying betwixt the Ganges and the mountains, on the terms and conditions which we ſo amply ſpecified in that and our preceding advices. In our Letters over-land, we briefly noted that we had received accounts of a complete victory gained over theſe people at the fields of St George, in which their Chief, Haſiz Rhamut Cawn, was killed; the particulars ſtand in the Conſultation referred to in the margin.

4. For a regular connected account of the operations of the army during the campaign, we muſt beg leave to refer you to the Select Committee, with whom Colonel Champion

Champion carried on his chief correſpondence, according to the directions of the Board; and ſhall in this Department confine ourſelves to ſuch points as came to us in reference from them, or ſuch as we thought proper to interfere in directing ourſelves.

5. Soon after, and in conſequence of the above-mentioned victory, our troops took and put the Vizier in poſſeſſion of Pittybut, Bireily, Owla, and Biſſouly, the places of chief note in the Country; by which we thought that we had completely acquired a right to the forty lacks ſtipulated for our aid in this enterprize, and therefore directed the Commander in Chief to apply to the Vizier, in conjunction with the Reſident at his Court, for payment; but as we foreſaw that it might be impoſſible for the Vizier, in the middle of the campaign and at a diſtance from his capital, to pay down the whole immediately, we inſtructed theſe Gentlemen to relax ſo far in their demands, as not to inſiſt abſolutely on the whole in ready money, but to accept of ſuch as he could give in part, and leave the reſt to be ſettled by a negociation between him and the Reſident; in which however the primary and eſſential article was to be an acknowledgment of our right to the whole.

6 What has occurred ſince in conſequence of theſe inſtructions, has not come under our notice in this Department, as Colonel Champion, in obedience to our directions at that time, correſponded afterwards ſolely with the Select Committee upon the ſubject, and they will doubtleſs adviſe you fully relating to it.

7. That Committee thought proper, in the courſe of their correſpondence with the Commander in Chief, to make a reference to us on a point in which they thought they ſtood in need of our advice and concurrence. This was on information from him, that he had received intelligence of Nudjiff Cawn's being on his march with a conſiderable body of troops to claim, in behalf of the King, one-half of the Country lately conquered from the Rohillas, in virtue, as he alledged, of a treaty formerly concluded between the King and the Vizier; but by which agreement the Commander in Chief ſuſpected he was not now willing to abide; and therefore he craved the ſpecial directions of the Board, as to the manner in which he ſhould act, ſhould they, the Vizier and Nudjiff Cawn, come to an open rupture about it.

8. We did not heſitate in reply to this, to direct him, that as we had no knowledge of ſuch a Treaty of Participation, if the Vizier denied it, he the Commander in Chief was not to ſuppoſe its exiſtence, but continue to ſupport and aſſiſt the Vizier in the conqueſt of that Country againſt Nudjiff Cawn and all other opponents.

9. They alſo referred to us the caſe of the Vizier's having made an offer of ſeven lacks of rupees as a preſent to the army, and actually conſigned into the hands of Colonel Champion an obligation, payable in ſeven months, to that amount. Whatever might have been our ſentiments with regard to the pretenſions of the troops, for their merits and ſervices, to ſuch a favour from the Vizier, we ſhould not have thought ourſelves warranted to conſent to ſuch a preſent without your ſpecial commands being firſt had on the ſubject; but what precluded us from any conſideration on the matter was, that the receipt of this preſent muſt have fallen within the penalty of the Act of Parliament which took place from the 1ſt Auguſt laſt. We therefore thought it ſufficient to tranſmit to the Commander in Chief, to be made known to the principal officers of the army, the Clauſe in the ſaid Act which prohibited it.

APPENDIX, No. 29.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Select Committee of Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 17th March 1774.

Par. 4th. IN the meantime Nijuff Cawn, the King's General, who ſupported by his perſonal abilities the remains of the royal authority, having defeated the Jauts in a pitched battle, and being recovered from the wounds which he then received, had marched to inveſt Agra, the capital city belonging to that tribe. The Vizier, who though little attached to the intereſt of the King, carried on his operations under that ſanction, could not upon this occaſion decline to contribute his aid, and either forward to make a ſhew of his ſervices or jealous of the undivided reputation which his perſonal rival was likely to gain by the capture of Agra, he diſpatched a part of his army, with ſome guns, to aſſiſt in carrying on the ſiege. Nujuff Cawn's army alone conſiſted of above 40,000 men, yet being mutinous, ill appointed, and in want of the artillery proper for ſuch an undertaking, the ſiege was protracted longer than could have been expected from the indifferent ſtate of the fortifications, and the little defence made by the beſieged. The garriſon at laſt capitulated on the 15th of February, having obtained more honourable terms than their behaviour or ſituation ſeemed to entitle them to; and Nujuff Cawn took poſſeſſion of the fortreſs in the King's name.

Par. 5th. This event, added to their former ill fortune, threatened to complete the ruin of the Jauts, who are now ſtripped of all their extenſive dominions, and reduced to a few inconſiderable forts, with petty territories which ſurround them, while the minority of their preſent Chief, and the diſcord and treachery which reigns among the leading men, cuts off every proſpect of their being able to retrieve their affairs.

Par. 6th. During theſe tranſactions the Maratta Chiefs were ſo fully occupied with their internal diſputes as to be unable to take any part in the affairs of Indoſtan. Ragonaut Row, who had ſucceeded to the government of Poona on the murder of his nephew, was not got well eſtabliſhed in authority. The exceptionable means by which he obtained the command, the mutual diſtruſt which prevailed between him and the different leaders, and the low ſtate of his treaſury, unequal to the ſupport of his numerous forces, conſpired to render his ſituation very precarious. The Berar Chiefs, Moodajee Boonſela and Shabajee Boonſela, being at variance with one another, took different ſides on this occaſion; the firſt being courted by Ragonaut Row, joined with his forces; the latter ſeemed to attach himſelf to the intereſts of Nizam Ally, between whom and Ragonaut there were many cauſes of diſſention.

Par. 7th. The two Maratta Chiefs, at the head of 60,000 men, proceeded to invade the dominions of Nizam Ally, who met them at Beder, on the borders of his Country, with an army inferior in number; and ſeveral ſkirmiſhes enſued, but without coming to a general engagement. At laſt an interview being agreed on, ſome points of diſputes were waved by the Marattas, on Nizam Ally engaging to aſſiſt him with a ſtipulated number of troops in caſe of an emergency, and an accommodation for the preſent took place.

Par. 8th. Ragonaut Row being now diſtreſſed for money to pay his troops, and ſurrounded with a numerous and diſcontented army, whom it was dangerous to keep in a ſtate of inactivity, inſtead of returning to Poona, took the reſolution of marching Southward, and proceeded a conſiderable way beyond the river Khiſta, but with what deſign we are not well informed. His abſence from Poona gave room for the Chiefs diſaffected to his intereſt to carry on their intrigues; and a ſtrong party, headed by Shabajee Boonſela, and ſome of the principal officers, and ſecretly favoured by Nizam Ally, have at laſt thrown off the maſk, and declared their intention of depriving him of the Government. The widow of Narrain Row, the predeceſſor of Ragonaut, being far advanced in her pregnancy, has afforded them a pretext for their conduct; and having conveyed her to a place of ſafety, they have aſſumed the Government in her name, and that of her iſſue; have impriſoned the friends of Ragonaut and are employed in levying a very large army. As ſoon as news of this reached the Maratta camp, Ragonaut abandoned his his deſigns of invaſion, and move l back towards his own Country. The iſſue of this affair is yet uncertain; but from the formidable appearance of the combination, the diſaffection of Raghuut's forces, and the few reſources of which he is maſter there is the greateſt reaſon to conclude it will prove fatal to his Government.

Par. 9th In conſequence of the Vizier's requiſition, the ſecond brigade has lately marched into his dominions, on the terms mentioned in our former addreſs. They will probably be employed only in protecting his Country, while he is carrying on his operations againſt the Maratta diſtricts, as he is likely, in the preſent poſture of affairs, to meet with little interruption; and we ſhall ſtudiouſly avoid taking an active part againſt the Marattas, until we are favoured with your commands.

APPENDIX, No. 30.

Articles of Agreement between the King Shah Alum and the Company.

THE Nabob Nudjm ul Dowla agrees to pay his Majeſty, out of the revenues of Bengal, Behar, and Oriſſa, the ſum of twenty ſix lacks of rupees a year, without any deduction for batta on bills of exchange, by regular monthly payments, amounting to rupees 2,16 66 10. 9. per month; the firſt payment to commence from the firſt of September of the preſent year: and the Engliſh Company, in conſideration of his Majeſty's having been graciouſly pleaſed to grant them the Dewannee of Bengal, &c. do engage themſelves to be ſecurity for the regular payment of the ſame: it ſhall be paid month by month, from the factory at Patna, to Rajah Shitabroy, or whomſoever his Majeſty may think proper to nominate, that it may be forwarded by him to the Court But in caſe the territories of the aforeſaid Nabob ſhould be invaded by any foreign enemy, a deduction is then to be made out of the ſtipulated revenues, proportionable to the damage that may be ſuſtained.

In conſideration of Nudjuff Khan's having joined the Engliſh forces, and acted in his Majeſty's ſervice in the late war, his Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed to allow him the ſum of two lacks of rupees a year, to be paid by equal monthly payments; the firſt payment to commence from the firſt of September of the preſent year: and in default thereof, the Engliſh Company, who are guarantees for the ſame, will make it good out of the revenues aſſigned to his Majeſty from the territories of Bengal. If the territories of Bengal ſhould at any time be invaded, and on that account a deduction be made out of the royal revenue, in ſuch caſe a proportionable deduction ſhall alſo be made out of Nudjuff Khan's allowance.

Fort William, 17th March 1772.

Secret Department Conſultations.

By advices received from Sir Robert Barker, it appears, that Nudjiff Khan has joined the Marattas, intentionally to co-operate with them in their deſigns againſt Sujah ul Dowlah.

The Board are of opinion, that all payments on account of his ſtipend ſhould be ſuſpended for the preſent.

Agreed, therefore, directions be ſent to the Council at Moorſhedabad for that purpoſe, in the following Letter:

To Samuel Middleton, eſquire, Chief, &c. Council of Revenue at Moorſhedabad.

Gentlemen,

We deſire you will make no further payments on account of Nudjiff Khan's ſtipend, until you receive particular directions from us.

Fort William, the 17th March 1772. We are, &c.

Extract, Fort William, the 7th October 1773.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident. General Sir Robert Barker, being arrived at the Preſidency, takes his Seat at the Board. William Alderſey, P. M. Ducrez, Henry Goodwin, John Graham, George Vanſittart.

The General being arrived, the Board, agreeably to their reſolution in laſt Council, take into conſideration that part of the Governor's Report which relates to Nudjiff Cawn.

The General begs leave to record the following Minute on the ſubject:

General Barker takes this opportunity to enter a Minute in favour of Nudjiff Cawn. He can, however, but recapitulate the notice he has already taken of him in his addreſſes to the Board and Select Committee. The laſt campaign has convinced the General more decidedly that this perſon's integrity and zeal for the intereſt of the Company are to be depended on. It was more particularly evinced in a very critical ſituation, where he heſitated not to maintain a correſpondence with the General, and communicated to him the deſigns and councils of the Maratta Sirdars of the greateſt moment from the very midſt of his enemies, who were not ignorant of his attachment to our cauſe, and had ſpies conſtantly about his perſon. The General flatters himſelf the Board's public approbation of this deſerving man may hereafter prove beneficial to the Company's intereſt, and ſecure a powerful friend in caſes of neceſſity, ſince he is aſſured Nudjiff Cawn will ever conduct himſelf with the greateſt probity and gratitude.

(Signed) R. Barker.

The Preſident thinks it neceſſary to add, in explanation of the opinion he has given at large for the continuance of Nudjuff Cawn's penſion, that he does not conſider Nudjuff Cawn's claim as founded wholly on the treaty or ſtipulations made in favour of the King; but on thoſe engagements connected with his ſubſequent conduct, and particularly at that period in which the behaviour of the King furniſhed us with the firſt occaſion for withholding the pay of his tribute. It appearing that it was with reluctance, and even by perſuaſion on our part, that he left us to accompany the King; and that in all his behaviour, both before and ſince, he has ever manifeſted the firmeſt attachment to the Company. On theſe arguments he founds his opinion of Nudjiff Cawn's claim to the Company's bounty, which it is his further opinion ſhould be continued to him alſo from political motives, as his actual preſence with the King may enable him to divert his Majeſty from engaging in any deſigns to our prejudice; and from the general benefit which the Company's affairs may derive from this proof of their generoſity to thoſe who have ſhewn attachment and fidelity towards them, he ſhould therefore be better pleaſed to put it on the footing of a retribution for paſt ſervices, than an acknowledgment of a fixed right. If the Board are of this opinion, it reſts with them to determine on the ſum to be allowed for his future penſion.

The Board agree with the Preſident: and,

Reſolve that the ſum of two lacks of rupees per annum, the former allowance to Nudjuff Cawn, be continued to him from this date until the pleaſure of the Company be known, but that the payment of his arrears be referred to the Company for their determination.

Mr. Vanſittart deſires his ſentiments may be recorded in the following words:

I am not only of opinion that Nudjiff Cawn ſhould receive an allowance from the Company on account of his paſt ſervices, and for political reaſons as pointed out by the Preſident, but I look upon him to be entitled to it in conſequence of Lord Clive's engagement: two lacks were guaranteed to him by the Company, and he has done nothing to forfeit them; he did not (like the King) join join the Marattas, in oppoſition to our Government, but acted ſtrictly by the General's advice; my own opinion muſt neceſſarily be, that he is entitled to the whole of his arrears; however, conſidering the preſent low circumſtances of the Company, I think that only two lacks ſhould be immediately paid to him, and the ſame ſum be continued annually, and that what further arrears may be due to him, ſhould remain ſuſpended till we receive the orders of the Court of Directors.

Extract of Secret Letter from Bengal; dated the 10th November 1773.

Par. 13. You would obſerve in the Preſident's Report, that an application was made to him at Benares from Nudjiff Cawn, for a continuance of his penſion of two lacks of rupees per annum, ſettled upon him by Lord Clive, and that he had referred it to the determination of the Board.

Conſ. 7th Oct. 14. When his penſion was ſtopt by order of Council, 17th March 1772, it was then the received opinion that he had voluntarily accompanied the King in his expedition to Delhi, without the conſent or approbation of our Government; but it now appearing that it was with reluctance, and at the perſuaſion of the General, that he took that ſtep, and alſo that he has continued ever ſince to manifeſt a ſincere attachment to the Company, and a deſire of being uſeful to them in his preſent ſituation, we thought it juſt as well as political to continue his penſion to him, as a reward for his paſt ſervices, and to impreſs an idea in the minds of the people of the generoſity of the Company towards thoſe who are faithful in their attachment to them. We have accordingly ordered two lacks of rupees per annum to be paid to him as a yearly penſion, from the 7th October, till your pleaſure be known, referring the payment of his arrears to your particular determination.

APPENDIX, No. 31.

No. 21.—Copy of the fifth Article of the Treaty between the Nabob Shujah ul Dowla, the Nabob Nudjum ul Dowla, and the Engliſh Company; executed at Illiabad the 16th of Auguſt 1765.

HIS Highneſs Shujah ul Dowla engages, in the moſt ſolemn manner, to continue Bukwant Sing in the Zemindaries of Benares, Gauzepoor, and all thoſe diſtricts he poſſeſſed at the time he came over to the late Nabob Jaffier Ally Khan and the Engliſh, on condition of his paying the ſame revenue as heretofore.

Articles of a Treaty and Agreement between the Governor and Council of Fort William, on the Part of the Engliſh Eaſt India Company, and the Nabob Mebarek ul Dowla.

On the Part of the Company.

WE, the Governor and Council, do engage to ſecure to the Nabob Mebarek ul Dowla, the Soubahdarry of the provinces of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, and to ſupport him therein with the Company's forces againſt all his enemies.

On the Part of the Nabob.

Article 1.—The Treaty which my father formerly concluded with the Company, upon his firſt acceſſion to the Nizamut, engaging to regard the honour and reputation of the Company, and of the Governor and Council, as his own, and that entered into with my brothers, the Nabobs Nazim ul Dowla and Syef ul Dowla, the ſame Treaties, as far as is conſiſtent with the true ſpirit, intent, and meaning thereof, I do hereby ratify and confirm. APPENDIX No. 32.

Article 2.—The King has been graciouſly pleaſed to grant unto the Engliſh Eaſt India Company the Dewannee-ſhip of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, as a free gift, for ever; and I, having an entire confidence in them, and in their ſervants ſettled in this Country, that nothing whatever be propoſed or carried into execution by them, derogating from my honour, intereſt, and the good of my Country, do therefore, for the better conducting the affairs of the Soubahdarry, and promoting my honour and intereſt, and that of the Company, in the beſt manner, agree, that the protecting the provinces of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, and the force ſufficient for that purpoſe, be entirely left to their direction and good management, in conſideration of their paying the King Shah Allum, by monthly payments, as by Treaty agreed on, the ſum of rupees two lacks ſixteen thouſand ſix hundred and ſixty-ſix, ten annas, and nine pice (rupees 2,16,666. 10. 9.); and to me, Mebarek ul Dowla, the annual ſtipend of rupees thirty-one lacks eighty one thouſand nine hundred and ninety-one, nine annas)—(31,81,991.9.) viz. the ſum of rupees fifteen lacks eighty-one thouſand nine hundred and ninety-one, nine annas (15.81.991.9.) for my houſe, ſervants, and other expences indiſpenſably neceſſary; and the remaining ſum of rupees ſixteen lacks (rupees 16,00,000) for the ſupport of ſuch ſepoys, peons, and bercundaſſes, as may be thought proper for my Aſſwarry only, but on no account ever to exceed that amount.

Article 3.—The Nabob Minaub Dowla, who was, at the inſtance of the Governor and Gentlemen of the Council, appointed Naib of the Provinces, and inveſted with the management of affairs, in conjunction with Mah Rajah Doolubram and Juggat Seat, ſhall continue in the ſame poſt, and with the ſame authority; and having a perfect confidence in him, I moreover agree to let him have the diſburſing of the above ſum of Rupees ſixteen lacks, for the purpoſes above-mentioned.

This Agreement (by the bleſſing of God) ſhall be inviolably obſerved for ever.

Extract of the Company's General Letter to Bengal; dated the 10th April 1771.

Par. 36. When we advert to the encomiums you have paſſed on your own abilities and prudence, and on your attention to the Company's intereſt (in the expoſtulations you have thought proper to make on our appointment of Commiſſioners to ſuperintend our general affairs in India) we cannot but obſerve with aſtoniſhment, that an event of ſo much importance as the death of the Nabob Syef ul Dowlah, and the eſtabliſhment of a ſucceſſor in ſo great a degree of nonage, ſhould not have been attended with thoſe advantages for the Company which ſuch a circumſtance offered to your view.

37. We mean not here to diſapprove the preſerving the ſucceſſion in the family of Mir Jaffier; on the contrary, both juſtice and policy recommend a meaſure which which at once corresponds with the cuſtoms and inclinations of the people of Bengal; but when we conſider the ſtate of minority of the now Soubah, we know not on what grounds it could have been thought neceſſary to continue to him the ſtipend allotted to his adult predeceſſors.

38. Convinced as we are, that an allowance of ſixteen lacks per annum will be ſufficient for the ſupport of the Nabob's ſtate and rank while a minor, we muſt conſider every addition thereto as ſo much to be waſted on a herd of paraſites and ſycophants, who will continually ſurround him; or at leaſt to be hoarded up, a conſequence ſtill more pernicious to the Company. You are therefore, during the nonage of the Nabob, to reduce his annual ſtipend to ſixteen lacks of rupees; and this we have the greater reaſon to require, as we find ourſelves ſubjected to the payment of large ſums, due from the revenues of the Dewannee, before the Company became poſſeſſed thereof, on account of the navy donation, and the arrears of that to the army, the balance due for reſtitution to Europeans, Colonel Munro's demand of two lacks, the debt due to Bolackidaſs, and the annual ſum of one lack, for ten years, which we have agreed to pay to Juggat Seat; all which preſs on us with ſuch united force, that our treaſury will be unable to ſatisfy theſe ſeveral demands, without wounding our commercial intereſts, and endangering our poſſeſſions in Bengal. Being once relieved from this load of incumbrances, the ſavings we may expect from this reduction, will properly become a fund for military exigences, which fund being ſolely applicable to the defence of the Provinces, will contribute no leſs to the Nabob's future benefit than to that of the Company.

39. At a time when every juſtifiable meaſure ſhould be adopted for availing the Public and the Company of all the advantage we had in proſpect from our poſſeſſion of the Dewanny, we cannot but reflect on the diſſipation of a conſiderable part thereof, by the allowances to the Nabob's miniſters.

40. And here we muſt obſerve, that how great ſoever the application of Mahomet Reza Cawn, and his adherence to the Company's intereſt, may have been, his rewards have been more than adequate thereto; and as the buſineſs of the collections of our revenues, when they ſhall have been thoroughly inveſtigated by the ſupervifors appointed for that purpoſe, will require little or no aſſiſtance from that Miniſter, we muſt deem the continuance of his preſent ſalary as a waſte of thoſe reſources which are become ſo eſſentially neceſſary both for the ſecurity of our poſſeſſions and the extenſion of your inveſtments; it is therefore our pleaſure, that the annual allowance of nine lacks, which he has hitherto enjoyed, be no longer continued to him; but as the minority of the Nabob will make it requiſite for you to appoint, as his Guardian, a perſon of experience in the affairs of Government, and of approved attachment to the Company's intereſts, your choice muſt reſt on Mahomet Reza Cawn, and you are to allow him, whilſt in that ſtation, a ſalary of five lacks of rupees per annum, which we conſider not only as ſuitable to ſuch a ſtation, but as a munificent reward for the ſervices he may render the Company in the execution of his office.

41. The annual allowance to Juggat Seat, as aſſiſtant to Mahomet Reza Cawn, has been a drain on our revenues without the leaſt benefit from his adminiſtration, for we are well aſſured that he has never afforded us a ſingle inſtance of ſervice; his allowance therefore muſt be immediately ſtruck off. But with regard to Roydoolub, though we cannot expect from him any ſervices equal to his preſent appointment, have yet, in conſideration of the part he has long held in the affairs of Government, and his advanced age, we are diſpoſed to continue the ſalary he now enjoys; but on his death this allowance is not to be given to any perſon whatever.

42. As the reduction of the Nabob's ſtipend is adventitious and temporary, we by no means intend that the commiſſion of 2½ per cent. granted to our ſervants on our nett territorial revenues, ſhould be increaſed by this alteration, and therefore the former ſtipend of thirty-ſix lacks muſt ſtill be deducted from the groſs amount of theſe revenues. In like manner, no commiſſion muſt be drawn on the ſums which may be retrenched from the appointments to the Nabob's miniſters.

43. Having already apprized you of the purpoſes to which we mean to appropriate the ſavings above-mentioned, we have only to direct, that when the navy and army donations, the debt due to Bolackidaſs, and the ſtipulated payment to Juggat Seat, ſhall have been wholly ſatisfied and reimburſed to us out of the aggregate reductions before-mentioned, ſuch further ſums as ſhall ariſe therefrom are to be applied from time to time to clear the balance unpaid to the claimants of the reſtitution fund, and the donation of two lacks to Colonel Munro, in ſuch proportions as the reſpective claims may bear to each other, until the whole ſhall be diſcharged; but you are to take notice, that the principal only of the ſums due from the Circar are to be conſidered and allowed in the payments here ordered.

Extract of the Secret Letter from Bengal to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 10th November 1772.

9. A chain of concurring circumſtances induced the Vizier inſtantly to cloſe with ſo flattering propoſals; the principal links of which ſeemed to be the acceſſion of ſo large a tract of country to his own, and his ſolicitude to extirpate a family with whom he had long held an hereditary enmity; and it is ſaid, he was even inclinable to take advantage of the preſent diſtreſs of the Rohillas, and poſſeſs himſelf of their dominions the moment the Marrattas ſhould be obliged to leave it—we believe the General was a principal means of diverting him from a ſcheme ſo little conſiſtent with prudence or equity.

11. Convinced at length of the impropriety of making the Marattas parties in any cauſe with himſelf, he concluded a Treaty with the Rohillas; in which it was ſtipulated, that in conſideration of their paying him 40 lacks, he was to aſſiſt them in future againſt their common enemy, and reeſtabliſh them in the poſſeſſions which had been wreſted from them.

12. Zebita Cawn, with the ſmall remains of his army, together with Hafez Rhamet, who had thus thrown themſelves into the Nabob's protection, and had paid him a viſit in his encampment on the frontier, the better to convince him of their ſincerity, and the reliance they repoſed in his honour, were now diſmiſſed with the greateſt profeſſions of cordiality, although it had been particularly required of the Vizier by the Marattas, that he ſhould deliver them into their hands.

13. During theſe tranſactions, his Majeſty was not in a ſituation much to be envied.—We have already ſhewn the little deference which the Marattas paid him after their victory; neither has he ſince experienced the leaſt alteration. His anxiety, which probably gratitude might have prompted, to prevent their commencing hoſtilities with the Vizier and the Company, could not be very pleaſing to them, and if we may form a judgment from his Letters at this juncture, he was very deſirous of reuniting himſelf with his former allies.—There is however, little dependance to be placed in the aſſertions of a man, who at the time he is making the moſt avowed profeſſions of the ſincerity of his attachment to the Nabob and the Engliſh, and who, when an invaſion of their poſſeſſions was propoſed in the Maratta Councils, publicly and ſtrongly remonſtrated againſt it, was ſecretly giving it as his opinion, that diſſenſions, by ſome means or other, ought previouſly to be ſown between them, in order to enſure any certainty of ſucceſs, and that when this could be effected, the royal approbation ſhould not be wanting.

14. The Marattas have not failed of availing themſelves of every advantage which the weakneſs and diſtreſſed circumſtances of this Prince too unavoidably gives gives them.—They have obliged him, very reluctantly, to give them Sunnuds for Myrutt (a tract of country which preſerves the communication with their own); and no doubt they will continue, as in the preſent inſtance, to exact his compliance with every meaſure, no matter how diſgraceful to him, that carries a tendency to raiſe them to that ſummit of power which they have for ſo many years, and ſo effectually, been exerting themſelves to acquire.

APPENDIX No. 33.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 7 October 1773.—Preſent, The honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident. Wm Alderſey, P. M. Dacres, Henry Goodwin, Jno Graham, George Vanſittart, eſquires.

The General's diſſent.

THE General further begs leave to enter his diſſent to the Preſident's meaſures at Benares, as follows:

General Barker not being preſent at the Conſultation of the 4th October, when the Preſident laid before them the reſult of his negociations with the Vizier at Benares, and the Board having recorded their entire approbation of the meaſures adopted by him in his congreſs, and particularly of the Treaty concluded on between the Vizier and the Company, the General, having had reaſon to differ in opinion with the reſt of the Board, as a Member of the Adminiſtration thinks it his duty to diſſent to the meaſures adopted by the Preſident, as well as the aforementioned Treaty; and to lay before the Board his reaſons for ſo doing.

The arguments made uſe of by the Preſident, for poſſeſſing ourſelves of the provinces of Allahabad and Corah, and afterwards ceding them to the Vizier for fifty lacks of rupees, do not appear to the General to be ſufficient; and conſequently he deems this meaſure repugnant to the articles of the Treaty of Allahabad, between the Right honourable Lord Clive and his Majeſty Shaw Allum, in the year 1765; by which treaty the provinces of Allahabad and Corah were abſolutely and poſitively ceded to the King, without any reſervation; and in conſequence and by virtue of this ceſſion, the Company were to hold the Dewannee of the provinces of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, in perpetuity. The General forms this opinion from the right which he conceives the King undoubtedly had, of doing what he judged proper with thoſe provinces, without any reference to the Engliſh. Nor does there appear in the Treaty of 1765, any expreſſion from which an idea can be formed to indicate that thoſe provinces were to revert to the Engliſh under any circumſtances whatſoever. Nor can he agree, that his Majeſty having repaired to his capital, after the repeated invitations and ſolicitations he has made to the Engliſh Company to attend him there, can be given as a ſufficient motive for our taking from him theſe provinces, and ceding them to another; ſince it does not appear that any ſuch reſtrictions were laid upon the King by the Treaty of 1765; but on the contrary, that it was a free and voluntary gift, in conſequence of the aforeſaid grant of the Dewannee to the Company.

The General agrees with the Preſident, that to have kept theſe provinces, allowing them to have reverted to the Company upon his Majeſty's removing his place of reſidence, would not only have been inconſiſtent with the repeated commands of the Court of Directors, but would alſo have been impolitical for the reaſons he aſſigned; nevertheleſs, the General judges a more advantageous agreement might have been made for the Company, than the ſale of them for fifty lacks of rupees only. It is certain that theſe two provinces can produce twenty-five lacks of rupees per annum. If this is the caſe, which is too generally known to admit of a doubt, the Vizier has purchaſed them for two years revenue; a purchaſe by much too cheap in the General's opinion for two ſuch provinces, conſidering the heavy expences which has accrued to the Company, over and above the extra allowance made by the Vizier for the charge of the troops, to put us in poſſeſſion, and to afford us a plea for the ſale of them.

The General is of opinion that more ſolid advantages might have ariſen to the Company, by an exchange of country, in putting the Company in poſſeſſion of all thoſe lands lying ſouth of the Ganges, in the Zemindarry of Gauzipore, including that important fortreſs of Chunar Gur; and however averſe the Vizier might have appeared to ſuch a propoſal, the importance of the two provinces of Corah and Allahabad, the poſſeſſion of which, it is well known, he has been aiming at with indefatigable perſeverance for more than ſeven years, would, it is probable, prevail over every other objection, had the Preſident perſevered in this demand, which, he informs the Board, he only ſlightly propoſed. The Vizier was certainly in the right when he acknowledged that ſuch an exchange would have defeated his purpoſe; which undoubtedly is to accumulate as much power, wealth, and country, as he poſſibly can, and render himſelf a ſtill more formidable and dangerous neighbour than he has hitherto been. At any rate the General is of opinion, that beſides the immediate advance of a ſum of money, a continuation of half the revenues ariſing from thoſe provinces ſhould have been obtained for the Company for a limited number of years, to anſwer for the heavy expences attending the garriſon of Chunar Gur, with its magazine of ſtores, ſo ready at all times for the ſecurity of thoſe provinces, inſtead of the agreement for the extra expences, which are only to be paid when our troops are abſolutely in the field; and we are equally bound by the Treaty of 1765, to defend theſe provinces, with the reſt of his dominions, ſince they are included by their becoming a part of them.

But the General has already declared, he deems the ceſſion of Allahabad and Corah to the Vizier, a meaſure repugnant to the Treaty of 1765, with the King Shah Allum. And he further conceives, that equal advantages might have ariſen to the Company without any infringement of that Treaty, ſince his Majeſty would readily have agreed to give up his ſtipend of 26 lacks per annum from the Company (already withheld from him) for the reinſtatement of thoſe provinces, and have conferred the actual Sunnuds or Grants for the Soubah of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, to the Company for ever; which Sunnuds it is now more than probable we ſhall ſoon ſee in the hands of other nations.

As it may appear extraordinary to the Board, that the General, after having been deſired by them to meet the Preſident at Benares, in order to aſſiſt at the negociations, he ſhould diſſent ſo very materially to the preſent Treaty, the General thinks it incumbent upon him to declare to the Board, that he did, in conſequence of their Letter, repair to Benares, and met the Preſident; but that ſo far from aſſiſting, or being required to aſſiſt, he never was preſent at any of the conferences held between the Preſident and the Vizier on the ſubject of the commiſſion, excepting the laſt day, when every thing had been concluded on, he was deſired to attend to ſee the Treaty executed between the Preſident and the Vizier. The General cannot help regretting, that he was called from the army for ſuch a purpoſe only, ſince the Natives of Hindoſtan, who judge of things from their appearance, without reflecting on cauſes, muſt view his conſequence in a leſſer degree than any of his predeceſſors, whom they have been taught to look on with reverence and reſpect.

The General did expect, conſidering his ſituation in the ſervice, at the head of the army, and a Member of the Board, together with the ſhare he has had in the political tranſaction of affairs, to have been included in the commiſſion for negociating with the Vizier on theſe matters; but he never ſuſpected his attendance at Benares ſhould be required for no other viſible purpoſe than to leſſen him in the eyes of the Natives.

When Lord Clive was deputed to treat with the King and the Vizier, General Carnac attended, and aſſiſted at all conferences, between his Lordſhip and thoſe Powers; and and ſo much did his Lordſhip think it compatible with the good of the ſervice, to raiſe a reſpect in the Natives for the character of the General, with whom the military tranſactions were to be intruſted, that he not only conſulted with him in the preſence of them, but joined alſo the General's ſignature as a principal to the then Treaties concluded on. When they have ſeen General Smith included in a deputation with two other Members of the Board, it cannot be wondered at that they ſhould (which the Vizier did in the preſence of the General) expreſs his aſtoniſhment at his being entirely excluded from every concern in the preſent negociations.

The General will not preſume to account for the motives which induced the Board to place ſo remarkable a ſhare of confidence and truſt in the Preſident, as to appoint him their ſole agent for negociating ſuch important matters, when the Commander in Chief of their forces, and three other Members of the Board, were preſent. But conſidering however that all the preceding Commanders of the army have been included in tranſactions of this ſort, the General hopes the Board will not eſteem it a preſumption in him to requeſt, that, if there has been any part of his conduct which has given occaſion for ſo pointed an excluſion, that they will be candid enough to inform him, in order that he may have an opportunity of vindicating his conduct, he flatters himſelf, to the ſatisfaction of the Board. At the ſame time, he cannot help declaring, that he has already had an opportunity of ſeeing the effects of the ſlight which has been ſhewn to his ſtation in the ſervice, inſomuch, that he is convinced the influence and importance which it is neceſſary every Britiſh Commander ſhould be poſſeſſed of, who may be entruſted with military operations in this country, connected with the Company's allies, is deſtroyed in him by this act; and however he might aſſume a dignity in him to ſupport a character apparently in no eſteem with the Government, it can only tend to create apprehenſion from the perſon detrimental to the intereſt of the ſervice, without raiſing any reſpect for the character.

The General will dwell no longer on the ſubject in this place, or fill the Conſultation with remarks which cannot now contribute to remove what is paſt; but he has judged it highly neceſſary that his ſentiments on the treatment he has received ſhould appear on the Records of your Conſultation.

APPENDIX, N° 34.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 9th October 1775.—Preſent, the honourable Warren Haſtings, Governor General, Preſident. Lieutenant General John Clavering, the honourable George Monſon, Richard Barwell, Philip Francis, eſquires.

MR. Tayler having been requeſted to attend the Board this day, agreeable to the Reſolutions of the laſt Council, attends accordingly.

Read again the Letter from the Preſident and Council of Bombay, dated 23d Auguſt, and recorded in the laſt Conſultation.

Mr. Tayler acquaints the Board, that having drawn up in his paſſage from Bombay, ſuch repreſentations as he thought neceſſary to make to this Government, on the ſubjects which he has been deputed to treat on by the Preſident and Council of Bombay, he begs leave to deliver them in; and they are read as follows:

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

The honourable the Preſident and Council of Bombay having deputed me to repreſent to your Honour, &c. the motives of their proceedings, in their engagements with the Paiſhwah Ragonaut Ballajee Row; the ſituation of affairs there; the danger and diſcredit that muſt attend their Treaty with him being utterly cancelled; the general intereſts of the Company at that Preſidency, with other matters as mentioned in their Addreſs of the 22d ultimo, I ſhall now proceed to enter as fully and clearly as I am able on thoſe ſeveral ſubjects.

The better to explain them, it will be neceſſary to advert to a period antecedent to that in which theſe engagements commenced; for this reaſon, though it may at firſt appear foreign to my preſent purpoſe, yet I truſt your Honour, &c. will not deem this recapitulation an unneceſſary one.

In the ancient conſtitution of the Maratta empire, the affairs of it were conducted under the ſupreme authority of the Rajah, by a Council conſiſting of eight perſons, being the eight principal officers of the ſtate; by the laſt account I have ſeen of this Council, it conſiſted of Brachmins, who were generally employed in all civil departments of the ſtate—the command of armies and other military matters were confided to the Maratta or Rajpute caſt.

The principal of theſe Miniſters in power, was the Paiſhwah, which literally means he who precedes the reſt; the nature of his office reſembles that of the Mahometan Vizier.

Piſwanath Ballajee, a Brachmin, born in the diſtrict of Rahapore, from an inferior ſtate in the Rugh of Sahoo Rajah, roſe by his abilities to the high office of Paiſhwah. By degrees he ſo far gained on the confidence of the Rajah, as to perſuade him to diveſt himſelf of all cares of Government, and reſign them entirely to him. Sahoo accordingly inveſted him with all the enſigns of authority and powers incident to the Rajahſhip—all orders, and every detail of government, iſſued immediately from the Paiſhwah; who was further ſtyled by the Rajah, Pundit Pradan, or Chief and Elect of the Pundits; this form of Government ſubſiſts to this day. On the death of a Paiſhwah, his ſucceſſor goes to Sattarah, in order to be formally inveſted with the Sirpaw of office by the Rajah. —There is in the Poonah Durbar, a perſon nominally eſteemed in ſome degree ſuperior even to the Paiſhwah; it is the Pretinnery, who is the delegate and immediate repreſentative of the Rajah; and formerly his fiat was neceſſary to give a proper validity to all acts of Government.—Beſides the ſupreme authority, the Sahoo Rajah had alſo reſerved to himſelf a conſiderable degree of actual force; the revenues of a large diſtrict were collected by him, with which he maintained a conſiderable body of troops under his own immediate command.

The Paiſhwah, Kiſſwanath Ballajee, had well availed himſelf of the indulgence of the Rajah, by creating a number of adherents; for we find his ſon and ſucceſſor Bajerow Ballajee, poſſeſſed in fact of the ſupreme power in the Maratta empire, as he paid little or no regard to his prince. The Rajah indeed poſſeſſed at firſt entire liberty of perſon; but whether it was that the Paiſhwah did it more effectually to ſecure his power, or that the intrigues carried on againſt him rendered it neceſſary for his own ſafety, the Rajah was ſoon confined to Sattarah; at his death he was ſucceeded by the preſent Rajah Ram, his adopted ſon, who continuing under the ſame reſtrictions as his father, the Rajah has ever ſince been a mere name, an image of authority in the Maratta empire.

The conqueſts of Chinnajee Oppa, brother to Baajinn, firſt engaged the attention of the Preſident and Council of Bombay towards the Marattas. By the acquiſition of Salſette and Baſſein, they became our neighbours, and as the Paiſhwah's family alſo early turned their thoughts towards the eſtabliſhment of a marine, it was foreſeen, that ſooner or later ſome points of diſcuſſion muſt ariſe, which might lead to diſputes; it was therefore thought prudent to prevent them by ſtating our rights in a Treaty. As the Rajah had formerly ceded to Bajirow in his own right, all the countries conquered from the Europeans, it was feared the attempts of his brother Chinnajee Oppa might not ſtop at the Portugueze ſettlements; the Preſident and Council ſeemed to think they might effectually tually ſecure themſelves by an application to the Rajah, and a Gentleman was ſent therefore to him; but judging from the true ſtate of matters of that Court, it was juſtly to be feared an offer to treat immediately with the Rajah, might bring down on us the reſentment of the Paiſhwah, ſundry articles of agreement were concluded with Chinnajee Oppa, in behalf of his brother Bajerow. Since that time, the Rajah has never been thought of; but finding the Paiſhwah in abſolute poſſeſſion of all power, we have conſtantly, in all tranſactions with the Marattas, applied to and treated with them, as though they were the lawful princes of the Empire.

The wiſdom and policy of Bajerow firmly eſtabliſhed in his family the power they had uſurped; and accordingly on his demiſe he was peaceably ſucceeded in the Peſhwaſhip by his eldeſt ſon Ballajee Bajerow, more generally known by the appellation of Nanah; who, in the year 1761, was alſo regularly ſucceeded by his ſon Mhadarow Bullajee, then a minor of 14 years.

On the death of Nanah his brother Ragonath Ballajee Row conducted the affairs of the Maratta Government as Regent during the minority of his nephew, the young Paiſhwah. There is a Treaty ſubſiſting between the Engliſh and Mhadarow, formed under the adminiſtration of Ragoba; he conducted matters during the critical ſituation in which the invaſion of the Nizam had plunged the Marattas; and there is no act to prove that ever he ſought to embrace the opportunity of the poſſeſſion of power to ſecure it to himſelf for ever, in prejudice to the rights of his nephew.

In all the civil departments of Government, the Paiſhwahs continued to employ the caſt of Brachmins; by the influence this gave them, they raiſed immenſe fortunes. In order to give that ſecurity to their perſons which a large fortune in this country always endangers, their next ſteps were to create to themſelves a conſequence; this they ſought to effect by dividing the family of the Paiſhwah, and occaſionally ſiding with either party as policy directed. Hence early began thoſe ſcenes of intrigues from whence ſprung the different factions and diviſions which firſt diſcloſed themſelves in the minority of Mhadarow, and have nearly brought the power of the Paiſhwah to a total decline; on the ruins of which has aroſe the high influence of thoſe perſons now known in the Poonah Government by the appellation of the Miniſters.

The wiſe and juſt adminiſtration of Ragoba would have totally defeated the views thoſe men had formed, of benefitting themſelves by the minority of Mhadoorow: they therefore exerted every artifice and intrigue to deprive Ragoba of power. Gopicaboy, the widow of Nannah, was a woman deeply given to intrigues of every kind; and her ſcandalous licentiouſneſs juſtly attracted the reproach of one ſo nearly concerned in the honour of the family, as her huſband's brother. Hence firſt aroſe the bitter inveteracy of Gopicaboy to Ragoba. The Miniſters availed themſelves of theſe circumſtances, and of her influence with her young ſon, to breed a coolneſs between the uncle and nephew; and which ended in a declared breach in the total deprivation of power, and at length, in ſome degree, in the confinement of Ragoba.

Their ends thus compaſſed in this point, they induſtriouſly adverted to the primary object to which this was only intended to lead. All favours of Government now flowed from the Miniſters, and as none are granted in this country without a valuable conſideration, by means of preſents and peculations, theſe men increaſed their fortunes and influence to an immenſe degree, whilſt from the withholding of the tribute by the northern Jaghierdars, and by ſuch other of the Pundits, on various pretences, as could purchaſe friends to protect them, the treaſury of the Paiſhwah became almoſt exhauſted; and as money alone commands troops, his conſequence would have declined with it, but Mhadoorow, as he advanced in years, ſhewed a firmneſs and abilities which made him dreaded and reſpected by everyone. In the ſhort time he governed, his wiſe conduct and great parts procured him the reſpect of every Power around him; and as he well knew the deſigns of the Miniſters, there is no doubt, had his life been longer, he would have effectually reſtored the influence of the Paiſhwah; but unfortunately for it, he died in November 1772, at the age of 25, leaving no children.

The gradual progreſs of his diſorder giving him time to reflect on the conſequence of his death, Mahdoo Row, on perceiving his end approach, revolved ſeriouſly in his mind the fate and ſituation of his family: his brother, Narrow Row, who was to ſucceed him, he knew to be a weak, haſty young man, eaſily ſwayed by any Councils, and particularly under the influence of his mother Gopicaboy, whoſe deadly hatred to Ragoba he was alſo well apprized of: he was ſenſible of the ambitious and independent views of ſeveral leading miniſters, which, if not well counteracted, muſt in time wreſt from his family the power, and perhaps the office, of Paiſhwah. In this dilemma, nothing better preſented itſelf, than to repoſe a confidence in Ragoba. It was true, that Ragoba had lately made ſome ſecret ſteps towards liberty, and an acceſſion of power; but, reflecting on the appearance of his own approaching end, and knowing the influence that would guide his brother's actions, Ragoba's attempt appeared to Mahdoo Row only a prudent act of ſelf-preſervation: he therefore called them to him, explained his views, remembered them of their anceſtors, and, joining their hands, conjured Ragoba to protect the young man, adviſed Narrow Row to confide in their uncle, and never to liſten to the inſinuations of their mother Gopicaboy, whoſe deadly hatred and revenge he himſelf had experienced would ſtop at nothing to be gratified.

For a ſhort time after the deceaſe of his brother, Narrow Row carried it fair to his uncle; it was ſettled that all buſineſs ſhould be conducted by Rageba, as Naib, ſubject to the controul of Narrow Row; and accordingly, when the Rajah inveſted the latter with the Sirpaw of Paiſhwah, he conferred on the former that of Naib. This harmony was however ſoon interrupted by the intrigues of the Miniſters, but eſpecially by the aſcendancy of Gopicaboy over her ſon.

Mahdoo Row had adviſed his brother chiefly to regard the Councils of Saccaram Bappoo, the Duan; but it ſeems his inclinations rather led him to attach himſelf to Nana Furneze, whoſe age and diſpoſition were better ſuited to his own; hence aroſe two parties in the miniſtry. His confidants in the intereſt of Gopicaboy had inſtilled into him jealouſies of his uncle; the hatred of this ſingular and enterprizing woman had received an additional force from his adoption of Imrut Row, a young lad, in ſome meaſure connected with Moodagee Bonſalo. This adoption ſhe repreſented as contrary to the cuſtoms of their caſt, while he had nephews of his own; as ſingularly unjuſt, by depriving his own family of the riches he might die poſſeſſed of; and impolitic, as it might in time tend to deprive their race of the Peſhwahſhip; his connections alſo with ſo powerful a chief as Moodajee Bonſello was likewiſe hinted as a circumſtance to prove his own ambitious deſigns. By theſe arts and inſinuations, the good councils of his late brother were entirely effaced from the mind of the young Paiſhwah; he deprived his uncle of all power; then made him a ſort of priſoner at large; and, on pretence of Ragoba's concerting a plan with the Vackeel of Hyder for his eſcape, he, on the 11th April 1773, cloſely confined him to a chamber in the Durbar, debarring him, as well as he could, of all acceſs.

Had Narrow Row poſſeſſed the leaſt degree of prudence, he might have remained ſecure in the Paiſhwahſhip; for though, by the inſtigation of the mother, and the choice he had made of confidants, he had created to himſelf a deadly enemy in the old Duan, Saccaram Bappoo, yet the influence and abilities of the Furnezes, Nannah and Morabah; and their adherents, were more than a counterpoize to him; but without the leaſt ſhare of judgment, judgment, and wholly devoted to low vices and pleaſures, Narrow Row paid not the leaſt regard to any one; on the contrary, he behaved in ſo ſenſeleſsly imperious, and diſregardful a manner, even to the Miniſters in his own party, that they became lukewarm in his intereſts, and in time ſuffered him to fall a ſacrifice to the machinations of his enemies.

It is ſaid that by means of Modajee Bonſello, the Duan Saccaram received advice of an intention to aſſaſſinate him and Ragoba at the inſtigation of Gopicaboy. Certain it is, that this woman was well known to have been conſtantly adviſing her ſon to deprive him of the Duanſhip, which was the firſt ſtep to the loſs of riches, and perhaps of life. From this inſtant Saccaram and his party ſet about concerting the means of depoſing Narrow Row, releaſing Ragoba, and placing him in the Paiſhwahſhip.

Chiefly by the means of the intervention of the Duan, Mahommed Eſorf and Summerſing, two Subadars, were won over to execute the deed. On the 18th Auguſt 1773, at two in the afternoon, they led their party of 500 men to the Durbar, under pretence of being muſtered; they forced the gates, and put the guard to the ſword. Narrow Row, apprehenſive of their deſign, ran to his uncle Ragoba, where the aſſaſſins found him, begging him to take the Government, but ſpare his life.

Ragoba, it ſeems, wiſhed to ſave him, as nothing more than his impriſonment was ever meant; but owing to the reſentment of a ſlave of the family, whom Narrow Row had cauſed to be publicly whipped, his death was determined on. The aſſaſſins threatened Ragoba to deſtroy both, if he did not inſtantly looſe his nephew; he then thruſt him from his arms, and the young man ſoon expired at his feet. On the death of his nephew, Ragoba was inſtantly complimented by the Duan, and other miniſters in Poonah, as Paiſhwah; he proceeded to the diſcharge of the office. Nannah and Morabath Furneezes, with ſome in their party, on learning the late event, had inſtantly quitted Poonah, fearing they might become a ſacrifice to their enemies; but Ragoba, equally ſenſible of the deſign of all the Miniſters, had no particular attachment or averſion to any of them; and therefore found means to calm the apprehenſions of the Furneezes; who returned, and reſuming their former offices, every thing for a time ſeemed to wear the appearance of peace. Ragoba ſent his ſon Jumrut Row to Sattarah, to obtain from the Rajah, in his name, the inveſtiture of the Peſhwahſhip; which was accordingly granted, with every requiſite form and ſolemnity. Every officer in the Maratta ſtate then at Poonah, paid Ragoba the uſual compliments on the occaſion; and he was publicly and ſolemnly acknowledged by us as Paiſhwah, in a viſit eſpecially paid him by Mr. Moſtyn, a Member of the Bombay Board, appointed by the Honourable Company to be their Reſident at Poonah, accompanied by the uſual preſents, and the ſame proffers of our friendſhip made him, and engagements to maintain the articles of peace and alliance entered into with his anceſtor Bajerow, as had ever been uſual on the acceſſion of a new Paiſhwah.

The appearance of tranquillity between Ragoba and the Miniſters was of no great duration. Senſible of all their deſigns, he would place no confidence in any of them; he had appointed no Duan, but tranſacted moſt affairs himſelf. It ſeems that in imitation of his brother the Nanah's policy, he wiſhed to form a body of troops ſolely dependant on himſelf; to effect this, money was principally neceſſary, and as Mahdoo Row juſt before his death, had diſburſed 80 lacks of rupees in diſcharge of the Sircar's debts, and the troubles during the ſhort reign of Narrow Row, had prevented the regular receipt of the revenues, the treaſury of the Paiſhwah was found very bare; to repleniſh it, Ragoba ſeems early to have turned his thoughts towards the Nizam, Hyder, and the Carnatic; but being diffident of the troops with him, wrote to Moodajee Bonſalo to come down and aſſiſt him, and having joined his army, proceeded againſt the combined forces of the Nizam, commanded by Ruckna ul Dowlah and Shabajee Bonſalo.

Even thoſe Miniſters who had been moſt forward in eſtabliſhing him in the Paiſhwahſhip, never meant he ſhould acquire the leaſt degree of independant influence, well knowing that the firſt effect of it would be an invaſion of their treaſures. Seeing him therefore at the head of an army leagued with Modajee Bonſalo, in a way to acquire money, and of courſe troops of his own, their apprehenſions led them to confederate againſt him. On different pretences, ſome left the camp, and thoſe who remained betrayed Ragoba to the Moguls in an action with the Nizam's army in November 1773, wherein he was not only defeated, but narrowly eſcaped being cut off, as a part of the enemy had been ſuffered to advance to his tent without oppoſition, and dangerouſly wounded him before he could retreat.

Notwithſtanding the late advantage over the Maratta army, the Nizam thought proper to treat with Ragoba, and a peace was concluded between them; Ruckna ul Dowlah promiſing on the behalf of the Nizam to comply with Ragoba's demands of twenty lacks of jaghire, and the ceſſion of two or three forts; but the Nizam, at an interview he afterwards had with Ragoba, pleading poverty and inability to comply with what his Vizier had promiſed, Ragoba agreed to wave the whole demand on his engaging to aſſiſt him with a body of forces on any particular emergency. From whence Ragoba directed his ſteps towards Hyder, from whom he demanded the arrears of Chout, and as a pretence to the ſame demand, meditated on him, Ragoba wrote to Mahommed Alj, Nabob of Arcot, for aſſiſtance, knowing he ſhould meet with a refuſal. Hyder compromiſed matters by paying down 25 lacks, for which he obtained the ceſſion of three provinces of Mudgewarry, Hanſcootah, and Chunderdroong.

Having thus ſettled with Hyder, Ragoba then declared his intention of marching into the Carnatic, in hopes to force from Mahomed Ali a ſum of money as arrears of Chout. The proſpect of plunder attracting every deſperado who could muſter a horſe and ſword, his army was ſoon increaſed to a very conſiderable number, and he was in full march towards the Carnatic, when his attention was diverted to another quarter.

Juſtly apprehenſive of Ragoba's acquiring ſufficient force to be wholly independent of them, the Miniſters, while they yet had it in their power, were determined to prevent him. Accordingly the two parties united, and a confederacy was formed under the name of the Paunch Bhi, or Five Friends, five principal perſons being the leaders of it. Their intention was to have ſeized Ragoba, and confined him; to have carried on the Government in the name of Gungaboy, Narrow Row's widow, till the birth of the child ſhe was then induſtriouſly reported to be pregnant of, which, if a boy, was to be proclaimed Paiſhwah. On the firſt of January 1774, a party of them ſeized Gungaboy and Penſettyboy, the wife of Sudabah, and carried them to the fort of Pronder, the better to ſecure, it is ſuppoſed, a male child. Somehow five Brachmin women, in the ſame ſtate as the widow of Narron Raw, was ſaid to have accompanied her. Every perſon ſuſpected to be in the intereſt of Ragoba was guarded, and the confederates immediately ſet about collecting troops to ſupport this declared rebellion againſt the Paiſhwah.

Fortunately for Ragoba, he received the news of this confederacy a few hours before the Miniſterials had adviſed the partizans in his camp of their deſign, which gave him time to diſperſe thoſe he doubted, and he retired to Gutti, a fort under the command of Morarow Gorparah, a Maratta Chief of high influence. The Miniſters now imagined his ruin certain, as Morarow Gorparah had always inclined to their party; but they were miſtaken, by his declaring and openly joining with Ragoba. As the impolitic avarice of the Brachmins had clearly evinced their intentions to avail themſelves of their preſent poſſeſſion of power, by calling on the Maratta Chiefs for their

their arrears, whenever a fortunate event gave them hopes of ſucceſs, many Maratta Chiefs quitted their party, and joined Ragoba, which enabled him to face the miniſterial army, and by a ſtratagem, in the month of March gained a complete victory, taking priſoner Trimbuckrow Mamah the commander in chief, and one of the moſt reſpectful partizans.

This unlooked-for event threw the Confederates at Pronder into the utmoſt conſternation, hourly expecting to be ſurrounded by the victorious army of Ragoba; in this dilemma they had once thoughts of releaſing the Rajah Sutterah, and reſtoring the ancient Government, in order to gain over the Maratta Chiefs, but juſtly dreading the evils they might bring on themſelves in revenge for the uſurpation of their caſt, they dropped all thoughts of this expedient, and had recourſe to that of publiſhing the birth of a ſon to Gungaboy, the widow of Narron Raw. This child they immediately acknowledged as lawful Peſhwah; the partizans of Ragoba declared it to be a fraud, and indeed the general report at the time, the certain circumſtance of the pregnant woman who accompanied Gungaboy to Pronder, the utility of it to the miniſterial cauſe, inclined many people then to doubt the reality of this child; and the information ſince obtained by the Reſident at Poonah, the caution of the Miniſters to conceal Gungaboy, by ſurrounding her houſe with a ſtrong wooden fence, together with the manner in which the Nizam treats this reputed child in his late propoſals for pacification, gives much room to doubt the authenticity of the birth of Mahdoo Raw Narrain. The cauſes of the ſubſequent retreat of Ragoba to the country of Holkar, his junction with Holkar and Scindia, together with all his tranſactions, and thoſe of the different parties concerned in the confederacy againſt him, till the period of his croſſing the Tippi in his march towards Poonah, I find are fully explained in the Letters from Mr Moſtyn, the Reſident there, to the late Government at Calcutta, from April to November 1774, and to them I therefore beg leave to refer your Honour, &c. for every neceſſary information during that time.

From the divided ſtate of the miniſterial party, the doubtful ſtate of thoſe they deem their allies, and the reputable force of Ragoba, his ſucceſs ſeemed almoſt infallible: the better to ſecure it, he however, in the month of Auguſt, made overtures through his Vacqueel to the Government of Bombay for a body of troops to aſſiſt him; his offers were ſuch as could not be accepted conſiſtently with the plan laid down by the Honourable Company, as the grand and ſole object of every military or political engagement which they were unremittingly to purſue, and conſtantly watch every opening offered by the political ſtate of affairs to obtain, he could not be brought either to cede Salſette or Baſſein. Excluſive of that the Brachmins have ever ſhewn a ſingular attention to depreſs every growing Power in the Weſt of their dominions, and have always beheld, with particular jealouſy, the leaſt advancement of the Engliſh force there; their point of honour is concerned in the preſervation of thoſe territories; it is the family property of the Paiſhwah, acquired by their famous anceſtors, Chimmajee Oppah, and the only forts and countries that were ever conquered by Natives of Hindoſtan from the Europeans.

It is not well known whether he had any juſt cauſe to ſuſpect them, or whether it was only an artifice of the Miniſters, very uſual in this country; but it is ſaid Ragoba intercepted Letters to Holkar and Scindia, wherein they ſeemed to be bargaining for his deſtruction. Alarmed at this, he found means to quit their army, gave out that he was flying to Delhi, but turned off at Indoor, and joined Govend Row Guicawar, then before Brodera, who agreed to aſſiſt him with all his force. Their combined army was then ſaid to conſiſt of 40,000 men.

Holkar and Scindia deeming Ragoba's affairs deſperate by his late deſertion, thought beſt to enter ſeriouſly into terms with the Miniſters. A new confederacy was then formed, conſiſting of 12 perſons, partly Brachmin Miniſters and Maratta Chiefs, under the denomination of the Barrah Bhi, or Twelve Friends: the acknowledgment of Mahdoorow Narrain, for whom they had obtained from the Rajah the Sirpaw of Paiſhwah, and the total excluſion of Ragoba from all ſhare in the Government, was the baſis of their agreement; their private ſtipulations were not known.

Copy of the 11th Article in the Treaty with Nizam Ally; dated the 23d February 1768.

As the Engliſh Company do not intend to deprive the Marattas of their Choute, any more than the Soubah of his Piſhcaſh, which uſed to be paid from the Carnatic Balagaute, belonging to the Soubahderry of Viziapour, now or lately poſſeſſed by Hyder Naigue, it is hereby agreed, and the Company willingly promiſe to pay the Marattas regularly and annually, without trouble, for the whole Choute, as ſettled in former times, from the time the ſaid Countries ſhall be under the Company's protection as Dewan; provided however that the Marattas guarantee to the Company the peaceable poſſeſſion of the ſaid Dewannee; to this end, the Nabob Auſuph Jau promiſes to uſe his beſt endeavours, jointly with the Engliſh and the Nabob Wolau Jau, to ſettle with the Marattas concerning the Choute of the ſaid Countries, how and where it is to be paid, ſo that there may be no diſturbances hereafter on that account, between any of the contracting parties or the Marattas.

Article 2.—As an article regarding Mahim River was included in the Treaty made in the time of the deceaſed Badjerow; and it having been repreſented, that the Bundorah Coolies have of late begun to ſet up new fiſhing ſtakes, which they ought not to have done in that river, the Maratta Government do hereby oblige themſelves not to permit thereof in future.

Article 3.—As Bancote and Hematgur have been delivered to the Honourable Company, the Marattas do by theſe preſents give them the following villages towards defraying the expences thereof, and which are to remain the ſaid Honourable Company's property for ever, and of which they are to be put in poſſeſſion without further delay, viz. Velas Bag, Manly, Chepolee, Veſwee, Coodook, Pundarree, Panam, Daſgom, and Comela.

Article 4.—It having been a cuſtom, during the Governments of Angria and the Marattas at Bancote, that the Sciddees received a Chotic, or quarter part of the cuſtoms, the Marattas engage to ſatisfy the Sciddee in this particular; and that the Honourable Company do not meet with any embarraſſment concerning it, nor concerning the royalty of this river, which is hereby given and made over to them for ever. In caſe the Sciddee ſhould diſpute complying with the foregoing, the Engliſh declare it ſhall not retard the compliance with what may be mentioned in theſe Articles concerning the delivery of Ghereah.

Article 5.—Cuſtoms are to be levied by the Marattas on goods which paſs up the river of Bancote only at Gorgom and Marr, and not any let or impediment in any of the intervening places in the ſaid river of Bancote.

Article 6.—As Daſgom is a paſs for the Verjarrahs, or country merchants, the Marattas engage that ſuch goods as are carried that way to Marr, either by the river or by land, ſhall not pay any duties there, but only the uſual Nickolla.

return to the Engliſh without any impediment from the Maratta Government; and others, that in future may leave the Engliſh, are to be permitted to return again, if agreeable to them, in the manner above-mentioned; and ſuch ſubjects as ſhall leave the Maratta Government, and retire to Bancote, ſhall have liberty to return to the Marattas again, on their agreeing with them, and in ſuch caſe the Engliſh will not impede them.

Article 8.—The Marattas may export from the river of Bancote annually, for the uſe of their Southern forts, &c. grain of all kinds, to the value of forty thouſand (40,000) rupees, and it ſhall be free from cuſtoms at Bancote; they ſhall alſo have liberty to export, cuſtom-free, ſuch ſalt, rafters, ſmall timbers, &c. as they may want for the uſe of their Circar or Government; and in conſideration thereof, the Honourable Company's goods, to the amount of one hundred and fifty thouſand (150,000) rupees ſhalll annually, in like manner, be free from all cuſtoms, as far as Poona, upon Dalcaas or Certificates being produced on both ſides.

Article 11.—The Dutch goods will not be permitted to be landed at Rajahpore, nor their trade ſuffered to be carried on there, concerning which the Marattas will give proper orders; and the people under the Maratta Government are not to trade at Rajahpore; but if diſputes ariſe with Sciddee, this is to be no obſtacle to the delivery of Ghereah, as will be mentioned in a ſubſequent Article.

Article 12.—The Bramins, inhabitants at Hurry Hurraſecar, and others that will paſs to and from thence on pilgrimage, are to be free from paying cuſtoms in regard to the neceſſaries that they may have for their own uſe, or to perform their ceremonies; but this does not extend to merchandize.

Article 14.—The fort of Eſwant Gur is to be entirely demoliſhed, and the Engliſh on their parts are not to make any forts or fortifications within the nine villages, nor by the river. In like manner the Maratta Government are not to make any by the river of Bancote, or in the villages belonging to them. This Article, however, is not to exempt the Engliſh from building ſuch houſes and warehouſes as they think proper, in the villages belonging to them.

Article 15.—As all the royalty of Bancote and Hematgur, is with the Engliſh, they are to take care, as much as in their power lies, to prevent the enemy prejudicing the Marattas through that river.

Article 16.—Ghereah fort to be delivered within twenty-four days after the departure of the Engliſh Gentlemen from Poona, together with ſuch guns, balls, ſtores, &c. either of the fort or fleet, that the captors left for the ſervice of the garriſon or otherwiſe, or did not themſelves ſell; but the ſtores, ammunition, &c. that properly belong to the Honourable Company, they are to carry away with them. The officers of Toolajee are to go where they pleaſe, and if his family (wife and children) ſhould be deſirous of returning to him, the Engliſh will not impede it, but grant them free liberty ſo to do; and the Maratta Government engages, that Toolajee Angria ſhall have no place given him, nor any power below the Gaut: Ballajee Badjerow Pundit Praden is to ſend an Officer of credit with the Engliſh Gentlemen, who is to proceed with one of the Council from Bombay to Ghereah; which perſon belonging to the Maratta Government, is to have in his poſſeſſion the proper ſunnuds and orders regarding the delivery of Bancote and its villages; and when the Maratta people and colours are got into Ghereah, and the Engliſh ready to go out, he is deliver directly the ſaid ſunnuds and orders for Fort Victoria (or Bancote) and its ſeveral villages, to the Engliſh Counſellor, and then return with that Gentleman to Bancote directly, to ſee Nannah's orders are effectually executed in regard to the villages.

Article 17.—Theſe Articles being concluded and agreed upon by both parties, they are to act conformable thereto, in conſequence of which, all diſputes are to ſubſide, and no claims are to be made by the Maratta Government on the Honourable Company, to the date of theſe preſents.

Article 18.—All Treaties hitherto made between the Maratta Government and Engliſh, are to be obſerved and maintained inviolable by both parties agreeable to the tenor of them.

John Spencer.

APPENDIX, No. 35.

From Gopaul Row Gunnaſe. Received 27th December 1775.

398. I HAVE lately received a Letter from Seremunt Rogonaut Row Pundit Purdham, containing a particular account of the ſtate of affairs, and deſiring, that I would write a detail of them to you, and ſend it by a truſty agent. As this account is very long, I have written it on a ſeparate paper, and now encloſe it to you. It will be preſented to you by Dakut Row Billage, who proceeds to your preſence, and will verbally acquaint you with every circumſtance. I am hopeful, that having well conſidered them, you will give ſuch directions to the Gentlemen at Bombay, as may conduce to the extirpation of the rebels, and the regulation of the Raje of my brother Seremunt; and further, that you yourſelf will alſo afford him aid. By theſe means, friendſhip will be firmly eſtabliſhed between you and Ragonaut Row, who will preſerve the utmoſt gratitude towards you; and your generoſity on this occaſion will not be unprofitable. The monarchs and princes of former times always afforded their aſſiſtance to each other for the protection of their reſpective dominions.

Encloſed in the above,

Particulars relative to the Decan.

399. Bajee Row and Jumnajee Anna were own brothers; the former had a ſon named Bhow, and the latter two ſons named Nanna and Ragonaut Row. Theſe three jointly conducted the affairs of the Raja. Bhow was killed in a battle againſt Abdallah at Pauneput. Nanna having the greateſt affection for Bhow, ſhortly after died of grief for his loſs. Nanna left two ſons, Madhoo Row, who had attained his eighth year, and Narrain Row, an infant of a year old. Nizam Ally Cawn, Hyder Naig, and other potent Rajahs and Zemindars, regarding Ragonaut Row and Narrain Row as infants, commenced hoſtilities on every ſide. As Ragonaut Row was the eldeſt of the three, he took on himſelf the defence of the Raje, and by his bravery preſerved it entire. He placed his nephew Madoo Row on the Muſnud, and ſuperintended his education.

education. When Madhoo Row attained the age of 16 or 17 years, certain malicious Miniſters inſtilled into his mind ſuſpicions that his uncle Ragonaut Row would ſome time or other diſpoſſeſs him of his Raje, and ſeize on it himſelf, or at leaſt would take a part of it from him; that it was therefore expedient to put him under confinement. Ragonaut Row heard of this, and perceived that certain malicious Miniſters were endeavouring to make a breach between him and his nephew (whom he always conſidered as his ſon) by means of lying reports. "Had "I deſigned," ſaid he to himſelf, "to poſſeſs myſelf "of the Raje, I ſhould have ſeated myſelf on the Muſ- "nud at firſt; it will be utterly unprofitable to me to "remain here any longer, for where ſuch a number of "falſe and miſchievous men are gathered together, my "ruin cannot fail of being ſome time or other effected. "Such a baſe meaſure was never taken by any one of our "family, it is therefore adviſable for me to retreat from "hence with a few attendants, and to go to Benares, there "to paſs my days in retirement, and in the practice of "religious duties." Having thus determined, he began his journey. The malicious Miniſters would have been much better pleaſed to have had Ragonaut Row in confinement, as Madhoo Row would have then been in fear of him; and they had determined, if Madhoo Row gave them cauſe of diſpleaſure, to join with Ragonaut Row, and vice verſa; but they conſidered that by the departure of Ragonaut Row, Madhoo Row would remain poſſeſſed of unlimited authority over them, and being an unexperienced youth, might one day or other ill treat them. Led by theſe conſiderations, they came to the following reſolutions: certain of the Miniſters were ſent to Ragonaut Row, who importuned him in the ſtrongeſt terms not to leave the place, and deſired, that if he perſiſted in his reſolution, he would firſt of all ſlay them who were his ſervants with his own hand; for, that if he went and left them, Madhoo Row would take ſome opportunity of diſgracing and putting them to death. By ſuch deceitful ſpeeches, Ragonaut Row was perſuaded to lay aſide his intention of coming to this part; and a negociation for an accommodation with Madhoo Row was ſet on foot, but as the Mutſuddies on both ſides were leagued together, they took effectual means to prevent its being effected, equally abuſing and deceiving both parties. Hoſtilities between Madhoo Row and Ragonaut Row were in conſequence of theſe intrigues; in which the latter was victorious, and brought Madhoo Row priſoner. As Ragonaut Row regarded Madhoo Row in no other light but in that of a ſon, he went to viſit him, and addreſſing him in theſe words: "You are my "ſon, and the Sovereign of this Country; for the pro- "ſperity of which I have taken ſo much trouble, not "from any view of the poſſeſſion of it." He converſed for ſome time with Madhoo Row in this ſtrain of encouragement, and afterwards replaced him on the Muſnud, and brought to condign puniſhment the Mutſuddies who were authors of this breach. He took for himſelf a jaghier of 20 lack of rupees to defray his expences, and retired to Gulſhunabad, placing Siccaram Pundit (one of his own Mutſuddies, who was at firſt a ſervant at 4 R^s^ per month, till raiſed to an eminent ſtation by Ragonaut Row) with Madhoo Row, as a ſuperintendant of his affairs, ſo that he was in fact his Guardian, and was to tranſact all the affairs of the Government on mature deliberation and advice, conſulting firſt with Ragonaut Row on any meaſure which might be reſolved on, which if approved by him was to be carried into execution, otherwiſe to be dropt. Having ſettled theſe points, he went and fixed his habitation at Gulſhunabad.

Toocajee Sinda and Mahdojee Sinda were brothers. On the death of Toocajee the elder, Ragonaut Row eſtabliſhed Godarjee Sinda, his ſon, in the Government held by his father, and appointed Mahdojee Sinda his Guardian, with the ſuperintendance of his affairs. Two months after the retreat of Ragonaut Row to Gulſhunabad, Siccaram Baboo, in conſequence of a bribe given to him by Mahdojee Sinda, eſtabliſhed him in the Government, and diſplaced Godarjee; who thereupon came and complained to Ragonaut Row. Ragonaut Row wrote to Madhoo Row and Siccaram, as follows: "You engaged that you "would conduct the affairs of the Raje with my advice "and concurrence; the ſtep you have now taken in "diſplacing Godarjee; and eſtabliſhing Mhadojee in his "room, is highly improper; this act of injuſtice is con- "trary to the maxims invariably purſued by our fa- "mily." They return this anſwer: "You have choſen "a ſtate of retirement, what have you to do with the "affairs of Government? we ſhall act as we think fit."— Ragonaut Row was highly diſpleaſed at this anſwer, and determined to go in perſon and bring them to reaſon, leſt by ſuch inconſiderate and unjuſt meaſures, which are diſpleaſing to God, the Raje ſhould be taken out of their hands. He accordingly ſet off for Poona. On hearing this, Siccaram reflecting that if Ragonaut Row came to Poona, he and his nephew would act in concert, which muſt be of bad conſequence to him, inſtilled apprehenſions into the mind of Madhoo Row, that Ragonaut Row was coming with a deſign to ſecure his perſon, to prevent which, it would be proper to be beforehand with him, and ſeize him on the road. In conſequence of this advice, they ſet out at the head of 40,000 cavalry, making forced marches towards Ragonaut Row, who was attended by no more than 2,000 horſemen, and had no deſign of entering on hoſtilities. Madhoo Row, by the advice of the perfidious and miſchievous Siccaram, ſeized on Ragonaut Row, and brought him priſoner to Poona, where he was kept in confinement ſix years, at which period Madhoo Row was ſeized with a violent diſorder which brought him to death's door. Juſt before his deceaſe he ſent for Ragonaut Row, and ſaid to him, "I was treated by you "as your ſon, and in return have heaped diſgrace on "you; as a puniſhment for which guilt I am cut off in "the flower of my age; pardon the crimes I have been "guilty of towards you, that I may eſcape eternal ruin; "this is your Raje, eſtabliſh yourſelf therein." Ragonaut Row was much affected by this ſpeech, and weeping bitterly, ſaid, "Is it fit that a ſon like you ſhould periſh, "and that I ſhould ſet myſelf on the Muſnud? No; I "will eſtabliſh your younger brother Narrain Row (who "is my ſon alſo) in your room; do you leave it in "charge to him, to conduct the affairs of the Government "with my advice, till he attains the age of manhood, "and has gained experience in the art of Government." Madhoo Row then ſending for Narrain Row, gave him in charge to Ragonaut Row, and ſoon after expired. After the ceremonies of the funeral were completed, Ragonaut Row placed his nephew Narrain Row on the Muſnud, and adopted him as his ſon. Siccaram Pundit, Nanna Purnavees, and ſome other Mutſuddies, being entirely bent on perfidy, malice, and miſchief, obſerved to Narrain Row, that if his uncle Ragonaut Row ſhould have a ſon, he would lay claim to a part of the Raje for him; to prevent which, it was expedient to ſecure his perſon without loſs of time. Narrain Row forbad them ever to renew ſuch villainous advice, and told them, "by your "council, my elder brother was induced to treat him "injuriouſly, who is in the place of a father to us, and "he has been puniſhed for his guilt, in being cut off in "his youth. You would now adviſe me to follow the "ſame conduct, being deſirous of my death, that as "Ragonaut Row has no heir, you might on his deceaſe "ſeize the Government for yourſelves." Narrain Row would never lend an ear to their advice; on which, having no hopes from that quarter, Siccaram, &c. went to the mother of Narrain Row, and repreſented to her, that ſhould Ragonaut Row have a ſon, he would immediately ſeize on the Government, or at leaſt a part of it for him; that the only way to prevent this would be to put Ragonaut Row in confinement. The conſequence of this was, that Narrain Row, by the perſuaſions of his mother, ſeized on Ragonaut Row, and confined him with ſtill more ſeverity than had been made uſe of by Madhoo Row. Some time afterwards afterwards a party was formed amongſt the Mutſuddies, ſome inclining to Narrain Row, and the reſt favouring Ragonaut Row; ſome of the latter came to him, and offered, if he approved of it, to concert a ſcheme for ſeizing the perſon of Narrain Row. Ragonaut Row declared he could do nothing to forward it, having neither money nor influence; that no perſon was allowed to come near him, how could he then bring about the ſeizure of Narrain Row, or of what advantage would it be to him? The Mutſuddies replied, Execute a written engagement, that on the impriſonment of Narrain Row you will give us ſuch a ſum, and we will gain over his body guard, and effect our purpoſe of ſeizing his perſon; if this is not carried into execution, his intolerable cruelty will cauſe the deſtruction of the Raje.—As Ragonaut Row laboured under all the horrors of a ſevere impriſonment, from which he had no other way of freeing himſelf, he entered into the propoſed engagement. The Mutſuddies having ſettled the matter with the guards, they began the commotion, and under the pretence of demanding their arrears, entered into the houſe with a deſign to kill Narrain Row. Ragonaut Row, who was confined in the ſame houſe, ran immediately to the place where the uproar was, and forbad them to execute their purpoſe, which he told them was an unadviſable meaſure, for if they killed Narrain Row he ſhould have no ſon left. The guards would not hearken to him; on which Ragonaut Row took Narrain Row in his arms to protect him. The guards then addreſſing themſelves to Ragonaut Row, ſaid, "We have now entered on this buſineſs, but can "place no confidence in you; for regarding Narrain "Row as your ſon, you will replace him on the Muſnud, "and puniſh us with death; if you do not give him up "to our fury, we will make an end of you both." Ragonaut Row replied, "It is well; kill me then "alſo." They made ſeveral cuts with their ſwords, and gave Ragonaut Row two wounds, one on his head, and the other on his hand. The Kidmutgars who were preſent forcibly carried Ragonaut Row on one ſide; the guards then cut down Narrain Row, and proclaimed Ragonaut Row in the city. Ragonaut Row took the reins of Government into his hand, and, on account of the troubles which were on foot in every quarter, he pardoned the guilty Miniſters, and confirmed them in their poſts. He then began his march towards the Carnatic, to take ſatisfaction on Nizam Ally Cawn, Hyder Naig, and other rebellious Chiefs, leaving all his family and dependants behind him at Poona. The Mutſuddies, ever bent on ingratitude and perfidy, caballed together, ſaying, Ragonaut Row has once more eſtabliſhed himſelf in the Raje; it is neceſſary that we form ſome plan for expelling him. This point being determined on, they gave out that the wife of Narrain Row was three months gone with child; and that if the fruit of her pregnancy proved a ſon, he would be their Sovereign. They kept ten pregnant women with the wife of Narrain Row, in the fort of Prounder; and all the miniſters and ſervants, both great and ſmall, entered into a league, and by bribes engaged the commanders of the armies in their intereſt. When Ragonaut Row perceived that all the miniſters and commanders of the forces were confederated together againſt him, being without reſource, he laid aſide his firſt intention, and marched towards Goujeraut, followed by the rebellious army; with which he engaged, and obtained a victory, under the diſadvantage of great inferiority of forces; but of this not being ſenſible, by reaſon of the darkneſs of the night, he fled from thence, and went to Surat. Before he quitted Goujeraut, he had concluded a Treaty with the Gentlemen of Surat and Bombay. On his arrival at Surat, the Gentlemen of that place, as well as thoſe of Bombay, received him with the utmoſt cordiality, and aſſiſted him with ſome battalions of their own forces, with which he returned to the diſtrict of Goujeraut, where he was again joined by his forces, who had diſperſed after the laſt battle. The army of the rebels, amounting to near 60,000 cavalry, were defeated three ſeveral times by Ragonant Row, with the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh, and fled to Burhanpore. Although Ragonaut Row wiſhed to have purſued them, yet, on account of the rains, and the neceſſity of regulating the affairs of Goujeraut, he delayed it. The rebels then gave it out, that a ſon was born to Narrain Row: as there were ten pregnant women with the wife of Narrain Row in the fort, it is not known which of them brought forth the ſon. The Gentlemen of Surat and Bombay are all acquainted with this circumſtance, having a factory at Poona. The Bundobuſt of Goujeraut being completed, and the rainy ſeaſon at an end, Ragonaut Row determined to proceed to Poona, when Letters from the Gentlemen of Culcutta were received by thoſe of Bombay, directing a ceſſation of hoſtilities, and a compliance with the orders which ſhould be afterwards ſent them. The expedition to Poona is accordingly ſtopped, and a ceſſation of arms has taken place, which reflects the greateſt diſhonour on the reputation of Ragonaut Row, and has cauſed the utmoſt aſtoniſhment to all ranks of people, who ſay, "It was formerly a maxim with the Engliſh, that if any one of their countrymen commenced an undertaking, and was not able to complete it, the Government of the reſpective ſettlements, for their own honour, aſſiſted him; and if that was not ſufficient; the Company engaged in it; and in caſe that was ſtill found inadequate, the King of England furniſhed money from his own treaſury for the carrying ſuch undertaking into execution; but now that the Engliſh have entered into alliance with Ragonaut Row, when his affairs are on the point of being advantageouſly ſettled, they withdraw themſelves from the alliance. How is ſuch conduct to be accounted for? Poſſibly they have changed their ancient maxims."—With reſpect to the report ſpread by the rebels, of the birth of a ſon to Narrain Row, Ragonaut Row ſays, "if it is really a fact, "it is well; he is my grandſon, I will take care of his "education. I am the proper Guardian of the infant "and of the Raje; but who are thoſe rebels who ſet on "foot diſturbances, and would expel me?"

Bengal Secret Conſultations, 12th February 1776.

An account of the Riſe and Progreſs of the late Diſſentions and Rebellion in the Maratta Government, as given by the Miniſterial Party at the Requeſt of Colonel Upton; 3d January 1766.

When Maderow Row, the elder brother of the late Narrain Row, was Peſhwa, Ragonaut Row returned from a war they had been carrying on in Indoſtan, and ſoon after told his brother's ſon the Peſhwa, that he was beginning to grow tired of the public world, and wiſhed to retire, to enjoy the reſt of his days in religious ceremonies. The other replied, that he was his uncle, or rather conſidered as his father, his will ſhould be a law to him. Ragonaut Row fixed on the banks of the Gungha near Guderury for his reſidence; the Peſhwa gave him ten lacks of rupees a year, telling him, if at any time he ſhould not find that ſum ſufficient, he had only to command more. He accordingly retired; but in a little more than one year, he all on a ſudden took up the ſword, and without ſaying a word, aſſembled 15,000 men. Maderow hearing of this extraordinary meaſure, which reſembled more the actions of a frantic mind than any thing elſe, went to his uncle attended by his army, and aſked his reaſons for making ſuch preparations? he replied, he wanted to make himſelf Peſhwa by force of arms. The other told him, it was exceedingly unneceſſary to raiſe any commotions, for that he was ready to give up to him all the power, keeping only the name, that his family might not be injured. At laſt, he prevailed upon him to lay down his arms, and retire again to his religion; where he continued for another year, and then aſſembled the ſame troops he had before. The Peſhwa learning theſe ſtrange proceedings, ſent a Vackeel to him. In a few days he received a Letter from his Vackeel, telling him, that nothing would ſatisfy his uncle but war. This being the caſe, the Peſhwa marched at the head of an army to the banks of the Gungba, and did every thing in his power to perſuade him to lay aſide his ſtrange unbecoming tranſactions, which tended to nothing but the ruin of their family; however he would hear of no terms of accommodation, and a battle enſued, in which he was totally defeated, and made his eſcape to a fort belonging to the Peſhwa, where he was ſecured and ſent priſoner to Poona, where he was confined in his own houſe, with guards round the outer door, to prevent his coming abroad, or any of the Chiefs going near him without being properly attended. Here he continued till the Peſhwa, who has been long ſickly, found that his diſorder would ſoon carry him off; he therefore ſent for his uncle, told him the ſtate he was in, and ſaid, he hoped he had long laid aſide all his hoſtile views; that after his death, his younger brother would become Peſhwa, and ſtand much in need of aſſiſtance and protection of his uncle till he came of age to rule by himſelf, which he now begged, as his laſt requeſt, Ragonaut Row would ſtrictly do; and then ordered him to be releaſed. After which he ſent for his brother, and delivered him over to the care of his uncle, and died in a few days after.

Ragonaut Row continued in the Government of the State for ſome time, and Narrain Row no more than the nominal Peſhwa only, yet ſhewed great regard and attachment towards his uncle. Narrain Row went to viſit his mother on the banks of the Gungba. In his abſence, Ragonaut Row wrote to Hyder Naig, and ſome other princes, to requeſt they would aſſiſt him to uſurp the Peſhwaſhip; which Letters fell into the hands of Narrain Row. He inſtantly returned to Poona, and preſented them to his uncle, who could not deny being the author of them. The other ſaw nothing left for him but to confine him in the ſame manner he had been in the other reign, which he accordingly did, and placed a body of Muſſulmen then in their ſervice, called the Gardies, as a guard over him. In this confinement he found means to bribe the Chief of the Gardies, named Mahomed Euſiph and Summer Sing, to engage in a conſpiracy againſt the life of Narrain Row, and they brought all their followers to the ſame horrid purpoſe with themſelves, which they ſoon put in execution as follows; viz.

A party of them entered the palace, killed all the centinels, till they came to the door of the ſleeping apartment, where there were two truſty men of ſome rank, whom they killed alſo. Narrain Row hearing the diſturbance, immediately judged their intention, got out at another door, and made his eſcape to his uncle's houſe, where he fell down at his feet, graſped him by the knees, begged and prayed he would ſave his life, and he might take every thing elſe. The aſſaſſins followed the unfortunate Prince, and murdered him, when imploring for mercy at the feet of his barbarous uncle. For this cruel action he gave the Gardies four lacks of rupees, two elephants, and ſome jewels.

Ragonaut Row then took poſſeſſion of the Peſhwaſhip, and he being the only one of the family remaining, the people ſubmitted, or rather continued quiet, for the preſent time.

Without waiting to fix himſelf in his poſſeſſions, he immediately aſſembled an army of fifty or ſixty thouſand men, and marched againſt Hyder Naig. Sicca Ram Baboo and Ballajee Pundit attended him; but the firſt, when about 40 coſs from Poona, aſked his permiſſion to return, which he granted.

The latter made the ſame requeſt in two or three days after, under pretence of ſickneſs, which was alſo complied with.

When Ragonaut Row was in the Carnatic, he received intelligence that Narrain Row's widow was big with child. Being determined entirely to extirpate the family of the late Peſhwa, he ſent ſome of the aſſaſſins of the father to take the firſt opportunity of murdering the widow and child, ſhould ſhe be delivered of a boy.

The poor unfortunate woman hearing of their being about her houſe, ſent to Siccaram Baboo and Ballajee, to aſk whether they were men or women? of the firſt, whether they were not aſhamed to ſee a ſet of murderers ready to cut the throat of their late maſter's widow and child?

They were at a loſs what reply to make; but receiving Letters about the ſame time from ſome of the principal Chiefs then with Ragonaut Row, deſiring they would remove her to ſome ſafe place till ſhe was delivered; and that they would quit the uſurper to join them, and ſupport the offſpring of their late Peſhwa. This immediately determined their doubts, and they aſſembled; a few of their friends came unexpectedly upon the people ſent by Ragonaut Row, impriſoned them, and removed the widow to Poona Dhur, where ſhe was ſoon after delivered of a boy. Ragonaut Row was marching towards the Nurbudda when this news was made public.

The Miniſters were immediately joined by the principal Chiefs, and their army became ſo formidable in a ſhort time, under the command of Hurry Pundit Purkia, that they attacked and gained a complete victory over Ragonaut Row and his followers, and diſperſed them in ſuch a manner, that he himſelf with difficulty made his eſcape to Surat with about a hundred horſe, and ſought an alliance with the Engliſh.—With the reſt the Colonel is perfectly acquainted.

From Siccaram Baboo; dated the 29th of Jummadee ul awul, or July. Received the 18th of September 1775.

The circumſtances, my friend, are theſe. Formerly the ſtricteſt union ſubſiſted between the family of the Peſhwa and the Bombay Sirdars, which was cemented by a great number of Treaties; but by a ſudden change of fortune Narrain Row being murdered by Ragonaut Row, the circumſtances of which are well known, by the favour of God a ſon was born to the deceaſed Row, under whoſe ſhadow we are protected. His birth raiſed the hopes of all men, and he was ſeated on the Muſnud of the Peſhwaſhip.

During the lifetime of the late bleſſed Row, I and Ballajee Pundit had, under him, the entire management of all the affairs of the Government, and out of gratitude to him we ſtill continue to exert ourſelves with the utmoſt aſſiduity for the ſervice of our maſter, and are aſſiſted therein by all the dependants of the Peſhwa, both great and ſmall; moreover, the Nabob Nizam ul Mulk, adhering ſtrictly to the rights of his ancient friendſhip, ſhews favour and kindneſs to us.

Articles of Agreement made with Seuram Punt Tatiab, in behalf of Madrao Balajee, ſon of Balajee Baajerow, Pandit Punt Pradan; dated the 14th of September 1761.

Article 1ſt.—That ſuch of the Maratta officers who have preſumed to ſtop any Pattamars, and obſtructed the buſineſs of the Engliſh by any impediments whatever, ſhall be ſeverely puniſhed for ſuch their offences; and to prevent the like happening again in future, ſtrict orders ſhall be iſſued immediately for that purpoſe, which, if not found ſufficient to anſwer that end, the Engliſh are to acquaint Madarao thereof; and if redreſs is not obtained in reaſonable time, if the Engliſh then take ſatisfaction of ſuch offenders, in whatever manner may by them be thought proper, it is not to be deemed a breach of friendſhip between the two Governments.

Article 2d.—That ample ſatisfaction ſhall be made, within two months from the date hereof, to all merchants trading under the Honourable Company's protection, who have ſuffered in their property, by any unjuſt or illegal actions of the Maratta officers or ſubjects, in any place, ſhape, or manner whatever; and rigid orders iſſued, that all aſſiſtance be afforded in future, to any veſſel or veſſels in diſtreſs, having Engliſh colours or paſſes; without ſubjecting the owners or proprietors thereof to any impediments, under the pretence of their being being wrecks, from the ſplitting of a ſail, the breaking of their maſts or yards, and ſuch trifling misfortunes; whereas no veſſels are to be deemed wrecks but ſuch as are drove aſhore, and there break to pieces by ſtreſs of weather; when the Maratta officer, and the people of the veſſels, are to join in ſaving all that is poſſible, which muſt be lodged in ſecure warehouſes, and then one-half of what is ſo ſaved ſhall belong to Madarao, and the other half to the owners.

Article 3d.—That all Europeans and Natives, either ſoldiers, ſeamen, or others, in his Britannic Majeſty's or the Honourable Company's pay, who may hereafter deſert from Bombay, ſhall be immediately ſecured, and returned to the neareſt Engliſh ſettlement to ſuch place where they may be apprehended, upon landing in any part of the Maratta country; the Governor having promiſed all ſuch a free pardon, and to pay any reaſonable charges that may be incurred on the occaſion. In like manner ſhall be delivered up all deſerters in the Engliſh pay from Surat, on their being known, or immediately on receiving notice of them, within the Maratta limits, it not being in their power to ſpeak more poſitively with reſpect to thoſe of Surat, as the country thereabouts is open, and numbers go through it without being known. It is alſo agreed, that whatever people, Europeans of all nations excepted, who are in the ſervice of Madarao, and may deſert therefrom to the Engliſh, ſhall be delivered up on the ſame terms and conditions.

Article 4th.—That proper people ſhall be forthwith diſpatched, for reſtoring the whole juriſdiction and territories of Rajahpore to the Sciddees of Gingerah, in the ſame condition and manner as they remained before invaded and attacked by Ramajee Punt, which country is not to be moleſted in future by any of the Maratta officers or ſubjects.

Article 5th.—That all priſoners taken by the Marattas or Sciddees, ſubjects of either Government, and now in their poſſeſſion, ſhall be ſent to Bombay, within one month from the ſigning of theſe Articles, and mutually reſtored by the Governor to their freedom; and all hoſtilities between the Marattas and Sciddees ſhall ceaſe from this time.

Laſtly, That proper orders ſhall be inſtantly diſpatched to all the Maratta officers, requiring them to ſhew a due obedience to theſe Articles, which are to be confirmed under Madarao's ſeal, and tranſmitted to Bombay with all poſſible expedition, after the ſigning and ſealing thereof; when a counterpart of the ſame is to be executed by the Governor, and tranſmitted to Poona.

In confirmation of all which, I, Govind Seuram Punt Tatiah, have to this inſtrument interchangeably ſet my hand and ſeal (in behalf of Madarao Balajee Pandit aforeſaid) at Bombay, the 14th of September 1761.

An additional Article.—As to what relates to the reſtoration of Undery fort, and the country appertaining thereto, is ſubmitted to Madarao's generoſity, in full expectation that he will deliver them likewiſe, or aſſign over in lieu thereof ſuch lands belonging to him as will prove an equivalent thereto. The ſame day and year above-written.

Trimbuck Row, an officer of the Maratta army, who is encamped at the diſtance of ten coſs from this place, ſends a meſſage to me from time to time, that he wants to go to the Gaut of Arcot, to recover his Choute for 20 years, and that he will abate me one-half of what I owe them, and make everlaſting friendſhip with me, on condition that I order my army, with ſome principal officer, to accompany him thither. To which I ſent him for anſwer, that as a peace has been concluded between me and the Engliſh King, under his ſeal as well as mine, and ſigned by the Governor and Council of Bombay and Madras, I could not act in contempt thereto, and that we both are, thank God, going on agreeable to our abovementioned agreements, and will do the ſame in future. He the ſaid Trimbuck Row ſent me word again, that if I have a friendſhip with the Engliſh, why I have not received any aſſiſtance from the Company this time? To which I gave him an anſwer, that if my occaſions will require this aſſiſtance, they will grant me it upon my application to the Governor agreeable to their agreements; and that, if he, Trimbuck Row, be diſguſted at my refuſing to grant his requeſt, and may perhaps march againſt me, I will in that caſe ſtand to fight with him till two years, but will not give him my forces, nor will break my word with the Engliſh. On my ſending him this plain anſwer, he is giving me more trouble. Conſidering my firm friendſhip and agreements with the Honourable Company and their Governors, I have already given and will hereafter give him the ſame anſwers, all which your Honour will hear from others. Your Honour being my true friend, I have therefore given you this notice in a friendly way, and will in future act agreeable to your advice. My army lately fell upon the Marattas in the woods on their departure from thence, killed four or five principal officers, and many Sepoys, took of them ſeveral pallankeens, affiaguers, and 3 or 400 horſes; my troops had been as far as their artillery, but their guns being heavy they could not bring them away, but killed the oxen and elephants and the bearers thereof: my people are daily bringing 100 or 200 horſes and camels from them. Your Honours will always pleaſe me with your friendly Letters.

I did continue a war with the Marattas for theſe three years, in hopes that I ſhall receive aſſiſtance from the Company, and did many times write to the Governor of Madras about it, but he has not hitherto ſent me any ſuccour. Had the Company's forces joined to my army, the Marattas would have gone away from this country without fighting, and would never thought to have come again either into the Company's dominions or into my countries, and both yours as well as my country would have been very eaſy. They have an intention now to make peace with me any how, and march to Arcot; for which purpoſe, they are encamped near Syringapatam, at the diſtance of 3 or 4 coſs. They ſent me their Vackeels from time to time, promiſing to abate me one-half from what I juſtly owe them, and to make with me everlaſting peace agreeable to my wiſhes, on condition that I aſſiſt them with my forces againſt Arcot; but I conſidering my agreements with the Company, gave them a plain anſwer. We are diſputing about this matter for theſe two months more, eſpecially on the ſubject of ſuccour, which they deſire of me, ſo that I have been fighting with them every day almoſt, and my people are, thank God, bringing from their army in the woods from 50 to 100 horſes, camels, &c. daily. Your Honour very well knows that my country is ruining for theſe three years, and although the Company have not yet granted me their aſſiſtance conformable to their agreements, yet I, for their ſake, and conformable to my agreements with them, am ſending my forces after the Marattas, to hinder them from making an entrance into the country of Arcot; of which I give you this friendly notice. Your Honour will always pleaſe me with your friendly Letters.

Extract of the General Letter to Fort Saint George; dated 24th November 1772.

Par. 8. The Earl of Rochford, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, having lately intimated his his deſire to us, to be informed what inſtructions we propoſed to give to our ſervants in India, relative to the alliance with the Marattas and Hyder Ally, and which of thoſe Powers we meant to prefer in our alliance; we accordingly took the ſame into our moſt mature conſideration, and on referring to your ſeveral proceedings and negociations, as well as our own orders, the Treaty made with Hyder in 1769, and a Letter we have lately received from Sir Robert Harland, on this moſt important ſubject, whereby we are told, that the Marattas had acceded to his propoſal for a ceſſation of hoſtilities between their Nation, the Engliſh, and the Nabob of the Carnatic, until ſuch time as his Majeſty's pleaſure ſhould be known; we at length, after weighing all circumſtances with the utmoſt attention, offered our opinion as follows to Lord Rochford:

" That it will not be equitable or advantageous to " depart, if it can poſſibly be avoided, from the neutra- " lity which has been hitherto maintained, and which " the Company are moſt anxious to preſerve throughout " all Hindoſtan, ſo long as Hyder Ally ſhall continue to " obſerve the conditions of the Treaty of Peace conclud- " ed between him and the Company the 3d April 1769, " by the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, ſtipulating, " that in caſe either of the contracting parties ſhall be " attacked, they ſhall, from their reſpective countries, " mutually aſſiſt each other to drive the enemy out; " and alſo the Treaty made between the ſaid parties, on " the 8th of Auguſt 1770, by the Preſidency of Bombay, " ſtipulating, that the Nabob Hyder Ally ſhall not aſſiſt " the enemies of the Engliſh, nor on the other hand " ſhall the Engliſh aſſiſt the enemies of the Nabob Hyder " Ally. And the Court of Directors are further of " opinion, that no poſitive orders can at this time be " given to the Governor and Council of Fort Saint " George on this moſt important ſubject on the part of the " Company; further than to recommend a perſeverance " in forbearing to join either Hyder Ally or the Marattas, " unleſs it ſhall appear to the Governor and Council of " Fort Saint George, abſolutely neceſſary for the Com- " pany's intereſt to take part with either of them."

9. It is therefore our pleaſure and we hereby direct, that you pay the ſtricteſt regard to our ſaid opinion, and ſo far as lies in your power act agreeably thereto.

10. Yet notwithſtanding this our opinion, if it ſhould hereafter appear to you upon full and well-grounded information that the Marattas or Hyder ſhould have entered into ſuch connections as might endanger the welfare of the Company, we then cannot heſitate to direct, that you no longer obſerve the neutrality ſo heartily wiſhed for by us, but purſue ſuch a line of conduct as may defeat the ill conſequences of an alliance with our competitors.

APPENDIX, No. 36.

Extract of Poona Diary, the 9th September 1773.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

THIS is principally to acquaint you of an extraordinary revolution that took place here the 30th ultimo. That day two Subedars, Mahomed Eſoof and Sumerſing, having been brought over to Ragoba's intereſt (who has been cloſely confined for ſome time paſt by his nephew) marched to the palace, with about 500 men, on pretence of being muſtered; and after having cut off the guard at the gates, ruſhed in, and killed Narrain Row; about an hour after, Ragoba was proclaimed in town; and the whole was over in a very little time, without noiſe, or much bloodſhed. There has been frequent reports of ſchemes being formed for Ragoba's releaſe, but they have generally been detected before they came to maturity; however, this was carried on with ſuch addreſs, that it was put into execution before the neceſſary precautions could be taken to prevent its effects.

By what I can learn, moſt of the Miniſters were concerned in this affair; notwithſtanding which, Ragoba now ſeems jealous of them all, and places his ſole confidence in his army, which he is recruiting with the utmoſt haſte; but whether it will be ſtaunch to him is yet uncertain, and cannot be determined till Deſſorah, when he means to go to Setterah, to receive the Sirpah of Peſhwa from the Rajah, and afterwards take the field. I ſhould have informed your Honour, &c. of the above immediately on its happening, had I not wiſhed to have acquainted you with what turn things would take; and though I have waited till now, it is impoſſible to ſay with certainty (people are ſo divided in their opinions) what may attend this change; but it is generally believed this great empire, which now reſts upon Ragoba's ſingle life, cannot long ſtand. Should he continue to diſtruſt the old Miniſters, who are only able to ſupport him, they will be drove to the diſagreeable neceſſity of forming parties for their own ſafety; and it is moſt probable the bordering Powers will not fail to avail themſelves of ſo favourable an oportunity of ſeizing what they can. Moodajee Bonſello in particular, who has a large army on foot, is, it is ſaid, alſo a good ſoldier and politician, and may, from being a relation of the Raja's, form pretenſions to the Government, and not unlikely take this opportunity of attempting at ſecuring it. In ſhort, in this confuſion of affairs, nothing can be depended upon; but after Ragoba has been to Setterah, I ſhall be better able to judge; when, ſhould any material alterations happen, I will inſtantly acquaint you therewith.

Poona, 9th September 1773. I am, with reſpect, Honourable Sir, and Sirs, Your moſt obedient humble ſervant.

From Ragonaut Row; received the 27th October 1775.

Though the Miniſters of the Sirkar had been the authors of diſturbances and commotions, and had acted in the moſt ungrateful manner, I nevertheleſs, in conſideration of their ancient ſervices, pardoned their offences, and confirmed them in the adminiſtration of affairs on the ſame footing as formerly, and proceeded myſelf towards the Carnatic. In the meantime theſe perfidious men entered into alliance with the Nabob Nizam Ally Khan, who had long acted treacherouſly and deceitfully towards me, and by means of the aid which he afforded them commenced hoſtilities.—By the favour of the Almighty the firſt battle was well fought; but as all the fortified places were in their poſſeſſion, I thought proper to go to Goujeraut, where I applied to the General of Bombay, who was my old friend, and well verſed in affairs, for his alliance; and all matters being ſettled between us, a Treaty was ratified for our jointly acting againſt the enemy, and bringing them to puniſhment, and for my eſtabliſhment in the Government. Accordingly an army from Bombay was ſent to aſſiſt me, and by the bleſſing of God the rebels were entirely defeated in five or ſix ſeveral battles, and fled half dead towards the Decan: we ſhould have immediately purſued them, but conſidering the difficulty of tranſporting the Engliſh artillery and ammunition to ſo great a diſtance during the rainy ſeaſon, I cantoned near the fort of Burrooda, to regulate the affairs of Goujeraut. The rainy ſeaſon being at an end, I was deſirous of proceeding to the Decan, when Letters from you were received by the General of Bombay for a ceſſation of arms. This filled me with the utmoſt aſtoniſhment, as it is notorious that it is the cuſtom with the Engliſh, for all the Company's Sirdars to ratify and carry into execution whatever any one of them has engaged; and this is alſo incumbent on the Company themſelves. What then can be the reaſon of the ſtep you have taken? Poſſibly the rebels have miſrepreſented the affair to you;

APPENDIX. No. 37.

but ſuch conduct is inconſiſtent with the friendſhip between me and the Company; and till the preſent time the Engliſh have never been guilty of a breach of their promiſe, or engagements, nor will they ever. Their name is famous throughout Hindoſtan and Decan for having brought to puniſhment the diſturbers of the public peace; nor can I ever believe that they will purſue a different conduct. The good faith of the Company is univerſally known; with a view to which, and for the ſake of their honour, it is neceſſary that you act agreeably to the Treaty entered into by the General of Bombay, which will be laudable in the ſight of God and man. Friendſhip requires that you immediately write to the General of Bombay to carry the Treaty into execution. Preſerve inviolably your engagements, and let not any thing prevail on you to deviate therefrom. Mr. Tayler, a Counſellor of Bombay, is on his way to you; he will communicate very fully to you all the particulars of the Treaty, and the enmity of thoſe perfidious men. Four months after they had ſet on foot theſe diſturbances, they ſpread a report that a ſon was born to Narrain Row. Mr. Maſtine was at that time at Poona, and is well acquainted with every circumſtance of the affair, which he will repreſent to you to your ſatisfaction. You are alſo an Engliſhman, act in ſuch a manner as to leave no room for any reflection on your nation. Let me frequently have the pleaſure to hear from you.

Extract of Poona Diary, the 28th December 1773.

Judging it neceſſary the Gentlemen at Fort William ſhould be adviſed of the ſituation of affairs, addreſſed them the following Letter:

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee, at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I laſt wrote your Honour, &c. the 29th ult° duplicate of which is encloſed. Agreeable thereto, the Maratta and Mogul armies continued near each other ſeveral days, during which ſome ſkirmiſhes enſued, in which the former were generally worſted; notwithſtanding this, matters were accommodated between Ragoba and the Nizam the 9th inſtant, when the latter met the former under a tent pitched between the two camps, and afterwards accompanied him to his own tent. It ſeems Ragoba had firſt demanded of the Moguls twenty lacks of jaghire, and two or three forts, which they conſented to give, but afterwards this demand was given up, in conſideration of their long friendſhip, and the Nizam's agreeing to aſſiſt him on any emergency with a ſtipulated number of troops. Thus the diſpute is for the preſent ſettled; but whether the peace is ſincere on both ſides is a doubt, for Ragoba has evaded to return the Nizam's viſit, and ſome points ſeem ſtill not to be adjuſted to mutual ſatisfaction, as a Vackeel is yet negociating for the Marattas at the Mogul camp. Ragoba was by the lateſt advices at Culberga, thirty coſs to the Weſtward of Buder, where he is treating with Hyder's Vackeel, and talks of ſending an army of about 20,000 horſe towards the Carnatic, but whether to intimidate Hyder, or endeavour to induce Mahomed Ally Cawn to pay the arrears of Chout, is uncertain. It is ſaid he means to diſpatch Ragajee Bouncello (Moodajee's ſon) with the title of Sine Siab Soubah, and Jonajee's widow, to Berar, and afterwards return to Poona; which ſhould he do, it is not improbable but he may ſend ſome troops into Hindoſtan. I ſhall make it my ſtudy to diſcover if theſe are his intentions, and when I can gain any information regarding it, will inſtantly acquaint you therewith; though the preſent face of affairs appear favourable for Ragoba, yet the ſame diſtruſt and miſunderſtanding continues between him and the old Miniſters, as I before adviſed your Honour, &c. nor has he appointed a Dewan, but carries on every thing himſelf, which makes many continue ſtill to think his Government is far from being firmly eſtabliſhed.

I am, with great reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Poona, 28th December 1773. Your moſt obedient humble ſervant.

APPENDIX, No. 37.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 9th March 1774.

READ the following Letter from the Reſident at Poona, dated 31ſt January.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Gentlemen of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Gentlemen,

Your laſt favour, though dated the 19th of November, did not come to hand till the 11th inſtant. Long before your Honour, &c. commands reached me, I, in my different addreſſes (duplicate of the laſt of which is encloſed) adviſed you of the ſituation of affairs here, and alſo with the diſſatisfaction of the Miniſters to Ragoba's Government; they did not however openly appear to act againſt him till yeſterday morning, when three of them, Nanna Furneſe, Hurry Punt Furkiah, and Anunt Row Jevagee, carried off Gungaboy, Narrain Row's widow (who is ſeven months gone with child) and Pervitty Boy, Sudabah's wife, to Pronder fort. All the old Miniſters and Bramin officers to a man, with Subajee Bouncello, are concerned; and I am informed Madajee Scindia, Tookajee Holkar, and even the Nizam, notwithſtanding the late peace, are in the league againſt Ragoba.

The Miniſters have got together a very large force, under Trimbuck Row Mamma and Sabagee Bouncello, ſaid to be ſixty thouſand men; but they yet do not ſeem to be fixed on the mode of carrying on the Government. Some ſay they mean to take out Sudabah, ſo long confined in Dolatabad fort; but it appears to me from their preſent conduct, as if they meant to ſeize on the Peſhwaſhip themſelves, or carry it on under the name of Gungaboy and her iſſue; for orders have already been ſent to the different forts, &c. in her name and Narrain Row's. Suca and Chokeys are placed on every perſon ſuſpected to be in Ragoba's intereſt; indeed many of his friends have been impriſoned.

Ragoba, as I informed your Honour, &c. in my laſt, had ſome thoughts of returning to Poona, but I have reaſon to believe he is diſſuaded from it by the intrigues of his enemies, who wiſhed him as far as poſſible from the center of his dominions, that they might have the better opportunity of carrying their ſchemes into execution; for by Letters I received yeſterday from his camp, he was advanced ſo far beyond the Criſtnah as Dalari. But as ſoon as this news reaches him, I ſhould ſuppoſe he will give over all thoughts of foreign affairs, and be under the neceſſity of attending to his ſafety only, though there is very little reaſon to think he will be able to ſtand before this formidable combination, particularly ſo as the greateſt part of his own army are againſt him.

From the foregoing troubles your Honour, &c. will perceive the utmoſt impoſſibility of this Government being able to make any attempts this ſeaſon, or for a longer period, to regain their poſſeſſions in Hindoſtan, for ſo far from having any idea at preſent of ſending the troops thither, even Madajee Scindia, and Tookagee Holkar, as before obſerved, are expected to perform a part in the ſcenes that are now acting in the Decan.

I am, with reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Poona, 31ſt January 1774. Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
T. Moſtyn.

P. S. Since

P. S. Since cloſing the above, I am credibly informed there is not the leaſt thoughts of taking out Sudabah, but that the Miniſters abſolutely mean to carry on things in Gungaboy's name till ſhe is brought to bed: had they releaſed Sudaboy, from his known abilities this Government might in ſome meaſure have been re-eſtabliſhed; but from their omitting to do it, there is great room to apprehend the whole will go to deſtruction.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I laſt had the honour to addreſs you the 31ſt January, duplicate of which is encloſed; and your favour of the 7th ultimo reached me the 25th inſtant.

The Miniſters having, as I adviſed your Honour, &c. in my laſt, ſeized on the Government in Gungaboy's name, they directed their General, Trimbuck Row Mamma, and Sabajee Bouncello, to march againſt Ragoba, at the head of a conſiderable army; who on their way were joined by the Nizam. On this intelligence reaching Ragoba, he ſoon diſperſed the miniſterial party in his camp, and recroſſed the Criſtnah on his return hither; and having got as far as Meritz, within a few coſs of the enemy, halted ſome time, and by Letters received yeſterday, he ſix days ago, after having placed a number of his foot, &c. in ambuſh, decamped in the night, leaving all his tents and heavy cannon ſtanding, the better to have the appearance of a flight, and deceive the enemy, which had juſt the effect he expected from it; for Trimbuck Row Mamma being a-head, and having intelligence of Ragoba's ſuppoſed flight, purſued him immediately, without waiting for the Nizam or Bouncello, which he was ſuffered to do without oppoſition, till he had paſſed the people concealed, when they unexpectedly fell on his rear, and Ragoba at the ſame time faced about, and attacked him in front; in this manner that part of the army under Trimbuck Row Mamma was totally defeated, and himſelf after receiving many wounds made priſoner.

The loſs of Mamma and his army has terrified the Miniſters beyond expreſſion, as they have now in a manner no force of their own, and muſt depend ſolely for ſucceſs on the Nizam and Bouncello, both of whom this Government, in their proſperity, have uſed extremely ill; and whether they will not take this opportunity to retaliate is uncertain; they however at preſent profeſs themſelves publicly to be friends to the miniſterial party; but whatever their promiſes may be, their actions muſt ſoon declare if they have any views of their own, or on which ſide they are, for Ragoba and them are now only a few coſs diſtant from each other.

Madajee Scindia and Tookajee Holkar, though frequently entreated by the Miniſters to come or ſend ſome troops to their aſſiſtance, have both hitherto evaded to comply with their requeſt, and ſeem by their behaviour inclined to ſtand neuter, till they ſee how affairs are likely to terminate.

All thoughts of the Carnatic and Hindoſtan, and indeed of all foreign affairs, are for the preſent loſt to both Ragoba and the Miniſters, in their inteſtine diviſions and cares for their own preſervation. When, and in what manner, this diſpute will be decided, is impoſſible to ſay, as it chiefly reſts, as I obſerved before, on the Nizam and Bouncello; but until it is brought to a termination, and the Government in ſome meaſure re-eſtabliſhed, it will be morally impracticable for theſe people to form any deſigns to the prejudice of their neighbours.

I am, with reſpect,
Honourable Sir, and Sirs,
Your moſt obedient humble ſervant,
T. Moſtyn.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

My laſt addreſs to your Honour, &c. was under the 30th ultimo, and I now trouble you again to encloſe its duplicate.

No material alteration has happened in affairs here ſince my laſt. Ragoba, after having got the better of Trimbuck Row Mamma, came within a few coſs of Poona, and it was imagined by moſt he would go himſelf, or ſend ſome troops, to ſurround the Miniſters in Prondar; but contrary to expectation, he a few days ago retreated towards the Gungah, and by the lateſt advices was at Toncha on the banks of that river. This movement can be accounted for in no other manner than the want of money, and being apprehenſive of the fidelity of ſome of his officers, whoſe families are in the hands of the miniſtry, which makes it dangerous for him to riſk a general battle, at leaſt till the former of theſe evils can be remedied.

The remains of Mamma's army have again aſſembled under Hurry Punt Furkiah, who has joined the Nizam and Bounſello, and they are now all in purſuit of Ragoba; but from the behaviour of the two latter, there is reaſon to think the diſpute will not very ſoon be decided, as their plan is to haraſs Ragoba, and drain the Miniſters of their money, both which they completely effect by avoiding an engagement.

As the miniſtry begin to be fearful that the Nizam and Ragoba have really ſome views of their own, from having ſo long delayed to fight Ragoba, they have come to a reſolution of taking out the Rajah, in hopes by this means to induce the Maratta officers that have hitherto ſtood neuter or ſided againſt them, to embrace their cauſe; but as this is the laſt reſource, it is poſſible if their affairs ſhould change for the better before they put it into execution, they may totally lay it aſide.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 15th June 1774.

READ a Letter from the Reſident at Poona, under date the 28th April.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Preſident and Governor, &c. Members of the Select Committee at Fort William.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

The 13th inſtant I had the honour to addreſs you, duplicate of which goes encloſed; and this is principally to adviſe your Honours, &c. that Gungaboy, Narrain Row's widow, was a few days ago delivered of a ſon, which it is thought will turn out much in favour of the miniſtry, as many may be now induced to leave Ragoba who have hitherto been ſtaunch to his cauſe.

Ragoba was, by the lateſt advices from the camp near Brampore, raiſing money, where he purpoſes making ſome ſtay, in hopes of being joined or receiving ſome aſſiſtance from Madajee Scindia and Tookajee Holkar; from whence it is ſaid he intends going into that part of the Berar in the poſſeſſion of Moodajee Bounſello, there to remain till the rains make the Nizam quit the field, and then to come this way.

The Nizam, Sabajee Bounſello, and Hurry Punt, ſtill continue together, and are about forty coſs to the Northward ward of Arungabad; but the dilatory and equivocal behaviour of the two former, renders their conduct ſuſpected, particularly the Nizam, whoſe frequent halts and demands of the forts and diſtricts promiſed him for his aſſiſtance, it appears as if he acted for himſelf only, and not for the good of the cauſe to which he profeſſes himſelf a friend.

When Ragoba was on the other ſide the Criſtnah, he, in conſideration of a few lacks of Rupees, and of a promiſe of more, gave Hyder Ally an order for moſt of the forts and country taken from him in the war with Madow Row; but as the Killidars have refuſed to obey this order, Hyder is now backing it with a large army, with which he has reduced Sany, and is at this time laying ſiege to Gurrumcondah, two of the ſtrongeſt forts in that part.

Extract of Bengal Select Conſultations, the 8th September 1774.

Read the following Letters from Mr. Moſtyn; dated 20th May and 2d July.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

My laſt reſpects waited on your Honour, &c. the 28th ultimo, duplicate of which is encloſed.

Conformable to what I hinted to you in my laſt, ſoon after Gungaboy's being delivered of a ſon, the greateſt part of Ragoba's forces left him, ſome of whom joined the miniſterial army, and the reſt are coming this way. Being thus forſaken, he made the beſt of his way acroſs the Norbudah, to endeavour to induce Tuccogee Houlker and Madhajee Scindia to give him ſome aſſiſtance; and by Letters lately received from Indoor, he had arrived ſafe at that place, where the former of theſe officers had given him a very generous and polite reception. It is uncertain whether they will ſupport him ſtrenuouſly againſt the Miniſters; but it is generally believed they will never give him up to his enemies.

Some part of the miniſterial army are gone after Ragoba, and the remainder, with Nizam and Bouncello, are near Brampore.

The young prince has been named Madab Row Narrain, and the Miniſters a few days ago received a Sitterah the Sirpaw of Peſhwa in his name; they at the ſame time, as the preſent Raja is old, and has no ſon of his own, endeavoured to perſuade him to adopt a Maratta boy they carried with them for that purpoſe, but which he has poſitively refuſed to do. His motives for his denial I cannot diſcover.

Notwithſtanding Ragoba has in a manner run away, and Madab Row is inveſted with the title of Peſhwa, yet the troubles in the Decan do not by any means ſeem to be near a concluſion; for, independent of what this Government has to apprehend from the Nizam, Bouncello, and Hyder, the Miniſters, from appearances, are diſunited among themſelves, each aſpiring to a ſuperiority, which in the end it is thought will create much confuſion.

Poona, I am, &c.
20th May 1774. T. Moſtyn.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I did myſelf the pleaſure of addreſſing your Honours, &c. laſt the 20th May, duplicate of which is encloſed; ſince which your commands of the 9th May have duly been received; and beg leave to congratulate you on the ſucceſs of our Honourable Maſters arms, as mentioned therein.

In my laſt I acquainted your Honour, &c of the diſunion of the miniſtry, and the probability of a rupture between them; but nothing appeared publicly till the 27th ultimo, when Sanaram Bappoo, Nanna Furneſe, Gungaboy, &c. fled at midnight from Shapoor (a village to which they had come to remain for the rains) to Prondar, in the utmoſt haſte and terror. It appeared by their conduct ſome time ſince, they ſuſpected ſome kind of treachery, but they were never able to diſcover what it was till then, when they gained intelligence Morabah Furneſe, with Batcheabar Bolliſpe Naigue, whoſe ſon many months ago was married to Ragoba's daughter, and ſome other Bramins, had come to an agreement to ſeize them that night. Butchelah, with whom the execution of the ſcheme was left, on finding it diſcovered, retired a few coſs towards Tezzey; the other two remained in defiance in their houſes, one in Poona and the other at Barramaly. But as the whole plan is now in a manner public, and of courſe no after-game left for either ſide to play, each will undoubtedly exert themſelves, and ſoon end the conteſt, which will, I ſhould ſuppoſe, terminate in the ſurrounding Gungaboy, &c. in Prondar, and again proclaiming Ragoba, or in the impriſonment of Morabah and his followers.

Ragoba, by the lateſt advices that can be depended on, continues ſtill near Indoor, and in conjunction with Madhajee Scindia and Tuccogee Houlkar, who have determined to ſupport him, has raiſed a numerous force, and many think that he will immediately come this way; but notwithſtanding which, I imagine his coming ſooner or later will greatly depend on the ſucceſs of his party here. However, there is nothing now ſcarce to obſtruct his paſſage, as Hurry Punt having learned ſomething of the above conſpiracy, left a few of his troops behind him, and is with the reſt returned within a few coſs of Arungabad. Sabajee Bouncello alſo having obtained the releaſe of Deraboy, who was made a priſoner, and her people diſperſed, on ſuſpicion of an intention of joining Moodajee, is retired towards Berar; and the Nizam ſome time ago withdrew himſelf and army in diſguſt; but on Gungaboy's, &c. ſending a Vackeel to him, and promiſing the immediate delivery of the forts and diſtricts agreed on to be given for his aſſiſtance, he is, in compliance with their requeſt, coming to ſtay for the rains at Dolatabad, which is one of the places to be ſurrendered to him; though whether the Kelladar will obey any orders that may be given him in this confuſion of affairs is a doubt.

By the laſt advices from the Carnatic, Hyder Ally Burgatta Jung, and Morab Row Gorporah, have each of them taken advantage of the diſſenſions of this Durbar, to reduce to their command, and raiſe contributions on all they can, not only of this Government's country on the other ſide of the Carnatic, but on all the Pottagars in their intereſt; indeed the former has lately reduced Mudguiry, and is laying ſiege to many of the other ſtrong holds of the Marattas.

Should Ragoba's party ſucceed here, it will moſt likely be the means of ſoon putting an end to the diſputes between the Bramins themſelves; though even ſhould this happen, as moſt if not all the Sircar's money and credit is exhauſted, it muſt take a very conſiderable time, if ever they will be able to effect it, to re-eſtabliſh their internal Government, and adjuſt matters with the neighbouring Powers.

2nd July 1774. T. Moſtyn.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, the 28th, December 1774.

Received the following Letter from Mr. Moſtyn Reſident at Poona:

Honourable Sir, and Sirs,

I was on the 27th ultimo favoured with your Letter of the 8th September; and I now return your Pattamars, with with duplicate of my laſt addreſs to your Honour, &c. of the 22d Auguſt.

I ſome time ago thought I ſhould be able to have informed you of ſomething deciſive regarding the Marattas; but every thing ſtill continues almoſt in the ſame uncertainty and unſettled ſtate as when I had laſt the honour to write you. Two Vackeels have been ſent to the Miniſters at Pronder, by Scindy and Holkar in Ragoba's behalf; but as they have yet done nothing, though ſome weeks have elapſed ſince they arrived, I imagine they came more with a view to procraſtinate and ſow diſſention, than with any real intention of putting an end to the diſpute. They made two propoſals in order to an accommodation; that Ragoba ſhould govern during the child Mahdarow Narrain's minority, though the Sicca to continue in the young Prince's name, and the Miniſters to act in their reſpective departments; or that the country ſhould be divided, Ragoba to have 20 lacks a year, and a proportionable number of forts; both which the Miniſters rejected, and with ſome ſeeming difficulty offered 50 lacks a year, and a penſion for the ſupport of Ragoba and his ſon. In this manner the affair at preſent reſts; and as no anſwer has been given to the Miniſters Letters containing this propoſition, and Ragoba, with Scindy and Holkar, ſince the receipt of it, have croſſed the Tappey, moſt people apprehend all amicable ideas are at an end.

Ragoba's whole army, by all accounts, at preſent conſiſts of about 40,000 men, with whom it is ſaid he means to advance to Chandour (a principal fort belonging to Holkar) and there halt till reinforced with ſome troops. Govind Row Grequar has promiſed him from Guzerat, and is joined by Moodajee Bouncello, with ſome part of Iſmael Cawn's Pattams. Sobajee Bouncello not being able to accommodate matters with his brother, is coming to the aſſiſtance of the miniſterial forces under Hurry Punt, who remains nearly in the ſame ſituation as I before adviſed your Honour, &c.; and though a reinforcement has long been promiſed, none has been ſent. Indeed, the Miniſters have only as yet been able to raiſe four or five thouſand men, notwithſtanding their utmoſt efforts have been exerted for theſe three months paſt, which is principally owing to their treaſury being exhauſted, and the ill uſage they have given to the Jaghire officers in their intereſt, who, at the ſetting in of the rains retired to their reſpective places; and being now ſummoned, moſt of them evade coming, on pretence that their preſence is neceſſary to the preſervation of their own country.

The Miniſtry, who have again found means to appeaſe the Nizam, ſeem ſolely to depend on him; they ſome time ago, on his diſgracing his Vizier (which I now have reaſon to believe was only a fineſſe) ſent him a conſiderable ſum of money, Sunnuds for the country to the amount of twelve lacks and a half a year, and a promiſe of more, with ſundry forts, when affairs are ſettled; on which he reſtored Rucknah Dowlah to his former credit, and once more engaged to aſſiſt them. But even if he is ſincere in theſe promiſes, as he is now quiet at Aurungabad, and it is ſaid will not take the field till after Ramazan, I ſhould conclude his ſuccours will be of little utility; for if Ragoba advances at all, he moſt likely will be here before that period.

Ragoba's party here have done nothing ſince my laſt. Many attempts have been made by thoſe at Pronder, to bring them over to their intereſt; nay, the principal of them has been offered the Dewanſhip, which he refuſed; and from the inability of Gungaboy's friends to ſecure their oppoſers, though they remain in Poona, the little harmony that ſubſiſts among themſelves, and the general face of their affairs, moſt people are of opinion, without ſome ſudden event occurs in their favour, Ragoba will ſucceed againſt them; however, ſhould this happen, the Bramin Government is too much impoveriſhed and divided to be able, for ſome time at leaſt, to make head with ſucceſs againſt thoſe who have taken the advantage of theſe troubles to encroach.

Hyder Ally Cawn's forces ſome time ago reduced the fort of Gurrumcoonder which was the laſt place of any conſequence remaining to the Marattas, to the ſouth of the Tunghabadder; and ſince this acquiſition, he has been employed in conquering ſome, and levying contributions on others, of the moſt troubleſome Pollygurs in his neighbourhood.

APPENDIX No 39.

APPENDIX, No. 39.

Extract Bengal Secret Conſultations, 6th March 1776.

THE different bands of Marattas, which iſſued forth after the invaſion of Naider Shaw, to eſtabliſh themſelves by conqueſt on the ruins of the Mogul empire, were moſtly Rajeputs, and conducted by Chiefs of their own caſt, whether chance directed it, or whether the Bramins thought theſe Chiefs the fitteſt defenders of their new acquired empire, I cannot pretend to determine, but be that as it may, they were fixed on the frontiers in the different countries they had ſubdued.

The firſt of theſe is the Bonſalo, who has pretenſions to the ſucceſſion to the Rajahſhip, and poſſeſſes the province of Berar, and part of Oriſſa; although he has generally acted in concert with the Poona Durbar, yet he has found means to hold his dominions totally independant of it.

Next in power to the Bonſalo, are the Guicawars, who poſſeſs the province of Guzerat. After the Guicawars, the Holkars are eſteemed the moſt powerful; this family have the province of Mahao. The Scindias hold as their Jaghire the province of Ugeir.

The Guicawar, Holkar, and Scindia hold their countries by hereditary right, and maintain a certain quota of troops, always ready to join with thoſe maintained by the Durbar of Poona, when the occaſions of the ſtate require.

The Maratta empire may then I think be ſaid to conſiſt of five different States; the Poona Durbar, the Bonſalo, the Guicawars, Holkar, and Scindia; of which, as repreſenting the Rajah, the Poonah Durbar may be deemed the chief.

The miniſterial confederacy is an aſſociation of certain individuals, ſervants in the Poona State, who, for reaſons beſt known to themſelves, have attempted to wreſt the Government from its lawful and acknowledged ruler.

Extract of a Letter from Maha Rajah Modajee Bhoſila, 19th July; received 6th October 1779.

Although the Marattas are in poſſeſſion of near 300 forts built of ſtone, furniſhed with all kinds of warlike ſtores, and can in caſe of war collect into one body near 200,000 cavalry, beſides the Nabob Nizam ul-Dowlah, and others alſo, who are all alarmed at the encroachments of the Engliſh into the Decan, and are waiting a favourable opportunity to repel them; and although their mode of making war and activity is ſuch, that they will in one night gain a diſtance of 50 coſs; both eating and ſleeping upon their horſes, haraſſing an oppoſing army on all quarters, and cutting off all its convoys and ſupplies; making the moſt furious attacks on it wherever they find an opportunity, retreating, and returning to the charge; laying ſtratagems by pretended flight, to draw parties of the enemy to purſue them off, by which policy they have defeated all the Chiefs and Rajahs of Hindoſtan, to wit, Seſoo Dhaycah, Hadah, Cotchowana, and Ranna, &c. as alſo the powerful Ameers, in a multitude of battles, and reduced all thoſe Countries to their ſubjection, and have at all times afforded their aſſiſtance to the King: yet, notwithſtanding all this, the Engliſh propoſe, without having made preparations, or collected the neceſſaries of war, to overcome them by a trifling effort, and to reduce them to obedience—This is really aſtoniſhing.

APPENDIX, No. 40.

Extract of Bengal Secret Conſultations, 9th October 1775.

TO form the better judgment of the force and expectations of the two parties, it may not be amiſs to take a ſlight view of the ſtate of affairs in the Maratta empire at this period, and of the States around, ſo far as they may have any relation to them.

The Bonſelo is by far the moſt formidable of the Maratta Chiefs, both by the extent of his dominions and the goodneſs and number of his troops. The late Jannajee Bonſelo having no children, had adopted his nephew Ragojee, the ſon of his younger brother Moodajee Bonſello. This occaſioned a warm diſpute between the ſurviving brothers Shabajee and Moodajee, the former claimed the right of Government as the elder brother, and the latter as father and guardian to the adopted child; the Miniſters had embraced the party of Shabajee, and Ragoba, while in power that of Moodajee, who partly for this reaſon, and on account of Ragoba's adoption of Imrut Row, was ſtrongly in his intereſt. They at firſt afforded each aſſiſtance to the different cauſes they eſpouſed, but at this period their own affairs it was thought would fully engage their attention, and compel them to remain neuter.

The Guicawars, a Maratta family, poſſeſſed the whole of the Guzarat country down to Damaun; it was reduced from the Moguls by Pillajee, grandfather of the preſent Guicawars, and was held for ſome time independent of the Poona Durbar; but in the Government of Nanah they compelled Dumuljee, the ſon of Pillajee, to yield them ſeveral places in it, part of the revenues, and to furniſh a certain quota of troops when wanted; the whole of the revenues is eſtimated at 80 lacks of rupees, and the Guicawars generally maintain a force of between 20 and 30,000 horſe. During the late diſturbances at Poona, this family had been prevented from taking any active part by their own inteſtine diviſions; on the one hand Futty Sing was in poſſeſſion of the Government, by orders from Poona in the time of Mahdoo Row, having obtained it by very high bribes to the Miniſters. On his acceſſion, Ragoba had granted this Government to Govind Row, the brother of Futty Sing, who, after various ſucceſſes in the field, was then beſieging his brother in his capital city of Broderab..

The two Northern Jaghierdars, Tookaje Holkar and Madoojee Sindia, had indeed entered into the confederacy, and were the great hopes and ſupport of it; but as they had till now ſtudiouſly avoided interfering with either party, from the political motive of profiting by the diviſion among the Brachmins, the longer to withhold their tribute, it was imagined they would never heartily endeavour at the total depreſſion of Ragoba.

Morab Row Gorparab, an old and experienced Maratta, who poſſeſſed the fort of Gutti, and a conſiderable diſtrict bordering on the Nizam's country, ſeemed only attentive to ſecure himſelf in his Jaghire, without ſiding with either party.

The Nizam, whoſe intereſt it eſpecially is to keep the Poona Government divided and depreſſed; had very eſſentially profited by the preſent feuds; he had obtained ceſſions of forts and country from both parties, with conſiderable ſums of money from the Miniſters, without ſhewing the leaſt intention effectually to aſſiſt either.

Hyder, whoſe intereſts are, in reſpect to the Poona Government, the ſame as thoſe of the Nizam, was alſo pleaſed to ſee the diviſion among the Brachmins: he was employed in reducing the forts, for which he had obtained the Sunnuds from Ragoba; to whom, if we may judge from his behaviour, he ſeemed rather to incline.

The reduction of the Rohilla had left the Company fully at peace in every part, nor was there the leaſt appearance of any occaſion for the employment of their troops in the Eaſt of Hindoſtan.

Such was the ſtate of affairs when the Paiſhwah, Ragonath Ballijee Row, applied to the Preſident and Council of Bombay for the aſſiſtance of a body of troops to join his army, then generally allowed to conſiſt of 40,000 horſe, in order to reduce to obedience certain of his ſubjects leagued in a rebellious confederacy, not only to deprive him of the Peſhwaſhip, which was his acknowledged right, but of every ſhare in the Government of the Maratta empire.

* The cavalry, of which the horſes are the property of the Sirka houſhold troops.

YOU will perceive that our conduct with regard to the French, through the courſe of laſt ſeaſon, has been perfectly conſonant to the line you have been pleaſed to mark out to us in your laſt Letters. We have ever oppoſed their ill-grounded pretenſions, and wherever it was neceſſary, held out the authority of the country government to reſtrain them, without appearing the acting Power ourſelves. They however ſtill continue to deny the juriſdiction of the country courts over them or their concerns, and have even inſiſted on their right of ſending European agents, and eſtabliſhing ſubordinate factories wherever they think fit. We have in return requeſted of them to produce the Firmaunds by which they hold this right; and they have promiſed to furniſh us with atteſted copies of them. In the meantime the matter reſts without any deciſive ſteps on either ſide.

5. While we thus oppoſe their unjuſt encroachments, we are not wanting in affording them that protection in their fair dealings which our ſituation enables us to beſtow. An inſtance of this will be ſeen in our conduct towards friar Antonio da Luz, a Portugueſe father, reſiding in the diſtricts of Dacca, who of his own authority ſeized the effects of a Frenchman deceaſed, and ſold them without rendering any account. On application from the Director and Council of Chandernagore, we ordered the friar down to Calcutta, where he would have been regularly proceeded againſt, had they not agreed to refer it to his own ſuperior, and requeſted us to let him repair to his convent for that purpoſe.

6. We have continued with the Dutch on the ſame amicable footing as before. They, as well as the other Foreign Companies, concurred heartily with us in the meaſures we took for preventing the introduction of the plague into Bengal; and they have alſo teſtified their d ſire to ſecond us in thoſe we have purſued with regard to the embargo on grain.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council of Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 17th October 1774.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

10. The Vizier having repreſented to the Preſident, through the Reſident at his Court, a ſtrong deſire to obtain an Engliſh officer in his ſervice for the command of a regular battalion, which he propoſed to raiſe, diſcipline, and pay after the European manner, and to employ chiefly in the protection of his perſon, and to be a check upon the mutinous diſpoſition of his own troops, which he had too often experienced ſince the recal of Captain Harper's battalion; and we, taking this requeſt into conſideration, conſented to it, and permitted Mr. Lane, a Lieutenant in your ſervice, on the recommendation of the Preſident, to be employed in that ſtation; and further left with the Governor the nomination of ſuch other officers as might be neceſſary for completing the battalion in the manner the Vizier propoſed.

11. There has no alteration occurred in the ſituation of the Nabob of theſe provinces, Moborek ul Dowla, ſince our laſt advices; his domeſtic affairs ſtill continue under the controul and management of Munny Begum, upon the plan which was eſtabliſhed for them by the Governor in 1772, of which you were fully informed. Munny Begum however, has lately applied to us through the Reſident at the Durbar, to get the Nabob's allowances paid by lunar inſtead of ſolar months, as ſettled at that time; alledging, that by the cuſtom of the country ſhe is obliged to pay the ſervants, and others of the eſtabliſhment, by the firſt mentioned terms. In reply to this, we informed her that it was not material by what terms the payments were made to the Nabob, for the whole ſtipend could not exceed by your orders 16 lacks of rupees per annum, and that ſum by the preſent mode was completely allowed to him.

12. Mahmud Reza Cawn made application to us in June laſt, for payment of the arrears of ſalary due to him at the time of his being removed from his employment, amounting to about five lacks; but the enquiry into the whole of his conduct being now in reference before you, we declined complying with his preſent requeſt, until ſuch time as we ſhould obtain your judgment upon it.

13. We adviſed you, in our Letter by the Reſolution, of the concluſion of the Cooch Bahar buſineſs, by the Treaty of Peace agreed to between us and the Deb Rajah. This Treaty has been ſince ratified on both ſides, and we are left in the quiet poſſeſſion of that part of the country to which they agreed to cede their pretenſions.

14. Soon after this the Preſident received a Letter from the Taiſhoo Lama, who is the Guardian and Miniſter of the Delai Lama, or the Sovereign and High Prieſt of all Thibet. The Letter itſelf is a curioſity of no common ſort, and is replete with ſentiments that do credit to both his eccleſiaſtical and political character. The Preſident, on receipt of this, thought it a fit opportunity of attempting to open an intercourſe between theſe Countries and Bengal, which you have often recommended to our attention, and which we think may be of conſiderable advantage in a national view.

15. In purſuance of theſe indeas the Preſident laid before us ſuch lights as he had been able to acquire into the ſtate of that Country, from the report of the perſons who brought this Letter from Teſhoo Lama, and others who had penetrated in the way of trade into that Country; and propoſed that a Company's ſervant ſhould be ſent with a Letter in anſwer to the Lama, and with particular inſtructions to inform himſelf of the nature and ſtate of the Country, and of the advantages which a communication and a free trade with theſe people offer to the Company, or to the Nation; and alſo to make overtures for eſtabliſhing ſuch a communication with them.

16. He further recommended for this arduous and important charge Mr. George Bogle, one of your ſervants, whoſe merits and abilities we have already had occaſion to notice to you, and who, by his patience, exactitude, and intelligence, ſeemed peculiarly fitted for it. We aſſented entirely to the Preſident's propoſitions; and Mr. Bogle was accordingly diſpatched in June laſt to the Lama, with a letter and ſuitable preſents for him, and was alſo provided with various ſamples of goods, to aſcertain what are moſt probable to become the objects of that commerce; and we allowed Mr. Hamilton, Aſſiſtant Surgeon, to accompany him in the expedition. The great length of the journey, and the natural difficulties which Mr. Bogle has to encounter, from the ſeverity of the climate, and the rudeneſs of the Country through which he has to paſs, will neceſſarily make it a conſiderable time before we can receive any accounts of the ſucceſs of his miſſion; but we have the greateſt reaſon to believe that he will meet no obſtruction from the people, nor incur any perſonal danger from them. The Preſident tells us that he has received accounts of him from ſome of the ſtages of his journey, but nothing which he deems conſequential or concluſive enough as yet to lay before the Board.

17. Soon after the departure of the Reſolution in March laſt, agreeable to what we then adviſed you, we ſent our Secretary and Perſian Tranſlator to Chandernagore, with a commiſſion to examine the Firmauns and Sunnuds of the French Company, which they had agreed to ſubmit to our ſcrutiny. Theſe Gentlemen were well received by Mr. Chevalier, who appointed on his part M. Mabé de Cormoré and Mr. Auſſang to ſit conjointly with them and examine the papers. The Report of Meſſrs. Stewart and Redfearn on their return, will be found in the Conſultation referred to in the margin. It appears by this, that although there are grounds for ſeveral trivial objections, yet in the main the Firmauns, &c. bear the uſual marks of authenticity. How far in fact they are ſo, would be exceeding difficult for us to aſcertain, although by their tenor we are led to ſuſpect, that the extenſive privileges which they convey could not have been really granted by the Mogul Government. Conſ. 3d June.

18. However, the diſcuſſion of this point leading to ſerious conſequences, as well with reſpect to the Nation as to the Company, we choſe, in a period ſo near the expiration of our Adminiſtration, to wave any deciſion upon it, in hopes that the new Government would come provided with preciſe inſtructions on a matter of ſo great delicacy and national import, which has been already in many ſhapes referred to your conſideration.

19. That did not prevent us from adhering ſtrictly to the line of conduct reſpecting the French, which we knew we could maintain from our own rights, or the indiſputed Law of Nations, particularly in the inſtance of a complaint from Mr. Chevalier, of a French ſhip being fired at from Budge Budge, for coming to anchor before the fort; in reply to which we deſired the Governor, to whom his Letter was addreſſed, to inform him, that we could not depart from that rule; and that whenever French ſhips attempted to anchor under our guns, they muſt expect to meet with the ſame uſage.

20. We adviſed you fully of our diſputes laſt ſeaſon with Mr. Chevalier, on the affairs of Dacca, and of their having withdrawn their factory on the occaſion; we however learn, that they have ſince continued their Reſident, and all the other ſervants, at a place a ſmall diſtance from Dacca, where they ſent to whiten their cloth, and where they can carry on their buſineſs to as great extent and as much advantage as if they had remained in the ancient factory.

APPENDIX. No. 41.

factory. In the month of July laſt, Mr. Chevalier complained of ſome muchulkas, or obligations, which our Chief had taken from the Weavers employed for the Company, which he ſaid excluded the French entirely from all ſhare in their labour. Although we found that theſe muchulkas were nothing more than a written obligation of the Weavers, to comply with the engagements which they had voluntarily entered into with us, without precluding them from forming new ones with the French; yet, to remove every ſubject of cavil, we directed our Chief to cancel theſe obligations, and recommended it to him to take more care that the Weavers fulfil their engagements without them.

21. The Dutch have alſo preferred to us ſome complaints reſpecting their Gomaſtahs in the Country, and the obſtructions which they pretend they meet with in the purchaſe of cloths in the Country. We found in general theſe complaints to be ill founded, or at leaſt greatly exaggerated, particularly in the inſtance of one againſt the Reſident at Malda, and the Gomaſtahs under him, for taking by violence the cloths which they had purchaſed with ready money. But as we wiſh as much as poſſible to avoid every ſubject of diſpute with them, we directed the Reſident to interfere as little as poſſible with their purchaſes, but to allow the Weavers full liberty to work for whom they pleaſed, provided they fulfilled their prior engagements to us. In the ſame ſpirit, we ordered a Gomaſtah at Buddaul to be diſmiſſed the ſervice, on a complaint from the Dutch, merely becauſe he appeared a troubleſome man, although not abſolutely guilty of the fact with which they charged him.

22. The Daniſh Government of Fredrickſnagore laſt ſummer informed us of their intention to eſtabliſh a factory at Patna, and applied to us for our intereſt and friendſhip to procure them a Sunnud from the Nabob for that purpoſe. As we have ever experienced the moſt friendly diſpoſition towards us in the Daniſh Nation, and have always found them quiet and unambitious traders, we agreed to employ our good offices with the Nabob for them, giving them to underſtand at the ſame time, that they were to hold themſelves bound to comply with the general regulations which had been adopted for better carrying on the internal commerce of the Country. We do not find that their Sunnuds are yet expedited, they requiring ſome explanation of their privileges, which are not yet preciſely aſcertained; but we believe the matter will be ſoon ſettled, without much trouble to either party.

23. Having thus ſtated minutely, for your information, the whole occurrences in this Department ſince our laſt advices; and, as in the cloſe of this Letter, we have undoubted, although not regular intelligence of the Rohilla war being actually ended by a Treaty between the Vizier and Fizoola Cawn, of which, no doubt, you will be more accurately informed by the ſubſequent diſpatches by the Britiſh King, we think it proper to recapitulate the cauſes on which this war was founded, and the advantages which have reſulted from it.

24. You was informed by our advices of 1772 and 3, of the neceſſity which induced us to carry our arms beyond the preſcribed line of your inſtructions, into the Rohilla country, for its defence againſt the Marattas, whoſe rapid progreſs and unbounded ambition at that time threatened all Hindoſtan, and who had actually reduced the greater part of that Country; through which the acceſs was opened to the Vizier by the only quarter of his dominions wanting a defencible barrier.

25. Our records at the time when this ſubject was debated, will ſufficiently manifeſt the extreme diffidence and reluctance with which we at laſt reſolved to paſs the line of the Vizier's dominions with our forces. The actual orders of the Company confined us within the limits of our own and his poſſeſſions; yet they had promiſed to furniſh us with inſtructions, wherein a greater latitude of action on particular occaſions would be allowed and recommended. Theſe very promiſes certainly implied the poſſibility of caſes happening, wherein more extenſive meaſures were thought adviſable and neceſſary, but the unſettled ſtate of the Company's affairs at home has, we ſuppoſe, prevented us from receiving the promiſed directions for our conduct, and left us without a guide at a very critical conjuncture, which ſeemed to call for extraordinary meaſures, and for immediate exertion of our ſtrength, to give a timely check to the accumulating progreſs of the Maratta Power. Such were the circumſtances and the occaſion which firſt dictated to us the meaſure of paſſing the preſcribed bounds.

26. On this occaſion, as declaredly on all others, we acted as if ignorant of the reports and advices received from Europe, which informed us that the Company was precluded from reſolving on any clear line of action; that Supervifors were appointed to ſuperſede the actual Government of Bengal; that a new Adminiſtration was to be formed; and that the right of the Company and the Nation to the territorial poſſeſſion was ſtill in debate. We conſidered ourſelves as acting for the national benefit, and aſſumed an extraordinary but a dangerous degree of reſponſibility, for the ſake of promoting the attainment of that object: it was therefore reſolved to expel the Marattas from the Rohilla country.

27. The Vizier, whoſe aid had been ſolicited by the Rohillas, undertook their defence againſt the Marattas. An agreement was entered into for this purpoſe, and a ſolemn Treaty ratified between the Vizier and Hafiz Rahmet Cawn, in behalf and with the expreſs authority of all the other Rohilla Chiefs, in the preſence of General Sir Robert Barker, the Commander in Chief of our forces, by whom it was atteſted: wherein, upon this ſervice being effected, the Rohilla Chiefs bound themſelves to pay to the Vizier the ſum of forty lacks of rupees. The Vizier accordingly took the field, joined by one of our brigades, and fulfilled his engagement, by expelling the Marattas from the Rohilla poſſeſſions. Notwithſtanding which, Hafiz Rahmet, and the reſt of the Rohillas, peremptorily refuſed to acquit themſelves of their part of the agreement; and they not only thus infringed the Treaty, by withholding the ſtipulation agreed upon, but treacherouſly aſſiſted the Marattas againſt the Vizier with ſupplies of money, while he was actually engaged, by virtue of the Treaty, in repelling them from the Rohilla country. This laid the foundation of the preſent war againſt the Rohillas, and was the firſt motive which induced us to join our aid to the Vizier, in chaſtiſing them for their perfidy and breach of faith.

28. The agreement for entering with the Vizier upon this new meaſure, appeared to us a fit occaſion for eſtabliſhing the Company's alliance with him upon a footing of more adequate advantage to them. Hitherto they had held the labouring oar. The heavy burden of an enormous military expence, under which they were ready to ſink, they had conſtantly ſupported, while the Vizier, by the tenor of the Treaty then exiſting, without contributing to eaſe the Company of this weight, experienced the principal and the only immediate advantages reſulting from it; thoſe acquired by the Company being remote, and conſiſting merely in the ſafety of his Country, which was a barrier to theirs. Although we ſtill continued without the lights which had been promiſed by the Court of Directors for the guidance of our conduct, yet in their Letter of the 28th Auguſt 1771, they expreſſed, in ſtronger terms than ever they had done before, their intention, in certain caſes, of authorizing our departure from the defenſive principles hitherto recommended and enjoined. Theſe conſiderations determined us to avail ourſelves of the preſent opportunity of aiding the Vizier againſt the Rohillas, as the means of obtaining the propoſed advantages to the Company.

29. With this view the Preſident was deputed to give the Vizier a meeting at Benares, and to conclude a new form of alliance; in which he was authorized to comprehend the Rohilla enterprize on ſuch adequate and permanent terms as ſhould indemnify the Company for the expences at all times incurred in the Vizier's aſſiſtance, and on ſuch other more immediate conditions as were ſuitable to their extraordinary ſervice. A Treaty was accordingly concluded, which in the original draft included both theſe objects, namely, the agreement for the fixed monthly ſubſidy of two lacks ten thouſand rupees for the expences of our troops when employed in his ſervice, and the payment of forty lacks of rupees for the projected reduction of the Rohillas. But the Rohilla expedition was at that time ſet aſide, from the irreſolution of the Vizier, while the ſubſidy which had been conceded in conſideration of our aſſent to this propoſal ſtill remained an article of the new Treaty. The Vizier afterwards renewed his propoſition to attack the Rohillas, and it was again debated in ſeveral ſucceſſive meetings of the Board, as recorded in our Proceedings of the 26th November 1773, with the reaſons at large, which determined us ultimately to reſolve on a compliance with the Vizier's requiſition. A brigade was accordingly ordered into his Country for that purpoſe.

30. Every circumſtance that could poſſibly favour this enterprize, by an uncommon combination of political conſiderations and fortuitous events, operated in ſupport of the meaſure.

1ſt. Juſtice to the Vizier for the aggravated breach of Treaty in the Rohilla Chiefs.

2d. The Honour of the Company pledged implicitly by General Barker's atteſtation for the accompliſhment of this Treaty, and which added to their alliance with the Vizier, engaged us to ſee redreſs obtained for the perfidy of the Rohillas.

3d. The completion of the line of defence of the Vizier's dominions, by extending his boundary to the natural barrier formed by the northern chain of hills, and the Ganges and their junction.

4th. The acquiſition of forty lacks of rupees to the Company, and of ſo much ſpecie added to the exhauſted currency of theſe provinces.

5th. The ſubſidy of two lacks ten thouſand rupees per month, for defraying the charges of one-third of our army employed with the Vizier.

6th. The urgent and recent orders of the Company for reſcinding charges, and procuring the means to diſcharge the heavy debt at intereſt, heightened by the advices of their great diſtreſſes at home.

7th. The abſence of the Marattas from Hindoſtan, which left an open field for carrying the propoſed plan into execution.

8th, and laſtly. The inteſtine diviſions and diſſenſions in their ſtate, which by engaging them fully at home, would prevent interruptions from their incurſions, and leave a moral certainty of ſucceſs to the enterprize.

31. Theſe were the inducements which determined us to adopt this new plan of conduct, in oppoſition to which one powerful objection, and only one, occurred; namely, the perſonal hazard we ran in undertaking ſo uncommon a meaſure, without poſitive inſtructions, at our own riſk, with the eyes of the whole Nation on the affairs of the Company, and the paſſions and prejudices of almoſt every man in England, inflamed againſt the conduct of the Company, and the characters of their ſervants; notwithſtanding which, we yielded to the ſtrong neceſſity impreſſed upon us by the inducements above-mentioned, in ſpite of the ſuggeſtions and the checks of ſelf-intereſts, which ſet continually before our eyes the dread of forfeiting the favour of our Employers, and becoming the objects of popular invective, and made us involuntarily rejoice at every change in the Vizier's advices, which protracted the execution of the meaſures. At length, however, his reſolution coinciding with our opinions, the enterprize was undertaken; and if our intelligence be confirmed, it is now finally cloſed with that ſucceſs which we had foreſeen from the beginning. We ſhall then again return to the ſtate of peace from which we emerged when we firſt engaged in the Rohilla expedition, with the actual poſſeſſion, or acknowledged right (which the power of this Government can amply and effectually aſſert) of near ſeventy lacks of rupees, acquired by the monthly ſubſidy and the ſtipulation; and it reſts with you to paſs the ultimate judgment on our conduct.

APPENDIX, No. 42.

Treaty between the Company and the Vizier Shujah-ul-Dowlah.

WHEREAS unbecoming rumours have been propagated abroad, which tend to the interruption of firm friendſhip, union, and confidence, formerly eſtabliſhed between his Highneſs the Nabob Shujah-ul-Dowlah, Vizier of the empire, on the one part, and the Right honourable Robert Lord Clive, and General John Carnac, in behalf of the deceaſed Nabob Nudjum-ul-Dowla, late Soubahdar of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, and the Engliſh Company, on the other part; Harry Verelſt, eſquire, Preſident and Governor of Fort William, and the Council thereof, with a view to the removal of all cauſes of jealouſy and diſagreement, and the confirmation of a good diſpoſition on both ſides, have deputed John Cartier, Colonel Richard Smith, and Claud Ruſſell, three Members of the Council from Calcutta, perſonally to confer with his Highneſs aforeſaid: And whereas the aforeſaid John Cartier, Colonel Richard Smith, and Claud Ruſſell, after effecting an interview with his Highneſs aforeſaid, have reaſon to be ſatisfied with his ſteady attachment to the Engliſh; they therefore, in behalf of his Excellency the Nabob Syef-ul-Dowla, Soubahdar of Bengal, Babar, and Oriſſa, and the Engliſh Company, renew and confirm the former Treaty, letter by letter, and article by article, and his Highneſs the Nabob Shujah ul-Dowla aforeſaid doth likewiſe renew and confirm the ſaid Treaty. And moreover, out of a pure deſire effectually to eradicate all doubts, and jealouſies, to eſtabliſh the preſent harmony on the moſt durable baſis, and to confirm the former Treaty, doth conſent and agree, that the following words ſhall be inſerted as an explanatory clauſe in the ſaid Treaty: It is, by the advice and conſent of the Preſident and Council aforeſaid agreed, That his Highneſs ſhall not entertain a number of forces exceeding thirty-five thouſand men, whether ſepoys, cavalry, peons, artillery men, rocket men, or troops of any denomination whatever; of this number ten thouſand are to be cavalry; ten battalions of ſepoys, including ſoubadars, jemidars, havildars, and all ranks of officers, not to exceed ten thouſand men; the Nujib regiment conſiſting of five thouſand men, with matchlocks, to remain always in its preſent eſtabliſhment; five hundred men for the artillery, and that number never to be exceeded; the remaining nine thouſand five hundred men are to be irregulars, neither to be clothed, armed, or diſciplined, after the manner of the Engliſh ſepoys or Nujib regiment: and his Highneſs alſo engages to arm none of his forces beſides the ten thouſand men mentioned in this Treaty, after the Engliſh manner, nor to train them in the diſcipline of the Engliſh troops. In conſideration thereof the ſaid John Cartier, Colonel Richard Smith, and Claud Ruſſell, engage, in behalf of his Excellency the Nabob Syef-ul-Dowla, and the Engliſh Company aforeſaid; that whilſt his Highneſs Shujah-ul-Dowla aforeſaid, and his ſucceſſors, ſhall abide by the articles of this Treaty, neither the preſent Council of Fort William, nor any future Council, ſhall hereafter introduce any new matter relative hereto, beſides what has been formerly agreed to, and is now concluded upon, and both parties ſhall conſider this agreement as firm and binding. His Highneſs aforeſaid ſhall ſwear upon the Koran, John Cartier, Colonel Richard Smith, and Claud Ruſſell, upon the Goſpel, never to infringe the minuteſt part or meaning hereof, and to maintain it themſelves, and to tranſmit it inviolable to their poſterity.

APPENDIX, N° 43.

Extract of a Letter from the Governor and Council in Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated 22d Auguſt 1774.

Par. 4. IN our advices of laſt ſeaſon we informed you of the ſteps we had taken towards the diſcharging of our temporary loan of 1773, and reducing the notes of 1769 and 1770, to a debt bearing an intereſt of five per cent. Theſe points were accordingly long ſince effected, and the whole of thoſe bonds diſcharged at the treaſury, excepting to the amount of current rupees five lacks eighty-ſix thouſand three hundred and forty-three, one anna, and three piſe, uncalled for, which lies as a depoſit without intereſt in your treaſury. We have now the pleaſure to inform you, that lately, on a ſummary review of our funds, and an eſtimate of our probable receipts and iſſues under certain heads, we came to a reſolution of diſcharging entirely by the 1ſt January next the whole notes of 1771, to the amount of twenty-five lacks ſeventy thouſand nine hundred and fifty-ſix rupees one anna, and nine piſe, beſides intereſt, and have given public notice accordingly.

5. There will then remain of the old debt, a principal ſum of C^t. R^s. ſeventy-nine lacks eighty-nine thouſand three hundred and twelve, and four piſe, beſides the new loan at five per cent. which we are in no doubt of paying off in the courſe of a few years, provided our expences are confined within the bounds to which we lately reduced them; that a great part of our army continues employed and paid by the Vizier, and that he is punctual in the other payments for which he is engaged to the Company. The courſe of events is not in our hands, but we have ventured to pledge our endeavours for accompliſhing this deſirable end.

6. We have alſo the pleaſure to inform you, that theſe operations on the bonded debt have ſo far raiſed the credit of the Company here, that we have had further conſiderable ſums of money offered us on loans at five per cent. per annum. We have accepted to the amount of rupees fifteen lacks fifteen thouſand one hundred and fifty-three, eight annas and ſix piſe, which we applied, as already noticed, towards diſcharging the bonds of 1769 and 1770, but have been obliged to refuſe the reſt, as we had already found reſources for diſcharging thoſe of 1771, and the ſum offered was not ſufficient for paying off thoſe of 1772, and before next year we hope to be able, from our own funds, and what loan we may then find neceſſary, to extinguiſh them at one payment.

7. We are the better pleaſed with this introduction to a reducing of your current rate of intereſt, as it is the pure and uninfluenced effect of the proſperous ſtate of our finances, and leaves us at liberty to promote it without making it our own act.

8. The Preſidency of Bombay have again applied to us for a large ſupply of money, ſetting forth their diſtreſſes in the ſtrongeſt terms, and requeſting immediate relief. We have anſwered them, that the ſtate of our finances and demands here did not enable us to furniſh them to the extent they required, but that we would cheerfully lend our aſſiſtance in the moſt ſpeedy manner. As far as fifteen lacks we had engaged to ſupply them within the courſe of the year, could we find out the means of remittance, but that it was not in our power to obtain draſts here to the amount of above five lacks, and that from doubtful hands, and at the exorbitant exchange of one hundred and twelve ſiccas per one hundred Bombay rupees; terms which we ſhould not think ourſelves juſtifiable in accepting, not only as it would have proved an immediate and heavy loſs of near nineteen per cent. on the remittance, but as it ſerved to introduce and encourage the exportation of our own ſpecie, which we eſteem it our duty to guard againſt by every poſſible means, as fatal to the commerce and revenue of thoſe provinces. There has however lately occurred an unexpected event, which will afford them means of taking up money on their bills on us; the ſhips returning from the Gulphs with the produce of the trade for three years paſt, detained by the late troubles in thoſe Countries, great part of which they muſt either bring round to Bengal in ſpecie, or leave at Bombay for draſts on this place; and we have taken care to ſecure the refuſal for that Preſidency from the owners of ſeveral of theſe veſſels which belong to this port.

The balance in your general treaſury this day, is C^t. R^s. 7,72,377. 1. 9.—In the Dewanny treaſury, S^a R^s 3,89,143. 1. 17. 2. and in the caſh, C^t R^s. 18,476. 8. 5.

The certain accounts of the arrival at Madras of the tranſports which bring out the Gentlemen appointed by Act of Parliament to the Supreme Council, and conſequently quently the probability of our Adminiſtration ceaſing in a very few days, have induced us to addreſs you fully at this time from all our Departments, deeming it moſt expedient for us, and that it would be more ſatisfactory to you, that the report of laſt year's occurrences ſhould come immediately from ourſelves, and that we ſhould have an opportunity of accompanying it with our own obſervations, ſubmitting all to your judgment, in hopes of obtaining from you that approbation, which to deſerve has been the conſtant end of all our endeavours in the execution of the important truſts which you have hitherto been pleaſed to repoſe in our hands.

Our preſent advices will therefore contain every tranſaction of this ſeaſon, ſince the diſpatches of the laſt, ranged under proper heads, not yet mentioned by us; and will be accompanied with a broken ſet of the Conſultations during that period, as well as a reply to the ſeveral Letters received from you by the ſhipping of this ſeaſon. You have alſo herewith copies of ours of the 22d of Auguſt laſt, to which we refer.

Since the date of that Letter, the Dutton, Captain Rice; the Bute, Captain Bendy; and the Pacific, under the command of Mr. Williamſon, Chief Mate, arrived in the river; Captain Barclay of the laſt, died at ſea off Ceylon, in the way to Madras. We have alſo advice of the Calcutta being arrived ſafe at Madras; a packet by her, addreſſed to the Governor General and Council, lies for them in our hands.

The Britiſh King, which laſt year after a proper ſurvey we diſcharged the ſervice, has been lately brought round to this port from Bombay, whither ſhe had been carried by Captain Hoare, for the purpoſe of receiving a thorough repair. Captain Hoare immediately on his arrival in the river, made a tender of his ſhip to us for the Company's ſervice, producing the certificates of the ſhip-builders at Bombay, of her having undergone ſuch a repair; on this we accepted of his tender, and on the uſual report from the Maſter Attendant of her being fit to receive a cargo, immediately appointed her, as we have before mentioned, the firſt ſhip for Europe directly.

The ſhips, according to the preſent deſtination, ſtand for diſpatch as follows:

For Europe directly
- Britiſh King,
- Aſia,
- Bute,
- Pacific,
- Ship from Bombay.

For Madras
- Speke,
- Dutton,
- Sea Horſe.

We had propoſed to have diſpatched the Speke, Captain Jackſon, to Madras, in the month of Auguſt, as an early ſhip for that Preſidency; but were obliged to depart from that reſolution, in conſequence of a repreſentation from Captain Jackſon, of the impoſſibility of getting his ſhip out of the river, by reaſon of the weakneſs of his crew, and other impediments, before the laſt of the month, which would throw him too late to arrive at Madras, and take in his cargo before the change of the monſoons. The Sea Horſe, the only other ſhip in the river, being but juſt arrived, and not being prepared for departure, we were obliged to deſiſt from our intention; but to prevent if poſſible any diſappointment from this to the Preſidency of Madras, we acquainted them of it immediately, and deſired them to ſtop any of the ſhips of the ſeaſon, at their pleaſure, which they ſhould find at their port after the receipt of our advices; unluckily however the ſhips were all departed before our advices arrived, ſo that the only remedy we have now left, is to ſend an additional ſhip to them in the latter ſeaſon.

On applications from Captain Gammage and Captain Bendy, we ordered their reſpective ſhips, the Aſia and Bute, up to Calcutta to be repaired. Every thing that is wanting to the laſt, we believe will be completed in proper time; but we are given to underſtand in a regular report delivered to us by the Maſter Attendant, the Company's Carpenter, and their Officers, of a ſurvey held on the Aſia, that ſhe is in a condition totally incapable of receiving any effectual repair, and that ſhe muſt be broken up; we have therefore thought proper to turn her out of the ſervice. Our more late advices by this ſame opportunity will moſt probably give you an account of the meaſures which may be taken to ſupply the place of this ſhip.

On an information received from Madras, of a quantity of illicit trade having been received on board the Speke at Madeira, we took every ſtep in our power for detecting it, deputing two of the Company's ſervants to attend the unloading of the ſhip, to examine the hold, and to keep an exact account of all the goods delivered over the ſide; at the ſame time that we enjoined the ſtricteſt attention in receiving the goods at the Cuſtom-houſe here: we were not however able to make any diſcovery, whether it was that the information was groundleſs, or, what is more probable, that the perſons concerned had found means of conveying away their contraband goods by an early opportunity. The report of Meſſrs. Young and Lloyd will be found in our Conſultations; we are confident that it was made without the ſmalleſt degree of favour, and we hope it will ſatisfy you that every thing was done on our part that could be deviſed for the detection of the fraud alledged.

We had alſo ſimilar information, with a ſimilar effect, reſpecting the Bute, Captain Bendy; and we further received and paid due attention to your general information concerning the Madeira ſhips; this laſt however arrived ſo late, the ſhips being then unloaded, that it was in vain for us to attempt the detection. We can only obſerve on this head in general, that the means of carrying on theſe illicit practices in this river are ſo eaſy, that it becomes exceedingly difficult to make any diſcovery here, and that we apprehend the moſt probable means of fixing the fact upon the delinquents, would be to obtain proof at home of the receiving of the goods on board, which we imagine will be more eaſy to be had when the ſeamen are diſcharged, and no longer under the influence of their officers.

Secondly, of the Trade of Europe, or from one Part of India to another.

Agreeable to our expectations and advices of the 22d Auguſt, we find the Preſidency of Bombay have had the opportunity of taking up caſh from one of the Buſſorah ſhips for bills on us.—They have already drawn for S. R^s 2,32,960, and as more ſhips are expected there from the ſame port, we are in hopes, that by the ſteps we took here with the owners, they will be able to ſupply themſelves in the ſame manner to the extent for which we had permitted them to draw.

In conſequence of an application from the Governor and Council at Bombay, we have ordered 16,000 maunds of ſaltpetre to be ſent round this ſeaſon, for the occaſions of that Preſidency.

Since our Letters of the laſt ſeaſon, we have had no further demands upon us on account of the ſettlement at Balambangan, excepting for the demurrage of the Snow Phœnix, which was detained 32 days at Balambangan before the arrival of any gentleman of the factory to take charge of the ophium on the Company's account.

The rice which, agreeable to what we wrote per Reſolution, had been contracted for on account of the Fort Marlborough Preſidency, was ſafely delivered at their port; but a difference ariſing between the contractor and them about the charges of landing, it was referred to us; and we clearly recollecting our intention in the bargain to have been, that the cargo was to be received there on board the ſhip, and landed at the Company's expence, as would have been the caſe with any other veſſel which we might have freighted for them, we ordered the demand

mand of the contractor, amounting to rupees 750, to be paid.

The President and Council at Fort Saint George, in the month of June last, advised us, that apprehending a scarcity of grain on the Coast, they had thought proper to suspend the collection of duties on all importations of that article from Bengal, or elsewhere, before the 1st October; and also to contract for the delivery of 41,000 maunds of rice from this river, which we have reason to believe has been duly delivered to their order.

In compliance with their request, we made public this suspension of duties at Madras, but some time after having cause, from the unusual dryness of the weather, to apprehend a similar scarcity here, we deliberated on the means for alleviating it, as will appear on the Consultations referred to; happily however, a reasonable fall of rain put an end to our apprehensions, and rendered it unnecessary to carry into execution the precautions we had intended of an embargo.

We have the pleasure to acquaint you, that the sales of your imports from Europe have this season turned out nearly upon a par with those of the last year; but the article of copper, which was then thought extremely well sold, has brought a price something higher, as will appear from the account of sales, and a comparative view of the medium prices since the year 1770, entered on our Consultation the 20th of last June. The brocades then remaining were also disposed of at public sale, but many of them being old, damaged, and much tarnished, were sold at a loss.

It having been represented to us by the Board of Customs, that the established usage of suffering all goods having a certificate of their being purchased at the Company's sales at the other Presidencies in India, to be imported duty-free, had been greatly abused, and was subject to much inconvenience and fraud; we determined, as the best means of preventing impositions in future, to charge the duties indiscriminately on all goods imported, though bought at the Company's sales in other settlements, after the same rate with such as by a certificate of the Custom Masters at these Presidencies appeared to have already paid a duty to the Company; and this regulation we ordered should take place from the 1st May next, that the merchants in those parts might have time to be informed of it, and regulate their offers at the public sales; accordingly we took the earliest opportunity of transmitting circular Letters of Advice of this resolution to the respective Presidents and Councils.

The Company's Auctioneer at this settlement applied for some allowance from us on the sales of the Company's goods, to defray the charges he is necessarily put to for clerks and other officers, to take the accounts of them, &c. as well as a consideration for his own trouble and attention; but as we did not think ourselves authorized to incur any expence on this head, especially after the first agreement with him upon admitting him to the office, we could only refer the matter to your determination, and in the interim resolved to permit him to draw from the purchasers 1¼ per mille upon the amount sales of ophium and salt; this we thought would be about sufficient to defray these charges, at the same time that the charge appeared too trifling to claim any consideration from the bidders, which could affect the offers at the sales.

In reply to the question in your Letter of the 7th January last, respecting the indent for iron furnaces for melting metal; we are to acquaint you, that they were intended as blast furnaces for the use of the foundery, which being now abolished, there is no further occasion for them.

Thirdly, of Investment.

Having, in compliance with your instructions, used every endeavour to make the provision of your investment by contract, and advertised in due time for receiving proposals for the investment of the present year, several were delivered in before the departure of the Resolution, but those from Patna were on terms of advantage which we were induced to accept, as mentioned in our Letter by that ship, dated the 15th March; we at the same time observed, that although proposals had been received from Cossimbazar for the silk investment, they were in terms too vague to be accepted without further explanations. These have been since received, together with musters both of the raw silk and silk piece goods, and being in general of a superior quality to the goods sent home of late years, though not altogether equal to the old musters, the Chief was invested with discretional powers to accept them; the lateness of the season when these materials were laid before us, leaving it doubtful whether it might be eligible to receive them, or to continue the provision of this season by Gomastahs. The determination has been given in favour of the contract, which, with the provision expected to be made also with the filature assortments, will amount, according to a calculate transmitted to us by the Chief of Cossimbazar, to twenty-one lacks of rupees; and from the dispatches hitherto made to us, we flatter ourselves, you will find this valuable article of your investment much improved, and that it soon will be recovered from the declining state to which it has been reduced since the year of the famine, we mean with respect to the quality of the goods. The price still continues very high, nor can we devise any means of reducing it consistently with the encouragement that has been given for a free and open trade, the necessary consequence of which is, an enhancement on the price of goods in those places where any restrictions might have before prevailed. In such predicament particularly is the raw silk Radanagore in the Burdwan province, which for many years had been taken at an arbitrary price, that is, at such rates as were judged sufficient for the maintenance of the Ryotts or original Providers; it then came to less than six rupees per seer, and accounts for the great and partial profit gained on that assortment at the sales in Europe; but since those restrictions have been removed in consequence of the system universally adopted for a general freedom of trade, the price of this article has risen from six to nine rupees, at which rate a contract has been entered into for the provision of Radanagore silk this season, and it is still under the market price of that assortment at Calcutta.

Prior to the acceptance of the proposals for the Cossimbazar investments, offers were made to us by Kenkir Mundel, a native, for the provision of seven hundred maunds of Comercolly raw silk, consisting of three letters, B C D, at the rate of ten rupees nine annas sicca per seer. As this tender appeared to be advantageous to the Company, from the report of the Export Warehouse Keeper and Examiner, they were accepted. This offer was supposed to be independent of the proposals at that time under consideration for the Cossimbazar investment; but it afterwards appeared, that to enable Kinker Mundit to fulfil the terms of his engagement, he required a part of the winders usually employed by the Company at Comercolly, to be now engaged in his service. This was assented to, as the deed of contract had been executed, and an advance made to him in consequence; but it was a diminution of so much from the Cossimbazar proposals, as the merchants there could on this account engage for 300 maunds only, instead of one thousand maunds. The contract however with Kinker, was judged to be the most beneficial by the exclusion of the letter E, and is accordingly in force.

We did entertain the most sanguine hopes, that after the first difficulties necessarily attendant on the introduction of the new mode of winding at the filatures were surmounted, it would have been attended with the advantages there appeared so much reason to expect from it; and although it has not yet answered those expectations, we are still willing to hope that its success will in the end make ample amends for past disappointments.

As

APPENDIX No. 43.

As a token that the new or Italian method is likely to ſpread itſelf through the Country, we mentioned in our laſt, that it had found its way into the hands of private adventurers. Propoſals were ſoon after tendered to us, through the Chief of Coſſimbazar, for the proviſion of ſeventy maunds of filature ſilk upon muſter, at the rate of ſicca rupees, 14. 8. for the firſt, and 14 for the ſecond aſſortment; which, upon the report of the Export Warehouſe Keeper and Examiner, were accepted.

Mr. Wiſs, one of the Superintendants of the filatures, having repreſented that the new mode of winding might be proſecuted with ſucceſs at Jungeypore, we gave permiſſion for a temporary building to be erected there; and the ſame was in hand when propoſals were made to us through the Chief of Coſſimbazar, for the proviſion of one thouſand maunds of filature ſilk, to be manufactured at Jungeypore, and delivered by March 1777, at the rate of 14 ſicca rupees per ſeir of 72 ſicca weight, ſtipulating alſo that the temporary building ſhould be carried on at the expence of the contractor, and delivered up gratis for the future uſe of the Company at the expiration of the contract. He at the ſame time offered to provide eight hundred maunds of the Bengal aſſortment, at the rate of ten ſicca rupees per ſeir. Theſe propoſals, though made by a Servant of the Company, and the Export Warehouſe Keeper of the factory, appeared to be calculated for the advantage of the Company ſo far beyond any other which we were likely to obtain, and the ſecurity for their performance ſo good, that we gladly and without heſitation accepted them. Our reaſons are fully aſſigned in the Proceedings of the Comptroller, noted in the margin.

On receipt of your commands, dated the 23d October 1773, reſpecting the tonnage for the returning cargoes of the ſhips taken up for the preſent ſeaſon, we cauſed a calculate to be laid before us of the inveſtment expected to be provided at this Preſidency, together with the remains of laſt year; from this it appeared, that we ſhould be able to furniſh cargoes for five ſhips, according to the new increaſed rates of tonnage and your orders for loading them, with ſurplus; and the Preſidency of Fort Saint George having applied to us for three ſhips to return with full cargoes from the Coaſt, we wrote to Bombay, requeſting they would aſſiſt us with one of the ſhips conſigned to their ſide of India this ſeaſon, beſides the Britiſh King of laſt year; with this they have complied, as appears by the deſtination of your ſhipping already mentioned in the paragraph.

Fourthly, of the Trade of India, Country, Government, and Tranſactions with the European Powers.

The Director and Council for the Dutch Company, have this year applied for, and been allowed, the ſame quantity of ſaltpetre they received laſt year.

The French Commander at Chandernagore having likewiſe requeſted that a quantity of ſaltpetre, to the amount of 20,000 maunds, ſhould be granted for the ſhips of their nation, we poſtponed for ſome time our compliance with this requeſt, in hopes that your orders might direct our conduct in this particular; but the ſubject not being mentioned in any of your advices hitherto received, we agreed to grant them the quantity deſired.

We have alſo received an application from the Danes for 12,000 maunds, which has been granted them.

The fund ariſing from the ſaving of the Nabob's ſtipend, &c. has accumulated ſo as to enable us, at different times, to pay off, viz. 15 annas of the reſtitution to the European ſufferers in the troubles of 1763; and Sicca rupees 1,50,000, three-fourths of the donation to Colonel Munro, after liquidating the amount of the Company's demands upon the ſaid Fund, as adviſed in our Letter of the 15th March laſt.

The agents for the navy donation having applied to us for payment of current rupees 95,156, in virtue of the 11th paragraph of your orders of the 7th January 1774, directing the payment of three-eighths of a penny per rupee on the whole donation of the ſum of current rupees 72,500, for the amount of the indemnity of intereſt refunded by them on the ſecond moiety; and finding this claim exactly calculated on the letter of theſe orders, we ordered the amount to be paid accordingly.

In our Letter of the 15th March, we acquainted you of a propoſition to the Preſidency at Fort Marlborough, of ſending them the felons who are condemned here to ſlavery for life, to be employed on their fortifications, or other public works; but they have declined our offer, on the apprehenſion of receiving more detriment than ſervice from it, unleſs we could reſolve on tranſporting ſuch felons as were ſkilled in particular branches of handicraft buſineſs.

In our lateſt advices of laſt ſeaſon, we adviſed you of a plan we had adopted, and were then preparing to carry into execution, for eſtabliſhing a regular poſt in theſe provinces; we have now the ſatisfaction to inform you, that it has completely taken place. Although by this we cannot flatter ourſelves with eaſing the Company altogether of the expence of their inland correſpondence, yet we have, on the very grounds of the plan, effected a very conſiderable ſaving, beſides what ariſes from the receipt of poſtage. This laſt hitherto has not been conſiderable, amounting in the whole, ſince the firſt eſtabliſhment, to 2,500 rupees per month on a medium; but we are in hopes it will increaſe, as the Natives become more habituated to that mode of conveyance, and are thoroughly convinced of its ſecurity for their commercial and other correſpondence. The monthly accounts which are entered in the Conſultations, will enable you to form a complete idea of the preſent ſtate of this eſtabliſhment; we beg leave therefore to refer them to your view.

In conſequence of our reſolution to permit no Europeans, or others, ſubject to this Government, to reſide in the territories of the Vizier, without ſpecial licence, the Preſident iſſued orders to the Commanding Officer at Chunargur, to ſtop all ſuch whom he ſhould find proceeding thither; and in virtue of this order, Colonel Muir, the actual Commandant there, ſtopped in Auguſt laſt two black Portugueze paſſing his poſt with a fleet of boats, and furniſhed only with the uſual Rowannahs from the Cuſtom-houſe, which they attempted to paſs as a paſſport. The two men he ſent down to Patna, and allowed the boats to proceed onwards, under the charge of a Sircar.

It ſeems theſe boats were loaded on account of Lewis da Coſta, a merchant reſiding in this place, and that the men were his agents for conducting them. Da Coſta, apprehending he might be a great ſufferer by the removal of his agents, entered a formal proteſt here againſt Colonel Muir, for all damages which might accrue from it, with a view to an after-proſecution, if neceſſary. Colonel Muir naturally applied to the Preſident for an indemnification againſt ſuch a proſecution, which, on the Preſident's repreſentation of the facts, we did not heſitate to grant, it appearing Colonel Muir had acted ſtrictly in conformity to his orders; nor do we apprehend any conſequences from this proſecution, as, to the beſt of our judgment, the orders iſſued are ſtrictly conſiſtent with the rights of the Company, and of your inſtructions; and we conceive the native Portugueze reſiding under our protection, to be comprehended under every regulation which binds the other Chriſtian ſubjects of this Government.

We have been addreſſed by ſeveral Greek inhabitants of this town, for permiſſion to build a public place of worſhip, after their own rites, in Calcutta; and as we ſaw no reaſon for objecting to their requeſt, the Armenians poſſeſſing already the like privilege, it was accordingly granted.

In the month of April laſt we received a complaint from the Portugueze Governor at Mocoa, againſt a Captain Mercer, of this port, accuſing him of having decoyed away the ſlaves of ſeveral people belonging to that iſland; but as Captain Mercer had then juſt ſet out on a voyage to China, we informed the Governor of Mocha of this circumſtance, leaving it to him to ſeek reparation of Captain Mercer himſelf, on his arrival at that place.

APPENDIX No. 43.

As Captain Mercer is a man of eſtabliſhed credit and reputation in this place, we are inclined to believe the complaint to be without foundation; nor indeed, in ſuch caſes, do we know of any power reſiding in us to afford redreſs, which we believe can only be obtained by a regular ſuit at law for the recovery of the property alledged to be carried off. We have thought proper to make this remark for your conſideration, becauſe we are liable to receive repreſentations of this ſort from the foreign ſettlements, without knowing preciſely how far we ought to interfere in procuring ſatisfaction for them.

Fifthly, of Fortifications and Buildings.

Soon after the diſpatch of our Letter per Reſolution, we received Mr. Phipp's anſwer to the call we made on him for an explanation of the cauſe of the bad ſtate of the filature built by him at Rungpore, of which we then adviſed you. He not only pleads in his juſtification the looſeneſs of the ſoil on which it ſtands, but alſo repreſents, that from the ſame cauſe it was not in his power to obtain good materials for making the bricks, ſo that they were originally defective—that, further, the workmen (there having formerly been no brick buildings in that province) were ſo aukward and ſo ſlow in their buſineſs, that they were two years in carrying it on, by which it became unuſually expoſed to the rains before it was finiſhed—that, ſenſible of theſe diſadvantages at the time, he repreſented them to his Superiors at Coſſimbuzar, and alſo endeavoured to guard againſt them, by giving an uncommon degree of thickneſs to the walls, as well as depth to the foundation; but that after all, ſo far from the building being totally unſerviceable, it is ſtill complete for 56 furnaces, and by means of a temporary building which he immediately run up on the failure of the reſt, he can be able to increaſe the ſilk of the new manufacture to the utmoſt extent of our wiſhes.

Mr. Wiſs has petitioned us on the ſubject of the filature he erected at Comercolly, in which he had acted contrary to the reſtrictory orders of the Committee of Commerce, by augmenting it to double the number of furnaces to which they had limited him. We are perſuaded, that a zeal for the ſervice, and a confidence of ſucceſs in the ſcheme in which he had engaged himſelf, ſolely induced him to undertake this extenſion of the original plan; and as the extraordinary furnaces have continued ever ſince to be uſed on the Company's account, and found to be no more than can with eaſe be kept in conſtant employment, we agreed to have the additional work determined by arbitration, intending to pay him according to the award; but as Mr. Wiſs was averſe to this mode, having no perſons to nominate on his part, he choſe to let the matter reſt entirely with the Board, and we in conſequence ordered an eſtimate of their value to be made by the Engineer at Coſſimbuzar, with a view to decide on the purchaſe, when his report ſhould come before us, but it has not yet been tranſmitted to us from the Chief of Coſſimbuzar.

Sixthly and Seventhly, of Covenanted Servants and Accounts.

We have to adviſe you of the death of Mr. Lambert, a Member of your Council, and of the following of your covenanted ſervants at this Preſidency, ſince our diſpatch by the Reſolution; viz.

Meſſrs. Henry M'Leane, Thomas Hilt Pettit, William Wynne, James Bonwicke, Frederick Farrer.

Immediately after the diſpatch of that ſhip Mr. Grueber was admitted to a ſeat at our Board in the room of Mr. Reed, who went by her to England.

Mr. Hurſt has been alſo called upon to take his ſeat in the room of Mr. Lambert, and Mr. Bentley is admitted in the room of Mr. Rumbold, who we found by the inſtructions tranſmitted to us, was no longer eſteemed to be in your ſervice here, his name being left out in the nomination of the eleven ſenior ſervants who are to compoſe the Board of Trade.

The Commiſſary General on his return in June laſt from Madras, whither his ill ſtate of health had obliged him to repair, entered upon the charge of his office, and we furniſhed him with further Inſtructions for the execution of it, in which we endeavoured to preſcribe a general line, conſiſtent with the ſeveral Orders and Inſtructions which you had given us on this head. We alſo delivered him copies of the Report of the Committee of Directors, appointed to inveſtigate the army accounts of Bengal, as well as of the ſeveral regulations which we had recently formed for the reduction of the military expences.

In juſtice to the propriety of your intention in the appointment of a Commiſſary General, and to the merits of Colonel Mac Leane, we muſt declare that we have reaped the greateſt benefit from his ſervice, and have received much aſſiſtance from him in carrying into execution the plan for reducing the contingent and other military expences, which had ſwelled to ſo enormous a height. His labours have been aſſiduous in his office, and his emoluments we are afraid no way equivalent to them. He is actually with the brigade in the field, or in his way thither, to inſpect the ſupplies there in the duty of his department.

Having in our late regulations reduced the allowances of the officers of the Sepoy corps to a par with thoſe of the ſubaltern European infantry, the former addreſſed a memorial to us, repreſenting the hardſhips they ſuffered from this regulation, as they are liable to many expences to which the others are not expoſed, being generally cantoned at a greater diſtance from the public markets, which obliges them to employ an additional number of ſervants, and alſo being obliged to hold themſelves in continual readineſs for detached ſervices; but as thoſe points were in conſideration with us when we formed the regulations, and as we judged theſe diſadvantages of the Sepoy corps amply counterbalanced by the advantages of batta, &c. which they often draw, by being employed on detached and occaſional ſervices, we determined not to alter the regulation.

We mentioned at the ſame time our not being able to diſcover from our books the ſmalleſt foundation for the claim of Captain Spelman's heirs; however, in obedience to your orders, we have attempted to ſettle it, by offering to ſubmit the demand to an arbitration; and if it ſhould be there eſtabliſhed from the proofs which the parties may bring, we will immediately diſcharge it to the amount of the award: we have not yet received an anſwer to this offer from their Attorney.

We have duly attended to the paragraphs of your General Letter of 10th December, reſpecting Richard Sim and others, diſcharged ſoldiers: and in reply we can only aſſure you, that we took every method to make public your orders reſpecting the penſion to which officers and ſoldiers have a claim; and if any have gone home without the proper teſtimonials for obtaining it, it muſt have proceeded from their own neglect in not applying to us, or intimating their deſire to the proper officer, as in ſuch caſe they certainly would have been furniſhed with every neceſſary certificate. We can only further ſay, that no pains ſhall be wanting in us to prevent any miſtakes of that kind in future, and in the meantime tranſmitted a copy of theſe paragraphs to the Town Major, for the information of the troops, and gave him directions to conform to your orders exactly, as far as related to him.

On a repreſentation of the caſe of Mr. Kenderdine, formerly a Surgeon upon this eſtabliſhment, but then without employment and in great diſtreſs, having been diſmiſſed the ſervice in the year 1767, on a complaint of inattention to his duty; and it appearing from the teſtimonials monials of the officers which he produced, that he was an able Surgeon, and had, ſince his diſmiſſion, rendered eſſential ſervice to a battalion of Sepoys at Rangur, to whom he had voluntarily given his attendance in that capacity, we thought he had already undergone a ſufficient puniſhment for his former inattention, and therefore reſtored him to the ſervice as youngeſt Surgeon, not to riſe.

Captain William Thomſon, who lately commanded the ſelect piquet, has applied to us for the reimburſement of the extra expences he unavoidably incurred on that ſtation; and as it appears that he had reaſon, from the general orders of Sir Robert Barker, to expect an extra allowance of twenty rupees batta per diem, when he undertook that troubleſome and ungrateful employment, and that he was actually expoſed to extra expences in it, we have preſumed (though we did not think ourſelves authorized to grant it) to recommend it to your conſideration, and hope you will order him the allowance he requeſts.

We are happy that our recommendation of Captain Rennell, and the ſurveys which were tranſmitted to you at the ſame time, have had the effect to draw from you ſo honourable an expreſſion of your approbation, and wiſh to recompence his long and faithful ſervices, as is contained in the 13th paragraph of your Letter, dated 10th December. We beg leave to ſpeak again in his favour, and on occaſion of his addreſs to us, referred to in the margin, to point out the means by which your benevolent intentions towards him may be effected. His health deſtroyed by wounds, inceſſant fatigue, and the unwholſome changes of climate, to which his duty as Surveyor General has expoſed him, renders it neceſſary for him to think of returning to his native country; but he has reſolved not to quit India before he ſhall have completed the work which he has ſtill in hand. His wiſhes afterwards are centered in retiring with a competency, and ſome ſolid teſtimony of your approbation; on which we take the liberty to remark to you, that no precedent can be drawn from it, as Captain Rennell himſelf began this buſineſs, has carried it on in a manner hardly to be equalled we believe by any in Europe, and will leave little unfiniſhed in it. No promotion or penſion granted to him can injure the rights of others, becauſe his rank being fixed to the engineer corps, he can riſe in that only, notwithſtanding that his ſeniority in ſervice to many officers bearing higher commiſſions might be conſidered to give him claim to the ſame indulgence they would enjoy, if admitted to reap the benefits of the penſions. We therefore venture to recommend Captain Rennell for the penſion he ſolicits, or ſome equivalent mark of your bounty; and flatter ourſelves that the aſſiduity, attention, and obedience to the orders of his Superiors, which he has ever manifeſted, beſides his juſt and inoffenſive conduct to the people of the country, in the courſe of his ſurveys, and total abſtinence from any obnoxious purſuits of wealth, added to the perſeverance and courage manifeſted in the dangers to which he has been frequently expoſed, render him an object really deſerving of your favour. Were it becoming in your Adminiſtration to importune you with their requeſts, we ſhould think this a proper occaſion, and would entreat your benevolence towards a man who has merited our higheſt eſteem by his continual good conduct, and whoſe private character has gained him the love of all who know him.

Lieutenant Leland, whoſe trial alſo goes in this packet, was diſmiſſed the ſervice for diſobedience of orders, in conſequence of a ſentence of a court-martial; but ſome time afterwards, at the recommendation of the commanding officer of his brigade, and other aſſurances of his ſenſe of his former miſbehaviour and reſolution of amendment, we thought fit to reſtore him.

Mr. Harding, formerly a Captain in your ſervice, whoſe quarrelſome and violent temper had been the occaſion of bringing him ſeveral times before a court martial, and who has been diſmiſſed the ſervice ever ſince the 20th March 1771, as we formerly adviſed, petitioned us in July laſt for a reviſal of ſome of the proceedings againſt him, which it was not in our power legally to grant; neither did any thing in his repreſentation induce us to alter in his favour our former reſolution of diſmiſſing him the ſervice. APPENDIX. No. 43.

Lieutenant Gardiner, reſpecting whoſe claim of rank a reference was made to you from the proceedings of the Board of Field Officers, again petitioned us on the diſcovery, as he alleged, of an erazure in the Town Major's books of the date of his rank, to his prejudice, which he thinks ought to decide the competition between him and Captain Penman in his favour. Our proceedings upon it will be found in the Conſultations referred to on the margin; and the matter being already in reference before you, is now left to your final deciſion.

Enſign Bruce having objected to Enſign Skinner taking rank above him, on the ſcore of being his ſenior in the King's ſervice, we called on them both to produce their commiſſions, and found that Mr. Skinner's was of a prior date, but granted in America by the commanding officer, in virtue of the authority delegated to him by his Majeſty for the like purpoſes. Enſign Bruce does not object to thoſe commiſſions, but ſtill inſiſts that the rank in the army was not ſettled by them, and refers to the war office for a proof. As this is a point which can be only aſcertained at home, we refer Mr. Bruce's memorial to you, before whom it will be his buſineſs to bring proper proofs in ſupport of it.

Colonel Hugh Grant laſt month requeſted leave to reſign the ſervice, with an intention to go home in one of the ſhips of this ſeaſon. We granted him the permiſſion to reſign, and appointed Colonel Ironſide to the command of his brigade, with a proviſional commiſſion of Colonel, till your pleaſure ſhould be known.

We have ordered Major Stainforth to refund the four months allowance which we formerly granted him, agreeable to your commands, and it will be deducted from his current pay accordingly.

In obedience to your commands by the Pacific, concerning widows being entitled to the Company's penſion, we have cauſed the paragraph to be made public, that theſe directions may be exactly conformed to in time to come. The names of ſuch widows as may hereafter be admitted on the liſt, and paid here in conſequence of theſe orders, will be regularly tranſmitted to you.

Your orders for refunding the commiſſion on the revenue granted by Sir Eyre Coote, were properly attended to; but as the preſent Board were not concerned in leaving out his name at firſt from the commiſſion account, we could not look upon them as chargeable for the whole refund; we therefore ordered in general, that repayment ſhould be made by each individual, of the ſurplus they had received on that account: the greateſt part will be in that manner repaid here, and the only arrears we apprehend will ariſe from ſuch Gentlemen as have quitted the ſervice and gone to England, or ſuch as are dead. If their Attornies ſhould decline paying off theſe, you will be duly adviſed when the matter is properly aſcertained.

In purſuance of your orders recommending Mr. Baillie to be employed in proſecuting enquiries into the trade and country of Aſſam, we have directed him to proceed on this buſineſs, with aſſurances of our ſupport and encouragement in the undertaking, and requiring him to ſend us advice of his ſucceſs, that we may be enabled to furniſh you with the information you deſire on that head.

We adviſed you in our Letter by the Swallow ſloop of war, of our having reſolved to pay off entirely your bond debt of 1771, amounting to current rupees 25,70,956. 1. 9. and of our having given notice accordingly.

The balance this day in our treaſury, as particularized in the laſt paragraph of this Letter, added to what will be received in a day or two from Patna, will ſuffice for their diſcharge; and as the ſeaſon for the heavy collections is now approaching, there is no doubt but there will be again a conſiderable amount in your treaſury by the end of December next. The ſums therefore which may be expected in the interim from the Vizier, viz. fifteen lacks of rupees on account of the ceſſion of Corah, &c. as ſtipulated by the Benares Treaty, and 20 lacks out of the 40 engaged for the Rohilla expedition, added to about 15 lacks for the bills you have authorized us to draw upon you, will be a further fund for the diſcharge of your bond debt, and reduce it to 35 lacks inſtead of 125 lacks, which was the amount of it in Auguſt laſt. The further ſum of 35 lacks, which will remain due from the Vizier, the payment of which we deem perfectly ſecure, and will therefore be ſufficient to cancel the whole of your bond debt in the courſe of another ſeaſon, inclusive of the ſavings ariſing both from the reduction of expences, the particulars of which were tranſmitted you by the Reſolution, and from one of the brigades being employed out of the provinces, and in conſequence paid by the Vizier. But as your treaſury is the only ſafe fund in Bengal for lodging the money of widows and orphans reſiding in the country, without this indulgence may be diſtreſſed for a ſubſiſtence, we beg leave to recommend that your Adminiſtration ſhould be allowed to receive to the amount of ten lacks, at the uſual intereſt of eight-per-cent. on this charitable motive, although the ſtate of your treaſury ſhould be ſuch, that the money may not be required for your uſe.

The proceedings of the Board of Inſpection appertain properly to this and the foregoing head; but as the detail of them is ſent in to our Secretary from that Department, we ſhall beg leave, for the ſake of greater perſpicuity, to enter it under a diſtinct head.

Board of Inſpection.

The continuation of the Proceedings of the Board of Inſpection ſince the diſpatch of the Reſolution, is forwarded to you by this conveyance.

Our chief employment in this Department has been to watch over and enforce the obſervance of the regulations we had adopted in conformity to your orders, and our own reſolutions, for retrenching the expences of your ſubordinate factories; your civil and military buildings; your civil officers at the Preſidency, and your military eſtabliſhments. Theſe objects we have laboured to effect in regular weekly meetings, by the concurrent aids of the Auditor of the Week, the Comptroller of the Offices, and the Commiſſary General: and we are perſuaded, that upon a minute review of our proceedings, you will find they have not been neglected.

The charges of the Factories do not require of us any more particular mention than what is comprehended in this general ſummary, as we do not know of any material inſtance in which they have been ſuffered to exceed the limits of the fixed eſtabliſhments; and even where trivial exceſſes may appear, the evident neceſſity and reaſons to juſtify them, will at the ſame time preſent themſelves to you on the face of our Records, and the remarks of our Weekly Auditor.

On finding, from a concurrence of cauſes, which were briefly enumerated to you in the Letter from this Department per Hector, that the expence of the public buildings had in the firſt year, after the receipt of your orders per Grafton, inevitably exceeded the ſum which you preſcribed to be laid out under this head, we came to an early reſolution of reſtricting the expence of the new fort and other buildings as much as poſſible, that we might be enabled to bring the whole in future within the limits of your orders, the ſum of which, we are convinced, when this has been effectually done, will prove amply ſufficient for the purpoſes of this head of expence.

The New Fort, although far from being brought to a ſtate of completion, yet requiring the addition of no conſiderable works, which were abſolutely or immediately neceſſary for its defence, except the uncompleted ravelins, we determined, until we could continue theſe conſiſtently with the letter of your orders, to put the whole upon an eſtabliſhment of expence, anſwering the purpoſes of keeping the fort clean, and the works in proper repair. The different branches which compoſe this eſtabliſhment, are recorded in the Conſultations noted in the margin, and have been ſtrictly adhered to, as have alſo the ſums we informed you we had limited for keeping in repair the Company's houſes in and about Calcutta.

In the exception above-mentioned of uncompleted works, we ſhould alſo have ſpecified the facings of the Redans to the ſide of the river, which you were adviſed had fallen down in the month of September 1773. It will doubtleſs be proper to repair this work; but we are under no uneaſineſs on account of the delay which has occurred in ſo doing, as thoſe facings appear to us to be only neceſſary, and indeed it is evident they are only intended, from the nature of their conſtruction, for the preſervation of the interior earthen works from the effects of the ſeaſons peculiar to this climate, and not in any degree for the purpoſes of defence.

We acquainted you of our having publiſhed an advertiſement for propoſals for contracting, for a term of years, for the repairs of the cantonments of Barrampore and Dinahpore. Many propoſals were in conſequence tendered us for this undertaking; but, upon mature conſideration of the ſubject, although we were ſtill of opinion, that to enter into ſuch a contract would be the moſt eligible meaſure for the intereſt of the Company, as well in order to inſure the effectual execution of the repairs, as to aſcertain and limit the expence in a branch which we had ſo often experienced to exceed all calculations and eſtimates; yet we agreed to poſtpone accepting, for the preſent, any propoſals for that purpoſe: had we accepted them, we ſhould have retained a ſtrict eye to the limits of your orders. Our motives for reſolving to poſtpone the meaſure, are recorded upon the Proceedings of the Board of Inſpection of the 9th June; to which we beg leave to refer, as well as for the eſtabliſhment we then judged it neceſſary to fix for their preſent indiſpenſable repair; and we flatter ourſelves that our conduct on this point will be honoured with your approbation.

For information of the controul which has been exerciſed in checking and regulating the expences of the civil offices at the Preſidency, we beg leave to ſubmit to you the diary of the Proceedings of the Comptroller, which has been monthly laid before us, and been rendered an Appendix to the Proceedings of your Board of Inſpection. The utility and ſalutary effects already experienced, and ſtill to be expected, from this inſtitution, as well as that of our weekly auditor, we are perſuaded, will not eſcape your judicious obſervation.

The ſet of military regulations we had the honour to tranſmit you with our laſt advices, have, by ſeveral ſubſequent additions and orders, being rendered ſtill more complete. Theſe additions and orders have iſſued from your Board of Inſpection, to which Department we allotted the cognizance of the military expences, under the regulations we had formed; and in which, with the concurrence and hearty aſſiſtance of Colonel Mac Leane, the Commiſſary General, who has always had a ſeat at our deliberations on military expences, the moſt minute attention has been paid, and every endeavour exerted to enforce the obſervance of the regulations, and preclude every ſuperfluous and unauthorized expence.

It is a ſatisfaction to us to have anticipated the orders contained in the printed inſtructions to the new Adminiſtration, which you were pleaſed to tranſmit to us, for regulating the mode of applying for advances of caſh; namely, that the application ſhould be accompanied with an abſtract account of diſburſements from the laſt advance, an account of the balance in hand, and an eſti-mate

mate of the diſburſements for which the advance applied for is required and intended. This regulation we adopted ſo long ago as November 1773, from which time it has been ſtrictly adhered to; and the abſtracts have been alſo regularly entered on record, with the applications; they were entered for ſome time on the Proceedings of the Public Department, of late they have appeared on thoſe of the Board of Inſpection.

The Preſident having laid before us an account of loſſes ſuſtained by Captain Martin, in the attack made upon Chichicotta by the Boteas, when on his duty there, of Surveyor, and without any military charge, with a requeſt that it might remain on record, and ſtand referred to your pleaſure, we now beg leave to point out this circumſtance to your obſervation, and to add our own recommendation, that you will be pleaſed to allow Captain Martin ſome compenſation for his loſſes, amounting to Sonaut rupees 6,625, which he obviouſly ſuſtained by a ſpirited and laudable exertion for the public ſervice, foreign from the line of his duty.

We adviſed you of a plan preparing by our Maſter Attendant, for the reduction of the heavy expences of the Marine Department; and that as ſoon as we ſhould be furniſhed with it, we hope to be enabled to regulate this office to your entire ſatisfaction.

The plan (which propoſed the conducting the buſineſs by contract) was ſoon after ſubmitted to us by the Maſter Attendant; and the expence, on the terms and conditions therein ſtated, appearing reaſonable and moderate, we reſolved to conclude a contract accordingly; at the ſame time we thought it proper to give him the preference, as it was a ſervice which could only be conducted by a perſon verſed and experienced in marine affairs, and as a contract with any other perſon would have been productive of inconveniencies by too much diminiſhing the authority of his office. The Maſter Attendant undertaking to conduct the buſineſs upon the propoſed plan, the agreement accordingly took place for the term of three years, commencing from the 1ſt of May, under the reſerve of retaining to ourſelves the power of annulling it, ſhould it not receive your approbation, or prove upon experience ineligible.

A petition was ſhortly after preſented to us by the Contractors for ſupplying the ſtores to the offices at the Preſidency, repreſenting the great loſs they were likely to ſuſtain by the ſtores which were required for the Marine Department being ſupplied by the Maſter Attendant. This petition was referred to him, and his objections required to receiving the ſtores he would want for executing the new agreement from theſe Contractors, before the ratification of it. His anſwer lay ſome time for conſideration, and whilſt the matter remained in this ſtate of indeciſion, your orders arrived for putting the offices of Naval Storekeeper and Maſter Attendant under ſome new regulations. It was before a matter of heſitation, whether the agreement with the Maſter Attendant ſhould be carried into execution on account of the difficulties ariſing to the former Contractors; but it could now by your orders no longer continue a point of doubt or diſcuſſion, as ſuch a meaſure would have directly counteracted your new arrangement. It was therefore reſolved, that the agreement propoſed by the Maſter Attendant ſhould not be entered into, but that the department ſhould be arranged according to your orders; and we were obliged to exerciſe the reſerve contained in our reſolution of annulling his agreement; and it accordingly ſtood annulled from the end of the month of September.'

Having taken under our conſideration the new regulating and arranging the neceſſary eſtabliſhments of the offices of Naval Storekeeper, Marine Paymaſter, and Maſter Attendant, in conſequence of your orders; and obſerving, that you had recommended the practice of the Preſidency of Bombay as our guide; we have applied to the Gentlemen there for a complete detail of the mode of conducting the buſineſs of the Marine at that place, and as ſoon as we receive it we ſhall not fail to adopt the ſame plan here.'

In the interim it has been reſolved, that the office of the Naval Storekeeper do remain on its preſent footing and under its preſent eſtabliſhments, unleſs the reply from the Preſidency at Bombay ſhall point out the propriety of any alterations.

With reſpect to the nature of the Marine Paymaſter's office, being unacquainted with the practice of Bombay, we ſeparately directed Mr. Keeble and Captain Wedderburn to lay before us ſuch a plan as might appear to them the moſt proper for regulating the line of the two offices, and managing them in their detail, together with an eſtabliſhment of the neceſſary ſervants and charges. The plan ſubmitted to us in conſequence by Mr. Keeble, was unanimouſly reſolved upon to be adopted, under certain additions and alterations; and the ſame having been rectified accordingly, they were directed to conform thereto for the preſent in the management and execution of their reſpective offices. And we think there is every reaſon to expect a reduction of charges, and the introduction of a ſyſtem of method and regularity in your Marine, from the proſecution of the arrangement you have thus preſcribed.

For your more particular information on all the above tranſactions, as well as for a detail of others not mentioned in this abridgement, we muſt beg leave to refer you to the Proceedings of the Board of Inſpection at large; but this being the head of your advices under which it properly falls, we cannot quit the ſubject without expreſſing to you the ineffable regret which we feel in being denied the ſatisfaction which would have flowed to us from obſerving the reſult of our labours. The general adjuſtment of your revenue, the regulating the adminiſtration of juſtice in both its branches, the new modelling the Nabob's houſehold, and the political negociations with the Vizier, being objects of the firſt and moſt immediate moment to the future proſperity of your affairs, of courſe claimed the firſt place in the attention and proceedings of your preſent Adminiſtration; and for this conſideration, the further objects of regulating and retrenching the expences of your ſubordinate factories, your offices at the Preſidency, and your military eſtabliſhments, neceſſarily experienced a temporarary ſuſpenſion, and the ſeveral arrangements made in them, cannot be ſaid to have taken effect ſooner than April 1774. To participate therefore the ſatisfaction accruing from the reſult of theſe our meaſures, we are induced to ſay is denied us; but ſtill we are happy in the reflection, that the grand object of them, the intereſt of our Employers, will be equally promoted, and that however diſtant the appearance of the effects, they can only be conſidered as the fruits of our labours exerted with alacrity and unwearied application, ſince the important truſt has been confided to us of the ſuperintendance of your affairs. That theſe fruits muſt in a very ſhort courſe of time produce reſources to enable your Adminiſtration, after diſcharging your heavy bond debt, to increaſe, if judged eligible, the amount of your Inveſtments, and to reſtore in general the credit of the Company by ſuch farther application of them as you may think proper to direct, are conſequences too obvious to eſcape the attention of the moſt ſuperficial obſerver. If this ſuccinct elucidation carries with it an air of ſelf-applauſe, let it find its juſtification in your candid advertence to the predicament in which we ſtand on the eve of a change in your Government, which will deprive us of all further opportunity of communicating with you on the truſt we have had to manage, and which we are conſcious of having managed with fidelity and attention.

We obſerve what you have been pleaſed to write concerning the Company's bonds to Vancolſter. You will however perceive by our advices of laſt ſeaſon, that theſe bonds are no longer in our Secretary's hands, having been attached and afterwards carried off by a writ from the Mayor's court in behalf of his creditors.

APPENDIX. No. 44.

We have obſerved your eſpecial directions about the drafts on you of this ſeaſon; and agreeable to them, gave public notice of the remittance that was intended to be furniſhed, that every perſon entitled to it might put in their claim for a ſhare. The claims were ordered to be ſent in before the firſt of this month, and ſoon after that date we ſettled a diſtribution, and advertiſed, that the money would be received into the treaſury immediately, and bills granted for the amount. A liſt of the drafts will be regularly ſent as they are made, by each ſhip.

About ten days ago, we had notice from Sir Edward Hughes, of his arrival in this river with the ſhips of his Majeſty's ſquadron under his command. As we were equally deſirous of paying obedience to your commands, reſpecting the reception of the commanders and officers of his Majeſty's ſhips, and of ſhewing our own ſentiments of reſpect and attention to them, we deputed Mr. Graham, a Member of our Board, to wait on Sir Edward, with congratulations on his arrival, and aſſurance of every aſſiſtance and accommodation which it was in our power to give; at the ſame time we ſettled the ſalutes which were to be given him on his arrival at the Preſidency, and the allowances to him and his officers, agreeable to your orders.

We this year advertiſed as uſual for ſealed propoſals for the army contract, and five were given in accordingly by the time limited; but as we then had received certain accounts of the arrival of the tranſports at Madras, with the Gentlemen from England, nominated Members of the new Council by Act of Parliament, which rendered it probable the new Government would ſoon take place, we agreed to leave the ſettlement of the contract to them; but to provide at the ſame time againſt any inconveniency that might ariſe from a delay in receiving it, we directed the preſent Contractor, on his offer to provide ſupplies for three months beyond the expiration of his contract, viz. for the months of January, February, and March next, on the ſame conditions, and for the ſame articles as ſpecified in it.

The balance in our general treaſury this day is current rupees 4,02,837. 11; in the Dewannee treaſury, Sicca rupees 8,90,165. 2. 3.; and in the caſh, current rupees 15,170. 11. 6.

Agreed, That the Governor be requeſted to order a guard from the fort to attend alſo upon the Sheriff during this ceremony.

Whereas, by an Act of Parliament, paſſed in the 13th year of the reign of his preſent Majeſty, intituled, "An Act for eſtabliſhing certain regulations for the better management of the affairs of the Eaſt India Company, as well in India as in Europe," it is amongſt other things enacted, That the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, be conſtituted Governor General, and Lieutenant General John Clavering, the honourable George Monſon, Richard Barwell, and Philip Francis, eſquires, Counſellors, of the Preſidency of Fort William in Bengal, and its dependencies:

Extract of a Letter from the Governor General and Council of Bengal, to the Court of Directors of the Eaſt India Company; dated the 21ſt November 1774.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

Par. 1. This will accompany our Proceedings in the Secret Department, which, by the abolition of the Select Committee, will from this time comprehend the complete Minutes of the Political Tranſactions of your Adminiſtration here. Secret Department.

2. The ſhortneſs of the period which has elapſed ſince we took upon us the government of your affairs, has not left room for any external occurrences; you will however find that our Conſultations have not been unfrequent, and that the Reſolutions in them, we are ſorry to ſay it, have not been formed in that harmony, which was equally the object of your inſtructions and our wiſhes, could it have been maintained conſiſtent with the duty we owe to you and our own characters, in aſſerting the opinions which our judgment dictated.

3. The Proceedings are very full on the ſubject, which have been in debate before us, and contain the Minutes, Aſſents, and Diſſents, at length, on every Queſtion; and as the difference of opinion throughout bore always a relation to one point, namely, the propriety of the Rohilla expedition, you will find we were almoſt without exception divided in the ſame proportion; and as in this caſe it would have been impoſſible to have concurred in a General Letter of arguments and opinions, we determined to have this ſtrictly and ſimply a Letter of advice, comprehending reſolutions and facts, and to refer to the Proceedings for the reaſoning on both ſides.

4. In our firſt Conſultation in this Department, we took into conſideration a Minute of the Governor General's, reſpecting the political ſtate of affairs in India, which he had delivered in at the preceding meeting in the other Department, with reſpect to the war then carrying on againſt the Rohillas in aid of the Vizier; we ſoon found that our opinions on its neceſſity and propriety were likely to differ very widely. A majority of the Board, conſiſting of the Commander in Chief, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, thought it neceſſary for the better

Conſultation, 25th October. better elucidating the grounds and conduct of the war, to ſee the whole of the original Correſpondence between the Governor General, Mr. Middleton, Reſident at the Vizier's Court, and Colonel Champion, commanding the troops acting in conjunction with him; and it was reſolved to requeſt the Governor General to lay before the Board accordingly.

25th October. 26th Ditto. 5. The Governor General and Mr. Barwell diſſented from this Reſolution, and the former, at a ſubſequent meeting, delivered in a Minute, declaring that he meant to lay before the Board ſuch parts of Mr. Middleton's and Colonel Champion's Correſpondence as related to the conduct of public affairs; but as ſome of the Letters might contain things in the courſe of a free and perſonal communication, which might not be proper for a public record, he begged leave to decline laying the whole of them before us.

6. On this refuſal a formal proteſt was entered againſt it by General Clavering, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis; Mr. Monſon thereupon moved for the recal of Mr. Middleton; and it was determined by the ſame majority, that he ſhould accordingly be recalled, and ordered to repair forthwith to the Preſidency, bringing with him the whole of his Correſpondence during his reſidence at the Court of Ditto. the Vizier. At the ſame time it was reſolved to appoint Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the brigade, to treat with the Vizier in his room. Againſt both theſe Reſolutions the Governor General proteſted, and Mr. Barwell alſo diſſented from them.

7. In conſequence of theſe Reſolutions, the Commander in Chief produced, at next meeting, ſome propoſitions which he offered as the groundwork of the inſtructions which it would be neceſſary to ſend to Colonel Champion. Theſe were fully debated in a ſubſequent Conſultation, and they were in general agreed to with ſmall variation; the Governor General and Mr. Barwell

31ſt October. objecting to many parts of them, and entering Minutes accordingly, while on the other hand the Commander in Chief, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis, either jointly or ſeparately recorded their ſentiments in the ſame manner.

8. The inſtructions agreed on, and which were actually ſent to Colonel Champion, or the officer commanding the 2d brigade, were in ſubſtance, after acquainting him with the recal of Mr. Middleton, and with his own appointment to treat with the Vizier, to direct him, immediately on receipt of the Letter, to wait on the Vizier, and to demand payment of the 40 lacks due to the Company for the aid they furniſhed him in the Rohilla war, and of ſuch other ſums as would be then due in virtue of his other engagements; and we empowered him to liquidate and ſettle all accounts between the Company and the Vizier, which might be unſettled at that time.

9. At the ſame time that we enjoined him to make this immediate demand for the whole, we left it in his diſcretion, ſhould he find it impoſſible for the Vizier to comply, to relax in his demand ſo far as to accept of any part, not leſs than 20 lacks, in ready money, and to ſettle a kiſtbundy or agreement for payment by inſtalments for the remainder, at any terms not exceeding 12 months for the laſt.

10. In caſe the Vizier ſhould refuſe to comply with the above demands, the Commanding Officer was directed to enter a proteſt againſt him; and within 14 days from the receipt of theſe inſtructions, to retire with the army under his command, and withdraw into the Company's territories.

11. But if the Vizier ſhould comply, as far as his circumſtances would admit, conformable to the terms propoſed, in that caſe the Colonel was only to withdraw the army within the province of Oud, and to continue it there for the defence of the Vizier's ancient dominions, ſhould he require it; if otherwiſe, he was to retire into the Company's territories, as in the other caſe.

12. Theſe orders were given with ſuitable directions of caution and reſpectful moderation, as to the manner in which he was to communicate them to the Vizier, and as to his own retreat, ſhould he apprehend that any danger or difficulty might attend it.

13. Before theſe inſtructions were reſolved upon, advices arrived of an end being put to the war, by a Definitive Treaty between the Vizier and Fyzulla Cawn, who agreed to lay down his arms, and ſurrender to the former one-half of the treaſure which he had with him in his camp, and on condition of the Vizier putting him in poſſeſſion of a ſmall diſtrict, the capital of which is known by the name of Rampore; he conſented to hold it dependant on him, and to renounce all pretenſions to any other part of the country. We were further ſoon after adviſed, that on the ratification of this Treaty the Vizier propoſed 3d November. to aſſign over 15 lacks of rupees, which he was to receive from Fyzulla Cawn in lieu of one-half of his treaſure, into the hands of Colonel Champion, in part payment of what he owed to the Company, and to ſet out immediately for Fyzabad, to take meaſures for diſcharging the reſt: and we learnt at the ſame time that Colonel Champion determined to march back with the brigade to Ramgaut, nearer to the frontiers of Oud, and there to quit the army, and to leave it under the command of Colonel Galliez, the next ſenior officer; we alſo received Letters from Mr. Grady, whom Mr. Middleton had ſent to Fyzabad to receive the money on account of the ceſſion of Corah and Illahabad, which the Vizier had ordered to be paid there before he left the army, adviſing, that he had actually received ten lacks of rupees, and was arrived with it at Patna, where he ſtopped to receive 5 lacks more, which was to be paid him on the ſame account by the Raja of Benares.

14. On receipt of theſe advices, finding the Vizier was in all probability at Fyzabad, we thought fit to alter our former inſtructions, ſo far as to direct Colonel Champion or the Commanding Officer to leave the army, and repair to that capital to wait on the Vizier, in execution of his former inſtructions, but to reckon the 14 days preſcribed for the retreat of the army from the day of his meeting with the Vizier.

15. At this time the Governor General propoſed alſo 8th November. for the conſideration of the Board, whether, ſeeing that the Vizier had actually put himſelf in the way of diſcharging his engagements to the Company, and that the army had come ſo much nearer to his frontiers, it might not be proper to ſuſpend the former peremptory orders reſpecting the demands upon him, and the withdrawing of the troops? but it appearing to the majority that there were no circumſtances in theſe events that rendered the former orders improper, the Governor's propoſal was not aſſented to.

16. Since that time we have received no further advices of any conſequence from theſe parts.

17. Some time ago, at the requiſition of the Vizier, the Governor permitted Captain Brooke to accept the command of a partizan corps in his ſervice, which he propoſed to raiſe and employ as occaſion ſhould require.

18. Although this did not coincide exactly with the ideas of the majority reſpecting the part which we ought to take in the Vizier's military enterprizes, yet the Board, out of reſpect to the Governor General, whoſe word was pledged to the Vizier for the permiſſion to Captain Brooke, thought fit to confirm it; and the former inſtructions given to Captain Brooke, which are in the Con- 3d November. ſultation here referred to, appearing to us clear and proper, we alſo gave our approbation to them.

25. Sir Edward Hughes, ſoon after his arrival, commu- 25th October. nicated to us a paper of intelligence which was conveyed to him by the Earl of Rochford, one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State, containing a project of Mr. Chevalier's for attacking Bengal with a body of 1,500 regular troops from Europe, ſupported by the army and authority of the King Shaw Allum. The particulars of this intelligence appear on the Conſultation referred to in the margin. Sir Edward having lately requeſted our opinion of it, we acquainted him, that though we did not doubt the reality of Mr. Chevalier's propoſal, yet we regarded garded it as the wild project of a visionary and ambitious man, that did not carry for the present any probability of success; nor could we persuade ourselves that the Court of France at this time meant to adopt it, especially as we had no intelligence of the arrival in India of Mr. Monteuil, or of the Zephyr frigate, as announced in the paper, nor could we perceive any preparations here, which seemed to indicate that they are expected.

26. The Dutch Director and Council have applied to us for an augmentation to the share of saltpetre which is annually allowed them; but we have refused, acquainting them that we could spare no more from the Investment required by you for the Company.

Postscript. We have not as yet received authentic advice of the payment of 15 lacks promised to Colonel Champion by the Vizier, or of any part of the 40 lacks due to the Company for their aid in the Rohilla war.

The Governor General has this day delivered in a separate address to you, which goes a number in the packet, as does one jointly addressed from General Clavering, Mr. Monson, and Mr. Francis; a Minute of Mr. Barwell's upon the subject also makes a number in the packet. These will all be recorded on the Consultations after the close of this packet.

Mahmud Reza Cawn has sent in to the Governor General an Address to your Court, requesting that it might be forwarded by the present opportunity, and we have consented to enclosing it a number in the packet.

Extract of Bengal Secret Consultations, 25th October.

The following Letters, addressed to the Select Committee, having been received from Colonel Champion, are now read and recorded:

To the Honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Colonel Champion's 5 Letters.

I had the honour of addressing you under date the 15th, and by duplicate the 18th. I then informed you, that his Excellency was very solicitous to re-establish friendship with Fazulla Khan. His endeavours through his own people failed. Fizullah addressed me by Letter, saying, he was willing to come to pay his respects to, and adjust matters with the Vizier; but that he was apprehensive his effects might be laid hands on in his absence. He offered 25 lacks per annum to the Vizier, and to perform other conditions, if his Excellency would give him the Rohilla country (I believe understood to be exclusive of Zabita Khan's). Having sent the Letter to the Vizier, he wrote me to make an offer in his name to Fizullah, of a jaghire of ten lacks annually in Rohilcund, and to let him hold the remainder of the country as a renter, if they could at meeting agree on the terms; provided that Feizullah gave up half his treasure, and only kept two or three thousand Rohillas for his guard, the rest to be received into the Nabob's service, and to be employed elsewhere. I complied with his Excellency's request. Feizullah's answer is not yet arrived; but as you will no doubt be desirous of receiving frequent advices of the state of matters whilst the army is at such a distance, I have troubled you with this information of what has passed since my last. I have the pleasure to add, that the troops do continue healthful; and that,

Camp, Mohanpore, 24th September 1774.

I am,
With all due respect, &c.

To the honourable Warren Hastings, esquire, President, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In my last I advised you of certain overtures made by the Vizier to Feizullah Khan; and am now to acquaint you, that they have not been accepted of. We are informed, that Feizullah Khan having signified intentions of coming in, his people became tumultuous, and prevented him; this I am inclinable to believe, both because the offers seemed highly advantageous, and because I had received private notice from himself, that he would come to the English camp to be presented to the Vizier, and bring matters to a conclusion.

According both to the Nabob's intelligence and mine, the minds of Feizullah's followers have been inflamed by Ahmit Khan (son of the late Aly Mahomed Khan's Buckshy) who having been under sworn engagements to the Vizier before the battle of the 23d April, and having failed in them, is afraid of falling into the hands of his Excellency, on whose professions of forgiveness he has no reliance.

Thus there is at present no prospect of peace. The Rohillas are posted between two hills, one on each flank; the space from hill to hill is a natural bank, supposed to be from 14 to 16 feet high, and little more than 400 yards long. This is made their front; so that they are encamped as it were in a deep column, on either side of a small river, which runs between the said hills. On the verge of the bank, in front, and on their flanks, they have made entrenchments, though but with little judgment, having thrown up the earth on the outside of the ditches. At the foot of the bank is a small open space of ground, as an esplanade, which has been cleared by the Rohillas since their retreat to Lall Dong. At the left it is computed to be between two and three hundred yards wide, but narrow towards the right. Without it, between us and them, is a very extensive, close jungle, consisting of large trees, interspersed with bamboos and long grass. There is but one road fit for artillery; this road they had made before our arrival, and leads to the base of the hill on the left of their entrenchment; on both sides of it is a close jungle, such as I have mentioned. Since we came here, the Nabob has, at my desire, been clearing away some of the jungle, and making a road, which will bring us in upon the centre of the intrenched bank, on which they place so much dependence. His Excellency has not been quite so industrious in this business as I could have wished; however, the road is pretty far advanced.

The Nabob's intelligencers and mine inform, that the Rohillas are very sickly and in great distress for provisions; that they are resolved not to fight, but to retire into the country between the hills. This is what the Vizier and I both apprehend, and what his Excellency wishes very much to prevent; for not only will he fail in that case to get any part of their money, but they will still continue enemies in this quarter, whilst the Marattas may call our force elsewhere; his Excellency knows too, that though I may dislodge them from their present post, yet that I cannot either consistently with your orders or with any degree of prudence, follow them far into the fortresses in the country between the hills.

I have been for some days extremely unwell, but the moment I can sit my horse I will endeavour to bring matters to a decision. I have this day sent the Quarter Master General to look at a clear spot of ground in the jungle, in order to get into closer neighbourhood with the enemy; enemy; and ſhould an attack be the reſult, depend upon it, Gentlemen, that every precaution in my power ſhall be uſed for the preſervation of the troops, and to overcome the advantages which the ſtrength of their poſt gives the Rohillas.

Camp, 26th September 1774. I have the honour to be, (Signed) A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In my addreſs of the 25th, I informed you, that the Rohillas had rejected the Vizier's overtures of peace; that I was much indiſpoſed, but would endeavour to bring matters to another deciſion as ſoon as poſſible. Accordingly I ventured abroad on the 28th, advanced with a ſtrong diviſion of the armies four coſs towards the enemy, and this day's march has brought me within leſs than four coſs of them; the ſecond diviſion under Colonel Galliez gains ground as we advance; the jungle graſs through which we have paſſed is very high, but the ſpaces between the trees are larger, and there are fewer bamboos than I expected: I am informed however that it is leſs acceſſible farther on. From hence I mean to move on with all the circumſpection poſſible. It is ſaid they have thrown up ſome ſort of work on this ſide of their poſt upon the road where they expect the attack, and as it will probably be five or ſix days before we can cut our way through the jungle, every precaution is taken to render our preſent ſituation ſecure.

Though thus buſied in preparing to attack the enemy, it is both the Vizier's wiſh and mine, that friendſhip ſhould be re-eſtabliſhed, as well for reaſons already mentioned, as to prevent that effuſion of blood which muſt be the conſequence of ſuch an attack.

Accordingly, at his Excellency's requeſt, I wrote a Letter to Feizulla Khan after our arrival at this ground, repeating the former offers, and aſſuring him, that if he would come to treat with the Vizier, I made no doubt they would become friends.

You ſhall be adviſed what effect our approach and theſe proffers of mercy will have on the Rohillas; in the meantime I have the honour to remain, &c.

Camp, within 4 coſs of Lall Dang, 30th September 1774. (Signed) A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

I encloſe duplicate of a Letter which I had the honour to addreſs to you laſt night; and am now to adviſe you, that Feizullah Khan has ſent a man to me, who gives ſome reaſon to believe he will really come in to treat with the Vizier; but his Excellency and I have been ſo long amuſed with aſſurances of this kind, that I am reſolved to carry on our operations as if there were no overtures of peace, becauſe, if the Rohilla is ſerious in his profeſſions, our drawing nearer him will haſten him in to ſettle matters.

I have the pleaſure to inform you, that having rode out this morning about three miles from our camp on the road made by the Rohillas, mentioned in my Letter of the 25th, I found it extremely good, and the jungle on either hand ſo open, that I am in hopes of eſtabliſhing a poſt to-morrow within two coſs of the enemy.

The Vackeel ſent in by Feizullah Khan is in attendance at his Excellency's, whoſe reſolutions in theſe matters will of courſe regulate my conduct.

Camp, within 4 coſs of Lall Dang, 1ſt October 1774. I am, &c. (Signed) A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

In conformity to the reſolution communicated to you in my addreſs of yeſterday, I moved on this morning with a reſpectable force about three miles towards the enemy, attended by the Vackeel ſent in from their Chief; when I arrived at the ground upon which I had determined to eſtabliſh a poſt, I gave the Vackeel his leave, deſiring him to inform his maſter I was ſo far advanced, and would be glad to ſee him. The Vackeel had yeſterday repeatedly ſaid, that Feizullah would come in, but I did not much rely on his declaration: however, he was not gone above two hours, when a Chief came to inform that Feizullah Khan would certainly meet me; and he accordingly arrived at our works about noon. To-morrow I ſhall accompany him to the Vizier's, and when any ſettlement is agreed upon, I will do myſelf the honour of acquainting you.

Our advanced poſt is already completely eſtabliſhed within a mile of that of the Rohilla's. I hope however matters are now in a way of being amicably ſettled; and it gives me much ſatisfaction that your favour of the 8th September encourages ſo eligible a meaſure.

Permit me, Gentlemen, to aſſure you, that I derive much pleaſure from this new teſtimony of your approbation, and that I am, &c.

Ordered, That the Encloſures be entered after the Conſultation.

From his Majeſty to Colonel Champion, encloſed in his Letter to the Governor.—Received.

The Letter which you our well-beloved ſubject, worthy of favour, wrote to our dear ſon Mujid ul Dowla, was was perused by us. You will learn what answer we returned to it from Mujid ul Dowla's Letter. In the affair of Sumroo and Mr. Redman, you represented to us, that to protect them would give displeasure to the English Chiefs. Although we had taken Sumroo into our service from necessity, yet out of regard to the English we dismissed him; after which Nejif Cawn gave him encouragement, and took him into his employ. He also seduced several Adjutants, Subadars, and Jemautdars, with four or five companies of the English troops, in our service, and by the promise of superior pay, engaged them in his own. He acted in the same manner with respect to Sean, an Armenian, a debtor to the Government, whom he seduced from us with four companies, and also Golaum Mahmood, Commandant, with the battalions under his command. He likewise gives protection in his own house to all those who are indebted to our Government. Four battering cannon with which we entrusted him, he has taken to himself; and he hath also taken possession of all the Pergunnahs lately brought into our Khalsa, together with several of the old ones, and makes use of the name of our dear brother the Vizier, to justify his proceedings. Our well-beloved subject the Nabob Vizier and you, both know that we conferred the greatest favours on Nijif Cawn, and gave him nine lacks of rupees, which was due to us from Hissaum ud deen Cawn, and appointed him to the command of the two battalions of English troops, the red battalion, and all the Moguls, and honoured him with the Nabobship of Ackberabad. Since he has been victorious over the Jauts, he has changed his conduct, and in opposition to our will retains numberless troops, and has for this year past granted Sunnuds of his own accord, and with his own seal, for Subaships, Fougedarries, Jaghiers, &c. He has now engaged Sumroo, Mr. Maddor, and Mr. Redman, in his service, and has encouraged Sumroo and Nijif Cooly Cawn to seize the Pergunnahs belonging to our Khalsa for themselves; he has likewise instructed Sumroo to commence hostilities against our forces. Sumroo has in consequence of his advice established an officer of his own in the fort of Puneput, and in conjunction with Nijif Cooly Cawn has seized upon Beree, Mandotee, Sumhotock, and Kerkooda, Pergunnahs belonging to our Khalsa: Nijif Cawn has also taken possession of Akerabad. Though this conduct has given us great displeasure, we have not used any severity towards him, and considering that we have educated and honoured him with our royal favour, we are averse to disgracing him; but it is expedient that our dear brother the Vizier should give him advice. We have no doubt of your loyalty and attention to our royal person; come therefore to our presence; prevail on our dear brother the Vizier to fulfil the Treaty he made with us, and sworn to the observance of on the holy Koran. It is our wish to establish a firm friendship with our dear brother the Vizier, and to regulate the affairs of the country in conjunction with him. Should any one inform you that we design to call in the Marattas, be assured that it is entirely false. We have for this twelvemonth past written repeatedly to our well-beloved subject Mr. Hastings, the support of the empire, to send us an army, and have appointed officers to Merut, &c.; were it our intention to call in the Marattas, what could have induced us to act in this manner? but if we have neither treasure nor troops, should they come with an army of 100,000 cavalry, what resistance would we make? we have written you for these three or four months past, that if you would yourself come to the presence it would be of great advantage, but if not, to send some trust-worthy person. You have not yet complied with either of these desires; come now with all expedition, that you may be acquainted with all our designs; and communicate them to our brother the Vizier, and inform me of what you think advisable, after which I will march. Be assured of this, or otherwise give assurances to our well-beloved Mujid ul Dowla, of the Vizier's favour, and send for him, that he may give you and the Vizier satisfaction in all points relative to our intentions, and that you may make his peace with the Vizier, after which I will march towards the banks of the Ganges. The two battalions of Sepoys which are with Nijif Cawn, on the part of our dear brother the Vizier, commit great disorders and oppressions on the citizens. Do you our well-beloved subject represent to the Vizier the necessity of recalling them, or giving orders to them, to put themselves under our authority; for the rest be assured that you have a place in our remembrance.

APPENDIX. No. 44.

In the King's own hand.

May the blessing of God rest on you, our well-beloved subject, worthy of favour. It is our most earnest desire, in conjunction with our brother and the English Chiefs, who are undoubtedly attached to our royal person, to deliver the country from the hands of the enemies of our Government; we have no other intention in sending for troops. Act agreeably to what we have now written you, and have directed Mujid ul Dowla to write you; and we will march to the banks of the Ganges. We are in daily expectation of Letters from the Gentlemen of Calcutta; do you procure them to be quickly sent; and come yourself to our presence. Your representations, if consistent with your loyalty and fidelity to us, shall be complied with.

From Migid ul Dowlah, his Majesty's Prime Minister.

The first part of this Letter is entirely a repetition of his Letter to the Governor of the 10th of October, and of the above Letter from the King to the General. In the latter part of it he informs the General, that he enclosed him copy of a Letter from his Majesty to the Vizier, for his perusal.

Copy of the King's Letter to the Vizier of the Empire, referred to in Migid ul Dowlah's address.

We have received your Letter, and perfectly comprehend the contents. Whatever professions of loyalty and fidelity are contained in your Letter, we trust you will even exceed them. God preserve you, our dear brother, in health. We do not entertain the least doubt of your attachment, and obedience to us. We are perfectly satisfied with regard to you, our brother. The appointment of a Naib Vizier rests with you, and we consent to your appointing any one of your own servants. (his Majesty then repeats word for word what he has said in his Letter to the General, concerning the favour he has shewn to Nejif Cawn, in educating him as a son, &c. and the ingratitude he has met with in return, &c. he then proceeds) if you are desirous of establishing a firm friendship between us, send Colonel Champion to the presence. When he arrives, and all our doubts are cleared up, we will then march; or else give assurances of your favour to Mujid ul Dowlah, and send for him and settle all affairs.

With respect to what you write, enquiring of us what advantage formerly accrued to us from the Marattas, that some people are now thinking of calling them in? My brother, self-interested people have written you this information. It is our wish to regulate the affairs of our Government in conjunction with you our brother and the English Chiefs. We have no intention to call in any one; but as we are without an army or treasure, we cannot prevent their coming. What have you our brother ever proposed for the benefit of the country that we have not agreed to? You must not now delay sending General Champion to our presence. Whatever you have to represent, communicate to him, and we will also inform him whatever we have to propose. For the rest, you our brother expend a crore of rupees annually, and we are in the utmost distress for the support of our charges. We have repeatedly written to you to ſend us a ſupply; if you approve of it, ſend us what you think proper, that being made eaſy on the head of our expences we may march. If you deſign to ſend for Muged ul Dowlah, it will be alſo neceſſary to ſend a ſupply for our charges, that we may be enabled to ſend him to you. You confide in the General; and I alſo conſider him as my well-wiſher and faithful ſervant. We have determined, that if you our brother act agreeably to our will, we will alſo agree to your deſire, and will march; you may depend on this. We return thanks to God that he has given us ſuch a powerful friend.

In his own hand.

Our brother, dearer than life, out of regard to us you appointed Zoolfuuarul ul Dowla, a ſervant of ours, to the poſt of Naib Vizier, for which we applaud your loyalty; but we do not deſire this inſtance of it; appoint any one of your own ſervants, and we will agree to it. With reſpect to our expences, ſend us whatever ſupply you think proper; act agreeably to what we have written you, and we will march to the banks of the Ganges, and will in future regulate the country with the advice of our brother. The great deſire we have for an interview with you, our dear brother, brings to our remembrance ſome verſes and two cubbits, which, from our great regard to you, we encloſe.

The Vizier's obſervations on the ſaid Letters.

To Colonel Champion.

I have received your Letter, with thoſe from his Majeſty and Abdulaid Cawn to you, and comprehend the contents. I perceive from his Majeſty's Letter, that he has no deſign of regulating the affairs of the empire; ſince he writes in this manner, his artifices are expoſed to view. He orders me to ſend him a ſupply for his expences: do you, my friend, reflect whether I have any thing to do with his Majeſty's expences. I have none of the country belonging to the Khalſa in my poſſeſſion, nor any authority in the Government of the empire, that I ſhould furniſh him with money: I am not even acquainted with his Majeſty's receipts and diſburſements. Formerly Munnur ul Dowlah, and afterwards Kiſſaum ud Dun, had the management of his affairs. Abdulaid Cawn is now at the head of affairs. The appointment of all officers, the collections of the revenues, and the diſburſements, are under the management of another. Why then ſhould I furniſh ſupplies? Formerly, when Mahomed Elick Cawn went to the preſence, I, with great difficulty to myſelf, ſupplied his Majeſty with 3,50,000 rupees, who received the money, but nevertheleſs continued at Shahjehanebad. It is not at preſent in my power to furniſh him with any ſupply. You are well acquainted with the greateſt of my diſburſements: nevertheleſs, if his Majeſty would have marched from Shawjehanabad, I ſhould have convinced him of my loyalty. You may be aſſured that I have no deſign, but the advantage of the empire. With reſpect to the ſending Abdulaid Cawn to you, and the affairs concerning which his Majeſty has written, the caſe is, that I do not approve of ſuch tedious negociations. You are well acquainted with the manners and diſpoſitions of the Natives of Hindoſtan, that if I ſhould ſend for Abaulaid Cawn here, a month at leaſt would elapſe before his arrival, fifteen days would be ſpent in conferences, and two months more in his return, if preparing for the King's march, thus three or four months would be thrown away unprofitably. As the diſtance from the capital to Succirall is not more than five or ſix days march, it appears to me that there would be no great hardſhip in his Majeſty's marching there; and I will act conſiſtently with the loyalty I owe to his Majeſty. Whatever Treaty or Agreement ſubſiſts between his Majeſty and me, we will each of us fulfil. You are concerned in this cauſe; on your own account it is neceſſary that you bring it to a concluſion. I am ready to comply with whatever engagements I have entered into with his Majeſty. Let his Majeſty in future apply to the conqueſt of the country, I will attend him; and whatever we may conquer, let it be divided equally between us. This will reſtore the empire to its former dignity, and will reflect honour on you and me. This appears to me to be the moſt adviſable ſcheme; in what his Majeſty propoſes, I can diſcover nothing but artifice and deceit. My friend, with regard to the cenſure which his Majeſty has thrown on Nejif Cawn, the caſe is, I am well acquainted, that though he was much diſtreſſed how to defray his charges, and was not aſſiſted by his Majeſty with a ſingle rupee, yet now that by his own bravery and good conduct he has raiſed himſelf to his preſent ſtate, he ſtill continues firm in his loyalty and attachment to his Majeſty. His Majeſty writes, that it was by means of the cannon entruſted to him that he became victorious. Of what conſequence were they? Let his Majeſty, by way of trial, and ſome other Chief, with cannon, to take poſſeſſion of Lahore, Subind, &c. The affair of Sumroo is this, that his Majeſty ſent him againſt the Seeks, from whence he returned, after having ſuffered a defeat, and did not obtain his ſalary from the preſence; being remedileſs, he quitted his Majeſty's ſervice. If his Majeſty has any propoſitions to make for the advantage of the empire, let him do it through your means.

From Colonel Champion to the Vizier.

I have received your Exeellency's Letter, and underſtand the contents; that you are deſirous I ſhould write in anſwer to his Majeſty's Letter, that I have engaged in this affair, and that I will take on myſelf to bring it to a concluſion, and that you are ready to fulfil whatever Treaty you have entered into with his Majeſty; and alſo that if his Majeſty has any propoſitions to make for the regulating of affairs, he ſhould do it through me. My friend, whatever I have written to his Majeſty and Mejid ul Dowlah in this affair, has been ſolely in compliance with your deſire, and for your advantage; but I cannot take upon me to be anſwerable for the ſettling this affair, becauſe I have nothing to do with it. It is at his Majeſty's option to come or not. I am much ſurpriſed that his Majeſty in his Letter to you, deſires you will ſend me to the preſence. What could induce him to write in this manner? I cannot proceed to the preſence at the deſire of your Excellency, nor am I in this buſineſs under your direction. If your Excellency writes to his Majeſty on this ſubject, I requeſt you will communicate the contents of your Letter to me.

I informed your Excellency, that the army would be ready to march, or for any other buſineſs, in three or four days. It is now ready.

Anſwer from the Vizier.

I have not written any thing to his Majeſty concerning your proceeding to the preſence. I encloſe for your peruſal copy of my addreſs to him.

You inform me, that you cannot take upon yourſelf the ſettling of this buſineſs. The caſe is, that I did not deſire you ſhould be concerned in this affair for any other purpoſe than that by its being ſettled in your preſence, you might have an opportunity of diſcovering who it is that acts contrary to his engagements.

It is my deſire that you ſhould be a witneſs to the integrity of my conduct.

From Nejif Cawn to Colonel Champion.

The preſent ſtate of affairs is this, that ſince the time of my arrival at the preſence, I have in every inſtance acted with the greateſt loyalty and ſubmiſſion to his Majeſty; and I am alſo deſirous of complying with the King's pleaſure concerning the diviſion of the country of Ackberabad, which is under my authority. Although

APPENDIX. No. 44.

Ab[d] Cawn has prejudiced his Majeſty againſt me by falſe aſperſions, I nevertheleſs perſevere in my loyalty and ſubmiſſion to him. As I conſider myſelf as ſupported by the Company, and am therefore under no apprehenſions from the intrigues of deſigning and malicious men, I have no thought but that of acting agreeable to the King's pleaſure. One day Ab[d] Cawn directed the guards at the gate of the fort, that when I came to Court, according to cuſtom, with my attendants, they ſhould not ſuffer them to paſs, but attack them; which they put in execution. Out of reſpect for his Majeſty, though I was witneſs to theſe proceedings, I took no notice of them, but diſcontinued my attendance at Court. His Majeſty afterwards honoured me with a viſit, from which time I renewed my attendance at the Durbar. A day or two after I was treated in the ſame manner, which prevented my going again. As I would not bear that any enemy of the Company's ſhould remain in the preſence, and Ab[d] Cawn had ſent for Sumroo, and procured him his Majeſty's favour, I took great pains, agreeable to the deſire of Colonel Champion, to get him diſmiſſed; but Abdulaid Cawn would never conſent to this, but ſupported him. To the repreſentations I made to his Majeſty to diſmiſs Sumroo, I received this anſwer from him and Ab[d] Cawn: "What benefit or advantage "have I ever received from the Engliſh Chiefs, or what "Treaty have they ever obſerved, that I ſhould ſatisfy "them in this point? I will protect Sumroo with my "life. They were even deſirous of engaging us in "hoſtilities."—As I perceived, that ſo long as Sumroo remained in the preſence, there would be continual diſputes and quarrels, I wrote him ſeveral Letters, ſometimes giving him hopes, and at others exciting his fears, by which means I ſeparated him from the preſence. He is now at the diſtance of 30 or 40 coſs from hence. Whenever I find an opportunity, I will either deſtroy him, or ſeize and ſend him to you. One Mr. Redman, who deſerted from the Engliſh army, Ab[d] Cawn alſo gave protection to in his own houſe. I made repreſentations to his Majeſty and Ab[d] Cawn in this affair, but they paid no attention to them. On the day of Mr. Redman's arrival, two Letters were preſented to his Majeſty from you, concerning him. Whilſt Mr. Redman remained in the preſence, no anſwer was written to them. When I was deſirous of ſeizing Mr. Redman, Ab[d] Cawn ſupplied him with neceſſaries, and ſent him away. After his departure anſwers were written you. Mr. Redman viſited Mr. Maddoc, who was on his march from Shahjehanabad. Upon hearing this, I wrote immediately to Mr. Maddoc to apprehend and ſend him to me. It is known that Mr. Redman ſtaid for a day or two with Mr. Maddoc, and then purſued his route towards Gohed. Ab[d] Cawn, out of enmity to me, has repreſented the affairs of Sumroo and Mr. Redman to the Engliſh Chiefs in a very different manner. Beſides this, he holds correſpondence with the Seeks and Marattas. I ſend you copies of ſome of his Letters to them, which fell into my hands, for your information. I write you continually the ſituation of my affairs; and it is evident to the whole world, that I am in the firmeſt manner attached to the Company. How is it poſſible that I ſhould act contrary to the will of the Company, or join in alliance with their enemies? Abdulaid Cawn's enmity towards me proceeds from my connection with the Nabob Vizier. You are well acquainted that, at the time of his Majeſty's march from Allahabad to Shahjehanabad, he himſelf introduced me to the Vizier; and at Gauntpore General Barker alſo carried me to viſit him, and eſtabliſhed a firm friendſhip between us. As I was convinced that the Nabob Vizier was a ſincere friend to the Engliſh Company, I viſited him, and entered into a friendſhip with him. Be aſſured, I conſider all the friends of the Company as my friends, and all their enemies as my enemies. It can never be that I ſhould act contrary to the will of the Company. Let my enemies and aſperſers report what they pleaſe concerning me. Heſſud ud dud Cawn formerly acted in the ſame hoſtile manner towards me; but the enmity of M[d] Cawn is ten times as great. He one day ſet a man to aſſaſſinate me, whom I ſeized: this man confeſſed, without being tortured, that he was ſent by ſuch a one, whoſe ſervant he had been for a long time; that he had employed him to aſſaſſinate me, but that he had failed for want of an opportunity. He has engaged a number of people for this purpoſe, by the promiſe of a large reward; and he has other deſigns which I cannot write you.

From Niziſ Cawn to Colonel Champion.

(The ſubſtance of this Letter is exactly the ſame as the foregoing, except that in the latter part of it Niziff Cawn informs the Colonel, that the perſons ſent by him for the purpoſe of writing news, had been to viſit him, and complained that Abdulaid Cawn obliged them to write whatever he pleaſed; he alſo encloſes a copy of the King's Letter to Colonel Champion, which is the ſame as to the ſubſtance of it with the original forwarded by the Colonel, but differs in the expreſſions.)

Encloſed in the foregoing;

I have received your kind Letter, and underſtand the contents. My friend! I conſider myſelf as favoured by what you write me concerning Gurra Mugsullurdapore, and I am very ready to agree to it, were it in my power, but this affair is not. You will be informed of the ſtate of affairs here by the Letters of Rowbehadar Sing and Gundaſe Pundit. It is therefore unneceſſary for me to write you on this ſubject. In a word, I, with thouſands of my adherents, am fallen into diſgrace out of regard to you; and our enemies have found an opportunity to commence hoſtilities. It is adviſable that you immediately ſend me an army; and that you alſo come yourſelf, and bring to puniſhment theſe ſhort-ſighted people; I will not be dilatory in promoting this undertaking to the utmoſt of my power. God grant that you may ſoon arrive. His Majeſty has you in continual remembrance, and his regard for you is increaſed.

In his own hand.

I cannot write you the ſtate of affairs here; if you now delay your coming here, it will be very difficult to execute our deſigns.

Your Vackeel, Sondee Cawn, has alſo informed me of all the particulars relative to your affairs, I repreſented to his Majeſty the loyalty and obedience you entertain towards him. Set your mind at reſt, and remain faithful to his Majeſty. When you conſider your attachment to your gracious maſter as your happineſs, there is no doubt but he will ſhew you favour. Your Vackeel will inform you what has been done for your ſatisfaction.

Colonel Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Treaties concluded between the Vizier and FyzulahCawn.

I have the pleaſure to acquaint you, that his Excellency the Vizier and Feizulla Khan have this day agreed upon terms of peace. Feizulla is to have a jaghеer of fourteen lacks ſeventy-five thouſand rupees per annum in the Rohilla country, with liberty to keep 5,000 men in arms; in conſideration whereof he is to give the Vizier half his treaſure. When the agreement has gone through the uſual formalities, I ſhall do myſelf the honour of tranſmitting a copy of it to you; in the meantime I beg leave to congratulate you on the concluſion of the war, and remain, Camp, 5th October 1774. With all due reſpect, &c. (Signed) A. Champion.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Preſident, &c. Members of the Select Committee.

Gentlemen,

Under date of the 5th inſtant I informed you, that the Vizier and Feizulla Khan had come to an accommodation; and I have now the honour to tranſmit copies of the mutual engagements entered into between them, as drawn out by his Excellency the Vizier, and ſealed and ſworn to by him and the Rohilla yeſterday in my preſence.

The Vizier has drawn off his own army, and to-morrow I ſhall, agreeably to his requeſt, follow with the Company's troops.

As Feizulla Khan is reſtricted to a ſmall body of men, ſuch of the troops diſbanded by him, as the Vizier does not chuſe to entertain, are to croſs the Ganges without delay.

I know not well why his Excellency has not inſerted in Feizullah's agreement the obligation to deliver up half his treaſure. I remarked this ſeeming omiſſion to his Excellency before the agreements were ſigned; he only anſwered, that whatever Feizullah's effects might be, he would be chaſtiſed with hell, unleſs the other promiſed to give a faithful account of them.

Camp, 6th October 1774. I remain, &c. (Signed) A. Champion.

Within a week of laſt ſiege, &c.

APPENDIX. No. 44.

A friendſhip having been entered into between me and Feizulla Cawn, I have agreed to give him the country of Rampore, and ſome other diſtricts dependent thereon, producing altogether an annual revenue of 14,75,000 rupees; and I have ſtipulated, that Feizulla Cawn ſhall retain in his ſervice 5,000 troops, and not a ſingle man more; I therefore give this written engagement, that I will at all times, and on all occaſions, ſupport the honour and character of Feizulla Cawn, and will promote his intereſt and advantage to the utmoſt of my power, upon the following conditions: that Feizulla Cawn ſhall enter into no connection with any perſon but myſelf, and that he ſhall hold no correſpondence with any perſon, except the Engliſh Chiefs; that he ſhall conſider my friends as his friends, and my enemies as his enemies; and that with whomſoever I ſhall make war, Fizuellah Cawn ſhall ſend two or 3,000 men, according to his ability, to join my forces; and if I march in perſon, Fuzellah Cawn ſhall himſelf accompany me with his troops; and if on account of the ſmallneſs of the number of the forces he is to retain in his ſervice, he is not able to accompany me, I will then appoint him three or 4,000 more troops, that he may accompany me with a good army, and I will be at the expence of ſupporting them. Upon the performance of theſe conditions, I have agreed to give the ſaid countries, at the afore-mentioned revenue to Fizeullah Cawn, and to promote his intereſt and advantage to the utmoſt of my power.

If Fizeullah Cawn fulfil the articles of this Treaty, and adheres ſteadily to it, God willing, I will not neglect whatever may be for his advantage.

He ſhall ſend the remainder of the Rohillas on the other ſide of the river. I have ſworn by the holy Koran, calling God and his Prophets to witneſs to the performance of theſe articles.

A friendſhip having taken place between the Nabob Vizier and Ul Mulk Bahadar and me, and the Nabob Vizier having been graciouſly pleaſed to beſtow on me a country, I have ſworn on the holy Koran, calling God and his Prophets to witneſs to what I engage, that I will always, whilſt I live continue in ſubmiſſion and obedience to the Nabob Vizier; that I will retain in my ſervice 5,000 men, ſtipulated by the Nabob Vizier, and not a ſingle man more; that with whomſoever the Nabob Vizier ſhall engage in hoſtilities, I will aſſiſt him; and that if the Nabob Vizier ſhall ſend an army againſt any enemy, I will alſo ſend two or 3,000 of my troops to join them, and if he goes in perſon againſt any enemy, I will perſonally attend him with my forces; that I will have no connection with any perſon but the Nabob Vizier, and will hold no correſpondence with any one, the Engliſh Chiefs excepted; that whatever the Nabob Vizier directs, I will execute, and that I will at all times, and on all occaſions, both in adverſity and proſperity, continue his firm aſſociate.

I have ſworn on the holy Koran, calling God and his Prophet to witneſs to the performance of theſe articles. May God and his Prophet puniſh me if I act contrary to them.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

APPENDIX, No. 45.

Extract of Fort William Secret Conſultations, 25th October 1774.

THE following Minute, delivered into Council yeſterday by the Governor General, being referred for conſideration to this Department, is now recorded, having been ſent in circulation to the different Members of the Board.

The Governor's Minute on the Revenues and Politics of the Country.

Gentlemen,

All the Members of this Council being now aſſembled, I could wiſh to point out ſome general plan for carrying into execution the regulations of the new ſyſtem of Government, agreeably to the inſtructions received from the Company; but upon an attentive review of the various ſubjects which occur, I find it neceſſary to ſelect ſuch particular parts of them as ſeem to claim our earlieſt notice; reſerving the reſt for future conſideration, to be taken up in the order in which their reſpective importance, or particular exigencies may point out. I ſhall take the liberty to accompany every propoſition with a brief relation of ſuch circumſtances, and ſuch paſt tranſactions, as have any relation to it, and are neceſſary to be known for the purpoſe of forming your reſolutions upon it. I mean not, Gentlemen, to prelude any other Member of the Council from offering any point for preſent deliberation, which, in his judgment, may claim a preference in point of time, above thoſe which I may wiſh to introduce;—I only propoſe this method, as the moſt likely to facilitate the diſpatch of buſineſs, which may be retarded by undertaking too many ſubjects at the ſame inſtant. It will unavoidably take ſome time to arrange and perfect the new ſyſtem of this Adminiſtration; in the meanwhile, the current affairs will require your daily aſſiſtance to keep them in motion; and in both, I mean, both in forming the new mode of Government, and conducting the daily buſineſs, you will find it neceſſary to conſult the Records of the former Adminiſtration, for the ſake of due connection and conſiſtency. I deſire alſo to ſhorten the time, and leſſen the trouble of ſuch a ſearch among the voluminous books of Conſultations, by the mode I have propoſed, of laying before you a ſuccinct view of each ſubject, with references to the Conſultations for the ſucceſſive orders which have been iſſued, and the advices which have been received concerning them. I think it my duty to add, and I think I may do it without preſuming too much upon the experience which I have acquired in the affairs of this Government, that I ſhall be at all times happy to aſſiſt any Member of the Council with my communications upon any point, upon which he may deſire to be ſo informed.

Profeſſions of zeal and ſolicitude for the public good are too commonly made uſe of to be received with implicit credit; but I feel my own honour, and my own intereſt, ſo intimately blended with the ſucceſsful iſſue of the meaſures of this Government, that I may with truth, and without hazard of having my declaration ſuſpected, affirm, that I have not a wiſh, even for myſelf, which has not the good of the Company for its immediate object, and my own ultimately as derived from it. I believe, I may ſafely conclude the ſame for the other Gentlemen embarked with me in this great undertaking; and I have the moſt thorough confidence in your diſpoſition to unite with me in the proſecution of the Company's intereſts; while I with the ſtricteſt ſincerity and cordiality declare, that nothing on my part ſhall be wanting to render that union effectual.

The points which I ſhall now beg leave to ſubmit to your conſideration are, firſt, the mode of conducting the buſineſs of the revenue; and next, the political ſyſtem of theſe provinces.

The general mode which is at this time eſtabliſhed for the management of the collections, is as follows: The provinces are formed into ſix diviſions; each comprehending ſeveral inferior diſtricts, under the direction of a Chief and Council; theſe receive their orders from the Board at large, and report to them their proceedings in a ſeparate department, called a Council of Revenue; and for the greater facility of diſpatching buſineſs with the inhabitants, and for the preſervation of the ancient forms and rules of office, a Dewan, or Miniſter of the Revenue, is appointed to each diviſion, who is joined to the Provincial Council, and keeps all the accounts and records of the country languages. Native ſuperintendants are alſo appointed to each diſtrict of the provincial diviſions, with the title of Naibs, and correſpond with the Provincial Councils and Dewans. The Dewans alſo tranſmit their accounts and proceedings to an office of ancient inſtitution, lately tranſferred from the city of Moorſhedabad to Calcutta, named the Khalſa, which is under the charge of an officer, entitled the Roy Royan, who occaſionally ſits at the meetings of the Councils of Revenue, and is the channel of communication between the Board and the Dewans, tranſmitting to the latter the counterparts of the orders of the Board which are ſent to the Provincial Councils, and receive their anſwers. The exceptions to this general ſyſtem are, the province of Chittagong, which, from its remote ſituation, and ſmall revenue, has been left under the ſingle charge of the Chief of the factory; and the diſtricts of Pallamow and Rangur, under Captain Camac; and of the Jungleterry of Curruckpoor, &c. under Captain Browne. Theſe may be properly termed Military Collectorſhips. They are compoſed of the wild and mountainous parts of the country, which have been lately reduced to a ſtate of ſubmiſſion to Government, and require the continual preſence of a military force to keep them in ſubjection. The revenue which they yield is inconſiderable, but the poſſeſſion of them is a ſecurity to the peace of the cultivated and more civilized lands in their neighbourhood, which, till their reduction, were continually expoſed to the ravages of the wild and lawleſs people inhabiting them. With theſe military Collectors the correſpondence was carried on by the Governor only, but according to the Inſtructions now received from the Company, it ſeems requiſite that it ſhould in future be conducted by the Council at large.

The plan of the general eſtabliſhment for conducting the revenue, and the records explaining the [illegible] objects and progreſs of the Military Collectorſhips, will be found in the following Conſultations and Papers:

No. 1. Plan and eſtabliſhment of the ſix Provincial Councils of Revenue, and the collections of Chittagong; Conſultation, [illegible]

APPENDIX. No. 45.

I muſt beg leave to conclude this ſubject with earneſtly offering my advice for the continuation of this ſyſtem in all its parts, with ſuch alterations only as the late change in the Government has rendered indiſpenſibly neceſſary. Innovations are always attended with difficulties and inconveniences; innovations in the Revenue, with a ſuſpenſion of the collections, and a change at this ſeaſon of the year, would be particularly dangerous, as the time of the heavieſt payments is now approaching. For the ſame reaſon, your ſpeedy determination upon the future mode of managing and collecting the Revenues would prove of eſſential ſervice.

The Court of Directors have been adviſed of the formation of this eſtabliſhment, in conſequence of the orders tranſmitted to us in their Letter of the 7th April 1773; and we may ſhortly hope to be furniſhed with their final determination concerning it. I muſt likewiſe recommend the continuance of the ſeparation which was originally made of the Revenue Department from the other offices of the Government, as the only means by which it can be regularly conducted; and as there is no branch of the Company's affairs in which their intereſts ſo eſſentially depend, I propoſe that the Council do attend for the collection, in the ſame manner as was practiſed by the late Council of Revenue.

It will be neceſſary to form other ſubſidiary regulations for ſeparating the Revenue from the Commercial Department, and preventing competitions between them; and to determine what ſervants ſhall be employed in the Revenue branch, that the Board of Trade may be enabled to make choice, from amongſt the reſt, of ſuch as will be required for conducting the commercial buſineſs.

The next point which I have propoſed for your conſideration, is the political ſyſtem of theſe provinces.

The alliance with the Nabob Sujah Dowla, the Vizier of the Empire, is the only foreign connection in which the Government can be with propriety ſaid to be engaged. This took place originally by the Treaty formed by Lord Clive at Illahabad in the year 1765.

By a new Treaty with the Vizier, dated the 5th September 1773, in conſequence of an interview I had with him at Benares, the month's ſubſidy, for the extraordinary expence of our forces employed in his aſſiſtance, was fixed at 10,000 rupees for the brigade, and Illahabad ceded to him, which we had of his former purpoſe of invading the country of the Rohillas. For this ſervice he engaged to pay the Company, beſides the ſtipulated monthly ſubſidy, 40 lacks of rupees when it ſhould be concluded.

The Vizier's requeſt was granted; the ſecond brigade was ordered on this ſervice, and Colonel Champion, the provisional Commander in Chief, appointed to the command. Having been joined by the Vizier and his troops, he entered the Rohilla borders on the 17th of April, and, on the 23d of the ſame month, attacked and defeated the army of the Rohillas, commanded by Hafez Rahmet, their leader, who was killed in the action. This victory was deciſive; no other enemy appeared in the field; and the Vizier having obtained poſſeſſion of the greateſt part of the country, both armies marched on the 7th of May to the city of Biſſooly, where quarters were prepared for them, and it was intended they ſhould paſs the rains there; but the remaining leaders of the Rohillas having aſſembled forces, under the command of Fyzoola Cawn, at Nejeebgur, a town on the northern frontier of the country, the Vizier, apprehending their acquiring too great ſtrength, and that the Marattas might return to interrupt the operations before they were brought to a concluſion, prevailed upon Colonel Champion to put the brigade again in motion about the latter end of July, and to march with him againſt the enemy, although the rains were then at their height. The troops enjoyed remarkable good health, and proceeded without oppoſition to Patturgur; the enemy flying before them to the ſkirts of the hills, whither the combined armies have followed them. They have lain for a conſiderable time within a ſmall diſtance of each other; Colonel Champion waiting for orders from the Select Committee, to purſue the enemy beyond the line to which he conceived himſelf limited by his inſtructions. The neceſſary orders were ſent, and we have been for ſome time paſt in daily expectations of hearing that the war was brought to a concluſion, either by the attack and defeat of the enemy, or by negociation. The laſt Letters from Colonel Champion, which are Conſultations, have read, were dated the 2d inſtant; and adviſe, that Hyzulla Cawn had delivered himſelf up, but that the negociation was ſtill continued.

The advantages propoſed from this expedition were, 1ſt, An addition of [illegible] advices; but orders had iſſued for effecting it, and an Engliſh Gentlemen had been appointed by the Vizier to receive and take charge of it, at Fyzabad, his capital.

The monthly ſubſidy has been paid with ſufficient exactneſs; at leaſt we have had no information to the contrary. The 40 lacks of rupees, ſtipulated for the performance of the preſent ſervice, I conſider as now due, though the Vizier makes ſome objections; but the defeat of Fyzoola Cawn's troops, or the concluſion of the negociation with him, has probably, by this time, put the Company's right beyond diſpute. There remains alſo a ſmall balance of former accounts ſtill unadjuſted; theſe will conſtitute the principal part, if not the whole of our concerns with the Vizier; when the buſineſs on which we have been to this time engaged with him is concluded, I apprehend no difficulty in procuring payment.

The bounds which I had preſcribed to myſelf in this Paper, and which I have already exceeded, will not admit of my entering into a diſcuſſion of the benefits depending on the alliance of the Company with the Vizier; theſe will appear at large on various parts of our records, to which I ſhall hereafter diſtinctly refer. They may be reduced to the following abridgment; a ſecure barrier, a conſtant occupation for part of our army, a reduction of our military expences, and an accumulating fund of future wealth. He cannot long ſubſiſt without our protection, and is incapable of himſelf, of becoming an object of our jealouſy or apprehenſion. For the better communication with the Vizier, and for the maintenance of that confidence which is neceſſary to perpetuate the alliance between the Vizier and the Company, it has been judged adviſable to appoint a Reſident at the Durbar, as the immediate agent of the Governor, with whom alone he officially correſponds. The Gentleman employed in that ſtation is Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, with whoſe diſcretion, integrity, and abiility for the diſcharge of this truſt, I have every reaſon to be abundantly ſatisfied.

The King remains at Delhi, the ancient capital of the empire, a mere cypher in the adminiſtration of it. With him our connection has been a long time ſuſpended, and I wiſh never to ſee it renewed, as it has proved a fatal drain to the wealth of Bengal, and the treaſury of the Company, without yielding one advantage, or poſſible ſource even of remote benefits, in return. The tribute which he claims from the provinces hath been withheld from him ſince his deſertion of the Company, and his union with their natural enemies the Marattas; and a reference has been made to the Court of Directors for their orders concerning the future payments of it, with every argument urged that can induce them to forbid it.

The Maratta ſtate, after having threatened the whole empire with ſubjection during the active adminiſtration of their Paiſhwa, or acting Chief, Maderow, has been for this twelve months paſt the ſcene of internal diſtractions, which ſtill ſubſiſts. On the death of Maderow, his brother Narrain Row ſucceeded him. He was treacherouſly ſlain, and his uncle Ragonaut Row releaſed from priſon, and declared Paiſhwa in his ſtead. The Miniſters of the Government, to whom he owed his elevation, became the objects of his jealouſy, and acting from that impreſſion, he made them his enemies; they formed a powerful combination againſt him, ſet up the new-born ſon of Narrain Row in competition againſt him, and defeated him. He has ſince thrown himſelf on the protection of Takojee Holkar, and Mahdajeedee Sindea, two Chiefs of conſideration, who were lately in the party of his opponents. The leaders of this oppoſition, Sookoram Bolboo, the principal Miniſter; Goujabay, the mother of the Paiſhwas Maderow and Narrain Row; Shabajee Bonſela, the Chief of Berar, and the Nabob Nizam Alli. The two laſt may be rather conſidered as auxiliaries; Moodajee, the brother of Shabajee, was on the ſide of Ragonaut Row till his defeat; both the brothers are now in Berar. The laſt Letter from Mr. Moſtyn, the Reſident at Poonah, dated the 22d Auguſt, explains the ſtate of theſe diſputes to that period; they ſeem yet likely to be of longer duration, and whenever concluded, will probably leave the prevailing party too weak to undertake any plan of remote conqueſt for ſome time at leaſt to come; of courſe we have no cauſe to apprehend any diſturbances from the Marattas during the preſent ſeaſon.

The province of Berar, adjoining to our own borders on the South and Weſt ſide of the provinces, merits, from that conſideration, and from the power and independency of its rulers, a diſtinct conſideration. The preſent Chief, Shabajee Bonſelah, is the brother of the late Janojee Boorſla, who for many years paſt enjoyed the ſovereignty of the country. His brothers are Moodajee, who has been already mentioned in this narrative, and Bimbajee: the latter poſſeſſes little other conſequence beſides that which he derives from the credit of his family. The two other brothers have been long at variance, but by the mediation and authority of Derriaboy, the widow of Janojee, and a woman of great ſpirit and reputed ability, prevented from carrying their animoſities to violent extremes. Their being engaged in oppoſite factions of the Maratta ſtate is not a certain proof of their mutual enmity; it being (as I underſtand) a policy not uncommonly practiſed among the Marattas, for the ſame family to take different ſides in civil diſſentions, with a view to its aggrandizement. While I was at Benares the laſt year, a Vakeel from Shawbajee Boaſla arrived at that place with a Letter addreſſed to me by that Chief, and attended me in Calcutta until the month of September laſt, when he received his diſmiſſion to return to his maſter, in conſequence of orders received for that purpoſe. The purport of Shawbajee's Letter, and the verbal propoſitions made to me by his Vakeel, was to ſolicit the friendſhip and alliance of this Government; to which I have replied in ſuch terms as were moſt likely to encourage him to nearer advances if he has formed any deſigns which may make it ſtrongly his intereſt to court the friendſhip of the Company. He is deſcended from the ancient Rajahs of Sittarah. The preſent Rajah is called Ram Rajah; he has no children. It is worthy of remark, and may ſerve to convey ſome idea of the inſtability of the preſent Government of the Marattas, that it is exerciſed through two ſubſtitute gradations. The Rajah, in whoſe name all the orders of the State are iſſued, is deprived of all authority. The Paiſhwa, or Prime Miniſter, an infant of nine months old; and the actual Miniſter or Regent, who exerciſes the legal powers of both, a man deriving his authority ſolely from the combination of a few wealthy individuals. From this divided ſtate of the Maratta empire, and the intereſts and pretenſions of the ſeveral competitors for power amongſt them, great political advantages may perhaps be attained to the Company, to which the preſent united ſyſtem of the Company's eſtabliſhments in India is well calculated to contribute.

The political part conſidered.

The Board proceed to the conſideration of that part which reſpects the political ſtate of affairs in India.

Read the General Letters of laſt year to the Court of Directors, as far as relates to the Treaty of Banaras and the Rohilla expedition.

Read the Treaty of Banaras, and the Vizier's requiſition for the march of the brigade.

Read the Governor's Report on his return from Banaras.

The Governor called on for his correſpondence with the Reſident at the Vizier's Court, and Colonel Champion. He declines delivering the whole.

The Commander in Chief propoſes, that the Governor General be deſired to lay before the Board his original correſpondence with the Reſident at the Vizier's court, and with Colonel Champion, commanding the troops acting in conjunction with the army of the Vizier.

The Governor obſerves on this propoſition, that he will lay before the Board all ſuch extracts of the Reſident's and Colonel Champion's Letters as regard the conduct of public affairs; but as they may contain many things, in the courſe of a free and perſonal communication, which might not be proper for a public record, and as he believes that many of them do contain ſuch, he begs leave to decline laying the original Letters, or the whole of the correſpondence, before the Board.

The General, in reply to the Governor, offers the following for the conſideration of the Board:

In order that the Board may judge of the nature and extent of the engagements which have been contracted with Sujah Dowla, and how far they have been fulfilled by the taking of Putturgur, and by the entire reduction of the Rohilla country, and with a view to our claiming the 40 lacks of rupees ſtipulated by thoſe engagements, and conſequently, whether it will be proper to ſend an order for the immediate recal of the brigade, or to leave it there till Sujah Dowla pleaſes to ſend it back, it appears abſolutely neceſſary that the whole of Mr. N. Middleton's and Colonel Champion's correſpondence, which the late Preſident maintained with them, they being both employed on a public ſervice, ſhould be communicated to this Board; and for the reaſons above ſtated, he moves, that the Governor be deſired to lay the whole of the correſpondence with the Reſident and Colonel Champion, according to his firſt propoſal, before the Board.

The Preſident deſired to give up the whole original correſpondence.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

The majority of the Board agree in the General's propoſition, and reſolve, that the Governor be deſired to give in the Letters moved for by the General accordingly.

He diſſents.

The Governor enters his diſſent to this reſolution of the Board, for reaſons which he will deliver in writing to-morrow.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 26th October 1774.

The Governor delivers in the Minute in diſſent to the reſolution of the majority of the Board yeſterday, which he then promiſed, as follows:

The Governor's diſſent to the reſolution for his delivering up all his correſpondence with Mr. Middleton and Colonel Champion.

I diſſent from the reſolution of the Board, becauſe I do not think the whole of the correſpondence, which the Commander in Chief deſires to have laid before the Board, is neceſſary for their information; and becauſe, as I have already declared, there are ſeveral parts of Mr. Middleton's which comprehend an unreſerved and confidential communication of his opinion, and of ſuch occurrences as he judged neceſſary for my private information, entered into and carried on by him on my repeated aſſurances that I would not reveal any part of his correſpondence which might ſubject him to ill-will or inconvenience.

That I had a right to give Mr. Middleton ſuch aſſurances, at the time I delivered him his inſtructions, cannot be doubted; and it will be found perfectly conſonant to the truſt repoſed in me by the Adminiſtration. It was the condition and expreſs declaration of the Board in his appointment, that he ſhould be my official agent in the maintenance of that intercourſe with the Vizier, which the Honourable Company had committed eſpecially and ſolely to my charge, and for which I alone was reſponſible. Such were the ideas and the practice, with no exceptions which could invalidate the rule, of every Adminiſtration in Bengal, from the year 1757 to the diſſolution of the late Government; and I will venture to appeal to the Members of the laſt Council, whether they did not underſtand that I was allowed to employ the ſervices of Mr. Middleton with the latitude I have deſcribed?

If the latitude allowed to me in the exerciſe of theſe conſtitutional powers by the former Adminiſtration ſhould be deemed under the new Government too extenſive, it depends on them to retrench it. But I conceive that engagements, of whatever nature, contracted by me during that period, underſtood to be conſiſtent with the rules of the ſervice, and the powers veſted in me, can loſe no part of their obligation by a change of Government. If theſe engagements were legal, no power on earth can authorize me to violate them, much leſs ſhall I ſubmit to an ex poſt facto law of ſo ſudden formation. If they were not legal, I ſhall patiently ſubmit to the cenſure of thoſe to whom only I am accountable.

I muſt be permitted further to obſerve, that to me the whole proceedings in this buſineſs carries the air of an inquiſition into my perſonal conduct in my negociations with the Vizier. After having ſolemnly declared to the Board, that I would lay before them every part of the correſpondence required which could give any information upon public affairs, without waiting for this communication, without knowing whether it would furniſh them with every light that could be deſired, or whether any chaſm would be found in the intelligence for want of the reſt of the correſpondence, they arbitrarily reſolve, that I ſhould expoſe to them all the minutiæ of a confidential correſpondence, and betray into public record the unreſerved opinions of a young man, hazarded only on the moſt ſacred aſſurances of ſecrecy from the only perſon to whom he looked upon himſelf as accountable in that immediate duty. I muſt declare, that I regard this as prejudging a matter not yet completely laid before the Board, merely to convey a cenſure on my former Adminiſtration in the branch of correſpondence with the foreign Powers, and to introduce the change propoſed with every circumſtance of mortification to me.

I will conclude with a few words, which I think neceſſary, reſpecting Mr. Middleton, for obviating any conſtruction to his prejudice, which may be drawn from what I have ſaid of the ſecret nature of part of his correſpondence. I therefore now declare, that I never either expected or received from him any information reſpecting individuals which the ſtricteſt honour could not juſtify; nor has he ever conveyed to me an opinion, or a word, reflecting upon the character of any Gentleman in the ſervice, unleſs the Letters which I ſhall lay before the Board ſhall be conſtrued to have ſuch tendency. As to the reſt, I am certain that the whole of Mr. Middleton's management, including even his moſt ſecret and confidential correſpondence, whenever it ſhall be publicly known, will reflect honour both on his principles and abilities, and recommend him to the notice of his Employers in a manner that will be favourable to himſelf, and do credit to me in the choice I made of him.

I have now formally to acquaint the Board, that all the official Letters of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, and ſuch parts even of his private correſpondence as I can with propriety ſhew, ſhall be laid before them. A copy alſo ſhall be delivered of my Letters addreſſed to him, in which I ſhall obſerve the ſame reſervation.

All Colonel Champion's official Letters ſhall be laid before the Board, with copies of mine to him, if required; but ſuch as have paſſed between us of a familiar and friendly communication, I do not think myſelf authorized to produce, becauſe they were written only for our mutual information; and his are expreſsly marked with a diſtinct mode of addreſs for thoſe which are intended for official, and for thoſe which he intended as confidential. I am the more obſervant of this rule towards Colonel Champion, becauſe our correſpondence has not been altogether cordial on many points, and we have ſeveral times expoſtulated with each other on theſe topics with the freedom of private friends, and in a ſtyle, which, though decent in every degree, is yet different perhaps from the formal addreſſes of official correſpondence.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

The General thinks it proper to proteſt againſt the Governor's refuſal to deliver up the whole of the correſpondence, and will deliver his reaſons in a Minute to-morrow.

The General, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, proteſt.

Colonel Monſon the ſame.

And Mr. Francis the ſame.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, the 28th October 1774.

The Governor, in conformity to his declaration in the Minute which he entered on the laſt Conſultation, now lays before the Board the ſeveral original Letters from Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton to him, and copies of his Letters to the latter; and he acquaints the Board, that copies of his Letters to the former of theſe Gentlemen are preparing, and ſhall be alſo laid before them.

The Correſpondence laid before the Board.

Ordered, That all the abovementioned Letters be entered in a book apart, in regular order, to be tranſmitted as cuſtomary to the Court of Directors.

The General, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, now deliver in the following Proteſt againſt the Governor's refuſal to give up the whole of his Correſpondence with Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton, agreeable to their intimation at the laſt meeting.

Our reaſons for proteſting as we now do, againſt the Governor General's refuſal to communicate to this Board the whole of his original correſpondence with the Company's Reſident at the Vizier's Durbar, and with the Commander in Chief of the Company's forces employed in the expedition againſt the Rohillas, are founded upon

thoſe

thoſe which induced us to concur in the motion made by General Clavering, and approved of by a majority of the Board, for obtaining a communication of the above correſpondence. We beg leave to ſtate thoſe reaſons to the Board.

Upon our arrival at Fort William, the firſt material intelligence that came before us concerning the ſtate of the Company's affairs, was, that one-third of their military force was actually employed under the command of Sujah Dowla, not in defending his territories againſt invaſion, but in aſſiſting him to ſubdue an independent ſtate, and uniting it to his own dominions. Enquiring farther into facts, and examining the Proceedings of the late Preſident and Council, as far as the ſhortneſs of the time, and immediate preſſure of other buſineſs would permit us, we found, that the reduction of the Rohillas was completed, and that our army, about the beginning of this month, was ſtationed upon the ſkirts of the mountains of Tibet, at a place ſo diſtant from our frontier, and ſo conſiderably to the north of Delhi, that it is not comprehended in any of the ordinary maps of Indoſtan. We ſhall not now enter into the political arguments by which ſuch a meaſure may be arraigned or defended; it is ſufficient for the purpoſe of the preſent Proteſt, that the meaſure itſelf carries upon the face of it a manifeſt violation of all thoſe principles of policy, which we know have been eſtabliſhed by the higheſt authority, and, till now, univerſally admitted (even by the late Preſident and Council themſelves) as the baſis of the Company's Councils in the adminiſtration of their affairs in India. Involved, therefore, in this contradiction between facts and principles, and foreſeeing the immediate neceſſity to which we might be reduced, of adopting or departing from the political ſyſtem in which the late Preſident and Council have engaged the Company, we thought it our duty to enquire minutely into every tranſaction, record, correſpondence, or other document, which had relation to that ſyſtem. From that enquiry, and from the information laid before us by the Governor General, it appears, that the aſſiſtance now given to Sujah Dowla is not founded upon any ſpecific treaty between him and the Company; that it ariſes from a verbal agreement only, which the late Preſident entered into with him at their conference at Banares. That with reſpect to the terms of the agreement, the only authority to which either party can appeal, is contained in a Letter from the Vizier to the late Preſident; and that the active meaſures, which have followed from that agreement, were adopted by the late Council with the greateſt reluctance. In this ſituation, other lights into the nature of the negociations and engagements with Sujah Dowla, beyond any that we have yet received, are undoubtedly neceſſary to direct our judgment. We think a complete communication of the original correſpondence between the late Preſident and the Company's Reſident at the Durbar, and the Commander in Chief of the Company's troops now in the field, indiſpenſably requiſite for the information of the Board. The Governor General has declined laying before us that complete correſpondence, for reaſons which do not appear to us to be ſatisfactory. The Court of Directors, in their Letter of the 23d March 1770, have laid down a poſitive rule concerning the Governor's ſeparate correſpondence, which evidently applies to the preſent caſe. It is therein ordered, that "The Governor "ſingly ſhall correſpond with the Country Powers; but "all Letters, before they ſhall be by him ſent, muſt be "communicated to the other Members of the Select "Committee, and receive their approbation; and alſo "all Letters whatever which may be received by the "Governor, in anſwer to, or in the courſe of his corre-"ſpondence, ſhall likewiſe be laid before the ſaid Select "Committee, for their information and conſideration." Beſides this particular order of the Court of Directors, which we are bound to conſider as a ſtanding inſtruction to the Board, we think it inconſiſtent with the general principles of a free Government, that the Chief of any Council ſhall carry on a ſecret correſpondence with the Miniſters or Officers of the Government independent of the Council; and much more that he ſhould be at liberty to refuſe to the Council a communication of that correſpondence, when requeſted by them. It is a kind of truſt which, in our judgment, cannot with ſafety be veſted in any individual. It tends to convert a public Miniſter and Officer, employed and paid by the State, into a private agent, which in fact the preſent Reſident at the Vizier's Court is deſcribed to be, not only by the Governor General himſelf in the courſe of our debates on this ſubject, but by his Minute delivered in to the Board on the 26th inſtant, and by the Select Committee in their Letter to Colonel Champion, dated the 23d May 1774. It tends to leſſen the dignity of the Board, and to render the appointment of the preſent Governor General and Council unneceſſary. For theſe and other weighty reaſons, it appears to us, that we ſhould not acquit ourſelves of the duty which we owe to the Honourable Court of Directors and to the Eaſt India Company, if we did not ſolemnly proteſt againſt the Governor General's conduct in refuſing the communication requeſted of him by the Board, as a refuſal not founded upon right; and againſt all the conſequences which may attend our not being furniſhed by him with ſufficient lights to inform and direct us at the outſet of our adminiſtration.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 26th October 1774.

Colonel Monſon propoſes the following Queſtion to the Board:

"Whether or not Mr. Middleton ſhould be con-"tinued Reſident at the Court of the Vizier, "the Governor having refuſed to lay before the "Board the whole of his correſpondence?" Q. If Mr. Middleton ſhall be withdrawn?

This queſtion being accordingly put; Mr. Francis thinks that he ſhould not be continued.

Mr. Barwell thinks that it would be improper to remove him at this juncture.

Colonel Monſon thinks that Mr. Middleton ſhould not be continued there.

The Commander in Chief alſo thinks that he ought not to be continued.

The Governor objects to the removal of Mr. Middleton.

Reſolved, by the majority of the Board, That Mr. Nathaniel Middleton be not continued Reſident at the Vizier's Court. Reſolved by the majority.

The Governor enters the following Diſſent to this Reſolution.—I diſſent from the Reſolution of the majority of the Board for the diſmiſſion of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton from his employment; and I hereby enter my ſolemn Proteſt againſt all the conſequences of ſo violent a meaſure, which proclaims to all the Powers of Hindoſtan, in almoſt the firſt public act of the new Adminiſtration, the total abolition of the authority which they have hitherto ſeen exerciſed by me; either in perſon, or through my official agent, as the firſt and executive Member of the Government of Bengal; an authority which has been confirmed to me by an Act of the Britiſh Legiſlature, and eſpecially aſſigned me by the Inſtructions of the Honourable the Court of Directors, in the Clauſe appointing me the ſole channel of correſpondence with the Princes and Powers of India. The Governor's Diſſent.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

The Commander in Chief propoſes, that Mr. Middleton be immediately ordered to repair to the Preſidency, and directed to bring down with him the whole of his correſpondence during his reſidence at the Court of the Vizier, and to order Mr. Grady to come down with the Q. If Mr. Middleton ſhall be ordered down with his correſpondence.

money he has received from Sujah Dowla, on account of the second payment ſtipulated in the Treaty of Banares; and if he has not already received any, to come away without waiting further.

Mr. Francis agrees to both parts of the General's propoſal.

Mr. Barwell delivers his opinion as follows:

As the majority of the Board have reſolved to call on the Governor for his original correſpondence, and do not leave him to be the judge of what is only material for the Board's information, the natural reſult is, the call now made upon Mr. Middleton. I think, as I before delivered my ſentiments, that this ſhould be declined; for I cannot imagine that a private correſpondence, for ſuch I deem all that has not immediate relation to public affairs, can be of the leaſt utility in judging the ſubject before us.

Colonel Monſon agrees to the General's propoſal in both parts.

The Governor objects to the laſt part of the propoſal, becauſe it ſeems to imply, that Mr. Middleton ſhould bring the whole of his correſpondence with him, public and private; the laſt of which he conceives the Board can have no right to demand from him, or any perſon.

Ordered by the majority.

Reſolved, by the majority of the Board, That Mr. Nathaniel Middleton be ordered down to the Preſidency, and directed to bring the whole of his correſpondence with him.

Ordered therefore, That the Secretary diſpatch to him the following Letter:

Letter to Mr. N. Middleton.

To Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, Reſident at the Vizier's Court.

Sir,

The honourable the Governor General and Council having judged it expedient to withdraw you from the Vizier's Court, I am directed to ſignify to you their commands, that you repair immediately to the Preſidency, bringing with you the whole of your correſpondence during your reſidence there; and that you alſo order Mr. Grady thither directly with the money which he may have received at Fyzabad, in conſequence of the charge you entruſted him with.

You are, on taking leave of the Vizier, to acquaint him, that your departure will not interrupt the courſe of this Government with him; and that Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the brigade, will in the meantime be charged with any negociations which you may leave unfiniſhed with him. And you will accordingly leave in writing with Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer, a ſtate of the ſeveral ſums due to the Company by the Vizier in conſequence of his different engagements, the payments he may have made in diſcharge of them, and the balances which remain due, and, in general, all the papers and documents relating to your pecuniary tranſactions with him, that the ſaid Officer may be enabled to liquidate theſe accounts as ſoon as poſſible.

Fort William, We are, &c.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 26th October 1774.

Q. If the Commander of the Army ſhall treat with the Vizier.

It being reſolved to recal Mr. Middleton, the Commander in Chief propoſes that Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the brigade, be appointed to treat with Sujah Dowla in the room of Mr. Middleton.

Mr. Francis agrees to this propoſal.

Mr. Barwell thinks, that in conſequence of the recal of Mr. Middleton, the neceſſity of an appointment in his room in the preſent juncture is obvious; but he never obſerved in any general propoſition of this nature that it involved the nomination of a particular perſon; and he has many reaſons for objecting to our political affairs with the Aſiatic Princes being carried on through a military medium. For this reaſon, and in conſequence of the precedent before the Board, Mr. Barwell declares he muſt propoſe a Civil Servant of the Company to this charge, though he will not venture to name any particular perſon, leaving that to the Governor, as has been cuſtomary hitherto.

Colonel Monſon agrees to the General's propoſal.

The Governor objects againſt appointing the Military Commander.

Reſolved, by the majority, according to the General's propoſal, that the commanding officer of the army in the field be appointed to treat with the Vizier in the room of Mr. N. Middleton. Reſolved by the majority.

The Governor judges it proper to enter the following Diſſent and Proteſt againſt this appointment.

The Governor's Diſſent.

I diſſent from this Reſolution, and proteſt againſt the conſequences which may attend it; becauſe it cuts off all communication between Government and the Vizier, but through the channel of the Commander of the Army, which is contrary to the article of the Company's inſtructions; becauſe it gives the Commander of the Army the power of deciding in all caſes of difference between himſelf and the Vizier; and by ſo declared a proof of the prevalence of the military influence, inevitably tends to diſſolve the alliance between the Company and the Vizier, who can hope for no redreſs from an appeal to the Government, and muſt therefore either ſubmiſſively acquieſce in every act of the Military Commander, however violent, or ſeek for a remedy in other alliances.

By the ſyſtem hitherto eſtabliſhed, the controul of the Board has been ſufficient to reſtrain the power of the Military Commander from every dangerous exceſs, had he been diſpoſed to make that ill uſe of it; and the Vizier was freed from every apprehenſion of the kind by his reliance on the interpoſition of the Governor, to whom he had an immediate appeal. To whomſoever this dangerous truſt may be delegated, which is now given to the Officer who may chance to be in the command at the time that the orders of the Council may reach the army, I declare that I cannot, conſiſtently with my duty, admit his advices as authentic; ſince it is his intereſt to conceal from the knowledge of the Council every circumſtance and tranſaction which, if known, might ſubject his conduct to blame, or oppoſe any deſign which his ambition, his intereſt, or prejudices might dictate.

The Board have been pleaſed to compliment me with the nomination of the perſon who ſhould ſucceed Mr. Nathaniel Middleton in his office, and I have declined it, becauſe I foreſaw in his removal the reſolution to throw all power and truſt into the hands of the Military Commander. The propoſal was actually made to this effect before the intimation of any reference to my choice; and with ſo recent an inſtance of my own Agent recalled, without a ſingle proof or ſuſpicion alledged of his miſconduct, I did not chuſe to expoſe any other perſon whom I ſhould recommend, to the hazard of ſuffering the ſame cauſeleſs diſgrace.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

The Governor requeſted to write to the Vizier.

Reſolved, That the Governor General be deſired to write to the Vizier, acquainting him of the new Government having taken place, of Mr. Middleton's recal from his Court, and of the appointment of the Commanding Officer of the brigade in the interim to treat with him in the room of Mr. Middleton.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 28th October 1774.

The General propoſes queſtions.

The General propoſes the following queſtions for the deliberation of the Board:

1. That the demand for the forty lacks from the Vizier be repeated, and that Colonel Champion, or the officer commanding the ſecond brigade, be inſtructed to that effect.

2. That the Colonel, or Commanding Officer, be alſo inſtructed to make a demand for ſuch further payments as may be due from the Vizier on receiving theſe inſtructions, and to liquidate whatever accounts may be unſettled with him at the time.

3. That he be further inſtructed, that although he is to make an immediate demand for the whole 40 laeks, and for ſuch other payments as may be due at that time, yet, if he finds that it is impoſſible for the Vizier to comply with the whole of theſe demands, he is to receive what can be allowed in ready money, and ſettle a Kiſtbundee with him for the remainder. The ſum to be received in ready money not to be leſs than twenty lacks, and the reſt to be payable at different periods within twelve months.

4. That the Colonel or Commanding Officer be further inſtructed, that in caſe the Vizier ſhould refuſe to comply with theſe demands, he is to enter a Proteſt againſt him, declaring that the Company have fulfilled all their engagements with him; and within 14 days after the receipt of theſe inſtructions, to retire with the army under his command, and withdraw it into the Company's territories.

5. That further orders be ſent to Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the brigade, that after having finiſhed the negociations for the money now due, he do immediately withdraw the whole of the forces under his command within the limits of the province of Oude; and that unleſs the Vizier ſhould require the continuance of the troops for the defence of his original dominions, with the provinces of Corah and Illahabad, he return with them to the cantonments at Dinapore.

6. That Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer, on quitting the Vizier, ſhall acquaint him, that the Governor General and Council propoſe to appoint a perſon to reſide at his Court; and to declare, that they mean to adhere ſtrictly to the Treaties of Illahabad and Benares, till the pleaſure of the Court of Directors regarding the latter be known.

7. That he be further inſtructed, that if he ſhould apprehend any difficulty or danger in his retreat, that then he ſhould ſuſpend his declaration, and take the beſt means in his power for the preſervation of the army, and adviſe the Board immediately of his ſituation.

To be conſidered and determined next Council day.

Ordered, That each individual Member of the Board be furniſhed with a copy of theſe Propoſitions, in order to conſider of them; and,

Agreed, That the Board come to a determination upon them at the next meeting.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 31 October 1774.

The General's Propoſitions conſidered.

Reſumed the conſideration of the General's propoſals of the 28th inſtant.

The Governor and Mr. Barwell give in the following Minutes in reply to the whole, which are now read.

Replies to the Queſtions propoſed by the General.

The Governor's Minute on them.

1. The Letters received from Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, ſince the laſt meeting of the Council, have removed every plea of neceſſity for enforcing this demand; becauſe it appears from thoſe advices that the Vizier has already declared his acquieſcence in it. As far therefore as this queſtion goes, the purpoſe of it has already taken effect.

2. This I agree to.

3. To this alſo I agree.

4. I diſapprove of this article. The abrupt removal of the brigade by the firſt act of Adminiſtration, will be publicly regarded, and will actually be a declaration that our engagements with the Vizier no longer exiſt. It may be urged that the money is juſtly due from the Vizier, and that therefore if he delays to pay it, the breach of engagement will be on his ſide, not on ours. But ſuch a rigid diſtatorial ſeverity is very contrary to the delicacy required by the Court of Directors in all our tranſactions with the Vizier; and, by impreſſing him with an opinion that we are no longer diſpoſed to befriend him, tends to the diſſolution of our alliance, the maintenance of which they enjoin in all their Letters on the ſubject in the moſt expliicit and peremptory terms.

I therefore propoſe this amendment to the queſtion; That inſtead of retiring with the army within ſo ſhort a ſpace as 14 days, the Commanding Officer be inſtructed, that if the Vizier ſhall propoſe other terms of payment, ſtill allowing the Company's right to an immediate acquittal of his engagements, the Commanding Officer do tranſmit his reply to the Board, and wait their reſolution, either for accepting theſe terms, or for offering ultimate conditions, or for withdrawing the army without further delay.—The difference of time between the effect of this order and that propoſed by the General, will not probably be more than thirty days; and there can be no cauſe ſo urgent as to require the removal of the brigade preciſely within the ſhort time allowed by the queſtion, which precludes every interpoſition of the Council; whereas, by extending it to the period which I have recommended, that interpoſition is reſerved to the Board, and may prevent the moſt fatal conſequences.

5. This I totally diſapprove, as a breach of faith, which would inflict an indelible diſhonour on the Engliſh name. It is true, that the cuſtomary forms of a Treaty have not been executed for the engagements on which the late expedition againſt the Rohillas was undertaken; but they have received every form that can be morally binding both on the Vizier and on the Company. The undertaking was propoſed by him; the mutual conditions, on which the Company were to aſſiſt in it, were propoſed by the late Adminiſtration in the draft of a Letter which was to be written by him. It was accordingly tranſcribed in a Letter from the Vizier, without any material variation, and his Letter was accepted. What more can be required to give ſuch an engagement the ſanction of the moſt ſolemn Treaty? if more is wanting, the acceptance of the advantages ſtipulated for the Company muſt undeniably complete it; yet it is now propoſed to demand every rupee which ſhall be due from the Vizier in virtue of his engagements to the Company, and the next inſtant to abandon him, although the entire loſs of the conqueſt ſo lately acquired, even the completion of which remained doubtful when the queſtion was propoſed, may be the immediate conſequence of our deſertion. The only reaſon which I have heard alledged, or can conjecture for ſuch a meaſure, is, the danger attending the continuance of the brigade in ſo remote a ſtation. To this the reply is obvious. The moſt diſtant part of the Rohilla country is not above 14 days march from the frontier of the Vizier's dominions; and can the advantage gained by ſo ſmall a diſtance be conſidered of ſuch vaſt importance, that the national faith ſhould be violated to acquire it? but the conſequences do not ſtop here; the Vizier will moſt aſſuredly conſider his own engagements as cancelled by ſuch an example, and will be juſtified in demanding the reſtitution of the money which he has paid in the diſcharge of them, and in withholding that which will ſtill remain unpaid. Thus the moſt ſolemn acts of public faith will be annihilated; the alliance of the Vizier either wholly loſt, or left on the dangerous foundation of occaſional conveniency; the whole amount of the Vizier's debt, which was not inſtantly diſcharged, either wholly ſacrificed, or to be redeemed by open violence, for no other purpoſe, than to bring the brigade, which is not wanted for the defence of our own provinces, to the diſtance of 150 miles, or poſſibly but a hundred, from the ſtation in which its ſervices may be requiſite for confirming to the Vizier the poſſeſſion which it has already acquired for him. I oppoſe the queſtion therefore, becauſe no poſſible advantage can be derived from it; becauſe it is injurious to the national honour; and becauſe it is hazardous of the preſent intereſt and future ſafety of the Company. It will add to the liſt of the acts of the new Government, which are calculated to throw an odium on the measures of the last Administration, and to proclaim the new influence which governs the present; and, with whatever intention the order may be promulgated, I am firmly persuaded that it will be construed by the Vizier, and by all the Country Powers, who will all be spectators of its effects, as proceeding solely from these motives.

6. I agree to this question, except the last clause, which I am of opinion ought to be omitted; because it is both unnecessary and dangerous to furnish the Vizier with a suspicion, that the Treaty ratified with him is not valid, and may be cancelled. It is the duty of this Government to conform to the Treaty. If the Company should disapprove of it, and, in consequence of that disapproval, order it to be cancelled, which I will not allow myself to suppose, it will be time enough then to inform him of it.

7. I see no reason for forming cases of danger which are by no means likely to happen. The plea of necessity will justify the commander of the army in taking the best means in his power for its preservation, if it should be in real danger; but to declare an opinion in this Board, that such danger is apprehended from the perfidy or violence of the Vizier, is to sow the seeds of jealousy and apprehension in his breast, and, by the natural effects of such an impression, to bring on the event which it is intended by this order to obviate.

(Signed) Warren Hastings.

Mr. Barwell replies to the General's Propositions.

Mr. Barwell's Minute on the Propositions.

1. The first question appears to imply, that the demand had been remitted for a time, and that such remission rendered it necessary to instruct Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the brigade, to repeat the demand for the forty lacks due from the Vizier. The formal requisition already made in the name of the Government evinces nothing has been left undone, either in point of making the demand, or of obtaining attention to it. The Letters from the Vizier and our Resident at his Court, plainly inform us it is in a proper train of liquidation; but as it has been determined to remove the public Agent of the former Government, and to appoint the Military Commander to execute the trust that was reposed in that Agent, I think it but proper he should be directed to the effect mentioned in the first and second Proposition.

I approve of the latitude given by this Proposition to the public Agent, because the pressing the Nabob Vizier beyond his ability could not be attended with any good consequences, and might be productive of the worst. What can be obtained under the Vizier's present circumstances may, by the latitude given, be secured; to insist on more would only compel him to refuse what he has to offer, and, with the best intentions of answering his engagements, oblige him to reply to our demands in a manner that may be dictated from a full persuasion of his utter inability to comply with the requisitions of the English Government.

It is not possible the Vizier should refuse compliance with a claim to which he has already acquiesced in the most express terms. The Letters are before the Board that intimate this acquiescence; I must therefore express my concern to find a suspicion entertained of the rectitude of the intention of our Ally. Where no equivocal conduct gives a ground for imputation, diffidence produces diffidence; and should once an idea strike the Vizier, that he is suspected by our Government of falling off from his engagements, he will naturally be led to form opinions not the most advantageous to that cordial amity, which it has been the aim of the late Administration to establish. And should he know that our forces are to be withdrawn, and on no consideration to be employed in giving permanency to the acquisitions he has made (acquisitions unstable in their very nature, whilst the least repugnance may remain to his Government) he will naturally conceive the means he is possessed of to answer his engagements insecure, and he will of course be backward in answering those engagements; nor will it give him any high idea of the views of the British Government, which he has been taught confidently to believe, in this particular, coincide with his, to perceive that they are directed solely to his treasury, instead of the reputation and pre-eminence he with just reason expected to derive from our alliance, and the concessions made by him to obtain it. And as I cannot but look on the domain lately acquired by the Vizier as a part of his own territory, being obtained through the immediate countenance and assistance of the late Administration, I think the preserving to him the possession of it as much an obligation upon the present Government, as the securing to him any other part of his dominions, and to be equally within the spirit of the Defensive Treaty as if it had been specifically named therein. For these reasons, I cannot give my assent to the Proposition for the withdrawing the troops into the Company's territories, whilst there exists not the most remote pretence of their being wanted for our own defence, and he shall require their presence or influence in settling his late conquests. I confine this opinion merely to the acquisition of such territory as is obtained by him through our direct mediation, not to be extended to projects of ambition he shall form and carry into execution without the participation of the English Government; but to the present acquisition, to which we have granted our aid, we undoubtedly stand as guarantees.

5th. By this Proposition the troops may be kept in the Vizier's paternal territories; I cannot therefore see a reason why they should be debarred acting, if necessary, in securing to him his late acquisition. A bar to this will naturally convey to his mind a reprobation of the measures the late Government adopted in his favour, and that the present is averse to the advantages which have flowed to him from such a spring. But this is a favourable and tender construction of the light in which the Vizier may view this measure. When I place before me the following conditions extracted from the Vizier's Letter, the basis of our present engagements with him, "To employ the brigade in the reduction of the Country "of the Rohillas, which lies between my borders and "the river Ganges and the mountains, and I will not "require it to pass these boundaries. I will, according "to my agreement, pay month by month 210,000 ru-"pees for the extra expences of the brigade during the "time of its service, and forty lacks in ready money "when this service shall be concluded;" that is to say;

1st, "Whenever the whole or half of the Rohilla "country shall fall into my possession; or,

2d, "An accommodation shall have taken place with "them, and I shall dismiss the brigade.

3d, "I have the power to keep or dismiss the bri-"gade; and until such time as I think proper to dismiss "it, it shall remain with me; it shall not leave me "without my dismission."

I cannot help considering the absolute recal of the brigade from the Rohilla country as an actual breach of Treaty on our part, and, after the completion of the offensive operations of the war, defeating the consequences to be derived from it, because it may incapacitate the Vizier from fulfilling his engagements, and doubtless affords him a plea to withhold the forty lacks he has acknowledged to be due to the Company; I cannot therefore give my consent for the recal of the troops, should the Vizier think proper to detain them; and I am the more confirmed in my opinion that the troops should not be remanded, if he judges their presence necessary, as such a measure may be productive of the very evils it would seem to guard against. A country newly subjugated must for a time be uneasy under its yoke. The influence of the ancient families cannot in an instant be eradicated; eradicated; they will naturally ſeize a favourable conjuncture ſo immediately offered to re-eſtabliſh themſelves; and thus, inſtead of the Vizier being benefitted by our aid, he will have to pay our Government forty lacks of rupees, with a war entailed upon him, and we ourſelves defenſively engaged in his ſupport. Good policy therefore, even if this Government ſhould condemn the meaſures of the laſt reſpecting the Rohilla war, dictate to us to purſue a conduct calculated to obviate any poſſibility of a revolution in the ſtate the Vizier has annexed to his dominions; a revolution which, by a ſudden recal of our troops at this critical juncture, is more likely to be encouraged and precipitated than prevented.

6th. I receive this in the light of an alteration propoſed in the reſolution, that has already paſſed, to conſider the Commanding Officer as your Reſident at the Vizier's Court; and I think a new appointment will be proper; and that in obedience to the ſpirit of the ſecond Article of the Company's Inſtructions, it ſhould be veſted in the perſon of a Civil Servant, to ſhew not only oſtenſibly but effectually to the Vizier, that the correſpondence with him and the other Powers of the Country, is ſtill to be carried on by our Governor General, and that the Company's Conſtitution has in this reſpect undergone no change or innovation. The chief part of what I have ſaid in anſwer to the fourth queſtion occurs in the nature of remark upon the latter part of this Propoſition, and ſtrongly implies it cannot fail to ſhake the Vizier's confidence in the faith and powers of the Engliſh Adminiſtration. It is publiſhing by implication to the whole world, that the pleaſure of the Court may be adverſe to him, and profeſſing ourſelves to be total ſtrangers to the ſentiments of our conſtituents. This is a light in which the Company would not chuſe themſelves or their repreſentatives to be made appear to their Ally. All who we are connected with, as well as ourſelves, are ſenſible of the Conſtitution of this Government, and of its dependency; no public declaration ſhould therefore at any time be riſked, that may prove repugnant to the ſucceſs of any political views, which the ſituation or exigency of public affairs may lead the Government to embark in. For theſe reaſons I am for omitting the intimation, "until the pleaſure of the Court of Directors ſhall be known." The occaſion does not demand ſuch an intimation; and its being made on the inſtant of ſo material a change in the Government, muſt inculcate belief, that the Treaty is propoſed to be departed from.

7th. This Propoſition I think big with ill-grounded ſuſpicion, and to be of extreme bad tendency; for ſhould it, any period of time, reach the Vizier's knowledge, what muſt he think of ſuch exceſſive diſtruſt? he cannot regard it as proceeding from our cordial amity, or attribute it to the ſincerity of the profeſſions we make, of ſtrictly adhering to our alliances. The Company have uniformly pointed out the Vizier as the beſt and ſtrongeſt barrier to the ſecurity of their poſſeſſions, and poſitively directed their Government to treat him with every mark of attention, addreſs, and delicacy, to cement their alliance with him. I deem the Propoſition therefore improper, viewed in the medium I have here briefly deſcribed.—In a light of military caution, to provide for the ſafety of the brigade, it is totally unneceſſary; equally ſo from the acknowledged ſtrength of the brigade compared with that of the Vizier's force, as from the precaution which I muſt allow to every officer who ſhall be honoured with ſo important a truſt.

The Propoſitions being read, and the Queſtion being put upon each Article, they are recorded as follows, with the opinions of the Members of the Board upon them reſpectively.

The General propoſes the following queſtions:

The Board's Opinions and Reſolutions on the General's Propoſitions.

1ſt. That the demand for the 40 lacks from the Vizier be repeated, and that Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the ſecond brigade, be inſtructed to that effect.

Mr. Francis thinks no inconvenience can ariſe from repeating the demand for the forty lacks. If, when our orders are received, the money, or any conſiderable part of it, ſhould be already paid, and ſecurity given for the remainder, the commanding officer will of courſe inform us that the object of this part of our inſtructions is obtained. He cannot repeat a demand which he will know, though we do not, is already ſatisfied.

Mr. Barwell refers to his opinion above recorded.

Colonel Monſon ſees no inconvenience that can ariſe from giving this inſtruction.

The General thinks that this inſtruction ſhould be ſent, as it appears by the late Preſident's Letter to Mr. Middleton, of the 17th September, that he had approved of ſuſpending the demand of payment from the Vizier (he having acknowledged the right) till the conqueſt of the Rohilla country was completed; and as Fyzoolla Cawn has now ſettled a Treaty, it appears the proper time for repeating the demand.

The Governor refers to the ſentiments delivered in his Minute above entered.

Reſolved, That the firſt propoſal be agreed to.

2d. That the Colonel, or Commanding Officer, be alſo inſtructed to make a demand for ſuch further payments as may be due from the Vizier on receiving theſe inſtructions, and to liquidate whatever accounts may be unſettled with him at that time.

Reſolved, That this propoſal be alſo agreed to.

3d. That he be further inſtructed, that although he is to make an immediate demand for the whole forty lacks, and for ſuch other payments as may be due at that time, yet if he finds that it is impoſſible for the Vizier to comply with the whole of theſe demands, he is to receive what can be obtained in ready money, and ſettle a kiſtbundee with him for the remainder; the ſum to be received in ready money not to be leſs than twenty lacks, and the reſt to be payable at different periods within twelve months.

Reſolved, That this propoſal be agreed to.

4th. That the Colonel, or Commanding Officer be further inſtructed, that in caſe the Vizier ſhall refuſe to comply with theſe demands, he is to enter a Proteſt againſt him, declaring that the Company have fulfilled all their engagements with him, and, within fourteen days after the receipt of theſe inſtructions,

Mr. Francis is not for extending the period beyond the term of the fourteen days propoſed by the General; and informs the Board that he means to give in ſome obſervations in writing on what has been urged by the Governor and Mr. Barwell.

Mr. Barwell's opinion is above. See his Minute.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

ſtructions, to retire with the army under his command, and withdraw it into the Company's territories.

Colonel Monſon.—" I am of opinion that the Colonel or " Commanding Officer ſhould withdraw the army within the " time limited in the Propoſition; and I am further induced " to be of this opinion, from the poſitive and repeated orders " of the Court of Directors to their ſervants in India, not to " enter into offenſive wars, and alſo from their laſt inſtruction, " whereby they are directed to fix their attention to the pre- " ſervation of peace throughout India.—The Directors in- " ſtructions ſhall be the invariable rule of my conduct."

General Clavering.—" I am of opinion that the Propoſi- " tion ſhould be agreed to, as well to ſecure the army as the " payment of the forty lacks, on account of the faithleſs " character of the Vizier, who is thus deſcribed in Mr. " Middleton's Letter to the Preſident of the 20th of September " laſt: " I have experienced much duplicity, evaſion, and " deceit, in moſt of my tranſactions with his Excellency."

The Governor's opinion is above ſtated in his Minute.

Reſolved, by the majority of the Board, That the Inſtructions ſtand according to this Propoſition.

5th. That further orders be ſent to Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the brigade, that after having finiſhed the negociations for the money now due, he do immediately withdraw the whole of the forces under his command within the limits of the province of Oude; and that, unleſs the Vizier ſhould require the continuance of the troops for the defence of his original dominions, with the provinces of Corah and Illahabad, he return with them to the cantonments of Dinapore.

Mr. Francis ſees no objection to the inſtruction propoſed; he therefore aſſents to it; but means to give in ſome animadverſions on what has been urged by the Governor and Mr. Barwell.

Mr. Barwell. (See his Minute above entered.)

Colonel Monſon is for the Propoſition as it now ſtands, it being conſiſtent with the late Treaty of Benares, as well as that of Illahabad, and not in the leaſt derogatory to national faith.

The General agrees to this Propoſition; but intimates his intention to enter ſome obſervations on the Governor General's and Mr. Barwell's opinions.

The Governor's opinion is ſtated in Minute above.

Reſolved, by the majority of the Board, That the Inſtruction be made out conformable to this Propoſition.

6th. That Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer, on quitting the Vizier, ſhall acquaint him, that the Governor General and Council propoſe to appoint a perſon to reſide at his Court; and to declare, that they mean to adhere ſtrictly to the Treaties of Illahabad and Benares, till the pleaſure of the Court of Directors, regarding the latter, be known.

Mr. Francis.—I underſtand the appointment of the Commanding Officer to treat with the Vizier to be temporary, and to have relation to the ſingle object of liquidating the accounts between him and the Company. Whenever it ſhall be thought proper to appoint a permanent Reſident at the Court of the Vizier, I think a Civil Servant ſhould be appointed. With regard to the latter part of the Propoſition, I yield to the reaſons given by the Governor General and Mr. Barwell; and think that the intimation conveyed in the words, till the pleaſure of the Court of Directors regarding the latter be known, ſhould not be made to the Vizier.

Mr. Barwell. (See his Minute above.)

Colonel Monſon.—" I am of opinion to agree in the firſt part of this Propoſition; but would have it underſtood, that the appointment of the Commanding Officer is only temporary, and for the purpoſes of making the demand of the 40 lacks, and liquidating the other ſums due from the Vizier; and that a Civil Servant ſhould be appointed to reſide at the Vizier's Court when ſuch an appointment ſhall be thought neceſſary. With regard to the latter part of the inſtruction in the Propoſition, I think it would be better to poſtpone it till we hear from the Court of Directors."

General Clavering.—" As I made the Propoſition, I can affirm, that my intention in propoſing that Colonel Champion, or the actual Commanding Officer of the army, ſhould be appointed, was only to liquidate the accounts during the fourteen days which he was limited to remain with the Vizier, and that I never thought of ſending any other perſon to reſide with him but a Civil Servant; and my reaſon for mentioning the Treaties of Illahabad and Benares was, that I wiſhed to diſtinguiſh ſolemn Treaties, ratified in form, from a mere verbal engagement, the tenor of which is only known by the Vizier's Letter; and the terms, both as to the object and the time, entirely indefinite; and therefore I deſire the propoſition may ſtand as it is."

The Governor. (See his Minute above entered.)

Reſolved, by the majority, That the propoſition ſtand as it is, only leaving out theſe words at the end, " till " the pleaſure of the Court of Directors regarding the latter be known."

7th. That he be further inſtructed, that if he ſhould apprehend any difficulty or danger in his retreat,

Mr. Francis delivers his opinion as follows: The idea of the danger and difficulty of a retreat, which are ſuppoſed poſſible treat, that then he ſhould ſuſpend his declaration, and take the beſt means in his power for the preſervation of the army, and adviſe the Board immediately of his ſituation.

poſſible in this Article, is not expreſsly directed againſt the Vizier; ſuch difficulty and danger may ariſe from other cauſes. So far as the Vizier may be underſtood to be concerned, I think the order proper. If the Commanding Officer ſhould apprehend that his retreat may be interrupted, he is to ſuſpend the declaration of his intention to withdraw.—As for the reſt, I do not think that any opinions which may ariſe in the Vizier's mind from his conſtruction of an order which ought not, and probably will never come to his knowledge, are to be put in competition with the ſafety of one-third of our army. That the Vizier ſhould be even ſuppoſed to know the ſecrets of our conſultations or orders, argues a breach of truſt and fidelity in ſome of our miniſterial officers, which, without particular charge and proof, I cannot admit as an argument in our deliberations.

APPENDIX No. 45.

Mr. Barwell. (See his Minute above.)

Colonel Monſon.—I am for this Propoſition as it ſtands, not ſuppoſing that the Vizier will ever become acquainted with the deliberations or operations of this Board; and I think the caution to the Commanding Officer of the army to be abſolutely neceſſary.

General Clavering.—I am likewiſe for the Propoſition as it now ſtands; becauſe this inſtruction is to convey a diſcretionary ſecret order to the Commander of the army, for the preſervation of the troops employed at ſuch a diſtance from this Country, that it is acknowledged that the Sepoys, who are not tranſported by water carriage, will be two months before they can reach the frontiers of Bahar; and I think, that Government would not be juſtified, either to their King, their Country, or the India Company, if they did not take every precaution againſt the perfidy of a man, who has dared to preſcribe ſuch inſulting conditions to the late Preſident, as to ſay, "I am the maſter in theſe affairs, "and the power of retaining or diſmiſſing the Engliſh army "is mine; it ſhall remain preſent with me; and without my "diſmiſſion, the Engliſh army never, never ſhall go."

Reſolved, by the majority, That this Propoſition ſtand as it is.

Mr. Francis moves, That in addition to the Articles already agreed on, the Commanding Officer be directed to execute the inſtructions contained in this Letter, with as much reſpect to the Vizier in his addreſſes to him, and in as amicable terms as poſſible, conſiſtenly with an exact and firm execution of our preſent orders.

Mr. Barwell obſerves, that he would rather wiſh to take the terms from the heads of a Letter which the General offered to the Board when he firſt introduced this ſubject.

The General acquaints the Board, that if he had with him the heads of the Letter alluded to, he would undoubtedly deliver them in; but as Mr. Francis, in his motion, as near as he can recollect, has included what he offered in the heads of the Letter, he agrees to Mr. Francis's motion.

Agreed to the above motion of Mr. Francis.

Reſolved, That the following Letter be written and diſpatched to Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the ſecond brigade:

To Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the ſecond Brigade.

Sir,

This accompanies a duplicate of our laſt. We are now to acquaint you, that we have thought proper to recal to the Preſidency Mr. Middleton, the Reſident at the Vizier's Court, and have directed him to deliver over to you whatever documents, accounts, or papers, he may have in his hands relating to the Vizier's pecuniary engagements with the Company. As we have further determined to charge you with the negociations reſpecting theſe engagements, and the conſequent payments due to the Company from the Vizier, we proceed to give you ſuch inſtructions for your guidance, as we judge expedient on the occaſion.

You will, then, immediately on the receipt of this Letter, wait on the Vizier, and in the moſt decent and reſpectful terms repeat the demand which has been already made to him of the 40 lacks of rupees due to the Company, on account of their aſſiſtance in the reduction of the Rohilla country, agreeable to his ſtipulations.

You are at the ſame time to demand of him the payment of ſuch other ſums as may then have become due in virtue of his other engagements; and you are hereby empowered to liquidate all accounts which may then remain unſettled between the Company and him.

Although you are thus inſtructed to make an immediate demand on the Vizier for the whole of the 40 lacks, and for ſuch other payments as may be due at that time; yet, if you find that it is impoſſible for him to comply with the whole of theſe demands, you are hereby directed to receive from him what he may offer in ready money, provided it is not leſs than 20 lacks, and to ſettle a kiſtbundee with him for the remainder, payable at different periods within twelve months, as the longeſt term.

In caſe he ſhall refuſe to comply with the above demands, you are then to enter a formal Proteſt againſt him for the failure of his engagements, containing a declaration that the Company have fulfilled theirs with him; and, within 14 days from the receipt of theſe inſtructions, you are to retire with the army under your command, and withdraw it into the Company's territories.

But in caſe you ſhould be able to finiſh theſe negociations with the Vizier in the manner preſcribed, you are then only to withdraw the army within the limits of the province of Oude, and continue with them there, if he ſhould require it, for the defence of his original dominions, with the provinces of Corah and Illahabad; but, but, if he ſhould not make ſuch a requiſition, you are then to return with the whole of the forces under your command to the cantonment of Dinapore.

At any rate, in quitting the Vizier, you are to acquaint him that the Governor General and Council propoſe to appoint a perſon to reſide at his Court; and to declare, that they mean ſtrictly to adhere to the Treaties of Illahabad and Benares.

If you ſhould apprehend any difficulty or danger to the troops in their retreat, in caſe of your departure, on the firſt ſuppoſition of the Vizier's refuſing to fulfil his engagements, in that caſe you are to ſuſpend the Proteſt and Declaration before enjoined, and take the beſt means in your power for the preſervation of the army, adviſing us immediately of your ſituation.

In all this buſineſs we recommend the greateſt temper and moderation, and enjoin, that your remonſtrances be made, although with firmneſs, yet with reſpect and tokens of friendſhip; ſo as to convey to him the idea that the Company in inſiſting on their juſt rights, have no intention to depart from their alliance and connection with him.

Secret Conſultations, Extract of Fort William, 3d November 1774.

The General now delivers in his Minute on the ſubject of the Propoſitions debated at the laſt meeting, agreeably to what he then promiſed, as follows:

The General's Minute on the Propoſitions at laſt Council.

On the 5th Propoſition.—When I ſubmitted this Propoſition to the Board, I did not expect an oppoſition would be made to it on the part of the Governor General, and ſtill leſs could I imagine he would have deemed that meaſure a violation of public faith, which in effect is the reſult of his own opinion. I was glad to have his authority for a meaſure which ſo perfectly coincides with my wiſhes; and that however we may differ in opinion with reſpect to the validity of the engagement itſelf with the Vizier, yet it pleaſed me much to find that I had ſtill ſufficient lights before me in the correſpondence which we have been only permitted to ſee, to form my judgment on the performance of the ſtipulations of the engagement on the part of the Company, and conſequently to determine the right of withdrawing the troops. The late Preſident, in his Letter of the 16th July, has been ſo very explicit on the doubtful point of the engagement, whether or not the claim to the 40 lacks was then due, and whether the continuance of the troops in the Vizier's ſervice afterwards was independent or not of the right to the 40 lacks; he ſays, "I cannot admit of the conſtruction the Vizier puts on "the agreement, namely, 'that every condition ſpecified "in the Letter muſt be accompliſhed before the pay"ment became due." He adds, "that the whole "Country of the Rohillas, lying within the boundary "which originally formed the compaſs of our opera"tions, is, according to my conception, wholly and "entirely his, the Vizier's." He thereupon orders Mr. Middleton to inſiſt on the right to the 40 lacks in ready money, and acquaints him that the continuance of the brigade afterwards with the Vizier muſt be conſidered as an indulgence.

This is the late Preſident's own expreſſion, and as I cannot conceive that an act of indulgence of the late Adminiſtration can be deemed a right by the enjoyment of it ſince the 16th of July, I flatter myſelf that the Governor General, upon reconſidering his ſentiments at that period, will think himſelf not juſtified in the imputation he has laid on the Members of the Board, who have concurred in the Propoſition for withdrawing the troops out of the Country of the Rohillas.

However, it has been objected, that the Vizier may be offended at the exerciſe of this right. At preſent I ſhould think that not poſſible, if Mr. Middleton has done his duty in communicating to him the late Preſident's ſentiments, and making him underſtand how long he has enjoyed an indulgence he was not entitled to. If he has any gratitude he will be ſenſible of the favour he has received, and will, at the aſſurances Colonel Champion is ordered to give him, of the reſolution of this new Government to maintain inviolably the Treaties which the Company has with him, for the mutual protection of their reſpective ancient poſſeſſions.

Mr. Francis alſo delivers in the following Minute on the ſame ſubject, which he promiſed at the laſt Council.

On the General's 4th Propoſition.

Mr. Francis's Minute on the Propoſitions.

With reſpect to the fourth Article of the Inſtructions now propoſed to be given to Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the ſecond brigade, and in anſwer to the objections made to it by Mr. Barwell and the Governor General, I muſt declare, that I am at a loſs to comprehend how a demand for money, long ſince acknowledged to be due, but of which no part has yet been paid, can be conſidered as offenſive to the Vizier, if his intentions be as ſincere and upright as they are repreſented. The mere claim of a debt does not of itſelf imply any doubt or ſuſpicion of the honeſty of the debtor; and ſince we have on our ſide fulfilled the conditions which entitle us to make the demand, I think we ſhould be guilty of a breach of duty to the Company if we did not repeat and inſiſt upon it until it ſhould be complied with. I do not expect that the Vizier will act ſo injudicious a part as to give a plain direct negative to ſo regular and juſt a requiſition; if he ſhould, I conſider the bare retreat of our army into our own territories, in conſequence of ſuch refuſal, as the mildeſt and leaſt vindictive meaſure that can be adopted by this Government. In return to ſo groſs a breach of faith, I do not ſee how it is poſſible for us to act with greater moderation. This, however, is a caſe which I think may rather be ſuppoſed than expected. From the character given of the Vizier, not only by Colonel Champion, but by Mr. Middleton, (whom Mr. Barwell is pleaſed to call the public Agent of the former Government, notwithſtanding he has been repeatedly deſcribed and acknowledged as the private Agent of the late Preſident) it ſeems more probable that he will endeavour to elude or protract the execution of his engagements, than that he will plainly and abſolutely refuſe to comply with them.—The conditions which the late Government have unfortunately ſuffered him to preſcribe to them, conſidered merely as the terms of a contract (for I do not mean to inſiſt in a political view upon the danger and diſhonour of ſubmitting to ſuch conditions) are ſo looſe and unguarded, that they will always furniſh him with a pretence for deferring the payment of the 40 lacks to a future day. In his Letter to the Preſident, which we are told has a ſanction equal to the moſt ſolemn Treaty, and which in fact is the only authentic document we have to appeal to, he declares, "that he is the maſter in theſe affairs, and that the "troops ſhall never quit his ſervice until he ſhall volun"tarily diſmiſs them." If we recal the brigade without his conſent, or if we confine its operations within any limits diſagreeable to him, or inconſiſtent with his projects, he will of courſe appeal to his Letter, and tell us, that ſince we do not adhere to the engagements preſcribed to us in one part of the Letter, he is not bound to fulfil the conditions ſtipulated in the other. If we leave the brigade with him, and ſuffer it to be employed as he thinks proper, (which I preſume could never be intended without any limitation of time or ſervice) he may ſtill expreſs an apprehenſion, that when he has paid the money the troops will be withdrawn, and therefore that he cannot ſafely part with ſo conſiderable a ſum until he himſelf ſhall have granted them their diſmiſſion. By this way of reaſoning, which in my opinion may well be ſupported by the terms of his Letter, the payment of the 40 lacks is made to depend upon an act, which depends upon his own pleaſure, and conſequently may be deferred ſine die. By the late Preſident's Letter to him of the 18th July laſt, it appears, that this is the conſtruction which the Vizier himſelf then put upon the agreement. In his anſwer to Colonel Champion's firſt demand of the forty lacks, he ſays, "that when the "Engliſh troops have concluded his buſineſs, and he "thinks proper to diſmiſs them, he will, at the time of "diſmiſſing them, give them the ſum of forty lacks of "rupees, according to his agreement." But even at this moment, both Mr. Barwell and the Governor General evidently conſider the ſucceſs of the demand as united with the continuance of the troops in their preſent ſituation, when they alledge that the recal of the brigade may furniſh the Vizier with a plea for refuſing to pay the forty lacks; notwithſtanding they acknowledge the money to be due, independently of the brigade quitting or continuing in his ſervice; but they have not yet aſſerted, in writing at leaſt, that it ought to be continued in his ſervice for ever.

With reſpect to the Company's being bound to guarantee this newly-conquered Country to the Vizier, and to ſupport him in the poſſeſſion of it, I differ widely, though with all the reſpect and deference which I owe Mr. Barwell, from the formal opinion delivered by him, "that the preſerving to the Vizier the poſſeſſion of the "domain lately acquired by him, is as much an obliga"tion upon the preſent Government, as the ſecuring to "him any other part of his dominions; and that it is "equally within the ſpirit of the Defenſive Treaty, as if "it had been ſpecifically named therein." I am happy to find that ſo dangerous an obligation is not among the burdens impoſed upon the Company by their ſervants. It is not ſtipulated, nor in any manner intimated, in the Vizier's Letter. If ſuch a guarantee had been expected by him, he would not have failed to have made his claim to it clear and ſecure, by a ſpecific Article, or at leaſt by a reference to thoſe formal Treaties, by which the Company is bound to aſſiſt him in the defence of his other poſſeſſions. It appears to me, that, in the late expedition, we have aſſiſted him in a rank not ſo high as even that of alliance. He pays us a ſubſidy for the hire of our troops: and if the projected conqueſt takes place, he promiſes us a ſhare in the plunder. We do not enquire into, or think ourſelves concerned in the juſtice of the cauſe in which the troops are to act. They march at his requiſition, and are ſolely under his command. When the object of the expedition is obtained, the ſum which he engages to pay in return for their ſervice, becomes due. Beyond the completion of that ſervice, I do not find that the late Government have ventured to involve the Company, at leaſt by any engagements that have yet come to our knowledge. All our advices agree in ſaying, that the Chiefs of the Rohillas have capitulated with the Vizier, and that the reduction of the Rohilla country is completed. I do not therefore ſee the leaſt pretence for continuing the brigade in its preſent ſtation, unleſs it be to aſſiſt him in making further conqueſts.

On the fifth Propoſition.

My firſt general argument for agreeing to the fifth Propoſition is, that it is ſtrictly conformable to the ſentiments and injunctions of the Court of Directors, deliberately and repeatedly, though very ineffectually, communicated to their ſervants. They have approved of the engagement to aſſiſt the Vizier in the defence of the poſſeſſions guaranteed to him by the Treaty of Illiabad, in caſe they ſhould be attacked; and at preſent I have no right to ſuppoſe that they will be averſe from extending that engagement to the poſſeſſions which he has lately acquired by the pacific title, of a purchaſe. On the other hand, they have moſt expreſsly and uniformly, and on the ſoundeſt principles of policy, reprobated the idea of engaging with him in ſchemes of conqueſt, or of ſuffering their troops to be employed in diſtant expeditions. I am not ſurprized that this conſideration ſhould have leſs weight with the Governor General, who in his Letter to Shujah Dowla, of the 26th of November 1773, confeſſes, "that the orders of his Superiors are peremptory, not to "ſuffer their arms to be carried beyond the line of their "own boundaries, or thoſe of his Excellency their Ally." But I muſt confeſs my aſtoniſhment at the declaration made by Mr. Barwell, "that he ſees no reaſon why the "troops ſhould be debarred acting, if neceſſary, in ſecur"ing to the Vizier his late acquiſition." I preſume, it was not conſidered by Mr. Barwell (to whoſe opinion I pay a ſincere and unaffected deference) that the Vizier is to be the ſole judge of the neceſſity, and of the mode, of employing the troops in his defence; and that if he ſhould declare, that his late conqueſt can no otherwiſe be ſecured, than by their continuing to be ſtationed upon the ſkirts of the mountains of Tibit, we muſt yield to his judgment, and aſſiſt him in that mode which he ſhall think moſt adviſable, and moſt for the benefit of his own affairs. This appears to me to be the amount and reſult of all the arguments urged againſt our agreeing to the fifth article. In my opinion, they lead inevitably to this concluſion: if at this time the recal of our troops, is to be conſidered as a breach of faith with the Vizier, I wait with anxiety to be informed at what time, and in what circumſtances the recal of our troops, without his conſent, will not be a breach of faith with him. He has told us, in plain terms, that, "without his diſmiſſion, the "Engliſh army ſhall never go." And we it ſeems, by the acceptance of his Letter, have given it the ſanction of the moſt ſolemn Treaty. For my own part, I do not ſcruple to declare, that if this extravagant engagement had been ratified in all the forms by which public Treaties are uſually authenticated, but none of which have been obſerved upon the preſent occaſion, I ſhould reject it with diſdain. The reaſons I have ſtated, are alone very ſufficient to induce me to agree to the fifth article of General Clavering's Propoſitions. I ſhall add, however, as the moſt urgent and inſtant motive of my aſſent, that as long as we ſuffer one-third of the Company's forces to be ſtationed in the Rohilla country, at the diſpoſal of the Vizier, whoſe own troops, by the returns, amount to above a hundred thouſand men, we leave that conſiderable portion of our ſtrength in a great meaſure at his mercy, and hazard the ſafety of the ſtate.

4th November, 1774. (Signed) P. Francis.

As no meaſure follows as the immediate conſequence of theſe Minutes, the Governor General deſires that they may be recorded; that he declines at preſent offering any reply to them, but that he means to take ſome other occaſion to make his obſervations on them, and to lay them before the Board.

The Governor means to reply to them.

Fort William, the 8th of November, 1774.

The late advices from Colonel Champion and the Reſident with the Vizier, as well as the Vizier himſelf, leaving it without a doubt that the latter left his camp on the 15th ultimo, on his return to Fyzabad, it becomes neceſſary to determine in what manner the orders, lately tranſmitted to the Commander of the army, ſhould be carried into execution; thoſe orders having been given on the ſuppoſition that the Vizier would have continued in the Rohilla country, and in the neighbourhood of the Commander of our army.

Agreed, therefore, that Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer, be directed as follows:

To Colonel Alexander Champion, or the Officer commanding the ſecond brigade.

Sir,

Since our Letter of Inſtructions of the 31ſt of October, we have recived advices from Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton, which leave it without a doubt that the Vizier left his camp on the 15th ultimo, on his return to Fyzabad. As this makes a ſmall alteration neceſſary in your former Inſtructions, you are accordingly directed, that Freſh Inſtructions to Col. Champion.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

that if, on receipt of this, the Vizier ſhould be actually departed for Fyzabad, you immediately leave the army under the command of the next ſenior Officer, and proceed for that capital to negociate with the Vizier in the terms of your former Inſtructions; and that in caſe the Vizier refuſe to ſettle with you in thoſe terms, you are to reckon the fourteen days preſcribed in thoſe Inſtructions, for ordering the army to retire, to commence from the time of your meeting with the Vizier; and at their expiration, and not before, you are to ſend orders to the army to withdraw, according to the former Inſtructions. But if, when you receive theſe orders, the money ſhould be already paid, or ſuch part of it as, together with ſuch ſecurity for the remainder, may be equivalent to the terms which you are inſtructed to demand of the Vizier, you will then purſue your former orders with reſpect to the retreat of the army into the country of Oude.

The Governor's Propoſition.

The Preſident gives in the following Propoſition for the conſideration of the Board.

The Governor recommends, that the clauſe in the late Inſtructions given to the Commander of the army, requiring him to withdraw the brigade into the province of Oude, after payment or ſecurity obtained for the ſums due from the Vizier, be repealed; and that a diſcretionary power be left with the Officer who may be in the command of the brigade, to continue it in its ſtation at Ramgaut, until the Vizier's Government ſhall be effectually eſtabliſhed in his new-acquired poſſeſſions, or other circumſtances ſhall induce the Officers in command to believe that the Engliſh forces may evacuate that Country without expoſing it to the danger of freſh hoſtilities.

He begs leave to obſerve, that at the time when the reſolution was taken for withdrawing the brigade, it was ſuppoſed to be, from the laſt advices, in the moſt diſtant extremity of the Rohilla province; but we are ſince aſſured by authority, that it was on the point of returning to Ramgaut, which lies within ſixty miles from the borders of the province of Oude, in which ſtation it will be equally able to perform any ſervice for which it may be required, as if it was quartered within the limits of the province of Oude, and means may be eaſily found to induce the Vizier to give his voluntary aſſent to its entire retreat, without much loſs of time from the Rohilla country.

That Country, though conquered, is not in a ſtate of confirmed ſubjection. Fyzoola Cawn has ſubmitted to the conditions impoſed on him, and to acknowledge himſelf the vaſſal of the Vizier; but he is at liberty, and may again aſſert his pretenſions to the territory which has been wreſted from him, if he ſees no danger in the attempt. His forces were ordered to be tranſported beyond the Ganges; but they ſtill exiſt, though diſbanded, and may with eaſe be re-aſſembled, if it ſhould ſuit their former Chief to recal them, before time were allowed them to diſperſe, or to ſeek other maſters. To enſure the permanent poſſeſſion of the new-acquired Country, proper Officers muſt be ſtationed in it by the Vizier, to eſtabliſh his Government, and regulate the collections. Theſe ends may be effected with eaſe, and the danger of a revolt effectually obviated by the temporary preſence of that force by which the Country was reduced; whereas the precipitate recal of the Engliſh army, in oppoſition to the Vizier, and before the ſettlement of the Country was completed, would be inevitably conſtrued as a ſure indication, that the preſent Adminiſtration of the Company diſapproved of the late engagements with the Vizier for the conqueſt of the Rohilla country, and was reſolved to withdraw its interpoſition from all future concerns in that quarter. Such a belief at this time might be the cauſe of a general revolt, and of the loſs of all the advantages obtained by our arms; which, whatever diverſity of opinion may prevail concerning the propriety of the paſt tranſactions, the Governor is perſuaded is very foreign from the intention of every Member of the Council. He does not form theſe as certain, but probable concluſions; and as they may be prevented by a temporary continuance of the brigade at Ramgaut, or in any other ſtation equally convenient for the preſent protection of the Rohilla country, as there is no poſſible ſervice for it in any other part of the Vizier's dominions, and as the Propoſition now ſubmitted to the Board is entirely conſiſtent with the Inſtructions already given by the Council to the Commander of the army, the Governor hopes it will obtain their concurrence. He wiſhes to take the opinion of Mr. Monſon on this occaſion, and is willing to allow it an effect in the deciſion which may be paſſed upon the queſtion, as that Gentleman is prevented by ſickneſs from attending at the Board, and joined with the majority in the reſolutions for withdrawing the brigade.

(Signed) Warren Haſtings.

Agreed, that this Propoſition lie for conſideration until the next Council day. To be conſidered.

Fort William, the 14th of November, 1774.

Mr. Francis, in conformity to the intention he expreſſed at the laſt Council, now delivers in his ſentiments upon the Governor General's propoſal to alter the Inſtructions ſent to the Commander of the army in the Rohilla country:

Mr. Francis's opinion on the Governor General's propoſal of the 8th inſtant.

In the conſideration of the Governor General's Minute of the 8th inſtant, it gives me pleaſure to obſerve, that in one reſpect his ſentiments and mine are not ſo diſtant as I apprehended they might be. He does not affirm, or even intimate, "that the preſerving to the Vizier the "poſſeſſion of the Rohilla country, is as much an obli- "gation upon the preſent Government, as the ſecuring "to him any other part of his dominions, and equally "within the ſpirit of the Defenſive Treaty, as if it had "been ſpecifically named therein."

The Governor General urges his propoſal on particular motives of policy and temporary convenience, independent of any poſitive obligation that might bind us to act againſt our intereſts or opinion. This is the only ground on which I can conſider the queſtion; for after having had the honour of laying my ſentiments with reſpect to the whole buſineſs of the Rohilla war, repeatedly and deliberately before the Board, I think it cannot be expected of me, that I ſhould ſo ſuddenly renounce the general principles on which thoſe ſentiments were founded. Meeting the Governor General therefore on his own principles, I beg leave to ſay, that I do not think his arguments concluſive. Our laſt advices inform us, that the brigade was to leave the extremities of the Rohilla country on the 15th of October, before which time the remains of the Rohilla army would be ſent acroſs the Ganges. This meaſure, I preſume, was reſolved on with the conſent of the Vizier. He himſelf muſt therefore have conſidered the Country as completely reduced to his obedience, and the new Government ſecure from any attempt in that quarter. The retreat of the army to Ramgaut is a meaſure of his own. If the diſtance of ſixty miles be all the difference between the ſtation recommended by the Governor General, and that to which a majority of the Board have determined at all events to bring back the brigade, I cannot diſcover any motive, even of convenience, for our heſitating to adopt a meaſure which conforms to the ſentiments of our Superiors, replaces the Company's troops within the defenſive line preſcribed to us by their ſtrict and repeated injunctions, and removes them but ſixty miles from that ſtation, to which the Vizier has himſelf approved of their returning.

I do not underſtand from what premiſes it can be concluded that we mean to deſert the intereſts of the Vizier, while while our army continues with him, and when the Commanding Officer is directed to remain in the country of Oude, if the Vizier ſhould require it, for the defence of any part of his ancient dominions. The abſolute return of the brigade to Dinapore is not to take place, but upon his plain direct refuſal to fulfil his engagements to the Company. Even with reſpect to the ſecurity of the new conqueſt, whatever the ſecret determination of the Board on that ſubject may be, the mere retreat of the brigade within the frontiers of Oude cannot, in my opinion, warrant a concluſion, that the preſent Adminiſtration is reſolved to withdraw its interpoſition from all future concerns with the Rohilla country. The utmoſt that the late Government undertook to execute for the Vizier, has been long ſince completed. The return of the brigade to their former ſituation, is no more than the natural conſequence of their having performed the ſervice on which they were employed. Neither can their retreat, with any degree of juſtice, be called precipitate. Our firſt Inſtructions to Colonel Champion were not diſpatched until the 4th inſtant; in twenty days they would probably each him; fifteen days more are allowed for finiſhing the particular negociation, entruſted to him, with the Vizier; and we have ſince extended the term preſcribed, in order to make an allowance for the Commanding Officer's journey to Fyzabad, and for his return to Ramgaut, which cannot upon the whole make leſs than an addition of ten days. The ſervice for which the troops were engaged by Suja Dowla, was finally determined on the 15th of October, ſince on that day they retire from Loll Dang. From that to the earlieſt day on which it is poſſible for the army to begin its march, in obedience to our orders, there is a ſpace of ſixty-two days; during which he enjoys all the countenance and ſupport that can be derived from the appearance of our arms, in ſettling and eſtabliſhing the Government of his new conqueſt. In this computation I ſtate the time ſtrictly, and allow all poſſible advantages againſt my own argument. The truth is, that the Vizier has been in peaceable poſſeſſion of the whole country ſince Auguſt laſt, and of the greateſt part of it ſince April. He has conſequently had all that time to regulate his affairs.

What I have had the honour of ſubmitting to the Board, is meant as a reply to the Governor General's arguments, and not as the foundation of my declining to aſſent to his propoſal. My determination to vote for the recal of the brigade from the Rohilla country, is founded on motives which I have already ſtated to the Board, and hitherto I find no reaſon to alter it. On the contrary, as I really think it probable that we may be ſhortly engaged in a * war with the Marattas, in behalf of Sujah Dowla, as the country of the † Rohillas is very remote from that of the Marattas, as it lies out of the line of their incurſions, as their attack will therefore probably be made upon thoſe parts of the Vizier's dominions which lie neareſt to us (and which we are obliged by Treaty to protect) if not immediately upon our own provinces, I think there ought not to be the delay of a ſingle day beyond the term already allowed for our evacuating a country which we are not bound by any ſtipulation to defend, and which we cannot defend without neglecting objects more important to the Vizier himſelf, and in which our own ſafety is immediately concerned.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Mr. Barwell's opinion.

Mr. Barwell agrees to the Governor's propoſal for altering the Inſtructions ſent to the Commanding Officer.

Colonel Monſon, to whom the Governor's Minute of the 8th inſtant has been ſent for his opinion, ſends in the following:

Colonel Monſon's opinion.

I am extremely ſenſible of the indulgence ſhewn by the honourable the Governor General, in allowing my opinion to have its conſequence in the deciſion of a queſtion before the Board, notwithſtanding I am prevented by ſickneſs attending there. I have already given my ſentiments on the ſubject, and am the more ſtrongly confirmed in them, as the lateſt advices from Colonel Champion mention, that he ſhould ſee the Rohillas paſs the river before he would march to Ramgaut; the Vizier therefore will be in poſſeſſion of the country, and our part of the ſtipulation accompliſhed.

The brigade is to remain in the province of Oude at the requiſition of the Vizier for defenſive meaſures.

The Rohilla country, a conqueſt made by the Vizier ſince the Treaties of Illahabad and Benares, cannot be conſidered within thoſe Treaties. If the Company are to defend that country, it is a cogent reaſon againſt aiding the Vizier in the conqueſt of it.

* Colonel Champion is of opinion, that is is neceſſary to prepare for the reception of the Marattas, by poſting the brigade centrically, and putting their ſtores, &c. in proper order. The moſt effectual mode to prevent the inroads of the Marattas is to have our force within our provinces; I therefore would adviſe, that the brigade ſhould return to Dinapore, unleſs demanded by the Vizier for the protection of his ancient dominions.

* Letter, 17th September, 1774.

(Signed) George Monſon.

The General gives his ſentiments upon the ſame ſubject in the following Minute:

The General's opinion.

The reſult of the Governor General's Minute now delivered in to the Board, being, that the order which has been ſent to Colonel Champion to withdraw the brigade within a certain time out of the Rohilla country, in conſequence of the reſolution of the Council on the 4th and 5th Propoſitions which I ſubmitted to the Board on the 28th ult. may be annulled; and that Colonel Champion, or the Commander of the army, be directed to remain at Ramgaut, where the laſt intelligence mentioned he was retiring, till the new Government in the Rohilla country be quite eſtabliſhed.

The arguments employed by the Governor General to recommend this alteration in our reſolutions are, firſt, that the Rohillas might take up arms again, and recover their country, if our army left it; ſecondly, that ſo precipitate a ſtep would perſuade the Vizier, that the Governor General and Council were not well-diſpoſed towards him; thirdly, that the brigade not being now wanted within our own provinces, it might on any exigency be ſoon brought into the country of Oude, as the diſtance from Ramgaut to the neareſt part of the Vizier's dominions is not more than 60 miles.

In reply to theſe arguments I will beg leave to ſtate, that we are not any more obliged to defend the Rohilla country for the Vizier than we were to conquer it for him: that I conſider the verbal promiſe, by virtue of which the late Preſident engaged to march the brigade to attack the Rohillas, as no Treaty; it had none of the requiſites of a contract; there was neither witneſs nor ſignature to it. But I will go further, and declare, that if this engagement had been provided with all the formalities of a ſolemn Treaty, I would not have heſitated to have given my vote to have broken it; becauſe, firſtly, it was an unjuſt war; ſecondly, it is exactly the caſe which the Legiſlature has pointed out to us for our interference, when it inveſted the Governor General and Council with a power of controlling the other Preſidencies; thirdly, the Directors have repeatedly prohibited the Governor and Council of this Preſidency undertaking any ſchemes of foreign conqueſt, or departing from the abſolute line of the defence of the poſſeſſions of the Company, together with thoſe which they are engaged to defend by the Treaty of Illahabad; fourthly, becauſe the late Preſident and Council have pledged every thing that can be dear to them as men, never to depart from the ſolemn promiſe they made, when they ſigned their names to the 30th paragraph of the Letter to the Court of Directors from the Select Committee, of the 10th of November, 1772, in the following words; " in one point " you may reſt aſſured of our unanimous concurrence; " that no object or conſideration, ſhall either tempt or " compel us to paſs the political line which we have laid " down for our operations with the Vizier. We have " told him, and repeated, that we will aſſiſt him with your " force in the defence of his dominions againſt all in- " vaders; but that we will not engage in any offenſive " war, nor ſuffer your army to be carried beyond the " borders of his territory; and to this reſolution we will " ſteadily adhere."

I might add to theſe four conſiderations, which it is to be hoped will have ſome weight with the Govenor General, conſidering the authority with which ſome of them at leaſt are ſtamped, that it is reaſonably to be apprehended, that if the powers of Indoſtan ſhall perceive that the Governor General and Council, in imitation of their predeceſſors in office, do continue to afford protection to the Vizier in maintaining his unjuſt acquiſition of the Rohilla country, they will confederate with the remains of thoſe unhappy people to extirpate the Vizier, and then attack the Company's poſſeſſions, perhaps at the different Preſidencies at the ſame time.

In regard to the interpretation which the Governor General ſuggeſts the Vizier will put on ſo abrupt a departure of the brigade from the Rohilla country, before he has fully eſtabliſhed his own authority in it, if the Governor General will be pleaſed to refer to dates, he will find, there muſt be near two months from the day when Fyzoolla Cawn capitulated to the time allowed to the Commander of the army to withdraw the brigade into the cougtry of Oude; which time will be judged more than ſufficient to eſtabliſh his Government in a ruined country, deſerted by its inhabitants and protectors, without other purpoſes are intended, the drift of which have appeared by the opinion delivered by Mr. Barwell at this Board, namely, that we are equally bound to defend his acquiſition of the Rohilla country againſt all invaders, as we are his ancient domain. If ſuch opinions have been tranſmitted to the Vizier, it is high time he ſhould be undeceived, for his own ſake, and for our reputation. This new Adminiſtration will not exceed, I truſt, the powers which have been confided to them by the Legiſlature and the Honourable Court of Directors, whoſe ſanction as yet only authoriſes us to comply with the ſtipulations of the Treaty of Illahabad.

With regard to the laſt argument, that the brigade is not now wanted within the Company's poſſeſſions, and that the diſtance between Ramgaut and the neareſt part of the country of Oude being ſo ſhort, that in caſe of an exigency it might eaſily be tranſported into that country; I will remark, that the new Adminiſtration can only judge of the neceſſity of the troops being nearer the Company's frontiers by the correſpondence that has been laid before the Council; by which correſpondence, curtailed as it has been, it ſtill appears, that both the Governor General and the Commander of the army thought that the Marattas would return upon the Ganges in the autumn. If their conjectures were juſt, it certainly would be very proper to be prepared for the danger, by approaching the army nearer to the frontiers of Babar; which frontiers are at preſent only protected by one battalion of Sepoys and fifty-two European Invalids at Chunagur, by ſeven companies of brigade Sepoys at Dinapore, and one company of the latter at Buxar; the reſt of the army being ſtationed as low down as Berhampore, and conſequently not able to protect the frontiers of Babar in caſe it ſhould be ſuddenly attacked by the Marattas, the King, or any other Power whom we may have provoked.

It is for this reaſon, as well as my deſire to pay obedience to the commands of the Court of Directors, who have enjoined that their arms ſhould never be carried beyond the line they have ſo exactly delineated, that I hope the orders ſent to the Commander of the army may not be revoked.

Reſolved not to repeal the paragraph.

Reſolved, by the majority of the Board, that the paragraph in the Inſtructions to the Commanding Officer of the ſecond brigade, requiring him to withdraw the army into the province of Cude, after receipt of the money or ſecurity for it from the Vizier, remain in force.

Select Conſultations, Fort William, 18th Auguſt 1774.

Extract of Letter from Colonel Champion to the Select Committee; dated the 24th July 1774.

Laſt night I ſent the Perſian Interpreter to his Excellency, with my reaſons in writing againſt a movement of the troops at this ſeaſon, but he would not liſten to them; and though I went in perſon this morning, I could not perſuade him to deſiſt from the enterprize.

According to his accounts of the general diſpoſition of other Powers, appearances are alarming enough. He avows expectations of being attacked after the rains by the Marattas on one hand, and Temur Sha on the other. He is under conſiderable apprehenſions from the King, whoſe diſtreſſes ſeem to render him deſperate, and to have determined him, as he thinks he is deſerted by us and the Vizier, to try every poſſible effort to extricate himſelf. Fyzoolla Khan having large ſums of money, and no alternative being left to himſelf or his followers, they appear reſolved to give all the trouble they can; and their numbers are ſaid to be greatly increaſed by reinforcements of Afghans from different parts.

Theſe are matters which I think worthy of your conſideration; in the meantime I am to inform you, that as his Excellency is ſo very deſirous of my taking the field, as he has the ſole authority of preſcribing the ſervice to be undertaken, and has quoted the Preſident's advice for uſing the utmoſt expedition, I am conſtrained to break ground with all the Sepoys of the brigade and the European grenadiers.

Extract of Letter from the Select Committee at Fort William to the Court of Directors; dated 24th Auguſt 1774.

Our laſt addreſs, of which a duplicate goes encloſed, was written in cypher, and was diſpatched to the Preſident and Council at Bombay, to be forwarded over land.

You were therein informed, that the brigade employed under the command of Colonel Champion, in the ſervice againſt the Rohillas, was preparing to canton at Barelly for the rains. Soon after, on the requiſition and urgent ſolicitation of the Vizier, this deſtination was changed, and the brigade marched forwards to the city of Biſſouly, which is near the centre of the Rohilla country on that ſide of the Ganges, and immediately entered into quarters, with the intention of paſſing the whole ſeaſon of the rains there. But on the news of an accommodation among the Maratta Chiefs, and on the appearance of ſome hoſtile acts on the part of the King, fearing to be interrupted in the courſe of his operations if they were delayed, the Vizier has ſince importuned the Commander in Chief to take the field again, and to march againſt the remainder of the Rohilla forces, who were aſſembled under the command of Fyzoolla Cawn at Patter-Gur, in the northernmoſt diviſion of that country; hoping, that by their diſperſion, which would at this time be with leſs difficulty effected, any deſigns which may have been formed by the King, or the Marattas, to be executed after the rains, will be anticipated, and rendered abortive. To this requeſt Colonel Champion, though with reluctance, and having having firſt objected to it on account of the dangers to which the troops (the Europeans eſpecially) would be ſubjected from ſickneſs, by being expoſed to the inclemency of the preſent ſeaſon, aſſented. We own the force of the Colonel's objections, and think they outweigh the arguments urged by the Vizier to prove the neceſſity of preſent ſervice; as we are perſuaded that our forces in that quarter, joined to thoſe of the Vizier, and aided by our other reſources, are ſuperior to any oppoſition which we can foreſee in any probable event of things; but it may accelerate the iſſue of the war, and diſcourage foreign attempts; and our advices from the Commander in Chief and from the Reſident mention, that the ſeaſon was, and had been for ſome time uncommonly favourable for ſuch a deſign.

Select Conſultations, Fort William, 26th Nov. 1774.

Extract of the Preſident's Minute.

I muſt therefore declare, that although the Honourable the Court of Directors have been pleaſed to rank the Rohillas among the Powers capable of oppoſing the Marattas, I cannot regard them in that light. Their country is too remote from that of the Marattas, and too much out of the line of the incurſions of theſe people, for them either to be able to oppoſe theſe with effect, or to have much to apprehend from them. The Marattas may occaſionally attack them from the allurements of plunder only, but they can never form a ſufficient ſcheme of conqueſt over a country ſo diſtant, and ſo difficult to hold.

On the other hand, the Subadar of Oude muſt always be an object of jealouſy and enmity to the Rohillas; his power is to be dreaded by them; and the ſituation of their country contiguous to his, and in a manner encloſed within the ſame natural boundaries, muſt make the poſſeſſion of it always a deſirable object with him, both for ſecurity and advantage. Theſe are ſources of enmity between them, which from the nature of things cannot fail of producing ſuitable effects; and it is more probable that we ſhould ſoon ſee the Marattas and Rohillas join in hoſtilities againſt the Vizier, than that they ſhould continue in war with one another.

Secret Conſultations, 14th November 1774.

Extract of Colonel Champion's Inſtructions to Colonel Galliez; dated 24th October 1774.

The inteſtine diſſenſions among the Marattas being ſettled, it is to be expected they will direct their attention to foreign affairs, and in particular that they will turn their arms againſt the Vizier. Should they, or any other Power invade, or attempt to invade, any part of his dominions above-mentioned, you will ſupport his Excellency in repelling them with all your force. But as it is moſt probable the firſt endeavour of the Marattas will be to reconquer the country which the Vizier lately took from them in the Doab; and as it is not the intention of Adminiſtration to engage openly in maintaining the Vizier in theſe Countries, you will confine your operations to the limits above deſcribed.

It being however the wiſh of Government to aſſiſt his Excellency in the Doab, without taking any open meaſures, or employing our troops, it has been agreed by the Preſident to permit Captain Brooke to accept of the command of a partizan corps of the Nabob's troops, if his Excellency ſhould think proper to employ him to act ſeparately, on a plan of which Captain Brooke is directed to furniſh you with a copy; you will therefore be pleaſed to afford your advice to the Vizier, how beſt to oppoſe and diſconcert the plans of his enemies, according to the intelligence which you may receive of their intentions; and you will regard Mirza Nijif Khan as a proper inſtrument for defeating any plans that may be concerted by the King or Marattas, to the diſadvantage of the Company's intereſt, or the diſturbance of our Ally the Vizier.

Fort William, 21ſt November 1774.

Mr. Barwell begs leave to record the following Minute:

Mr. Barwell's Minute.

The reply made by Mr. Francis to the Governor General's, and my objections to the Propoſitions of the Commander in Chief, in its ſtyle and ſubſtance is of ſuch a nature, that I reſerved to myſelf at the time the right of animadverting upon it, when I might be at leiſure, without delaying the public buſineſs which was before the Board, and more immediately the object of its deliberations.

The whole proceedings in the buſineſs of the peremptory demand on the Vizier, and the poſitive unconditional recal of the troops from his aſſiſtance, I muſt frankly confeſs, appear to me rather in the light of a reprobation of the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, than leading to any real benefit to be derived to the Company; and I think myſelf juſtified in this ſentiment from the language of the Minute before me, which treats the agreement with the Vizier for aid in the Rohilla war as a looſe unguarded contract, which that Adminiſtration "unfortunately ſuffered the Vizier to preſcribe to them," and then "ſubmitted to with all the danger and diſhonour "which attended it. A contract ſo extravagant, that "had it even been ratified in all the forms of a public "Treaty," and conſequently public faith ſolemnly pledged for its performance, Mr. Francis would have rejected it with diſdain. I can hardly conceive words capable of conveying a more ſtrong, and poſſibly the Court of Directors may judge more unjuſt cenſure of the late Adminiſtration, than theſe: or a more free declaration of the ſmall obligation which Mr. Francis thinks he lies under, to treat their engagements either with perſonal reſpect or public good faith.

In this place I may likewiſe notice his obſervation on the Governor General, "of not being ſurprized at the "Company's orders having leſs weight with him," becauſe it appears from his Letter to the Vizier he was fully apprized of them. But why orders ſhould have leſs weight becauſe they are fully known, with deference to Mr. Francis, I cannot underſtand; and I hope he will therefore pardon me for calling upon him for an explanation of his meaning, for, in my humble apprehenſion, every order receives its weight and conſideration from the knowledge it intimately communicates, and is not diſregarded in proportion as it becomes known. I have therefore only to remark, that all concluſions as to the Governor General's undiſguiſed opinions of things, drawn from his correſpondence with the Vizier, are partial, and may be often miſtaken. He muſt be a ſhallow politician indeed, who, in negociating with a foreign Power, does not know how to conceal his real ſentiments at times, and often to urge motives, which, though different from the true ones, are better calculated in their operation to produce the effects that may be propoſed. The Governor General's ſentiments of the Vizier, and our connections with him, ought only to be taken from his unreſerved confidential communications with the Board.

Mr. Francis is pleaſed to ſay, that whatever he may think of the Governor General's opinion, he is aſtoniſhed that I ſhould declare for acting, if neceſſary, in defence of the Vizier's late acquiſitions, which he thinks is contradictory to ſound policy, and to the Company's orders. I have already given reaſons for my opinion, and I do not flatter myſelf with being able to add any thing of greater force to effect an alteration in his; however, I will endeavour to remove his ſurprize at my ſentiments, by ſhewing they are grounded on principles ſimilar to his own, and that I think the meaſure I ſupport perfectly conſonant to ſound policy, and the ſpirit of the Company's inſtructions. It often happens with States, that their ſituations are ſuch, that by extending their frontier they bring their line

line of defence to more preſcribed, of courſe to more defined, narrow, and compact limits; and it is an uncontroverted maxim in politics, that natural boundaries are always the moſt ſecure. The territories of the Vizier, before his late acquiſition, undoubtedly ſtood in this predicament. Towards that part of the Rohilla country he had no barrier of any kind; he was not only expoſed to the incurſions of thoſe people, but alſo to thoſe of the Marattas, who either by force or agreement were ſure to obtain from the Rohillas a paſſage through their country to attack him; and we conſequently were ſubject from the ſame cauſe to be annually called out in his defence. This is not mere ſpeculation; for two ſucceſſive years, previous to the Treaty of Benares, were we in the field to protect him from that quarter, and that upon the old ſtipulation of 1,15,000 rupees per month for our whole expences. The Vizier endeavoured to form an alliance with theſe people, to obviate if poſſible the danger from their hoſtile enterprizes; they entered into a Treaty with him, broke it afterwards, and called in his enemies to protect them. In this ſituation, who can deny that it was the ſoundeſt policy in the Vizier to attempt their reduction? How far it was ſimilar policy in us to aſſiſt him, is another queſtion; but it appears to me, that if the tranquillity and ſecurity of the Vizier's dominions be the object of our alliance with him, we cannot more effectually ſecure that object, than by aiding to remove a conſtant cauſe of uneaſineſs and diſturbance to him, and procure for him natural barriers to his dominions on the quarter where they were moſt expoſed. That the country in queſtion affords this barrier, is certain. It ſhelters him abſolutely to the North by the Thibet mountains, and to the South and Weſt by the Ganges, a river hazardous at all times for an enemy to croſs. That it was on theſe ideas the Rohilla expedition was undertaken, appears manifeſtly from the Records of the Council and Select Committee, where that country is always mentioned ſtanding in the predicaments here defined; and in effect, its defence againſt the Marattas was taken up on theſe very grounds two years paſt, without any particular ſtipulation for the ſervice, or contract for forty lacks on its ſucceſs.

I truſt I have ſufficiently explained to the Board, and particularly to Mr. Francis, who is ſurprized at my declaring for the defence of the Rohilla country, the motives upon which I ground my opinion: I think I have clearly ſhewn it was found policy in the late Board to undertake the expedition; that the defence and ſecurity of the Vizier's dominions rendered it eligible; that it had received mature conſideration before it came recommended from the chair; and that if what I have already pointed out are the objects of our alliance with the Vizier, often approved of by the Company, the late Adminiſtration could not have acted more conformably to their intereſts and intentions.

Much notice has been taken in the courſe of our debates on theſe ſubjects, of the expreſſion in the Vizier's Letter, of his right to retain and diſmiſs the brigade: "I am the maſter in theſe points, and without my leave never, never ſhall it depart." And it has been held forth as dictating in the moſt imperious manner his commands to the Council: but theſe Aſiatic expreſſions will not alter the nature of the tranſaction with thoſe who know the fact, that the terms were dictated by the Board, and meant to convey to his mind, that if he acquieſced to the propoſitions made, the aid to be granted ſhould be effectual; and yet ſuch were the advantages aſked for the Company, that even with this aſſurance of ſolid and effectual ſupport, the Board did not flatter themſelves he would have conſented; but doubted, ſo hard were the conditions, his acceptance of the terms proffered. Further, I conceive the expreſſion alluded to as referring only to the condition of retaining at all times a brigade of our troops for the defence of his dominions when he ſhall require it, and continue to pay the ſubſidy ſtipulated by the Treaty of Benares; the very nature of all ſuch compacts are, that the party requiring and paying for ſuch defenſive aid, ſhall be the ſole judge of the neceſſity of demanding it, and ſhall retain it while he thinks the neceſſity laſts, without however precluding the other party from recalling it to its own defence, or on other exigencies. The contract is mutual, and the conditions ſo intimately tied together, that they neceſſarily and conſequently ſtand or fall to the ground at the ſame time. While you retain, you pay; when you recal, the pay ceaſes. On ſuch terms I confeſs I wiſh the Vizier may always retain a brigade of our troops; it would eaſe the Company of the heavy burthen of one-third of their whole army, and at the ſame time, preſerve it equally ready for their ſervice, whenever the urgency of their own affairs ſhould oblige them to recal it. On the whole, I have objected to the late meaſures, not only on the general grounds, but as to the mode of proceeding. At the time the General laid his Propoſition before the Board, we had accounts of a propoſal depending, for finiſhing the war entirely; we were informed, that the negociations with the Vizier for the payment of the ſums due from him were in good train; and we were in hourly expectations of hearing ſomething more definitive on theſe heads: yet, in this ſituation, without taking time to enquire fully into the origin and nature of our engagements with the Vizier, without even reading the correſpondence with Mr. Middleton, which had been called for, and were then laying on the table unopened, we enter into reſolutions, which either precipitate or counteract all the former meaſures; we call away the Reſident from the Vizier's Court, a meaſure always bearing an hoſtile aſpect; and we order Colonel Champion, or whoever ſhould by chance have the chief command, without regard either to his talents or his temper, to demand, with the brigade at his back, immediate payment of the Vizier, or to withdraw from him, leaving him with his new conqueſts and old dominions to defend themſelves. The natural tendency of theſe ſteps is a public diſapprobation of paſt meaſures, and a publication to the world of the cenſure they fix on the late Adminiſtration, may give riſe to jealouſy in the mind of the Vizier, and create fears of hoſtile intentions towards him, and conſequently, induce him to attempt evading or protracting the fulfilling his engagements, until he ſhall be convinced how we mean to act with regard to ours; to endanger the loſs of the new conqueſt, and to encourage the invaſion of his ancient territories, from the notion that we had withdrawn our protection from him; and conſequently, to involve us in new difficulties, whether we abide by our Treaties to defend him, or remain ſpectators while he may be cruſhed. Happily, I think part of the miſchiefs will be prevented, by the reduction of the country being entirely completed, and the payments in a great meaſure made, before theſe orders could arrive; but ſtill I apprehend enough of bad effects, and once more declare my total diſſent to the opinions of the majority of the Board.

Fort William, the 21ſt November, 1774.

Mr. Francis alſo begs leave to enter the following explanation in reply to Mr. Barwell:

Mr. Francis's Minute.

Mr. Francis, in order to remove every poſſible doubt from Mr. Barwell's mind, concerning the force and intention of his obſervations on the political meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, deſires leave to obſerve, that he did undoubtedly mean to aſſert a ſtrong diſapprobation of thoſe meaſures; and that the terms in which he has expreſſed himſelf are mild and moderate, in compariſon of what he really thinks of their conduct. At all events he conſiders it as his ſtrict right to give his opinion freely in Council, declaring at the ſame time, that he meant no perſonal offence to any man.

If this were a conteſt about words, and if things of the greateſt moment were not at ſtake, Mr. Francis would wiſh to recal Mr. Barwell's attention to the ſtudied courteſy courteſy and reſpect, with which Mr. Francis ventured to expreſs a difference from him in matters of opinion.

With regard to that point on which Mr Barwell is pleaſed to call on Mr. Francis for an explanation, he willingly gives it to him in the following terms:

" It was to his purpoſe to ſhew, that the late Council " had acted in diametrical oppoſition to the orders and " ſentiments of the Court of Directors; it did not how- " ever neceſſarily follow, that they were all aware that " they were doing ſo; he therefore hoped, that the con- " ſideration of thoſe orders might ſtill have great weight " with Mr. Barwell, though he could not expect that " they ſhould have ſo much weight with the Governor " General, who had confeſſed to Suja Dowla, that he " was acting againſt the peremptory orders of his " Superiors."

For what reaſons the Governor ſhould make ſuch a declaration to the Vizier would, form a ſeparate queſtion. Having once made it, and having really acted up to his declaration, he is precluded from the poſſibility of reconciling his conduct with the letter or ſpirit of his Inſtructions from home. In ſtrict conſiſtency of reaſoning, the Governor General is bound to avow, that he acted upon ſuch principles of policy or evident neceſſity, as in his judgment ſuperſeded the conſideration of any orders from the Court of Directors.

(Signed) P. Francis.

Extract of Letter from the Governor General and Council in their Secret Department, to the Court of Directors, dated 21ſt November 1774, from Paragraph one to nineteen inclusive, and Poſtſcript of the 6th of December 1774, relative to differences of opinion in the Supreme Council on political affairs. Received in London 24th June 1775.

To the honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Honourable Sirs,

This will accompany our Proceedings in the Secret Department, which, by the abolition of the Select Committee, will from this time comprehend the complete Minutes of the political tranſactions of your Adminiſtration here.

2. The ſhortneſs of the period which has elapſed ſince we took upon us the government of your affairs, has not left room for many external occurrences; you will however find, that our Conſultations have not been unfrequent, and that the Reſolutions in them, we are ſorry to ſay it, have not been formed in that harmony, which was equally the object of your inſtructions and our wiſhes, could it have been maintained conſiſtent with the duty we owe to you and our own characters, in aſſerting the opinions which our judgment dictated.

3. The Proceedings are very full on the ſubjects which have been in debate before us, and contain the Minutes, Aſſents, and Diſſents at length on every queſtion; and as the difference of opinion throughout bore always a relation to one point, namely, the propriety of the Rohilla expedition, you will find we were almoſt without exception divided in the ſame proportion. And as, in this caſe, it would have been impoſſible to have concurred in a General Letter of arguments and opinions, we determined to leave this purely and ſimply a Letter of Advice, comprehending reſolutions and facts, and to refer to the Proceedings for the reaſoning on both ſides.

4. In our firſt Conſultation in this Department, we took into conſideration a Minute of the Governor General's reſpecting the political ſtate of affairs in India, which he had delivered in at the preceding meeting, in the other Department, with reſpect to the war, then carrying on againſt the Rohillas in aid of the Vizier. We ſoon found that our opinions on its neceſſity and propriety were likely to differ very widely. A majority of the Board, conſiſting of the Commander in Chief, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, thought it neceſſary, for better elucidating the grounds and conduct of the war, to ſee the whole of the original correſpondence between the Governor General, Mr. Middleton, Reſident at the Vizier's Court, and Colonel Champion, commanding the troops acting in conjunction with him and it was reſolved to requeſt the Governor General to lay it before the Board accordingly.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

5. The Governor General and Mr. Barwell diſſented from this Reſolution, and the former, at ſubſequent meeting, delivered in a Minute, declaring that he meant to lay before the Board ſuch parts of Mr Middleton's and Colonel Champion's correſpondence, as related to the conduct of public affairs; but as ſome of the Letters might contain things, in the courſe of a free and perſonal communication, which might not be proper for a public Record, he begged leave to decline laying the whole of them before us.

6. On this refuſal, a formal Proteſt was entered againſt it by General Clavering, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis. Mr. Monſon thereupon moved for the recal of Mr. Middleton; and it was determined by the ſame majority, that he ſhould accordingly be recalled, and ordered to repair forthwith to the Preſidency, bringing with him the whole of his correſpondence during his reſidence at the Court of the Vizier. At the ſame time it was reſolved to appoint Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer of the brigade, to treat with the Vizier in his room. Againſt both theſe Reſolutions the Governor General proteſted, and Mr. Barwell alſo diſſented from them.

7. In conſequence of theſe Reſolutions, the Commander in Chief produced at next meeting ſome Propoſitions, which he offered as the groundwork of the Inſtructions which it would be neceſſary to ſend to Colonel Champion. Theſe were fully debated in a ſubſequent Conſultation, and they were in general agreed to with ſmall variation; the Governor General and Mr. Barwell objecting to many parts of them, and entering Minutes accordingly; while, on the other hand, the Commander in Chief, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis, either jointly or ſeparately, recorded their ſentiments in the ſame manner.

8. The Inſtructions agreed on, and which were actually ſent to Colonel Champion, or the Officer commanding the ſecond brigade, were in ſubſtance, after acquainting him with the recal of Mr. Middleton, and with his own appointment to treat with the Vizier, to direct him immediately on the receipt of the Letter, to wait on the Vizier, and to demand payment of the 40 lacks due to the Company for the aid they furniſhed him in the Rohilla war, and of ſuch other ſums as would be then due in virtue of his other engagements; and we empowered him to liquidate and ſettle all accounts between the Company and the Vizier which might be unſettled at that time.

9. At the ſame time that we enjoined him to make this immediate demand for the whole, we left it in his diſcretion, ſhould he find it impoſſible for the Vizier to comply, to relax in his demand ſo far as to accept of any part, not leſs than 20 lacks in ready money, and to ſettle a kiſtbundie, or agreement, for payment by inſtalments, for the remainder, at any terms not exceeding twelve months for the laſt.

10. In caſe the Vizier ſhould refuſe to comply with the above demands, the Commanding Officer was directed to enter a Proteſt againſt him, and, within fourteen days from the receipt of theſe Inſtructions, to retire with the army under his command, and withdraw into the Company's territories.

11. But if the Vizier ſhould comply, as far as his circumſtances would admit, conformable to the terms propoſed, in that caſe the Colonel was only to withdraw the army within the province of Oude, and to continue it there for the defence of the Vizier's ancient dominions, ſhould he require it; if otherwiſe, he was to retire into the Company's territories, as in the other caſe.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

12. Theſe orders were given with ſuitable directions of caution and reſpectful moderation, as to the manner in which he was to communicate them to the Vizier, and as to his own retreat, ſhould he apprehend that any danger or difficulty might attend it.

13. Before theſe Inſtructions were reſolved upon, advices arrived of an end being put to the war by a Definitive Treaty between the Vizier and Fyzulla Cawn, who agreed to lay down his arms, and ſurrender to the former one-half of the treaſure which he had with him in his camp; and on condition of the Vizier putting him in poſſeſſion of a ſmall diſtrict, the capital of which is known by the name of Rampore, he conſented to hold it dependent on him, and to renounce all pretenſions to any other part of the country. We were further ſoon after adviſed, that on the ratification of this Treaty, the Vizier propoſed to aſſign over 15 lacks of Rupees, which he was to receive from Fyzulla Cawn in lieu of one-half of his treaſure, into the hands of Colonel Champion, in part payment of what he owed to the Company, and to ſet out immediately for Fyzabad to take meaſures for diſcharging the reſt; and we learnt at the ſame time, that Colonel Champion determined to march back with the brigade to Ramgaut, nearer to the frontiers of Oude, and there to quit the army, and to leave it under the command of Colonel Galliez, the next ſenior officer. We alſo received Letters from Mr. Grady, whom Mr. Middleton had ſent to Fyzabad to receive the money on account of the ceſſion of Cora and Illahabad, which the Vizier had ordered to be paid there before he left the army, adviſing, that he had actually received 10 lacks of rupees, and was arrived with it at Patna, where he ſtopped to receive five lacks more, which was to be paid him on the ſame account by the Rajah of Benares.

14. On receipt of theſe advices, finding the Vizier was in all probability at Fyzabad, we thought fit to alter our former Inſtructions ſo far, as to direct Colonel Champion, or the Commanding Officer, to leave the army, and repair to that capital, to wait on the Vizier in the execution of his former Inſtructions; but to reckon the fourteen days preſcribed for the retreat of the army, from the day of his meeting with the Vizier.

15. At this time the Governor General propoſed alſo, for the conſideration of the Board, whether, ſeeing that the Vizier had actually put himſelf in the way of diſcharging his engagements to the Company, and that the army had come ſo much nearer to his frontiers, it might not be proper to ſuſpend the former peremptory orders reſpecting the demands upon him, and the withdrawing of the troops; but it appearing to the majority, that there were no circumſtances in theſe events that rendered the former orders improper, the Governor's propoſal was not aſſented to.

16. Since that time we have received no further advices of any conſequence from theſe parts.

17. Some time ago, at the requiſition of the Vizier, the Governor permitted Captain Brooke to accept the command of a partizan corps in his ſervice, which he propoſed to raiſe and employ as occaſion ſhould require.

18. Although this did not coincide exactly with the ideas of the majority, reſpecting the part which we ought to take in the Vizier's military enterprizes, yet the Board, out of reſpect to the Governor General, whoſe word was pledged to the Vizier for the permiſſion to Captain Brooke, thought fit to confirm it; and the former Inſtructions given to Captain Brooke, which are in the Conſultations here referred to, appearing to us clear and proper, we alſo gave our approbation to them.

19. Thus having informed you of the material tranſactions at our Board in relation to the Rohilla expedition, which alone has hitherto divided our Councils, we once more beg leave to refer you to the Proceedings and Minutes for the reaſonings at length, by which the different opinions were ſupported; ſubmitting the whole to your impartial judgment and deciſion.

Poſtſcript; dated 6th December 1774.

The Governor General has this day delivered in a ſeparate addreſs to you, which goes a number in the packet, as does one jointly addreſſed from General Clavering, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis; a Minute of Mr. Barwell's upon the ſubject alſo makes a number in the packet. Theſe will all be recorded on the Conſultations after the cloſe of this packet.

Letter from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis.

Fort William, 30th November 1774.

General Clavering, Mr. Monſon, and Mr. Francis, lay before the Council the following Addreſs to the Court of Directors, which they had drawn up in the ſhape of a Letter, and which they deſire may be upon Record as a Minute from them.

It touches them with the higheſt concern to ſee that things are reduced to ſo unfortunate a ſituation, that a juſtification of their conduct muſt of neceſſity carry with it, and can only be ſupported by a ſtrong and deliberate cenſure of the preceding Adminiſtration. They would not have ſacrificed, as they have done, their own happineſs and peace of mind to ſo painful and laborious a diſcuſſion, if they had not been thoroughly convinced, that the queſtions agitated in the following Addreſs to the Court of Directors affect the very vitals of this State, and that, ſooner or later, they muſt be the ſubject of a ſevere parliamentary inquiſition.

The whole of theſe Papers, as they apprehend, muſt, in obedience to the Act of Parliament, be tranſmitted by the Court of Directors to one of his Majeſty's principal Secretaries of State.

J. Clavering,
Geo. Monſon,
P. Francis.

To the honourable the Court of Directors for the Affairs of the honourable United Eaſt India Company.

Fort William, 30th November 1774.

Gentlemen,

1. It will be the duty of the late Preſident and Council to tranſmit to you a complete ſtate of your affairs, in every branch of their Adminiſtration, up to the period at which they reſigned the Government. From that time you will be regularly informed, by the official Letters of the Governor General and Council, of every material occurrence and tranſaction which may have taken place ſince our arrival.

2. We are now to lay before you the reaſons which we think oblige us to addreſs you in a ſeparate Letter; and we make it our earneſt requeſt, that you will not only receive thoſe reaſons with candour and indulgence, but that you will conſider the ſubſtance of this Letter with your moſt ſerious attention. The queſtions which will neceſſarily ariſe out of it, and which muſt become the ſubject of your immediate deliberations, are, in our judgment, ſo important, that not only the preſervation of your territorial acquiſitions in this country, but perhaps the fate of the Britiſh empire in India, may depend upon the deciſion of them.

3. The ſhort time which has elapſed ſince our arrival here, has been ſo totally engroſſed by the firſt forms and multiplicity of inſtant buſineſs, that it has not been poſſible for us to poſſeſs ourſelves of any other particular knowledge of the internal ſtate of theſe provinces, than that which your Governor General has been pleaſed to communicate to us. We do not therefore pretend to give you any information from ourſelves on this head, or to anſwer perſonally for that which you will receive, either from the preſent or the late Adminiſtration. Before we have time to compare repreſentations with facts, we cannot pretend to enter minutely into any queſtion concerning the accuracy of the information tranſmitted to you by the late Preſident and Council, or laid before us by the Governor General. At the ſame time, in withholding our aſſent in many caſes, it has not been our meaning to diſpute or diſtruſt the ſtate of facts as they have been repreſented to us; on the contrary, though we thought it prudent to ſuſpend our final judgment until we ſhould be poſſeſſed of lights ſufficient to authorize us to ſpeak with ſome degree of certainty, we were inclined to receive thoſe which were given us with a preſumption in favour of their truth and exactneſs.

4. You will obſerve, that what we have ſaid relates to the internal ſtate of the country, and to the meaſures purſued by the late Preſident and Council in the management of your revenues, the produce of the collections, the conduct of your trade, and the government of the people. In theſe articles we would gladly encourage a hope, though we do not venture to ſuggeſt it to you, that your expectations may not be diſappointed. Our preſent addreſs will be confined to the conſideration of the new ſyſtem of external policy, in which we found the late Adminiſtration had engaged the Company, and of which neither you nor we had any knowledge or ſuſpicion when we left England. On this ſubject we ſhall deliver our thoughts to you with that clearneſs and preciſion which ariſes from knowledge in point of facts, and from abſolute conviction in point of opinion.

5. Let us begin with aſſuring you, that we came into this country impreſſed with the higheſt idea of the character of our Colleagues, and of the wiſdom and ability with which your affairs had been conducted under Mr. Haſtings. We came determined, as far as that idea could found a determination of future conduct, to unite heartily with him in the ſupport of his Adminiſtration. The truſt repoſed in us by the Legiſlature, our duty to you, and the conſideration of our own perſonal eaſe and happineſs, did all equally concur in leading us to cultivate the friendſhip and confidence of our Colleagues, and to promote, as much as poſſible, a general harmony in our Councils. Yet you will ſee, upon the face of our firſt Conſultations, that the majority of the Board have already reſolved on ſome meaſures of the greateſt importance, in direct contradiction to the opinion of your Governor General; and that this difference of opinion has been attended with diſpute and altercation between us.

6. It is in order to avoid a continuance of altercations, highly painful to ourſelves, and by which the moderation and gravity of our debates is liable to be interrupted, our minds heated, and the progreſs of public buſineſs retarded, that we have thought it expedient to addreſs you in this ſeparate Letter. You cannot but be ſenſible of the impoſſibility of forming a general Letter for the ſignature of a Council divided into two opinions, diametrically oppoſite to each other, upon the ſubject and materials of it. From the knowledge we have of the ſentiments of the Governor General, we are convinced that every paragraph would be the ſubject of a debate, in which one part of your Council would affirm, and the other would deny; and that ſuch debates could not fail of being attended with diſtreſs to every Member of the Council, and with the greateſt inconvenience to your affairs. At the ſame time we underſtand, and are determined to adhere to the eſtabliſhed forms of communicating the Proceedings of the Council to our Superiors. We hope indeed, that ſo extraordinary an occaſion of departing from them, as we fear we do in the form of this addreſs, will not preſent itſelf hereafter.

7. The ſituation of the Company's political affairs, with the actual ſtate of the provinces in point of defence againſt invaſion or inſult, muſt at all events have formed one of the firſt and principal objects of our enquiries. We ſhould have been happy in finding theſe important objects ſo honourably and ſecurely provided for, as to have permitted us to turn our thoughts immediately to the internal circumſtances and condition of this Government. We flattered ourſelves that we ſhould find peace in India; or at leaſt that, if hoſtile meaſures had been adopted by your ſervants againſt any of the Powers of this country, they would appear to be founded on the neceſſity of defending your own poſſeſſions, or thoſe of your Allies, and on the general principles of policy and juſtice.

8. Long before this Letter can reach England, you will have been informed of the engagements entered into by the late Adminiſtration with Sujah Dowla, and the aſſiſtance given him to invade and ſubdue the Rohillas. The firſt accounts we heard of theſe tranſactions filled us with anxiety and ſurprize. We thought it our duty to enquire minutely into them, not only for your information, but for our own direction; and we ſhall now lay before you the reſult of our enquiries. We propoſe that this Letter, with the Papers annexed to it, ſhall contain a complete a repreſentation of the ſtate of the engagements with the Vizier, as far as they appear, and of the conduct of the late Preſident and Council on this occaſion, as far as it hath fallen within our knowledge. We lament the neceſſity to which we are reduced, of looking back with diſapprobation to any former meaſures; and heartily wiſh it were poſſible for us to vindicate our own conduct, without condemning that of the preceding Adminiſtration.

9. You will obſerve by the Governor General's Minute of the 4th of October 1773, that the enterprize againſt the Rohillas furniſhed the firſt occaſion of his interview with the Vizier; yet in the Treaty concluded between them at Benares on the 8th of September 1773, no mention or intimation whatſoever is made of this intended expedition. The Treaty is confined to the ſale of Korab and Illiabad, and to the pecuniary terms on which the Company ſhould yield him the aſſiſtance of their arms, conformably to the defenſive ſyſtem eſtabliſhed by the Treaty of 1765, and now extended to the territories which he had acquired by purchaſe. The conqueſt, and, as it has ſince appeared, the ruin and extirpation of a brave and independent, though, from the nature of their conſtitution, a weak and divided nation, who, ſo far from having ever been conſidered as the natural enemies of the Company or of the Vizier, were included but the year before in the line of defence againſt the Marattas, was reſolved upon in a private converſation between your Preſident and Sujah Dowla, from which the Commander in Chief was expreſsly excluded, and to which no other Member of your Adminiſtration was privy, though Mr. Lawrell, Mr. Vanſittart, and Mr. Secretary Stewart, were upon the ſpot. When you are thoroughly informed of all the circumſtances and conſequences of this tranſaction, you may perhaps agree with us in thinking, that it was not of a nature to be ſupported by any oſtenſible motives, or to bear the appearance of a formal Treaty.

10. When Mr. Haſtings returned to the Preſidency, he made a Report to the Board of his negociations with the Vizier. As this Paper is very long, and as it has already been tranſmitted to you in the Conſultations of the 4th of October 1773, we ſhall only beg to encloſe a copy of one paragraph, there being no other part of the Report that has relation to the preſent ſubject; we mean, however, to annex complete copies of every other document to which we refer. The whole of the Papers entered on your Records will be highly worthy of your peruſal. Thoſe which we have ſelected for the immediate illuſtration of this Letter are entire. On matters of ſuch delicacy and moment, we will not truſt ourſelves with the partial power of extracting.

11. Mr. Haſtings's Report above-mentioned is dated the 4th of October 1773. He therein ſtates to the Council, that the Vizier was at firſt very deſirous of the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh force to put him in poſſeſſion of the Rohilla country, but that he afterwards laid aſide the deſign; and that the meaſures to be purſued for his ſecurity on that quarter muſt be determined by future occurrences.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

rences. The Preſident thereupon obſerves, " that he " was pleaſed that the Vizier had urged the ſcheme of " this expedition no farther, as it would have led our " troops to a diſtance from our own borders, which he " would wiſh ever to avoid, though there were powerful " arguments to recommend it."

12. When you refer to the ſhort paragraph from which theſe paſſages are taken, you will be led to conclude, that the Preſident had communicated to the Council the whole of what had paſſed between himſelf and the Vizier on the ſubject of the Rohilla expedition; that the project of the expedition was laid aſide; that he had entered into no poſitive engagements on this ſubject; and that the queſtion, whether the Vizier ſhould, or ſhould not, be aſſiſted in attacking the Rohillas, whenever it ſhould recur, would be open and entire for the deciſion of the Board. You will ſoon find, however, that much more had paſſed on this ſubject than Mr. Haſtings at firſt thought fit to impart to his Council; and that his communications to them were very gradual and reſerved. The ſecret of the important buſineſs tranſacted between the Vizier and Mr. Haſtings appears to us to have been equally withheld from the Court of Directors. In the Letter of the 12th October 1773, in which the Treaty of Benares is communicated to you, there is not one word, nor the moſt diſtant intimation, expreſſive of the private engagements contracted at the ſame inſtant by Mr Haſtings for invading the Rohillas. You could not poſſibly underſtand from that Letter, or from any of the Papers annexed to it, " that the ex- " pedition againſt the Rohillas remained only ſuſpended; " or that he had given the Vizier every reaſon to expect, " that whenever it could again be with prudence re- " ſumed, and he deſired it, it ſhould be undertaken;" yet a packet was diſpatched to England on purpoſe to inform you of the reſult of the Preſident's negociations at Benares. Subſequent events, however, ſoon obliged Mr. Haſtings to give farther explanations of his conduct.

12. The Vizier, who was ſuppoſed to have laid aſide all thoughts of the expedition againſt the Rohillas, appears to have reſumed them ſuddenly. About the middle of November he ſent up his requiſition for aſſiſtance in that project. The Preſident laid it, with an explanatory Minute of his own, before the Select Committee, by whom the buſineſs was referred to the Council at large. Their reſolution to comply with that part of the Vizier's requiſition which related to the invaſion of the Rohillas, is annexed to the encloſed copy of the Preſident's Minute of the 26th of November 1773. He therein ſtates, for the firſt time, the verbal engagements which he had entered into with the Vizier, the embarraſſing ſituation to which he was perſonally reduced, and how much he was hampered by them. He then recommends an expedient which he thinks calculated to remove all difficulties. That we may not interrupt the narrative part of this Letter, we ſhall reſerve another place for our obſervations upon the arguments and opinions advanced by the Preſident. The expedient propoſed was, to conſent to the expedition on ſuch beneficial terms to the Company as might be likely to make the Vizier relinquiſh the deſign rather than agree to them. This idea was adopted by the Council, who profeſſed themſelves ſenſible of the embarraſſment which the Preſident lay under, from what had paſſed on the ſubject between him and the Vizier at Benares. They accordingly agreed to the propoſed Letter, (encloſed N° 3,) the conditions of which, as they obſerved, " if " accepted, would undoubtedly ſecure the greateſt poſ- " ſible advantages from ſuch an enterprize; but they ap- " pear to them more calculated to drive the Vizier into " a refuſal, which is what they truſt in, as its moſt pro- " bable and almoſt infallible conſequence, and which " they wiſh for, as the proper reſult of this propoſition, " in the preſent circumſtances of affairs."

13. This, Gentlemen, is all the approbation which the Preſident's conduct receives from his own Council, and all the ſanction which they give to his engagements. They concur heartily in wiſhing to avoid the expedition propoſed, and declare it to be their wiſh and expectation, that the Vizier may be driven to a refuſal of the conditions, notwithſtanding thoſe conditions would ſecure the greateſt poſſible advantages to the Company. Such an aſſent to a meaſure of ſuch critical importance, eſpecially from a Council which had not lately been accuſtomed to differ from their Preſident, is, in our opinion, equivalent to the moſt ſolemn condemnation.

14. At the ſame time that the Letter, as agreed on, was ſent to Sujah Dowla, to be tranſcribed and ſigned by him, a proviſional order for the march of the brigade at Dinapore was diſpatched to the Chief at Patna, to remain in his hands, in caſe the Vizier ſhould accept the terms, and require the brigade to join him. When you conſider the reluctance with which the meaſure is adopted, you will rather expect that the execution of it ſhould be retarded by farther conſultations, than that it ſhould be forwarded by this extraordinary precaution.

15. At this ſtage of the tranſaction, the firſt advices, dated 17th of January 1774, from the Secret Department, inform you, that " it was with pleaſure they " found the plan they had adopted anſwer ſo completely " to their intentions. The Vizier, on receipt of the " Preſident's Letter, written agreeably to the Reſolution " of the Board, returned an immediate anſwer, declining " their aſſiſtance in his diſtant expeditions on the condi- " tions they required; but at the ſame time deſiring the " brigade might be held in readineſs to march, whenever " he ſhould find it neceſſary to call on them for the de- " fence of his own dominions." They add, that " this " affair being happily terminated in the manner they " wiſhed, they ſhall now remain ſpectators only of the " operations of the different Powers in thoſe diſtant " parts; preſerving however a watchful eye over the " courſe of events, that they may be prepared to inter- " poſe, whenever the intereſts of the Honourable Com- " pany are likely to be affected by them." That, " with this view, they ſhall, in compliance with the " Vizier's requeſt, hold one brigade in readineſs to " march to his aſſiſtance within his own territories, in- " cluding the provinces of Corah and Allahabad:" and they " acknowledge they ſhall not be ſorry to find that " he calls for them on this footing, as they ſhall then be " eaſed of ſo conſiderable a part of the military expence, " and have the diſcipline of the troops preſerved, in " an actual ſervice, at ſo little diſtance from our own " territories."

16. The hopes which you probably formed upon the receipt of the preceding Letter, muſt have been ſoon diſappointed by that which followed it from the Select Committee, dated the 17th of March. About the latter end of January, the Vizier, who appears to us hitherto not ſo much to have varied, as to have artfully concealed his real intentions about the Rohilla war, ſent his Letter to the Preſident, containing the terms on which he accepted our aſſiſtance, to the Chief at Patna, with a requiſition for the march of the ſecond brigade; which was immediately complied with. We had rather attribute the apparent changes in the Vizier's reſolutions to the duplicity of his character, than ſuppoſe it poſſible that the Preſident was from the firſt acquainted with his real intentions, and that he made uſe of artifice to draw or extort from your Council an involuntary concurrence in his meaſures. Your aſſiſtance is propoſed to be yielded to the Vizier on terms, profeſſedly ſo diſadvantageous to him, that he cannot be expected to accept of it. That conditional engagement being once extorted from your Council, they can no longer recede from it, when the Vizier almoſt immediately accepts the conditions.

17. Obſerving that the Vizier's Letter is not an exact tranſcript of the draft ſent him by the Preſident, as it ought ought to have been, we ſubmit it to your judgment how far the alterations are material. But the difference between the accounts given you of the object of the requiſition by the Board at large, and by the Select Committee, ſeems to us very remarkable. The former, in the 5th paragraph of their Letter from the Secret Department, dated the 15th of March 1774, tell you, "that the declared intention of the Vizier on this requiſition, is ſtill the conqueſt of the Rohilla country." The Select Committee, in the 9th paragraph of their Letter of the ſame date, inform you, "that the brigade "will probably be employed only in protecting his "Country, while he is carrying on his operations againſt "the Maratta diſtrict." Conſidering that the Vizier himſelf expreſsly ſays, that it is his reſolution to employ the brigade in the reduction of the Rohillas, this laſt intimation from the Select Committee appears to us wholly unaccountable.

18. We find that the brigade entered the Rohilla country on the 17th of April laſt, and that the united armies obtained a complete victory over the Rohilla Chiefs on the 23d following. From that time we muſt refer you to the Letters recorded in your Conſultations for the farther operations of the Vizier, his barbarous and unneceſſary devaſtation of the Country, the cruelty with which he treated his unhappy priſoners, and particularly the brutal outrages offered to their wives and daughters, though of the firſt rank. In the Letters of Colonel Champion you will find a detail of theſe proceedings, which he calls wanton enormities (uncontradicted, though palliated by the Governor's private Agent) which we doubt not will fill you with horror. We encloſe copies of three of them, in order to excite and fix your attention to the reſt. One paragraph in that of the 15th of June is ſo ſtriking, that we cannot forbear inſerting it here. "I am moſt heartily diſpoſed to believe, that the "Board did not ſuſpect their orders could have ſuch "conſequences as have fallen out; they could not have "foreſeen ſo ſudden and ſo total an expulſion and down-"fall of a whole race of people; they could not have "ſuppoſed that a man, exalted and ſupported by Britiſh "arms, could pay ſo very little deference to the ad-"vices and counſel of a Britiſh Commander; nor was "it poſſible to conceive that a man, who had himſelf "taſted the gall of misfortune, ſhould be ſo totally "unmindful of the unbounded and unparalleled grace "ſhewn to him, as to delight in denying a ſingle ray of "benevolence to others; ſuch, however, has been the "caſe; and, in due intimation of it, I have diſcharged "that which was incumbent upon me. I too can ſay "that the Nabob, as the agent of oppreſſion, is alone "culpable; but whilſt all Aſia knows that the Engliſh "gave him the rod, and whilſt they in vain look up to "them as thoſe who ought, if not to direct the applica-"tion, at leaſt to prevent an ill uſe being made of that "rod, will they not reaſonably conclude, that the "ſcourges which the Agent gives are connived at? "Will they not ſay, that every Engliſh Chief is another "Sujah?"

19. Theſe details, Gentlemen, would probably never have reached your knowledge, if we had not called for Mr. Haſtings's private Correſpondence with Colonel Champion and Mr. Nathaniel Middleton. Even now, that Correſpondence is laid before us in ſo broken and imperfect a ſtate, and ſo many Letters belonging to it conſeſſedly withheld, that we do not for ourſelves heſitate to conclude, that facts and circumſtances, ſtill more atrocious than any that appear, are ſuppreſſed.

20. The moſt important chaſm in Mr. Middleton's Correſpondence is from the 1ſt of March to the 29th, and from that time to the 23d of April. The firſt of thoſe Letters is dated at Illahabad; the ſecond from Coreah Kunge, though written only to acknowledge Mr. Haſtings's Letter of the 10th, ſhews that Mr. Middleton was then with the Vizier; but it does not appear how long he had been with him. The Letter of the 1ſt of March is docketed N° 3, that of the 29th N° 7; ſo that there are three Letters miſſing, excluſive of that of the 15th of February, of which mention is made below. The next Letter is of ſo late a date as the 23d of April, giving account of the battle; but as neither that or any of t ſubſequent Letters are numbered, we cannot diſco how many are withheld. It appears plainly, howev that Mr. Middleton had not been ſilent in the interv for Mr. Haſtings, in his Letter to him of the 19th April, acknowledges the receipt of his ſeveral Lett from the 15th of February to the 3d of April, thereſ if no other are withheld, thoſe two abovementioned certainly ſo. The Letter of the 15th of February m have been the firſt Letter in the Correſpondence, as t next date (viz. February the 18th) is docketed N° what the ſubject of it was can only be matter of conj ture; but it ſeems to us probable, that it related to t ſecret inſtructions which Mr. Middleton had receiv independent of his public ones. It is needleſs to tra the other Letters which have been withheld, as it ſufficient for the preſent purpoſe to ſhew, that if t above four Letters of the 15th of February, N° 1, w the numbers 4, 5, and 6, had been produced, we mig have been enabled to have formed a competent jud ment of the real nature of the engagements with t Vizier.

21. We ſhall offer but one obſervation more on t broken ſtate of this Correſpondence. Mr. Haſtings ha ing alledged, that his chief reaſon for withholding t above Letters was, that they related to a difference b tween the Vizier and Colonel Champion, it may neceſſary to ſhew, that none of the above four Lett could relate to that ſubject. Mr. Haſtings, in his Let of the 22d of May, acknowledges Mr. Middleton's 23d, 24th, and 29th of April. The date of the firſt thoſe Letters cloſes the chaſm. The ſuppoſed differen could not have been mentioned in any Letters writt within the period of the chaſm, becauſe Mr. Haſtings, the above Letters of the 22d of May, after informi Mr. Middleton of the complaints he had received fro Colonel Champion againſt the Vizier, adds, "yo "ſilence on theſe ſubjects, with which I cannot ſuppo "you unacquainted, &c. &c." This proves the i poſſibility that any of Mr. Middleton's Letters compr hended in the chaſm could relate to Colonel Champio difference with the Vizier.

22. When you examine the orders ſucceſſively ſent Colonel Champion, you will find that the Select Co mittee had conſented to extend the operations of yo troops beyond even the line of the Rohilla dominio We refer to their Proceedings of the 22d of Augu the 17th of September laſt. By the firſt, Colonel Cha pion is directed to aſſiſt the Vizier in reducing the front Zemindars, with whom the fugitive Rohillas may ta refuge; by the ſecond he is permitted to croſs t Ganges, if the Vizier ſhould require it, in purſuit of t remains of his enemies. This laſt Reſolution of t Select Committee appears to have alarmed the Boar in conſequence of which the brigade is limited to o day's march on the other ſide of the Ganges.

23. On the 23d of May the firſt orders were ſent Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton to make a dema of the 40 lacks then due to the Company, according the expreſs terms of the Vizier's Letters; but that c mand, as you will ſee in Mr. Middleton's Letter of t 18th of June, having been evaded by the Vizier, t buſineſs was immediately taken up with a greater a pearance of firmneſs by the Government here, thou with as little effect.

24. On the 14th of July the Select Committee, co ſidering the forty lacks ſtipulated for the Company inconteſtably due, deſire the Preſident to cauſe the c mand to be repeated, with a poſitive declaration of c immediate right to the money. We encloſe you a co of their Reſolution, and of Mr. Haſtings's Letter Mr. Middleton on this ſubject; in conſequence of whi the demand was again made by Colonel Champion with as little ſucceſs as before. In theſe Papers you will ſee the arguments in ſupport of the demand fully ſtated, and the Company's right clearly eſtabliſhed; on the other hand, you will ſee and judge of the validity of the Vizier's reaſons for not making good this engagement to the Company in the anſwers of Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton, to which we refer you. The plain matter of fact is, that on the 10th of this inſtant (November) no part of the forty lacks had yet been paid.

25. When you compare this delay with the means that the Vizier apparently had in his power to liquidate a much larger account, as well from the plunder of the Country as from the diviſion of Fyzulla Cawn's treaſures ſettled by the late capitulation, you will not perhaps entertain very ſanguine hopes of ſoon receiving the price of your aſſiſtance. At all events we think it muſt be admitted, that in order to bind the Vizier to a punctual performance of his engagements, it is neceſſary to expreſs firmneſs as well as amity in our negociations with him. Colonel Champion, in his Letter of the 14th of June, plainly calls him the moſt faithleſs of men, and in a ſubſequent Letter adheres to and defends the deſcription. Even Mr. Haſtings's private Agent, whoſe inclinations, or inſtructions, evidently lead him to ſoften and palliate every repreſentation of the Vizier's miſconduct, does not ſcruple to ſay, in his Letter of the 20th of September laſt, that "he has experienced much duplicity, "evaſion, and deceit, in moſt of his tranſactions with "his Excellency."

26. Such is the man, who, as it appears to us, has had the Britiſh arms and honour abſolutely at his diſpoſal, and dared to tell your Preſidency that he is the maſter of your army. As Colonel Champion expreſſes himſelf, The Britiſh name is in the hand of the Vizier. Confounded by appearances which we are unable to account for, we look in vain for oſtenſible cauſes adequate to ſuch effects, and confeſs, that every enquiry we make fills us with equal diffidence and ſurprize. We ſhall not, however, anticipate any conjectures which may ariſe in your mind, when you review the whole conduct of this dark myſterious buſineſs from firſt to laſt, and reflect upon the abſolute ſurrender which has been made, with ſo little apparent compenſation, of your honour and intereſt to the vindictive or capricious projects of Suja Dowla.

27. When you have united the conſideration of the faithleſs character univerſally attributed to the Vizier, with the moderation ſo long, but ſo ineffectually obſerved by the late Government in their applications to him, we apprehend that the meaſures we have ſince reſolved on, to obtain from him ſomething more ſubſtantial than promiſes, will ſtand juſtified in your opinion. If thoſe promiſes were ſincere, they ought to be complied with long before Colonel Champion can receive our orders on the ſubject.

28. We arrived and landed at Fort William on Wedneſday the 19th of October. The next day was ſpent in ſettling the Proclamation of the new Government, which ought not to have been a matter of much debate. At the Governor's deſire we then adjourned to the Monday following; but it was not till the next day (Tueſday the 25th) that he gave us any light into the political ſtate of the Country.

29. During this interval we were left in the moſt anxious, not to ſay diſgraceful ſituation. Public report ſoon informed us of the nature of the enterprizes in which your troops were engaged. Not receiving the leaſt communication from the Governor General, either public or private, on this ſubject, we employed the days of adjournment in examining and collecting, as carefully as we could, every information relative to it, with which the Records in the Secretary's office could furniſh us. From this inſpection we found the ſtate of facts, up to the time of our arrival, to be exactly what we have repreſented. We found a third part of your army engaged in an offenſive war, which had carried them to a diſtance from your own provinces far greater than that of Delhi; and that they were actually ſtationed at a place ſo remote, that it is not comprehended within any of the ordinary maps of Indoſtan. Our alarm and anxiety at ſight of this authentic intelligence, can only be equalled by that, which we believe you will yourſelves have felt when you firſt received it. We ſaw your provinces ſtripped of one-third of their defence; the lines repeatedly and moſt peremptorily drawn by you, for the conduct of your ſervants towards the princes of Indoſtan, manifeſtly tranſgreſſed; in ſhort, the whole defenſive ſyſtem of your wiſe and pacific policy completely overturned.

30. Theſe were the facts which we were to expect would be explained and accounted for, and which, united with the explanations we might receive of them, were to determine our future meaſures. In ſuch circumſtances, Gentlemen, we appeal not to your candour but to your judgment, and deſire that it may be applied to our conduct with rigour and ſeverity.

31. Poſſeſſed of the above facts, we ſtill ſuſpended our final opinion of them, until we ſhould hear the arguments by which the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration might be defended, and receive an explanation of the motives on which they had acted.

32. On Tueſday the 25th the Governor General laid before us the encloſed Minute which he had prepared for our inſtruction. It appeared to us far from ſatisfactory, a majority of the Board reſolved upon a motion made by the Commander in Chief, that the Governor General ſhould be requeſted to lay before us his complete original correſpondence with Colonel Champion from the time the brigade marched, and with Mr. Middleton, whom, till then, we underſtood to be the Company's Reſident at the Vizier's Court. The communication we requeſted being refuſed by the Governor General, for reaſons which, in our opinion, ſo far from explaining, added myſtery to the whole tranſaction; we thought it neceſſary for our own juſtification to proteſt againſt his refuſal. Copies of the Governor General's Minute, and of our Proteſt, are encloſed. Mr. Monſon then moved, that Mr. Middleton, who, though a Company's ſervant, and paid by the Company, was ſtiled the private Agent of the late Preſident, and whoſe Correſpondence was withheld from us, ſhould be immediately recalled to the Preſidency. This motion being agreed to, produced another Minute from the Governor General, the ſubſtance of which ſhall be conſidered in its proper place.

33. We ſhould have thought it our duty to have proceeded immediately to the recal of the brigade within the Company's territories, or at leaſt within the original dominions of the Vizier, but for the vehement oppoſition made to that propoſal by the Governor General. He urged that there were a number of Records and Letters ſtill to be conſulted, particularly ſuch parts of his Correſpondence with Colonel Champion and Mr. Middleton as he could properly lay before us; and that the peruſal of them would probably alter our preſent opinions. We were ſenſible that the caſe required diſpatch, yet we yielded to his authority, and deferred the farther conſideration of the recal of the brigade for three days.

34. On Friday the 28th the heads of inſtructions propoſed to be given to the Commanding Officer of the ſecond brigade, were laid before the Board by General Clavering, and the conſideration of them deferred till the Monday following. On that day it was reſolved by the majority, that a Letter ſhould be drawn up in conformity to the above heads. This Letter, of which we encloſe you a copy, was diſpatched on the 4th of November. The arguments by which the Reſolutions of the majority were oppoſed or defended, appear fully in the Minutes of the ſeveral Members entered on your Conſultations. After the diſpatch of our firſt inſtructions to Colonel Champion, you will ſee that the Board have agreed to prolong the term limited for the departure of the brigade out of the Rohilla country, in order to give the Commanding Officer time to go and return from Ramgaut to Fizabad.

Fizabad. As the Vizier had quitted the army before our firſt Letter could be received, this alteration became abſolutely neceſſary. On the 14th of November the Governor propoſed that the brigade ſhould be continued at Ramgaut, until the Vizier's Government ſhould be effectually eſtabliſhed in his new-acquired poſſeſſions. You will ſee in our reſpective Minutes the reaſons for and againſt this Propoſition. It was rejected by the majority.

35. It will give us the higheſt pleaſure to be able to tell you, that the Vizier has made good his pecuniary engagements to the Company before he received our laſt requiſition. The Governor General's expectations on this head are very ſanguine; and conſidering every thing but the character of the Vizier, are undoubtedly well founded. But whether they may be diſappointed or accompliſhed, the propriety of the meaſures we have reſolved on, forms a queſtion totally independent of that event, and muſt be determined by itſelf.

36. The general principle on which we have acted, and which we mean to make the rule of our future policy and conduct, is no other than that, which your authority and that of the Legiſlature have equally preſcribed to us; —to maintain PEACE in INDIA. The preſervation of peace neceſſarily includes the vigorous defence of your own poſſeſſions, with ſuch parts of the dominions of your Allies as are guaranteed by Treaty. On the other hand it excludes every idea of conqueſt, either for yourſelves or others. Adhering to this ſyſtem, we never can engage your arms in any offenſive operations for the aggrandizement of one Indian State at the expence of another; much leſs could we have ſuffered the little States, which at the ſame time formed your barrier, and looked up to you for protection, to be ſwallowed up by the great ones. Had we arrived in this Country ten months ſooner, we ſhould have ſaved a nation. Theſe are our principles, Gentlemen; let our actions be tried by them.

37. You are now in poſſeſſion of all the material facts reſpecting the Rohilla war which have fallen within our knowledge. The Country is reduced; your troops have conquered it for the Vizier; to finiſh the tranſaction, it only remains that you ſhould receive the price of your ſervices.

38. We ſhall now lay before you our obſervations on the conduct and avowed doctrines of the late Preſident, in the ſame order in which we have ſtated the facts. Let us firſt, however, obſerve to you, that if the future peace and ſecurity of theſe provinces were not likely, as we think they are, to be affected by the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, we ſhould not have undertaken the painful office of examining into and cenſuring any thing concluded before our arrival. We know not what fatal conſequences may follow from a falſe ſyſtem of policy, already carried into execution in ſo capital an inſtance, or how far they may extend. Whatever they may be, or whenever they may take place, it is fit that you ſhould know with exactneſs from what origin they ſpring. But, beſides the conſideration of particular meaſures and their effects, you will find that here are opinions as well as facts before you; that there are general principles of policy laid down, and general motives of action ſtated, which for our future guidance you muſt either approve of or condemn.

39. The Preſident's Minute of the 26th of November 1773, begins with ſaying, "that he has long conſidered the power of the Rohillas as dangerous to the Vizier, and that as ſuch he wiſhed to ſee it annihilated." The obvious meaning of this Propoſition is very different from that which the Preſident himſelf annexes to it. You will find that, in his apprehenſion, it was the weakneſs, not the ſtrength of the Rohillas, which rendered them formidable to the Vizier. "The Soubadar of Oude muſt always be an object of jealouſy and enmity to the Rohillas; his power is to be dreaded by them." As Mr. Haſtings has explained himſelf to us, the conſequence of their jealouſy and dread of the Vizier was, that they were at all times ready to unite with his enemies, and to diſturb the peace of his dominions. Admitting this repreſentation to be true, we do not think it follows, that the power of a people, becauſe they are weak, divided, and defenceleſs, becauſe they live in dread of a ſuperior neighbour, ſhould therefore be annihilated.

40. We ſtate the reaſoning fairly as we receive it, and ſhall leave it unanſwered.—The ſuppoſed facts on which it is founded, are contradicted by unqueſtionable authorities.—Every thing that has been ſaid of the weakneſs of the Rohillas is indeed ſtrictly true. Your Select Committee, in their Letter of the 30th of December 1773, tell you, that, "of the neighbouring powers, "the Marattas only are formidable to your poſſeſſions; "the reſt are weak, and, the Vizier alone excepted, every "way inconſiderable." With reſpect to the Rohillas, we have ſeen their fate decided in one ſlight conteſt, and their Country reduced as faſt as our army could march over it. But we deny that they were formidable to the Vizier, even in that ſenſe in which the Governor General underſtands that a little State may be dangerous to a great one. Though we could ſupport our opinion by a multiplicity of evidence, not to be reſiſted, we think it ſufficient to deſire your attention to the following paragraph of Colonel Champion's Letter, of the 12th of July laſt, to Mr. Haſtings.—"If ſtrangers, my good Sir, to what "has paſſed in theſe countries, were to read your Letter, "they would be led to imagine, that the Vizier had "been conſtantly haraſſed by the Rohillas; that they "had been in uſe of making continual inroads into his "Country, and of calling foreign aid to diſtreſs him; "in ſhort, that without reducing them there could be "no ſafety, no reſt for Suja Dowla: but I have never "heard it alledged, even by the Vizier himſelf, that "theſe people had ever betrayed any indication of a "diſpoſition to encroach on him, or give him the "ſmalleſt cauſe of diſtreſs." You have a copy of this Letter encloſed, and we beg leave to recommend the whole of it to your conſideration.

41. We return to the Preſident's Minute, which ſoon explains the true motives and object of the war. "The "ſituation of the Rohilla country muſt make the poſſeſſion of it "always a deſirable object to the Vizier." As the truth of this aſſertion is not to be diſputed, we ſhall only obſerve upon it, that the moſt barefaced ambition is ſeldom ſo explicit. He would obtain, by this acquiſition, a compleat compact State, ſhut in effectually from foreign inveſions; it would give him wealth, of which we ſhould partake; and ſecurity, without any dangerous increaſe of power; and would undoubtedly, by bringing his frontier nearer to the Marattas, for whom ſingly he could be no match, render him more dependent on us.—In theſe lines it appears to us, that there is but one intelligible propoſition, viz that by the conqueſt of the Rohillas the Vizier would acquire wealth of which we ſhould partake. The expectation of ſharing in the ſpoils of a people, who have given us no cauſe of quarrel whatſoever, is plainly avowed to be a motive for invading them. We believe there may have been inſtances of wars undertaken on principles as unwiſe and as unjuſt as theſe, but we doubt whether there ever was an example of the Chief of a great State profeſſing to reckon the probable acquiſition of wealth among his reaſons for taking up arms againſt his neighbours.

42. The remainder of the preceding quotation is involved in contradiction and obſcurity. The Vizier, it is ſaid, obtains a complete compact State, ſhut in effectually from foreign invaſion; yet the ſame acquiſition of territory, which is to give him ſecurity, without any dangerous increaſe of power, undoubtedly brings his frontier nearer the Marattas, for whom he is ſingly no match, and renders him the more dependent on us. The amount of this argument, as far as we can underſtand ſuch nice refinements, ſeems to be, that the Vizier, by extending his frontier, becomes ſo much the more open and vulnerable nerable to the Marattas; and that by giving him poſſeſſions, which he cannot defend without our aſſiſtance, his dependence on us is effectually enſured. We fear indeed that there is too much truth in theſe ſuppoſitions, and that the ſucceſs of the late expedition will ſerve only to furniſh the Marattas with better means and pretences for attacking our Ally; conſequently that it entails upon us a war with that people. But where is that ſecurity, that compact State, ſo effectually ſhut in from foreign invaſions, which the acquiſition of the Rohilla country was to give to Suja Dowla?

43. In many parts of the Minute before you, the Preſident acknowledges the doubts and embarraſſment of his mind. In our opinion, every line of it proclaims the diſtreſs to which he was reduced; we ſhall not therefore be very earneſt in preſſing our objections upon him. Let us only obſerve, that we are very ſorry to ſee any mixture of ſophiſtry in the diſcuſſion of queſtions, on which the fate of millions may depend.

44. Beſides the forty lacks held out to us, the Preſident inſiſts upon the benefit of your being immediately eaſed of the burthen of one-third of your army, while at the ſame time it is employed uſefully for your intereſts, and conveniently for keeping up its own diſcipline and practice in war. With reſpect to all the payments made, or to be made, by Suja Dowla to the Company, you may perhaps over-rate your expected wealth, if you do not obſerve, that the ſums ſtipulated in the ſeveral agreements with him are to be paid in rupees of the currency of Oude, which either have no fixed ſtandard or whoſe ſtandard is unknown here. The payments hitherto have been made partly in old and new Benares rupees, and partly in Vizery rupees of different years, the intrinſic value of which cannot be computed, either from their number in tale, or from their ſtamp. As a foundation, however, to enable you to judge of the whole value of the ſeveral ſums received, or to be received, from Suja Dowla, whether on account of the fifty lacks ſtipulated by the Treaty of Benares, or of the forty lacks for the Rohilla war, or of the monthly ſubſidy to the brigade; we beg leave to ſtate to you, that twenty-one lacks of the above rupees, upon being recoined at your mints, have produced only a ſum equivalent to ſicca rupees 1,829,184. 7. 6.

45. With reſpect to the relief which the monthly ſubſidy promiſes to the Company, we deſire that you will ſuſpend your judgment, until we can obtain for you an exact account of the extraordinary expences of the brigade ſince they marched from Dinapore, and which muſt be defrayed by the Company. This account cannot be made up at preſent. We are, however, inclined to think, from what we have already heard and ſeen, that when the extraordinary expences incurred by the brigade's being employed on ſo diſtant a ſervice ſhall be taken into calculation, the ſaving to the Company, in conſequence of Suja Dowla's ſubſidy, will not, upon the whole, be very conſiderable. If a computation be made of the hire of boats, the price and conveyance of ſtores and field equipage, Mr. Middleton's ordinary and extraordinary allowances, the pay of a troop of cavalry, raiſed expreſsly for this expedition, but not included in the eſtimate on which the ſubſidy was ſettled, the charge of recruiting, with all the train of contingencies which in this Country particularly attend any diſtant operations in the field, we ſhall be juſtified perhaps in foretelling, that the Company will gain as little in point of profit, as they do in point of honour, from the mercenary ſervices to which their arms have been degraded.

46. You have now, Gentlemen, materials ſufficient to determine, whether this part of your army have in truth been uſefully employed in your intereſts, and how far the keeping up of their diſcipline and practice in war, without reference to any juſt cauſe of quarrel, is a motive fit to be mentioned for drawing the ſword againſt a nation which never gave you offence, and from which you never could have had any thing to fear.

47. We ſhall diſmiſs the Preſident's Minute with one general obſervation. It ſtates no grounds of quarrel whatſoever with the Rohillas, nor does it contain a ſingle word to juſtify the cauſe in which your troops were to fight. The Preſident's argument, ſuch as it is, turns ſolely upon topics of intereſt or convenience, and the mutual benefits which the contracting parties were likely to derive from the expedition.

48. You have ſeen with what reluctance the meaſures in which the Preſident alone ventured to engage the Company, were adopted by his own Council. Acting in direct oppoſition to your orders, and to every authority which they ought to have reſpected, they could not but be alarmed at the unuſual degree of reſponſibility annexed to ſuch an undertaking.—Yet even ſuppoſing this difficulty to be removed, there ſtill remained another obſtacle, which you will probably have thought could never have been ſurmounted. We mean, the repeated and ſolemn declarations made by Mr. Haſtings and his Council, from the commencement of his Government up to April 1773, of their reſolution to adhere invariably to the defenſive ſyſtem preſcribed to them by your inſtructions, of their own hearty approbation of that ſyſtem, and of their abhorrence of every meaſure that might tend to implicate the Company in the ambitious views of Suja Dowla, or involve you in offenſive wars againſt your neighbours.

49. We have ſelected ſome of the moſt ſtriking of theſe Declarations, and encloſe them a number in this packet; begging leave at the ſame time to refer you to the original Letters in your poſſeſſion from whence they are taken. Compare the language held, and the meaſures purſued by your late Preſident and Council up to the Treaty of Benares, with every thing that has been ſaid and done by them ſince Mr. Haſtings's return from his ſecret conference with Suja Dowla, and you will find that one ſyſtem forms a complete and preciſe counterpart to the other; that the tranſition they make from one ſet of political opinions to another is ſudden and unprepared; and that they have not even obſerved the common gradations, by which men, who wiſh to preſerve an appearance of conſiſtency, uſually endeavour to introduce and qualify a palpable change of ſyſtem. It is true, indeed, that the Select Committee, in their Letter of the 30th of December 1773, deſire your explicit commands for their conduct, "with reſpect to the "Countries ſituated beyond the limits of theſe Pro"vinces, and thoſe of your Ally; whether their future "operations were to be circumſcribed invariably by thoſe "bounds, or in what caſe you would approve and au"thorize their proceeding beyond them;" but you cannot fail to remark, that they do not aſk for inſtructions on this queſtion, until after they have taken their reſolution, and actually ſent the brigade to aſſiſt the Vizier in an expedition which tranſgreſſes all former limits, and which has evidently no plea but convenience, nor any profeſſed object but conqueſt. In fact, your ſervants wanted no new inſtructions from their Superiors; your orders were clear and preciſe; they knew your ſentiments when they acted in direct contradiction to them.

50. The proofs of theſe ſeveral aſſertions are taken from Letters and other Papers ſigned by themſelves. Among the reſt we beg leave particularly to lead you to a compariſon of thoſe Articles in the inſtructions given in 1773 to Sir Robert Barker, and in 1774 to Colonel Champion, relative to the defence of the Rohilla country in one year, and to the invaſion of it in the next; copies of which are encloſed.

51. It is not the ſpirit of cenſure that has drawn us into this painful and irkſome diſcuſſion. We have no pleaſure in condemning when we are unable to correct. But it is material to us to ſhew, that when we depart from the meaſures in which we find our predeceſſors in office immediately engaged, we in effect only revert to that ſyſtem, for the ſupport of which they had but a few months before moſt ſolemnly pledged their faith; and that we are entitled to appeal to their own authority againſt themſelves.

52. When you have maturely conſidered the nature and circumſtances of this extraordinary tranſaction, as it ſtood in our view on the 25th of laſt month, we think you will not be ſurprized at our wiſhing to ſee the late Preſident's Secret Correſpondence with Colonel Champion, and with Mr. Middleton, whom we then underſtood to be the Company's Reſident at the Durbar. In addition to the reaſons given in our Proteſt for deſiring a communication of this Correſpondence, we beg leave to obſerve, that, as it appears to us, your Council acted contrary to your Orders, and to every principle of your Government, when they permitted the Preſident to appoint a perſon to act as his private Agent at a foreign Court, with power to carry on a ſecret Correſpondence with him, even to the excluſion of your Select Committee. The poſſible conſequences of repoſing ſo dangerous a truſt in any individual, are too obvious to be miſtaken. We think they might with equal right have ſurrendered every other branch of their Adminiſtration into the Preſident's hands, and in effect diſſolved the Council. The ſame opinion applies to his ſecret Correſpondence with the Commanding Officer of the brigade, which has not even the pretence of his being a private Agent to ſupport it. The apparent chaſms in this Correſpondence, as it ſtands, will perhaps ſuggeſt farther motives to you for regretting that the whole of it is not recorded.

53. The Governor General, in his Minutes on this ſubject, complains of our not being ſatisfied with his ſolemn Declaration to the Board, that he would lay before us every part of the Correſpondence required, which could give us any information on public affairs; and of our arbitrarily invading the ſacred rights of a confidential Correſpondence. You will judge for us whether we deſerve this cenſure. Until we receive other lights from your authority, we muſt conſider ourſelves as bound to the ſtrict execution of a public truſt, and not at liberty to repoſe ſuch a perſonal confidence in any Member of our Board, as would exclude us from a perfect knowledge of his official proceedings. If we are to be ſatisfied with ſuch ſhare of the Governor's Correſpondence with your Miniſters or Officers as he ſhall think proper to impart to us, or as he ſhall declare to be ſufficient for our information, we may indeed in the preſent inſtance be under the guidance of the beſt of men, but it is equally poſſible that a Council ſo partially informed may hereafter be at the mercy of the worſt.

54. With reſpect to the Governor's confidential Correſpondence with his Agent at the Vizier's Court, we are unable to conjecture on what topics it could turn. He has repeatedly aſſured us, that previous to the appointment, Mr. Middleton was no otherwiſe known to him than by his general good character; and that for his choice of this Gentleman, he had no other motive but his acknowledged fitneſs for the office. Relying on this aſſurance, we are at a loſs to comprehend how any part of a Correſpondence on public affairs, between Gentlemen totally unconnected in private life, can with propriety be withheld from a Council, who, beſides the obligation impoſed upon them by their own ſenſe of honour, are bound by a ſpecific oath of ſecrecy to each other.

55. The recal of Mr. Middleton was the inevitable conſequence of the Governor's refuſing to communicate all his Letters to us, and was not intended to throw the leaſt imputation on Mr. Middleton's character. The Governor General, in his diſſent from this reſolution, very truly obſerves, that he is the ſole channel of Correſpondence with the Princes and Powers of India. He ſhould have added, however, that by your Inſtructions, "all Letters to be ſent by him are firſt to be approved "in Council; and that he is to lay before the Council "at their next meeting all Letters received by him in "the courſe of ſuch Correſpondence for their information." We venture to affirm, that this Inſtruction was not newly introduced by you on the appointment of the preſent Governor and Council, but that it is conformable to the ancient Conſtitution of your Government here; and that in this reſpect the Legiſlature has made no alteration or addition whatſoever to the powers veſted in the Chief of this Preſidency.

56. Mr. Middleton being recalled, it became neceſſary to appoint ſome other perſon to make the demand of the ſums due from the Vizier to the Company, and to liquidate that account. The Governor General declining the nomination, a majority of the Board reſolved, that this buſineſs ſhould be committed to the Officer commanding the brigade. The appointment was temporary, and meant by us to be confined to a ſingle object. We have repeatedly declared, that whenever it ſhall be thought proper to appoint a permanent Reſident at the Vizier's Court, one of your Civil Servants ſhould be employed.

57. In the Minutes given in by Mr. Barwell and the Governor General, you will ſee that the oppoſition given to the above Reſolution is founded on the ſuppoſed impropriety of truſting ſuch a commiſſion to a Military Officer, and that many general inſinuations have been thrown out to the diſadvantage of that branch of your ſervice. You are told, "that there is a Reſolution to "throw all power and truſt into the hands of a Military "Commander; that it is a declared proof of the preva-"lence of the military influence; that the advices of "the Commander of your army are not to be admitted "as authentic, ſince it is his intereſt to conceal from "the knowledge of the Council every circumſtance and "tranſaction, which if known might ſubject his con-"duct to blame, or oppoſe any deſign which his ambi-"tion, his intereſt, or prejudices, might dictate."

58. We content ourſelves with oppoſing facts to theſe general unſupported declarations. Without looking back ſo far as General Carnac and General Smith, we obſerve that Sir Robert Barker was frequently employed by the late Preſident and Council, in their political negociations with the Vizier. Colonel Champion has been repeatedly ordered and inſtructed by themſelves, in the courſe of the preſent year, to make a demand of the forty lacks due from the Vizier; which forms the principal object of the commiſſion now intruſted to Colonel Champion. Thoſe Officers had no ſhare in the offenſive engagements entered into by this Government with Suja Dowlah, nor were they ever truſted with the ſecret until the moment of execution. The whole tendency of Colonel Champion's Correſpondence is to condemn the late offenſive hoſtilities in which he unwillingly bears a part. In the laſt inſtance, it is your Military Commander in Chief who propoſes the recal of your army, who urges your Council to revert to the defenſive ſyſtem which you have laid down as the baſis of our Adminiſtration, and who wiſhes to ſheath the ſword drawn by your civil ſervants, and by them employed in a cauſe which he thinks a diſhonour to your arms.

59. Mr. Monſon, who from his profeſſion, and your appointment of him to the eventual command of your army, muſt feel himſelf affected by the reflexions thrown upon the military, adopts with warmth the pacific meaſures propoſed by General Clavering, and pledges his honour to you for the conſtant ſupport of them. If even theſe Gentlemen ſhould depart from the principles they now profeſs, they know the ſentiments and determination of the youngeſt of your Council, that, without your expreſs and explicit orders, he will never concur in any hoſtile project beyond the ſtrict line of defence; that he will never join his name with theirs, in the ſupport of any ſyſtem tending to leſſen the dependence of the Military upon the Civil Power; but that if ſuch a ſyſtem ſhould be adopted by them hereafter (which it is almoſt indecent to ſuppoſe) he will reſiſt their Councils with the ſame firmneſs and ſincerity with which he now applauds their conduct.

60. We hold it beneath us to enter into a refutation of loose invectives or general insinuations. Look to facts, Gentlemen, and we are convinced you will find, that it is your Civil Servants who have involved the Company in offensive wars, and in schemes of conquest by which no public interest could be promoted.

61. The whole argument for and against the recal of the brigade from the Rohilla country, is so fully stated in the Minutes of the several Members, upon the questions proposed in Council by General Clavering on the 28th of last month, that to enter into it here would only be loading you with superfluous repetition. We trust, that when you have maturely weighed the motives and principles on which we have acted, you will not concur with the Governor General, in charging us with "a "breach of faith, which inflicts an indelible dishonour "on the English name." It is our hope, founded on a thorough conviction of having done right, that your precise and peremptory approbation will vindicate our characters from this reproach. We have no idea of national honour independent of justice. But even upon the Governor General's own principles, we affirm that no part of his agreement with the Vizier has been violated by us, unless it be admitted, that his acceptance of the condition imposed by the Vizier, that the brigade should NEVER, NEVER be recalled without his consent, constitutes a valid obligation upon the present Government, and that it binds us for ever. To determine our judgment hereafter, we make it our request to you, that you will give us your clear and positive opinion, whether the late President had within himself a power to transfer one-third of your army (without any limitation of time, or reserving any right of recal) to the service of a foreign Prince; or whether the late Council could of right convey to him such a power? Deciding in the affirmative, you will establish a new principle in the Constitution of this Government: deciding in the negative, you will only affirm, that the Representative of a State, let his powers be ever so full, cannot be supposed to have a right to annihilate those of the State he represents.

62. We have but one word more to say upon the justice of that quarrel, which has been adopted here with as much zeal as if it had been your own. We have already observed, that in the President's first Minute of the 26th of November 1773, recommending the expedition, no cause of quarrel whatsoever is stated to justify the measure. In that of the 25th of last month, he tells us, that "the immediate plea for these hostilities was "the breach of faith with which the Rohilla Chiefs were "charged, in the supplies of money afforded by them "to the Marattas, against whom they had solicited and "obtained the Vizier's assistance, under a solemn en"gagement to pay him forty lacks of Rupees on the "departure of the Marattas, and for refusing afterwards "to fulfil that engagement."

63. Supposing this representation to be exact, we do not understand upon what just principle the arms of the Company can be employed in enforcing the execution of a contract to which they are not parties, and which they have not undertaken to guaranty. The fact however differs from the representation. The agreement between the Vizier and the Rohilla Chiefs was not concluded till the 17th of June 1772, some time after their army had been defeated by the Marattas, and the Rohilla country totally plundered and laid waste. On referring to the Select Committee's Letter of the 10th of November 1772, you will find that on the approach of the rains the Marattas re-crossed the Ganges, and have not since renewed their invasion of the Rohillas; who, as far as we can learn, did never receive any direct assistance from the Vizier. He never once had the spirit to face the Marattas in the field; and supposing these people to have been deterred from a second invasion of the Rohillas, it must have been entirely owing to the appearance of your army under Sir Robert Barker.

64. With respect to the Rohilla Chiefs having entered into engagements with the Marattas, inconsistent with those which they had contracted with Sujah Dowla, we assent to the opinion of the late Select Committee, delivered in the 8th paragraph of their Letter of the 15th of January 1773, "that the Rohillas had sought their "safety in an alliance with the Marattas, to which they "were of necessity compelled." A weak defenceless people, placed between two formidable armed Powers, are not to be charged with perfidy, much less are they just objects of a vindictive war and conquest, because their situation involves them in ambiguous measures assumed or relinquished upon the instant, to save themselves from destruction.

65. But while we invalidate the force of this pretended plea, we in reality allow it more weight than it deserves. The truth, Gentlemen, as you well know, is, that the Vizier has many years had it at heart to annex the Rohilla country to his dominions; that this has been a favourite object with him, which he was determined to accomplish per fas et nefas, whenever an opportunity should offer. Your Letters from hence are filled with proofs of this assertion. Amongst the rest, it is particularly observable, that the Select Committee tell you, in the 8th paragraph of their Letter of the 10th of November 1772, "that he was even inclinable to take advantage of the "actual distress of the Rohillas, and possess himself of "their dominions the moment the Marattas should be "obliged to leave it; and that General Barker was the "principal means of diverting him from a scheme so "little consistent with prudence or equity."

66. Independent of every particular consideration relative to the Rohilla war, you will find that some general principles, equally new and important, have from choice or necessity been introduced into the policy of your Government here. Mr. Barwell has left his deliberate opinion upon record, "that the preserving to the "Vizier the possession of the Rohilla country is as much "an obligation upon the present Government, as the "securing to him any other part of his dominions; and "equally within the spirit of the Defensive Treaty, as if "it had been specifically named therein." We confess that we were as much surprized at the novelty of this doctrine, as we were alarmed at the extent and consequences of it. The engagement with the Vizier expresses no more than that this Government, in return for a subsidy, should lend him a body of their troops to be employed on a particular service. We have assisted him in attaining a particular object; but it does not follow from that circumstance alone, that we are bound as guarantees to maintain him in the perpetual possession of it. We neither understand such reasoning in a general view, nor do we in the present instance find it supported by any particular stipulation. Even Mr. Hastings, though he recommends the continuance of the brigade in the country of the Rohillas, supports his opinion by other arguments, and does not proceed so far as to avow the extensive doctrine which Mr. Barwell endeavours to establish.

67. It is proposed to us as a fundamental maxim, that every accession of strength to the Vizier is of course beneficial to the Company. On this principle, his acquisition of Korah and Illahabad by purchase, his conquest of the Duab with his own forces, and of the Rohilla country with our assistance, are represented in the light of measures full of utility to the Company. To what length the principle was meant to be extended, or whether any limits whatsoever were meant to be prescribed to the Vizier's ambition, is more than we are able to determine. Let us only observe to you, that the first of the above measures necessarily makes the King your enemy; since the provinces, which (as the late President and Council observe in their Letter to you of the 11th March 1773) we have so particularly guaranteed to him, which his own Viceroy, Munnee o' Dowla, at this time puts under our protection, and which we might have kept in deposit for him, are now irrecoverably alienated; that the second, in all probability, will involve your Ally in a war with the Marattas, in which we fear it will be very difficult, difficult, if not impoſſible, for us to ſtand neuter; and that by the laſt, as Colonel Champion very accurately expreſſes himſelf on this ſubject, "the line of the Vizier's "frontiers is very far extended; a brave race of men, "who live in friendſhip with him, are added to the "number of his enemies; his force is but the ſame as "formerly; and whilſt the Ganges is fordable in a great "number of places, it will ſerve better as a mark of "boundary, than as a cover or defence to his do-"minions."

68. Theſe, we apprehend, are points neceſſary to be taken into your conſideration, before you determine whether the above additions to the Vizier's dominions be in fact advantageous to your intereſts, and how far this aggrandizement is to be promoted by us, at the riſk of making all Hindoſtan your enemies.

69. Another general maxim propoſed to us is, that it is highly uſeful to the Company to hire out their troops to Sujah Dowla, in order to ſave the expence of their pay, and to preſerve their diſcipline, by keeping them in the continued practice of war. The whole of the argument in favour of this maxim is not yet regularly before you; but we fear the time is approaching very faſt, when the India Company and the Nation will know the extent, and feel the force of it. Whatever concealments have hitherto been obſerved on this ſubject, we hold it to be our duty to ſpeak plainly to you, that you may be apprized of the danger with which you are threatened, and endeavour to prepare yourſelves againſt it.

70. It has been repeatedly admitted in Council, that the plan for letting the lands has in a great degree miſcarried, and that this country is unable to bear the expence of your Inveſtments, together with that of the Civil and Military Eſtabliſhments. We, on our part, beſides the urgent diſtreſs implied in the violent nature of the remedy, have other general reaſons to believe that your Revenues are in a ſtate of decline, and that the miſchief is not at its period; in the preſent ſtate of men and things, we doubt whether it be poſſible to ſtop it.

71. The ſaving of a part of the pay of your army by receiving ſubſidies from Sujah Dowla, is not a natural reſource to ſuch a country as Bengal; at the utmoſt it can be but temporary; while the miſchief which it profeſſes to remedy is permanent and increaſing. It ſuppoſes your troops to be employed in the deſtruction of nations, from whoſe proſperity this commercial country once derived a conſtant ſource of wealth, and whoſe ruin (though it may furniſh an immediate ſupply of money to your treaſury) is infallibly a ſtep to your own.

72. The late Council tell you, in their Letter of the 17th of March laſt, that the ruin of the Jauts was completed by the loſs of Agra; that they were ſtripped of their dominions, and reduced to a few inconſiderable forts. We hope and preſume that Nudjiff Cawn's conqueſt of the Jauts has not received any direct aſſiſtance or countenance from this Government; but we could have wiſhed that ſome efforts had been made in the way of negociation at leaſt, to ſave that nation.

73. On the whole, we are convinced, that ſchemes of conqueſt are eventually as ruinous to the conquerors, if they ſucceed, as they are immediately ruinous, if they miſcarry. As a meaſure of finance, they can only be the reſource of a nation that has neither honour nor property to loſe. When ſuch a country as Bengal ſhall be unable to ſupport itſelf from the internal reſources of its own produce or induſtry, we ſhall look upon it as a ſymptom of ſuch diſtreſs, as threatens the exiſtence of the Britiſh Empire in India. And as for the occaſional relief that may ariſe from the ſucceſs of projects to invade and ſubdue the neighbouring States, we conſider it as a remedy unnatural to the Conſtitution of Bengal, and more likely to precipitate than prevent the deſtruction of this Country.

In ſhort, Gentlemen, if the true condition of your Government here has hitherto been concealed from you and from the Nation, it is high time you ſhould be undeceived. The Summa Rerum is at ſtake.

74. In reviewing this long Letter, we fear that you will perceive upon the face of it many marks of an haſty inaccurate compoſition; and we wiſh that the time would permit us to make it more methodical and correct. As for the authenticity of facts, and the ſubſtance of the inferences deduced from them, we deſire it may be underſtood, that we willingly pledge our honour, and every thing that can be dear to honeſt men, for the truth and exactneſs of this repreſentation, as far as it reaches, of the ſtate of your affairs.

We have the honour to be,
with the greateſt reſpect,
Gentlemen,
Your moſt obedient and moſt
humble ſervants,
J. Clavering,
Geo. Monſon,
P. Francis.

Separate Letter from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis.

To the Honourable the Court of Directors for the Affairs of the Honourable United Eaſt India Company.

Fort William, 30th November 1774.

Gentlemen,

We have reſerved for a ſeparate Letter the mention of a few points, which, though of a public nature, yet having a more immediate relation to our perſonal conduct, we thought were not of ſufficient moment to be mixed with the important buſineſs to which our other Letter is confined.

1. In obedience to the prohibition in the Act of Parliament, we have refuſed all nazirs or preſents whatſoever. The Governor General has given his reaſons for accepting ſuch nazirs, and paying them into the Company's treaſury. Mr. Barwell has alſo given his reaſons for accepting nazirs, and not paying them over to the Company. They all appear in the encloſed extract of the Conſultation of the 7th of November 1774.

We have conſtantly accompanied our refuſal of preſents with an explanation of our motives, and with ſuch aſſurances of regard, and other marks of reſpect, according to the rank of the perſons, as we are convinced have cleared us from any ſuſpicion of intending to give them offence. We ſtrongly agree with you in opinion, that the receipt of trifling preſents, though practiſed by men of unqueſtionable honour and upright intentions, forms a precedent very liable to be extended and abuſed. With reſpect to the people of the country, we have reaſon to believe, that they are as well ſatisfied with our behaviour to them as men can be, who, from the hopes of favour, are reduced to the certainty of juſtice. Making every allowance for the force of prejudice and cuſtom, they are not ſo dull as to be incapable of underſtanding that it is poſſible to be their friends without taking their money.

2. We have not yet received a viſit which Mahomed Reza Cawn was deſirous to pay us. He has been acquitted of the charges brought againſt him, and is now at large; but as that acquittal is not yet confirmed by your approbation; as we know nothing of the reaſons on which it was founded; and as our receiving and returning his viſit might imply, that we are ſatisfied of his innocence (againſt which, however, we do not mean to give any opinion) we thought it ſafer to decline his viſit, until your pleaſure concerning him ſhould be known, than to commit ourſelves by demonſtrations of favour to him, which we might afterwards be obliged to retract.

3. In the eſtabliſhment of our expences, and regulation of our families, we apprehend that we have conformed ſtrictly to your intentions, in conſulting œconomy and and moderation more than vain appearances. We have long ago determined to follow this plan, as well for our own intereſt, as for the ſake of propoſing a uſeful example to others; but we had, before our arrival, no conception of the degree in which ſuch an example is wanted in this country Beſides the conſideration of private diſtreſs to individuals, we are ſatisfied that the conſequences of it affect the public ſervice. Ruinous expences have a natural tendency to accommodate the minds of men to ſuch meaſures of recovery, as the ſame men would probably reject, if they had only a fortune to make, inſtead of a fortune to repair.

4. You will ſee upon the Conſultations, that we have agreed to the appointment of Captain Brooke to command an independent corps of the Vizier's troops, to be employed in conjunction with the army under Nudjiff Cawn, in defenſive meaſures only, as the conqueſt of the Jauts has long ſince been completed. In this inſtance we have yielded, againſt our ſtrict judgment, to conſiderations of perſonal reſpect to Mr. Haſtings. Captain Brooke was ſome time ago appointed by him to this employment, and is now, we believe, at the Vizier's Court. To have recalled him from thence could not fail to have been attended with perſonal pain and offence to Mr. Haſtings, which we are determined as much as poſſible to avoid. We have reſted our aſſent on this ſingle conſideration, and left it with him to juſtify the meaſure to you. The only reſtraint we have deſired to lay on Captain Brooke (excluſive of what his duty to you of courſe implies) is, that he ſhall in no caſe enter the country of the Rohillas.

5. Since the drawing up of this and the preceding Letter, we are now informed, for the firſt time, that Major Polier, who, as we were given to underſtand by Mr. Haſtings, was employed in the Vizier's country on the ſurveying ſervice only, joined the army under Nudjiff Cawn, and had a conſiderable, if not a principal ſhare in the direction of the ſiege of Agra. The fact not being diſputed, we ſhall think it our duty to enquire, as ſoon as poſſible after the departure of this ſhip, whether Major Polier has acted in this inſtance with or without permiſſion from hence. The next queſtion will be, under what particular authority and inſtructions he has acted; and you ſhall be exactly informed of the reſult of our enquiries.

6. It only remains for us to apprize you, that the laſt Minute from Mr. Barwell was not communicated to us until the night of the 23d inſtant, though it profeſſes to be an anſwer to Mr. Francis's Minutes of the 31ſt of October. Beſides the inconvenience and irregularity of reſuming a queſtion at ſuch diſtant intervals (eſpecially when the meaſure referred to is not only reſolved upon, but executed) we really have not time to continue the debate. We have peruſed Mr. Barwell's Minute, and are content to leave him in poſſeſſion of the argument. Mr. Francis, in a ſeparate Minute, has given him the explanation he deſired.

7. Touching matters of fact, we could have wiſhed that Mr. Barwell had been more guarded in his aſſertions. He is pleaſed to affirm, that we took our reſolutions "without taking time to enquire fully into the deſign "and nature of our engagements with the Vizier, and "without even reading the correſpondence with Mr. "Middleton, which had been called for, and were then "laying on the table unopened." As this is only a bare unſupported affirmation, we anſwer it with a ſimple denial, ſupported however by the internal evidence of our ſeveral Minutes, and of this diſpatch. It is poſſible we may have erred in judgment; but we think there is no colour for accuſing us of having taken our reſolution, without conſulting all the Records by which it could any way be affected. We think it will require no aſſeverations on our part to convince you, that the ſeries of facts and opinions which we have had the honour to lay before you, could never have been traced and collected in the manner it has been, if we had not examined the Papers which were open to our inſpection with more than common aſſiduity and attention.

The late Preſident and Council refer to a Letter from the Court of Directors of 28th of Auguſt 1771, for an implied authority to countenance the late offenſive meaſures. They ſay, that in that Letter, the Court of Directors "have expreſſed, in ſtronger terms than ever "they had done before, their intention, in certain caſes, "of authoriſing their departure from the defenſive prin-"ciples hitherto recommended and enjoined."

We have looked into the Letter above-mentioned, and find, that the offenſive meaſures therein mentioned had no object in the mind of the Directors, but to repel the invaſions of the Marattas; that even theſe meaſures were ſimply in contemplation; and the execution of them, or any ſtep leading to it, poſitively forbidden till further orders. The prohibition then concludes with the following words; "in the meantime, we truſt that "your ſole objects will be the ſecurity of our poſſeſſions, "and thoſe of the Powers with whom we are connected, "both by Treaty and Intereſt; and as this appears to "have been the guide of your conduct, upon the Mar-"rattas invading the province of Korab, we with plea-"ſure approve the meaſures you have taken for defend-"ing the dominions of the King and Vizier from their "inroads and depredations; more eſpecially, as thoſe "meaſures are not only juſtified by neceſſity, but are "within the line which we have preſcribed for your con-"duct in ſuch a conjuncture."

The laſt argument urged by the late Preſident and Council in their defence, and purpoſely reſerved for the concluſion of their Letter, in order to leave a flattering impreſſion on the minds of the Directors, is "that they "return to a ſtate of peace, with the actual poſſeſſion, or "acknowledged right, of near ſeventy lacks of rupees."

We hope indeed that we are returning to a ſtate of peace, though in fact our hopes on this head are more than balanced by our apprehenſions. On the remaining part of the aſſertion, we obſerve, that of the forty lacks ſtipulated for the Rohilla expedition, and which they mention in another place, as ſo much ſpecie added to the exhauſted currency of theſe provinces, not one rupee has yet been paid; nor do we think, as things were managed by the late Preſident and Council, it ever would have been recovered. By the remaining thirty lacks muſt be meant, the ſaving to the Company on the pay of the brigade. We have made ſome general obſervations on this ſubject in our Letter to the Court of Directors; in this place we ſhall only take notice, that the ſaving on the head of pay, even ſuppoſing no extraordinary expence to be incurred by the Company beyond the amount of Suja Dowlah's ſubſidy, is manifeſtly over-rated.

The ordinary expence of a brigade in quarters at Dinapore is computed at 108,059 ſicca rupees per month. The ſecond brigade did not enter into Sujah Dowla's pay till the 24th of February laſt; and ſuppoſing them to continue in it to the end of the preſent year, the whole ſaving would in that caſe be only 1,080,590 ſicca rupees. Even the ſubſidy received from Sujah Dowlah, being ſpent in his or the Rohilla country, is of no benefit to theſe provinces.

We deſire you will be ſo good as to preſent our beſt reſpects to the Deputy Chairman, and to all the Gentlemen in the direction.

We have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your moſt obedient and
moſt humble ſervants,
J. Clavering,
Geo. Monſon,
P. Francis.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Extract of a Letter from Warren Haſtings, eſquire, Governor General of Bengal, to the Court of Directors; dated 3d of December 1774.

To the honourable the Court of Directors for Affairs of the Honourable United Company of Merchants of England trading to the Eaſt Indies.

Fort William, 3d December 1774.

I do not expect that the ſervices on which your military forces have been employed (except in the ſingle inſtance of the Rohilla war) will be made an article againſt me; yet I will not leave this ſubject unnoticed.

Every military expedition undertaken during the period in which I lately preſided in the Adminiſtration, has been concerted for ſervices of ſolid utility, and calculated for preciſe terminations.

The campaign of 1773 had the recovery of the diſtricts of Cora for its immediate object, and the application of it to the relief of the Company's wants for its termination; and it was begun and concluded long within the ſpace of a year.

The laſt campaign has been ended with the moſt complete ſucceſs in eight months, and, excluſive of its political effects, has added many lacks to your pecuniary reſources.

Even in the leſs conſiderable ſervices in which detachments of your forces have been employed, ſome beneficial end has been carefully attended to; regular plans have been concerted, and ſteadily purſued. By Captain Camac's operations at Ramgur, that country has been brought into ſubjection, and a conſiderable addition of revenue acquired. By the battalion employed in the Jungleterry, a tract of country which was conſidered as inacceſſible and unknown, and only ſerved as a receptacle to robbers, has been reduced to Government, the inhabitants civilized, and not only the reduction of the revenues, which was occaſioned by their ravages, prevented, but ſome revenue yielded from this country itſelf, which a proſecution of the ſame meaſures will improve.

The Cooch Beyhar expedition produced its full effects in the ſettlement of that country; and even the detachments employed againſt the Seneaſſes completely anſwered the intentions for which they were ordered.

Whatever errors may have fallen to the ſhare of the late Adminiſtration, I truſt that they will not be found in points of real magnitude. As to thoſe which may appear in meaſures of little moment, ſuch are unavoidable; they are neceſſary to a Government ſo conſtituted, and crowded with objects ſo various as this has been, the firſt principle of which is diſpatch; and our Records are the beſt evidences of the regard we have paid to this principle. On theſe too I ſhall reſt for proof, that it will not be my fault if our future Records ſhall preſent you with Minutes of controverſy, proteſts, charges, and recriminations, inſtead of that rapid progreſſion of buſineſs, and cordial attention to your intereſts, even in the anticipation of your commands, which it was my happineſs to experience in the labours of the Gentlemen who were formerly united with me in the charge of your affairs.

Painful as my ſituation is likely to prove, and unſuitable to my diſpoſition, it is my determined reſolution to retain the place which your favour originally aſſigned me, and the Legiſlature has ſince ſo honourably confirmed, till your juſtice ſhall decide between me and my opponents. My only reſources are in the knowledge, however imperfect, which a long and local practice in the affairs of this Preſidency may have furniſhed me, and of which the Gentlemen of the majority, even for their own ſakes, will not deny me the application, and in the experience and abilities of Mr. Barwell, whoſe ſupport I thankfully acknowledge with the more pleaſure, as I eſteem it to proceed more from a juſt conviction of the propriety of my conduct than perſonal attachment.

I beg leave in all ſubmiſſion to obſerve, that this is not a caſe to which palliatives can be applied. The Legiſlature has enacted, that a Council, conſiſting of five Members, ſhould form a general Adminiſtration for your affairs in Bengal, and for your political intereſts in all India. By the manner in which the Parliament thought proper to expreſs the office of Governor General, as diſtinct from the Council, as well as by univerſal uſage, ſome peculiar power and reſponſibility ſeemed tacitly reſerved for him above the other Members of the Council; but if it ſhall appear to you, that his authority, as the executive and oſtenſible inſtrument of your Government, has been overpowered, and that a majority, conſiſting of three Members of the Council, has been formed, not by an accidental variation in opinion, but by a decided and permanent combination againſt the other two, it will neceſſarily follow, that the intentions of the Parliament have been fruſtrated, and the Council in effect made to conſiſt of three Members inſtead of five; and that therefore nothing but a deciſive remedy can reſtore that harmony to the Government, which is irrecoverably loſt to the parts of which the preſent is compoſed, and ſave your property, and the national intereſts in theſe provinces from anarchy and ruin.

I will not quit the ground which I ſtand on in this addreſs, to appeal to the large portion of my life ſpent in your ſervice, nor to the important truſts in which it was my lot to be employed from the earlieſt period of it. I reſt my cauſe ſolely on the meaſures which have drawn me into my preſent vindication. I adopted them for your benefit, and for the national honour, and I know they have been productive of both to the utmoſt reach of my wiſhes. Relying on your juſtice, and on the conſciouſneſs of my own integrity, I ſhall wait with patience for your determination on the ſubjects of this addreſs; nor ſhall my care be wanting to prevent your affairs from ſuffering in the long interval which muſt be unavoidably left to diſorder.

If you ſhould judge me fit to be continued in the chief direction of your affairs, I have already ſaid, and yet repeat, that I am willing and deſirous to devote what remains of the active ſeaſon of my life to your ſervice. But allow me, Honourable Sirs, to hope that I may be furniſhed with means equal to the reſponſibility which ought and muſt be annexed to the firſt ſtation, whoſoever ſhall fill it.

If, on the contrary, it ſhall be decreed, either by your Honourable Court, or by yet higher authority, that I ſhall yield my place to any other, I ſhall ſubmit without a murmur to the ſentence; nor ſhall the ſeverity of it make me loſe the ſenſe of gratitude which I feel and owe to the obligations already laid upon me; although it will be impoſſible for me to forego the conſcious pride of having, even in the moſt obnoxious inſtances of my public conduct, manifeſted that principle by an undeviating attachment to the intereſts of the Company, which I have ever regarded as the intereſts of my Country.

I have the honour to be,
with the greateſt reſpect,
Honourable Sirs,
Your moſt faithful and moſt obedient
humble ſervant,
Warren Haſtings.

Governor General's Appeal to the Court of Directors; dated 3d December 1774.

I have purpoſely deferred the reply, which I have recorded my intention to make to the Minutes entered by the General and Mr. Francis in Conſultation of the 3d inſtant, becauſe I foreſaw, that in the juſtification of my own conduct from the ſevere cenſures which were caſt upon it in thoſe Minutes, and in the opinion which it was incumbent upon me to expreſs of the conduct of the majority of the Board, which was the immediate object of them, I ſhould be led into ſo long a train of arguments and facts, as would require more time to ſelect and arrange them than I could beſtow in the daily preſſure of current buſineſs. I had yet a ſtronger impulſe pulſe for ſuſpending ſo diſagreeable a taſk, in the hope with which I was willing to flatter myſelf, that ſome way of accommodation might ſtill be found before the cloſe of the packet, to remove the neceſſity of entering on a ſubject, which, in whatever form it might appear, muſt ſet my conduct, and that of the other Members of the Council, before the Honourable Court of Directors in a point of view ſo alarming, as to require their moſt peremptory deciſion between us, and muſt of courſe ſhut up every avenue to a future cordiality.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Faint as this hope was, I continued to indulge it while a poſſibility remained of its being accompliſhed. I now proceed, with whatever reluctance, to the laſt reſource which is left me, an appeal to the Honourable Court of Directors; on whoſe juſtice I throw myſelf, for the vindication of my own conduct, and the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, againſt the reproaches which have been caſt upon them; and for the reparation of the violence which has been offered to the authority committed to me by the Parliament of Great Britain, in the late acts of the majority of the Council.

Mr. Barwell's obſervations on Mr. Francis's Minute being a ſufficient refutation of the arguments contained both in that and the General's, I ſhall decline replying in form to either; but as the Rohilla war has been the declared ſource of the moſt violent meaſures adopted by the majority of the Council, I ſhall briefly recapitulate the grounds and objects of that enterprize, and then proceed to anſwer the various arguments which have been urged in condemnation of it.

In the beginning of the year 1772 the Marattas invaded the country of the Rohillas, which, after a ſhort but ineffectual oppoſition at Sukkertoll, was left at large expoſed to their ravages. The Vizier, alarmed at their approach to the only part of his dominions which was eaſily acceſſible by ſuch an enemy, applied with ſuch earneſtneſs to Sir Robert Barker, who was at that time with him, for the aſſiſtance of an Engliſh force, and the General thought the neceſſity ſo urgent, that, of his own authority, he ſent orders to the firſt brigade, which was ſtationed at Dinapore, to march inſtantly into the province of Oude. The Board diſapproving this irregular proceeding refuſed their confirmation of it; and the brigade having reached the length of Benares, remained there till the beginning of June, and then returned to its former ſtation. The Vizier availing himſelf of this movement, offered his protection to the Rohillas, and entered into a general Treaty of Alliance with the Chiefs of that nation, and a ſeparate one with Hafez Rahmet Cawn, their principal, who, in their name, and with their authority, engaged to pay him 40 lacks of rupees for that ſupport, whenever the Marattas evacuated the country. Tranſlations of both Treaties are recorded at length in the Conſultation of the 23d July 1772; and the original of the Letter is in the actual poſſeſſion of the Secretary, atteſted by General Barker, who was preſent at the ratification of both.

On the approach of the rainy ſeaſon the Marattas evacuated the country, and the Vizier demanded the ſtipulated recompence from the Rohillas; but they evaded the payment.

In the latter end of 1772, the Marattas having extorted from the King a grant of the diſtricts of Corah and Kurrah, which had been ceded to him by the Company for the expreſs purpoſe of maintaining his dignity, were preparing to take poſſeſſion; and as this acquiſition would have made them maſters of the whole tract of Country lying between the river Ganges and Jumna, and bordering upon the province of Oude, the Vizier again applied for aſſiſtance to repel ſuch dangerous neighbours.

The proceedings of the late Council in their Secret Department, of the 1ſt February 1773, treat this ſubject very largely, and ſhew how much they conſidered not only the ſafety of the Vizier, but even of the Company's poſſeſſions, to be endangered by this formidable encroachment of the Maratta State. It was ultimately concluded to comply with the requiſition of the Vizier, by ſending the firſt brigade for the protection of his dominions againſt any attempt which the Marattas might make on them; and alſo determined to prevent their deſign on Corah, by taking prior poſſeſſion for the Company, who had certainly the beſt title to it, when the King could no longer keep it. It was not to be ſuppoſed that the Marattas would quietly ſubmit to the loſs of a territory which they had uſed the moſt perfidious means to obtain; and every precaution was therefore neceſſary to guard againſt their efforts to recover it. The Company's orders of the 28th Auguſt 1771, expreſsly allowed the neceſſity of departing, on ſome occaſions, from the limited plan which they had for a long time paſt enjoined; and in conſequence the Rohilla country, North of the Ganges, was included within the line of action preſcribed to the General in his Inſtructions; becauſe if the Marattas, either by the defeat, or, which was as likely to happen, by the deſertion of the Rohillas to their cauſe, ſhould gain a footing in that country, nothing could oppoſe their entering into the province of Oude, and laying it waſte, in ſpite of any attempt of our forces united with the Vizier's to prevent them. The Map which accompanies this will demonſtrate this truth more powerfully than any verbal argument.

It was not to be ſuppoſed that the Marattas, whoſe ambition for ſome years paſt had aſpired to univerſal conqueſt, and who had extended their arms from the centre of the Balaghaut; to the northern extremity of Indoſtan, ſhould ſit down contented when they had added the Douab, Corah, and Allahabad to their dominions; on the contrary, there was every reaſon to apprehend, and it was publicly reported in their own camp, that they would next carry their operations into the country of the Vizier, and even into the Company's own poſſeſſions.

On the grounds which I have deſcribed, it was agreed to maintain the province of Corah againſt the Marattas, and afterwards to extend our arms beyond the preſcribed line of the dominions of our Ally into the Rohilla country, by a diſcretional latitude allowed the General as above-mentioned; which he accordingly made uſe of, by marching the brigade as far as Ramgaut; and we have the ſtrongeſt reaſons to believe, that it was attended with every immediate advantage which we had projected from ſuch a meaſure, as the Marattas lay during the whole campaign of 1773 in the neighbourhood of our army, but without daring either to croſs the river, or to approach the borders of Corah; and before the ſetting in of the rains of that year, their domeſtic troubles obliged them to return to their own proper dominions.

Of the reſolution to enter the Rohilla country for its defence againſt the Marattas, the Court of Directors were firſt adviſed in the General Letter by the ‡ of the 31ſt of March 1773, which arrived in England long before the departure of the tranſports.

The effectual protection then afforded the Rohillas, and the departure of the Marattas, having eſtabliſhed beyond all conteſt the right of the Vizier to the 40 lacks which had been ſtipulated for this important ſervice, and which, by the terms of the engagement, were really due the preceding year, on the retreat of the Marattas from their country, he demanded payment of Hafez Rhamet Cawn, who refuſed it. The Vizier alſo accuſed him of having ſecretly encouraged the Marattas, and ſent them a ſupply of money; and, if I miſtake not, General Sir Robert Barker in ſome of his Letters mentions the ſame circumſtance. The plea of juſtice thus coinciding with the principles of ſound policy, which dictated to the Vizier the neceſſity of ſecuring himſelf againſt the intrigues and perfidy of the Rohillas; who, from their ſituation, were moſt capable of hurting him in his conteſts with more powerful enemies, and from their natural weakneſs, and the jealouſy inſeparable from it, would ever ſeek for their ſafety in fomenting or joining in attempts againſt him, he formed the deſign of invading and reducing their Country. As his own ſtrength was unequal to ſuch an undertaking, he ſolicited the aid of this Government for effecting it, and made an offer of 50 lacks of rupees to be paid on its accompliſhment. As this propoſal was urged in the warmeſt terms, both in perſon to Sir Robert Barker, and in his Letter to me, and this had long been a favourite project of the Vizier, the Board judged with me, that it might afford a fair occaſion to urge the improvement of our alliance, by obtaining his aſſent to a more equitable compenſation for the expence attending the aid which he occaſionally received from our forces, and to free the Company from the embarraſſment to which they might be ſubjected, by retaining the property and poſſeſſion of the remote diſtricts of Corah and Illahabad. For this purpoſe, it was agreed that I ſhould write the following Letter to the Vizier, which I beg leave to quote at large, becauſe it fixes the ſource of thoſe engagements, which took place by a progreſſive train of meaſures, and terminated in the Rohilla war; and will mark at leaſt, that this was not the effect either of a precipitate and unweighed reſolution, or a tame acquieſcence in the Vizier's ſchemes of ambition, but the reſult of long deliberation, originally deviſed, and conſiſtently employed as an inſtrument of promoting the intereſts of the Company, of perpetuating the dependence of their Ally, and converting it to a channel of utility.

Fort William, 21ſt of April 1773.

"I have received your Excellency's Letter, mentioning "the particulars of your operations againſt the Marattas. "You promiſe to the General, that whenever the Ma"rattas ſhould be driven out of the Rohilla country, and "Hafez Rhamet Cawn ſhall fulfil his agreement of 40 "lacks of rupees, you will give half that ſum to the "Company; and that ſhould the Rohilla Chiefs be guilty "of a breach of their agreement, and we will thoroughly "exterminate them, and ſettle your Excellency in the "country, you will in that caſe pay the Company 50 "lacks of rupees in ready money, and exempt them from "the King's tribute. Upon the ſame ſubject the General "has alſo written to me fully. Every circumſtance which "you have written to me, I conſider as a proof of the "cordial attachment which ſubſiſts between us, and of "the confidence and reliance which you place in the "friendſhip of the Engliſh Company; but the points "which you have propoſed require much conſideration, "and the previous ratification of a formal agreement, "before I can aſſent to them, otherwiſe I might incur the "diſpleaſure of my Employers. It is true, that I have "long thought that the union of the Rohilla country "with yours, either by ſure and permanent obligation of "friendſhip, or by reducing it to obedience, if they ſhould "render ſuch an attempt juſtifiable by any act of enmity "or treachery, would be an adviſable point for you to "attain; becauſe, by that means, the defenſive line of "your dominions would be completed, by including "within it all the land lying on that ſide of the river "Ganges; and you would be in no danger from an attack "on that quarter, whenever the Marattas ſhould commit "diſturbances in another. But it appears to me, that "this is an object not to be attained by an occaſional view "of that country; and its diſtance from the provinces "of Bengal will not admit of the continuance of the "Engliſh forces longer than the period which remains of "dry weather. You will pleaſe to remember they were "ſent for your aſſiſtance, and to defend the province of "Corah againſt the Marattas; thus far only I am autho"rized, by the commands of my Superiors, to employ "them beyond the limits of their own poſſeſſions; and "even this is the cauſe of an heavy loſs and riſk to their "affairs; eſpecially in the expences of their troops and "ſtores, and in the abſence of ſo great a part of their "force, which was originally deſtined for the ſole defence "of the Countries dependant on Bengal. You have "frequently repeated in your Letters the remarks, that "to wait till the enemy was at your door, and then to "write for the aſſiſtance of our forces, would anſwer no "good purpoſe; but that every year the ſame cauſe "would require their return to the ſame ſervice, and paſs "without effecting any purpoſe of real advantage. My "friend, all this is true; but it proceeds from the want "of proper meaſures having been previouſly taken, and "from the imperfect footing on which affairs between us "have been eſtabliſhed. The concern which the Com"pany take in your ſafety, and the duties of friendſhip "which their commands, and our own inclinations equally "enjoin us to obſerve inviolably to their Allies, and eſpe"cially to one ſo cloſely united by an approved attach"ment to them, would not ſuffer us to withhold our aid "when your affairs require it; but it has always been "with reluctance that we have ſuffered the army to paſs "the frontiers of our own Country, becauſe the loſs and "inconvenience attending it was certain; and although "joined with your forces, there is no cauſe to fear the "moſt powerful efforts of our enemies, yet the events of "war are at the diſpoſal of the Almighty; and the only "fruits which the moſt ſplendid ſucceſſes can afford us "are the reputation of having maintained the faith of our "alliance, in oppoſition to every incentive of ſelf-intereſt "and ſelf-defence. Thus circumſtanced, we are pre"cluded from deriving any benefit from your ſupport; "and ours can only afford you a relief from preſent "danger, without any proviſion of future ſecurity. For "theſe reaſons, I have often wiſhed for a perſonal inter"view with you, for the purpoſe of removing difficulties, "and perpetuating the alliance with your Excellency, on "terms more ſuitable to our mutual intereſts. Your "Excellency alſo hath repeatedly expreſſed the ſame "inclination. I therefore write, that if your affairs will "at this ſeaſon admit of your giving me a meeting, I "will haſten to obtain it as ſoon as I am able after the "receipt of your Letter in reply to this; if otherwiſe, I "muſt wait for it at ſome more diſtant period, as the "affairs of this Government will indiſpenſably require "my preſence at this place after three or four months, "and it is uncertain when I ſhall again have an interval "of leiſure for ſuch a journey. In the meantime your "Excellency and the General are at a great diſtance "from the province of Corah, and the affairs of that pro"vince require the preſence of a perſon on the behalf "of the Company, to regulate and take charge of it, "until it ſhall be hereafter determined in what manner "it ſhall be finally diſpoſed of. I have judged it ad"viſable to depute Mr. James Lawrell, a Gentleman of "the Council of Calcutta, on this ſervice, and he will ſet "out accordingly in a few days, which I hope you will "approve."

The allurement thus held out to the Vizier ſucceeded. He propoſed in reply a meeting with me at Benares, which took place accordingly. I found him ſtill equally bent on the deſign of reducing the Rohillas, which I encouraged, as I had before done, by dwelling on the advantages which he would derive from its ſucceſs, but objecting with great force the orders of the Company, reſtricting us from ſuch remote ſchemes of conqueſt; to which I therefore could not aſſent, without ſuch conditions obtained in return for it, as might obviate their diſpleaſure, and win their ſanction to ſo hazardous and unauthorized a meaſure. I fear not to quote theſe expreſſions, addreſſing myſelf to fair and unbiaſſed judges, who will not infer my real ſentiments from the ſtyle and arguments of a political negociation.

I told him that the Company had drawn themſelves into great diſtreſs by the enormous load of their military expences, one entire brigade being kept up for the ſole purpoſe purpoſe of maintaining a connection with him, ſince it was uſeleſs and unneceſſary to the protection of our own provinces. That if he wiſhed therefore to avail himſelf of our aid, either in preventing, or even in repelling the deſigns of his enemies, he muſt firſt agree to bear a more equal ſhare of the burthen of this expence, by paying the whole charge of the forces lent him for this ſervice while they were ſo employed. To this, after much contention, he aſſented; and the ſum of 210,000 rupees, which the General computed to be the amount of the expence, was fixed as the monthly ſubſidy to be paid for the brigade, whenever it ſhould paſs the borders of the province of Babar on his requiſition. Having obtained this point, which I conſidered in the light of a perpetual military fund, I eaſily yielded my aſſent to the Rohilla plan, on the ſtipulation of 40 lacks for its accompliſhment, 10 lacks being deducted from his firſt offer, on account of the difference which had taken place in the ſubſidy.

This agreement was no ſooner made, than he ſuddenly repented, deſired to decline the war with the Rohillas till a more favourable conjuncture, when he ſhould be leſs embarraſſed by other engagements, agreeing however to the monthly ſubſidy, whenever his future occaſions ſhould oblige him to require the aid of our forces. Thus the Rohilla plan remained rather ſuſpended than wholly abandoned, although it was left optional in our Government to reject or aſſent to it on a future occaſion. Meſſrs. Lawrell and Vanſittart, who were with me at the time, and to whom I made a daily communication in writing of the ſubſtance of every converſation which paſſed between the Vizier and myſelf, will vouch for the literal truth of this narrative, as correſponding with what I then repeated to them; and I believe it will appear from it, that although I had not engaged the Government by any expreſs obligation to comply with any future application of the Vizier to ſupport his pretenſions on the Rohillas, yet as the moſt eſſential article of the Treaty had originated from this deſign, and had been yielded to in conſideration of my agreement to engage in it, it would have been diſhonourable to decline the undertaking, when propoſed under circumſtances as favourable to its ſucceſs, and the general intereſts of the Company, as they were when I firſt offered to engage in it.

Soon after my return to Calcutta, the Vizier renewed the propoſal for invading the Rohillas, and repeated his deſire of engaging in it, on the conditions before agreed upon. A variety of arguments concurred to favour it at this particular time, none to oppoſe it. The Marattas were ſo much occupied by their own diſſenſions, that they could not even defend their poſſeſſions in the Doaub, much leſs were they likely to interrupt our operations againſt the Rohillas. The King had no means of interference but by his General, Nudjeff Cawn, for whoſe attachment we had ſtronger ſecurity in his intereſt, and in his fear of his rival Abdul Abed Cawn, than his Maſter had in his allegiance. The Rohillas were too weak to reſiſt ſo powerful an attack; and as their country was open and undefended, either by defiles, woods, or fortreſſes, and in its greateſt extent did not exceed 200 miles, its entire ſubjection did not require any length of time.

To theſe inducements, which apply only to the ſucceſs of the undertaking, other motives, equally powerful, engaged our attention to it, as a meaſure neceſſary to the intereſts and ſafety of the Company.

All our advices, both public and private, repreſented the diſtreſſes of the Company at home as extreme. The Letters from the Court of Directors called upon us moſt loudly for ample remittances, and a reduction of our military expences. At the ſame time, ſuch was the ſtate of affairs in this Government, that for many years paſt the income of the year was found inadequate to its expence; to defray which, a heavy bond debt, amounting at one time to an hundred and twenty-five lacks of rupees, had accumulated. The Board had beſtowed much labour and time in the retrenchment of their expences, but much remained yet to be done; and the regulations which they had already formed, required time to produce any viſible effect. By allowing the Vizier the military aid which he required, a ſaving of near one-third of our military expences would be effected during the period of ſuch a ſervice; the ſtipulation of 40 lacks would afford an ample ſupply to our treaſury, and to the currency of the country; the Vizier would be freed from a troubleſome neighbourhood, and his dominions would be made more defenſible, while his alliance with the Company ſubſiſted, by being completely ſhut in between the river Ganges and the Mountains; and his dependence on the Company would be increaſed by that extenſion of his poſſeſſions, as he himſelf was incapable of defending even his ancient poſſeſſions without our ſupport.

For a more ample diſcuſſion of theſe arguments, I beg leave to refer to the Conſultation in the Secret Department of the 26th of November 1773, in which it was concluded, after a long debate, to conſent to the Vizier's requiſition. As a precaution againſt any effects which were to be apprehended from the Vizier's irreſolution, the conditions originally accepted for this engagement were dictated to him in the form of a Letter to be written by him, in which a clauſe was inſerted, that whether the country was conquered, or a peace concluded between him and the enemy, the ſtipulation for the payment of 40 lacks ſhould become equally due. Of this engagement I ſhall ſpeak more hereafter.

On the 24th of February 1774, the ſecond brigade arrived within the territory of the Vizier. On the 17th of April the united forces entered the borders of the Rohilla dominions; and on the 23d of the ſame month engaged and defeated the Rohillas, with the death of their leader Hafez Rahmet Cawn. From that period the conqueſt of that country may be dated, no material oppoſition having been ſince made.

On the 6th of October the war was finally concluded by the Treaty with Fyzoolla Cawn. Fifteen lacks of rupees, which he engaged to pay to the Vizier in ready money, were to be immediately appropriated to the payment of part of the ſtipulation of 40 lacks due from the Vizier to the Company; and we are informed that the Vizier has returned with expedition to Fyzabad, for the expreſs purpoſe of diſcharging the remainder. The ſubſidy had been punctually paid to the end of September, by the laſt advices received on that ſubject from Colonel Champion, dated the 24th of October.

I now proceed to anſwer the objections which have been urged againſt the propriety of this undertaking. Theſe may be reduced to the following heads:

1ſt. That it was contrary to the expreſs, peremptory, and repeated orders of the Company.

2d. That it was contrary to the repeated declarations and promiſes of the Board.

3d. That it was unjuſt.

4th. That it expoſed the Company to the hazard of an indefinite or an endleſs war.

5th. That it might have involved the Company in a war with the Marattas, and may ſtill draw on us their future reſentment.

6th. That by the removal of a third part of the whole military eſtabliſhment to ſo great a diſtance, our own provinces were expoſed to danger.

7th. That by aggrandizing the Vizier it might render him a dangerous neighbour, and deprive the Company of the benefits of his alliance.

8th. That it was reſolved on precipitately without a formal Treaty, the conditions of it appearing only in a Letter from the Vizier, where they are looſely expreſſed, and liable to evaſion.

9th. That the condition which the Vizier expreſſes, that the brigade ſhould never depart without his permiſſion, was an inſtance of arrogance in him, and of an unbecoming ſubmiſſion in the late Adminiſtration, and might prove the cauſe of their being detained for ever.

Vide Mr. Francis's Minutes, entered in Conſultation of the 3d November.

In the above articles I have not confined myſelf to the public Records, but have endeavoured to collect the ſubſtance of all I have ſeen or heard upon this ſide of the argument, and have choſen to clothe it in my own language; that which I have found prepared for me not being in every inſtance ſuch as I allow myſelf to uſe, even in retaliation of perſonal injury, much leſs in application to meaſures which immediately regard myſelf.—I ſhall reply ſeparately to each.

1. I have read over with great attention all the Letters which have been received from the Honourable Court of Directors ſince the year 1769, and long ago abſtracted all the paragraphs written within that period upon the ſubject of the Company's political concerns, thoſe having been given me for my ſpecial guidance in my negociations with the Vizier the laſt year at Benares. I find nothing contained in any of theſe which expreſsly applies to the caſe in queſtion. I meet with injunctions to avoid new connections. "To endeavour to keep peace in Bengal "and with the neighbouring Powers; and to confine our "views to the ſecurity and tranquillity of Bengal; not to "acquire further poſſeſſions; but to advert to the good "management of thoſe which we have. To incline to "thoſe few Chiefs of Indoſtan who are in a condition to "ſtruggle with the Marattas. To defend the King's "perſon, and the diſtricts of Corah and Allahabad; which "is mentioned as an exception to their limited plan. "To make known to the Powers of India, that it is by no "means the intention of the Company to encroach upon "their neighbours, or to acquire an extenſion of domi"nion by conqueſt. That they regard with a jealous eye "the increaſing power of the Marattas; and that it "would be bad policy to take part in any operations, "which might weaken the few remaining Chiefs who are "in a condition to oppoſe their encroachments." But the following extracts are ſo pointedly appoſite to the ſubject, that I ſhall take the liberty to quote them at large.

General Letter 11th May 1769, paragraphs 3 and 16.—30th June 1769, paragraphs 1 and 3.—Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners, par. 2.—General Letter, 15th September 1769, par. 28.

"It is with the moſt ſerious concern we learn from "your late advices, that the incurſions of the Marattas "had ſpread ſuch a terror and deſpondence into the minds "of thoſe Powers which were the remoter barrier of our "poſſeſſions; that the irreſolution and timidity of the "moſt potent of them have given riſe to ſuch ſucceſſes, "as have encouraged the Marattas to invade the domi"nions of the King, and lay claim to part of the territory "of Sujah Dowlah. But the conduct of the Rohillas and "Jauts is rather a matter of concern than ſurprize to us; "as the King and Sujah Dowlah neglected that occaſion "to unite with thoſe Powers, effectually to repel the "common diſturbers of the empire, and confine them "within the limits of their former poſſeſſions. To what"ever cauſes this general timidity or ſupineneſs may have "been owing, we find ourſelves equally affected, and "the tranquillity of the provinces endangered thereby; "but as the projects of the King, or the conduct of the "Vizier, are at preſent too myſterious for us to decide "on the motives of their inactivity, and as we know not "what alliances may be formed to juſtify us in carrying "our arms beyond the bounds of their dominions, we are "prevented from propoſing any preciſe plan for your "guidance in this reſpect; but ſhould your ſubſequent "advices enable us to form a more certain judgment of "the expediency of departing from the plan we have laid "down, we ſhall communicate to you by ſome early "conveyance, how far we may be diſpoſed to carry our "arms beyond the bounds of the provinces, or the ter"ritories of our allies, and become the parties in an "offenſive war. In the meantime, we truſt your ſole "object will be the ſecurity of our poſſeſſions, and thoſe "of the Powers with whom we are connected both by "Treaty and Intereſt; and as this appears to have been "the guide of your conduct upon the Marattas invading "the province of Corah, we with pleaſure approve the "meaſures you have taken for defending the dominions "of the King and Vizier from their inroads and depre"dations; more eſpecially, as thoſe meaſures are not "only juſtified by neceſſity, but are within the line "which we have preſcribed for your conduct in ſuch a "conjuncture."

General Letter 11th May 1769, paragraphs 3 and 16.—30th June 1769, paragraphs 1 and 3.—Inſtructions to the Commiſſioners, par. 2.—General Letter, 28th Auguſt 1771, par. 45.

"The line of neutrality is ſtill recommended; but the "Board are authoriſed to depart from it whenever the "intereſts of the Company ſhall be endangered, or ſhall "materially require it."

General Letter to Fort St. George, of 4th November 1772, par. 10.

The directions promiſed us in the Letter of the 28th of Auguſt 1771, have never yet been ſent us, nor have we ſince received any further lights to guide us on this important ſubject; which I preſume to place to the account of the troubles which have embarraſſed the Company at home.

From the above quotations, and the conſiſtency which ſtrongly marks all the orders on this ſubject, I apprehend it will clearly appear, that the principle primarily inſiſted upon by the Honourable Court of Directors, reſpecting their political and military operations, was to avoid the extenſion of territory; and this we have never attempted.

The prohibition of military expeditions, undertaken beyond the preſcribed bounds of their own provinces and thoſe of their allies, on prudential and cautionary motives, or other cauſes, independent of territorial acquiſitions, is only to be inferred from the tenor and tendency of their reaſonings on the former ſubject. It is evident, that it was not from inattention that their orders never expreſſed a prohibition of this kind, but that they rather avoided it from a conviction that it might be ſometimes neceſſary, and becauſe it would have been difficult to mark the limitations of it. This concluſion I draw, not only from the two laſt paragraphs of their orders, which I have quoted at length, and which were dictated by the experience of paſt advices, and a more intimate conſideration of the ſubject, but even from their orders, ſo far back as the 30th of June 1769; in which, having declared againſt an extenſion of poſſeſſions in the firſt paragraph, they had in the third their "opinion, that the moſt "prudent ſyſtem they could purſue, and the moſt likely "to be attended with a permanent ſecurity to the pro"vinces, would be, to incline to thoſe Chiefs of Indoſtan "who yet preſerve an independence of the Maratta "Power, and are in a condition to ſtruggle with them."

But in the two laſt of the above quotations there is no occaſion of logical ſurmiſes to diſcover the intentions of the Honourable Court of Directors. They tell us plainly, that it is their wiſh "to confine their views to "the ſecurity of their own poſſeſſions and thoſe of their "allies; but that they foreſee the neceſſity in certain "caſes, of carrying their arms beyond thoſe bounds, and "of becoming parties in an offenſive war;" and they promiſe us an early communication of their inſtructions, with regard to the lengths to which they will allow this doctrine to be extended. In their Letter to the Preſidency of Fort Saint George, they authoriſe them, in expreſs terms, "to obſerve no longer the neutrality ſo "heartily wiſhed for by them, in caſe they ſhould judge "it neceſſary for their intereſts to depart from it." And it is not to be ſuppoſed, that the Court of Directors would recommend one line of conduct for their Government of Fort Saint George, and an oppoſite one for Bengal; much leſs that they would admit of ſuch a deviation from their former pacific plan, on merely political motives attended with an heavy expence, and yet prohibit it under circumſtances, which, in addition to the ſame motives, have every conſideration of œconomy to recommend it, with the proſpect of an increaſe to their finances, at a time when their diſtreſſes both at home and abroad ſo urgently required ſuch an increaſe, and their moſt peremptory commands (as I have already obſerved) rendered it the firſt object of our attention.

I preſume to affirm, both for myſelf and the other Members of the late Council, that no period in the Company's annals has been more evidently characteriſed by an exact ſubmiſſion to their commands, than that in which I have had the honour to preſide in the Adminiſtration; and for the truth of this I dare appeal to the Honourable Court of Directors. But in caſes to which their commands do not ſpecially apply, to adopt ſuch meaſures as, at the ſame time, approach neareſt to the ſpirit of their general inſtructions, and tend moſt to the advancement of their intereſts, is the faireſt teſt both of our obedience and fidelity. We might have ſuffered the Marattas, under cover of the King's grant, to take poſſeſſion of Corah and Allahabad, to have allied themſelves to the Rohillas, or eſtabliſhed themſelves in that territory, and lain with their armies unmoleſted on the borders of the open country of our ally the Vizier till they had completed every preparation for invading it. Such a forbearance might perhaps have been vindicated by the plea, that the Company had promiſed, at the diſtance of two years preceding it, to furniſh us with their Inſtructions for a different conduct; and that wanting thoſe Inſtructions, we took for our rule their lateſt orders on the ſubject; which enjoined us to confine our views to the bare ſecurity of our own poſſeſſions and thoſe of our allies. This might have been a ſure way to guard our characters againſt legal imputation, although in fact it would have been inconſiſtent with the ſecurity required. But it is not by ſuch cold and prudential cautions that the Britiſh name has acquired ſuch a luſtre in India, nor that the Britiſh empire in Bengal is likely to be perpetuated; neither is this the conduct which the Company demands of us; their orders are informed by a more liberal ſpirit, and allow, in ſuch caſes as are not reducible to fixed and invariable poſitions, a diſcretional latitude for the zeal of their ſervants to exert itſelf for their ſecurity. I cannot better illuſtrate this, than by the following extract of their General Letter, dated the 30th of June 1769, paragraph 5. "We eſteem ourſelves bound "by Treaty to protect the King's perſon, and to ſecure "him the poſſeſſion of the Corah and Allahabad diſtricts. "When we wrote the 11th of November 1768, we "apprehended the conſequences of keeping the brigade at "Allahabad would be creating in Sujah Dowlah a jealouſy "that would involve us in freſh troubles, having at that "time no cauſe to eſteem him an enemy; but impreſſed "as you were with an opinion of his hoſtile intentions "and growing ſtrength at the time of the diſpatch of the "Valentine, we ſhall not blame your caution for deferring "the execution of our orders for its removal, nor ſhall "we at this time attempt to give poſitive directions for "your conduct, which in ſuch critical caſes ought ſeldom "to be done, and in which the ſituation of affairs may be "varied by unforeſeen events at the very moment we are "writing; but having given you, with as much preciſion "as poſſible, a general view of the ſyſtem by which we "wiſh to have our affairs regulated, we muſt leave it to "you to improve, to the utmoſt of your power, every "opportunity of drawing towards that point; and when-"ever you think yourſelves obliged for our ſecurity, "upon emergent occaſions, to adopt meaſures of a con-"trary tendency, you are to give us very full reaſons "for ſuch a deviation, and endeavour to return to the "path we have marked out as ſoon as circumſtances will "admit."

2. The ſecond objection is partly true. The Board have repeatedly declared in their general Letters to the Court of Directors their intentions to adhere to the defenſive plan recommended to them, and to confine their military operations within the limits of the Vizier's territories, and ſuch were their determinations when thoſe Letters were written; but at thoſe times they had not fully experienced the inconveniencies which attended our engagements with the Vizier in the proſecution of that ſyſtem, nor had the remedy occurred which ſince preſented itſelf, in the conditions offered for proſecuting the Rohilla enterprize, and which has been ſucceſsfully applied. Our Treaty of Alliance obliged us to ſupport the Vizier, when his poſſeſſions were threatened with invaſion at an heavy increaſed military expence, and the exportation of our currency with our troops. For three ſucceſſive years theſe inconveniencies had recurred, and it was impoſſible to ſay how often they might recur. At laſt an occaſion took place, when, by a ſlight deviation from the defenſive plan, our alliance with the Vizier might be converted into ſolid advantages. The employment of our troops made to ſave near a third part of our military expences, and the ſucceſs of their operations to bring a large flow of currency, not only into the Company's territories, but into their treaſury; in effect, the very ſame reaſons which before urged us to ſhun every military expedition, namely, the expence attending it, and the exportation of our currency, now operated in the contrary direction, and recommended the employment of our army for the purpoſes of reducing our expences, and adding to our currency."

The preceding argument reſpects only the general ſubject of foreign expeditions. It has been urged alſo as an argument againſt the particular caſe in queſtion, that the Board, when they adopted the meaſure of the Rohilla war, were themſelves convinced of the impropriety of it, from the declaration made by them repeatedly in their Letters to the Court of Directors, of their wiſh and hope that it might not take place. Upon this I beg leave to offer the following reflections.

A conſiſtency of meaſures is difficult to be preſerved among a body of men, becauſe an accidental majority may occaſionally decide for contrary Reſolutions; yet ſuch a caſe has never happened at our Board. A conſiſtency of opinions is not to be expected. The Propoſition for the Rohilla war, after having paſſed the Select Committee, was debated for three ſucceſſive days in Council, in which the Board met, as I recollect, both morning and evening to diſcuſs it. No two Members agreed exactly in opinion, and it was difficult to reconcile them; at laſt they came to a final agreement to leave it to me to accommodate my own, as nearly as I could, to the collective ſenſe of the whole; which was done with much management, and the Propoſition was agreed to in the manner in which it ſtands in Conſultation 26th November 1773.

My ſentiments were the ſame invariably from the beginning, as will be ſeen from my report to the Board of my proceedings at Benares, and my Minute entered in the Conſultation above referred to. Private Letters are not commonly admiſſible as authorities; but on this occaſion I cannot produce a ſtronger, both of my own fixed opinion from the firſt movement of this Propoſition, and of the apprehenſion which influenced the Board, and I confeſs myſelf alſo againſt it, than in the following extract of a Letter which I wrote to a Gentleman in the Direction by the firſt diſpatch after my return from Benares. "I was glad to be freed from "the Rohilla expedition, becauſe I was doubtful of "the judgment which would have been paſſed upon it at "home, where I ſee too much ſtreſs laid upon general "maxims, and too little attention given to the circum-"ſtances which require an exception to be made from "them. Beſides this, an opinion ſtill prevails of the "Vizier's great power, and his treacherous deſigns againſt "us; and I cannot expect that my word ſhould be taken "as a proof of their non-exiſtence. On the other hand, "the abſence of the Marattas, and the weak ſtate of the "Rohillas, promiſed an eaſy conqueſt of them; and I "own, that ſuch was my idea of the Company's diſtreſs "at home, added to my knowledge of their wants abroad, "that I ſhould have been glad of any occaſion to employ "their forces, which ſaves ſo much of their pay and "expences."

When the meaſure was determined upon, and we had come to a general agreement, I was averſe to introduce any new ſubject of debate, and therefore eaſily acquieſced in the expreſſion of a wiſh entertained by the Board, which might be conſtrued as inconſiſtent with the Reſolution we had taken. My ſentiments of the propriety of the expedition had undergone no change; but I will not deny that I felt myſelf influenced by the ſame fears which operated in the other Members of the Council, that the propriety of the meaſure might not be ſeen in the ſame light by our Conſtituents; which we knew, from the temper of the times, might not only draw upon us their ſevere reſentment, but aggravate the load of popular odium which has of late fallen on their ſervants; and if I miſtake not, theſe reaſons are aſſigned in expreſs terms upon our proceedings.

3. The engagements between the Vizier and the Rohillas, which have been already quoted, ſufficiently evince the juſtice of the attack upon them. They agreed to make him an acknowledgment of forty lacks of rupees upon certain conditions; he performed thoſe conditions; and they refuſed payment of the money they had promiſed.

4. No political tranſaction can be mathematically demonſtrated to be totally free from danger. The probable advantages muſt be weighed againſt the probable diſadvantages. When the preſent meaſure was undertaken, there was every reaſon to expect that it would be ſpeedily brought to an happy concluſion; and the event has proved that our expectations were well grounded.

5. The Marattas did not poſſeſs, nor had any claim upon any part of the Rohilla country on the North of the Ganges, when we undertook to aſſiſt the Vizier in the conqueſt of it. They might, with much more reaſon, have attacked us for oppoſing them in their deſigns on the Corah diſtricts, of which they had obtained a grant from the King; but in fact a timid conduct would have been more likely to involve us in a war with them than either of theſe meaſures. Had they been allowed to ſubdue the Corah diſtrict and the Country of the Rohillas, the Vizier's territory would have been open to their incurſions; their numerous horſe might have plundered it in ſpite of the efforts of our infantry, and their continued ravages might have obliged him to come to an accommodation with them, as was once apprehended, on terms which would have afforded them an eaſy entrance into our own provinces. In ſhort, we are much better ſecured againſt their attacks than we otherwiſe would have been; and the better we are ſecured, the leſs will they be diſpoſed to attack us.

6. In reply to this objection, I will in the firſt place affirm, that, merely for the defence of our own provinces, two brigades upon the preſent eſtabliſhment are ſufficient; a third is neceſſary to add to our influence amongſt the Powers of Indoſtan, to ſupport our alliance with the Vizier, and to anſwer other exigencies which may happen at a more remote period of time. Upon the late occaſion, when the Rohilla expedition was undertaken, our apprehenſions of an invaſion from the French had entirely ceaſed; the diſſenſions among the Marattas fully employed them at home, and are mentioned among the ſecondary inducements in favour of the undertaking; there was no other enemy from whom we could have the leaſt apprehenſion of danger. Such was the occaſion to be embraced for effecting our purpoſe, by a temporary employment of a third part of our forces; and under ſuch circumſtances, even without reckoning upon the acquiſition which was the immediate object of the enterprize, to reduce the Company's military expences, by employing that proportion of their troops which was ſuperfluous for the purpoſe of their own defence, was a great and manifeſt advantage; but when the ſtipulated acquiſition of 40 lacks, and the political advantages reſulting from the meaſure are ſuperadded, the viſionary idea of danger, which did not exiſt even in imagination at the time the expedition was undertaken, can have no weight as an objection; eſpecially as from our own knowledge of the open and defenceleſs ſtate of the Rohilla country, we were morally certain that the undertaking would ſoon be brought to an iſſue. By our ancient Treaty with the Vizier, we are bound to aſſiſt him with our forces within his paternal dominions; and the diſtance between their borders and the remoteſt part to which our troops have marched is only 200 miles. I will only add, that ſo long as no immediate danger threatens our own provinces, it is my earneſt wiſh that one of our three brigades might conſtantly be employed with the Vizier; as well to ſave ſo large a proportion of expence to the Company, as to prevent the ill conſequences of total inactivity to our army.

APPEND. X. No. 45.

7. The addition of territory acquired by the Vizier, inſtead of raiſing him to be a dangerous neighbour, ſerves to render him more dependent upon us than before, as he has more occaſion for our aſſiſtance to enable him to maintain it, and to ſupport him againſt the claims of other Powers. If his increaſe of wealth be an object of jealouſy, let it be conſidered how largely the Company ſhare in it. From September 1773 to September 1775, the ſums we have to receive from him, by our late engagements, amount to 130 lacks of rupees.

8. I have already remarked, that the firſt Propoſition for the Rohilla war was made by the Vizier, in a Letter which I received from him in June 1773; that it was employed afterwards in the negociations at Benares, as an inſtrument for winning his conſent to the payment of the full expences of our troops employed in his ſervice; and that it was not finally reſolved on till the 26th November, after the moſt ample diſcuſſion in the Select Committee and in the Council; it was not therefore precipitately reſolved on. It is true, that no formal Treaty was executed for the conditions on which we were to aſſiſt the Vizier; nor did the occaſion, which was only temporary, require it. The multiplication of Treaties weakens their efficacy, and therefore they ſhould be reſerved only for very important and permanent obligations. The form which was dictated to the Vizier for the Letter which was to deſcribe the conditions of this engagement, it is true, is not of itſelf ſufficiently clear; but it is explained by my Letter which accompanied it, and the reference therein made to the conditions which had been formerly propoſed at Benares, as they ſtood in the three firſt articles of the draft which had been prepared for the Treaty before the Rohilla expedition was ſuſpended. For the fuller elucidation of the ſubject, theſe articles are here ſubjoined. The two firſt had been agreed to by the Vizier; to the third he objected, wiſhing rather to engage for the payment of the whole ſum at once when the conqueſt was completed. It is fortunate that the latter mode was adopted; the completion of the conqueſt having been actually effected, and the ſtipulation, although objected to by the Vizier when firſt demanded, after the defeat of the Rohillas, having ſince been acknowledged by him to be due.

The three firſt Articles of the firſt Draft of the Treaty.

1. "Whereas the Rohilla Chiefs, in the month of June "1772, entered into a Treaty with the Vizier, in the pre- "ſence, and with the concurrence of General Sir Robert "Barker, by which they engaged to pay him 40 lacks of "rupees for his aſſiſtance againſt the Marattas, and which "Treaty they have treacherouſly broken; it is therefore "agreed, that a brigade of the Company's forces ſhall "join the Vizier, and aſſiſt to puniſh them, and that he "ſhall pay the whole of its expence. By a brigade is "meant, two battalions of Europeans, one company of "artillery, and ſix battalions of Sepoys; and the expence "is ſettled at Sonaut rupees 210,000 per month. The "Company's troops ſhall not croſs the Ganges, nor march "beyond the foot of the hills. The Vizier ſhall retain "as his own that part of the Rohilla country, which lies "on the North-eaſt ſide of the Ganges; but in conſider- "ation of the Company's relinquiſhing all claim to ſhare "in the ſaid Country, although it is to be conquered by "their joint forces, the Vizier engages to make them an "acknowledgment of forty lacks of rupees, and in future "to defray the whole expence of the Company's troops, "agreeable to the date above-mentioned, whenever he "has

APPENDIX. No. 45.

" has occaſion for their aſſiſtance, notwithſtanding it is " ſtipulated in the ſecond article of the Treaty of Allahabad, concluded by the Vizier and the Company on " the 16th Auguſt 1775, that he ſhall pay only their " extraordinary charges.

2. " The Vizier may retain the brigade aforeſaid, on " the above-mentioned terms, as long as he ſhall require " it, unleſs it ſhall be neceſſary to recal it for the defence " of the Company's own territories; and he may employ " them for the protection of any part of his country; " but they ſhall be kept together in one body, and not " diſperſed on different commands, except ſuch detach- " ments as the Commanding Officer ſhall judge neceſſary " in the time of actual ſervice. He may return the " whole or part of the ſaid brigade whenever he has no " further occaſion for their ſervices, and he ſhall ceaſe to " defray their expences as ſoon as they ſhall enter the " province of Babar. But as the Company cannot riſk " the credit of their arms, by allowing a ſmaller force to " remain with the Vizier than half a brigade, it is pro- " vided, that he ſhall either retain one-half of the bri- " gade, or return the whole. Upon their diſmiſſion, " they ſhall depart with all convenient expedition; and " to prevent any future diſputes from ariſing on this " ſubject, the time of their march to the borders of his " province ſhall be computed at the rate of five coſs per " day, from the place where they commenced their " march."

3. " The Vizier engages to pay the 40 lacks of ru- " pees, ſtipulated in the 1ſt article, by monthly payments " of four lacks, to commence from the end of the month " Rabbee Ulluwull, or 10th June 1774; but ſhould any " accident (which God forbid) oblige our forces to retire " from the Rohilla country, and prevent the Vizier " from obtaining poſſeſſion of it, the ſaid 40 lacks ſhall " not be demanded."

9. It was neither arrogant nor unreaſonable in the Vizier to require, that ſince his entire dependence for the ſucceſs of the enterprize which he had projected was on the brigade of the Company's forces, the brigade ſhould not abandon him while he was engaged in it, nor while the iſſue of it remained incomplete; nor can I deviſe any other condition which would have removed his apprehenſions. If the Board judged the propoſition reaſonable, it certainly was not unbecoming in them to aſſent to it. It remains therefore to examine whether it was reaſonable, and whether this power granted to the Vizier was liable to danger or inconvenience.

I have already ſhewn, that the removal of the brigade to ſuch a diſtance would not prove of danger to our own provinces, becauſe it was not wanted for their defence; that it would be productive of no inconvenience, becauſe it occaſioned an entire ſuſpenſion of the Company's payments during its employment. It is not to be denied, that there are poſſible caſes in which it may be wanted for the protection of Bengal, but theſe are out of the reach of all probability, and too remote to be quoted as an objection to the preſent engagement.

I am not apprehenſive that the Vizier will inſiſt on keeping the brigade continually with him, my fears are that he may diſmiſs it; as there is every reaſon to wiſh its continuance with him, and none, no not one, for its recal. When the brigade was formerly employed with the Vizier, and the ſhare of its monthly expences defrayed by him was only 30,000 and afterwards 115,000 rupees per month, he never ſhewed any earneſtneſs for its continuance with him beyond the duration of the particular ſervice for which it had been wanted, but was ever ready to propoſe its return; it is not likely therefore that he ſhould be more ſolicitous now for its perpetual reſidence in his country, at an expence to him of 25 lacks a year, which he muſt pay, and which his income, even with the late additions to it, can barely afford. He knows that whenever he ſhall require the preſence of the brigade, it will be for our intereſt to grant it; and he will therefore part with it when his own occaſions, which in this inſtance muſt be confined to the defence of his own dominions, no longer require it, that the charge of its maintenance may be ſhifted from his account to the Company's, and that he may be ſubject to that burden only when he is an immediate gainer by it. This may ſuffice to ſhew the little riſk we ran, had we abſolutely engaged the brigade to him as long as he might chuſe to retain it; but, in the preſent caſe (as I have already explained in the preceding article) it was underſtood by both parties, and indeed is inſeparable from the nature of the engagement, and the original conditions of our mutual alliance, that we might recal it if required for our own protection, not only without any imputation of breach of faith, but (unleſs it was done in ſo precipitate a manner as to defeat the purpoſe of the expedition) even without affording him a pretext for refuſing the payment of the 40 lacks.

I have been thus explicit in vindicating my conduct in relation to the Rohilla war, for the ſake of obviating any impreſſion, which a partial repreſentation of this meaſure may make upon the minds of my Employers, as I know that the majority of the Council, which has condemned it, will labour to paint it in the blackeſt colours which they can lay upon it, as an excuſe for the precipitation with which they have proclaimed their reprobation of it, and violated the engagements, on which the right of the Company to participate in the fruits of its ſucceſs eſſentially depended. But it is not on the propriety of my conduct, that I ſhall reſt for proof of the impropriety of theirs, which is equally incompatible with the intereſts of the Company, whether the tranſactions of the late Adminiſtration ſhall be approved or condemned by our Superiors, whoſe judgment only can decide upon it. A recapitulation of the principal acts of the new Council will amply ſuffice for this purpoſe.

The three Members who came paſſengers in the Aſhburnham from England, arrived on the noon of the 19th of October. The next day I met them in Council, which was adjourned to the 24th; both to afford time to Mr. Barwell to join us, and to myſelf to prepare the buſineſs which might be proper for the immediate cognizance of the new Board. To this effect I drew up a Minute, deſcribing the nature and ſtate of two ſubjects, which were undoubtedly the firſt in point of importance; the eſtabliſhment of the revenue, and the tranſactions in our political ſyſtem. If I could have conceived a more regular, or more candid way of leading the Board into the knowledge of paſt affairs, without the influence of my own particular judgment or prepoſſeſſions, I would have adopted it. This Minute I laid before the Council held on the 24th of October. On the 25th the General moved, and the Board (Mr Barwell only diſſenting) reſolved to require, that I ſhould produce the whole correſpondence between me and Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, my Agent at the Vizier's Court, and Colonel Champion, the late proviſional Commander in Chief, both official and private, for their inſpection. I offered the firſt, and refuſed the ſecond, for reaſons which appear in my Minutes. To what I have already recorded on this ſubject I will further add, that there are few perſons in the ſervice, of any conſiderable truſt or rank in it, with whom I have not maintained that diſtinct mode of intercourſe. My predeceſſors have ever followed the ſame rule, and I am perſuaded would have thought it a diſhonourable breach of confidence, had they inſerted on the Records of the Company any Letters which had been addreſſed to them as extra-official and private, without the conſent of the writers of them. Lord Clive, Mr. Verelſt, Mr. Cartier, General Smith, and General Sir Robert Barker, are able to contradict me if I have miſquoted their practice; and I ſhall be glad to appeal to them for the truth of it, if there can be a doubt upon the ſubject. A circumſtance, exactly in point to the preſent matter of diſpute, happened in the courſe of Colonel Smith's correſpondence with the Select Committee in 1766, when by ſome miſtake the ſubject of a private Letter from the Colonel to the Preſi-dent was only alluded to in a Letter from the Select Committee; upon which occaſion the Colonel aſſerts his ſentiments of the ſacred rights of private correſpondence in the following words; "I have been made accountable to "a public Board for an unprejudiced diſcuſſion of facts, "which ought never to have tranſpired beyond the breaſt "of the right honourable perſon to whom, and whom "only, they were addreſſed:" and the Select Committee, by their ſilence, acquieſced in thoſe ſentiments.

The ſame ſubject was reſumed the next day, the 26th. On my refuſal to deliver the correſpondence in the manner in which it was required of me, Colonel Monſon moved, and the General and Mr. Francis agreed, that Mr Nathaniel Middleton ſhould be recalled from his ſtation; and it was reſolved, by a ſubſequent Reſolution of the ſame majority, that the negociations of this Government with the Vizier ſhould be thenceforth committed to Colonel Champion (who ought, by a parity of reaſoning, to have been recalled too) or to the Officer who, on the receipt of the orders, ſhould chance to be the firſt in command of the brigade in the field. To theſe acts Mr. Barwell and myſelf diſſented; and I entered my Proteſts againſt all the conſequences to which they were liable.

The ſentiments and intentions of the majority with reſpect to the Rohilla war, and the future deſtination of the army, were ſufficiently manifeſted in this meeting, and left me leſs room for ſurprize at the Propoſitions which were made on the next, which was held on the 28th. Theſe Propoſitions, which had been previouſly drawn up by the General, having undergone ſome alterations in ſubſtance and form, ſtand recorded as follow:

The General propoſes the following Queſtions, viz.

1. "That the demand of the 40 lacks from the Vizier "be repeated, and that Colonel Champion, or the Officer "commanding the ſecond brigade, be inſtructed to that "effect."

2. "That the Colonel, or Commanding Officer, be "alſo inſtructed to make a demand for ſuch further pay- "ments as may be due from the Vizier, on receiving "theſe inſtructions, and to liquidate what accounts may "be unſettled with him at the time."

3. "That he be further inſtructed, that although he "is to make an immediate demand for the whole 40 "lacks, and for ſuch other payments as may be due at "that time; yet if he finds that it is impoſſible for the "Vizier to comply with the whole of theſe demands, he "is to receive what can be obtained in ready money, "not to be leſs than 20 lacks, and the reſt to be payable "in different periods within 12 months."

4. "That the Colonel, or Commanding Officer, be "further inſtructed, that in caſe the Vizier ſhall refuſe to "comply with theſe demands, he is to enter a Proteſt "againſt him, declaring that the Company have fulfilled "all their engagements with him, and, within 14 days "after the receipt of theſe inſtructions, to retire with the "army under his command, and withdraw it into the "Company's territories."

5. "That further orders be ſent to Colonel Champion, "or the Officer commanding the brigade, that after "having finiſhed the negociations for the money now "due, he do immediately withdraw the whole of his "forces under his command within the limits of the pro- "vince of Oude; and that unleſs the Vizier ſhould require "the continuance of the troops for the defence of his "original dominions, with the provinces of Corah and "Allahabad, he return with them to the cantonments at "Dinapore."

6. "That on quitting the Vizier he ſhall acquaint "him, that the Governor General and Council propoſe "to appoint a perſon to reſide at his court; and to de- "clare that they mean to adhere ſtrictly to the Treaties "of Illahabad and Benares till the pleaſure of the Court "of Directors regarding the latter be known."

7. "That he be further inſtructed, that if he ſhould "apprehend any difficulty or danger from the Vizier in "his retreat, that then he ſhould ſuſpend his declaration, "and take the beſt means in his power for the preſerva- "tion of the army, and adviſe the Board immediately "of his ſituation."

APPENDIX. No. 45.

I prevailed upon the majority to defer coming to any concluſion upon theſe Propoſitions till the next Monday's Conſultation, this being Friday; both to allow time for each to come prepared with his opinion upon them, and for the Gentlemen of the majority to read all the proceedings which had any relation to the ſubject, and of which I had furniſhed them with a complete liſt of references, in my Minute recorded on the Conſultation of the 25th.

On Monday the 31ſt, the Council being aſſembled, I delivered in a Minute, containing my opinion on each Propoſition; Mr. Barwell did the ſame; both expreſſed an aſſent to the three firſt, but objected wholly to the 4th, 5th, and 7th, and to the laſt clauſe of the 6th.

The ſum of our objections, to which I crave leave to refer, as the force of them muſt be loſt by an abridgment, was, that the 4th was too peremptory, and left no room for the Vizier to propoſe any alternative, in caſe his preſent means, or future reſources, ſhould not enable him to comply literally with the demands which were made upon him; that the fifth was a direct violation of the engagements which had been formed with him by the laſt Government, and would afford him a juſt pretext to declare his alſo void, and to refuſe payment of the 40 lacks, beſides the danger of loſing the new conquered country, by ſo precipitate a retreat from it; that the laſt clauſe of the 6th was an alarming ſuggeſtion of the invalidity of a public Treaty, which ought not even to be ſuppoſed, till it were pronounced by the Company; and that the 7th left it at the option of the Commander of the army to declare war with the Vizier.

The other Gentlemen brought no opinions in writing, but reſolved on all the Propoſitions, except the laſt clauſe of the 6th, which was omitted.

It is proper to remark, that our army, joined by the Vizier's, had purſued the remains of the Rohilla forces, which had re-aſſembled under the command of Fyzulla Cawn, to the extremity of the country, and continued encamped more than a month within a very few miles of them, which interval had been employed in negociations till the 2d of October, when Fyzoolla Cawn repaired in perſon to the Engliſh camp, and, as it appears from Colonel Champion's Letters, on the faith of ſome aſſurances given for his ſafety. Since the negociations continued, the enemy remained in arms, and our army ſtill advanced nearer to them, making preparations for an aſſault, in caſe terms of peace could not be agreed on. Thus far our advices had reached us, when the General introduced the Propoſitions above-mentioned; yet, at this criſis of affairs, without waiting for the event, which a very few days muſt have determined, the majority came with their Reſolutions decided for withdrawing the brigade from the ſervice in which it was engaged, whether it were completed or not; and to compel the Vizier to the inſtant adjuſtment of all his accounts depending with the Company, or to abandon him altogether.

One reaſon alledged by the majority for the demand which had with ſo much perſeverance been made for Colonel Champion's and Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's Letters, was, that without them, and eſpecially without thoſe which I withheld from them, their knowledge of the ſtate and circumſtances of the Rohilla war, which was to enable them to judge of the propriety of continuing the army in that quarter, or to determine on its removal, would be incomplete; yet they had neither taken time to read the ſeries of the former political Records which I had

APPENDIX. No. 45.

I had recommended to their perusal, nor the Letters of Colonel Champion and Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, with which I had promised to furnish them; although these were surely as necessary for their information as the private Letters addressed to me, the contents of which they could not know, and, I had declared to them, contained no information on the points on which they wanted it.

Soon after we heard that the Vizier had consigned over the 15 lacks, which Fyzoolla Cawn had engaged to pay him in ready money, to Colonel Champion in part payment of the 40 lacks due from him, and had hastily set out on his return for his capital with Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, for the declared purpose of acquitting himself of the remainder; and that the brigade was in orders to march back to Ramgaut. Fearing the consequences of the orders which had been lately issued, I thought this a fit opportunity to induce the majority to moderate that for the immediate recal of the brigade, and proposed, that as our payments were in so fair a channel of acquittance, and Ramgaut lay at little more than 60 miles from the border of the province of Oude, to which they had destined its future station, a discretionary power might now be entrusted to the Commander of the Army to continue it at Ramgaut for a short period, until the Vizier's consent could be obtained for its entire removal, or until he himself should judge that it might leave the Rohilla country, without hazard of losing it by a fresh invasion, or insurrections.

I think it incumbent upon me to remark a small geographical error, which I have committed in my report of the situation of Ramgaut, which I found laid down in my own hand-writing upon an old map in my possession at the distance which I have described; but having since received a more correct map of that quarter from Captain Rennel, the Surveyor General, which accompanies these papers, I find that it lies near 40 miles more remote from the territories of the Vizier; an error of little consequence, I apprehend, to my argument; but I mention it, that it may not be imputed to me as a deception.

My proposal was rejected. For the reasons, both for and against it, I beg leave to refer to my Minute in Consultation the 8th of November, and to the replies of the majority in Consultation of the 14th.

As a doubt is expressed respecting the nature of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's appointment as Resident or Agent for the Governor at the Court of the Vizier, it is necessary I should say a few words, to reconcile the propriety of styling him my particular Agent, and at the same time considering his appointment in the nature of a public one. By the Company's orders of long standing, and now repeated, all correspondence with the Country Powers is directed to be carried on by the President; and the intention of appointing a Resident with the Vizier was for the purpose of facilitating and perfecting this correspondence, which being the particular province of the Governor, he was my especial Agent, and his appointment was at the same time a public one, as it related to the public service, and was conferred upon him by the Board, though at my recommendation.

That the objects of my remonstrance may not be lost or mistaken in the long narrative and arguments with which I have introduced them, I beg leave to repeat, I ground my charge against the Members who form the majority of the Board; on their recal of my public Agent from the court of the Vizier; on their precipitate resolution of abandoning the Vizier, and of withdrawing entirely from his alliance, unless he complied in the given time of fourteen days with their demands, in the exact form and mode in which they were prescribed to him; on their resolution to withdraw the brigade from the Rohilla country, even if he did comply with those demands, whether the conquest of it was secured, or it was in danger of being wrested out of his hands; and lastly, on the extraordinary licence which they had given to the Commander of the brigade, of forcing the Company into a war with their Ally, under covert of taking measures to preserve the army from danger.

Actions so violent in their nature, and bearing such strong appearances of determined hostility, though proceeding from the most just causes of provocation, seldom fail of producing suspicions of worse intended; and in the means which fear suggests for self-defence, too often prove the cause of working up a slight complaint into the most fatal excess of a declared rupture. But under the circumstances of the present Government, nothing could have so evident a tendency to precipitate this conclusion.

The jealousy with which a new Administration is naturally viewed by those who are connected with it, is of itself sufficient to render even their indifferent transactions liable to misconstruction; but what sentiments must have struck the Vizier, when with the first notification of the constitution of the present Council, he received advice of the recal of the public Minister of this Government from his presence, and of the Resolutions respecting his payments and the removal of the brigade? he will have concluded that a majority of the new Council had combined to overthrow my authority, and to raise their own on its ruins; and had determined to force him to a rupture, in order to depreciate the measures I had taken. It will avail little that these proceedings are tempered with solemn professions of an inviolable attachment to former engagements; such assurances accompanying the actual breach of engagements, are more likely to destroy confidence than to inspire it, as they too manifestly infer the conviction of an irregularity of conduct, which requires such declarations to explain or palliate it.

I have been too long versed in public affairs to look for a concurrence of all men's opinions in any one Proposition however expedient; nor am I so much addicted to my own, as to take offence at an opposition to it, where that opposition proceeds from a judgment unbiassed by personal animosity. I appeal to the Minutes of the majority for proofs of the temper which swayed their Resolutions. Had a mere sense of duty impelled them to declare their disavowal of the expedition, in which they found a part of the army engaged against the Rohillas; or if they had judged the continuance of that force beyond the line of the Vizier's possessions inconsistent with the orders of the Company, the path which they should have pursued lay very plain before them, by which they might have amply manifested their own fidelity, and guarded the Company's orders against the like violation hereafter. In many cases I understand it to be a position of law, that Quod fieri non debet, factum valet, and I believe it was never more applicable than to the present occasion. The measure was an act of the past Administration; it was on the point of being concluded; all the dangers and inconveniencies to which it could ever have been liable were past; of the conditions which had been agreed to on the part of the Company in this engagement, nothing remained but to bring the war to a period, to place their Ally in the secure possession of the new conquest, and to retire within their former bounds. The payments which formed the conditions of the Vizier's part of the engagement were just due; nor had any reason yet appeared to justify the suspicion that he would have failed in the performance of them.

Under such circumstances, I presume that the Members of the new Council, who disapproved of the enterprize, ought to have recorded their disapprobation of it; to have declared their determination, not to give their consent to the employment of any part of the Company's forces, beyond the line which they judged to be prescribed by the orders of the Court of Directors, after the service in which they were then engaged should be accomplished; but to have permitted the brigade to remain in the Rohilla country so long as that service, and the engagements subsisting between this Government and the Vizier required it; leaving the responsibility of the measure to the the Members of the laſt Adminiſtration who formed it, and under whoſe authority it was brought to the criſis in which the new Government found it.

The ſame temperate conduct might have been obſerved with reſpect to Mr. Nathaniel Middleton; his appointment as Reſident on the part of Government at the Court of the Vizier might have been confirmed, but the relation of it transferred from me to the Board at large.

Such a conduct, without the ſmalleſt ſacrifice either of their integrity or duty, would have accommodated their ſentiments to the faith of Government and the conſiſtency of its meaſures; the alarms unavoidably attendant on a change of Government ſo totally new would have ſubſided; the Vizier could have had no pretext to refuſe or withhold the ſums which were due from him; and the Rohilla war would have ended with honour, with unſullied faith, with the reſtoration of that luſtre to our arms, which an inaction of many years had almoſt obſcured in the minds of the people of Hindoſtan, with a great addition of wealth to ſupply our impoveriſhed reſources, and without a ſingle inconvenience or cauſe afforded to regret it.

Let the reverſe of this conduct be examined in the firſt acts of the new Council.

By their violent recal of my Agent from the Vizier's Court, they have proclaimed the annihilation of my authority in that branch of the Government in which the Company, for obvious political reaſons, have ever thought it neceſſary to inveſt their Governor with the oſtenſible power, and which in their very firſt orders to the new Adminiſtration, they have directed ſhould continue to be conducted through him.

They have diſregarded the faith of our engagements, which even in the moſt violent Reſolutions have ever been tranſmitted as ſacred from one Government to that which has ſucceeded it. They have expoſed the conqueſt which the Britiſh arms have acquired for the Vizier to be wreſted from him with the loſs of our military reputation; they have riſked the loſs of the pecuniary reſources which were ſtipulated for the Company as the fruits of their ſucceſſes; and they have precipitately withdrawn the brigade from the ſtation where its whole expence is borne by the Vizier, to become again an heavy and uſeleſs burthen upon ourſelves.

I now once more make my ſolemn appeal to the Honourable Court of Directors from the meaſures already decided by the majority of the Council, and proteſt againſt every future act of the ſame unvaried majority; declaring, that I hold myſelf no longer reſponſible for the conſequences which the intereſts of my Employers are liable to ſuffer; while I am deprived of the means which their commands, which the Parliament of Great Britain, which (if I preſume not too raſhly on the informations communicated to me) even the gracious intention of my Sovereign, have committed in an eſpecial manner to my charge, for the ſecurity of thoſe intereſts, and the ſupport of the national honour and dominion in this great and valuable branch of the Britiſh empire.

Warren Haſtings.

Mr. Barwell's Minute on the Appeals of the Members of Council.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 8th December 1774.

Mr. Barwell delivers in the following Minute upon this occaſion, and deſires that it may be recorded.

When ſuch formal appeals are made to our Superiors, I cannot help lamenting the occaſion from which they proceed, nor repreſs the deep concern it fixes on my mind to view the proſpect before me. When I met Gentlemen ſelected by the public voice to diſcharge a truſt of ſuch national importance, as the ſuperintendance of the intereſt of the crown of Great Britain, and of the Eaſt India Company, I met them in the ſanguine hope, that one ſpirit would have animated the collective body, and united us ſo firmly in purſuit of the great objects of our appointment, that diſſenſions could not have found a place in our Councils. How great then is my unhappineſs and diſappointment to ſee in an inſtant this agreeable, this honourable ſcene, my imagination formed, prove a chimera, a mere chimera; for on the moment of our entering on the Adminiſtration, a ſcene of contention commenced, and, to my mortification, I found my attention immediately called to meaſures of the late Government, that could not be retracted, having already operated and produced the beneficial conſequences they were planned to effect. We might, indeed, riſk theſe advantages to the ſtate by an ill-timed impatience to contract its political connections; a riſk I deemed incumbent on myſelf, if poſſible, to avert; and on mature thought I have no reaſon to doubt the juſtneſs of my ſentiments, or the propriety of that ſupport I judged due to the Governor General in our late debates. My ultimate object was obviouſly the benefit of the ſtate, not contracted by nice examination of the literal confined meaning of any one particular order, but directed to the general good within our graſp, and offered to us in the ſtate and poſture of our political connections at the time we entered on the Government. Further I conſidered, and I foreſaw no poſſible advantage to the Nation, or to the Company, in debating the propriety of paſt meaſures, ſubmitted long ſince to our Superiors, and for which neither myſelf, nor any of the Gentlemen of the preſent Adminiſtration (the Governor excepted) were reſponſible. The benefits of the meaſures alone were left to us, unburthened with reſponſibility; why then not ſecure them? What neceſſity for rendering them precarious by a precipitation that appears, in degree, to loſe the object, while it inflicts the ſevereſt cenſure on the late Government? A principle of action, that I flatter myſelf will fully acquit me in the public opinion, whatever deciſion it may paſs on the ſentiments I have delivered.

It is with diffidence, and with the utmoſt deference to the judgment my Superiors may give on a policy that terminates proſperouſly for their affairs, I adventure to confirm opinions already pronounced. I am conſcious it is not my province to take upon me to approve or condemn meaſures which have come before their tribunal; but this has been rendered unavoidable in the preſent inſtance, from their being made the ſubject of debate. Thus ſituated, I have carefully conſidered and weighed every circumſtance. I have marked with attention the riſe, progreſs, execution, and happy conſequences reſulting to this Government from its connections with the Vizier; and pronounce, from conviction, the late Adminiſtration fully juſtified, and its meaſures entirely conſonant to the firſt principles of ſound policy. As this is my opinion, I muſt coincide in the Governor General's Letter of Appeal. It is, from all the information I have obtained, a candid expoſition of facts; it is unexceptionable in mode and form, and authorized by the Court of Directors. This, I apprehend, is not the caſe with the Appeal of the Members in oppoſition; not having ſeen it, I cannot ſpeak to the matter; but it is at leaſt exceptionable in form, and the firſt inſtance, within my knowledge, of a part of the Adminiſtration formally ſeparating itſelf. Oppoſing ſentiments I have often ſeen recorded on the proceedings of the Council, but I never before ſaw them addreſſed to the Direction in Letters from the ſeveral Members. I will not therefore attempt to extend known privileges, or to aſſume new ones to my ſtation. I approve, and would affix my name to the Governor General's Appeal; but as the requeſt is improper, and its irregularity would determine him to decline it, I take this method of expreſſing my entire approbation, and joining thus far the Governor General's Addreſs to the Court of Directors.

Sentiments

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Sentiments of the Court of Directors on the Defeat of the Rohillas.

Extract of Letter from the Court of Directors to the Governor General and Council of Bengal; dated 3d March 1775.

49. By Letters received over land from our Select Committee at Fort William, dated the 14th and 19th May 1774, we are informed of the defeat and death of Hafez Rhamut Cawn, Chief of the Rohillas, and of the probability of that country being ſpeedily ſubdued by Sujah ul Dowla; and notwithſtanding the pecuniary advantages which the Company have gained by the event, we are exceedingly concerned to find, that our arms have been employed in the conqueſt of the Rohillas, though we muſt conſeſs the conduct of their Chiefs, in refuſing to fulfil their ſolemn ſtipulations with the Vizier, ſeems to have drawn upon them the calamities they have ſuffered.

50. After noticing the cautionary terms ſettled with Sujah ul Dowla, previous to the march of our troops, we can have no doubt of his having fulfilled the conditions of the agreement by which he became entitled to our aſſiſtance; and had the object in view been extended no further, than to compel payment of the forty lacks of rupees due to the Vizier and the Company for the protection afforded the Rohillas, we ſhould have had leſs objection to the meaſure; though we muſt confeſs it would have been much more agreeable to us, if the Rohillas had faithfully complied with their engagements, which were entered into for the immediate and mutual defence of the contracting parties, and in which alſo the intereſt of the Company was concerned.

51. In a political view, we fear the late engagements with Sujah ul Dowla are not altogether unexceptionable; however, as they have been carried into execution, we can only enjoin you to take eſpecial care, that the additional power acquired by the Vizier be prevented from operating to the detriment of the Company. We truſt he is now enabled to repel the Marattas in that quarter, ſhould they repeat their incurſions, which petty ſtates have not been able to do. His Country muſt therefore be conſidered as a barrier to our own poſſeſſions, and the ideas of our having rendered him reſpectable, and of our friendſhip being abſolutely neceſſary to his future ſecurity, can never be too much inculcated.

52. The Treaty of Allahabad compels us to aſſiſt the Vizier in defending his dominions in caſe they ſhall at any time hereafter be attacked; but in regard to new conqueſts, or to any warlike enterprizes beyond his own territories, we abſolutely prohibit you from employing our troops on ſuch expeditions on any pretence whatever.

53. We much approve the alteration made in the ſecond Article of the Treaty of Allahabad, reſpecting the terms upon which our aſſiſtance is in caſe of neceſſity to be granted to Sujah ul Dowla, as thoſe terms were very inadequate to the ſervice to be performed, and conſequently very improper.

Orders of the Court of Directors for recalling the troops.

From the Court of Directors to the Governor General and Council at Fort William in Bengal; dated 7th March 1775.

1. Since we wrote to you under date of the 3d inſtant, we have received two Letters from our Preſident and Council of Fort William, dated the 22d of Auguſt 1774, and alſo a Letter from our Select Committee, dated the 24th of the ſame month.

2. The above advices were ſent by the Hawke ſloop, by way of Fort Saint George, which veſſel arrived at the Cape of Good Hope the 30th December, and they were brought from thence by his Majeſty's ſhip Intrepid.

3. By the above-mentioned Letter from our Select Committee, we are informed that a brigade of our troops, which by former advices was expected to have been returned within our provinces, had nevertheleſs, at the ſolicitation of Sujah ul Dowla, penetrated into the center of the Rohilla country on the oppoſite ſide of the Ganges. The above advices cannot but alarm us exceedingly; more eſpecially when we attend to the ſituation and circumſtances of the neighbouring Powers, and are informed, in the Letter above-mentioned, of the ſteps taken by the King, and the probability there is of the Marattas being ſufficiently diſengaged from their inteſtine broils to turn their arms againſt our poſſeſſions, if they ſhall deem it for their intereſt to commit depredations therein.

4. Under the above circumſtances, we could not omit the preſent opportunity of teſtifying our concern; on finding ſo conſiderable a part of our army at ſuch a diſtance from our territories, and ſo employed as to render it difficult for them to repair within the provinces in time to prevent the ravages of an enemy, in caſe the tranquillity of Bengal ſhould be ſuddenly interrupted.

5. We therefore direct, that you on no account permit our troops to remain beyond the line of defence originally ſettled with Sujah ul Dowla; but that you forthwith take meaſures for their recal, in caſe they ſhall not be returned before the arrival of theſe our orders.

6. And as the hazard to which our poſſeſſions are expoſed by undertaking ſuch diſtant expeditions appears to us very great, and the meaſure ſo very repugnant to every idea of ſound policy, we hereby abſolutely reſtrict you from all attempts of this nature in future; and we poſitively direct, that you never conſent to employ our troops beyond the limits of our own provinces, or thoſe of our ally Sujah ul Dowla, including therein ſuch territories only as we are by Treaty obliged to defend, in caſe his dominions ſhall at any time be actually invaded.

We are your affectionate friends,

London, the 7th March 1775.

Extract of Letter from the Governor General and Council of Fort William, in their Secret Department; dated 4th January 1775;—received in London, 18th July 1775.

1. We now addreſs you by the Dutton, and propoſe to continue our advices from this Department on the plan we adopted for thoſe by the Britiſh King, narrating only the reſolutions and orders of the Board, and leaving the opinions and arguments of the different Members to your judgment, as they will be found on the Proceedings ſent by this diſpatch. We have only to requeſt that you will be pleaſed to notice, that by the term "Board," when we ſpeak of their deciſions, we mean only to avoid the invidious expreſſion Majority; which we however only mean to include by the firſt term; when the Board are unanimous we ſhall take care to expreſs it particularly.

2. Since our laſt, Colonel Champion arrived at the Preſidency. Colonel Gallitz, who ſucceeded him in the command of the brigade, duly received our inſtructions for his negociations with the Vizier, and, by the lateſt advices from him, was preparing to carry them into execution. The brigade was then at Ramgaut, but he propoſed to move it immediately down within the limits of the province of Oude, to remain there till he ſhould have finiſhed his negociations with the Vizier.

3. We do not find that any part of the treaſure received by the Vizier from Fuzullah Cawn was paid in to the Commanding Officer of the troops, as we were given to underſtand there would. By a Letter from Mr. Middleton to the Governor General we learn, that he (Mr. Middleton) had received from the Vizier fifteen lacks of rupees, and that he was to ſet out with it for the Preſidency as ſoon as he could procure boats.

4. Mr. Grady is lately arrived ſafe from Fyzabad with the money entruſted to his charge of the former payment, being ten lacks of rupees from the Vizier; he left five lacks at Coſſimbuzar by our order, and delivered the remaining five into the treaſury here. The Tuncaw for five lacks of rupees on Raja Cheyt Sing, which was alſo delivered to him, was not accepted.

5. It having been reſolved that a fixed Reſident at the Court of the Vizier ſhould be appointed from the Company's civil ſervants, the Governor General lately thought fit to propoſe the honourable Frederick Stuart for that truſt, but the Governor General's propoſition was not agreed to, Mr. Briſtow being afterwards propoſed by the General, and this propoſal obtaining the concurrence of the Board, he was appointed accordingly with a ſalary and allowances ſimilar to what Mr. Middleton enjoyed in the employment which he held at that Court.

6. You were advied by the late Adminiſtration of the donation of ſeven lacks of rupees which the Vizier intended for the army, and of his having actually tranſmitted to Colonel Champion an obligation under his hand for that ſum payable in ſix months; you were further informed of the refuſal of the Preſident and Council to give any countenance to the acceptance of this donation, it falling in their apprehenſion within the prohibitions of the late Act of Parliament. Since Colonel Champion's arrival here he has delivered over to us the obligation above-mentioned, and has added to it a ſeparate note of hand from the Vizier, for 50,000 rupees, intended by him as a preſent to the Field Officers of the brigade, and a Tunkah for three lacks, intended for himſelf.

7. At this time the Governor General laid before us an addreſs to him, ſigned by all the Field Officers of the brigade ſerving under Colonel Champion, accompanied with a caſe, repreſenting the hardſhips which they conceived they ſuſtained, in being deprived of the common right of ſoldiers to the plunder of places taken without capitulation, or to an equivalent for it when they are ſpared; that in the late campaign they had, by a victory in the field, obtained the immediate poſſeſſion of ſeveral conſiderable places which ſurrendered at diſcretion on their approach; particularly Peelabete, Barelli, Oubla, and Biſſouli, where treaſures were accumulated to a great amount; all which were ſeized upon by the Vizier without allowing any ſhare to the victorious troops. That afterwards, when the enemy were driven to their laſt retreat, and obliged finally to ſubmit to him on the terms which he was pleaſed to preſcribe, he acquired great riches by the capitulation, without any conſideration had of the troops or their ſervices. That when he offered them the donation of ſeven lacks of rupees, they regarded it merely as a compoſition for the plunder to which they were entitled by the uſage of war, and of which they had been deprived in the courſe of the campaign; and therefore did not conceive that it could come within the intention of the Act, but ſubmitted their caſe to the favour and conſideration of the Board.

8. Incined as we were to liſten to their repreſentation, we ſtill did not think it was in our power to give any countenance to what appeared to us a direct breach of the letter of the Act. The moſt in this caſe which we could do, was to agree to receive the whole of the money as a depoſit into the Company's treaſury, as well the ſeven lacks to the brigade as the three and an half given in by Colonel Champion, and to recommend to your Honourable Court to uſe ſuch means as to you ſhall ſeem moſt proper, for obtaining by Act of Parliament or otherwiſe, a permiſſion for the army to receive and divide it among them.

9. In this recommendation we are actuated as well by motives of ſound policy as juſtice; for although it may be expedient to reſtrain your army from extorting grants, under colour of preſents or free gifts, yet we ſubmit to you, whether to preclude them in all caſes from the hopes of a recompence for their ſervices, would not be to put them on a worſe footing than any other ſoldiers, and might not ſerve to depreſs that ardour in enterprize which the hopes of advantage never fail to excite. We therefore truſt you will be able to deviſe ſome means of relief for them under theſe circumſtances, and till your orders arrive (if we receive the money offered them by the Vizier) we ſhall retain it in our hands; and to convince them, particularly the ſubaltern officers and ſoldiers, that ſomething real is intended for them, we propoſe to make a diſtribution of the ſhares which every man will be entitled to receive when permiſſion ſhall be obtained, and to publiſh it immediately in general orders for their ſatisfaction.

10. Colonel Champion, Lieutenant Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, being all arrived at the Preſidency from the army in the Rohilla country, the Governor General expreſſed his wiſh to have them called before the Board, to anſwer ſome queſtions which he deemed neceſſary for elucidating the grounds and conduct of that war. The queſtions were unanimouſly approved of by the Board, and theſe Gentlemen were ordered to attend for the purpoſes above-mentioned; their examinations appear at length on the Conſultations.

11. We alſo, on Colonel Champion's arrival, thought it neceſſary to call upon him for the communication of all the original Letters, or authenticated copies of the whole Correſpondence, which had paſſed between him and the Governor, from his departure in the laſt ſpring to take the command of the army in the Rohilla war, until his return to the Preſidency. He at firſt declined, without the Governor General's aſſent, to lay them before us; but on the latter ſignifying his conſent, he has promiſed to ſend them in, according to our requiſition. Soon after this, on his own requeſt, we permitted him to reſign the Company's ſervice.

Minute of General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, dated 11th January 1775, and received in London the 18th of July 1775; containing Obſervations and Remarks on the Governor General's Appeal to the Court of Directors, of the 3d of December 1774.

1. We had no opportunity of making any remarks on the Governor General's appeal to the Honourable Court of Directors by the laſt ſhip, dated the 3d of December; nor have we now ſufficient leiſure from public buſineſs to enter into and maintain a voluminous argument with the Governor General, concerning meaſures on which we have already delivered our opinion, and on which it appears to us that no new lights have been produced.—Something however ſeems neceſſary to be ſaid, in reply to the charges brought againſt us by the Governor General, leſt by our ſilence we ſhould appear to abandon any of our declared opinions, or to admit the exactneſs of the Governor's repreſentation by not diſputing it.

2. What we have now to ſubmit to the conſideration of the Court of Directors ſhall be collected cloſely, and brought, if poſſible, into that clear point of view in which it may be ſeen diſtinctly; and judged of with preciſion. It is not our intereſt or inclination to perplex the cauſe depending before the Court of Directors, either with the nicety of logical refinements, or with the introduction of matter totally foreign from the ſubject. Their attention may be diſtracted by a multiplicity of words, when it is our higheſt intereſt that it ſhould be ſteadily fixed and confined to things.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

3. The argument againſt the Rohilla war was fully ſtated in our laſt addreſs. We meant to make uſe of all the materials then in our poſſeſſion. One important obſervation however on the conduct of the late Adminiſtration was omitted. The Governor General, in his Minute of the 26th November 1773, in order to relieve his Council from the embarraſſment they were in upon the receipt of Sujah Dowla's demand of the brigade, and in order to elude that demand without violating the Governor's private engagement with Sujah Dowla, fortunately falls upon an expedient, which he conceives will remove all difficulties. It is in ſubſtance to yield to the Vizier's demand, but upon ſuch rigid terms as he will probably revolt at, and as may induce him to drop all thoughts of proſecuting the deſign.

4. From theſe premiſes it would naturally follow, that the hard terms which the Governor propoſes to inſiſt on in favour of the Company, ſhould at leaſt be new and unexpected by Sujah Dowla; yet by the Governor General's report of the negociations at Benares, it appears beyond contradiction, that the above terms were no other than what the Vizer himſelf had previouſly offered, upon the condition of our yielding him our aſſiſtance in the intended war againſt the Rohillas. The ſum of two lacks ten thouſand rupees is ſettled by the Treaty of Benares for the monthly pay of the brigade, whenever they might be employed in his ſervice, and he offers to make the Company a conſideration for their ſervice in the Rohilla war of forty lacks of rupees.

5. This being indiſputably the fact, we are at a loſs to comprehend in what new articles the ſuppoſed harſhneſs of the conditions, which were to induce Sujah Dowla to relinquiſh his deſign, could be underſtood to have conſiſted. We have no other difficulty in attributing this management to a pre-concerted colluſion, but that it ſeems too groſs to anſwer the purpoſe of deceiving.

6. The real ſecret of the meaſure betrays itſelf to us from day to day. It is not of a nature to be long concealed. The Vizier's correſpondence with Mr. Haſtings is well worth the attention of the Court of Directors—They will ſee at once that many of his expreſſions convey more than could have been meant for their information. "When we concerted this expe-" dition together,"—"As I was determined to extirpate" the Rohillas, I would not liſten to any propoſals of peace."—"Conſider, my friend, that it was my abſolute determination" to extirpate the Rohillas, and that I requeſted an Engliſh" force for that purpoſe." In our opinion it is needleſs to look for farther evidences of the nature of his deſign, or of the approbation it received from Mr. Haſtings. It cannot now be a queſtion, whether from the firſt he meant to extirpate the Rohillas or not; or whether Mr. Haſtings was originally apprized of that deſign in its full extent.

7. It is not our intention to enter into a refutation of the laborious train of arguments by which the Governor endeavours to ſupport the general expediency and juſtice of the Rohilla war—we willingly ſubmit the whole to better judgments than our own. The only new document introduced by the Governor General on this ſubject, is an extract of a private Letter which he wrote to Mr. Sulivan by the firſt diſpatch after his return from Benares. Our cauſe is too powerful to make it neceſſary for us to diſpute with him, upon the weakneſs and impropriety of referring to ſuch a record in the diſcuſſion of a great public meaſure,—Let us ſee what the extract, ſuch as it is, and ſo produced, contains.

8. In ſubſtance it amounts to this.—"That although "there were arguments which diſſuaded him from the "Rohilla expedition, yet there were others which "would have made him very glad of any occaſion to "employ the Company's forces, that ſaved ſo much of "their pay and of their expences.—On one ſide he fears "the judgment which might be paſſed upon the mea"ſure at home, where he ſees too much ſtreſs laid upon "general maxims, and that his word will not be taken "againſt the prevailing opinion of the Vizier's great "power and treacherous deſigns againſt us."—On the "other ſide he ſtates, "the favourableneſs of the oppor"tunity offered by the abſence of the Marattas;—the "weak ſtate of the Rohillas, which promiſed an eaſy con"queſt of them; and his idea of the Company's diſtreſs at "home, added to his knowledge of their wants abroad."

9. On this ſtate of the communication of the Governor's private ſentiments to his friend, we obſerve, that if it contains more intelligence than he tranſmitted to the Court of Directors, he muſt defend himſelf to them, for communicating to Mr. Sulivan what he withheld from his Superiors. If the communication was the ſame to both parties, we know not to what purpoſe the above extract is now produced.—The public declarations of his conſtant approbation of the Rohilla expedition from September 1773, to this time, are as well authenticated as thoſe, which before that period he had uniformly made againſt every meaſure of that nature. We date the change of ſyſtem from April or May 1773.

10. We ſhall avail ourſelves however of this part of the Governor's private correſpondence to prove, under his own authority, that from his knowledge of the Company's diſtreſſes both at home and abroad, he would have been glad of any occaſion to have employed their forces. The Company are in diſtreſs; their troops muſt be employed. No man we think can miſtake the meaning of ſuch declarations; yet when other immediate purpoſes are to be ſerved, Mr. Haſtings is not reſerved in his deſcription of the flouriſhing ſtate of the Company's affairs here, and of the ſalutary effects which his Adminiſtration has produced.

11. In November 1773 they certainly had not yet produced thoſe effects. Since that time there have been ſupplies of money received from Sujah Dowla's treaſury, which undoubtedly muſt have given a temporary relief to this diſtreſſed Government. Admitting that theſe ſupplies have been ſubſtituted from motives of irreſiſtible neceſſity, in the place of thoſe ſolid and permanent reſources, by which the Government of a rich commercial country ought naturally to be ſupported; we deſire, that in an argument ſuch as the preſent, care may be taken to apply effects to their true cauſes, and not to confound objects which have not even an artificial relation to each other. An inſtance will illuſtrate our meaning. We have lately reſolved to ſend ten lacks of rupees in ſpecie to Bombay; the immediate power of ſupplying ſuch a ſum is a ſymptom of a flowing treaſury; the neceſſity of ſending it in ſpecie is too clear a proof that our trade to the Weſtward is ruined. A man who underſtands the ſubject, and has no intereſt in making it obſcure, will find nothing contradictory in theſe facts, or in the reaſoning deduced from them. To ſay that a commercial country flouriſhes, when making war is the only reſource it has left, appears to us an abſurdity in terms; but inconſiſtent principles of action muſt of neceſſity be defended by inconſiſtent arguments, and by a different language held at different times, which no ſophiſtry can reconcile.

12. In the preſent inſtance we are candid enough to give the Governor notice of the dilemma to which his own declarations reduce him. From all that we have hitherto obſerved of his way of acting and reaſoning, we are thoroughly convinced, that every thing he ſays and does, in ſupport of what he has already ſaid and done, will only involve him in a labyrinth of contradictions from which he never can extricate himſelf.

13. On this footing we are content to leave for the preſent the arrangement of the Governor General's conduct reſpecting the Rohilla war, and the defence of our own. Much undoubtedly has been done, quod fieri non debuit. Whether that be a reaſon for confirming what has been done, or whether this or many other acts of Mr. Haſtings's Adminiſtration can be confirmed on any other principle, are points which we willingly ſubmit to the deciſion of our Superiors.

14. If

14. If the charge appears to be now perſonally levelled againſt the Governor, diſtinguiſhed from his Council, let it be obſerved, that he has voluntarily taken the whole burthen upon himſelf. He ſays, "that after a "debate of three ſucceſſive days, both morning and "evening, the late Council at laſt came to a final agree-"ment to leave the propoſition of the Rohilla war to "him. No two Members agreed exactly in opinion, "and it was difficult to reconcile them;—whereas the "ſentiments of the Preſident were the ſame invariably "from the beginning."

15. In ſtrict right this candour of the Governor General will be no juſtification, though in equity it may be conſidered as ſome excuſe for the late Council, in aſſenting to meaſures which their conſciences condemned. But with reſpect to the Governor General, the exemption he allows to his Council is fatal to himſelf.—If a doubt can poſſibly remain in the mind of any unprejudiced perſon concerning the real motives on which he has acted;—if ſuch premiſes as thoſe, which we think we have eſtabliſhed by a conſtant reference to undiſputed facts, can be preſented to the mind of the Court of Directors, without an unavoidable concluſion that more has been done than yet appears;—in ſhort, if the proofs already extant do not amount to demonſtration, we, for ourſelves, have no doubt that a little time will neceſſarily produce other explanations, by which all thoſe meaſures which at preſent cannot be ſupported by oſtenſible motives, will be completely accounted for, and all opinions on the ſubject reconciled.

16. The few remaining points of the Governor General's Minute and Addreſs to the Court of Directors, which we think proper to take notice of, ſhall be briefly conſidered and diſmiſſed. He is pleaſed to point out to the Court of Directors in what manner it was our duty to have acted, upon our own principle, of adhering to a defenſive ſyſtem for the future. To this we ſay, that the meaſures we reſolved on were the reſult of deliberation, and that our idea of the rectitude and neceſſity of thoſe meaſures is confirmed by reflection. We might indeed have concerted with the Governor, in what manner the ſame meaſures might be carried into execution with the leaſt diminution of his perſonal credit with the Country Powers, and we ſhould probably have done ſo, if it had been poſſible for us to attribute his conduct to error of judgment.

17. The Governor thankfully acknowledges the ſupport which he receives from Mr. Barwell, "and with "the more pleaſure, as he eſteems it to proceed rather "from a juſt conviction of the propriety of his conduct "than from perſonal attachment." The happy reconciliation alluded to, took place ſome months before our arrival.

18. Nothing, we confeſs, can be more meritorious than a ſacrifice of private animoſities to the public ſervice; apparently no man poſſeſſes this merit in a higher degree than Mr. Barwell.—There have been times in which he did not judge ſo favourably of the propriety of the Governor's conduct as he does at preſent; we do not wiſh to revive the memory of thoſe times, much leſs to interrupt a union, which we are bound to think can have no foundation but the public good. As for ourſelves, we are ready to confeſs, that we have no merit of this ſort to plead to the Court of Directors. We had no enmities to ſacrifice. We had no mutual compliances or conceſſions to make to each other. We ſet out upon one principle. We have but one object in view; and cannot in any important inſtance differ about the means. On this ſubject we ſhall only add, that we are far from deſiring to deprive the Governor of the aſſiſtance he receives from Mr. Barwell.

19. We are charged with a reſolution, ſuppoſed to have been formed long before our arrival, of forcing Mr. Haſtings to reſign the Government. With ſome men, we truſt, that an acquaintance with our perſonal characters will be ſufficient to acquit us of ſo baſe and abſurd a deſign; with others, we are ſure of being ſufficiently vindicated by their certain knowledge of our firſt ſentiment in regard to Mr. Haſtings, repeatedly and uniformly declared in England, and ſupported by the ſteps we took on many occaſions, to remove or ſoften every objection which we apprehended might ariſe in his mind, from the new ſituation in which he was placed by the Act of Parliament, or by the Company's inſtructions, and which might have inclined him not to continue in the Government.

20. To Mr. Haſtings himſelf our defence is of a different nature, but equally complete. No man, we believe, is better acquainted with the great leading motive which is ſuppoſed to influence and direct the conduct of mankind. Whenever he ſhall inform the Court of Directors in what ſenſe it was our real intereſt to drive him from the Government, we pledge ourſelves to prove to the world, beyond the poſſibility of a doubt, that no event whatever could be perſonally more diſtreſſing to us, nor leſs for our intereſt, underſtanding intereſt as he does, than that which we are accuſed of endeavouring to promote.

21. Some inattention to ceremonies on the part of the Governor in the mode of our reception, is ſuppoſed to have had a ſhare in creating or confirming in us thoſe hoſtile reſolutions which we are accuſed of having formed againſt him. The firſt objection we make to all that the Governor has ſaid on this article is, that it is a defence without a charge. We leave it to our Superiors to judge what ſort of conſciouſneſs is implied in ſo haſty an anticipation of charges not advanced againſt him.

22. Our ſecond objection would be to his ſtate of the facts, if we thought it worthy of ourſelves, or conſiſtent with the proſecution of buſineſs of a far heavier nature, to deſcend to ſuch a detail. As for the reſt, we hope it will be thought too much to be believed, on no better evidence than Mr. Haſtings's bare affirmation, that we are capable of engaging in meaſures, which, if they are ſuch as he deſcribes them, may ſubvert an empire, merely to revenge an omiſſion of ceremony, for which the ſlighteſt conceſſion from Mr. Haſtings ought to have been ſo ſufficient an excuſe, that we could not have declined accepting it without betraying an injudicious appearance of hoſtility to him, and diſgracing ourſelves.

23. If the charges of a perſonal failure in the reſpect due to Mr. Haſtings had had any foundation whatſoever, we think it ought not to have been deſcribed by ſo groſs a term as that of a warfare of ſcurrility. The expreſſions to which he himſelf applies and confines that deſcription are on record, and referred to by himſelf. Our Superiors will judge, whether they have a reference to the public meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, or perſonally to Mr. Haſtings; and whether, ſuppoſing them to be directed againſt meaſures only, they were or could be too ſtrong for the occaſion.

24. We ſhall reſerve our obſervations on Mr. Haſtings's ſtate of the revenues for a ſeparate Minute. In this branch of information the Governor has many ſignal advantages over us. The ſubject itſelf requires the ſtricteſt care and attention; and as every official light is either directly withheld from us, or extorted by us with pain to ourſelves, and communicated with a ſtudied perplexity and reluctance, all our enquiries on this head are attended with uncommon labour. Truth however will, we doubt not, ere long find its way to the public view; and if we have any apprehenſion for the conſequence of our enquiries, it is not of being unable to prove even more than we have advanced or ſuggeſted, but leſt the general ſtate of this Country ſhould appear to be ſuch, as may alarm the Company and the Nation for the approaching and inſtant ruin of Bengal.

25. We now proceed to the obſervations which we think neceſſary for the information of the Court of Directors, upon ſome events and proceedings which have taken place here ſince the diſpatch of the Britiſh King; and we are the leſs ſolicitous about taking up ſo much of their time, as whatever we ſay in theſe Minutes tends to ſhorten the General Letter.

26. With

APPENDIX. No. 45.

26. With regard to the conduct of public buſineſs, let us take notice once for all, that on the principles which we attribute to Mr. Haſtings, it is highly his intereſt to make uſe of all thoſe ſuperior means which his ſituation affords him, to retard and perplex the diſpatch and progreſs of that buſineſs; he then has a pretence for complaining that urgent affairs are delayed or neglected, and for attributing that neglect or delay to the affected embarraſſments and diſtreſs with which his new colleagues endeavour to perplex and afflict him.

Colonel Champion.

60. The examination of Colonel Champion, furniſhes for the preſent but one ſubject of remark. The Company's right to the forty lacks, in conſideration of their aſſiſtance in the Rohilla war, was acknowledged by the Vizier before Colonel Champion left the army, and long before the inſtructions of the Board could reach the Commanding Officer. It appears alſo that Colonel Champion has not received any part of the above ſum.

61. We know not on what intelligence the Governor could found the following aſſertion, contained in his Minute of the 3d of December, viz. That ſoon after our inſtructions to Colonel Champion were diſpatched, "the Vizier had conſigned over the fifteen lacks, "which Fizulla Cawn had engaged to pay him in ready "money, to Colonel Champion, in part payment of the "forty lacks due from him." We know with certainty, that there could be no foundation for ſuch intelligence; and we hope that the Court of Directors will obſerve, that on the 6th of December Mr. Haſtings ſigned his name to a Poſtſcript to the General Letter, in which it is affirmed with unqueſtionable truth, that no part of the forty lacks had then been received.

62. We muſt further obſerve, that Colonel Champion, in his Letter of the 13th of December laſt, expreſsly affirms, that before he left the army, the three lacks, for which the Vizier had given him a Tuncaw, had been repeatedly offered to him, and in particular his Excellency's Miniſter informed him, that he had inſtructions to pay them out of the fifteen lacks, which he (the Vizier) received from Fyzulla Cawn. The whole buſineſs of the Vizier's pecuniary engagements and payments to the Company ſeems to us to be involved in an affected confuſion, which we are taking pains to clear up, and do not doubt of ſucceeding, provided the neceſſary documents are not withheld from us. In this place we ſhall only take notice, that the fifteen lacks of rupees which Mr. Grady was to have received from the Vizier, was on account of the Treaty of Benares, and has no connection with the other fifteen lacks which the Vizier received from Fyzulla Cawn, and which he promiſed to pay over to the Company immediately, in part of the forty lacks due for the Rohilla war. This obſervation will be found more material perhaps than the Court of Directors, at firſt ſight, may be aware of.

63. Since writing the above, we have ſeen a private Letter from Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, of the 21ſt of December 1774, in which he ſays, that he has the fifteen lacks in his poſſeſſion, but finds a difficulty in procuring boats to convey the money to the Preſidency. He alſo mentions the declining and precarious ſtate of the Vizier's health. We have not yet ſeen any Letters from Colonel Galliez, to inform us of what ſteps he has taken in conſequence of the inſtructions of the Board to negociate with the Vizier.

64. On the arrival of Colonel Champion at the Preſidency, the Board required a ſight of his whole Correſpondence, of which we have obtained a promiſe, after ſome complimentary apologies had paſſed between the Governor and him, on the reciprocal delicacy of either of them diſcovering what might affect the honour of the other. This Correſpondence ought regularly to have been communicated to us by the Governor General in the firſt inſtance, while the recal of the brigade was under debate. At preſent we are not very anxious to ſee it, eſpecially as it is ſaid by Colonel Champion to contain matters not fit for the public eye.

Vizier's Donation to the Brigade.

65. The above Letter of Colonel Champion informs the Board of his having received an obligation from the Vizier of ſeven lacks of rupees for the troops who were employed for the conqueſt of the Rohilla dominions, of half a lack for the uſe of the Field Officers, and of three lacks for himſelf. At his examination it appeared that he had informed the late Adminiſtration of the firſt preſent, but had not mentioned the two latter till he arrived at the Preſidency, when he acquainted the Governor with it. As all theſe preſents were received after the period limited by that clauſe of the Act of Parliament which reſtrains all Officers from taking preſents, we have agreed to acquieſce in the Governor's propoſal of referring the ſeven lacks to the Court of Directors, for the reaſons mentioned in our Minute of the 31ſt of laſt month, to which we refer.

66. The fatal conſequences of indulging troops with the hopes of plunder have been too often exemplified in this Country. The Rohilla war, with reſpect to the ſhare we took in it, had no other object; and to judge from the Correſpondence which has been laid before us, it ſhould ſeem that plunder had engroſſed the attention, not only of this Government, but of the Army, from the commencement of the campaign to the end of it. We do not mean to intimate the moſt diſtant reflection on the conduct of the brigade, far otherwiſe; we admire and commend the exact diſcipline they obſerved under the diſappointment of hopes, which it was natural enough they ſhould form, from the nature of the ſervice. We mean to fix our cenſure upon the Government, which unneceſſarily employs their military force in ſervices, which of courſe ſuggeſt hopes and expectations utterly unfit to be propoſed or entertained by a regular army.

His Compliant againſt Colonel Champion.

67. We could wiſh to avoid mentioning the Vizier's Letter of complaint againſt Colonel Champion, as well as that delivered by the Field Officers in the name of the Army; but it is fair to ſay, that the accuſations which they both contain ought not to make any impreſſion, as Colonel Champion has not yet had time to deliver in his anſwer to either. He has given a direct contradiction to the Vizier's aſſertions, which the Colonel calls infamous untruths.

Nudjiff Cawn's Penſion.

68. We find by the Vizier's Letter, that 2,000 ſtand of arms and two eighteen pounders were ſent to the Vizier, with ſtores, by Mr. Haſtings; and that Major Hannay was appointed Agent to receive Nudjiff Cawn's penſion of two lacks.

69. We have each of us received Letters from the King and his Miniſters, complaining of the detention of his tribute, and demanding the whole arrears due to him. As individuals, we might confine our anſwers to the uſual aſſurances of reſpect and attachment, referring the ſubject of his Majeſty's Letters to the Council. As Members of the Government, we find ourſelves laid under an extraordinary embarraſſment, by the Reſolution of the late Government to reſtore to Nudjiff Cawn his penſion, which by the Treaty of 1765 was to be paid out of the twenty-ſix lacks granted to the King, in conſideration of the grant of the Dewannee to the Company.

Military Expeditions.

70. The Letters received by General Clavering from ſeveral of the Company's military officers entruſted with ſeparate commands, will be found very deſerving of notice. They contain accounts of military expeditions and hoſtilities carried on againſt a number of different Rajahs and Zemindars, without any authority from the preſent Government, or any direct communication to us of the plan or execution of them. Moſt of theſe meaſures appear to have been directed by the Provincial Chiefs of Patna and Burdwan ſome time after our arrival here. In ſome places the Rajahs are reduced to obedience, and give hoſtages. In many others, the villages are burnt and the corn cut down and deſtroyed. Enſign Scott, having received orders from the Chief at Patna to ſeize or expel Rajah Tuttah Shaw, purſues him into Sujah Dowla's dominions, and makes three of the Vizier's

Enſign Scott.

Captain Crawford.

ſubjects priſoners of war.—Captain Crawford, by order of the Chief of Burdwan, entered Patcoom on the 5th of laſt month, with ſix companies of Sepoys, took the capital, levelled the town, and cleared the Country, in order to make the poſt tenable. On the 9th he attacks and drives the Natives before him, after which the whole Country fled into the mountains: he ſays, he is endeavouring to ſow diſſenſion among their Chiefs, ſo as to induce them to ſubmit, or enable him with eaſe to rout them out.

71. We do not pretend to determine at preſent, whether meaſures of this nature be neceſſary or not; but we think it very extraordinary that military expeditions of ſuch importance, and leading to ſuch conſequences, ſhould be undertaken, not only without the orders, but without the knowledge of this Board. We are ſorry to be obliged to conclude this Article with declaring, that, as far as we are able to judge, the general principle which ſeems to have animated this Government, as well with reſpect to the Natives of the provinces as to the neighbouring States, has had too near a relation to the expreſſive words ſo often made uſe of, extirpate, exterminate, root out, and annihilate.

72. The remainder of the obſervations which we are at preſent enabled to make on Mr. Haſtings's repreſentations of the ſtate of this Country, is reſerved for a ſeparate Minute. Our enquiries hitherto have been directed, and, as much as poſſible, confined to great and intereſting objects. Our application to them has been equally laborious and inceſſant. To obtain that complete information which we wiſh to give to the Court of Directors on all theſe difficult and complicated queſtions, requires not only uncommon activity on our part, but ſome allowance of time, in which it may be exerted with effect.

73. If we had leiſure or inclination to enter into details of an inferior importance, we are very ſure, that there is hardly a line of the Governor General's Addreſſes to the Court of Directors, in which we might not eaſily detect and prove ſome inaccuracy in matter of fact, or contradiction in argument. We decline the weary taſk, not only becauſe we think it unworthy of us, but as it is really in itſelf unneceſſary. Facts of a tranſcendent magnitude ought to engroſs our attention. When once they are eſtabliſhed beyond contradiction, they include the probability of inferior abuſes, and at the ſame time make it ſuperfluous to puſh that probability into proof.

74. Neither ſhall we endeavour to leſſen the effects of thoſe appeals which Mr. Haſtings indirectly makes to the generous paſſions of the Court of Directors.—"His "long ſervices,—the important truſts in which his life "has been employed,—his gratitude for the obligations "already laid on him—and his profound ſubmiſſion to "their future ſentence."——If our judgment of every ſingle branch of his Adminiſtration, ſince the power of doing ſignal miſchief or ſignal ſervice to the Company was entruſted to him, ſhould appear to be well-founded, we ſhould be ſorry to preclude him from the uſe of the only reſources which his cauſe will have left him. If pleas of this nature can be properly introduced and admitted in the refutation of poſitive charges, we are content to allow him all the benefit he can derive from them. —It is not for us to ſay, that a mode of defence, which ſeems rather addreſſed to the mercy than to the juſtice of the judge, is irregular in Mr. Haſtings's ſituation. We indeed have yet no ſervices to plead. On the other hand, we do not appeal to the candour of our Superiors; nor can we attempt to engage their future favour by a pathetic acknowledgment of former obligations.

Condition of the Country.

75. The true condition of this Country cannot long be concealed. Effects will be felt before they are accounted for. When that happens, we foreſee no difficulty in determining by what means, and by whoſe miſconduct, a rich and flouriſhing State is reduced to the hazard at leaſt, of beggary and ruin. The great and alarming queſtion will be, by whoſe future ſervices, and by what future exertion of virtue and ability, ſuch a State can be recovered? Common men are not equal to the occaſion.

J. Clavering,
Geo. Monſon,
P. Francis.

Minute (N° 2.) from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis; dated at Fort William, the 11th January 1775;—received in London the 18th July 1775.

1. In conſidering the preſent political ſtate of this Country, we beg leave to draw the attention of the Court of Directors to ſome particulars which we think of moment, yet which, we fear, may paſs unobſerved amidſt the voluminous records ſent home by this ſhip.

Sumro. Maddock. Redman. Nudjiff Cawn.

2. By the King's Letters to Mr. Haſtings, entered on the Country Correſpondence, it appears, that Sumro, Maddock, and Redman, are taken into the ſervice of Nudjiff Cawn, and are high in his favour; that he has encouraged them to ſeize the Pergunnahs belonging to the Royal Khalſa; and in ſhort that Nudjiff Cawn has thrown off his allegiance, and is eſtabliſhing a kingdom for himſelf. To this man, let it be obſerved, the late Adminiſtration has reſtored a penſion of two lacks per annum, granted to him formerly in very different circumſtances.

His Penſion reſtored.

King's Tribute.

3. There is an apparent inconſiſtency in the conduct of the late Adminiſtration in regard to the King's tribute, which we believe will be very difficult to account for.—The whole tribute allotted to the King by Treaty is withheld from him ſince he quitted Illiabad, on pretence of his having changed the place of his reſidence; yet an order, or tuncaw, from his Majeſty, in favour of the Vizier, to the amount of ſix lacks of rupees, was paid in April laſt, and charged to the account of that tribute, to which, as the late Adminiſtration muſt ſay, he has forfeited his right. The penſion reſtored to Nudjiff Cawn comes out of the ſame fund. We ſubmit it to the conſideration of our Superiors, whether theſe operations do not amount to an indirect acknowledgment of the King's right to the arrears of his tribute, and on this head we hope to receive their preciſe inſtructions.

Tuncaw.

4. Let it be farther obſerved, that the Vizier acquits part of his engagements to the Company, on the head of pay due to the troops ſent to his aſſiſtance in 1772 and 1773, with the very money paid him out of our treaſury; ſuch was the care taken by Mr. Haſtings of the Company's intereſt. The natural concluſion at firſt ſight of theſe facts muſt be, that Sujah Dowla has been very improperly favoured by the late Adminiſtration at the expence of their conſtituents; yet even that concluſion perhaps would not go entirely home to the truth. We doubt whether Sujah Dowla's profit from this tranſaction was intended to have been ſo conſiderable as it appears.

Sale of his Country.

5. Another inconſiſtency in the conduct of the late Government towards the King ſeems to deſerve ſome notice. They firſt reſume the poſſeſſion of his Country, under pretence of keeping it in depoſit for him; next they affirm, that by changing his reſidence (from which however he was not reſtrained by Treaty) and by granting Sunnuds to the Marattas for Corah and Kurrah (which it is well known were extorted from him by force) he has forfeited his right to the diſtrict in queſtion; they then ſell the King's Country to the Vizier at a little more than two years purchaſe, and give the King no credit for any part of the purchaſe money.

6. A defence of ſuch meaſures, founded on urgent neceſſity, will not juſtify the inconſiſtency of the meaſures, though it may account for the unavoidable cruelty and injuſtice of them. Admitting however the plea of neceſſity in its utmoſt extent, we deſire it may be conſidered, to what ruin this State muſt have been reduced, when ſo ſtrong a neceſſity is pleaded and aſſerted as can be ſufficient to juſtify ſuch meaſures. This being confeſſedly feſſedly the unhappy ſtate of things in the latter part of the year 1773, it will be incumbent on Mr. Haſtings to prove, that ſome extraordinary change in the Company's affairs has taken place ſince that time, which has reſtored them to their preſent flouriſhing and proſperous condition. He muſt then ſhew in what articles this ſudden alteration conſiſts, or by what means it has been effected.

7. The Vizier's Letter to Colonel Champion contains an abſolute denial of all dependence on or connection with the King, and a declaration equally plain of his ſtrict union with Nudjiff Cawn. From all that we have heard or obſerved on this ſubject, we are much inclined to think, that they muſt have entered into ſome ſecret engagements for their mutual aggrandizement, perhaps to depoſe the King, and to divide the empire between them.

8. It farther appears to us, that Cheyt Sing, the Rajah of Benares, has not received any real protection or favour from this Government. The Court of Directors are already informed, that ſoon after the death of his father, Rajah Bulwant Sing, he was confirmed in the ſucceſſion to the Zemindarry by a ſolemn act of the Vizier, for which he was obliged to pay a very ſufficient conſideration; yet when Mr. Haſtings went up to Benares, it was thought neceſſary that Cheyt Sing ſhould ſubmit to new terms, in order to obtain a confirmation of that firſt ſolemn act, and to ſecure him in his Government. The remainder of our negociations in his favour, as well as many other parts of the politics of India, is involved in a cloud of obſcurity, which yet we doubt not a little time will diſpel.

9. By a Letter from Nudjiff Cawn, received the 17th of November laſt, we learn, that an army of Sieks has made its appearance in the neighbourhood of Shaw Jehanabad, and that a Maratta army is preparing likewiſe to march to that quarter. Nudjiff Cawn adds, "I "perceive by this, that great troubles are likely to ariſe, "as was formerly the caſe."

J. Clavering,
Geo. Monſon,
P. Francis.

Minute (N° 3.) from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis; dated at Fort William, 11th January 1775;—received in London the 18th July 1775.

9. We have already made ſome general obſervations on the nature of the ſervices on which the Company's military forces have been employed. Our information on this ſubject is not complete, as we have not yet ſeen the Correſpondence between this Government and the Officers employed in military operations in Ramgur, the Jungleterry country, and Coch Bahar. All that we know is, that military operations have been, and are actually carrying on in many parts of the frontier country, without the authority of this Board.

10. The true and juſt object of all expeditions of this ſort, ſhould have been merely to check and keep in awe, by the occaſional preſence of a military force, ſuch of the mountaineers, and other inhabitants of thoſe frontier diſtricts, as had been accuſtomed, or were likely to make inroads into, and diſturb the peace of our provinces. The people we ſpeak of were not however in ſo wild and barbarous a ſtate as they have been repreſented. The accounts we have heard of them imply in general a condition of induſtry and ſimplicity of manners, united with a natural deſire of independence. To ſubvert their ſtate, and much more to extirpate them on account of the licentiouſneſs of a few diſorderly people, is neither neceſſary nor expedient.

11. As for the trifling revenue which may have been brought to the Company's account in conſequence of the ſubjection of theſe countries, we only deſire that the Company's Accountant may compare it with the ordinary and extraordinary expence of the troops employed in theſe expeditions, and make his report of the ultimate profit to the Company. At the ſame time, we do not mean to affirm, that theſe countries have not yielded much more conſiderable ſums than what has been brought to public account; or that the various expeditions into them have not been profitable in any ſenſe whatever; or that, under a regular form of Civil Government, the acquiſition of theſe diſtricts, if it could be gained without violence or injuſtice, might not become highly beneficial to the Company. The firſt thing, however, is to conſult the population and improvement of thoſe immenſe tracts of rich land, which at preſent we underſtand lie uncultivated and deſerted in the midſt of theſe provinces.

12. From what has already been written on the ſubject of the Vizier's debts to the Company, the Court of Directors will be able to form a judgment of the probability of their being acquitted. Our moſt ſtrenuous endeavours ſhall not be wanting to realize the amount of our juſt demands on the Vizier; but we muſt deſire that the Company will not reckon ſuch debts among their actual wealth until they are actually paid.

13. We alſo deſire that the following facts may be attended to.

1ſt. Colonel Champion declares, that he has received no part of the forty lacks for the Rohilla war.

2d. Mr. Grady was to have received fifteen lacks of the Vizier on account of the Treaty of Benares; he has brought down with him but ten lacks of Viziery rupees; the remaining five lacks were to have been paid by the Rajah of Benares. Why they have not been paid might perhaps appear from Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's correſpondence with the Governor, but no explanation whatever has been given to the Board. To ſhew the Court of Directors that we have done every thing in our power to obtain a ſatisfactory information on this ſubject, we beg leave to refer them to our Letter to Mr. Secretary Stewart, entered on the laſt Conſultation, and to Mr. Grady's Report thereupon.

3d. Mr. Nathaniel Middleton ſays, in his Letter to the Governor of the 21ſt December 1774, that he has got the fifteen lacks into his poſſeſſion, but does not ſpecify upon what account. We preſume it muſt be on account of the Rohilla war.

4th. Conſiderable drafts have been made on this Preſidency on account of the pay of the ſecond brigade, which was to have been completely provided for by the Vizier's monthly ſubſidy. We have ſeen drafts on this account to the amount of above a lack and a half. We have already apprized the Court of Directors of the nature of the extraordinary charges (beyond the amount of the ſubſidy) which we apprehend muſt be borne by the Company, and conſequently ſet againſt the promiſed profits of the Rohilla war.

Minute of the Governor General, dated 10th January 1775, containing Remarks on the Letter written by General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, to the Honourable Court of Directors; dated the 30th November 1774. Received in London 18th July 1775.

4. The Court of Directors were adviſed by all the diſpatches of the year 1773, that our forces had been employed in the Rohilla country in repelling the invaſion of the Marattas, which threatened the ſafety of the Vizier's dominions; and they were adviſed by the diſpatches of the 12th October 1773, by the Mercury packet, that a propoſal had been made by the Vizier, and actually encouraged by the late Council, to put him in poſſeſſion of that country; but that it had been laid aſide by the Vizier himſelf, and reſerved to be "deter-"mined by future occurrences." The Court of Directors therefore had certainly ſufficient grounds for the knowledge of the new ſyſtem of external policy which the late Adminiſtration had adopted, if by the new ſyſtem is meant, the extenſion of the Company's arms beyond the line of the Vizier's territory for its ſecurity; and ſufficient grounds to ſuſpect the deſign of reducing the Rohilla country for the Vizier, if that be the ſyſtem alluded to.

5. If theſe were the ſentiments of the majority, if ſuch was their idea of "the characters of their Colleagues," and ſuch their determination to "unite in the ſupport "of my Adminiſtration," to "cultivate the friendſhip "and confidence of their Colleagues, and to promote a "general harmony in our Councils," what could have happened in ſo ſhort a ſpace as five days, which had been, as they expreſs it, totally engroſſed by the firſt forms and multiplicity of inſtant buſineſs, to eradicate their too partial opinions? to determine them in a ſubverſion of all my paſt meaſures and my future authority? to preclude every avenue of perſonal confidence, and to ſow the ſeeds of irreconcileable diſcord and diſunion in our Councils? they found this Government engaged in an enterprize which they diſapproved, and, without informing themſelves fully of the objects and circumſtances of it, without making any allowance for errors in the judgment of others, or ſuſpecting them in their own, they at once condemned the entire meaſure, and ſet down the authors of it for marks of unceaſing perſecution.

9. No expedition was intended, and therefore it was not neceſſary to include it in the Treaty. "The ſale "of Corah and Illiabad, the pecuniary terms on which "the Company ſhall yield him the aſſiſtance of their "arms." Is this the language of candour? and is it in theſe expreſſions, which nothing but the moſt mercenary proſtitution of the Company's arms and influence can juſtify, that I am to read the unbounded confidence which the Members of the majority repoſed in the integrity, wiſdom, and ability which had guided the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration? they knew of the ſale of Corah, and of the pecuniary terms on which the Company were to yield the Vizier the aſſiſtance of their arms before they left England, and they certainly approved of both, or it is not probable that they ſhould have retained the ſtrong impreſſions which they had received of the characters of their Colleagues, and of the wiſdom and ability with which the Company's affairs were conducted under the late Government.

Brave and independent are the epithets of declamation, and require no reply; but they are not very conſiſtent with the deſcription given of the Rohillas in the 39th paragraph.

I muſt beg leave to except to the word nation, applied to the Rohilas. They are a tribe of Afgans or Patans; freebooters, who conquered the country about ſixty years ago, and have ever ſince lived upon the fruits of it, without contributing either to its cultivation or manufactures, or even mixing with the native inhabitants. The Rohillas are Mahometans; the Natives Hindoos; and have only changed maſters. The Company never included the Rohillas in the line of defence againſt the Marattas, but mentioned them, it is true, among the Powers capable of oppoſing the Marattas, and therefore expreſſed an inclination to ſupport them. I have given reaſons in my Minute of the 26th November 1773. why I think the Company were miſinformed in this opinion of the Rohillas; and it is no diſreſpect to them to ſuppoſe the late Adminiſtration capable of correcting the information obtained from their predeceſſors, with the acquirements of more recent and authentic diſcoveries.

The converſation between the Vizier and myſelf was generally private; but Mr. Lawrell was preſent during one conference and Mr. Vanſittart at two others; and both will recollect that the deſign of reducing the Rohillas formed a part of the firſt draft of the Treaty. I have aſſigned good and (I preſume) uncontrovertible reaſons for conducting the buſineſs of my negociations with the Vizier in perſon, and ſingly with him; but I never failed to communicate immediately what had paſſed between us to Meſſrs. Lawrell, Lambert, and Vanſittart, who were daily and almoſt continually with me, either verbally, or generally in writing; as I made it a rule to note down all the particulars of our converſation, as ſoon as I was able after we parted, and this the Gentlemen ſeverally read. The General alſo was conſtantly informed, in every meeting which I had with him, of what had paſſed between the Vizier and me.

11. The 10th paragraph concludes with a maxim equally prudent and candid. "On matters of ſuch "delicacy and moment, we will not truſt ourſelves with "the partial power of extracting." But this precaution ſeems to have been forgotten in what immediately follows, where the majority, in mentioning the deficiency of my Report on the ſubject of the Rohilla expedition, ſuppreſs the particulars related by me, and barely mention the Vizier's laying aſide the deſign, but take no notice of the reaſon aſſigned for it. My words to the Council on this ſubject are, "he offered to make the "Company a conſideration for this ſervice of 40 lacks "of rupees, beſides the ſtipulated ſum for the expences "of the troops; but he afterwards laid aſide this deſign, "fearing that it would diſable him from fulfilling his engage-"ments for Corah and Illahabad." After which are enumerated the Encloſures, No. 10, 11, 12, and 3, which all relate to this ſubject, and which rendered it neceſſary for me to be more particular, eſpecially as the deſign had now been laid aſide by the Vizier.

12. "When you refer to the ſhort paragraph from "which theſe paſſages are taken, you will be led to con-"clude, that the Preſident had communicated to the "Council the whole of what paſſed between himſelf "and the Vizier on the ſubject of the Rohilla expedi-"tion." So he did. I have already obſerved, that I informed Meſſrs. Lawrell, Lambert, and Vanſittart, who were deputed with me by the Board, of every circumſtance that had paſſed during the whole courſe of the negociation; but it was unneceſſary that theſe circumſtances ſhould be recorded when they had become entirely foreign to the terms of the Treaty. The Rohilla expedition was laid aſide, or, more properly, it had not been adopted at Benares; for the Vizier's propoſal on this ſubject had never been ratified when he deſired it might be ſuſpended. It is true, an option remained with the Vizier to renew this ſubject, but an option alſo remained with the Adminiſtration either to reject or to aſſent to it. It ſo happened that he did renew the ſubject, but at the time of concluding the Benares Treaty, it appeared probable to me that he would not renew it; and where was the occaſion for loading our Records with the particulars of tranſactions which had been voluntarily laid aſide by the Vizier, who was the intereſted perſon in them? eſpecially as they had been unreſervedly communicated by myſelf, and the Members who had been with me, to the other Members of the Adminiſtration in private intercourſe. If he did renew the propoſal, it was then time enough to enter upon a public diſcuſſion of this matter, when it became a meaſure of Adminiſtration, and was to be decided upon by them. This is preciſely the caſe with the meaſure in queſtion; advantages were drawn from the Vizier's eagerneſs to purſue it, which were happily retained by the Company, when the object of them had been ſtruck out of the Treaty. If he had never renewed it, theſe advantages would have remained with the Company. When he did renew it, I thought it but common juſtice to point out to the Board the conceſſions which this conſideration had induced him to grant. There were no poſitive engagements entered into relative to this matter; it remained with the Board to determine what influence theſe circumſtances ſhould have in their deciſions; and "the queſtion, "whether the Vizier ſhould or ſhould not be aſſiſted in "attacking the Rohillas, remained open and entire for "the deciſion of the Board." If theſe circumſtances had ſome weight in the judgment of the Board, it does not follow that they were poſitive engagements. The word ſecret is next uſed, ſurely not for candid purpoſes and is applied to my having withheld from the Court o

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Directors information reſpecting the Rohilla expedition, when I had no information to communicate to them but that the expedition was laid aſide.

In the ſtrictures which the Gentlemen of the majority make upon paſt tranſactions, having a complete view of every thing that has happened, they reaſon upon events with reſpect to my conduct before they had taken place, and ſeem to condemn me for not having ſeen into futurity. When the Vizier, after being ſo eager to adopt the Rohilla expedition, all at once gave it up, although he had conceded part of the terms upon which it was to have been undertaken, it did not appear to me probable that he would have renewed the propoſal, or that future circumſtances, not lying within the reach of human foreſight, would happen to recommend it. But the Gentlemen of the majority, knowing that the Rohilla expedition was afterwards adopted, accuſe me for not having entered into a full diſcuſſion and explanation of that ſubject, at a time when I had little reaſon to expect that it would ever take place. I certainly thought it poſſible; and this is the plain meaning of the words uſed in my Report upon the ſubject, viz. "that the meaſures to "be purſued for his ſecurity in that quarter muſt be "determined by future occurrences;" that is, if the Rohillas would pay the forty lacks due from them, and join in a ſcheme of defenſive alliance with the Vizier, the meaſure to be purſued for his ſecurity in that quarter would be, to afford the Rohillas protection. If, on the contrary, they gave encouragement to the enemy, or refuſed to pay the forty lacks, the meaſures to be purſued for his ſecurity in that quarter would be, to drive out the Rohillas, and reduce the country occupied by them within the line of his dominion.

13. In my Minute of the 26th of November 1773, I had explained my embarraſſment with reſpect to the expectations which I had given the Vizier, that the project of the Rohilla expedition ſhould meet with the ſame favourable diſpoſition in the late Government to encourage it, whenever it could again be with prudence reſumed, and he deſired it. I had expreſſed alſo my doubts of the expediency of engaging in ſuch an undertaking, while the current of the times rendered the ſlighteſt deviation from the beaten tract of affairs perſonally hazardous to our reputations. The Board adopted theſe ſentiments in the following Reſolution.

"The Board, after due conſideration of the matters "in reference from the Select Committee, and of the "Preſident's repreſentation, concur heartily in wiſhing "to avoid the expedition propoſed. Without entering "into a diſcuſſion of the propriety of ſuch an enterprize "on general principles, the Board ſee in their full force "all the circumſtances of doubt, as to its preſent expe"diency, which the Preſident has ſo clearly ſet forth, "and they are alſo ſenſible of the embarraſſment which "he lies under, from what paſſed on the ſubject between "him and the Vizier at Benares. They are equally "ſolicitous to ſave the honour of the Company, and "watch over its intereſts, and for that reaſon they ap"prove of the Letter now before them, which ſeems "equally calculated to ſave both. The conditions, if "accepted, would undoubtedly ſecure the greateſt poſſi"ble advantages from ſuch an enterprize; but they "appear to them more calculated to drive the Vizier "into a refuſal, which is what they truſt in, as its moſt "probable and almoſt infallible conſequence, and which "they wiſh for, as the proper reſult of this propoſition "in the preſent circumſtances of affairs."

Let this Minute be compared with the ſhort and mutilated extract of it as it ſtands in the Letter of the majority, and they will be found to convey the moſt oppoſite ſenſes.

An uninformed reader, who ſhould take his knowledge of this tranſaction from the latter, would conclude, that I had urged the meaſure ſolely on the ground of the promiſe which I had made to the Vizier, and on the hope that the conditions which I had propoſed were ſo hard as to induce him to reject them; and that the Board had aſſented to it on no other conſiderations, even while they declared their diſapprobation of the meaſure.

The fact is, that the Board reſted their wiſh to avoid the expedition ſolely upon their doubts of the conſequences which might perſonally affect us, at the ſame time that they were ſenſible of the advantages it would ſecure to the Company.

That I had cauſe for my belief that the Vizier would reject the conditions, is plain, ſince the Vizier did actually reject them, although the encouragement offered him by the ſucceſs of his operations in the Doaub, and the total inability of the Marattas to interrupt him in his further purſuits, induced him afterwards to declare his acceptance of them.

14. No. The Board wiſhed to decline the undertaking for the reaſon which has been before repeated; but it ſurely was not neceſſary that they ſhould fruſtrate the ſucceſs of it, if it did take place. This precaution was taken to enſure its ſucceſs, and to prevent any interruption which it might receive from the rains, if it was delayed till their approach, which would have happened had the Board required a repetition of the application to be made to them for the march of the brigade, when they had already expreſſed their aſſent to it.

16. "We had rather attribute the apparent changes "in the Vizier's reſolutions to the ſimplicity of his "character, than ſuppoſe it poſſible that the Preſident "was from the firſt acquainted with his real intentions, "and that he made uſe of artifice to draw or extort from "your Council an involuntary concurrence in his mea"ſures. Your aſſiſtance is propoſed to be yielded to "the Vizier on terms ſo diſadvantageous to him that he "cannot be expected to accept of it; that conditional "engagement being once extorted from your Council, "they can no longer recede from it, when the Vizier "almoſt immediately accepts the conditions."

I am ſorry to ſee the names of Clavering and Monſon ſubſcribed to ſuch unworthy inſinuations, becauſe I do not believe that even the heat of party contention can have ſo far warped their minds from the conſideration of that juſtice, which every man of honour will yield to the honour of others, as to make them really believe me capable of ſo baſe an artifice as they have imputed to me, without the ſlighteſt grounds to ſupport it. I will not anſwer it.

17. "Conſidering that the Vizier himſelf expreſsly "ſays, that it is his reſolution to employ the brigade in the "reduction of the Rohillas, this laſt intimation from the "Select Committee appears to us wholly unaccount"able." Why does this intimation appear unaccountable?

The Select Committee were of opinion, that although the Vizier had declared his intention of making a conqueſt of the Rohilla country, yet he would not actually undertake it, but would employ all the remainder of the fair ſeaſon in his operations in the Doaub.

18. An appeal to the paſſions is an inſult to the underſtanding. Such are the allegations of "the barba"rous and unneceſſary devaſtation of the country;" the cruelty with which the Vizier treated his unhappy priſoners; the brutal outrages offered to their wives and daughters, though of "the higheſt rank; his wanton "enormities;" and the declamatory quotation from one of Colonel Champion's Letters on the ſame ſubject.—I believe it will appear, from the evidence of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's Letters, and from the examinations of Colonel Leſlie and Major Hannay, ſtrongly corroborated even by the Letters and Depoſitions of Colonel Champion, the Vizier's principal accuſer, that he has been unjuſtly traduced in the reports which prevailed of the enormities committed by him in the courſe of the war. I believe it to be a truth, that he begun it by ſending detachments to plunder. This I pronounce to have been both barbarous and impolitic, but too much juſtified by the practice of war eſtabliſhed among all the nations of the Eaſt, and, I am ſorry to add, by our own, in an inſtance which the Vizier has a right to quote in vindication of the charge againſt him, of a detachment employed in the war, in which we were engaged with him in the year 1764, to burn and ravage his country. It fell to the lot of Colonel (then Major) Champion to execute this commiſſion; and how well he diſcharged it, and how little his feelings were at that time affected by the ſame ſcene of barbarities, and wanton enormities, againſt which he has lately ſo pathetically exclaimed, will appear from the following copy of a Letter from him on the ſubject to the late Preſident, Mr. Vanſittart; which I quote not meaning to reproach him with having done the duty aſſigned him, but to prove, that the principal which dictated to Colonel Champion the ſevere charges with which he has laboured to load the Vizier in the late campaign, was either perſonal animoſity, or the deſire of perſuading the Board to grant him the power which he repeatedly ſolicited, to controul, and in effect to command the Vizier. I pretend not to look into the hearts of others; but I exerciſe the right allowed to all mankind of judging of intentions by facts; and I appeal to Colonel Champion's correſpondence with the Select Committee and the Board for the grounds on which I form my judgment, and on which every man who reads them may judge for himſelf. The Letter above alluded to is as follows:

and,

Extract of a Letter from Major Champion to Henry Vanſittart, eſquire; dated 20th June 1764.

"Two ſeparate parties have been ſent into the ene"my's country, the one of which was as high up as
"Buxar, and, according to the directions given me,
"there are deſtroyed upwards of a thouſand villages.
"Had not the rain, &c. prevented us, which occaſioned
"our return, we ſhould have done very conſiderable
"more damage. I am now marching on the borders "of the Diva to the boundary of the Sircar country, to "endeavour to bring in the Zemindars, as not one of "them of any conſiderable note is yet come in, nor has
"a rupee been collected from this country."

The cruelty with which the Vizier treated his unhappy priſoners forms the ſecond charge againſt him. It is not even aſſerted (except in the inſtance which I ſhall proceed to in the third charge) that they ſuffered by actual violence, but that they were ill-ſubſiſted; and I believe this to be true. Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, whoſe Letters contain the ſtrongeſt character both of candour and truth, ſays, that the Vizier did allow them too moderate a ſubſiſtence, and that ill ſerved; his commands, though frequently repeated, being in this, as in every other inſtance, ill obeyed.

The third charge is indeed of the blackeſt die; of "brutal outrages offered to the wives and daughters of "the Rohillas, though of the higheſt rank." The only authority which the Gentlemen of the majority had for this horrid accuſation, at leaſt I recollect no other, was a Letter from Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, who mentioned it only as an inſtance of the falſehoods which had been propagated to injure the Vizier; adding, that the unhappy victims of his brutal luſt, who could not ſurvive their ſhame, but had put a violent end to their own lives, were ſtill living; and that the Vizier had never ſeen them. Colonel Champion's anſwer to the queſtion propoſed to him by the Board on this ſubject, namely, "whether he had heard the report, and if he believed "there were grounds for it?" is a ſtriking inſtance of the little inclination he had to ſhew favour to the Vizier, but amounts to the ſtrongeſt conviction of the falſehood of this abominable hiſtory. He ſaid, "he did hear ſuch a "report, but as to the grounds, he had none ſufficient "to prove the accuſation; but the report was made to "him."—The charge of oppreſſing his new ſubjects has alſo been laid againſt the Vizier, and totally refuted by the depoſitions of Colonel Champion, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, who all declare that the country enjoyed, even in the height of the war, a ſtate of perfect tranquillity.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

19. This contains a charge againſt me for ſuppreſſion. In anſwer, I ſay, that theſe details, if declamations are details, have appeared long ago in Colonel Champion's Letters to the Select Committee, complaining of the cruelties exerciſed by the Vizier; and in the repeated calls which they made upon him to produce the inſtances of them, which he replied to by repeating the ſame declamations, but producing no inſtances, at leaſt none which in my judgment can warrant the ſmalleſt part of his invectives againſt him. The following is his reply:

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Champion to the Select Committee; dated 12th June 1774.*

* Select Committee's Proceedings of the 1ſt July 1774.

"In compliance with the Board's deſire, I am now to "mention a very unpleaſing ſubject. The Vizier's "treatment of the family of Hafez Rhamut, &c. the "inhumanity and diſhonour with which they, Mahibullah "Cawn, his brother Fizullah Cawn, late proprietors of "this city and country, and their families, have been "uſed, is known all over theſe parts. A relation of "them would ſwell this Letter to an immoderate ſize, "and withal prove very diſagreeable reading. I ſend "you tranſlations of two Letters, and copy of a third, "which, affecting as they are, will convey but a faint "idea of the treatment theſe unhappy people have met "with.*

"I could not help compaſſionating ſuch unparalleled "miſery; and my requeſts to the Vizier to ſhew lenity "were frequent, but as fruitleſs as were thoſe advices "which I almoſt hourly gave him, regarding the deſtruc-"tion of the villages; with reſpect to which, I am now "conſtrained to declare, that though he always promiſed "as fairly as I could wiſh, yet he did not obſerve one of "them, nor ceaſe to overſpread the country with flames "till three days after the fate of Hafez was decided. "But, Gentlemen, as in all points, excepting ſuch as imme-"diately reſpect the operations in the field, he is ſolely em-"powered to preſcribe, the reputation of the Britiſh name "is in his hands, and the line which has been laid down "for me is very clear.

"The above families have been diſpatched to Fyzabad, "that their mal-treatment might not be ſo generally "known to us; I have however frequent accounts of "them, and it will give me the moſt ſenſible pleaſure, "that you ſtretch forth the hand of benevolence effec-"tually to relieve them from ſo indeſcribable a miſery. "And that you may the better deviſe the means of ſo "doing, without ſubjecting them to greater misfortunes, "I am to inform you, that every application of mine in "their favour, though profeſſedly taken in good part by "the Vizier, yet only ſerved to procure them more "rigorous treatment."

The two Letters which he encloſed are too long to extract; they are inſerted in the Conſultations referred to in the margin, † and will be found to contain no proofs.

21. Although it is not material to prove what part of the private correſpondence of Colonel Champion and Mr. Nathaniel Middleton were withheld from the Board, when I have publicly refuſed to communicate it, yet it is of conſequence to me to refute miſrepreſentations. I never aſſerted, that my chief reaſon for withholding the correſpondence was, "that they related to a difference between "the Vizier and Colonel Champion."

My declared reaſon for withholding this correſpondence was, that I could not in honour reveal it; and in relation to Colonel Champion's Letters, I added, that "I thought "a greater degree of delicacy due to him, becauſe our "correſpondence had not been always cordial on many "points, and we had ſeveral times expoſtulated with each "other on theſe topics with the freedom of private "friends, and in a ſtyle, which, though decent in every

" degree, is yet different perhaps from the formal addreſſes " of official correſpondence."

26. To blacken my conduct, and to excite indignation againſt me, facts have been perverted, miſrepreſentations employed, inſinuations thrown out of the blackeſt perfidy committed by me, in acts neither known nor even alluded to, and opprobrious epithets and invectives applied to the meaſures of which I had lately the chief direction. Inſtances of all theſe kinds of arguments occur in this ſhort paragraph.

It is a perverſion of facts to ſay, " that the Britiſh " arms and honour were abſolutely at the Vizier's diſ- " poſal; that an abſolute ſurrender has been made of the " honour and intereſts of the Company." We agreed to aſſiſt him in ſubduing the Rohillas. It was neceſſary to draw the line between the authority of the Vizier and our Commanding Officer. The ſervice to be performed was entirely the Vizier's; it was therefore conſiſtent and unavoidable that he ſhould direct the objects of it; but the execution of military operations was expreſsly veſted in our Commanding Officer; of courſe the ſafety of our army, and the honour of the Britiſh name and arms, were entirely confined to his conduct and direction.

It is a miſrepreſentation to ſay, " That the Vizier " dared to tell the Preſidency that he is the Maſter of the " Company's army." His words, in a literal tranſlation, which was made by myſelf, and is alluded to in this expreſſion, are theſe; " but I am the Maſter in theſe " affairs, and the power of retaining or diſmiſſing the " Engliſh army is mine;" an idiomatical expreſſion, perpetually occurring in the Company's Records, and meaning ſimply, that the brigade was not to ſtay or depart without his conſent, What follows is pure inſinuation and inapplicable abuſe. I quote the paſſage to prove it. " Confounded by appearances which we are " unable to account for, we look in vain for oſtenſible " cauſes adequate to ſuch effects, and confeſs, that every " enquiry that we make fills us with equal diffidence and " ſurprize. We ſhall not however anticipate any con- " jectures which may ariſe in your minds, when you " review the whole conduct of this dark and myſterious " buſineſs from firſt to laſt, and reflect upon the abſolute " ſurrender which has been made, with ſo little apparent " compenſation, of your honour and intereſt to the vin- " dictive or capricious projects of Sujah Dowla."

What are the effects which fill them with equal diffidence and ſurpriſe? What buſineſs is it which they call dark and myſterious? Who made an abſolute ſurrender of the honour and intereſts of the Company? No one. I look in vain for the neceſſity which impelled the majority to deviate into ſuch reflections for the juſtification of their conduct, in recalling the brigade at the criſis of the war, and in diſſolving the appointment of my Agent at the Court of the Vizier; but if " the juſtification of " their conduct can only be ſupported by a ſtrong and " deliberate cenſure of the preceding Adminiſtration," this mode of exciting the paſſions and ſurpriſing the attention, which is calculated to ſway with uninformed and inattentive readers, I truſt will not influence the judgment of thoſe, who are to decide both upon their conduct and that of the preceding Adminiſtration.

28 and 29. Theſe paragraphs ſeem to contain ſome criminal charge, but I profeſs I ſcarce know how to apply them. They did arrive on the 19th, but too late for buſineſs, and without the packet. We did meet on the 20th, and ſpent the whole morning, as they ſay, in ſettling the proclamation of the new Government, which I ſay too, ought not to have been a matter of much debate. At my deſire we adjourned to the Monday following, Mr. Barwell not being arrived; but it was not till the next day, Tueſday the 25th, that I gave them any light into the political ſtate of the Country. Why their ſituation, during this interval, was anxious or diſgraceful I cannot conceive. There was only a vacuity of two days, Friday and Saturday, and theſe not unemployed by me or them. I was wholly occupied in all that time in preparing the firſt points of buſineſs neceſſary for their information, namely, the ſtate of the Revenue, and ſituation of our political affairs. The firſt required ſome inſtant determination, and was brought on the firſt on Monday, and the debates on it took up the whole time of that meeting.

The laſt, which required no immediate reſolution, was brought on Tueſday, but might with equal effect have been totally withheld, as the Members of themajority came prepared with a decided reſolution to reprobate the whole ſyſtem, and to take the ſpeedieſt meaſures to overturn it in the very criſis of its accompliſhment.

39. This is not a fair ſtate of my argument, which I deſire may be taken in my words, in the Minute of the 26th November 1773, not in this mutilation of it. I never conceived the Rohillas to be weak, divided, and defenceleſs; the words ſo connected convey the idea of utter diſability. I ſaid, they were too weak to be a match ſingly oppoſed to the Vizier; that their jealouſy of him would therefore ever make them ready to arm themſelves againſt him; and that they would ſeek their ſafety in involving the Vizier in wars with Powers more formidable than themſelves.

40. To this opinion of Colonel Champion's, I ſhall ſubjoin the following of General Sir Robert Barker, which I conſider as at leaſt equal authority.

" The General agrees with the Preſident, that the " Vizier's dominions would become compact, and not " ſufficiently open to invaſion. It is from the appre- " henſion of invaſion that cements the Vizier's friendſhip " with the Engliſh, and makes him that ſtaunch Ally we " find him."

My own opinion upon this ſubject is very fully explained in my remarks on the 42d paragraph.

41. This method of ſeparating the parts of a propoſition, and refuting them ſingly, without adverting to their relation with each other, is new and embarraſſing. I own that the conveniency of poſſeſſing the Rohilla country was not a ſufficient reaſon for invading it. I never ſaid it was; but if they had afforded a juſt provocation for invading their Country, and we ſaw advantages in invading it, though neither cauſe was alone ſufficient to produce that effect, yet both united would certainly juſtify it, and the moſt rigid ſpeculator would approve ſo fair a concluſion.

I hope I ſhall ſtand acquitted in the breaſts of all reaſonable men, for maintaining the opinions quoted againſt me in the concluſion of this paragraph; but I adopt it even in the words of my opponents; and if I am " The Chief of a great State," alluded to by them, I ſhall be always ready to " profeſs that I do reckon the pro- " bable acquiſition of wealth among my reaſons for taking " up arms againſt my neighbours." I never in any period of my life, though long engaged in public affairs, gave my conſent for taking up arms in an unjuſt cauſe; and I never ſhall, but in caſes of very notorious enormity, give my conſent to take up arms in an unprofitable one.

42. The anſwers which have been given by Colonel Champion, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, to the queſtions put to them by the Board, at once clear up the obſcurity, and reconcile what appears to the Gentlemen of the majority contradictions in that part of my Minute, reſpecting the acquiſition of the Rohilla territory to the Vizier. It has been aſked them, if they thought the Marattas would venture to croſs the Ganges, and enter the Rohilla country, when an Engliſh army was ready to oppoſe them; to which they have all anſwered, they did not think they would; and if they did, that they could not retreat without the loſs of their baggage; therefore I ſay, that the Vizier's poſſeſſions by this acquiſition make a complete State, ſhut in effectually from foreign invaſions, if he has an Engliſh army to aſſiſt him. It has alſo been aſked theſe Officers, if they think, that without our aſſiſtance the Vizier's army would prevent the Marattas from croſſing the Ganges and entering the Rohilla country; to which they have anſwered, that they did not think it would; and therefore I ſay, that this acquiſition, by bringing his frontier nearer to the Marattas, for whom ſingly he would be no match, renders him more dependent on us. With our aid the Vizier's State, joined to the lately acquired Country, which are both bounded by the Ganges, and the northern range of mountains, form a complete compact State, ſhut in effectually from foreign invaſions. But without our aid he cannot bring a force into the field capable of defending it; and therefore this very acquiſition renders him more dependent upon us. A fort may be impregnable with a proper garriſon, which might be eaſily aſſaulted and taken, if there were not ſuitable troops to defend it.

Rupees of Oude.

44. The rupees of the currency of Oude have a fixed ſtandard. The rupees received by Mr. Lambert, in payment of the firſt ſum of the Treaty money, were not all of the currency of Oude. The difference is certainly due from the Vizier, and ought to be demanded. It will appear, I believe, upon examination of the Paymaſter's accounts, that the rupees received from the Vizier, on account of the monthly ſubſidy for the troops, have yielded 111 current rupees per-cent.

45. I am informed by the Paymaſter General, that the diſburſements of the troops which marched to the ſervice of the Vizier, during the three firſt months of the campaign, the ſubſequent accounts not having been yet received, amount as follows:

For February 1774 - - -	206,069	9	0
March ditto - - - -	260,752	14	6
April ditto - - - -	246,376	1	7
Current Rupees	713,198	9	1

Value in current rupees.

That is, upon a medium, current rupees 2,37,733, which is leſs than the amount due by my eſtimation for the monthly ſubſidy. The hire of boats, and the price and conveyance of ſtores and field equipages, are as much a part of the military diſburſements as the ſoldier's pay, and are included both in General Barker's eſtimate, on which the amount of the ſubſidy was fixed, and in the above diſburſements. Mr. Nathaniel Middleton's allowances had nothing to do with them; he had no military charge, and his appointment even preceded the order for the march of the brigade. The troop of cavalry was not raiſed expreſsly for this ſervice, but propoſed and raiſed long before this ſervice took place, for the purpoſes of a guard to the Governor, for occaſional ſervice againſt the Seneaſſies, and for attendance on the Commander in Chief when the army took the field. I am aſtoniſhed to find the charge of recruiting added to the increaſe of diſburſements occaſioned by the brigade being employed in the Northern Countries; it is from theſe Countries that all our recruits are raiſed, and the expence in bringing them into our own provinces has always been conſiderable.—This expence is ſaved when the brigade can recruit upon the ſpot.

46. My Minute was not written for the information of the Gentlemen of the preſent Adminiſtration, but to inform the late Council of every circumſtance and advantage attending the Rohilla war, with which they were not before fully acquainted. The ground of quarrel had long ſince been conſidered by them, and was notoriouſly known to be juſt; it had furniſhed the occaſion of my journey to Benares. To have entered on a matter in which we were all agreed, would have been multiplying words to no purpoſe.

48, 49, 50. In anſwering the ſecond objection to the Rohilla expedition, as ſtated in my Minute of Appeal, I have endeavoured to defend the conduct of the late Adminiſtration from the charge of inconſiſtency. I will only further add, that I think even the extracts which the majority themſelves have made from their Letters, will ſuffice to vindicate them from the accuſation. They at firſt ſteadily refuſe to co-operate with the Vizier in any operations beyond the limits of his own dominions. In the meantime the Marattas reduce the Jauts, invade the Rohillas, and threaten Corah. Their power becomes daily more alarming, till at length the Council reſolve to prevent them from gaining a footing, either in the Corah country or the Rohilla. They ſay they are impelled by indiſpenſable reaſons to become parties in theſe political conteſts; but at the ſame time lament that it is a drain of the wealth of this Country, and cannot be productive of any advantage to the Company. Afterwards ſuch engagements are made with the Vizier, as procure advantages to the Company, and prevent the drain of the wealth of Bengal; and then the objections which they before lamented no longer ſubſiſt. With reſpect to attacking in 1774 the very people whom we had defended in 1773, both theſe meaſures tended to one uniform object, the prevention of the Marattas from eſtabliſhing themſelves in that Country.

52. The chaſm in my correſpondence with Colonel Champion will now be ſupplied, as he has engaged to furniſh the Board with all my Letters to him; and I ſhall with equal fidelity lay all his before them. The ſuggeſtions excited by the chaſm in this part of my correſpondence will vaniſh with the peruſal of them.

53, 54, 55, 56. I preſume I have ſufficiently obviated all the reaſonings of theſe paragraphs in my Minute of Appeal.

57. This is a partial quotation, and the inference drawn from it invidious and uncandid. I deteſt and deſpiſe all profeſſional reflections as illiberal, and the effects of a malevolent heart, or a narrow underſtanding. My ſocial connections have lain as much, if not more, in the military than in any other line; and I know many of that profeſſion whom I love and honour for qualities which would have equally entitled them to my eſteem in whatever ſtate of life I had found them. Let my Minute be read (it is too long to be inſerted) and it will appear, that my objections had no relation to the military character of the Officer who might be in the command of the brigade, but to the power which that command conveyed with it, and which of courſe gave him an abſolute controul and ſovereignty over the Vizier, if every other avenue of communication was cut off between the Vizier and this Government. My objection would have been the ſame whatever might have been the profeſſion of the perſon intended for ſo unconſtitutional a truſt; and I preſume that ſuch were the reaſons which impreſſed the majority of the Board with the like conviction of the propriety of employing an intermediate Agent, in a line independent of the Military Commander, for the miniſterial agency with the Vizier.

60. "We hold it beneath us to enter into refutation "of looſe invectives, or general inſinuations. Look to "facts, Gentlemen, and we are convinced you will find, "that it is your Civil Servants who have involved the "Company in offenſive wars, and in ſchemes of conqueſt "by which no public intereſt could be promoted."

This and the concluding ſentence of the laſt paragraph have much the air of "inſinuations, thrown out to the "diſadvantage of the civil branch of the ſervice," and with great injuſtice. The fact is (ſince facts are appealed to) that the propoſition of the Rohilla war came from the Vizier and General Barker; a circumſtance of little importance, but as it ſtands properly oppoſed to an aſſertion too peremptorily made, ſince it was intended to brand the objects of it with infamy, unleſs it had been grounded on certain knowledge.

63. "The fact however differs from the repreſen-"tation." I believe not. The date of this Treaty is no proof of miſrepreſentation; nor can I underſtand what this charge alludes to, ſince the facts aſſerted in this paragraph are undoubtedly true, except one, and prove the truth of my repreſentation. The exception which I mean is to the aſſertion, "that the Marattas have not "ſince renewed their invaſion of the Rohillas." They invaded

invaded them the next year, and were driven off by General Sir Robert Barker, who was accompanied by the Vizier and his army.

64. The paſſage of the Letter of the Select Committee, from which this quotation is taken, was expreſſed alluſively, not in the terms of an affirmation, and upon a ſubject totally different from the preſent. The words are theſe: "yet we judge that the Rohillas, who have "ſought their ſafety in an alliance with the Marattas, to "which they were of neceſſity compelled, would, when "left to themſelves, attempt at leaſt to re-eſtabliſh their "own independence."

This quotation will be better underſtood by the words of the original Minute of the Select Committee, in their Proceedings of the 7th January 1773, of which it is an abſtract, intended to convey the ſame ſentiments in their Letter to the Court of Directors. "It is however ſtill "more probable, that the Rohilla Chiefs, who have "ſought their preſent ſafety in a treacherous alliance to "which neceſſity compelled them, with the Marattas, "will from the ſame principles abandon their cauſe, &c."

The Select Committee in theſe reflections aimed only to prove, that the fears of the Vizier were ill-grounded, when he ſuſpected that the Rohillas would abandon themſelves wholly to the Marattas. The idea of juſtifying the treacherous conduct of the Rohillas never had a place in our thoughts. We conſidered the Rohillas as acting merely on the principle of occaſional conveniency, or temporary neceſſity; uniting at one time with the enemies of the Vizier, either to avoid a preſent danger apprehended from them, or to diſtreſs and divert him from forming deſigns againſt their ſecurity; and at another time uniting with the Vizier to oppoſe the ſame enemies, when their ſucceſſes became an object of greater danger to them than the ſuſpected intentions of the Vizier, and he could repel them.

This is conſiſtent with the opinion which I have always declared of the Rohilla policy; and when that policy is manifeſted in acts of open perfidy, they certainly become "the juſt objects of war and conqueſt," though not on "vindictive" principles.

65. It would have been little conſiſtent with prudence in the Vizier to poſſeſs himſelf of the dominions of the Rohillas, at a time when the Marattas were capable and at hand to diſpute it with him, and his protection of the Rohillas was neceſſary to defend that avenue to his own dominions; and as little conſiſtent with equity to take that advantage of their diſtreſs, becauſe they had not at that time afforded him provocation for it.

66. We are not bound to aſſiſt the Vizier with our troops for the defence of any part of his dominions, ſhould it be incompatable with our own ſecurity; and on this principle I apprehend the Board would decide, in any requiſitions which might be made to us by the Vizier for our aſſiſtance, as far as may be conſiſtent with our own ſecurity. I am clearly of opinion with Mr. Barwell, that it will be politically neceſſary to protect the Vizier's new dominions, if he ſhall be at any time unable to defend them by his own force; which is not very likely to happen, unleſs the aſſurance of the neceſſity of a neutrality on our part ſhould encourage the Marattas, or any other Power who may become equally formidable, to direct their whole ſtrength againſt that quarter, preſuming on their ſuperiority to the Vizier's forces alone, and unſupported by ours. But I am clearly of opinion that ſuch an event is not likely to happen, if it is believed that our forces will march to oppoſe them. In this opinion I am ſupported by thoſe delivered by Colonel Champion, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, in their examinations before the Board on the and ult. If the Company's intereſt requires it, and no cauſe forbids it, I ſhall not look for the obligation of a Treaty to compel my aſſent to it.

67. "The firſt of the above meaſures (i. e. the pur-"chaſe of Corah and Illahabad) neceſſarily makes the "King your enemy." It probably has produced that effect, which we have not felt, nor ever ſhall. He owed his exiſtence, and all the power and wealth he ever poſſeſſed, to the Britiſh generoſity, and he repaid it with acts of hoſtility. But why are objections at this time raiſed againſt the purchaſe of Corah and Illahabad? Right or wrong it is paſt, it is irrevocable, and has not even the ſlighteſt connection with the meaſures of the majority, unleſs on the principle fundamentally laid down by them, that "the juſtification of their conduct can "only be ſupported by a ſtrong and deliberate cenſure "of the preceding Adminiſtration." To the opinion of Colonel Champion, quoted in this paragraph, I beg leave to oppoſe thoſe delivered by himſelf, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, in the late examination to which I refer.

68. "At the riſk of making all Hindoſtan your ene-"mies." This is a new conſequence, drawn from the ſupport afforded the Vizier, and too portentous to be affirmed or admitted, without a reaſon produced in ſupport of it. I cannot gueſs at any, and cannot therefore anſwer it.

69. I have already ſaid, that the ceſſion of Corah and Illahabad, which is ſtyled by the majority a ſale, a purchaſe; and the ſubſidy fixed for the maintenance of our troops while employed in the defence of our Ally, which they have branded with the appellations of pecuniary terms, and hiring out the troops, &c. were known to the Gentlemen of the majority before they left England, and at the time in which they profeſs themſelves to have been "impreſſed with the higheſt idea of the wiſdom "and ability with which the Company's affairs had been "conducted under Mr. Haſtings." While it united their preſent purpoſe or paſſion to favour the meaſures of which I had the conduct, the moſt exaggerated applauſe was not thought to over-rate them; but the ſame meaſures are now become the ſubjects of their ridicule, and the ruin of the Britiſh intereſts in Bengal is inferred from their effects, "becauſe the juſtification of their own "conduct can only be ſupported by a ſtrong and deli-"berate cenſure of the meaſures of the late Admi-"niſtration."

The reaſons which have been alledged for the ſale of Corah and Illahabad have not been controverted; I believe they never will, and I ſhall therefore paſs over this ſubject as decided; but it may be neceſſary to ſay ſomething in vindication of the ſtipulation for the monthly ſubſidy, againſt the new conſtruction which has been forced upon it, and the inferences deduced from it. By the orignal Treaty formed with the Vizier in 1765, we are under obligation to aſſiſt him with our forces whenever he required it (with the reſerve already mentioned) and he is obliged to pay the extra expence. This engagement has proved a ſource of vaſt expence to the Company, and made the Vizier's alliance a burthen to them. It compelled them to keep up a larger force, at an expence exceeding the proportion of the reſt, than the defence of their own poſſeſſions required, and they derived no other advantages from it, than in the ſecurity which their own provinces eventually received from the ſecurity of their Ally. To remove this heavy load, it was propoſed to raiſe the ſubſidy to the full amount of the expence of a brigade, eſtimated at what it ought to be. This was effected by the Treaty of Benares, and at once removed all objections, placing the alliance between the Company and the Vizier on a ground of reciprocal advantages, and at the ſame time rendering the employing of the Company's arms an object of intereſt inſtead of diſadvantage. The ſubſidy is not new, nor an act of the laſt Adminiſtration. It has its foundation in the original alliance with the Vizier, but the modification of it has been improved; the ſum paid in 1765 for it was 30,000 rupees per month, and it is now fixed at 210,000, which is juſt ſeven times the firſt amount.

Here I cannot omit making one general reflection, which occurs in reading the addreſs of the majority, which is, that their grand and principal objection to the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, ſeems to be, that we allowed the Company to acquire any pecuniary advantages from our political arrangements. The ceding of Corah and Illahabad to the Vizier is objected to as a ſale, becauſe fifty lacks of rupees were ſtipulated to the Company on that account. If we had given up theſe without any conſideration in return, this objection could not have been made. The ſubſidy for defraying the whole expence of our forces employed with the Vizier, is reproachfully ſtiled hiring them. If the Vizier had only paid the extra expences, it would then have been leſs reproachful; but if we had made the Company pay the whole expences, in the language of the majority it muſt then have been entirely irreproachable, and we ſhould have acted for the glory of the Britiſh Nation. Our agreement with the Vizier concerning the Rohilla war is diſhonourable, becauſe the conditions were mercenary and pecuniary; that is, the Company were to acquire forty lacks of rupees from it. Had there been no ſuch acquiſition to the Company, the majority would have withheld theſe diſhonourable epithets. Upon theſe points I leave the Company to decide between the ſentiments of the majority and the motives which influenced our conduct.

If I have expreſſed the opinion aſcribed to me in theſe words, "it is highly uſeful to the Company to hire out "their troops to Sujah Dowla, in order to ſave the "expence of their pay, and to preſerve their diſcipline, "by keeping them in the continued practice of war;" which words, by the line drawn under them, I ſuppoſe to be mine, I hereby retract and diſavow it. I am of opinion that the beſt military eſtabliſhment will loſe its ſpirit and diſcipline by long inaction; that it is neceſſary to both that the troops ſhould frequently take the field, and not enjoy too long an interval from active ſervice. This maxim I have often avowed, and I believe upon Record; but a continued practice of war is ſuitable only to a piratical ſtate, or an herd of ſavages. The refutation of this maxim is extraordinary. "We fear the time is approach-"ing very faſt when the India Company and the Nation "will know the extent and feel the force of it;" and this is called, ſpeaking plainly, and apprizing the Company of their danger.

70. The particulars of this paragraph, which appear improperly introduced on this occaſion, have either been miſunderſtood or miſrepreſented. If it has been admitted in Council, "that the plan for letting the lands has in a "great degree miſcarried, and that this Country is "unable to bear the expence of the Inveſtments, toge-"ther with that of the civil and military eſtabliſhments," the admiſſion is not founded in truth. The plan for letting the lands has not miſcarried, and is ſtill in our opinion the beſt which could have been adopted. What deficiencies have happened in it have proceeded from eventual cauſes, which have been fully explained, and which no general plan could prevent. It has been ſaid, that this country was unable to bear the current expences of the civil and military eſtabliſhments, to furniſh the Company's inveſtments, and ſupplies of treaſure for China and Bombay, and to pay off a bond debt of near a crore and thirty lacks, accumulated in the courſe of former years, without a reduction of its expences and an addition to its reſources.

It was for this reaſon that ſo much pains were effectually taken by the late Adminiſtration to retrench the current expences, and that their political meaſures were ſucceſsfully calculated to furniſh additional reſources.

71. The employing of our troops with the Vizier does not ſuppoſe the deſtruction of nations, but, on the contrary, the preſervation of them, at leaſt of his Country. The expreſs purpoſe for which the Vizier can by Treaty apply for our troops, is for the defence of his dominions, and that moſt probably againſt the Marattas, for there is no other enemy likely to attack them. Colonel Champion, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay, have given it as their opinion, that ſince his acquiſition of the Rohilla country, this would be effected by our army only appearing in his ſupport, as the Marattas would not dare to croſs the Ganges if they were oppoſed by an Engliſh army. The conſequence is, that as often as the Vizier was under apprehenſions of invaſion, he would call for our troops, and we would have it in our power to eaſe the Company of a part of their military expences. It is true that this reſource is temporary; but I hope the difficulties of the Company will alſo prove only temporary. It is to remove them that we have propoſed theſe expedients, and every expedient which leſſens their diſburſements, and adds to their reſources, muſt contribute to produce this effect. APPENDIX No. 45.

72. This paragraph I ſhall reply to in the ſenſe to which I underſtand it to allude obliquely. The conqueſt of Agra was effected by Nudjiff Cawn, aſſiſted by ſome Sepoys of the Vizier. Major Polier, who had been employed by the Vizier, with my permiſſion, in conducting the works of Fyzabad, had charge of theſe Sepoys, or ſome other occaſional command (I forget what) given to him by the Vizier, and he was preſent at the ſiege. This Government neither aſſiſted nor countenanced the conqueſt of Nudjiff Cawn, ſince the reduction of Agra was attempted and accompliſhed before our interference could have availed on either ſide. Conqueſt of Agra. Major Polier.

My wiſhes, however, I own to be favourable to Nudjiff Cawn, becauſe I believe him to be ſtrongly attached both by inclination and intereſt to the Company, and a natural enemy to the Marattas. Had I the ſmalleſt idea of its being poſſible that the Vizier ſhould become an enemy to us, this would be an additional motive with me for wiſhing to maintain a conſtant connection with Nudjiff Cawn. Nudjiff Cawn.

73. If I underſtand the ſcope of this argument, and I declare that I mean not to miſconſtrue it, it aims to prove, that if the natural reſources of Bengal have failed, the exiſtence of the Britiſh empire in India is at its criſis, and the attempt to ſave it by external remedies, which are unnatural, will but precipitate its diſſolution. Surely this is not a juſt way of reaſoning. If the internal reſources of a ſtate fail it, or are not equal to its occaſional wants, whence can it obtain immediate relief but from external means? which, in the preſent caſe, will certainly afford that relief, and prove the ſureſt aid to thoſe lenient remedies which the wiſdom of Government may apply for the reſtoration of its conſtitutional vigour. No concealment has been ever made by me, or by the late Adminiſtration, of the true ſtate of this Country. Our advices have been honeſt, full, and explicit. We have told our Employers that we had encountered great difficulties, and that we hoped to ſurmount them; and I truſt that they will already have ſeen theſe hopes in part realized, and ample grounds afforded to look for the eſtabliſhment of a confirmed ſyſtem of Government, and of commercial and territorial reſources in Bengal, which it hath hitherto wanted. Such a ſtate it is yet capable of receiving, although it may ſuffer, as I fear it will do, an interval of almoſt two years loſt in anarchy and diſtraction.

The ſolemn aſſeveration at the cloſe of this Addreſs, as it contains no argument, requires no anſwer, and ſhould paſs unnoticed by me, if it were not that ſuch a poſitive pledge of their honour, and every thing that can be dear "to honeſt men," may ſway with many in oppoſition to all reaſoning; and I muſt confeſs it appears to me to be introduced with a view to this effect. I muſt therefore expreſs the ſurpriſe I feel, that the Gentlemen ſhould hazard ſo ſacred a pledge upon the truth of facts, ſo various and unaſcertained, that it is impoſſible for human reaſon to decide on many of them; much leſs for theſe Gentlemen, to whom the ſubjects were entirely new, to receive, in ſo ſhort a time, ſuch information as they could affirm, upon a pledge of honour, to be truth; and in effect it will appear from the above remarks, that they actually have been miſtaken in many of the facts and inferences which relate to the ſtate of the Company's affairs. For myſelf I will declare, that, with certainly a fuller knowledge of the circumstances than they can possibly have attained, and with as earnest a solicitude to abide by truth, I will not venture to pledge my honour, that error and mistake may not have a place in what I have written; but I will make this sacred pledge of my "honour, and "every thing that is dear to me as an honest man," that my endeavours, both in my Minute of Appeal and in these Remarks, have been to free my conduct, and that of the late Administration, from the misrepresentations which have been cast upon them; and, by a fair statement of the motives and effects of our measures, to lay the truth before our Employers, and enable them to decide with justice between us and our accusers.

Having finished my observations on the several arguments made use of by the Gentlemen of the majority in their Letter of Appeal, I think it necessary to conclude with one striking remark, which is apposite to the whole substance of it; namely, that although it is professedly drawn up for the defence of their measures, and the condemnation of the late Administration only, as involved in that defence, there is not a single word in their Address, which, in my understanding, defends, or even aims to defend their measures.

The recal of the brigade at a time when we were in hourly expectation of hearing that the war was concluded, and before the conquest was secured; the dismission of Mr. Nathaniel Middleton, the public Minister of this Government at the Court of the Vizier; and the dictatorial licence granted to the Commanding Officer in the field, to provide against any attempts which might be made on the safety of the army, are the measures against which I have protested; and which I affirm to be equally injurious to the faith of Government, and the interest of the Company, whether the measures which they have laboured to depreciate be right or wrong.

Governor General's Remarks on the separate Letters of General Clavering, Colonel Monson, and Mr. Francis, to the Honourable Court of Directors.

Mr. Barwell.

7. I must take upon me to justify Mr. Barwell, by affirming, that the majority had taken their resolution before they had consulted all the Records by which it could any way be affected. "That much assiduity and attention have been since employed to trace and collect the facts and opinions, which they have offered in justification of their resolution, is undoubted; but I appeal to their own words, and to the Records, for proof, that they could not have obtained that complete information at the time in which they had taken their resolution.

On the 25th of October I read to them the concluding part of my Minute entered on the Consultation of that day, respecting the political state of this Government; and this contained a connected list of all the Proceedings which were necessary for their perusal, to enable them to form a complete understanding of the subject. The only parts of these references which were called for and read at the Board, were the passages of the General Letters of the last year to the Court of Directors which related to the Treaty of Benares, and the Rohilla expedition, the Treaty of Benares, the Vizier's requisition for the march of the brigade, and my report of my transactions at Benares. Yet, on this scanty information, if they waited even for this, they at once formed their decision; and as they themselves affirm, in the 23d paragraph of their Appeal, "they should have thought it their duty to have pro- "ceeded immediately to the recal of the brigade within "the Company's territories, or at least within the original "dominions of the Vizier, but for the vehement oppo- "sition made to that proposal by the Governor Gene- "ral. He urged, that there were a number of Records "and Letters still to be consulted," &c. &c. &c.

Of the Letter addressed to the Chairman of the Court of Directors, one part only requires annotation, the rest having, as I presume, been fully answered in my Minute of Appeal, and in the preceding Remarks.

Much stress is laid on the contents of the last General Letter from the late Council, as containing facts and opinions not according with the date of it; and arguments are accumulated to prove, that the Letter was written later than the date of it. This charge is in part true. That part of the Letter to which this objection particularly applies, was most certainly written after the assembly of the new Council; and written, as I can vouch, with the design of obviating the objections which might be, or had been made to the propriety of the Rohilla expedition. The date was a mere form, necessary to authenticate the Letter, which was to be signed by the Gentlemen of whom the late Council had consisted, and were no longer a public body after the Proclamation of the new Council. This is not the only instance of facts, in their own nature perfectly indifferent, which have been produced against me, and against the late Administration, with all the solemnity of the most criminal accusations.

Warren Hastings.

Remarks on the first Minute of General Clavering, Colonel Monson, and Mr. Francis; dated 11th January 1775.

References to paragraphs of the majority's Minute.

Par. 3, 4, 5. These paragraphs labour to prove, that the conditions exacted from the Vizier, by the resolution of the Board passed on the 20th of November 1773, were the same that the Vizier himself had previously offered for our assistance in the intended war against the Rohillas, and that of course, the rigid terms which I had said it was probable the Vizier would revolt at, and drop all thoughts of prosecuting the design, had no existence.

In reply, I desire that the three articles of the original draft of the Treaty which was formed when I was with the Vizier at Benares, containing the first conditions on which it was proposed to assist him in the reduction of the Rohillas, may be compared with the draft of the Letter dictated to be written by the Vizier, and containing the conditions on which it was resolved in November 1773 to assist him in that enterprize. The former will be found in my Minute of Appeal, in page 39 of the triplicate accompanying this, and the latter in the Proceedings of the late Select Committee, dated the 22d of November 1773, and in the Proceedings of the Board, in their Secret Department, on the 26th of November 1773. These will shew the difference of the conditions proposed, which consist in this essential point; that the conquest of the Rohilla country was the criterion which established the Company's right to the stipulation of forty lacks in the first instance; and in the second it is agreed, that the forty lacks should become due, and be paid in ready money, whenever the Vizier should dismiss the brigade, or one-half of the brigade, whether the country of the Rohillas should be conquered or not.

6. I am here charged with a concealed design, formed in concert with the Vizier, to "extirpate" the Rohillas; and much use is made of this discovery both by the majority, in the Letter before me, and by Colonel Champion in his vindication. The word, in the original language of the Letter, which is here translated to "extirpate," means to expel or remove. In another passage of the Letter it is joined with a word which does literally express to extirpate, or root out; and both passages mean no more, than that it was the intention of the Vizier to expel or remove the Rohillas from the country which they occupied, without suffering the smallest vestige of their power to remain in it. In this sense I most certainly did agree to assist the Vizier, and so did the late President and Council, nor can I conceive how the war could have been undertaken with any other object. The majority know, as well as myself, that the Rohillas are not the people of the country, but a military tribe who conquered it, and quartered themselves upon the people without following any profession but that of arms, or mixing in any relation with the native inhabitants. I have already deſcribed the nature of this tribe in the 9th paragraph of my obſervations on the firſt Letter of the majority, and the ſame account of them has been given by Colonel Leſlie and Major Hannay, and, if I miſtake not, by Colonel Champion himſelf, in their examination taken before the Board on the 19th and 28th of December. Major Hannay's words are remarkable; I beg leave to quote them. "I have "learned from many people, that it is only within 50 "years that the Rohillas are become maſters of the "country to the North of the Ganges. That they were "originally Afgans, came into Hindoſtan under a Serdar "named Doud Cawn, and that they conquered that coun- "try from the Hindoos, and that ſince that time they have "followed no other profeſſion than that of arms, and "the ancient Hindoos have cultivated the country. "The Rohillas are Muſſelmen, of the ſect of Omar, "and the cultivators of the country are Hindoos. I "ſuppoſe the proportion to be about nine Hindoos to "one Muſſelman."

64. The peruſal of the Letters now laid before the Board by Colonel Champion will, I doubt not, ſatisfy you of the propriety of my withholding them when firſt demanded by the majority, and of the truth of my aſſertion, that they contained no material public information.

65, 66. I have already fully explained my ſentiments as to the propriety of the Rohilla war. It will appear by the Proceedings, and by my Letter to Colonel Champion on the ſubject, that the late Adminiſtration uniformly diſcouraged the hope of plunder. The following extract of my Letter to Colonel Champion will probably appear to many too ſtrongly expreſſed on this ſide of the queſtion.

Extract of my Letter to Colonel Champion; dated the 21ſt May 1774.

"Hitherto every part of your conduct has met with "my moſt entire approbation; but there is one ſubject "which in ſome meaſure alarms me; the very idea of "prize money ſuggeſts to my remembrance the former diſ- "orders which aroſe in our army from this ſource, and had "almoſt proved fatal to it. Of this circumſtance you "muſt be ſufficiently apprized, and of the neceſſity for "diſcouraging every expectation of this kind among "the troops; it is to be avoided like poiſon. However, "in caſe any conſiderable capture ſhould attend your "future operations, I think you cannot purſue a better "conduct than that which you intended, to determine "nothing yourſelf, but acquaint the Board with the cir- "cumſtances, and wait for their deciſion."

Remarks on the ſecond Minute of General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis; dated 11th January 1775.

King's Tuncaw. The reaſons for continuing the payment of his allowance are explained in my report of my tranſactions at Bendres, entered in Conſultation of the 4th October 1773, and the reaſons for diſcharging that part of the King's tribute for which a tuncaw, or aſſignment, had been granted by the King to the Vizier, are explained in the Conſultation of 13th May 1773, and in my report. The principal reaſon was, that the aſſignment had been accepted by the late Government in the time of Mr. Cartier. It was a debt due to the Vizier, and paid to the Vizier, not to the King, to whom the portion of the tribute for which the aſſignment was granted had been paid when that aſſignment was granted.

The firſt part of the fourth paragraph I do not underſtand. The latter part indirectly charges me with having ſhared with the Vizier in the amount of this aſſignment;—to this I ſhall not reply.

5. 6. Theſe meaſures have been long ago referred to the Court of Directors, and need no explanation here, as their determination upon them muſt have been formed before this.

The Gentlemen in different parts of their writings ſeem to blame me for ſtopping the payment of the King's tribute; on the other hand, had I paid it, I ſuppoſe, from the preceding paragraph, that I ſhould have been charged with ſharing in it.

It is an undoubted truth, that the ſtate of the Company, at the time in which theſe meaſures were adopted, was diſtreſſed both at home and abroad; it ſhall be inconteſtably ſhewn, that "their preſent condition is "proſperous and flouriſhing." The means by which this ſudden alteration has been effected have been repeatedly and fully ſhewn. It may ſuffice here to ſay, that it has been principally occaſioned by the acquiſition of money from the Nabob Sujah Dowla, and the reductions made in the Company's expences in Bengal.

7. Requires no reply.

8. The increaſe levied on Cheyt Sing was on his ſucceſſion to the Zemindarry immediately on his father's death; no further increaſe was levied upon him on his confirmation in it during my interview with the Vizier at Benares.

9. 10. 11. No part of theſe paragraphs requires any comment, except the inſinuation contained in the concluſion of the laſt. The firſt Letter written to me by the Vizier, which notices the late change of Government, was received the 20th of December, in anſwer to mine which adviſed him of that change. It is certain that many Letters were written by the King and others to General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis. It is plain that thoſe Gentlemen are either offended at the Vizier for not having paid them the ſame compliment, or impute the neglect of it to me. Your orders are peremptory, that the correſpondence between this Government and the Country Powers ſhall be carried on by the Governor alone. They have arrogated to themſelves every other power of the Government, and this alſo they now too manifeſtly lay claim to, in defiance of your moſt poſitive injunctions.

Remarks on the third Minute of General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis; dated 11th January 1775.

2. This paragraph ſeems to imply, that the late Adminiſtration had always flattered the Company with falſe hopes, and concealed from them the true ſituation of their affairs: a peruſal of the General Letters written in 1773 and 1774 would be ſufficient to evince the contrary.

General Clavering delivers in the following copy of the Addreſs of himſelf, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis, to the Court of Directors, ſent by the Bute, together with the Papers therein mentioned to be enclоſed.

Minute, N° 1, from General Clavering, Colonel Monſon, and Mr. Francis; dated Fort William, the 25th of February 1775;—received in London 18th September 1775.

1. The ſeparate Minutes which we have thought it neceſſary to draw up for the information of the Honourable Court of Directors, have never yet retarded or interfered with the proſecution and diſpatch of public buſineſs. The hours which might have been dedicated to eaſe and relaxation, have been employed in the ſevere and toilſome duty of explaining the nature of thoſe meaſures, which we not only had the ſtrongeſt reaſons to condemn, but to which we were obliged to act in immediate oppoſition.

This labour, however, is too heavy to be continued; nor have we any thing at preſent to add to the arguments with which we have endeavoured to ſupport and defend our conduct.

2. If the Rohilla war ſhould be approved of by our Superiors, or if they ſhould condemn us for withdrawing the brigade out of the Rohilla country, and bringing it nearer nearer to our own frontier, we ſhall ſubmit to authority, but we do not conceive it poſſible for us to alter our opinion. Without purſuing that or any other endleſs argument with the Governor General, we now think it ſufficient for the complete vindication of our conduct, to eſtabliſh the credit of ſuch of our aſſertions as the Governor General has been pleaſed to diſpute, by referring more particularly to the evidence on which they were founded, and which we preſume will be deemed ſatisfactory.

3. We mean alſo to convince the Governor, that in ſome material inſtances he has concluded haſtily on groundleſs ſuppoſitions. In ſhort, ſince we have not had the good fortune to ſucceed in our attempts to ſatisfy him of the impropriety of his conduct and opinions, by the mode of argument which we have hitherto made uſe of, we ſhall endeavour to obviate all farther difficulties on this head, by appealing to authorities which he cannot diſpute, or by ſetting ſome of his own declared opinions or poſitive aſſertions in a clear and direct oppoſition to each other.

4. The Governor makes frequent reference to that paſſage in our introductory Minute of the 30th November 1774, in which we expreſs our concern, "that the "juſtification of our conduct muſt of neceſſity carry with "it, and can only be ſupported by a ſtrong and deliberate "cenſure of the preceding Adminiſtration."

We, for ourſelves, do not ſee in what particular the ſuppoſed weakneſs or impropriety of this declaration can be underſtood to conſiſt. The adoption of a new ſyſtem, in oppoſition to one already eſtabliſhed, neceſſarily implies a cenſure of that from which we reſolve to depart.—To prove that the new ſyſtem is good, it ſeems indiſpenſably neceſſary to ſhew, that the one to which it is oppoſed was falſe or defective. The cenſure in that caſe muſt be ſtrong and deliberate. The accidental inſertion of the word only, ſeems to lead to a preſumption very injurious to our argument.—We believe, that the rectitude of our conduct has been ſupported by a train of poſitive arguments ſufficient to eſtabliſh it, independent of that ſtrong and deliberate cenſure which they neceſſarily fix on the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration. But we are not the judges in our own cauſe, and willingly ſubmit every part of the queſtion between the Governor General and ourſelves to an higher authority.

5. Before we proceed to thoſe obſervations, which we hope will eſtabliſh a poſitive defence of any former opinion delivered by us with reſpect to the Rohilla war, let us clear the ground.

6. The Governor General, without enquiring into facts, or without aſking us an obvious queſtion, which we ſhould immediately have anſwered, takes it for granted, that the contents of the diſpatches ſent to England by the Mercury packet had been communicated to us by the Court of Directors, and that we were thoroughly informed (as far as his Report of the 4th of October 1773, could inform us) of the nature and extent of his negociation with the Vizier at Benares. On this gratuitous ſuppoſition, he founds many a ſerious argument againſt the ſincerity of our profeſſed prejudices in his favour, and very juſtly concludes, that we could not be in earneſt, in declaring, that we came into this country impreſſed with the higheſt idea of the wiſdom and ability with which he had conducted the Company's affairs.—We admit the concluſion to be juſt and regular, but we deny the premiſes. The diſpatches by the Mercury were received but a few days before we left London, and were never communicated to us by the Court of Directors.

The following extract of a Letter we wrote to their Secretary, Mr. Michell, from Spithead, dated the 9th of April 1774, will, we hope, convince the Governor General, that we had at that time no reaſon to alter the too partial opinion which we had formed of his character and conduct; as we ſailed in three days after, it was impoſſible for us to receive an anſwer to that Letter.

"We think it very neceſſary to inform you, that "among the ſeveral Letters contained in the Company's "packet directed to us, and intended for our particular "uſe, we do not find copies of the laſt General Letters, "either from Fort William or Madras, or any Extracts "from them, except one Letter from the Revenue De"partment at Fort William, which relates ſolely to the "Bank. We are therefore entirely unacquainted with "the actual ſtate of the Company's affairs at Bengal, and "upon the Coaſt, where, nevertheleſs, as we underſtand "from private intelligence, ſome very important events "have lately taken place. Copies of the above Letters were "particularly deſired by us, and we were informed, that "we ſhould be favoured with them*. We now requeſt "that they may be forwarded immediately to the Com"pany's Agent at Portſmouth, who will either ſend them "off to us, or return them to you, in caſe we ſhould "have ſailed before he receives your packet."

7. Thus far, we preſume, the Governor's implied charge of inſincerity in our firſt declarations is completely anſwered. The Court of Directors are already ſufficiently informed at what time, and from what cauſes, we found ourſelves obliged to relinquiſh our earlieſt opinions in Mr. Haſtings's favour, and to adopt others diametrically oppoſite to them. We now beg leave to go a little farther than we have yet done in the explanation of our ſentiments on this ſubject.

8. If it had been poſſible for us to have ſeen the diſpatches by the Mercury, or if the ſubſequent proceedings of the late Adminiſtration, in regard to the Rohilla war, could have been known to us before we left England, we are very much inclined to think, that it would not only have ſhaken our opinion of Mr. Haſtings's character, but have deterred us from engaging with him in any ſhape in the Government of Bengal.

9. As for the Treaty of Benares, it is true we had heard that Corah and Allahabad were ceded to the Vizier, but we neither knew on what ſpecific conditions, nor any of the circumſtances that attended and might have juſtified ſuch a meaſure.

The word ſale, we apprehend, is the only one that can be properly applied to the terms agreed on with the Vizier, for putting him into poſſeſſion of the King's demeſne. Of itſelf it implies nothing diſhonourable to either party, unleſs we annex to it the idea of ſelling what is not our own, without the owner's conſent; in that caſe, the diſhonour, if any, is excluſively fixed upon the repreſentatives of the Company; the purchaſer has no ſhare in it.

10. Our remarks on ſome particular paſſages in the Governor General's laſt volume ſhall be as ſhort and diſtinct as poſſible, leſt they ſhould ſwell into the ſame alarming ſize.

Many of his objections are already anſwered in our preceding Minutes, which he had not an opportunity of ſeeing or conſidering when he wrote that of the 10th of January. We will not weary the Court of Directors with uſeleſs repetitions; if our unfavourable repreſentation of the preſent ſtate of Bengal has been exaggerated, the evidence of facts will ſoon come forward and convict us; in the meantime, we refer the Court of Directors to the anſwers given in by Meſſrs. Middleton, Dacres, and Vanſittart, to the queries propoſed by Colonel Monſon, concerning the internal ſtate of this Country. We preſume it could not be the object of theſe Gentlemen to condemn the meaſures of the late Adminiſtration, ſince they themſelves made part of it. Let their own repreſentation of facts be conſidered.

* Copies and Extracts were ſent by expreſs to Portſmouth the 11th of April 1774, but the Aſhburnham had ſailed a few hours before their arrival.—The 14th of April 1774, they were diſpatched after the Aſhburnham to Madeira, but being too late, were returned from thence unopened.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Mr. Haſtings's Minute of the 10th January 1775.

Par. 10. Brave and independent are epithets, not very conſiſtent with the deſcription given of the Rohillas in the 39th Paragraph.

Par. 10. The Rohillas are not a nation, but a tribe of freebooters, who conquered the country about ſixty years ago, and have ever ſince lived upon the fruits of it, &c. The Rohillas are Mahometans, the Natives are Hindoos.

Par. 11. The majority, in mentioning the deficiency in my Report on the Rohilla expedition, ſuppreſſed the particulars related by me, &c.

Par. 13. Let this Minute be compared with the ſhort and mutilated Extract, &c.

Par. 16. I am ſorry to ſee the names of Clavering and Monſon ſubſcribed to ſuch unworthy inſinuations, becauſe I do not believe, that even the heat of party contention can ſo far have warped their minds from the conſideration of that juſtice, which every man of honour will yield to the honour of others, as to make them really believe me capable of ſo baſe an artifice as they have imputed to me, without the ſlighteſt ground to ſupport it. I will not anſwer it.

Par. 16. I do not believe that even the heat of party contention, &c.

Par. 18. An appeal to the paſſions is an inſult to the underſtanding.

Remarks.

11. The deſcription referred to is, that they are weak, divided, and defenceleſs, and that they live in dread of a ſuperior neighbour.

Their independence was eſtabliſhed by their having treated for a courſe of years with the neighbouring Powers, particularly with the Vizier, and even with the Repreſentatives of the Company, as an independent State; as ſuch they have been hitherto acknowledged.

12. Admitting the facts, we ſay, that the Rohillas were lords of the country by right of conqueſt and long poſſeſſion; we add, that they governed it with lenity and moderation, as clearly appears by the flouriſhing condition in which our army found it. If a defect in their title, or a difference of religion, be of itſelf a ſufficient ground for invading ſuch a State, we deſire to know on what principles Mr. Haſtings will defend the right of the Britiſh empire to the actual ſovereignty of theſe provinces? As this queſtion evidently leads to others, which may not only affect his duty as a ſervant to the Company, but his allegiance as a ſubject, we deſire him to be very cautious what anſwer he makes to it.

13. The particulars referred to are contained in a ſhort Paragraph of Mr. Haſtings's Report of the 4th of October 1773 (copy of which was annexed to our firſt Minute, N° 1, of the 30th November 1774) and the Report itſelf was already before the Court of Directors. We apprehend that any paper annexed to a diſpatch makes part of that diſpatch, otherwiſe every document muſt be inſerted in the body of the Letter.

14. The ſame obſervation applies to the Reſolution of the late Select Committee of the 26th November 1773, of which we encloſed a complete copy.

15. It is with the utmoſt degree of aſtoniſhment we perceive, in the Governor General's obſervations on our Letter to the Court of Directors, intimations and ſuggeſtions injurious to our reputation and honour. We call upon him to manifeſt, in what inſtances we have deviated from the ſentiments therein delineated, and what ſhadow of right there is to ſuppoſe, that the names of Clavering and Monſon would be affixed to declarations inconſiſtent with their ſentiments and opinions. Such inſinuations may ſometimes have the effect intended on the preſent occaſion, but with men of honour will ever be treated with the diſregard they deſerve.

J. Clavering.
Geo. Monſon.

As I am not charged with having ſet my name to any thing which I did not really believe, I ſhall make no other objection to this paragraph, but that it ſeems to have a tendency to divide me from thoſe men whoſe public principles I adopt, whoſe public meaſures I avow, whoſe private characters I reſpect, and to whom I have the honour to be united, not only in the ſupport of public meaſures, but by the ſtrongeſt ties of perſonal regard and eſteem.

I will not accept of a compliment from the Governor General, or any man, that appears to be excluſive of General Clavering and Colonel Monſon.

P. Francis.

16. "We pretend not to look into the hearts of others, but we exerciſe the right allowed to all mankind, of judging of intentions by facts."—Vide Mr. Haſtings's Paragraph 18.

17. We cannot aſſent to the truth of this aſſertion, if it be meant as a general propoſition. In many caſes we are convinced, that the appeals which deſerve the moſt favourable attention of the underſtanding, are thoſe which find acceſs to the head through the medium of the heart. True policy, true wiſdom, does not indiſcriminately reject ſuch appeals. But ſuppoſing the propoſition to be true to its utmoſt extent, we at leaſt have a right to expect, that it ſhall be impartially applied.

Mr. Haſtings, in his Addreſs of the 3d of December, which regularly ſhould have contained nothing but a defence againſt a charge, takes care to remind the Court of Directors "of "his former ſervices, of his reliance on their juſtice, of the "conſciouſneſs of his own integrity, of his willingneſs to "devote

Remarks.

" devote the remainder of his life to their ſervice, of his de" termination to ſubmit without a murmur to their ſentence,
" nor ſhould the ſeverity of it make him loſe the ſenſe of " gratitude which he feels, and owes to the obligations already
" laid upon him, &c." Is this an appeal to the juſtice of his judges, or is it an inſult to their underſtanding?

18. The accounts we gave of the enormities practiſed by Sujah Dowla, during the conduct, and after the deciſion of the war, were founded on the authority of the Commanding Officer of the Britiſh forces, on which we ſtill implicitly rely; at that time certainly we had not the leaſt ſhadow of reaſon to diſtruſt it. The following private Letter from Colonel Champion to Mr. Haſtings, dated the 10th of May 1774, will, we apprehend, completely vindicate the truth of this part of our repreſentation. As it is now upon Record, we have an unqueſtionable right to appeal to it.

" Biſſoulee, 10th May 1774.

" Dear Sir,

" I have the pleaſure to ſend you a ſhort Addreſs for " the Board, requeſting permiſſion to repair to the Pre-" ſidency; and I beg you will not fail to preſent it, as " ſoon as credible accounts ſhall arrive of any Officers " being on the way to Bengal to take the command of " the army.

" Not only do I wiſh to get down as ſoon as poſſible, " to put my little affairs in the beſt order for my return " to Europe; but I muſt be candid enough to unboſom " myſelf to you freely, and confeſs, that the nature of the " ſervice, and the terms on which I have been employed " this campaign, have been inexpreſſibly diſagreeable.

" The authority given to the Vizier over your army " has totally abſorbed that degree of conſequence due " to my ſtation. My hands have been tied up from " giving protection or aſylum to the miſerable. I have " been obliged to give a deaf ear to the lamentable cries " of the widow and fatherleſs, and to ſhut my eyes " againſt a wanton diſplay of violence and oppreſſion, of " inhumanity and cruelty.

" The Company's intereſt conſtrained me in public " to ſtifle the workings of my feelings, but I muſt give " them vent in private.

" Though we had no active part in his baſe pro-" ceedings, yet it is well known that the ſucceſs of our " arms gave him the power of perpetrating theſe enor-" mities; and I much fear, that our being even ſilent " ſpectators of ſuch deeds will redound to the diſhonour " of our nation, and impreſs all Hindoſtan with the moſt " unfavourable opinion of our Government.

" As matters now are, I know of no remedy that " would ſo effectually re-eſtabliſh our character for " juſtice and clemency, as your taking the family of " Hafez under the wings of your mercy and protection, " and influencing the Nabob to make proviſion for them " in ſome degree ſuitable to their birth.

" It would affect your ſenſibility too much were I to " deſcend to particulars; let it ſuffice, that the Nabob " Mahubbit Cawn, the eldeſt ſon, and the reſt of the " family of Hafez, who are under cloſe confinement " (the Begums and other women included) have been " driven to the neceſſity of making private ſupplications " for a little rice and water.

" I wiſh, my friend, to leave ſcenes which none but " the mercileſs Sujah can bear without heart-bleeding " pain. Relieve me therefore as ſoon as poſſible, and " oblige,

" Dear Sir, &c.

(Signed) " A. Champion."

19. The evidence contained in this Letter is more, in our opinion, than ſufficient to juſtify every thing we have ſaid or ſuggeſted, relative to the conduct of the war under the arbitrary command of the late Vizier. The Records to which we now appeal, carry the proofs of Sujah Dowla's inhuman treatment of his priſoners farther than the moſt prejudiced imagination could have conceived poſſible, or the moſt malignant ſpirit of calumny would have ventured to ſuggeſt.

20. The Letter from Sujah Dowla ſent home by the laſt ſhip, and which Colonel Champion has given the Board ſome reaſon to think was fabricated or adviſed by Colonel Macleane, has produced a reply from Colonel Champion, which we think deſerves the higheſt attention, not only of the Court of Directors, but of Parliament and the Nation. Such a detail of enormities has never yet, we believe, made part of the hiſtory of any nation. We ſubmit it to the Court of Directors, whether it be not abſolutely neceſſary, for the vindication of the Company, for clearing the honour of the Britiſh name, and for fixing the opprobrium of theſe tranſactions upon the perſons who alone ſhall appear to be guilty, that every Letter and other Document ſent from hence relative to the Rohilla war ſhould be immediately printed and publiſhed.

For the preſent, however, we beg leave to ſupport our firſt ideas of the perſonal baſeneſs and brutality of the late Vizier, by the encloſed copies of Seven Papers, annexed to Colonel Champion's reply.

They come before us, ſupported by every ſpecies of concurring evidence of which the ſubject is capable.

If they ſhould require any further explanation, Colonel Champion will be in England, and may be called upon to give it.

21. Let us not be underſtood to mean that Mr. Haſtings ought to be implicated in the perſonal charges fixed upon Sujah Dowla.

In ſtrict juſtice, perhaps, the author or promoter of an unjuſt meaſure may be deemed anſwerable for all the fatal conſequences that attend it. We are willing to believe, that many of theſe conſequences were not foreſeen or intended by Mr. Haſtings.

Mr. Haſtings's Minute,

Par. 18. In the year 1764, a detachment of our troops was employed to burn and ravage Sujah Dowla's country. It fell to the lot of Major Champion to execute this commiſſion, and how well he diſcharged it, and how little his feelings were at that time affected, &c.

Remarks.

22. To prove an inconſiſtency between Colonel Champion's preſent ſentiments and his own practice above ten years ago, Mr. Haſtings produces an Extract of a Letter from Colonel Champion to the late Mr. Vanſittart, dated 20th June 1764.

Mr. Haſtings's Minute.

Remarks.

We leave it to our Superiors to determine upon the validity of this evidence, with reſpect to the concluſion propoſed to be drawn from it, and upon the fairneſs and equity of introducing it at this period.

What we ſay for ourſelves is, that the Governor manifeſtly contradicts himſelf in the very paragraph in which he charges Colonel Champion with inconſiſtency.

Speaking of the Vizier ſending out detachments to plunder, he ſays, "this I pronounce to be both barbarous and im-"politic;" yet when he mentions the ſame ſcene of barbarity and wanton enormities, ſuppoſed to have been exerciſed by Major Champion in the year 1764, he ſays, "I do not mean "to reproach him with having done the duty aſſigned him."

Our queſtion is, could it be Colonel Champion's duty to do what was both barbarous and impolitic? and if it was, by whom was it aſſigned to him?

Par. 20. The Governor diſputes the truth of the reports of brutal outrages offered to the wives and daughters of the Rohillas, though of the higheſt rank.

23. We continue to believe the truth of the charge upon the beſt evidence that the nature of it will admit of.

1ſt. Public notoriety and opinion.

2d. The reports made to Colonel Champion, on which the Colonel candidly obſerves, that he had no grounds ſufficient to prove "the accuſation."

3d. The perſonal character of the Vizier; and laſtly, the undiſputed evidence of Colonel Leſlie, that he had repeatedly entered the women's apartments, which no Muſſulman would do without a baſe and brutal intention, nor could do without leaving ſhame and diſhonour behind him.

As for the reſt, it appears, by Colonel Leſlie's evidence, that he even deſcended to rob the women of their trinkets. But as on this general head we have already referred to evidence of a more direct and comprehenſive nature, it only remains for us to obſerve, that ſuppoſing the Vizier to have conducted the war upon the moſt moderate and honourable principles, or ſuppoſing his quarrel with the Rohillas to have been ever ſo well founded, it would have been no motive or juſtification of our engaging in it with him.

Par. 19. The Governor quotes a Letter from Colonel Champion of the 12th of June 1774.

24. As every word of this quotation tends to confirm, in the ſtrongeſt manner, our repreſentation of the Vizier's inhuman treatment of his priſoners, we deſire that it may be particularly conſidered.

Colonel Champion, ſays, that "the inhumanity and diſ-"honour with which the late proprietors of the Country and "their families had been treated was known over all thoſe "parts. That their Letters to him would convey but a faint "idea of the treatment thoſe unhappy people had met "with. That he could not help compaſſionating ſuch un-"paralleled miſery."

"That his requeſts to the Vizier to ſhew lenity, were fre-"quent, but fruitleſs; and though profeſſedly taken in good "part by the Vizier, yet only ſerved to procure them more "rigorous treatment."

On the repreſentations in this Letter, we content ourſelves with remarking, that excluſive of the probability of their being true, and of the groſs improbability of their being invented by Colonel Champion, we have a right to appeal to his authority, as a competent witneſs of the facts he vouches for, until his credit ſhall be completely invalidated; by ſome ſatisfactory and poſitive proof of his having deliberately intended to traduce the Vizier, and deceive his Superiors, and that he adopted this diſhonourable deſign ſo long ago as May laſt.

Par. 21. "I never aſſerted that my chief reaſon "for withholding the Correſpondence was, that "they related to a difference between the Vizier "and Colonel Champion."

25. We well recollect that this was one of the reaſons aſſigned by the Governor, though it might not have been the chief one.

It now appears that ſuch a difference did exiſt, and that it aroſe from circumſtances which he might naturally wiſh ſhould continue to be concealed from us.

As the truth of our aſſertion however turns upon perſonal teſtimony, we ſhall not inſiſt on it.

Par. 26. It is a miſrepreſentation to ſay, "that "the Vizier dared to tell the Preſidency, that he is "the Maſter of the Company's army." He ſays, "but I am the Maſter in theſe affairs, and the power "of retaining or diſmiſſing the Engliſh army is mine."

26. We do not pretend to underſtand the Perſian idiom. The words we quoted are plain Engliſh.

That Suja Dowla conſidered himſelf as, in effect, the Maſter of the Company's army, appears plainly from the ſtyle he aſſumed in his diſcourſes with Colonel Champion; for

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Mr. Haſtings's Minute.

Par. 26. "I look in vain for the juſtification of their conduct in recalling the brigade at the criſis of the war."

Par. 41. I do reckon the "probable acquiſition "of wealth among my reaſons for taking up arms "againſt my neighbours."

Par. 44. "The rupees of the currency of Oude "have a fixed ſtandard."

Par. 44. "I believe, upon examination of the "Paymaſter's accounts, that the rupees received "from the Vizier, on account of the monthly ſub- "ſidy, have yielded one hundred and eleven current "rupees per cent."

Remarks.

which we beg leave to refer to the Colonel's Narrative, and to the Documents annexed to it.

27. The facts relative to the negociation at Benares, as far as they appear, are laid before the Court of Directors. It is for them to judge and conclude from the facts to the motives. We ſay that Mr. Haſtings conferred conſtantly with the Vizier, without the preſence of a third perſon, though the Commander in Chief and two of the Council were upon the ſpot. We ſay, that the Treaty contained nothing but a defenſive alliance; but that, in two months, it appeared, that Mr. Haſtings had entered into offenſive engagements with the Vizier. Theſe are the tranſactions which we (at firſt) called dark and myſterious. We are now ready to retract thoſe epithets, and to declare our opinion, that they are not ſo dark and myſterious as we thought them.

28. The orders for recalling the brigade were not diſpatched till the 4th of November. The Treaty with the laſt of the Rohilla Chiefs was concluded on the 6th * of October, but the fate of the war had been decided many months before.

On other occaſions we are charged with a wanton or malignant cenſure of a meaſure already paſt and determined, in the ſole view of throwing a uſeleſs reflection on the laſt Adminiſtration.

29. The charge being thus deliberately admitted, and the doctrine thus triumphantly avowed, we ſhould go beyond the limits of our office, if we took upon us to pronounce any ſentence or farther opinion upon it.

30. If they have, it muſt be known. We have called upon the proper Officers of the Mint to inform us what is the ſtandard and intrinſic value of the ſicca rupee of the currency of Oude; for this is the coin in which, by the Treaty of Benares, the payments were to be made.

By their Report, contained in the annexed Paper, it appears, that the Governor is miſtaken in aſſerting that the "above rupees have a fixed ſtandard. Mr. Paxton, the "Aſſay Maſter, ſays, that on examining the aſſay book for "ſeveral years back, he does not find that any rupees, under "the deſcription of Oude ſiccas, have been brought to the "Mint." That,

"The Viziery rupees ſeem to have no fixed ſtandard, but "are found to vary in reſpect to fineneſs from dwts. 8,511. to "37,022 per cent. worſe than Calcutta ſiccas."

Mr. Lloyd, the Mint Maſter ſays, that "the ſicca rupees "of the province of Oude have no fixed ſtandard, all vary- "ing from each other in their intrinſic value."

Mr. Touchet, the late Mint Maſter, ſays, "that there is "ſuch a variety of Viziery rupees, that no kind of ſtandard "can be aſcertained. Thoſe laſt received from Sujah Dowla "turned out in the Mint in nett produce from 18 to 40 per "cent. below the Calcutta ſiccas; and that the Benares rupee "produces upon a medium 7 per cent. leſs than the Calcutta "ſicca."

If, however, it ſhould be found that the ſums received from Sujah Dowla are equal upon the whole, or ſuperior in value to the ſame number of current rupees (which, notwithſtanding the firſt payments were made in a better ſpecie, we very much doubt) ſtill it does not follow that the Company will have received the full value of what they were entitled to by Treaty.

31. Suppoſing 100 rupees of Oude to be worth 111 current rupees, it follows, that twenty-one lacks of thoſe rupees ſhould be worth 23,31,000 current. The account we gave of their produce in ſiccas was received from the Mint Maſter, viz. 18,29,184, or current rupees 21,21,853. 7. If current rupees were meant by the Treaty, the Vizier has then paid 21,853. 7. current rupees too much. If ſonauts, or a coin equal in value to them, were meant by the Treaty, he has then paid 2,09,146. 9. current rupees too little. If ſiccas were meant, the deficiency, on this payment of twenty-one lacks (which we believe will be found to be the beſt he has ever made) will then increaſe to 3,14,146. 9. current rupees.

32. It is not at preſent neceſſary to go farther into this part of the ſubject of our reſpective Minutes.

Remarks.

When once it is determined in what ſpecific coin the payments from the Vizier are to be completed, and when the ſeveral payments made on that account are appreciated at the Mint, we preſume there can be but one opinion at the Board, viz. "that the deficiency, whatever it is, ſhall be made good
" by the State of Oude, and juſtice done to the Company."
We ſhall only add, that as far as our preſent information goes, the monthly ſubſidy to the brigade has not been paid up beyond September laſt.

33. It is well known that the Paymaſter of the ſecond brigade has not adjuſted his accounts, nor ſent up any diſtribution for ſeveral months paſt to the Paymaſter General here. Till this be done, and till all the extraordinary expences attending the above ſervice are liquidated, no certain judgment can poſſibly be formed, whether the Company are upon the whole loſers, or gainers, by the ſubſidy ſtipulated for the foreign ſervice of their troops.

34. For whatever purpoſe it was raiſed, it ſtill ſerved in the field at the Company's expence, ſince no proviſion was made for it in the eſtimate of the monthly ſubſidy.

35. We meant the recruiting of the European battalion, not the Sepoys.

36. The chaſm taken notice of by us was in the Correſpondence of Mr. Middleton, not of Colonel Champion.

37. The Civil Servants of the Company, who, in our opinion, have involved the Company in offenſive wars, are the few who ſat in Council. The planning and execution of ſuch meaſures muſt be confined to thoſe perſons only who were honoured with the confidence of the Company, and veſted with their authority.

38. If the Governor's object was to give the Vizier the whole country of the Rohillas as far as the mountains, why did he propoſe that Nudjiff Khân, or the King, ſhould have a ſhare of the conqueſt?

39. We very earneſtly deſire that the Court of Directors may think it adviſable to publiſh the examinations of theſe Officers referred to by the Governor.

40. We have already proved that theſe meaſures were unknown to us when we left England. We ſtill adhere to the terms in which we have deſcribed them. The King's demeſne was ſold for a ſpecific ſum, and our troops, by the very plan of the agreement, acted as mercenaries in Sujah Dowla's ſervice. We refer to Colonel Champion's Narrative for the manner in which the Britiſh Commander in Chief, and the troops who acted under him, were treated by the Prince from whom they received their ſtipend.

41. Waving at preſent our objections to the ſubſidy's not being equal to the actual expence, we inſiſt upon another, which we have already taken notice of. The circulation created by the preſence of a brigade, with that of the numerous followers who attend it, gives life to induſtry wherever the brigade is ſtationed, furniſhes a multitude of perſons with means of ſubſiſtence, and of courſe is beneficial to the revenue. It is in the nature of things, that the removal of a brigade out of the Company's territories muſt, in every inſtance, produce the oppoſite effect. It has already been pleaded by the farmers as a reaſon for their inability to pay their rents.

42. We deſire that no advantage may be taken of a haſty inconſiderate expreſſion, eſpecially after ſo ſolemn a retraction. Without regarding words, or wiſhing to bind the Governor to the ſtrict meaning of the terms he makes uſe of, we affirm, that whether the principle be avowed or not, the practice correſponds with it; and that the whole tendency of Mr. Haſtings's argument in defence of this part of his conduct, is to prove that it is highly uſeful to the Company to keep their troops in the continued practice of war.

Letter from the Vizier Sujah ul Dowla to Governor Haſtings;—received the 28th November 1774.

I have already written you, that on the day of my arrival at Peelebut, one of my Hircarrahs brought me intelligence, that the Engliſh troops had entered the city, and were committing outrages and violence; I therefore ſent word by Sheek Shuffi Ullah to check them; in anſwer to which Colonel Champion returned me a meſſage, that he would ſtation the Engliſh ſoldiers at the gate of the city. I again ſent him word, that his doing ſo would be improper, and deſired he would put a ſtop to it. The Colonel afterwards came to me himſelf, and told me that the

the Engliſh Gentlemen ſaid there were four crore of rupees in the city, of which the troops would come in for a part; that they were very earneſt upon this point, and that he would ſend three Gentlemen of confidence and truſt to take an account of the effects which were in the city. I obſerved to him that this was a new affair, and quite different from the agreement mutually concluded between us. The Colonel then replied, that if he did not take this ſtep, there would be a mutiny among the troops. Seeing therefore that he was averſe to it, and not at liberty to follow his own inclinations, I told him that I would conſider the matter farther the next day, and do what was proper. After this the Colonel wrote me, that it was neceſſary people ſhould be immediately ſent into the city. As I perceived that he was greatly diſturbed, I went to him at twelve o'clock, in the extreme heat of the day, and aſked him what Gentlemen he propoſed ſending into Peelebut? Upon which he called Mr. Murray, Colonel Leſlie, and Major Hannay before me, and pointing to them, ſaid, "theſe three "Gentlemen ſhall go to take the account." I told him that I had made no ſuch agreement with Mr. Haſtings, nor could there be more than 4 or 5000 rupees in Peelebut; that provided there were, the Gentlemen had no buſineſs with it, and that nothing of the like had happened heretofore: Mr. Murray then anſwered, and told me, that at the time of diſturbances with the Marattas there was no country in the caſe, which was the reaſon no ſuch point had been inſiſted upon; and that if the Engliſh were not now allowed to go into Peelebut, the Sepoys would plunder and lay waſte the whole country. Colonel Champion then interrupted him, and told him, that it was improper his ſaying any thing on that ſubject. I afterwards obſerved, that although I had made no agreement on this ſubject with Mr. Haſtings, it did not ſignify, and that they might take all the money which they ſaid was in Peelebut in lieu of the amount I had ſtipulated to pay Mr. Haſtings on account of the Company, giving me an acquittance for the latter. They made no reply to this propoſal, but inſiſted upon what they before urged; upon this I obſerved, that if the Engliſh were this time allowed to go into Peelebut, it would be a precedent for their inſiſting to the ſame when they came to other cities and places: to this it was anſwered, that they only meant the preſent city, and that they would make no ſuch demands when they came to other places. I then told Major Hannay, that it did not ſignify, that in the preſent inſtance I ſhould be ſilent, but that in future if they made the ſame requiſitions, I would quit the country, and retreat into my own Subah. Major Hannay then explained what I ſaid to Colonel Leſlie, who gave me no anſwer himſelf, but turned to Colonel Champion, and calling him by his rank ſaid, "well, well." I underſtand nothing of the Engliſh language myſelf, but theſe words which I have mentioned are very common, and I underſtand the meaning of them very well. I told the Gentlemen, that by their ſending people into the city, nothing would be got but a bad name; however, to ſatisfy them, I conſented to their deſire: they experienced the truth of what I told them, for having at laſt ſent them, they returned diſappointed. My friend, the caſe is this; there was not ſo much as 4 or 5000 rupees in Peelebut; ſuppoſing there had been more, what buſineſs had the Gentlemen with it? When we concerted this expedition together, no ſuch condition was provided for: the ſum which I ſtipulated with you I will pay without evaſion; but what can be the meaning of theſe ſteps taken by the Gentlemen? They aſtoniſh me! Conferences between me and the Engliſh Gentlemen were never before conducted in ſuch a manner, that other Gentlemen were allowed to anſwer the queſtions which I aſked, whilſt the principal withdrew himſelf on one ſide. I have long been acquainted with the principal Engliſh Gentlemen, ſuch as Lord Clive, and others, as well as yourſelf, but I never ſaw it cuſtomary that the principal Chief and Commander of the whole ſhould ſit ſtill, and let every one elſe talk as each thought fit. It is now a ſpace of three years that I have been in alliance with the Engliſh, and hitherto it has gained daily ſtrength. It is always my wiſh, that there may be never room for a ſingle expreſſion which (God forbid!) can poſſibly create the difference of a hair's breadth in our friendſhip: as to my part, I pay the moſt implicit regard and attention to it; you, Gentlemen, too, have hitherto contributed every duty towards ſtrengthening and perpetuating it; but I confeſs the preſent conferences have alarmed me. You well know what a burthen of expences I have for theſe three years been obliged to ſuſtain; I am notwithſtanding night and day employed in deviſing means for the payment of the money I ſtipulated with you: but if the Gentlemen are to talk to me in this manner, they no doubt will make the ſame requiſitions of me at every other place, and it will be impoſſible for me to comply therewith. I ſubmit to your own impartiality whether what I have written be right or wrong. In all my negociations and conferences with the Engliſh, it was never before uſual to introduce pretenſions, and inſiſt upon matters which were neither ſtipulated in the Treaty, nor before we had any idea of; nor was it ever uſual for the Commander in Chief to withdraw himſelf apart, and let others impoſe ſuch conditions, and make what requeſts they pleaſed. Conſider well upon this matter, and reprimand the Gentlemen, that they may not commit ſuch practices again. It is the cuſtom in no country for the principal himſelf to remain ſilent, and let others make themſelves principals; amongſt the Engliſh eſpecially this never happened.

Afterwards, when I arrived at Biſſoulee, and Fyzoolla Khan and the other Rohilla Chiefs fled towards Nejeebabad, and eſtabliſhed themſelves in that part, ambaſſadors came on the part of Fyzoolla Khan to Colonel Champion, to confer with him concerning an accommodation, which the Colonel propoſed to me. As I was determined to extirpate the Rohillas, I would not liſten to any propoſals of peace, and frankly told Colonel Champion that he muſt put an end to theſe conferences, and ſend away the ambaſſadors of Fyzoolla: notwithſtanding which they remained a long time afterwards with the Colonel; at laſt he diſmiſſed them, but ſtill maintained a correſpondence with Fyzoolla Khan, and received many Letters from him. Conſider, my friend, that it was my abſolute determination to extirpate the Rohillas, and that I requeſted the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh troops for that purpoſe; was it not therefore highly improper in the Colonel to enter into ſuch a correſpondence without my permiſſion? If he had ever conſulted me on the occaſion, it would not have ſignified; but when I gave him a clear anſwer, and abſolutely refuſed my conſent to the propoſals for an accommodation, was it proper for him to continue the negociations? At laſt, perceiving that Fyzoolla Khan, encouraged by his correſpondence with the Engliſh, aſſembled his forces and daily became more formidable, I determined, though it was in the height of the rains, immediately to bring him to puniſhment. I informed Colonel Champion of my intentions, and ſent a meſſage to him to march towards Fyzoolla Khan for the execution of them: Colonel Champion excuſed himſelf by ſaying, that he had no orders from the Gentlemen of Calcutta to proceed to the place of Fyzoolla Khan's encampment, which was beyond the boundaries of Rohilcund, and that therefore he would not march; I anſwered, you certainly have not a map of this country, for it is mentioned in the Treaty between us, that the Engliſh forces ſhall march into every part of the Rohilla country, from my borders to the foot of the mountains, and to the river Ganges; the place where Fyzoolla Khan is now encamped is within theſe limits; the Gentlemen of Calcutta will not therefore be diſpleaſed at the march of the army; they are even deſirous that the war ſhould be at any rate brought to a concluſion, and the money ſtipulated to the Company quickly diſcharged: though I am in a bad ſtate of health, I will undergo the fatigue of marching. The Colonel marched with the greateſt unwillingneſs: in the meantime conferences for an accommodation were ſet on foot with the Colonel, and Fyzoolla Khan was encouraged by this circumſtance to make a ſtand. When we afterwards arrived at Pattergur, and Fyzoolla Khan was at the diſtance of fifteen coſs from us at the foot of the mountains, I determined to march forward and attack him; the Colonel again delayed, and pretended that he had no orders to proceed further: in anſwer to which I explained clearly to him, that he had orders to march to any part of the Rohilla country, from my borders to the ſkirts of the mountains and to the river Ganges; that it was neceſſary to conclude this buſineſs immediately, for which purpoſe it was expedient to march forwards. At laſt, after many conferences, he marched from thence alſo, and encamped within five or ſix coſs of the hills, and continued his conferences for an accommodation with Fyzoolla Khan, and propoſed it alſo to me. Although I was averſe from the firſt to making a peace, and had deſired the aſſiſtance of the Engliſh troops to extirpate the Rohillas; yet when I perceived that the Colonel interpoſed, and had for ſeveral months maintained a correſpondence with Fyzoolla Khan, and that he was deſirous of peace, being remedileſs, I told him it did not ſignify, that I would give Fyzoolla Khan a country yielding a revenue of nine or ten lacks of rupees, and that I would take from him half his wealth. The Colonel replied, Fyzoolla Khan has deſired that an Engliſh Gentleman may be ſent to confer about the terms of an accommodation. I anſwered, it is well; we will ſend a Gentleman under this pretence to the camp of Fyzoolla Khan, that he may obſerve the ſituation of their encampment and their retreat, and give us information; for this purpoſe let us ſend Mr. Brooke and Mr.*———. Collicherrun came to me, and repreſented, that it ſhould be left to the pleaſure of the Colonel whom to ſend on this expedition. At laſt the Colonel ſent Mr. Murray and Mr. Brooke, who departed without waiting on me to take their leave. After two or three days theſe Gentlemen returned unprofitably, without having ſettled any thing. For four or five days after this the conferences were broke off; after which Omar Cawn, and two other Sirdars, came from Fyzoolla Khan to me with propoſals of peace: I aſked them, why they had taken ſuch meaſures as to oblige me to march againſt them in the rainy ſeaſon? they replied, we remained peaceably at the extremity of the country without any force, but when a correſpondence was ſet on foot by means of the Engliſh Chiefs, they wrote to Fyzoolla Khan to take ſome ſtep, that might make it appear that he was in a ſituation to oppoſe the army of the Vizier, by which means his affairs would be ſettled. Encouraged by the advice of the Engliſh Chiefs, Fyzoolla Khan aſſembled this number of troops, and ſent them to Nejeebabad; otherwiſe how could he have taken ſuch a ſtep? My friend, Omar Cawn did not particularize any Gentleman to me, but informed me of the above particulars: be pleaſed to reflect on this. In ſhort I returned this anſwer to Omar Cawn, &c. that I was at firſt averſe to an accommodation, but ſince they had entered into conferences by means of the Engliſh Chiefs, whatever I had mentioned to the Colonel I would perform. The Vackeels took their leave, and returned; after which our joint forces marched near the encampment of Fyzoolla Khan, and prepared to attack it; but there was ſtill a private intelligence between the Colonel and Fyzoolla Khan, encouraged by which Fyzoolla Khan rode out of his own encampment and came to the Colonel. The day that Fyzoolla Khan came to the Colonel, the Engliſh troops were ready to engage in a quarrel with mine, and took ſeveral improper ſteps; but it paſſed over happily. Afterwards Collicherrun came and informed me, that Fyzoolla Khan was arrived, and would not agree to accept of nine or ten lacks of country; that he was now with the Engliſh Chiefs, and that it was neceſſary to pay regard to this circumſtance. I conſidered the reſpect to the Engliſh name as ſuperior to all other conſiderations, and replied, that although I was averſe to an accommodation, nevertheleſs, as Fyzoolla Khan had ſurrendered himſelf to the General, it did not ſignify; I would give him a country yielding a revenue of twelve lacks of rupees. After which Collicherrun having reported theſe particulars to the Colonel, returned with an anſwer, that Fyzoolla Khan would not agree to theſe conditions; and if I was not deſirous of an accommodation, to write ſo to the Colonel, that he might diſmiſs Fyzoolla Khan, and put a ſtop to the conferences. I wrote to the Colonel, that if Fyzoolla Khan would not agree to theſe offers to ſend him away; I alſo ſent Mahomed Elich Cawn to explain theſe particulars more fully to the Colonel; who went and executed my orders. The Colonel, in anſwer to this, made uſe of ſome diſagreeable expreſſions, and ſaid, the Nabob Vizier has broke his word in the anſwer he has ſent me, has he no reſpect for the Engliſh name? Fyzoolla Khan is come under the Engliſh protection, will he not ſettle his affairs? briefly, he made uſe of a number of ſuch kind of expreſſions. At laſt, as I ſaw that I ſhould diſpleaſe the Colonel by inſiſting on the former conditions, I was compelled to give 14,75,000 rupees of country, and ſaid, let Fyzoolla Khan take this much country, and give me 20 lacks of rupees in ſpecie in lieu of half his wealth; becauſe, if I am to take half of his property, how am I to diſcover what he is poſſeſſed of, and where it is kept? it can therefore never be ſettled in this manner. Theſe conferences were at firſt maintained, and afterwards new propoſitions were introduced, that this affair had been already ſettled by the Engliſh Chiefs in this manner; that Fyzoolla Khan ſhall give up half his property; that he had one lack and ſome thouſand gold mohurs, and one lack of rupees, of which I ſhould take the half: I replied, when I agreed to take one-half of Fyzoolla Khan's property, it was on condition that I was to give him a country yielding a revenue of nine or ten lacks of rupees, and that he ſhould not retain more than five or 600 men in his ſervice; now, that I am to give him a revenue of 14,75,000 rupees, and conſent to his entertaining 5,000 men in his ſervice, I will have twenty lacks. Briefly, after a great deal of trouble and argument, this affair was thus ſettled, that Fyzoolla Khan ſhould give me fifteen lacks of rupees, and take a country amounting to 14,75,000 rupees. My friend, conſider well that I firſt propoſed to give Fyzoolla Khan a country amounting to nine or ten lacks of rupees, and on theſe offers Fyzoolla Khan came to the General; if he did not conſent to theſe terms why did he come? After that Fyzoolla Khan came to the General, he increaſed his demands, and they obliged me to give him, 14,75,000 rupees: beſides which, you will conſider, that when theſe conferences were firſt ſet on foot, the Colonel obſerved to me, that Fyzoolla Khan had one lack and ſome thouſand gold mohurs and one lack of rupees, amounting to fifteen or ſixteen lacks, of which I ſhould take the half; but afterwards, when the affair was ſettled, Fyzoolla Khan gave me fifteen lacks of rupees: conſider then, if Fyzoolla Khan was only poſſeſſed of thus much, would he have given me all his property? from this circumſtance you will clearly perceive how the caſe is. My friend, whilſt I refuſed to conſent to conferences for an accommodation, it was propoſed that I ſhould give a country of eight or nine lacks of rupees to Fyzoolla Khan, and take all his money; after that I was obliged out of reſpect to the Engliſh to conſent to a peace. Then the following propoſitions were made to me; that I ſhould take twenty lacks of rupees from Fyzoolla Khan, and give him the whole of the Rohilla country. I anſwered, I am much indebted to the Company, and I have expended many lacks for the ſupport of my army; if I give up all the Rohilla country for the ſum of twenty lacks, what advantage ſhall I gain, and how ſhall I fulfil my engagements? Before I marched from Biſſoulee, Mr. Roberts came to me from the Colonel, and informed me that conferences for an accommodation with Fyzoolla Khan were on foot, and that it was adviſable I ſhould agree to them.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

them. My friend, this is called giving advice in Indoſtan, when a perſon ſays, I think this is for the beſt, and you muſt do ſo. When the Engliſh Chiefs were continually ſending to me theſe meſſages, how could I refuſe to ſatisfy them? briefly, I was at firſt averſe to an accommodation, and ſhould never have conſented to it but for the ſatisfaction of the General. In like manner the ſeveral Letters which the General cauſed me to write at the concluſion of this affair, I gave out of reſpect to him. After the concluſion of this buſineſs, when I marched towards my Subah, and determined to ſend the Engliſh brigade to Ramgaut, I told the General to ſend two battalions with me; he replied, that the battalions could not be ſeparated from the brigade. What can I write on this ſubject? the caſe is, that I pay the moſt implicit regard and attention to the friendſhip of the Engliſh, and I am always apprehenſive leſt ſuch meaſures ſhould be purſued as might be the cauſe of any difference in our friendſhip; for which reaſon I overlook every ſtep that is taken, whether it is proper or otherwiſe, and on all occaſions endeavour to give ſatisfaction to the Engliſh Chiefs. Conſider well, my friend, the conferences at Peelebut, and the method of ſettling the affair of Fyzoolla Khan. How ſhall I inform you of all the other inſtances of this kind.

During the war with Fyzoolla Khan, an Engliſh Gentleman plundered a Chief in my army of a pallankeen, four looking-glaſſes, and other goods: when I ſent word of this, it was anſwered, that no one in the Engliſh army had taken them. Some days afterwards it happened that the bamboo of the ſaid pallankeen was brought before all the Gentlemen to ſell, which my Sirdar ſeeing, took it forcibly away, and having learnt the name of the Gentleman who had taken the pallankeen, informed me of it: I ſent the bamboo to the General with this meſſage, that it was now proved that it had been taken by ſome one in his army, and that it was neceſſary that the reſt of the things which had been plundered ſhould be returned, the perſon puniſhed, and care taken to prevent any thing of the kind happening in future. But the goods were not returned, nor any puniſhment inflicted on the offender. Beſides which, wherever the Engliſh army encamped, they committed ſuch violences and outrages on all the villages around them, as to render them quite deſolate; they went under the pretence of getting wood, cots, and Cudjeree pots, and when they got into the villages, plundered whatever they could lay their hands on. My friend, theſe things were the wealth of theſe poor people, which they not only took, but alſo all the grain, cloth, and every thing elſe they found in their houſes, by which means the whole country was deſolated. The Engliſh army encamped near a large and populous town named Cuſtab, into which they went, and deſtroyed the ſhops of the traders, and plundered and laid waſte the city; how then could the villagers remain in ſafety? they paid no regard to my repeated remonſtrances on this head. It is known that they had permiſſion to take wood, cots, and Cudjeree pots. Whilſt this is the caſe, and the troops are ſatisfied that they ſhall not be puniſhed for any outrages they are guilty of, they will undoubtedly laſt waſte all the villages they come near. Briefly, the particulars of this kind are ſo numerous that I cannot write them to you; I will inform you of ſome few particulars out of thoſe which have happened. The Engliſh troops are continually quarrelling and diſputing with my people, ſometimes on the moſt trifling occaſions, and frequently without any at all, and putting them under a guard; ſometimes, after a confinement of one or two pars, and at others immediately, they ſend them before me. My friend, the caſe is, that all the infantry in my ſervice know the cuſtom of the army, that if any one commits a fault he will be impriſoned for it, and think nothing of being put under a guard; but there are other Hindoſtannies, and the Nejeeb battalions, and others in my ſervice, who conſider it as the higheſt diſgrace to be put under a guard; and if any one attempts it, they will defend themſelves againſt it, and rather loſe their lives than ſubmit to ſuch a diſhonour. I was apprehenſive leſt the Engliſh Gentlemen ſhould attempt to ſeize and impriſon ſome Sirdar who had five or 10,000 men in his ſervice; in this caſe there is no doubt but the Sirdar and all his people would repulſe with all their force thoſe who attempted it; I alſo know, that was this the caſe I ſhould puniſh ſuch Sirdar with death; but he would be in no fear of me when he expoſed his life in a quarrel with the Engliſh: in this caſe it would be neceſſary for me to aſſiſt the Engliſh army; by this means a civil war would ariſe in our joint army, and a great number of people loſe their lives: it would be equally bad for me which ever ſide had the advantage. I was continually ſubject to theſe apprehenſions, and made it my ſtudy to prevent any difference ariſing between the two armies. Although I am convinced that you are, by the bleſſing of God, endowed with wiſdom and underſtanding, and will pay no attention to the falſe repreſentations of any one, yet I cannot help being uneaſy on this account. Some people formerly wrote you many circumſtances to my diſcredit; I did not return this by accuſing them to you. Some time ago you received Letters from ſome Gentlemen concerning the affair of the family of Hafiz Rhamut Cawn and Eunait Cawn. The Engliſh Gentlemen firſt begun this method; I therefore have written all the above particulars for your information. The affair of Hafiz Rhamut Cawn's family is as follows: the Colonel ſent a meſſage to me, that the family of Hafiz Rhamut were dying with hunger; that a ſtorm had one day thrown down the purdas of the tent of Hafiz Rhamut Cawn's family, and left the men and women expoſed: I went to viſit the Colonel, and returned an anſwer to his meſſage, that I ſent proviſions from my own Sircar daily for their ſupport; and that with reſpect to the purdas which were thrown down by the violence of the wind, I could not help it, that I had no authority over the winds to ſtill them; and that if I had not ſupplied them with proviſions, what means had they taken to preſerve their exiſtence? My friend, the family of Hafiz Rhamut Cawn is well ſupplied with proviſions, and 3,000 rupees per month is appointed for this purpoſe. I have not power with God to prevent the violence of the wind. Conſider well theſe particulars. Let priſoners be ever ſo well treated and ſupplied with neceſſaries, ſtill confinement is uncomfortable. Whoever has loſt a father and brother in war, has fallen from the dignity of a throne and become a priſoner, will undoubtedly ſuffer much miſery. I have written this long account that you may be informed of every affair; I have related them all more particularly to Colonel Macleane, who will inform you of them; Mr. Middleton will alſo write you on theſe ſubjects. I am very much pleaſed with Mr. Middleton's good conduct; he is a ſenſible and intelligent man, and a ſincere well-wiſher of mine; I therefore conſult him on all affairs, and have been ſpoken to on this ſubject by the Colonel, who ſays that Mr. Middleton was appointed to collect the money due to the Company, and that he has no buſineſs to interfere in any other matter: I returned him no anſwer to this. I conſulted Mr. Middleton on ſeveral affairs, particularly at Peelebut, when the Engliſh Gentlemen introduced ſo many new propoſitions and arguments. The Colonel then made uſe of the expreſſion I have mentioned above, that Mr. Middleton had no other concern but to collect the money due to the Company. I have now given you an account of all that has happened here for ſome time paſt.

Extract of Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 14th February 1775.

Read the following Letter from Colonel Champion, with the Papers to which it refers, all which accompanied his Addreſs of the 3d February, recorded in Conſultations of that day.

To

APPENDIX. No. 45.

To the honourable Warren Haſtings, eſq. Governor General, &c. Council of Fort William.

Gentlemen,

Colonel Champion in refutation of the Vizier's charges againſt him.

On the evening of the 27th paſt I was furniſhed with the tranſlation of a Letter received by the Governor General from the Vizier, as far back as the 28th of November.

I acknowledged the receipt of it next day, and expreſſed my concern that it had not been convenient to favour me with an earlier peruſal. It contains charges highly injurious to my honour, and it would therefore have been ſatisfactory that an opportunity had been given me of uſhering theſe aſperſions into your preſence with their refutation.

I know the Vizier's character intimately; too well I know his littleneſs of ſoul to be ſurprized at his ſtooping to any meanneſs; but I cannot help expreſſing my aſtoniſhment at the appearances of a certain management with which this Letter is ſtrongly marked.

It muſt have been written about the middle of November. The Vizier and I parted on the moſt friendly terms on the 14th October. Not only had he often perſonally thanked me for the ſervices I had rendered him, but he did ſo by a Letter after he had left camp. When I told him of my intentions to return to Europe, he ſaid he ſhould lament my abſence as that of his beſt of friends; and I have already informed you, in another Addreſs, that I was urged to accept of a more convincing proof of his approbation and ſatisfaction after the concluſion of the ſettlement with the Rohilla Chief.

How then ſhall I account for the appearance of the preſent extraordinary Letter?—Obſerve, if you pleaſe, Gentlemen, the firſt part of it, till you arrive at Biſſoulee, then caſt your eyes on a Letter which his Excellency wrote to Mr. Haſtings from Peelebut; according to the tranſlations one is an exact tranſcript of the other. Now the Vizier had duly received an anſwer from Mr. Haſtings to the Letter ſent from Peelebut. The war was over early in October; there remained no more towns to plunder, no new-diſcovered hoards of treaſure to dig up, no unhappy man to rob of his wealth, no miſerable woman of her raiment: why then does his Excellency ſet down in November to copy a Letter to which he had received a ſatisfactory anſwer ſix or ſeven months before? there is ſomething myſterious in this buſineſs; perhaps in the ſequel we may ſee more clearly.

28th April. Two Letters to the Governor. 14th June.

It is unneceſſary to recapitulate what paſſed at Peelebut; I communicated the circumſtance to Mr. Haſtings the very day it happened, and I afterwards gave him my ſentiments on his own Letter, as well as on the Vizier's complaint.

It would now therefore perhaps ſuffice to refer to what has already paſſed on that ſubject; but it may not be out of place to remark, that the compliment which the Vizier pays me, of having ſuffered myſelf to be lorded over by the Gentlemen he mentions, will, I am confident, upon enquiry, meet with the polite retort from each of them as it does from me.

After all, what did the complaint amount to? only to this; 1ſt. That a demand was made on the part of the Engliſh troops to take an account of the riches which might be found in Peelebut, and that this demand was not agreeable to his Excellency. 2dly. That he was diſpleaſed with the deportment of Colonel Leſlie and the other Gentlemen.

With regard to the firſt, we may in politeneſs be ſorry that the demand was diſagreeable to his Excellency; we are not ſurprized at it, becauſe he is leſs a friend to us than to himſelf; but it does not therefore follow that any apology is due; on the contrary, I wiſh it may not be thought that other Commanding Officers would have cauſed the ſearch to have been more particular.

Two Letters to the Governor. 14th June.

With reſpect to the behaviour of the Gentlemen, I have already acquitted them of impropriety ſo far as fell under my obſervation; and I dare ſay, if they are called upon, they will anſwer for themſelves in confutation of his Excellency. But why, as I have already ſaid, why is this complaint reiterated at this time of day?

I cannot help admiring the confidence with which his Excellency has advanced, that there was not ſo much as 4 or 5,000 rupees in Peelebut. The report of four crore being concealed there I always thought extravagant, but his Excellency has gone ſo far in the other extreme, that it is impoſſible he can ever expect to be credited. According to the accounts of truſty and intelligent ſpies, the fact proved to be, that the Company would have been conſiderable gainers by the offer which he ſays he made, of giving up all the riches in the fort for the forty lacks.

As we are now on the ſubject of plunder, permit me to offer my attachment to the army in apology for begging of you to attend to it a little farther.

According to the Letter and to the meaning of my Inſtructions, I had authority to proceed to the conqueſt of the Rohilla country, if the Vizier required it, with the Company's troops only.

Suppoſing then, Gentlemen, that the Nabob had found himſelf ſufficiently engaged in the Doab, and that I had effected the Rohilla conqueſt, can it be alledged that the Company's troops would have taken charge of the riches found in the forts and cities merely on account of the Vizier, and that they muſt afterwards have delivered them over to his Excellency? Impoſſible! And it follows of courſe, that his being preſent could only entitle him to a proportion. I ſubmit, therefore, whether the giving up the rights of the army was not in effect ſacrificing the intereſt of our Nation, inaſmuch as the riches of the individuals contribute to the ſupport of the State.

But paſſing over this remarkable complaiſance to the Vizier as inexplicable, we ſhall march from Peelebut, and accompany his Excellency towards Biſſoulee, dragging in triumph the diſconſolate Begum and children of the brave but unfortunate Hafiz, the widow of his eldeſt ſon, Emnait Khan, the wife of his eldeſt ſurviving ſon, Mahubbet Khan; and ſome hundreds of miſerable captive women, on carts.

Leaving Berelly and Oulab behind us, and truſty ſlaves of his Excellency's to ſee the inhabitants indiſcriminately plundered for the behoof of their maſter, we arrived at Biſſoulee, where the whole army were witneſſes of ſcenes that cannot be deſcribed.

But not to dwell on the enormities or exceſſes of his Excellency, I ſhall proceed to anſwer the charges brought againſt me.

In doing this, Gentlemen, I muſt trouble you with a narrative of all the tranſactions relative to Fyzoolla Khan; and in proceeding I ſhall deduce from the facts ſuch arguments, as naturally ariſe in ſupport of the propriety of my conduct during the campaign. The Vizier ſays, that after our arrival at Biſſoulee I carried on an underhand correſpondence with Fyzoolla Khan. I received and anſwered ſeveral Letters from the Rohilla Chief, but his Excellency is an œconomiſt of truth when he ſays I did ſo clandeſtinely.

The firſt Letter I received from Fyzoolla Khan was in theſe words:

14th May.

"After the death of my father theſe Gentlemen, the "Rohilla Chiefs, took poſſeſſion of my ancient eſtate, "and gave me a trifle for my ſubſiſtence: this is as "evident as the Sun; ſurely it is known to you; I "therefore from neceſſity ſupported myſelf with diffi- "culty. The perſon who deſigned the war is no more. "Regarding your ſacred friendſhip and ſincerity, I re- "queſt, without other intervention, that the degree of "friendſhip with you may be confirmed. Your good- "neſs and celebrity is every where known, and that you, "the Engliſh, diſpoſſeſs no one. This trouble therefore "is given, that in caſe I am reinſtated in my ancient "poſſeſſions, whatever is conferred upon me, I will "pay you as much, without damage or deficiency, as "any other perſon will agree to do; and in all matters "I will regard you as my maſter and benefactor till

APPENDIX. No. 45.

" death, but no other perſon. My agreements will I on " no account depart from; and, God willing, I will " perform them with my heart and ſoul.

" Whenever you require it I ſhall attend you, and " perform my duty and my firm alliance. I hope in " God, that by your means I ſhall receive juſtice, which " goodneſs I ſhall hold in remembrance while I have " life. I would have ſent a faithful perſon to you to " have explained all particulars, but the roads not being " free prevented me; if you will ſend a man to me, " mine accompanying him ſhall attend you."

I received at the ſame time a Letter from Ahmed Khan Khanſuman.

14th May. " Long before this Titte Khan Khanſuman, deceaſed, " performed his duty to the Engliſh Chiefs.

" At his death I was left ſingly, and Hafiz Rhamut " Cawn took that opportunity to ſeize half my country, " and conferred it on my brother Azeem Khan, by which " I attained not my hereditary eſtate; I therefore with- " drew my connection with him, but he carried me with " him forcibly. When the Nabob Vizier's Letter to " conſole me was received, I wiſhed to join him and " you: I declared my deſires; but what could I do, for " Hafiz would not let me go? this will have reached " you from others throughout Hindoſtan: there the " Engliſh beneficence is founded, and it is manifeſt to " all that they diſpoſſeſs no one of his right; it is there- " fore requeſted that on our, the Rohillas, particular " compaſſion may be ſhewn, and whatever be thought " juſt, beſtowed. By God's aſſiſtance, from the dues " of fidelity and duty I will never deviate the breadth of " an hair.

" As Fyzoolla Khan has true eſteem for me, I quitted " him not, but accompanied him to this fort. From " your honour and clemency a reply to this Addreſs is " intreated; it was neceſſary it ſhould be made. May " you ever proſper!"

Theſe Letters commenced the correſpondence; and if his Excellency had not, by the cruelty and inhumanity of his conduct in general, and by a piece of treachery towards other Chiefs, which I ſhall hereafter have occaſion to mention, and to prove under his own ſeal; I ſay, if he had not, by ſuch means as theſe, impreſſed the Natives with a juſt and deep-rooted diſtruſt of his honour, it is probable I ſhould not have been troubled with their addreſſes. But to continue:

15th May. Next morning I waited upon the Vizier, and ſhewed him the above Letters; at the ſame time I offered him the corps of grenadiers of the army to accompany a body of his troops to reduce the fugitives, and in the evening repeated the offer in perſon: how he received it may be ſeen in my Letter to the Governor and Council, 16th May; of which date, by advice of the Vizier, I ſent the following anſwer to the Rohilla Chiefs:

To Fyzoolla Khan.

15th May. " Your Letter is received, and gives me pleaſure. " The particulars are clear. My reply is this: This " country is not taken into the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh; " but in conſequence of engagements the Engliſh army " is come to the aid and aſſiſtance of the Nabob Vizier, " who is now maſter of this country. Agreeably to " your deſire, I communicated the particulars of your " Letter to the Vizier, and this is his reply, that he did " not chuſe any Patan Chief ſhould have ſettlement in " this country; I therefore ſaid no more: but if you, " or Ahmed Khan, ſhould at any time wiſh to come to " me, for ye and your family, and to Ahmed Khan and " his family, I will give protection, that no perſon ſhall " give you the ſmalleſt moleſtation; but of your country " and effects the Nabob Vizier is now maſter. Your " deſires are made known to him; and if ye can ſettle " your affairs agreeably to his pleaſure, it will be very " adviſable; and in this agreement I alſo ſhall be very " glad."

To Ahmed Khan.

16th May. " Your repreſentation is received, and the particulars " known. All that ye have written in excuſe for your " conduct, I have communicated to the Nabob Vizier; " and his determination is this, that no perſon of the " Rohilla tribe ſhall have reſidence in this country. I " write to adviſe you explicitly of the Vizier's pleaſure, " that ye may act according to it. Should ye at any " time wiſh to come to me, for yourſelf and family I " will afford full protection; but your country and " effects are now the property of the Nabob Vizier."

From theſe replies, Gentlemen, it is evident how implicitly I obeyed the orders I had received, to conſider the Vizier as the maſter.

On the 24th, a Letter arrived from Fyzoolla Khan, in theſe words:

24th May. " Previous to this, I addreſſed you with a repreſen- " tation of my condition, which from it will be evident to " you. Juſt now I have received a Letter from the Na- " bob Vizier; I have returned in reply to it, that through " your mediation I will come in to him. This trouble " therefore is given, to beg you will write me of what- " ever you have determined in my favour, that acting " agreeably to it, and arriving by your means, I may " obtain an interview. From whatever promiſes and " agreements I make I will not deviate the breadth of " an hair."

This Letter ſpeaks more plainly than the former the diſtruſt which the Vizier had cauſed in the minds of the fugitives, by his conduct to their kindred.

In conſequence of a communication of it to the Nabob, his miniſter, Elich Khan, waited on me, and, purſuant to the pleaſure of his Excellency, the following reply was written to the Rohilla Chief:

" I now adviſe you, that the two following propoſals " are offered to ye: 1ſt. The Vizier will not confer on " ye, or any other (Rohilla) perſon, one foot of land in " this country; but he will give you an equal quantity " with what you poſſeſſed here in the country of Doab, " provided ye will now pay him twenty lacks of rupees: " on this condition come ſatisfied. The ſecond propoſal, " ſhould ye not accept of the firſt, is this: That you, " with your family, domeſtics, treaſure, and effects, but " without troops, come in and meet me; after which ye " will proceed directly into the Engliſh diſtricts, where- " ever may be beſt, and remain there till the pleaſure of " the Board in this particular is written to me. The " reaſon of this is, that the Vizier does not chuſe ye " ſhould remain here. I now give you promiſe of pro- " tection, and ſend you a paſs under the Vizier's ſeal, " and one under my own: whicheve: of theſe you chuſe " to accept, act agreeably; but ſhould neither of them " be agreeable to you, you are your own maſter, there- " fore ſend the paſſes back to me."

This Letter was diſpatched in the morning, and in the afternoon I received one in reply to mine of the 16th:

25th May. " Your gracious Letter is received, and the particulars " comprehended. You write, that this country is not " come into the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh; but in con- " ſequence of engagements between the Engliſh and " the Vizier to give him aſſiſtance, their troops came " into this country, of which the Vizier is now " Lord: that agreeably to the Letter, having told " all the particulars to the Nabob, his pleaſure is " this, that no Chief of the Rohilla tribe ſhall have " ſettlement in this country; therefore that in this " matter I ſhould attempt no farther. The caſe is this: " I have never acted in ſuch manner that the Vizier " ſhould have taken hatred to his heart againſt me, but " it was the diſturbances of other Chiefs which afflicted " his noble heart; in that I am guiltleſs: therefore I " trouble you, that if this country is not in your poſſeſ-

" ſion,

" ſion, the management of it finally will be put into the " hands of others; it is better therefore to accept it from " me. If it is in the Nabob's dominion, foregoing every " other connection, I will take it through your means. " I am in hopes that the Nabob's favour being regained, " that this country will be put under my charge; and " whatever any others may offer for it, I will bind my- " ſelf to perform. In reply to Letters received from " the Vizier, calling me in to him, I have replied, that " whatever may be his pleaſure regarding me, he ſhall " adviſe you of it, that by your means I may come to his " preſence. Your bravery and generoſity is as evident " as the Sun; and whoever loſes his country by war, is " again replaced in it I wiſh to take it (the country) " purely through you; then by your favour let us not " loſe our country. In the dues of friendſhip and fide- " lity I will never fail, and while I live I ſhall be obe- " dient to your commands. Abdulrhum Khan and Huk- " abmet Oulla I have ſent to you. In the matter of my " offer for receiving the country of my father, whatever " is my ability to give, they will repreſent to you; " agreeably to that, ſhewing the dues of lordlineſs and " compaſſion, your fame will reſound through the " world."

The offers which the Vackeel made in the name of his maſter are mentioned in my Letter to the Governor of the 28th May.

From the reinſtatement of Sujah ul Dowla in his own dominions, the Powers of Hindoſtan had conceived the Engliſh to be a people of unparalleled magnanimity, as celebrated for their juſtice and humanity as for their bravery and generoſity: this is evident from the ſtyle of their Letters which were addreſſed to me.

I thought nothing could be more honourable to our nation than the ſupport of ſo exalted a character; and whilſt it could be done on terms ſo advantageous as an annual increaſe of near £. 400,000 to the revenues of our Ally, and an immediate acquiſition of above £. 300,000 to the Company, for their influence in effecting an accommodation perfectly conſiſtent with their engagements to the Vizier, who would have thus derived more than a reaſonable advantage from that manner of terminating the war; I ſuppoſed it very unlikely that the Vackeel's propoſition ſhould be received with indifference.

They were not, it is true, agreeable to the Vizier; they were not favourable to his ambitious deſigns, nor to his inhuman plan of extirpation.

I informed the Governor of Sujah's having received them with diſdain; and when I candidly told his Excellency that I ſhould act in the matter agreeably to the orders of Government, he anticipated the anſwer which I received, by ſaying, " Mr. Haſtings will tell you " as I do."

But though his Excellency gave himſelf the liberty of divining this, how was it poſſible that I ſhould believe that we were to conſult the Vizier's intereſt and aggrandizement only? I could not as a Company's ſervant give place to ſuch an idea.

I knew that Sujah's acquiſitions in plunder had exceeded the expences of the campaign, even including the forty lacks which he had promiſed to pay to the Company; I had with regret obſerved, that the part which the Engliſh took in the war brought their national character into the higheſt diſrepute; I had remarked, and all the officers in the army had remarked, that his Excellency's haughtineſs increaſed with the power which we put into his hands.

Independent therefore of the immenſe pecuniary conſiderations which I have mentioned, nothing could be more conſiſtent with what I conceived to be the intereſt of the Company, than embracing the opportunity which preſented itſelf of having a ſtanding army of 15 or 20,000, and in caſe of emergency, 50 or 60,000 Aſghans ready to aſſiſt in repelling any of the Powers to the weſtward of the Ganges, or to cruſh the growing inſolence of the Vizier himſelf.

Knowing that we owe eſtabliſhment in this country to the want of unanimity amongſt the natives, I had always underſtood it to have been an axiom in our ſyſtem of politics, that it was our part to endeavour at keeping the power of the Country Princes as much upon an equipoiſe as poſſible; leſt by lengthening the ſword of one, he ſhould deſtroy his neighbour and become formidable to ourſelves.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

It was upon this principle that a deputation was a few years ago ſent at a great expence to the Company, to limit the forces of Sujah Dowla, when they were far leſs numerous than at preſent.

Thus, Gentlemen, as has been already obſerved, I was induced to think it very probable that the overtures of the Rohilla Chief would have been totally diſregarded, nor could I ever be poſſibly reconciled to myſelf, had I preſumed to have withheld them from the knowledge of Government.

I therefore referred the propoſals to the Adminiſtration through the honourable the Governor, and I reflect with real ſatisfaction on having done ſo.

" I ſhall be extremely glad if, upon due conſideration " of them, any means can be deviſed by which the public " good may be promoted. I wiſh for nothing ſo much " as that ſome meaſure may be adopted that will ſtrike " all the Powers of the Eaſt with admiration of our " juſtice in contraſt to the Vizier's conduct."

Concluſion of a Letter to the Governor 28th May.

In the meantime, however, I wrote the following anſwer to Fyzoolla:

" I acquaint you, that your agreeable Letter by your " Vackeel is received, and gives me pleaſure. The " contents are clearly underſtood. In your buſineſs I " have had a good deal of converſation with the Nabob " Vizier, but he will not conſent that either you or any " other perſon (Rohilla) ſhall have one foot of land in " this country; but the Vizier offers you the ſame quan- " tity of country you have poſſeſſed here in the province " of Doab. If you chuſe to accept of this it is well; if not, " there is no other choice. Had the Vizier accepted of " your propoſal, it would have given me much pleaſure, " but in regard to the country, the Vizier is lord. Further " correſpondence on this matter will be fruitleſs, on " which account I write you explicitly."

With this Letter I deſired the Vackeel to return to his maſter, telling him I could do nothing in his affairs of my own authority, but that I would make his offers known to the Gentlemen at Calcutta, and afterwards adviſe Fyzoolla of their pleaſure.

The Vackeel however ſent the Letter by another perſon, and intreated permiſſion to remain in camp till I ſhould hear from the Preſidency; which I granted, as intimated to the Governor. 28th May.

I had no further intercourſe with Fyzoolla until the 7th June, when, in conſequence of a report that Lieutenant Redman and two other European deſerters were with him, I deſired he would ſend them forthwith to my camp.

On the 8th of the ſame month being adviſed, as well through his Excellency as by other intelligence, that the King had invited over the Rohillas, and the Vizier and myſelf being of opinion that the conſequences of their joining his Majeſty would prove prejudicial to his Excellency's future peace, eſpecially in caſe of a Maratta war, of which he ſeemed very apprehenſive, I addreſſed Fyzoolla as follows:

" Hearing at this time that Letters are arrived with you " from his Majeſty, wherein he ſtrongly enjoins you to " come to him without any apprehenſions, I write ye, " that having clearly repreſented your condition to the " Board at Calcutta, and in a friendly manner having " recommended the ſettlement of them to the Governor, " I wait impatiently for replies. In this caſe I think it " neceſſary and adviſable that ye do not comply with the " King's deſires until anſwers come from Calcutta; when- " ever

APPENDIX. No. 45.

" ever they do come they ſhall be immediately tranſ-
" mitted to you; in this matter there ſhall be no neglect
" on my part."

To this Letter, Gentlemen, is probably owing the preſent peace of the empire; to it is certainly owing that the Nabob is undiſturbed, and that Fyzoolla Khan is the mere dependant of his Excellency; for if that Chief had not, as he afterwards complained, been lulled into inactivity by the hopes which he entertained from the interpoſition of our Government, he would have croſſed the Ganges at Baize Gaut and Chandy Gaut whilſt the river was fordable.

He had, according to our advices, made very early application to Timur Shah for aſſiſtance, which the Vizier was apprehenſive would be granted. His Majeſty Shah Allum, it was ſaid, had invited the Marattas; he ſtood chiefly in need of money to proſecute his deſigns; Fyzoolla was maſter of a large ſum; the inferior Chiefs were alſo poſſeſſed of riches; the Seiks were ready to join them; in ſhort, they muſt at leaſt have eaſily eſtabliſhed themſelves in the Doab, and have been able to have kept the Vizier in a ſtate of diſquietude during the remainder of his life. This Letter had the deſired effect, and the liſtening to it proved the cauſe of much ſelf-diſapprobation to the Rohilla.

Nothing further paſſed between Fyzoolla Khan and me till the 25th June, when, on receipt of new advice regarding Redman, a copy of which was ſent to the Governor, I again demanded the deſerter.

No other circumſtance occurred regarding the Rohillas till the 7th July; on the morning of that day I received a meſſage from the Nabob, deſiring me to ſend away the Vackeel, for which his reaſons may be collected from what follows:

After the fall of Hafiz, the Vizier,* as has been elſewhere obſerved, became extremely arrogant; it was well known that even his people carried themſelves haughtily to the Engliſh officers, and we ſhall hereafter have occaſion to mention a very remarkable and daring inſtance of it. Great pains were taken to impreſs the Natives of Indoſtan in general, and the Vizier's own ſubjects in particular, with the higheſt ideas of his late and great acquiſition of power and magnificence.

I have been told, that in a Fitte-Nama, publiſhed in many parts of his country on account of the victory, the Engliſh troops were not ſo much as mentioned; and it is an undoubted truth, that ſeveral officers when on their way to the army (one of them now in town) were aſked if the Engliſh had been at the defeat of Hafiz.

The circumſtances of the Engliſh being in his pay, and under his abſolute direction, were circulated with great induſtry; nay, ſo indiſcreet was his Excellency, in the uſe of the command which it had been thought proper to confer on him over the Company's troops, that our own Sepoys could not help obſerving the difference between theſe and former times; "Now the Saheb Loque (Gen" tlemen) muſt run at his nod, and muſt halt at his nod."

As the Vackeel's remaining in camp was therefore not favourable to the views with which theſe reports were ſpread abroad, and tended to render the Vizier's unlimited authority over the Engliſh army doubtful to the Country Powers, his Excellency requeſted his diſmiſſion.

I had been directed to conſider our Government in a ſecondary point of view only; and having myſelf no particular deſire for the Vackeel's preſence, I indulged the Vizier in his wiſhes, and immediately directed him to return, promiſing to acquaint his maſter of the anſwer which ſhould be received from Calcutta.

It happened to arrive that very day, and I gave the Vackeel the following Letter to carry to Fyzoolla as a final anſwer:

" I laid the ſtate of your affairs before the Board, and " impatiently awaited their anſwer; accordingly this day
" it arrived, and they write, that the Rohilla country
" being in the poſſeſſion of the Nabob Vizier, and he
" the ruler thereof, whatever he may chuſe to do in the " ſettlement of it, it would not be proper for them to " interfere therein. I in conſequence adviſe you, that as " they have written that they cannot interfere, that with" out their concurrence I alone am not able to do it. I " have exerted the effects of friendſhip and ability in " your concerns, as Abdulrhum Khan, who is here, is " well convinced of. Having now diſmiſſed him, he " will return to you, and telling you all particulars, will
" aſſure you that I have done every thing I was able;
" but now I can do no more."

Early in the morning of the 8th July the Vackeel took his departure, lamenting his want of ſucceſs, and preſaging the diſgrace into which he actually fell with his maſter and his tribe*, and not having immediately returned in conſequence of my Letter to Fyzoolla of the 28th May, and being thereby in ſome meaſure the cauſe of their not croſſing the Ganges, and decoying them into imaginary ſecurity.

On the 9th advices being received that ſupplies of grain were ſent to Fyzoolla's retreat from the diſtricts of Zabita Khan, the firſt Omrah of the empire, I wrote to him, deſiring he would peremptorily forbid his people to furniſh the enemy with proviſions.

I had very early ſignified to the Governor how exceedingly diſagreeable I found my ſituation. The unhandſome manner in which, I muſt be pardoned to ſay, I thought myſelf treated, on account of the notice I took of the impropriety that had appeared to me in repoſing a greater truſt in the Vizier than in the Company's Commander in Chief, had determined me to return to the Preſidency as ſoon as the rivers ſhould have ſwelled, either to have matters put upon a more becoming footing, or to have taken my leave for England; which, in caſe of failure in this particular, I had reſolved to do, even if no ſucceſſor ſhould arrive.

Accordingly I had made preparations for my journey downwards, and had declared my intention of quitting camp on the 25th. 16th July.

In the meantime, however, Mr. Middleton, the Reſident at the Vizier's Court, brought me a meſſage expreſſive of his Excellency's wiſhes, that the army ſhould take the field. Next day I waited upon him, and the following is the* ſubſtance of the converſation which paſſed: 17th July.

" My reaſon for ſending Mr. Middleton was this; Mr.
" Haſtings has hinted to me to effectually ſettle this " country as ſoon as I poſſibly can, that in caſe another " enemy ſhould appear after the rains, and perhaps both
" the Marattas and Timur Shah may, I may be able to " withdraw my troops from this country without any
" riſk of its being attacked; and on this account, if the " Colonel approves, we will move towards Fyzoolla Khan,
" who cannot eſcape, and may be got at without much
" difficulty."

I replied, " that as the ſeaſon was ſo far advanced,
" and the camp equipage extremely bad, I wiſhed to " avoid moving now, as it would be attended with the " loſs of a number of men, but adviſed the Vizier to ſend
" more troops to Moradabad; that I would now advance
" ſome battalions, and if the enemy came down from " their preſent ſituation, would march with the brigade
" to oppoſe them; adding, that if I remained here, I " would move with the army towards them at the latter
" end of the rains, and before they could get away:" All this was approved of.

On the 19th I adviſed the Select Committee of theſe circumſtances, and informed them that I believed I ſhould be under the neceſſity of marching, although I was apprehenſive the conſequences would prove fatal to the troops.

* The Vackeel continued a conſiderable time in diſgrace, and his Excellency was ſo much ſatisfied of the ſervices of this man, that he conferred a jaghire of 5,000 rupees per annum upon him after the peace.

In

In the interim I took every poſſible meaſure towards a ſudden movement; but I heard nothing more from the 24th July. Nabob himſelf on the ſubject till the 23d, when he acquainted me he had ſent forward part of his troops, and deſired the brigade might alſo march. In the evening I ſent my interpreter, and the next morning waited upon him myſelf, as well to repreſent how neceſſary it was to march at that ſeaſon, as the diſadvantages with which I thought our movement would be attended; but finding him bent on the expedition, I gave into his meaſure, and took the precaution enjoined by Adminiſtration, of requiring a Letter from his Excellency, expreſſing the neceſſity of taking the field, which he accordingly ſent me.

24th July. The ſame day I addreſſed the Select Committee, acquainting them of theſe circumſtances, and alſo iſſued orders for the troops to hold themſelves in readineſs to march.

25th July. I paid his Excellency a viſit, and informed him, that in conſequence of his requiſition, the brigade ſhould be got in readineſs to march as ſoon as poſſible.

The ſame day another Vackeel arrived from Fyzoolla in my camp, but he was inſtantly diſmiſſed.

26th July. I was taken ill; Colonel Galliez, the ſecond in command, was alſo extremely indiſpoſed. I reminded his Excellency of his being near three months in arrears of ſubſidy to the troops, and obſerved that it was neceſſary to ſupply them with money before the march.

27th July. Continued ill; ordered the troops to march the 29th in the morning.

28th July. Directed the camp equipage to be ſent forward to Chandouſy. Colonel Galliez and myſelf very unwell. Supply of ammunition not yet arrived from the boats; at night therefore countermanded the march of the army.

29th July. My illneſs conſiderably abated. Addreſſed the Select Committee. Ordered the army to march on the 30th at three o'clock in the morning. I was informed that our carriage cattle had been obliged to make two trips for the camp equipage.

30th July. The army accordingly broke ground, and marched to the encampment at Chandouſy.

And if you conſider, Gentlemen, that we were unprovided with the neceſſaries requiſite for the ſecurity of our ammunition and ſtores; that great part of them being in the boats diſtant about forty miles, the carriage to Biſſoulee at that unfavourable ſeaſon was attended with much trouble and delay, as well as riſk of damage; that many of the younger Gentlemen of the army, whoſe allowances in the field, however handſome they may be thought, are barely ſufficient to indemnify their expences where the neceſſaries of life bear ſo exorbitant prices, had, from motives of œconomy, diſmiſſed their Coolies, in confidence of our continuing in cantonments during the rains; that ſeveral hundreds of the contractor's drivers, and in particular thoſe attached to the magazine and artillery, had either deſerted or been diſcharged by his agent, that it was with great difficulty even the Nabob's influence, in the courſe of ſeveral days, procured ſo many of theſe neceſſary people as enabled us to proceed; I ſay, Gentlemen, theſe circumſtances conſidered, it appears that the army was in motion with uncommon alacrity.

I confeſs I was, however, extremely embarraſſed in mind, leſt my deſire of pleaſing the Nabob ſhould ſubject me to reprehenſion.

Accordingly you find, that in my Letter to the Select Committee, 29th July, I ſtudiouſly endeavoured to apologize for venturing to take ſo much upon me.

"I deliberately weighed in my mind, whether I ſhould "acquieſce in the Nabob's requeſt of moving higher; I "diſcovered that my heſitation gave him much diſſatis- "faction; and it was very perceptible, that if I had "perſiſted in remaining here, he would have been im- "preſſed with doubts and jealouſies of the ſincerity of "our attachment towards him, which I was apprehenſive "would never be effectually effaced: but indeed his "conduct in advancing his army above thirty coſs in "front of our troops, without my concurrence, rendered "a movement on my part abſolutely neceſſary, for the "reaſons mentioned in my Addreſs of the 19th, &c. &c. "and I hope, therefore, that the motives which have "prevailed with me to comply with his Excellency's "requiſition will ſecure to me the honour of your "approbation."

Nor will you be ſurprized, Gentlemen, that I was anxious for ſuch approbation, when you ſhall have conſidered the cauſes which I had to be doubtful of obtaining it, and the inward diſquiet which theſe doubts occaſioned.

Firſt, I remained in a ſtate of diſagreeable ſuſpenſe, as to the effect which the Treaty of Partition of the conquered country between his Majeſty and the Vizier might have.

The Board had ſaid, "We cannot entertain ſo bad an "opinion of the Vizier, as to ſuppoſe him capable of "acting in avowed breach of Treaty; but if any plea of "that kind ſhould be made for conteſting *our right to "occupy any part of the Rohilla country yet unconquered, "it would be proper to put the queſtion to him, whe- "ther ſuch Treaty does exiſt or not? If he ſhould "acknowledge ſuch a Treaty, you muſt undoubtedly "ceaſe from farther hoſtilities in abetment of his breach "of faith."

The King had ſent me a copy of the Treaty which had been ſworn to on the Koran; "Perhaps," ſaid his Majeſty, "the Nabob has forgot his oath, it is fit you "ſhould remind him of it."

When I ſhewed his Excellency the Treaty, he acknowledged its authenticity; he had not forgot his oath, but he braved it: he alledged, that the counterpart in his poſſeſſion expreſſed a condition that his Majeſty ſhould take the field in perſon, and that his failure in that particular annulled the Treaty.

But when the original counterpart which he put into the hands of my Interpreter came to be examined, it appeared there was no ſuch ſtipulation; nor indeed did it ever exiſt even verbally, as may be underſtood from Nudjif Khan's declaration on that ſubject, where he ſaid, "he had no doubts of the Vizier's abiding by his "engagements."

I ſent copies of both to the Committee, having been repeatedly deſired to correſpond with them only; and as the above ſentiments of the Adminiſtration ſeemed very favourable towards his Majeſty, it was not clear to me, that ſo frivolous an excuſe would have been ſanctified in breach of ſo ſolemn a Treaty; I therefore made a reference to the paragraph above quoted, and deſired the Committee would give me explicit inſtructions regarding the import thereof; nor was I a little anxious for a reply.

Secondly, After I had agreed to take the field, and before we marched, but when it was too late to retract, I diſcovered that the Vizier had groſsly impoſed upon me, regarding the Letter which he had pretended to have juſt received from the Governor; for although I had not been favoured with any addreſs from Mr Haſtings on that ſubject, yet believing that his Excellency had really got 19th and 24th July. ſuch a Letter, it was the moſt prevailing argument with me, and I urged it accordingly in my Letters to the Select Committee in juſtification of my conduct.

But upon finding that the Letter which the Vizier pretended to have juſt received was no other than one he had got in May, congratulating him on the victory, and "the ardour of his courage," and caſually recommending the ſettlement of his affairs in the Rohilla country, I was much concerned, becauſe the Governor's advice could apply to the preſent time; and if the expedition ſhould be diſapproved, it would not be in my power to quote Mr. Haſtings's authority in favour of the undertaking.

* As if they had had a right! This is not the language of Auxiliaries, but of Principals in the war.

APPENDIX. No. 45. 23d May.

Thirdly, The Board had already declared the forty lacks due to the Company.

" Conſidering our right to the ſum ſtipulated for the " preſent ſervice as now fully acquired, we have recom- " mended to the Preſident to make immediate application " for the payment of the forty lacks: " a formal demand had accordingly been made for the money *; this was in effect avowing that they had already performed all that was incumbent on them, conſequently that no further ſervice was due from their troops without new ſtipulations for the advantage of the Company; and I intimated ſome time before pretty plainly, that this was my own opinion.

Had I not therefore great reaſon to be apprehenſive leſt I ſhould be told by the Adminiſtration, that my acquieſcence with the Vizier's deſires had rendered it impoſſible for them to make ſuch ſtipulations with his Excellency?

And I would aſk, Gentlemen, whether the treatment which I received in the courſe of correſpondence left me the ſmalleſt room to doubt, that if any unfortunate accident had happened during the ſecond campaign, " of my own undertaking," for ſuch it would be termed, every argument would be laid hold of to ſcreen others from, and ſaddle me with the indignation of the Company.

From what I have already ſaid, I think it muſt appear that I had very forcible reaſons for the diſinclination which I informed the Select Committee I ſhould have at marching; and that in overcoming all theſe powerful cauſes of my embarraſſment, I manifeſted even a ſuperlative degree of attention to his Excellency's wiſhes.

But fourthly, this will be ſtill more evident, from the circumſtance of my having marched while the troops were near three months in arrears of pay; for though I had made application to his Excellency on the 26th to pay up at leaſt a part of the arrears, I had no ſucceſs; he contented himſelf with ſignifying pleaſantly to ſome of thoſe about his perſon, " that he had no ſilver then " except in bars, and that although he had bars, he had " no implements of coinage." The only obſervation that occurred to me on this head was, that if he carried the bars from his own provinces, I was ſorry he had not brought the neceſſary utenſils; and that if he found the bars in the Rohilla country, to have been conſiſtent in his plan, he ſhould have forgot that he had them.

But to enforce the argument ariſing from my having marched whilſt the troops were ſo much in arrears;

Board's Inſtructions, Par. 7.

Be pleaſed to recollect, that, according to my inſtructions, I had full authority not only to diſcontinue the operations, but to countermarch with the army, in the event of his Excellency's ſuffering himſelf to be in arrears of ſubſidy for the ſpace of one month after the day on which it ſhould have been paid.

Now whilſt it is evident, that, by adhering to the orders of the Board, my conduct could not be liable to challenge, it is equally obvious, that, by acting thus in direct contradiction to them, I ſhewed a condeſcenſion to his Excellency, which, independent of every other conſideration, is fully ſufficient to deſtroy the calumnies with which this inſidious man would ſtab my reputation; for if I had been diſpoſed to thwart his inclinations, I might have embraced this opportunity of doing it in ſecurity.

Having therefore clearly eſtabliſhed the falſity of the malicious inſinuations which have been directed againſt me, on account of the objections made to the movement from Biſſoulee, I ſhall now proceed to ſhew, that thoſe which regard my ſubſequent conduct are no leſs ſlanderous and void of truth.

Under every poſſible diſadvantage we took the field, in ſubmiſſion to the caprice of this ungrateful Ally; every difficulty was ſtruggled againſt with uncommon perſeverance, as you, Gentlemen, will be well convinced even from peruſing very ſummary Minutes of occurrences taken down by one of my Aid de Camps †, from which you will perceive that I perſiſted in keeping the field, and dragging the Europeans along, contrary to the written opinion of the ſurgeons.

Our march was as expeditious as the ſeaſon and the ſcarcity of proviſions would permit. His Excellency did me the favour of a viſit almoſt every morning; he told me of his expectations that the Marattas would make war on him as ſoon as poſſible; a report alſo prevailed that Timur Shah had determined to take the field againſt him; his Majeſty Shah Allum was likewiſe exceedingly diſſatisfied, and ready to adopt any meaſure to humiliate the Vizier; in ſhort, according to all advices, there were great appearances of a general flame.

The Nabob ſeemed therefore exceedingly uneaſy, leſt the Rohillas ſhould retire into the country between the mountains, and gain time until his attention ſhould be called off by the Marattas to the defence of his own dominions, in which caſe he would have enemies in front and rear, and all his ambitious ſchemes would fall to the ground; his Excellency therefore, on the 12th of Auguſt, propoſed to me to make overtures of accommodation to the Rohillas.

The propoſitions were, that Fyzoolla ſhould deliver up half his effects to the Vizier, who would give him a diſtrict ſufficient for the maintenance of 15,000 men in the country which his Excellency had lately taken from the Marattas.

Correſpondence between me and Fyzoolla had ceaſed from the 7th July, when the Vackeel was diſmiſſed, till this day, 13th Auguſt. that I addreſſed him, agreeable to the Vizier's deſire, encloſing a copy of his Excellency's Letter making the above propoſitions.

On the 14th I adviſed the Committee of the Vizier's wiſhes and propoſal of ſettling matters amicably with the Rohillas.

On the 15th I received a reply from Fyzoolla, declining to accept the country taken from the Marattas in the Doab; obſerving, that in caſe of their approach, he muſt either break his engagements with the Vizier, and join them, or they would take the country from him; he therefore tendered half his effects to the Vizier, for a ſettlement in the Rohilla country equal to that which his Excellency offered in the Doab.

Having communicated Fyzoolla's Letter to the Nabob, his Excellency on the 17th Auguſt addreſſed me thus:

" I have peruſed the copy of Fyzoolla Khan's Letter " that ye ſent me, and underſtand the particulars: do ye " write him a reply to this purport; that of whatever " effects he has he will give me half, and that I will give " him country in the Doab, which I took from the Ma- " rattas, for the maintenance of 15,000 men; and that " him and me will enter into mutual agreements, to " which the Engliſh Gentlemen ſhall accede; that in " future, if the Marattas attempt to take the aforeſaid " country, I will join and aſſiſt Fyzoolla Khan to oppoſe " them. This matter firmly agreed on and determined, " I enter into by means of the Engliſh Gentlemen. Do " you write to this purport to Fyzoolla Khan, that he " may be ſatisfied. I am ready to give the aforeſaid " quantity of country, and to aid and aſſiſt him againſt " the Marattas; never, never will I be neglectful in this " matter."

Accordingly I wrote to Fyzoolla Khan, encloſing a copy of his Excellency's Letter, recommending to him to accept the conditions, or at leaſt to come and diſcourſe on the ſubject.

In reply he obſerved, that he was unable to write ſo much as he had to ſay; and requeſted I would ſend my Secretary to hear from him, and relate to me all particulars. His deſire being communicated to the Vizier,

* Remark of the Vizier, " the Board always ready to lay hold of any thing that would bear a diſpute."

his

his Excellency wrote to me on the 26th, recommending a compliance with it, and containing the neceſſary inſtructions; in conſequence of which, I directed my Secretary to proceed immediately to the Rohilla camp; and in order to obtain as much information as poſſible regarding the enemy's poſt, I availed myſelf of this opportunity of ſending Lieutenant Bruce, the field engineer, to make his obſervations, that we might profit thereby, in caſe the enemy ſhould oblige us to attack them.

On the 21ſt of Auguſt the Engineer ſent me an account of the road to Lall Dang.

" After croſſing the Nullah at the village Bhjouree, " diſtant from your camp about 4½ coſs, we entered a " low jungle, in which are two deſerted villages, the wells " of which afford plenty of good water. Continuing our " courſe northward three coſs further, we arrived at the " large village of Ramnagur; to the north-weſtward of " which is an open ſpace (I think) ſufficiently large " to encamp the brigade on; this muſt be the laſt ſtage. " Altering our route to N. N. Weſt along the foot of " the hills, an almoſt impenetrable jungle lines each ſide of " the road. Another difficulty the troops will have to " ſtruggle with is the want of water: except at a river two " coſs to the weſtward of Ramnagur, we did not meet " with a drop of that element during a diſtance of eight coſs, " when we arrived at the Rohilla encampment. The " opening here is of very little extent, and muſt have " been cleared by the Rohillas after their flight to Lall " Dang."

At the ſame time that theſe two Gentlemen were in the enemy's camp, Elich Khan, the Vizier's Miniſter, had agents there, offering all his influence to effect a ſettlement: this tended to give the Rohillas confidence; at the ſame time that Lieutenant Bruce, being recognized by people who had ſeen him ſurveying, created ſuſpicions of our intentions.

Fyzoolla Khan however declared his willingneſs to come to an interview with the Vizier; but his Chiefs would not conſent to his leaving their ſtrong hold: they propoſed to ſend his eldeſt ſon, accompanied with ſome of their own number; but his Excellency having refuſed to receive them, and the Gentlemen being recalled on the 24th, correſpondence dropped, and I reſolved to move nearer the enemy, in order if poſſible more effectually to diſtreſs them.

On the 26th, attended by the Quartermaſter General, &c. I went twelve miles to reconnoitre the country between the Ganges and the jungles, leaving the road which the Engineer had travelled to Lall Dang ſeveral coſs to the right.

On the 27th a body of the Nabob's troops were ordered by my direction to proceed along the banks of the river towards Chandy-Gaut. The 28th I advanced with the grenadier corps five coſs; and the brigade under the command of Colonel Gallies marched three coſs. I ſtrengthened the advanced diviſion of the army, and gave the command of it to Lieutenant Colonel Leſlie.

In conſequence of an advice which I had early given to the Vizier, a party of Nudjiff Khan's troops had come acroſs the Doab, and poſted themſelves on the oppoſite banks of the river, at Chandy-Gaut, to prevent all ſupplies to the enemy from the weſtern ſide of the Ganges.

On the 29th I rode out fourteen miles, to reconnoitre the Ramnagur road. On the 30th, ordered the Quartermaſter General to pitch upon a ſpot of ground for the brigade to encamp upon, between Lieutenant Colonel Leſlie's camp and the hills, and the brigade accordingly took up that ground the next morning.

1ſt September, accompanied by the Gentlemen of my family, I ſpent the day with his Excellency upon the banks of the Ganges.

All this time his Excellency was buſied in intriguing with the Rohillas; Elich Khan, and the Abyſſinian Mahomed Buſhier Khan, by the Nabob's deſire, had ſet their emiſſaries at work; and in this manner the Nabob kept up a conſtant intercourſe with the enemy.

In conſequence of which, on the 2d of September, his Excellency tranſmitted me a Letter which he had received from Fyzoolla Khan, profeſſing obedience; and his Excellency alſo informed me, that the Rohilla Chief had ſent a truſty perſon to him to explain all matters. APPENDIX. No. 45.

This day I ordered two battalions of grenadier Sepoys to hold themſelves in readineſs to attend me early on the 3d, on a party of obſervation; but on account of a ſevere fall of rain that morning, I was obliged to countermand the order. On the 4th however I went, eſcorted by the ſaid two battalions of grenadier Sepoys, five coſs, and with a body of the Nabob's beſt horſe advanced two coſs further, when I arrived at an almoſt impenetrable jungle, where only one horſeman could paſs; I deſired the Nabob's Bildars and Tavildars might be employed to cut a road through it. 2d September.

Very ſevere rain on the 5th. The 6th I again rode out to examine the Ramnagur road. On the 7th his Excellency tranſmitted me a copy of the anſwer which he ſent to the Letter he had received from Fyzoolla Khan on the 2d, importing, that if he did not accept of the former terms, further diſcourſe was needleſs.

Notwithſtanding all which, his Excellency's agents were ſtill employed. Severe rains on the 8th and 9th. On the 10th, having viſited his Excellency, he acquainted me, that the ſituation of the Rohillas was very hard; that after the rains ceaſed, the water from the hills would kill them: " Perhaps," added his Excellency, " with " theſe new Gentlemen new meaſures may take place."

This was not the only time he had expreſſed himſelf in that manner; the advices which he had early received from the Preſidency created him no ſmall uneaſineſs; he became more anxious than ever to ſettle with Fyzoolla, and in order to effect it he doubled his agents and his induſtry.

On the 11th I received a reply from the Select Committee to my Letters of the 19th and 24th July; and upon the ſtrength of the approbation of my conduct in moving from Biſſoulé, without waiting for an anſwer to my addreſs of the 29th July, I ſent immediate notice to his Excellency, that I would preſs upon the enemy as ſoon as poſſible.

His Excellency viſited me on the 12th, and without taking any notice of my meſſage of the preceding day, told me, that the Rohillas were in the moſt diſtreſſed ſituation; that the Chiefs threatened to deſert Fyzoolla. Upon my adviſing him to offer them ſervice, he replied, that he had done ſo, and alſo ſecurity to all who would quit the enemy's camp.

But nothing can more clearly demonſtrate how wiſhful the Vizier was to avoid an attack, and bring the Rohillas to an agreement; nothing can more inconteſtably prove, that the delays which he would impute to me were really his own, than the following circumſtance:

On the 13th I reſolved to ride out as next morning, to obſerve what progreſs the Nabob's Bildars and Tavildars had made in cutting the road, and to penetrate as much further as I could into the jungle, for the ſake of obſervation; expecting alſo to have an opportunity of ſurprizing ſome of the enemy's advanced poſts.

Purſuant to this deſign I applied to his Excellency for a ſtrong body of his troops to attend me; his Excellency returned for anſwer, " that he had put himſelf under a " courſe of phyſic, which would continue ſix days, for " which time he begged I would defer the attack, as " then he would be able to accompany me."

Although I thought this a very unmilitary preparative, I was willing to leave his Excellency to his own mode of whetting his courage; but thinking it neceſſary for me in the meantime to obtain as perfect a knowledge as poſſible of the ground we ſhould have occaſion to act upon, I replied, that I only meant to go in front to examine the road, and therefore deſired his Excellency would ſend me the eſcort demanded.

Before my note had reached his Excellency, he ſent a meſſage importing that he was treating; and on receipt of my note he returned another, desiring I would be governed by his pleasure, and defer the expedition.

14th September.

This day two Ambassadors came from Fyzoolla to the Vizier on the invitation of his Excellency; Fyzoolla's Vackeel brought me also a Letter, and informed me, that the Vizier had made proposals of accommodation to his master, but that he would trust the English only; I observed, that it was probable his master would not have many days to consider; and sent himself and the Letter to his Excellency.

On the 15th I acknowledged the Select Committee's Letter of the 18th August, and advised them of the Vizier's mode of proceeding.

" His Excellency has several persons employed in " endeavouring to settle with Fyzoolla, or to detach the " Rohilla Sirdars from the common cause; but I am " afraid he discovers too much anxiety, and renders the " enemy more backward in coming to terms than they " otherwise would be."

September the 16th, after some conferences with the Vackeels, his Excellency acquainted me that he would make Fyzoolla Collector of the revenues of Robilcund, allowing six lacks for his expences, and desired I would therefore address the Rohilla to that purpose; which I did accordingly.

His Excellency had so many schemes, and so many agents to conduct them, that it was impossible to know his real intentions; but it was evident that he was departing from his former resolutions. He had some time before refused to receive Fyzoolla's eldest son, accompanied by some of the principal Chiefs, and he had now not only admitted two Chiefs without the son, but even sent several Sirdars to invite and conduct them to his camp.

On the 17th I acquainted the Governor of these circumstances, and on the 18th took occasion to repeat the offer of the service of the troops, and to inform his Excellency that they were in readiness.

The two Vackeels remained in his camp, and were entertained several days by Bushier Khan, &c. by order of his Excellency.

On the 19th I received a Letter from Fyzoolla, in answer to that which I had addressed to him on the 16th by desire of the Vizier; and having transmitted it to his Excellency, he sent me the following reply:

" The Letter of Fyzoolla Khan which you sent me to " peruse I have received, and clearly understand. I " desire the death of no Mussulman, and therefore have " fixed on this plan which I now write. Do you ac- " quaint Fyzoolla Khan from yourself, that the Nabob " Vizier will settle a jaghire of ten lacks of rupees per " year on him of the Rohilcund country, and he shall " keep two or three thousand men as household servants " along with him; the troops of the Nabob Vizier shall " be stationed in the country; that the troops and Chiefs " of Khuteer Rohilcund shall be taken into service, but " shall not remain with him.

" If this is agreeable to Fyzoolla Khan, do ye write him " to come in to you; when he comes I will have an " interview with him; and if he desires it, shall rent or " superviſe the whole Rohilla country, which shall be " settled face to face; but of whatever effects he may " have, half shall be given to me; and the troops of " Khuteer, or Rohillas, that are with him shall not re- " main."

Thus, Gentlemen, you find, that in emerging from his Hebdomadal purgation, the Vizier became a most devout and excellent Mussulman. The near approach of " these " new Gentlemen" seemed also to operate powerfully on his Excellency.

Agreeably to his wishes I sent a copy of his Letter to the Rohilla Chief, and recommended to him to accept of the Vizier's proposals; at all events to return a speedy reply.

From this time we had very heavy rains for several days successively; and no answer being arrived from Fyzoolla, I wrote him a note on the 25th, demanding an immediate reply.

Afterwards, on the same day, an answer was received from Fyzoolla, importing, that if the Vizier would not grant either of his former requests, fate must determine between them.

I saw no longer any prospects of peace, which I accordingly signified to the Select Committee the same day that the above answer came to hand.

On the 26th the Vizier favoured me with a visit, when it was resolved to move the army nearer to Lall-Dang, as the most probable means of " bringing the Rohillas to " terms."

I ordered the troops to hold themselves in readiness 27th Sept. to march the 29th in the morning, and the division under Colonel Galliez to take the ground occupied by the Grenadier corps.

Well assured of the great advantages the enemy had 28th Sept. in the strength of their situation, sensible that nothing but the strictest observance of good order could ensure our success, and having reason to be suspicious lest the troops, mindful of past neglects, should suffer their discontent to get the better of their moderation, and impel them to disperse in search of plunder, I assembled the Field Officers at head quarters.

Some proposed to stipulate with his Excellency for twenty, some for fifteen, and the most moderate for ten lacks, in lieu of plunder, and that the troops should be acquainted of it before the attack.

I told the Gentlemen, that if his Excellency should offer five lacks, I thought it would be advisable to accept of them, both on account of the imminent danger which would ensue from any disorder of the troops, and the small probability of discovering the riches of a people accustomed to bury their treasure; declaring, however, my wishes that the Vizier might offer a larger sum: the Gentlemen, satisfied of my good inclinations, said no more on the subject.

In conformity to the injunctions of Administration, I Board's Instructions, Paragraph 4th. desired his Excellency to signify in writing, that it was now his pleasure the army should proceed to attack Fyzoolla in his intrenchments; his Excellency accordingly did so.

And though I was unable to mount my horse without assistance, having been confined to my tent by a severe illness from the 19th, I advanced with the front division of the army four cos towards the enemy.

Mention being made to his Excellency of the plunder, he observed, that he had certain intelligence where the riches of the enemy lay buried; that he knew the English could never discover the treasure, and therefore he would not give them one cowrie; a circumstance which I thought it prudent to conceal carefully from the knowledge of the troops.

On the 30th I proceeded four cos further, the brigade under Colonel Galliez taking up our last ground.

" This day I received a Letter from the Select Com- 30th Sept. " mittee of the 8th September, expressing their satisfaction " at the Vizier's intention of terminating the war by an " accommodation, and their hopes that his Excellency " would be disposed to conciliate their affections to his " Government by acceding to lenient terms."

Being now arrived near the Rohillas, who were very strongly posted, and had thrown up works in their front, it became necessary to advance by regular approaches, and before evening a work was established sufficient to cover 1,200 men; but it was agreed to give the enemy the option of accepting the terms offered by his Excellency, or stand the consequences; which was accordingly done in the following Letter:

" This day I am arrived with my army near the foot " of the hills; but as friendship has been formed between " us, I perform my part, and tell you, that ye still have " opportunity of coinciding to the Nabob Vizier's offers

" which

APPENDIX. No. 45. 4th Oct.

" which were before ſent ye, and of coming hither; this " is the beſt advice ye can follow. There has been diſ- " courſe between the Nabob Vizier and me, when the " Nabob ſaid, and confirmed, that whenever you would " accede to his propoſals, that ſomething ſhould be ſet- " tled for every Chief with ye. Now the Nabob Vizier " has ſaid, and has written this conformably to your " requeſt. My advice is this; do you now come here " and agree to this, for I do not deſire that the blood of " the people be ſpilt. Motives of friendſhip induce me " again to write ye on this ſubject. If ye will not accept of " this, and will not come, the fault is not mine, as I have " done every thing in my power. Now for what may " enſue ye and your Chiefs are anſwerable. In caſe ye " conſent, and come in, write me, and I will ſend a pro- " per perſon to conduct ye; in this there is neither pre- " judice or danger. If ye will not agree, let me certainly " have your reply this day."

In the meantime, however, our works were carried on with all poſſible diligence. Buſh-fighting all this day between ſmall ſcouting parties of both armies. A few men of the Nabob's and of the enemy's ſaid to be killed. Adviſed the Committee of the poſture of affairs, and of the laſt offer made to Fyzoolla.

Next morning, 1ſt October, the Rohilla Chief ſent an unſatisfactory reply. I reconnoitred the road ſeveral miles in front. Many ſhot fired by the enemy. Pitched upon a ſpot for eſtabliſhing our ſecond works.

About noon a man came from Fyzoolla to inform me that he would certainly come in next day. I could not give myſelf leave to rely implicitly on his aſſurances; having informed the Vizier of the circumſtance, he expreſſed a ſatisfaction at the news.

Very early on the following morning I advanced, with a ſtrong body of the combined armies, to the ground which had been pitched upon for our ſecond approach; from thence I diſpatched Fyzoolla's meſſenger to inform his maſter, that I was ſo far advanced with the army to pay him a viſit at Lall-Dang. All induſtry uſed to eſtabliſh our poſt. Many ſhot fired in the jungles on our flanks.

About two hours after the Meſſenger's departure a Chief came to inform me, that if our advanced parties were recalled Fyzoolla would come out. At noon notice being brought that he was approaching, I ſent a Field Officer and the Perſian Interpreter to eſcort him through our advanced parties; and on his arrival immediate advice being ſent to his Excellency, he appointed the next morning for receiving him.

Accordingly Fyzoolla was preſented to the Vizier on the third; at that meeting nothing paſſed but compliment; however his Excellency afterwards addreſſed me thus:

" I before wrote ye, that if Fyzoolla Khan would come " in and meet us, a Jaghire for ten lacks of rupees of the " Rohilcund country ſhould be conferred on him; that " he ſhould keep 2 or 3,000 people with him as attend- " ants, and that of his effects half ſhould be taken: now " that he is come in, in conſideration of his coming, I " will preſent him with two lacks more; and twelve " lacks of the Rohilcund country, including his former " diſtricts, ſhall be given as a Jaghire; and of his effects " half ſhall be taken. In this eſtate of twelve lacks Fy- " zoolla Khan is at liberty to keep five perſons or 5,000, " but he muſt not keep one more than 5,000; and to " content him and the people with him I will entertain in " my own ſervice from 10 to 15,000, and they ſhall be " ſtationed where he chuſes, and ſhall receive their pay " from me."

I communicated the Vizier's pleaſure to the Rohilla in the evening; he acknowledged the generoſity of the offer, but remarked, that twelve lacks would be inſufficient for the maintainance of all his relations and dependants, and entreated I would requeſt of the Vizier to increaſe the Jaghire.

I ſaid I would endeavour, but gave him no hopes of ſucceſs; and the following is the Letter which I addreſſed to the Vizier on the ſubject.

" I converſed with Fyzoolla Khan laſt night on the " ſubject of the Jaghire, and told him ye had agreed to " ſettle twelve lacks of rupees on him, which it was " adviſable he accepted; he replied, that he did not " deſire a ſettlement for the troops with him, but that he " had a great number of relations and dependants, who " had been with him from their birth, and from whom he " could not part, and that the twelve lacks of rupees ye " had conferred would be ſmall for the ſupport of the " whole; he therefore entreated ye would graciouſly " beſtow what would be ſufficient for their maintenance. " He hopes ye will be pleaſed to make ſome addition; " and I alſo give ye this trouble, that if ye think it proper " and adviſable to comply, that ye will do ſo; favour " me, however, with your pleaſure in reply."

His Excellency replied, that he could not do more for Fyzoolla Khan: afterwards he ſent his Miniſter, Elich Khan, requeſting to make enquiry concerning Fyzoolla Khan's circumſtances and deſires.

This being done, Fyzoolla gave in a ſtatement, ſpecifying, that he had in ſilver one lack fourteen thouſand rupees, and one lack ſeventeen thouſand three hundred and eighty-eight gold mohurs, which he valued at 20 Berelly rupees each, beſides his jewels and other effects, of which he could not give an eſtimate without returning to his entrenchment. He ſolicited Elich Khan to intercede for him with his Excellency for an increaſe of the Jaghire; and upon Elich Khan's report of theſe matters, the Nabob addreſſed me thus:

" Previous to this ye wrote me, that Fyzoolla Khan " would not accept of a Jaghire of twelve lacks of " rupees; in reply it was written, that if he would not " accept of that ſum ye would return him to the entrench- " ment, as I would not give any thing more. After that " I ſent Elich Khan to ye, to learn the condition, &c. of " Fyzoolla Khan, and from his report I find Fyzoolla " Khan deſires a Jaghire of 14 lacks and 75,000 rupees; " I therefore give you this trouble to acquaint you, that " that ſum is not very great, and in conſideration of Fy- " zoolla Khan's coming in, a Jaghire for 14 lacks and " 75,000 rupees ſhall be given him. Do ye bring " Fyzoolla Khan along with you hither to me to-morrow " morning, and I will give a Jaghire for 14 lacks and " 75,000 rupees, and I will take half his effects. When " ye come I will have farther converſation with ye."

According to his Excellency's requeſt, I waited upon him in the morning of the 6th accompanied by Fyzoolla Khan, when they ſettled the terms of accommodation.

On the 7th his Excellency viſited me; Fyzoolla Khan being ſent for, the mutual writings were framed by his Excellency, and the only amendment made, at the deſire of Fyzoolla, was, that he ſhould be at liberty to correſpond with the Engliſh.

I remarked, that there was no mention made of the diviſion of the effects, upon which his Excellency ſaid, he would be contented with the half, whatever it might be.

It was afterwards found however that the omiſſion was intentional, and with a view to ſqueeze Fyzoolla Khan as much as poſſible: accordingly, from this time till the 14th, the Nabob's Miniſter and Fyzoolla Khan had daily conferences on that ſubject. The Rohilla advanced the equity of the Vizier's accepting half his effects of every kind, conformably to his Excellency's original and repeated ſtipulation; Elich Khan inſiſted on receiving money only: and I alſo, being willing to promote the Nabob's intereſt: Fyzoolla was importuned ſo much that he was conſtrained to give fifteen lacks of rupees in order to ſatisfy the Vizier.

A diſpute then aroſe concerning the ſpecies of rupees; Elich Khan was deſired to go and ſettle that point, and he returned immediately, ſaying, that his Excellency agreed to receive Berelly rupees, and had alſo ſignified his wiſhes to ſee Fyzoolla Khan and me, as he intended to proceed next day towards Fyzabad; I waited on him accordingly, and after ſome converſation we took leave.

His Excellency marched very early next morning; an altercation then enſued between Fyzoolla Khan and Elich Khan, regarding the value of the gold mohurs, which was alſo compromiſed by me, and my deciſion referred to his Excellency, who in the evening tranſmitted to me the following Letter:

" The pains and trouble you have taken in ſettling " this buſineſs of Fyzoolla Khan is beyond the power of " writing to expreſs. In all reſpects you have acted to " my ſatisfaction, and in no reſpect contrary to it: I " eſteem this as pure friendſhip in you."

Thus, Gentlemen, I have given you a particular detail of the tranſactions of the campaign. All the correſpondence which paſſed between Fyzoolla Khan and me is before you. It appears that that carried on at Biſſoulee was duly communicated to the Vizier and to the Governor; that the propoſition for renewing it came from the Nabob himſelf on the 12th October; that the continuation of it was at his expreſs deſire; that I did not take a ſingle ſtep, from the beginning to the end of this buſineſs, but by his direction and approbation, with which you find the whole is cloſed.

In the courſe of what has been premiſed I have therefore already fully confuted the Vizier's calumnies; but I ſhall nevertheleſs glance over his Excellency's Letter once more, and take notice of ſuch parts as may hitherto have eſcaped me.

" Conſider, my friend," ſays his Excellency repeatedly to Mr. Haſtings, " that it was my abſolute determination " to extirpate the Rohillas, and that I requeſted the aſſiſtance " of the Engliſh for that purpoſe."

However well it is known that his Excellency is equal to the barbarous deſign for which he thus publicly and daringly avows he ſolicited the aid of the Engliſh, is it poſſible we can believe that the reſpectable Gentleman here traduced could have been privy to ſo horrid a purpoſe? Could he have ſo entirely overcome the feelings of humanity? Could he have been ſo loſt to every ſenſe of honour, as to proſtitute the Engliſh troops, and to ſtain the glory of the Britiſh name, by ſubſcribing to a preconcerted maſſacre? What is not his Excellency capable of advancing?

" If the Colonel had ever conſulted me on the occa- " ſion, it would not have ſignified; but when I gave him a " clear anſwer, and abſolutely refuſed my conſent to the " propoſals for an accommodation, was it proper for him " to continue the negociations?"

If I had not conſulted him, Gentlemen, how could he have refuſed his conſent? I have already ſhewn, that the moment I was told it could not be for the intereſt of the Company to receive three hundred thouſand pounds for their influence as mediators in an honourable peace, which would have brought four hundred thouſand pounds annually into the coffers of the Vizier, I ſubmitted to the authority with implicit obedience, though I could not chime with the propriety or wiſdom of the doctrine.

I ſhould have thought myſelf excuſable even if I had not conſulted the Vizier on this occaſion; the fact however is, that I did communicate all country correſpondence to him; but his Excellency ſeems to have an inſuperable antipathy to truth.

" At laſt, perceiving that Fyzoolla Khan, encouraged " by his correſpondence with the Engliſh, aſſembled his " forces, and daily became more formidable, I deter- " mined, though it was in the height of the rains, to " bring him to puniſhment."

One part of this ſentence, like the former, deſtroys and belies the other: after the ſetting in of the rains it was impoſſible Fyzoolla Khan could get a reinforcement of men; it was impoſſible he could wiſh for them, becauſe he could not give them grain to feed upon.

But it is demonſtrable that the Vizier himſelf did not believe what is written in that paragraph; he ſays the enemy were encouraged by the Engliſh, and yet he would make the very ſame Engliſh bring thoſe whom he alledges they favoured to puniſhment.

This would indeed be an extraordinary proof of his abſolute power over us, but it would be to carry the idea too far. The Vizier is wiſer than to have undertaken an expedition depending on the ſupport of troops ſuppoſed to be attached to his enemies.

His Excellency knew perfectly well that I was anxious to return to Calcutta, and that I had determined to ſet off in a very few days; if he had entertained any ſuſpicion of my fidelity, would he not have gladly concealed his intentions of moving till after my departure?

" You certainly have not a map of the country, &c."

I remember informing both the Vizier and the Committee that I would march to Nigeebgur; but that I did not think myſelf authorized to go farther; his Excellency obſerved, with an unbecoming air of ridicule, " if Nigeebgur is on the other ſide of the Ganges, or of the " hills, no matter; the Engliſh troops ſhall not go " thither."

Now, Gentlemen, I had told him that I would go to Nigeebgur; wherefore then ſuch a wanton diſplay of petulance? the impropriety of it neither eſcaped the notice of " his ſincere well-wiſher," Mr. Middleton, or of my Interpreter. I pointed at it in my Letter to the Committee, but they ſuffered themſelves to overlook the diſreſpect ſhewn to their Commander in Chief, forgetting, or chuſing to forget, that an indignity to him was in effect an inſult to the Government.

" When we arrived afterwards at Pattergur, and Fy- " zoolla Khan was at the diſtance of 15 coſs from us at " the foot of the mountains, I determined to march for- " ward and attack him; the Colonel again delayed, &c."

I have clearly eſtabliſhed by his Excellency's own Letters, &c. in a regular chain, that the overtures of accommodation made on the 13th Auguſt, and the ſubſequent intercourſe on that ſubject, was at his expreſs deſire: the truth is, that he never had an idea of attacking the enemy; he had declared originally and invariably, that his reſolution was " to ſtarve them."

It was agreed on the 24th to approach nearer them; on the 26th I went twelve miles to look for ground; 27th, a body of his troops were ſent forward by my deſire; on the 28th the whole army advanced; 29th, I rode twenty-eight miles, examining the country; 30th, the Quarter-maſter General pitched on ground for the brigade to advance to, which they did on the 31ſt, in order completely to environ the enemy.

2d September, I found that his Excellency was treating with the enemy, that he had received a Vackeel; and you ſee him buſied in the ſame manner during the remainder of the campaign. After I had offered him the ſervice of the troops to ſtorm the enemy's intrenchments, you find he denied me even the liberty of reconnoitring.

" For four or five days after this, the 24th Auguſt, " the conferences were broke off; after which Omar " Khan and two other Sirdars came from Fyzoolla to me " with propoſals of peace. I aſked them, why they had " taken ſuch meaſures as to oblige me to march againſt " them in the rainy ſeaſon? they replied, we remained " peaceably at the extremity of the Country without any " force; but when a correſpondence was ſet on foot by " means of the Engliſh Chiefs, they wrote to Fyzoolla " Khan to take ſome ſtep that might make it appear that " he was in a ſituation to oppoſe the army of the Vizier, " by which means his affairs would be ſettled. Encou- " raged by the advice of the Engliſh Chiefs, Fyzoolla " Khan aſſembled this number of troops, and ſent them " to Nejeebabad; otherwiſe how would he have taken ſuch " a ſtep?"

From the 23d of Auguſt I had not the leaſt intercourſe with the Rohillas till the 16th September, that I wrote Fyzoolla a Letter, by deſire of the Vizier, offering him the Collectorſhip of Rohilcund. It was about the 14th that Omar Khan and Bahadar Khan had come to his Excellency, in conſequence of Mutiſhim Khan, Abdurihman Khan, Khan, and Meir Moghul, and others, having been repeatedly ſent to the enemy's camp, to prevail with Fyzoolla to ſend out ſome Sirdar to temporize with his Excellency.

The ſtory which he would put into their mouths is truly a knaviſh one; but forgeries of this kind generally detect themſelves.

Omar Khan is a ſoldier, who it is well known has ever held the Vizier's character in deteſtation, Bahadar Khan is the brother-in-law of Fyzoolla; can we ſuppoſe then that theſe two Gentlemen, who had come intruſted with a negociation for their friend, and for their kindred, ſhould have talked to his Excellency in a manner ſo deſtitute of truth, ſo wide of their purpoſe, and had the report been true, ſo ruinous to their intereſt with the Engliſh? moſt certainly we cannot believe it.

His Excellency makes theſe two Chiefs tell him, "that they had no force," which was an abſurdity too groſs for them to have ſaid; he makes them charge Fyzoolla Khan with the folly of increaſing his numbers, at a time when he could not ſubſiſt the troops he already had. His Excellency concludes with making the Chiefs aſk the queſtion, "how could Fyzoolla have taken ſuch a ſtep "as ſending his troops to Nejeebabad, if he had not been "encouraged to do it?"

It would not be more prepoſterous in his Excellency to repreſent them ridiculous enough to have aſked, how it was poſſible that a people in want of food ſhould be ſuſceptible of hunger? the dreadful proſpects of which had made them endeavour to collect all the grain they could before our near approach.

"Our joint forces marched near the encampment of "Fyzoolla, and prepared to attack it; but there was "ſtill a private intelligence between the Colonel and "Fyzoolla, encouraged by which Fyzoolla rode out of "his own encampment, and came to the Colonel."

It is aſtoniſhing with what effrontery his Excellency advances theſe untruths. I have already, Gentlemen, informed you of all the intercourſe I ever had with the Rohillas: I did not write a Letter to any native during the campaign but ſuch as went through my Interpreter; that Gentleman had my Perſian ſeals in his cuſtody from the time I left Benares in March till after my return to Calcutta; and I deſire that he and my Secretary, and every perſon who may be ſuppoſed to have had any ſhare of my confidence, be called before you and interrogated, whether they know or believe that I at any time carried on any ſiniſter correſpondence with the enemy.

"The day Fyzoolla came out, the Engliſh troops were ready to quarrel with mine, &c."

It is the firſt time I have ever heard of it.

Colonel Leſlie and Major Hannay, who commanded the advanced diviſion of the army, are in town, and will, I am perſuaded, if called upon, ſatisfy you that this allegation is totally void of foundation.

"I wrote to the Colonel, that if Fyzoolla would not "agree to theſe offers, to ſend him away; I alſo ſent "Mahomed Elich Khan to explain theſe particulars more "fully to the Colonel."

What explanation did ſo expreſs a deſire require?

The Vizier's own Letter of the 5th October beſt tells why he ſent his Miniſter; "I ſent him to enquire into "Fyzoolla's condition, &c."

"At laſt I ſaw that I ſhould diſpleaſe the Colonel by "inſiſting on the former conditions; I was compelled "to give fourteen lacks and ſeventy-five thouſand rupees "of Country."

The concluſion of my Letter of the 4th October ſpeaks for itſelf how far I went in this matter: "he "(Fyzoolla Khan) hopes he will be pleaſed to make "ſome addition; and I alſo give ye this trouble, that "if ye think it proper and adviſable to comply, that ye "will do ſo; favour me, however, with your pleaſure in "reply."

It was after Elich Khan's interceſſion and report, that his Excellency reſolved to make a ſeeming increaſe of two lacks ſeventy-five thouſand rupees to the twelve lacks formerly offered.

You will admire his Excellency's addreſs and management in this buſineſs.

Inſtead of making a real addition to the Jaghire, he gave diſtricts, which had till then only paid twelve lacks forty-five thouſand rupees, and obliged the Rohilla Chief to receive them at an increaſed valuation of fourteen lacks ſeventy-five thouſand rupees; ſo that in fact his Excellency only made an addition of forty-five thouſand rupees to the twelve lacks offered in his Letter of the 3d October; and in place of a ſettlement of fourteen lacks ſeventy-five thouſand, Fyzoolla only got a Jaghire of twelve lacks forty-five thouſand rupees.

"Briefly, after a great deal of trouble and argument, "this affair was thus ſettled; that Fyzoolla Khan ſhould "give me fifteen lacks of rupees, and take a country "amounting to fourteen lacks ſeventy-five thouſand "rupees. You will conſider that when theſe conferences "were ſet on foot, the Colonel obſerved to me, that "Fyzoolla had one lack and ſome thouſand gold mohurs, "and one lack of rupees, amounting to fifteen or ſix-"teen lacks, of which I ſhould take half; but after-"wards, when the affair was ſettled, Fyzoolla Khan gave "me fifteen lacks of rupees: conſider then, if Fyzoolla "was only poſſeſſed of this much, would he have given "me all his property?"

The firſt and only enquiry regarding the Rohilla Chief's riches was in conſequence of the Nabob's own deſire of the 5th October, and, according to the account given in by Fyzoolla Khan, he had near twenty-five lacks in money, beſides his jewels and effects.

The agreement to give the Jaghire for the fourteen lacks ſeventy-five thouſand rupees was ſigned on the 7th October; but the ſtipulation for the fifteen lacks in lieu of half the effects did not take place till the 15th.

The Vizier purpoſely omitted mention of the effects, to leave room for the after-game which he put in practice; inſomuch, that although the Rohilla repeatedly offered to deliver over half his effects of every kind on oath, the Nabob declined to receive them; hence Fyzoolla was neceſſitated to agree to give a ſum of money nearly equal to two-thirds of all his fortune; for his Excellency not only took fifteen lacks, but the helpleſs Chief was obliged to pay away his gold mohurs at a great diſcount, the Vizier allowing only ſixteen one-half Berelly rupees for each, although I have been aſſured that they uſually paſs in that country for about twenty Berelly rupees: the Nabob therefore owes his getting ſo large a ſhare of the unhappy Fyzoolla's fortune to his Excellency's chicane, not to his juſtice.

After the concluſion of the peace, his Excellency ſays, "then the following propoſition was made to me, that "I ſhould take twenty lacks from Fyzoolla, and give "him the whole Rohilla country."

I never heard of ſuch a propoſition.

"Before I marched from Biſſoulee Mr. Roberts came "to me from the Colonel, and informed me, that con-"ferences for an accommodation with Fyzoolla were on "foot, and that it was adviſable I ſhould agree to them. "My friend, this is called giving advice in Indoſtan; I "think this is for the beſt, and you muſt do ſo. When "the Engliſh Chiefs were continually ſending me theſe "meſſages, how could I refuſe to ſatisfy them?"

Why does his Excellency lead us back to Biſſoulee? we have ſeen the whole that paſſed there; we have ſeen that he rejected the overtures; nay, in the very Letter under conſideration, he ſays, "but when I gave him a "clear anſwer, and abſolutely refuſed my conſent," &c. and yet in another place he has the modeſty to aſk, "how "could I refuſe to ſatisfy the Engliſh Chiefs?"—Strange incongruity! endeavouring by a ſtudied confuſion of times and circumſtances, to make the efforts of low art and cunning ſupply the want of truth and reaſon.

" In the like manner the ſeveral Letters which the " Colonel cauſed me to write at the concluſion of this " affair, I gave out of reſpect for him."

I am greatly indebted to his Excellency for profeſſions, but I cannot ſay that I have ever had occaſion to thank him for any real mark of reſpect. His Excellency in particular owed me no reſpect of the nature he mentions here; for although he applied to me at Biſſoulee, when his ſhameful conduct rendered him odious over all the country, when he was ſpoken of with irreverence even by his own ſlaves, for a Letter or Teſtimony under my hand in his vindication, I declined giving it.

7th July.

Therefore it is improbable that his Excellency's politeneſs, in repugnance to his conviction, would carry him ſo far as to pay me a compliment, which my regard to truth had made me deny to him.

It was matter of no moment whether I had received the Letter of the 15th October or not, thoſe which his Excellency addreſſed to me ſo frequently during the courſe of the negociation being very ſufficient to ſhew that I was guided by his pleaſure.

I therefore owe nothing to his Excellency's reſpect for me; but I owe much to that part of the Board's inſtructions, which directed me to do nothing material without requiring his Excellency's deſire in writing; for if I had not got that " neceſſary precaution," as it was emphatically called by thoſe who knew his Excellency better than I did, it is probable I ſhould have truſted too much to his word, and not have had theſe written authorities to produce in ſupport of my conduct.

There cannot be a more ſtriking inſtance of his meanneſs than the preſent: in order, as he apprehends, the better to gloſs over the innumerable liberties he has taken with truth, he has laid aſide all the dignity of a man, and condeſcended to ſubject himſelf to the opinion of being thought a dupe.

On the ſame ſyſtem he might ſay, that the Letter which he addreſſed to Mr. Haſtings, promiſing the forty lacks to the Company, was mere matter of courteſy; indeed we have detected him in endeavouring to falſify that Letter.

17th April. Letter to the Governor.

I foretold as early as April 1774, about the time we entered the Rohilla country, how his Excellency would act regarding that money.

With reſpect to the refuſal of two battalions to accompany him to Subah, he aſked for none; he deſired the brigade, or at leaſt two battalions, might be left at Sukertal, which I refuſed, but not without aſſigning reaſons that appeared ſufficient to his Excellency.

" An Engliſh Gentleman plundered a Chief in my " army of a pallankeen and four looking-glaſſes, &c."

The eaſy temper of this Chief, in ſuffering himſelf to be robbed with impunity, is not perfectly conſiſtent with the character of heroiſm and independent ſpirit, which his Excellency would elſewhere attribute to his Sirdars.

The Vizier would bring our troops even under a level with his own banditti; and truly his Excellency has exemplified the depredations of the Engliſh by an inſtance worthy of himſelf. It is painful to follow him through his jumble of untruths and inconſiſtencies; but as this accuſation is derogatory to the character of Engliſh officers, it becomes neceſſary to enquire into the ſtory of the Chief of the Mirrors.

The pallankeen alluded to was ſaid to have been loſt on the 23d April, on the field of battle.

Whilſt his Excellency was exulting over the pale head of Hafiz, whilſt we ſhould ſuppoſe that joy at his ſucceſs had entirely occupied his mind, we find it ſuſceptible of meanneſſes; for the very next day after the action he complained of the loſs his Sirdar had met with, and alledged that the articles taken from him were in the poſſeſſion of ſome perſon belonging to the 10th battalion of Sepoys.

In conſequence of this repreſentation, I directed one of my Aid-de-Camps to write a note to Captain Bevan, deſiring the pallankeen might be delivered up if it could be found.

Captain Bevan addreſſed himſelf in anſwer:

" To Captain Allan Macpherſon, Aid-de-Camp.

" Sir,

" My Commandant yeſterday took the ſhell of a pal- " lankeen cut in two in three places, from which cir- " cumſtance I ſhould imagine it is not the one meant; " however, I have ordered him to deliver it to the " bearer, agreeable to the Commander in Chief's orders, " which you will pleaſe to acquaint him of."

The Nabob's people kept the ſaid ſhell; notwithſtanding which his Excellency ſent me another meſſage concerning the pallankeen, and my Aid-de-Camp wrote a ſecond time to Captain Bevan.

" The Nabob has again ſpoke to the Colonel upon " the ſubject of the pallankeen I before wrote you about, " and perſiſts that it is in the poſſeſſion of ſome one of " your battalion.

" The Commander in Chief therefore directs, that " you will be pleaſed to order it to be delivered up to the " bearer, who is to have permiſſion to go into the lines " of your battalion to ſhew you where it is."

Captain Bevan replied,

" Sir,

" You will pleaſe to acquaint the Commander in Chief " that I have given the Nabob's man permiſſion to go " through my lines, and if there is any pallankeen there " that he can lay proper claim to, I will order it to be " delivered to him; but at the ſame time muſt requeſt, " that as the pallankeen I formerly ſent was not the one " required, it may be returned to my Commandant, " whoſe property it is."

I heard nothing more concerning any pallankeen, excepting that, a conſiderable time afterwards, ſome of the Nabob's people impudently forced from a ſervant of Enſign Ramſay a pallankeen bamboo, which it was found belonged to that Officer.

This is another circumſtance that may well ſerve to illuſtrate the degree of inſolence at which even the Nabob's menial ſervants had arrived.

" Wherever the Engliſh army encamped they com- " mitted ſuch violences on all the villages around them, as " to render them quite deſolate, &c. My Friend, theſe, " theſe things were the wealth of theſe poor people!"

Poor people, indeed, who were unfortunate enough to fall into the iron gripe of Sujah!

Though ſuch a liberty with the diſcipline of the troops is one of thoſe extravagancies which carries its own diſcredit along with it, yet it is ſuch a reflection on the Engliſh army, and on me as Commander in Chief, that I muſt requeſt of you, Gentlemen, to call upon Colonel Galliez, Major M'Kenzie, and other Field Officers of the ſecond brigade, to give you a Report upon honour of the behaviour of the troops during the Rohilla war.

It may not in the meantime be improper to obſerve, that on our way from Shabad to Peelebut it was uſual to ſend ſafeguards to the villages contiguous to head quarters, to preſerve them from deſtruction; but the moment the Sepoys were withdrawn to proceed on their march, the villages were ſet on flames by way of bonfire for his Excellency.

Afterwards, when we were cantoned at Biſſoulee, many Jemidars, who reſided at the diſtance of ten, twenty, and thirty miles, very frequently ſent to entreat for even one Sepoy to protect them; and though they could not always be ſupplied, it is ſufficient to ſhew the opinion which the natives entertained of our troops.

Beſides my Aid-de-Camps, who had the charge of detaching theſe Sepoys, ſeveral other Officers in town are perfectly acquainted with theſe circumſtances.

The apprehenſions with which his Excellency ſays his mind was agitated, and the dreadful ſuppoſitions he has made, in order to give an ideal proof of his fidelity to the Engliſh, by an imaginary ſlaughter of thouſands of his own troops, is too chimerical to deſerve any notice.

But we cannot forget that his people, after his own example, by an unpardonable arrogance of deportment, often put the temper and patience of the Engliſh to trial; a daring inſtance of which happened to Lieutenant Charles Forbes, who, in the preſence of another Gentleman and ſeveral of our Sepoys, was told by an Officer of the Nabob, that he would be the means of his Excellency's not only having his (Mr. Forbes) coat ſtript from his back, but his ears cut off.

Such inſolence was well calculated to ferment the minds of our troops, and an Officer of leſs diſcretion than Mr. Forbes would have cut down the miſcreant; yet the Vizier never gave the leaſt ſatisfaction for the indignity; and it is well known that my ſervants have been beat, and my baggage thrown on the ground, by the Nabob's people.

His Excellency is very unſeaſonable in his raillery regarding the unfortunate family of Hafiz, and there is a palpable impertinence towards me in his manner of expreſſion. Although he could not command the winds, he had it in his power to have treated the captives with tenderneſs; he could have ordered it ſo, that theſe illuſtrious priſoners ſhould not have been diſtreſſed for food or raiment; yet the truth is, that they were covered with vermin, were reduced to the ſevere neceſſity of making ſupplications for private charity, and actually received alms from ſeveral Gentlemen.

But the Minutes which my Aid-de-Camp took down from Reports of truſty Hircarrahs ſtationed for the purpoſe of bringing faithful intelligence regarding the priſoners, will ſpeak more plainly their miſerable ſituation, and at the ſame time prove how moderate I was when under examination on theſe ſubjects, and how reluctant I have hitherto been to enlarge on the exceſſes of the Nabob.

His behaviour to the families of Mahubullah Khan, and his brother Fitte Ullub Khan, who poſſeſſed a country of about twenty lacks of rupees per annum, was yet more criminal.

Before the commencement of the war he correſponded with them, and upon his aſſurances of protection and friendſhip they remained at peace at Biſſoulee, the capital of their diſtrict.

He wrote to them on the 23d of March in theſe words:

" I have received your Addreſs, the particulars of " which are clearly underſtood. Ye are very dear to me, " and have been long impreſſed on my heart: I there- " fore write, that ye may remain in your own poſſeſſions " in Biſſoulee in perfect ſecurity, and raiſe no commotions. " To what I write hereafter you will act conformably, " and you will ſooth and ſatisfy all Rohillas who are diſ- " poſed to obey me. By the favour of God no one " ſhall receive injury. The families of Robillas I regard " *as my own. Let all remain in their habitations."

On the 4th of April his Excellency addreſſed them as follows:

" Previous to this Meir Golawn Mahomed Khan will " have arrived with you, and made you acquainted " with whatever was neceſſary. By the bleſſing of God " there is not the ſmalleſt difference between us; nay, there " is the firmeſt friendſhip, and all will be well.

" Regarding the deva[illegible]ation of your country, I " have avoided marching through it. Remain per- " fectly at eaſe where you are; whatever is befitting " will be performed on my part, and all will be well. It " is neceſſary you regard me as a friend in this affair. " Whatever Meir Golawn Mahomed Khan has engaged " for, I will not depart from." APPENDIX No. 45.

Subſequent to the above Letter, his Excellency ſent a Letter to the ſaid Chiefs, and to their mother the Begum, in theſe terms:

" Your Addreſs is received. What you write, that " Meir Golawn Khan is arrived, and has related all par- " ticulars, and that ye will act agreeably thereto, relying " firmly on my friendſhip, is clearly underſtood. It is " manifeſt that I have long had true regard for your fami- " lies; and now that ye renew our former union, all will " moſt certainly be well. Nothing ſhall be wanting on " my part for your benefit, for I wiſh for your good and " proſperity. I am now marching by your boundaries " by way of Cundſeroon, &c. It behoves that ye remain at " home in perfect ſecurity, and firm to your agreements."

Upon the faith of theſe Letters the deluded Chiefs remained in their habitations, in full confidence of being treated as friends by the Nabob, and of being left undiſturbed in their poſſeſſions.

The moment he arrived at Biſſoulee, however, they were put into rigorous confinement, denied acceſs to their families, robbed of their property, and themſelves and their women treated not only with diſhonour and indignity, but even with cruelty.

The unhappy Chiefs preferred frequent complaints to me in the moſt moving terms, and ſent the Nabob's original Letters, to prove how much he had deceived them.

" He has deprived us of our country, of our riches, 27th May. " and even of our honour; and not ſatisfied with that, he is " going to ſend us priſoners to Fyzabad. We deſire no " country, no riches, no houſes; but at Biſſoulee are the " tombs of our noble anceſtors; near them, under ſome " ſhade, we beg permiſſion to ſpend the remainder of " our days as Faquiers. Relying on the Vizier's pro- " miſes, we remained in this country, otherwiſe we " ſhould have fled as the other Chiefs did, and have pre- " ſerved our characters and honours; theſe he has taken " away with our effects; and how he has diſhonoured us is 3d June. " known to all."

It was this deceitful conduct, this inhuman treatment, that filled the minds of all the fugitive Chiefs with ſuch a diſtruſt and deteſtation of the Nabob.

And although my repreſentations of the diſtreſſes of the family of Hafiz were ungraciouſly received, and I am ſorry to ſay, gave me but little encouragement to plead the cauſe of the unhappy, yet I regret exceedingly that I have ſo long ſuppreſſed my inclinations of endeavouring to alleviate the miſfortunes of the much-injured Chiefs to whom theſe Letters were addreſſed, and who, as well as the family of Hafiz, I have good reaſon to believe, are even now ſtinted of the neceſſaries of life; and when I was on the way down, I received the affecting accounts of the death of twenty-five of theſe ill-fated priſoners, ſince their arrival at Allahabad, for want of ſuſtenance.

" Whoever has loſt a father and brother in war, has " fallen from the dignity of a throne and become a pri- " ſoner, will undoubtedly ſuffer much miſery."

The analogy between the ſtyle of this paragraph, and of a Letter which I received ſome time ago from another quarter on the ſame ſubject, is worthy of obſervation.

We grant that the fall of a father and of a brother, and the loſs of a throne, were ſufficient cauſes for impreſſing the ſouls of the family of Hafiz with ſorrow: but what ſhall we think of that unfeeling man who added cruelty to the burthen of their afflictions? What ſhall we ſay of him who, in violation of all faith, in breach of every ſacred tie, under the artful maſk of diſſembled friendſhip, not only robbed the family of Deondy Khan of their

* Such was the Vizier's regard for the Rohillas, and ſuch his regard for humanity, that he refuſed to give any aſſiſtance, either in tranſporting their Wounded to our hoſpitals, or in burying their Dead.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

throne, but even deſpoiled them of their honour; and, not contented with depriving them of their liberty, has imbittered the draught of their misfortunes by unexampled ſeverity in their bondage?

You find theſe unhappy people in the utmoſt dread leſt the Nabob ſhould hear of their complaints; let me therefore hope and entreat, Gentlemen, that whatever it may be your pleaſure to do in their favour, may be ſo ordered and concerted, as that they may not be expoſed to the implacable reſentment of Sujah.

Towards the concluſion of the Nabob's Letter we find mention made of Colonel Macleane. I have hitherto been much at a loſs to account for that Gentleman's expedition to the army, and more ſo to divine the cauſes of his ſpeedy return.

He quitted his Budgerow at Buxar, and in fifteen days, including thoſe he halted, arrived at our encampment, in the extremity of the Rohilla country, having travelled above ſix hundred miles in nine days. He had hardly got to camp when he talked of leaving it. If he had not been ſo much on wing, I ſhould have ſuppoſed that he came up in the way of his duty; but deferring the comptrolling of accounts till ſome future opportunity, he ſet off again in a very few days. In thirty-two hours he reached Biſſoulee, diſtant above one hundred and forty miles from our camp; but having overtaken the Nabob and Mr. Middleton there, he found it convenient to abate of his haſte, made eaſy journies, and accompanied his Excellency to Lucknow.

It is not obvious what buſineſs Colonel Macleane, either in the character of Commiſſary General of Stores, or Comptroller General of Accounts, could have with the Vizier; yet if his Excellency had ſaid that he had been conſulting Mr. Macleane on eſtabliſhments of that nature, or on ſubjects connected with his office, I ſhould have been willing to have thought ſo.

But when he declares that he has been converſing with Colonel Macleane, who was an entire ſtranger to him, on matters totally foreign to that Gentlemen's department; when I conſider that I received no intimation from the Preſident regarding Colonel Macleane's expedition; that he did not trouble himſelf with the duties of his office, which was the only pretence he had for his journey; when I conſider that the Governor had been ſolicitous to prevent the Gentlemen of the army from having acceſs to the Vizier; and that, notwithſtanding a poſitive prohibition againſt any Officer's viſiting the Nabob without my permiſſion, Colonel Macleane had a particular and private introduction to him: in ſhort, when his hurry to join the army, his abrupt departure, his rapid journey to Biſſoulee, his ſudden and extraordinary intimacy with the Vizier, his private conferences with his Excellency as a boſom friend, his courteous jaunt to Lucknow, his poſting from thence in ten days, and arriving at Calcutta nearly about the ſame time with the Vizier's Letter; I ſay, when theſe and other circumſtances are conſidered collectively, I cannot help thinking it impoſſible that all could be accident.

It is not eaſy to develope tranſactions of this nature; but his Excellency was ill-adviſed when he wrote, "I "have related all more particularly to Colonel Macleane, "who will inform you of them." This unguarded ſentence reflects a great deal of light, and the veil is no longer more than a cobweb.

I am concerned that his Excellency took the liberty of treating Colonel Macleane ſo ungracefully, as to make him the vehicle of ſuch malevolence and calumny; and I am exceedingly ſurprized that the Gentleman could condeſcend to become an agent in ſuch a buſineſs: at all events, it would have been no more than candid in Colonel Macleane, when he did me the favour of deſiring to audit my bills before the reſignation of his office, to have informed me of theſe manœuvrings.

"Mr. Middleton will alſo write you on theſe ſubjects; "I conſult him on all affairs."

Here his Excellency has removed the curtain entirely, and although he has not perhaps brought forth all the characters who were buried behind it, yet ſuch hints have eſcaped him, as leave us very little at a loſs for the complete dramatis perſonæ.

"I am very much pleaſed with Mr. Middleton's good "conduct; he is a very ſenſible, intelligent man, and a "very ſincere well-wiſher of mine."

If I did not think favourably of Mr. Middleton, I ſhould be induced, from his Excellency's mode of expreſſion, to believe that the one had agreed to ſound the eulogium of the other.

"I have been ſpoken to on this ſubject by the Colonel, "who ſays, that Mr. Middleton was appointed to collect "the money due to the Company, and that he has no "buſineſs to interfere in any other matter."

This paragraph bears ſo little connection with the preceding parts of the Letter, that it ſeems rather introduced as a complaint of Mr. Middleton's than of his Excellency.

It is true I thought Mr. Middleton rather officious, and I repeatedly delared that he had no buſineſs with military affairs; but as I afterwards had it under a reſpectable ſignature, that the young Gentleman did not concern himſelf in ſuch matters, I was willing, till now, to have perſuaded myſelf that I had been miſtaken.

I would gladly ſuppoſe Mr. Middleton did not intend any diſreſpect to me by his interferences with the province of the Commander in Chief; and although I am ignorant of what he has written on the ſubject which his Excellency mentions, I truſt it is perfectly conſiſtent with his ſentiments of the Vizier, of whom, I muſt do Mr. Middleton the juſtice to ſay, he entertains a very proper opinion.

"I have had ſo many proofs of his Excellency's de-"viating from truth, as well as violating his promiſe, "that I know not how to believe his aſſurances."

With theſe ſentiments of Mr. Middleton's I ſhould cloſe this Addreſs, Gentlemen, but that I find it neceſſary to trouble you yet a little further.

Since my arrival in town, I have been told that it was unfortunate the Rohilla war was not concluded "a month earlier."

Whether this was intended as a ſupplement to the Vizier's Letter I know not, but I conſider the connection very ſtrong.

When I left Calcutta to go on the late expedition, the Members of Adminiſtration declared they would think it fortunate if the war could be finiſhed "in two years:" obſerve what happened; ſeven-eighths of the Rohilla country was conquered, and in the undiſturbed poſſeſſion of the Vizier, and the Company's engagements to his Excellency fully performed, in leſs than three weeks from the commencement of the war.

He was in the collection of three-eighths of the country more than it was neceſſary to put into his hands, in order to have entitled us to the forty lacks.

The ſecond campaign, in which, upon the authority of the late Adminiſtration themſelves, I deny the Company were under any obligation of being a party, was finiſhed in two months.

In fine, the Articles of Peace were ſigned in little more than five months from the beginning of the war, including a receſs of three months which we had at Biſſoulee; yet the very ſame Gentlemen who had allotted two years for this buſineſs, and theſe Gentlemen only, are now diſſatisfied that it was not concluded a month earlier.

And why? becauſe in that caſe theſe tranſactions might poſſibly have been leſs attended to.

But wherefore ſlur over meaſures in this manner? or how could it be expected they ſhould eſcape unnoticed?

The public have for ſome time been very obſervant of, and very minute in their enquiries regarding the tranſactions in this country.

Whenever the Adminiſtration of a commercial body take upon themſelves a military character, they become reſponſible for their conduct, not only to their immediate conſtituents, but to the ſtate.

The Guardians of the glory of Britain are ever on the watch, leſt any ſtain ſhould be brought on the honour of the empire.

The principles upon which the Rohilla war was undertaken, the mode on which the Vizier choſe to conduct it, could not paſs unobſerved.

We may well ſay of the Britiſh, that they are the modern Romans; their Senate could never overlook the proſtitution of the national honour, in ſubjecting a Britiſh General to the command of an infidel Prince.

If theſe meaſures were improper, the concluſion of the war, or ſooner or later, could not juſtify them.

I have, in the preceding part of this Addreſs, clearly ſhewn that there was no unneceſſary delay on my part; and I muſt here beg leave to tranſcribe a Letter which I wrote to the Governor, under date the 11th October.

" Had there appeared any urgent neceſſity of preſſing " upon the Rohillas immediately after our arrival at " Pattergur, it is probable that, notwithſtanding the ſcru- " ples which I entertained with regard to the extent " of my authority, I ſhould not have been able to have " overcome my inclinations of attacking; but as the " Marattas, even ſuppoſing a certainty of their intentions " to diſturb the Vizier, could not reach the Doab earlier " than December; as the Rohillas were ſhut up, and " could only receive ſcanty ſupplies from the country " between the hills; as a delay in the attack of courſe " ſubjected them to greater diſtreſs, and tended to " weaken and render them leſs capable of taking ad- " vantage of the ſtrength of their ſituation; as it would " have been highly imprudent to enter the jungle which " ſurrounds them till after the heavy fall of rain " uſual at the equinox; as the attack, ſuppoſing it moſt " ſucceſsful, could have only made the enemy retire " further into the country between the hills; as this " would have entirely defeated the Vizier's intentions of " cruſhing or making the Rohillas his friends before " any other Power could make head againſt him; as the " natural ſtrength of the enemy's poſt would put the " credit of the Company's arms to the teſt; as the ſmall " ſhare of reputation which I have had the good fortune " of acquiring in the courſe of long ſervice was at ſtake; " as I could not have aſſured myſelf of approbation, in " caſe I riſked the attack and had failed; as the Vizier " very earneſtly, and from the moſt prudential motives, " wiſhed to re-eſtabliſh friendſhip with Fyzoolla Khan; " and as I was for ſome time ill of a ſevere indiſpoſition: " in ſhort, Sir, as there did not appear a ſingle reaſon in " favour of an earlier advance than was made; and as, " on the contrary, every conſideration that could weigh " with me, either as a General, or in a political view, " argued very ſtrongly againſt any attack at all, I am " perfectly ſatisfied with the iſſue which matters have " had; and it is my firm hope and wiſh, that the " honourable and ſpeedy concluſion to which the Rohilla " war has been brought may give you ſincere pleaſure, " and add to that reputation which you have ſo juſtly " acquired in your Adminiſtration."

And I repeat it, Gentlemen, that no occurrence brought more credit to that Adminiſtration than the honourable period put to the Rohilla war, which has in ſome meaſure done away the reproach that was ſo wantonly brought upon the Engliſh name.

I am confident that even a few of the reaſons urged in the above Letter, would carry to any unprejudiced mind a conviction of the propriety of my conduct; but many others might be added.

The Engineer had informed me, in his deſcription of the road to Lall Dang, that there was no ground for encampment within leſs than ſixteen miles, and that there was not a drop of water nearer the enemy's poſt than twelve miles. APPENDIX. No. 45.

In a ſubſequent Letter he obſerved, " the people we " have been among are ſtrong and robuſt; they ſeem " not to be affected by their preſent ſituation; are of a " haughty and independent temper, and conſider their " Sirdars more as kinſmen than commanders."

The Gentlemen of the late Adminiſtration may have been more able politicians; they muſt have known better than I could how to make up the Company's Inveſtment; but it can be no compliment to myſelf to ſay, that I was the beſt judge how to conduct military operations.

Very long experience had taught me to know, that a cloſe attack with Sepoys ought if poſſible to be avoided; becauſe it has hitherto been impracticable to make them keep their order and preſerve their fire.

I have very often been an eye-witneſs of their miſconduct in that particular, and had a recent and remarkable proof of it on the 23d of April, when one of the battalions ſent from the ſecond line to drive off a body of the enemy who galled our right flank, fell into immediate diſorder, and fired in the air twenty deep, although they had an European Officer to every diviſion, and were in an open plain: what then was to be expected in the jungles?

One ſhould imagine too, that a ſcarcity of ammunition might be admitted as a good reaſon why an Officer ſhould be cautious of engaging an enemy.

I carried a much larger quantity to the field than the regulations allowed carriage for, and yet we had no more than forty-five rounds per man when we left Biſſoulee in the height of the rains.

I had made indents to the ſeveral magazines for ſupplies to arrive with the army in due time for opening the campaign at the uſual ſeaſon; and on the 24th July, in conſequence of the reſolution of taking the field in the rains, I directed Lieutenant Colonel Muir to forward one hundred thouſand rounds of muſket ammunition from Chunar to Ramgaut; and although that attentive Officer took every poſſible meaſure to expedite its arrival, yet the ammunition did not reach the place of deſtination till the campaign was over, owing to the rapidity and force of the current.

I had applied to the Vizier very frequently, as Mr. Middleton well knows, for the loan of as much lead as would make one hundred thouſand muſket balls, yet I never could get an ounce from his Excellency; ſo that we really had not ammunition enough for the attack, much leſs a proviſion for the event of a retreat.

The troops had been neglected by the Vizier, and were greatly diſcontented; the conſequence of diſorder amongſt them threatened deſtruction to us all. The Vizier's uniform plan was to have ſtarved the enemy into terms; my inclinations to mercy were proportioned to that degree of odium which our concern in the Rohilla perſecution had brought upon us. The idea I had formed, upon the faith of good intelligence, of the ſtrength of the enemy's poſt, made me believe our ſucceſs would be very precarious; and the opinions of the Engineers, which I afterwards took, will ſatisfy you, Gentlemen, that it was fortunate we were not obliged to riſk the reputation of our arms, and all the advantages we had gained, ſo unneceſſarily. Lieutenant Bruce, whoſe opinion of the ſpirit and diſpoſition of the Rohillas you have ſeen, talking of their poſt, ſays, " from " this the road leads directly under the hills to a ſecond " paſſage over the Sewaſſa, where from the heights a " handful of reſolute men are capable of oppoſing a conſider- " able army.

" To the Southward of the river lies the ſpot where " the families of the Rohillas reſided; but before we " could reach that, it would have been abſolutely neceſ- " ſary

APPENDIX. No. 45.

" ſary to have gained the ſummit of the ſurrounding " hills; the ſlaughter that would have been the conſe- " quence of ſuch an attempt, if we conſider that the " Rohillas were fighting for their families, muſt un- " doubtedly have been dreadful."

Captain Penman expreſſes himſelf thus:

" In order to gain this poſt, it is neceſſary to ford the " river ſeveral times; and as the banks are very high " and ſteep, and covered with trees and jungles, the " paſſages might be diſputed with great advantages to " the Rohillas. The natural ſtrength of this poſt is " greater than can well be deſcribed, and I am confident " that a handful of reſolute men might baffle the attempts " of the moſt daring aſſailants: nor could any thing, in " my humble opinion, be more dangerous than to lead " a body of native troops to ſuch an attack, as I have " always underſtood that it is almoſt impoſſible to pre- " vent Sepoys from throwing away their fire, by which " means they would of courſe fall a ſacrifice."

For a further illuſtration of this ſubject, I produce copies of the plans taken by theſe two Engineers, and of their opinions at large.

Even the fulleſt inſtructions from the Select Committee, which, by the way, let me obſerve I did not receive till after the peace, did not authorize me to proceed into the hill country at all; and yet the enemy were actually entrenched between the hills.

The deſire of ſatisfying the Vizier, however, and my wiſhes of obliging thoſe whom I knew ſupported his Excellency, had prevailed on me to go much greater lengths than perhaps I ought to have done.

I had acquainted the Committee on the 17th Auguſt of the Vizier's being in poſſeſſion of Pattergur, &c. " the main body of the Rohillas, ſaid ſtill to conſiſt of " about forty thouſand, are penned up at Lall Dang, " within ſixteen coſs of us, &c."

In anſwer the Committee were pleaſed to expreſs themſelves thus:

" The ſervice being completed wherein the brigade " was engaged under your command, a repetition of " our thanks is due to you, and to the troops who " effected it."

Thus, Gentlemen, although they were adviſed of the enemy's being within ſo ſhort a diſtance of us, they again pronounced the ſervice completed.

I beg your attention to the ſituation in which the receipt of this Letter placed me.

When it came to hand I was within ſix coſs of the enemy; and let the event have been what it would, I muſt have puſhed forward if the Rohillas had perſiſted in declining the Vizier's offer.

What would have been the conſequence if the army had been repulſed or greatly thinned, which muſt have been the caſe even upon the moſt favourable ſuppoſition. Would not the above paragraph have been laid hold of to throw the whole upon my ſhoulders?

The Company would have had great reaſon to ſay, our Adminiſtration made a ſtrange bargain with the Vizier, and our Commander in Chief has been obſtinate in ſervility. Our Preſident ſtipulated, that we ſhould receive forty lacks if an agreement took place between Sujah and the Rohillas; we were to receive forty lacks if half the Rohilla country was conquered, and we are to receive no more for ſubduing the whole.

Our Adminiſtration declared the forty lacks to be due in May; payment was demanded early in June; and yet a ſecond expedition was undertaken, and approved of, without any regard to our intereſt, or making any new ſtipulation for our advantage.

Not content with reducing the whole country, our Commander in Chief took upon himſelf, even after the Adminiſtration had a ſecond time declared the ſervice completed, to embark in a dangerous undertaking, and, without the ſhadow of advantage to us, has precipitated our army to deſtruction, and endangered even our exiſtence in Indoſtan.

Such would very naturally be the language of the Gentlemen in the Direction, had their army been repelled, or had they even been victorious at the expence of a great number of lives unneceſſarily thrown away; and I muſt confeſs that I think their higheſt indignation would be moſt juſtly excited.

Suppoſing however our ſucceſs out of the queſtion, and that the Rohillas had all been cut off, what benefit would have derived—what profit to the Company?

The Adminiſtration had declared the forty lacks due in May, and they were not to reap any farther advantage; but admitting, for a moment, that the Gentlemen in Leadenhall-ſtreet were of ſo forgiving a diſpoſition as to overlook the neglect of the Company's intereſt, would they not be incenſed at the wanton ſacrifice of above one hundred thouſand lives?

The language of the Britiſh Senate on ſuch an occaſion would be very ſerious.

We condeſcend to admit of your keeping a military force for the preſervation of your factories and the protection of your trade; you have abuſed our indulgences, have entered into an unprovoked war, have hired out his Majeſty's ſubjects for your private emolument, and to crown all, have brought an indelible ſtain on your country by the maſſacre of an innocent people.

The Company would throw the blame upon their Adminiſtration, and theſe Gentlemen would endeavour to transfer it to the Commander in Chief.

I thank God it is out of their power: I have often ſucceſsfully fought the battles of the Company, and have acquired them riches, and to myſelf renown; I have been the aſſerter of their neglected rights; I have been mercifully diſpoſed towards a perſecuted people, and have endeavoured to alleviate the affliction of the miſerable and unhappy; I have ſtood forth for the honour of Humanity, and for the glory of my King and of my Country.

If theſe are crimes, Gentemen, permit me to ſtand condemned, and, worſe than death, let the ſentence be diſhonour: but if theſe are not crimes, let thoſe beware who have wantonly accuſed me of their being ſo.

I ſhould now, Gentlemen, offer an apology for the prolixity of this addreſs, but that would be to ſpin it out longer: I have an apology to make, but it is of a very different nature; it is for that implicit ſubmiſſion, bordering I am afraid on extreme humility, which I manifeſted towards the Vizier, and towards thoſe who ſupported him.

Military men have in this country ſtood always in a diſagreeable predicament; lorded over by every young man who could ſcrawl a waſte-book, or poſt a ledger, the ſoldier's fire was ſmothered; or, if from any Officer a ſpark of liberty broke forth, thoſe Gentlemen, grown up to Counſellors, pronounced his fate—DISMISSION.

And although ſuch a fate could not prevail on me to act in any manner inconſiſtent with honour, yet it muſt be allowed that ſuch a conſideration would weigh much with every man of prudence, who had dedicated his life to the ſervice, and had been habituated to the obedience of many orders repugnant to his own feelings.

I will not treſpaſs longer on your patience, Gentlemen: to conclude therefore,

It is an eaſy matter to accuſe, but allegations unſupported, as the Vizier's, fall of themſelves.

Conſcious that no man was ever more injuriouſly aſperſed than I have been, and ſenſible of the diſrepute into which his Excellency has irrecoverably plunged himſelf, it might perhaps be enough for me to have ſaid, I defy the ſlanderer; and it is not incumbent upon me to prove a negative.

It too frequently happens that the moſt irreproachable are thus maliciouſly accuſed; and though they cannot be formally condemned, yet I am afraid the generality of mankind are ſo prone to think ungenerouſly of their fellows, that innocent men often lay under the moſt unjuſt imputations: happy he, who in ſuch a ſituation can put his hand on his breaſt, and ſay, All is quiet, all is ſerenity within.

Fortunately for me, however, Gentlemen, on this occaſion, I have been able to ſtand forth; I have bearded the calumniator, and have brought ſuch a load of truth upon his back as ſhall make the burthen irkſome.

Fort William, (Signed)
30th January 1775. A. Champion.

Secret Conſultations, Fort William, 26th April 1775.

Extract of Letter from Mr. Briſtow to the Governor General and Council; dated 11th April 1775.

In conſequence of your commands, I have made enquiry concerning the ſurviving parts of the families of Hafiz Rhamut and the other Rohilla Chiefs; the encloſed account of their names and ſituation will explain every thing relative to their preſent circumſtances.

At ſeveral interviews with his Excellency I urged him to grant thoſe at Allahabad their freedom, and ſome certain and honourable proviſion; but as he is exceedingly jealous of them, he refuſed to do either; and ſaid, in regard to a proviſion for them, that he allowed them as much as he was able. On the Nabob's deputing Murtehzeb Khan to Fyzabad, he directed him to ſeize all the effects of the widow of Saad ulla Khan; I had no intelligence of it till after his departure, and then only as a report, which I did not credit, and aſked his Excellency whether it was true; he poſitively denied it. Two or three days after I was told for certain that ſuch an order had been iſſued; it then became my duty to enter into a particular explanation of the meaning of the Honourable Board in interceding for the families of the Rohilla Chiefs, which I accordingly did in a written repreſentation in the Perſian language, a copy of which I herewith encloſe. I reſpectfully deſired to be favoured with an anſwer in writing, agreeable to which I would inform the Honourable Board. I had always before this met with the politeſt treatment from his Excellency; but after he had read my repreſentation, he of a ſudden adopted a different mode of behaviour, ſaid the Engliſh wanted to releaſe his enemies, but he on his part would never conſent to it: I deſired him to conſider the matter deliberately, and then reply, for I was perſuaded the Honourable Board would liſten to his reaſons with great willingneſs, and be happy on all occaſions of ſhewing their regard for him. In the courſe of the converſation his Excellency obſerved, that unleſs he ſhould conceive it for his intereſt, he would never comply with any propoſal, or inſert any condition in the new Treaty not ſpecified in the former ones ſubſiſting with his late father, in which no mention was made of granting freedom to the families of the Rohilla Chiefs, and conſequently no obligation on him to do it.

In regard to the new Treaty, Murtehzeb Khan has ſo much influence with his maſter, that I had determined to wait until his return before I made any propoſals; indeed the Nabob had himſelf requeſted it of me; and, excepting when he ſtarted the ſubject, I have never mentioned it; and then only to communicate ſuch matters as were neceſſary, and the Honourable Board directed.

Though his Excellency both denied his having ordered the effects of the widow of Saad ulla Khan to be ſeized, and promiſed me it ſhould not be done, yet he had directed it, and there was really at one time guards placed upon her houſe: as a proof I encloſe the Extract of a Letter from Fyzabad, aſſerting the fact, and can aſſure the Honourable Board that it has been confirmed by intelligence through other channels. Finding from this circumſtance that his Excellency had only trifled with me, I took the method of a written repreſentation, hoping that he would be more cautious in a reply under his hand, which could not be afterwards contradicted. Notwithſtanding his Excellency was ſo diſſatisfied at my requeſt, yet I hope my conduct will meet with the approbation of the Honourable Board.

On my receiving certain intelligence of the effects of the widow of Saad ulla Khan being ſeized, I repreſented it to the Nabob, but did not preſume to reproach him with a breach of promiſe; I only requeſted his performance of it, and I got him to countermand the order.

When I have come to treat of matters of real conſequence with his Excellency, he has not latterly ſhewn that readineſs which I had reaſon to expect; however, as Murtehzeb Khan will be back in the courſe of ſeven or eight days, I ſhall not delay in writing the Honourable Board with certainty of the event of my negociations on the ſubject of the new Treaty. Regarding the Nabob's ſituation, I have only to repeat what I have before obſerved, that the ſame diſcontents ſtill prevail, and if ever he will be induced to comply with the Company's propoſals, it muſt be at the preſent juncture. The Nabob appears doubtful of the extent of the truſt repoſed in me; and, by what I can learn from intelligent men about the Court, it is the general opinion, that until he ſhall receive an explanation of it, he will not pay that attention to my repreſentations which he otherwiſe would: for inſtance, he has in my converſations with him repeatedly quoted the words of my credentials, mentioning "the intercourſe that had ſubſiſted between "his late father and the Company," which he interprets into a ſimple confirmation of the old Treaties, and wants to extend it to the guarantee of all his dominions: in order to obviate a poſſibility of miſtake, I ſhall particularly explain this point in writing.

When I reminded his Excellency about anſwering my repreſentation relative to the families of the Rohilla Chiefs, he ſaid he had done it in a Letter to the Honourable the Governor General.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Account of the names and ſituation of the ſurviving parts of the families of Hafiz Rhamut and the other Rohilla Chiefs.

Hafiz Rhamut left twelve ſons and nine daughters. Three of the ſons, named Irradut Khan, Mohubbut Khan, and Zolefekkar Khan, are in camp. The firſt, being the eldeſt, had three hundred rupees a month ſettled on him by the late Vizier, which has been regularly paid him: he was countenanced by Sellar Jung, and in hopes of obtaining by his influence a Roſſala and ſome lands; but as affairs are at preſent ſituated, there is little chance of his ſucceeding. The ſecond had one thouſand rupees a month ſettled on him, but it has never been paid; and the third had an allowance of ten or fifteen rupees a day, which is now diſcontinued. The remaining nine ſons, his daughters, ſeventeen of his women, ſeven of the wives of his ſons, and one of the late Emrayut Khan, who was his eldeſt ſon, together with ſome of his diſtant relations, and the dependants of the family, to the number of four hundred perſons, are all in confinement at Allahabad.

Doondy Khan left three ſons, named Mahub ulla Khan, Fitte ulla Khan, and Azim ulla Khan. They, their wives, together with the widows of Doondy Khan, and many of the relations of the family, to the number of two hundred perſons, are all confined at Allahabad.

APPENDIX. No. 45.

Serdar Khan left ſeven ſons, named Aſ ud Khan, Mahomed Khan, Saadut Khan, Mahaabut Khan, Rehmaan Khan, Hubbiib Khan, and Azim Khan, all of whom, excepting Saadut Khan, who is at liberty in this camp, are with Zabita Khan.

Fitte Khan left ſix ſons, all of whom are with Fyzoolla Khan; but they, like the reſt who were releaſed, have had no allowances made them by the Nabob.

A wife of Fitte Khan, and two wives of his ſons, with their dependants and ſervants, to the number of forty-four perſons, are in confinement at Allahabad.

Beſides thoſe above-mentioned, there is the ſon of Abdut Jebnar Khan, who married a daughter of Doondy Khan, and many Roſſalladars and other Rohillas, of whom the late Vizier was jealous, in confinement at Allahabad: the whole number may amount to one thouſand, for the ſupport of whom the Nabob told me he had allowed two hundred rupees a day; but it is not regularly paid them, for I underſtand they hardly get two-thirds of it.

The widow and family of Saad ulla Khan are at Fyzabad, to the number of two hundred perſons.
